23:17. The textual evidence suggests that 23:17 is not original to Luke. Manuscripts omitting the verse include $\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, A, B, L, and T. Others (א, W, family 1, family 13, Byz, most Itala, some Syriac) include it: ἀνάγκην δὲ εἶχεν ἀπολύειν αὐτοῖς κατὰ ἑορτὴν ἕνα (now he was obliged at the feast to release to them one [prisoner]). Codexes Θ and Ψ have a different word order. Yet other manuscripts (D and some Syriac) have the verse after 23:19 (D’s word order is like that of Θ and Ψ). The verse is not considered original because many of the manuscripts supporting it are late, it appears in two locations, and it has different wording. The discrepancy about location suggests a late addition to make Luke like Mark 15:6 = Matt. 27:15 (Arndt 1956: 463, Marshall 1978: 859, and Metzger 1975: 179–80 omit the verse; Kilpatrick 1965a supports its inclusion).

The addition refers to Pilate’s custom of releasing one prisoner at the feast as a gesture of good will (see Chavel 1941; Jeremias 1966: 73; Luce 1933: 347 [who reflects skepticism about such a custom, noting that those who see it present argue that it is limited to Pilate for a short time]; Rigg 1945; Cohn 1967: 162–69; on the custom, see the exegesis of 23:25 and excursus 11, objection 6). Fitzmyer (1985: 1485–86) is skeptical of the custom and argues that it has little role in Luke (which is correct only if 23:17 is not original to Luke). Those who question this part of the tradition historically (by asking how an innocent Jesus could qualify for release as if he were guilty) fail to realize that Pilate is trying to portray Jesus as guilty of disturbing the peace, a charge that he does not regard as worthy of death. In Pilate's view, Jesus is innocent of a capital offense, though he probably sees Jesus as a public nuisance. In this view, Pilate's effort would be seen as an act of amnesty.

7. Crucifixion (23:26–49)

Luke presents Jesus' death in several subunits that must be treated together to get the full force of his account: the journey to Golgotha (23:26–32), the crucifixion (23:33–38), the discussion with the two thieves (23:39–43), and Jesus' death (23:44–49). The entire presentation shows Jesus in control of events. He dies as an innocent sufferer who is able to save those who turn to him. Two confessions expressed uniquely in Luke—one by the thief and one by the centurion—declare Jesus' innocence. Jesus' request to forgive his executioners demonstrates the compassion he told the disciples to have for their enemies in the Sermon on the Plain (6:27–36). Jesus is the model martyr. Another major theme is the reactions of various bystanders to Jesus' death: they watch, mock, sneer, confess, mourn, and blaspheme. This variety provides a cameo of the world's reactions to Jesus. Finally, there is irony in the taunts for Jesus to save himself. The scoffers think they have stopped Jesus. He appears powerless now, so they make fun of him, challenging him to deliver himself. Jesus chooses not to save himself from the cross, but God will deliver him from its effect, showing that Jesus can fulfill the predictions he made to the disciples and the promise he made to the confessing thief. The taunt to save is realized in a way the mockers never imagined.

Sources and Historicity

The first subunit, Luke 23:26–32, is made up of three pieces of material (Aland 1985: §343). The remark about Simon carrying the cross in 23:26 (paralleled in Matt. 27:31b–32 = Mark 15:20b–21) is clearly traditional material (Fitzmyer 1985: 1492 ties it to Mark, as do most).

The scene with the mourning women (23:27–31) is unique to Luke (although the saying in 23:29 appears in a slightly different form in the Gospel of Thomas 79) and is best seen as special Lucan material (Ernst 1977: 630; Grundmann 1963: 428; Fitzmyer 1985: 1494; V. Taylor 1972: 89–90). Nolland (1993b: 1135) is certain of an additional source but is less certain whether it is the same as in other sections of the passion narrative. Two approaches have been taken against the historicity of this subunit. Bultmann (1963: 37, 127) argues that the prediction of Jerusalem's fall is "Christian prophecy" put on Jesus' lips after the fact. Marshall (1978: 862) notes, however, that the sayings show signs of having been formed in Aramaic and that the decision about prophecy and Jerusalem depends on how one regards a whole body of similar texts (13:34–35; 19:41–44; 21:5–24). Käser (1963) also challenges historicity by arguing that this subunit was created in light of Isa. 54:1, Luke 21:23, and Gal. 4:27. Marshall also rejects this approach, noting that the Galatians imagery is a late Christian development (as 2 Clem. 2.1–3 and Justin Martyr, Apology 1.53, show).

Luke 23:32 has parallels in Matt. 27:38 = Mark 15:27, a slightly later location that simply reflects distinct placement of a similar detail.

The other three subunits in this pericope—the crucifixion proper, the discussion of the two thieves, and Jesus' death (23:33–49)— have a complex background (Aland 1985: §§344–48). That a basic tradition lies behind Luke is suggested by the various verbal contacts and the many details that find parallels in the Synoptics:

	Luke	Matthew	Mark
dividing Jesus' clothes	23:34	27:35	15:24
mocking Jesus	23:35–38	27:39–42	15:29–32
cosmic signs	23:44–45	27:45	15:33
death of Jesus	23:46	27:50	15:37
the centurion's confession	23:47	27:54	15:39
the watching women	23:49	27:55–56	15:40–41

There are many differences as well, since only 54 of Luke's 269 words, or 20%, match Mark (R. Brown 1994: 905; V. Taylor 1972: 92 says 74 of 265 terms [28%]). The differences may be classified as material that Luke does not record (nos. 1, 2, 5, 6, 9, 16, 17, 19, 23), unique Lucan material (nos. 4, 11, 13, 14, 18, 21, 22), or partial parallels (nos. 3, 7, 8, 10, 12, 15, 20) (adapted from Ernst 1977: 633):

1. Luke does not mention Golgotha by name (Mark 15:22 = Matt. 27:33).
2. Luke does not mention the offer of drugged wine (Mark 15:23 = Matt. 27:34).
3. Luke 23:33 uses a different term for the criminals (κακοῦργος, as opposed to λῃστής in Mark 15:27 = Matt. 27:38) and mentions them at a different point in his narrative.
4. Luke 23:34 uniquely records Jesus' prayer to forgive the sin of his executioners.
5. Luke does not mention the time that the crucifixion began (Mark 15:25), although he and Mark mention the time that it became dark (Luke 23:44 = Mark 15:33).
6. Luke 23:35 briefly refers to spectators, but does not supply the contents of their mocking: taunts about Jesus' saying that he would destroy the temple and raise it up in three days (Mark 15:29–30 = Matt. 27:39–40). (Luke exhibits a similar silence at Jesus' trial.)
7. Luke 23:35 speaks only of the rulers and does not name the chief priests, scribes, and elders (Mark 15:31 = Matt. 27:41).

8. Luke 23:35 mentions that the rulers mock Jesus with reference to being the Chosen One, rather than calling him the King of Israel (Mark 15:32 = Matt. 27:42).
9. Luke does not mention the rulers' other taunts (Mark. 15:32 = Matt. 27:42–43).
10. Luke 23:36 mentions the offer of wine vinegar at a different point in the narrative (Mark 15:36 = Matt. 27:48).
11. In Luke 23:36 the soldiers mock Jesus about being King of the Jews.
12. Luke 23:38 records the inscription over Jesus at a different point in the narrative (Mark 15:26 = Matt. 27:37).
13. Luke 23:39–43 uniquely records Jesus' discussion with the two thieves.
14. Luke 23:45 uniquely has a second reference to darkness.
15. Luke 23:45 mentions the tearing of the temple veil at a different point in the narrative (Mark 15:38 = Matt. 27:51).
16. Luke neither mentions nor records the content of Jesus' first cry from the cross (Mark 15:34 = Matt. 27:46, using Ps. 22:1 [22:2 MT]).
17. Luke does not include the crowd's mention of Elijah (Mark 15:35–36 = Matt. 27:47, 49).
18. Luke 23:46 uniquely records the content of Jesus' second cry from the cross, using Ps. 31:5 [31:6 MT].

19. Luke does not record the earthquake that took place when Jesus died or the subsequent resurrection of many saints (Matt. 27:51–53).
20. Luke 23:47 quotes the centurion as declaring Jesus' innocence instead of his divine sonship (Mark 15:39 = Matt. 27:54).
21. Luke 23:48 uniquely records the crowd watching and mourning.
22. Luke 23:49 uniquely mentions that the disciples watched from a distance.
23. Luke 23:49 mentions that the women were present, but does not identify them other than to note that they are from Galilee (Mark 15:40–41 = Matt. 27:55–56).

How are these differences to be viewed? Grundmann (1963: 431) correctly identifies 23:33, 34a, 35a, 36, 37, 39–43, 46, 48–49 as influenced by additional sources, to which one should add 23:47, as Fitzmyer (1985: 1520) suggests. It is possible, however, that Luke is only summarizing in 23:46, 48–49. Scholars who see the use of L here are Ellis (1974: 266), Creed (1930: 284–85), Ernst (1977: 632–33), Marshall (1978: 866–71), Fitzmyer (1985: 1507, 1512–13 [but not for 23:44–49]), and V. Taylor (1972: 91–99). Nolland (1993b: 1142–43, 1150, 1155) speaks of Luke using his second passion source for 23:33–43, with less certainty for 23:44–49. Only a few scholars argue for a total Lucan redaction of Mark (Schneider 1977a:

482–83, 486–87; Schenk 1974: 93–102). Noting Luke's care in constructing the account, R. Brown (1994: 905–7) tends to see Matthew and Luke working with Mark. When the changes are viewed individually, this case looks plausible. The scope and variety of the differences, however, make an additional source or sources more likely.

Bultmann (1963: 37, 309, 274) regards the crucifixion account as containing legend, sees the thieves account as evidence of the expanding tradition, and sees Luke responsible for replacing Ps. 22:1 [22:2 MT] with Ps. 31:5 [31:6 MT]. The Jesus Seminar rejects all the sayings material tied to the cross as either reflecting a prophetic oracle (23:28–31) or as being "out of character for Jesus" (23:43, 46) (Funk and Hoover 1993: 395–97). Fitzmyer (1985: 1501) questions whether the label legend is an appropriate description of the crucifixion (he prefers the term literary embellishment) and whether the thieves account is a case of expansion (but, given the use of other sources, it is difficult to distinguish between embellishment and additional material). There is a dramatic air to the account's presentation, but the assessment that it is embellishment may be too strong a term for the material, given the use of additional sources. The Jesus Seminar's stance reflects its consistent tendency to reject sayings by Jesus that have a high Christology. R. Brown (1994: 1092–96) offers a strong critique of B. Thiering's and H. J. Schonfield's views that Jesus did not really die. He concludes: "These theories demonstrate that in relation to the passion of Jesus, despite the popular maxim, fiction is stranger than fact—and often, intentionally or not, more profitable" (p. 1096). For specific challenges launched against the historicity of various points, see the exegesis.

This pericope contains stories about Jesus (23:33–38, 44–49) and his pronouncements (23:26–32, 39–43) (Fitzmyer 1985: 1494, 1501, 1507, 1513; Bultmann 1963: 37, 373, 309–10, 273–74). It has been proposed that the account is modeled after ancient Jewish martyr accounts like the Martyrdom and Ascension of Isaiah, 2 Macc. 5–6, and 4 Macc. 5–6. Untergassmair (1970: 156–71) identifies several traits of this form in Luke's account (see also Surkau 1938: 16–99 and Pilgrim 1971):

1. a person who follows the martyr (23:26)
2. mourning women (23:27)
3. eschatological themes (23:31)
4. prayer for the executioners (23:34)
5. belief that the martyr will go directly to heaven (23:39–43)
6. people watching the death (23:35, 48)
7. the martyr's freewill entry into death alongside the use of Scripture (23:46)

After examination of these characteristics, Untergassmair concludes that the biblical account is unique and presents Jesus more like a judge than a martyr. Arguing that the martyr element is less significant than some have made it, Untergassmair prefers to speak of a “passion play” that emphasizes the literary portrayal of Jesus’ death. It is not clear, however, that “passion play” is a better label, though his point about Jesus’ authority is correct. The crucifixion account portrays the death of one who dies unjustly but is approved by God. His ability to deliver reveals his real position, despite the cross. The keys to the account are the cosmic signs, the testimony of some of the watchers, and the trust that Jesus has in God. This is more than a martyr account; this “martyr” can promise salvation to a repentant thief.

The outline of Luke 23:26–49 is as follows:

a. To Golgotha (23:26–32)
   i. Simon the Cyrene carries the cross (23:26)
   ii. Jesus’ conversation with the women (23:27–31)

iii. Two other criminals are led away with Jesus (23:32)

b. Crucifixion (23:33–38)
   i. The location (23:33)
   ii. Jesus' call to forgive (23:34)
   iii. Scoffing and mocking (23:35–38)

c. Two thieves (23:39–43)
   i. One criminal rebukes Jesus (23:39)
   ii. A second criminal rebukes the first and confesses his own guilt (23:40–41)
   iii. The second criminal makes a request (23:42)
   iv. Jesus' comforting reply (23:43)

d. Jesus' death (23:44–49)
   i. Cosmic signs (23:44–45)
   ii. Jesus' final words: a prayer of trust (23:46)
   iii. A centurion's remark and the crowd's mourning (23:47–48)
   iv. The disciples and women watch (23:49)

The account of Jesus' death is loaded with symbolism and irony. Symbolic (i.e., representative) people and actions are (1) Simon, whose carrying of the cross draws humanity into Jesus' death; (2) the different reactions to Jesus' death (watching, sneering, mocking, confessing, mourning, blaspheming); and (3) the contrasting thieves.

There are several ironic actions in the pericope. (1) A placard mockingly announces that Jesus is King of the Jews. (2) A thief confesses Jesus' innocence, and Jesus promises him that he will reach paradise despite the man's pending death. (3) Jesus is slain as a criminal in the midst of criminals, yet he, an innocent, offers a prayer of forgiveness for his executioners. (4) The Savior is taunted to save himself, something that will be done later. (5) The righteous Innocent One suffers, though none of it is for his own actions.

Several other themes are found in the pericope. (1) Jesus controls the situation as he offers words of woe against and predicts terror for Jerusalem. (2) Scripture is fulfilled. (3) Jesus dies with a prayer of trust in God's care. (4) God testifies to Jesus through the cosmic signs. Even creation speaks for Jesus at this crucial moment. A human witness, the centurion, also affirms Jesus' innocence by declaring that Jesus was not guilty of the crimes for which he was executed. Jesus' death was unjust, but it will ultimately yield justice for humankind.

Exegesis and Exposition

26 And as they led him away, they seized one Simon of Cyrene, who was coming in from the country, and laid on him the cross to carry it behind Jesus. 27 And there followed him a great multitude of people and of women who wailed and lamented him. 28 But Jesus turning to them said, “Daughters of Jerusalem, do not weep for me, but weep for yourselves and for your children. 29 For behold, days are coming in which they will say, ‘Blessed are the barren wombs and the breasts that did not give milk.’ 30 Then they will begin to say to the mountains, ‘Fall on us,’ and to the hills, ‘Cover us.’ 31 For if they do this when the wood is green, what might happen when it is dry?” 32 ❒Two others were led off with him, criminals❒ who were to be put to death.

33 And when they came to the place that is called the Skull, there they crucified him and the criminals, one on the right and one on the left. 34 ❒And Jesus said, “Father, forgive them, for they do not know what they do.”❒ And they cast lots to divide his garments. 35 And the people stood watching, but also the rulers sneered, saying, “He saved others, let him save himself, if this one is ❒the Christ of God, the Elect❒.” 36 And the soldiers also mocked him, coming up and offering him vinegar, [37]saying also, “If you are the King, save yourself!” [38]There was also an ❒inscription over him❒: “This is the King of the Jews.”

[39]One of the criminals who was hanged with him blasphemed, saying, “Are you not the Christ? Save yourself and us!” [40]But the other one rebuked him, saying, “Do you not fear God, for you are under the same judgment? [41]And we on the one hand justly, for we receive things that are worthy of what we did; but this one has done nothing wrong.” [42]And ❒he said, “Jesus, remember me❒ when you come ❒in❒ your kingdom.” [43]And he said to him, “Truly I say to you, today you will be with me in paradise.”

[44]And it was already about the sixth hour, and darkness fell over the whole earth until the ninth hour, [45]while ❒the sun was darkened❒ and the veil of the temple was ripped in the middle. [46]And crying out with a loud cry, Jesus said, “Father, into your hands I entrust my spirit.” And saying this, he expired. [47]And the centurion, when he saw what had happened, praised God, saying, “Certainly this man was innocent.” [48]And all the crowds gathered to see the sight, when they saw what had taken place, beat their breasts and returned. [49]And all those who knew him and the women who followed him from Galilee stood at a distance to see these things.

a. To Golgotha (23:26–32)

i. Simon the Cyrene Carries the Cross (23:26)

23:26 Jesus goes to his death, carrying his own crossbeam (Marshall 1978: 863; Creed 1930: 285; Plummer 1896: 528; John 19:17; Plutarch, Moralia 554B [“On the Delays of the Divine Vengeance” 9]; Artemidorus Daldianus, Oneirokritika 2.56; Justin Martyr, Dialogue with Trypho 91 and Apology 1.55; Irenaeus, Against Heresies 2.24.4; Tertullian, Against the Jews 10). The cross would have been draped across the nape of the neck, like carrying a sack on one’s back. The crossbeam becomes too heavy for a tired Jesus to carry, and so those leading him conscript Simon of Cyrene to carry it (only Luke notes that he carried it behind [ὄπισθεν, opisthen; BDR §215.1] Jesus). In a stylistic variation, Luke uses ἐπιλαβόμενοι (epilabomenoi; BDF §170.2) to indicate that the soldiers “seized” Simon, while Matthew and Mark use forms of the more legally technical ἀγγαρεύω (angareuō, to commandeer; Nolland 1993b: 1136). That Simon was thus “drafted” to help does not suggest that Roman troops were absent, for they are mentioned in 23:36, 47 (and in 23:52 the Romans have possession of Jesus’ body). Rather, a Roman would not carry the cross because of the shame associated with the act. All the Synoptics mention Simon of Cyrene (Matt. 27:32 = Mark 15:21), but only Mark adds that he is the father of Rufus and Alexander, which might suggest that the sons were well-known believers (perhaps the same Rufus mentioned in Rom. 16:13?). The region of Cyrene, in what is now Tripoli, is mentioned in Acts 6:9, 11:20, and 13:1 (Plummer 1896: 527; Josephus, Against Apion 2.4–5 §§41–54; Antiquities 14.7.2 §114; 16.6.1 §160; 16.6.5 §169; 1 Macc. 15:23; 2 Macc. 2:23). R. Brown (1994: 915) notes that it is unlikely that the detail would have been invented. Simon was perhaps a Jewish worshiper who had come in from the countryside to celebrate the Passover. He went quickly from observer to representative participant, which some see carrying an additional point about discipleship (but this seems forced). The wording is different from Jesus' previous exhortations to "take up the cross" (Luke 9:23; 14:27), and we are not told that Simon experiences any loss (with Nolland 1993b: 1136; against Danker 1988: 370–71 and Creed 1930: 285). In Jewish and Roman culture, it is customary to die outside the city (Lev. 24:14; 1 Kings 21:13; Pseudo-Quintilian, Declamationes Minores 274; Plautus, Carbonaria fragment 2; Plautus, Braggart Warrior 2.4 §§359–60; R. Brown 1994: 912–15).

The parallels are similar. Matt. 27:31–32 = Mark 15:20–21 speaks of leading Jesus away to crucify him. Matthew shares ἀπήγαγον (apēgagon, they led [him] away) with Luke. Mark refers to Simon as a passerby and notes the name of his sons. Mark matches Luke verbally by noting that Simon came from the country or perhaps from his field (ἐρχόμενον ἀπ᾽ ἀγροῦ, erchomenon ap᾽ agrou; BAGD 14 §2; BAA 24 §1). Both Matthew and Mark note that the purpose is to carry the cross (ἵνα ἄρῃ τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ, hina arē ton stauron autou).

Several Jewish and Roman writers describe Jesus' death (C. A. Evans 1990: 336; F. F. Bruce 1974; Dunkerley 1957: 27):

1. Mara bar Serapion (ca. A.D. 73): "For what advantage did … the Jews [gain] by the death of their wise king, because from that same time their kingdom was taken away?"
2. Josephus, Antiquities 18.3.3 §64: "Pilate, upon hearing him accused by men of the highest standing among us, had condemned him to be crucified."[1]
3. Agapius, Book of the Title (summarizing Josephus): "Pilate condemned him to be crucified and to die."

4. Tacitus, Annals 15.44 (ca. A.D. 110–20): "This name [i.e., Christian] originates from 'Christus' who was sentenced to death by the procurator Pontius Pilate during the reign of Tiberius."
5. Babylonian Talmud, tractate Sanhedrin 43a: "On the eve of the Passover they hanged Jesus the Nazarene. And a herald went out in front of him, for forty days saying: 'He is going to be stoned, because he practiced sorcery and enticed and led Israel astray. Anyone who knows anything in his favor, let him come and plead on his behalf.' But not having found anything in his favor, they hanged him on the eve of Passover."

Needless to say, these accounts do not agree in details, but they do show historical evidence for Jesus' execution at the hands of the nation and Pilate.

ii. Jesus' Conversation with the Women (23:27–31)

23:27 In five verses unique to Luke, Jesus converses with some women in the crowd who lament his death. The irony is that Jesus' death does not mean his fall, but it spells doom for the nation. They are mourning for Jesus, but they should be mourning for themselves.

The trail of people behind Simon consists of two groups. It is not clear why the first group, the multitude of people (πολὺ πλῆθος τοῦ λαοῦ, poly plēthos tou laou), follows Jesus. Most likely consisting of both Jerusalemites and pilgrims, they are naturally curious to see what becomes of him (Klostermann 1929: 227; Marshall 1978: 863; Lucian, Passing of Peregrinus 34).

The second group consists of women publicly beating their breasts and lamenting. Κόπτομαι (koptomai) refers to beating the breast in grief (BAGD 444 §2; BAA 902 §2; elsewhere in the Gospels with this sense at Matt. 11:17; 24:30; Luke 8:52; cf. Zech. 7:5). Θρηνέω (thrēneō) refers to verbal mourning or dirge singing (BAGD 363 §2; BAA 738 §2; elsewhere in the Gospels at Matt. 11:17; Luke 7:32; John 16:20; cf. Mic. 1:8; Josephus, Jewish War 3.9.5 §§435–36). Both terms occur together in Josephus for the mourning associated with Saul's death (Antiquities 6.14.8 §377). There are several views about the women's actions:

1. Many see the trailing women as sympathizers (Marshall 1978: 863).[2] Since this practice carried religious value in Judaism, such sympathy might, however, not be sincere as much as customary (Ellis 1974: 266; Luke 7:12; 9:59–60; 23:48; John 11:31; Sipre 308.2 on Deut. 32:4 [= Neusner 1987: 2.323]). If so, the mourning would be more a matter of habit than of substance. The text, however, does not treat the women unsympathetically, as Jesus' tender address shows ("daughters of Jerusalem"). He simply indicates that their mourning is misdirected. There is little reason to doubt the lament's sincerity.
2. A late tradition shows women administering drugged wine to the executed (b. Sanh. 43a). While this tradition does accord with the mention that such wine was offered to Jesus, in the Gospels this is done by soldiers not by women (Luke 23:36 = Matt. 27:48 = Mark 15:36). The offer of wine also involves mocking, a tone missing from the women's actions.
3. The women are a literary symbol of rejecting Israel (Neyrey 1985: 108–9; Käser 1963). This representation correctly summarizes why the > women are present, but why would Luke have created such a detail, especially given the cultural custom of mourning? Jesus has already given numerous warnings about the nation's fate (Luke 13:34–35; 19:41–44), so there is no need for Luke to have created one here.

The passage is simply another place where Luke notes the role of women in Jesus' ministry (1:39–56; 2:36–38; 7:11–15, 36–50; 8:1–3; 10:38–42; 11:27; 13:10–17). Nowhere in the Synoptics are women hostile to Jesus (Plummer 1896: 528). This tendency and the nature of Jesus' address to the women suggests that they are not full sympathizers, that their mourning is not merely customary, and that they are not mere literary symbols. What we may have here are women who regret that the circumstances unfortunately led to a painful execution (a softer form of view 1), which suggests that not all opposition to Jesus is hard opposition. Some of the people are not as hostile as the leadership is against Jesus. The passage may contain an allusion to Zech. 12:10–14.

23:28 Tragically, the women lament for the wrong person. Freed from carrying the crossbeam, Jesus turns to gently address those following him:

θυγατέρες Ἰερουσαλήμ (thygateres Ierousalēm, daughters of Jerusalem). These women of the capital of Israel represent the nation.[3] Jesus does not need such sympathy (Fitzmyer 1985: 1498; Wiefel 1988: 395).[4] Jesus' exhortation "not to weep" indicates that the direction of their emotion needs to be reassessed (conceptual parallels in Luke 7:13; 8:52). The women are caught in the vortex of a tragic series of events that ends in judgment. Jesus' tone of care reflects his response throughout the events surrounding his death —no revenge, only concern and honesty. In a remark presented as a chiasmus, Jesus says that sympathy should instead be directed at themselves and their children:[5]

a weep not b for me
b' for yourself
a' weep

Jesus is suggesting that the nation is headed for difficult times, an allusion to the events of A.D. 70 (Ellis 1974: 266; Grundmann 1963: 429; Luke 11:49–51; 13:1–9, 34–35; 19:41–44; 20:16; 21:20–21; Acts 6:14; cf. Seneca, Agamemnon 659–63). Families will suffer great pain. The thought of the nation's pain has not left him. As he dies, Jesus thinks of the fate of others. Jesus' woe is like that in Jer. 9:17–20 [9:16–19 MT] (R. Brown 1994: 921). The nation is accountable for its rejection. Other Lucan texts show that all groups in the nation experience the pain of this judgment (Luke 11:49–50; 13:34–35; 19:41–44; 21:20–24). Jesus tells the women to weep for Israel, as he had (19:41).

23:29 Jesus now gives a better reason for mourning than his death—a significant time is approaching. The phrase ἰδοὺ ἔρχονται ἡμέραι (idou erchontai hēmerai, behold, days are coming) indicates that a key period of God's activity is coming (Luke 21:23; Tiede 1988: 414; J. Schneider, TDNT 2:671). In this time, normal categories of blessing and cursing will be reversed because the pain will be so great. In the past, it was women with children who were considered blessed, but in the coming horror barren women will be blessed (on the beatitudes form, see the exegesis of 6:20). Barrenness used to be a curse, but now creation is turned upside down in a reversal motif.[6] The suffering of Jerusalem's fall will be so great that it will be better to have no family. The benefit of barrenness in this period is emphasized by the threefold description: childless, wombs that never bore, and breasts that never gave suck. The motif is also seen in classical texts (Euripides, Andromache 395; Euripides, Alcestis 882; Tacitus, Annals 2.75; Seneca the Elder, Controversiae 2.3.2; Apuleius, Apology 85; Fitzmyer 1985: 1498; Nolland 1993b: 1137).

23:30 In fact, the pain of Jerusalem's fall will be so great that people will desire their life to end. They will want a "quick death" (Klostermann 1929: 228). Death will be better than the misery they face (Plummer 1896: 529). "They" probably refers to everyone present at this judgment, not just the women of the previous verse, since the allusion is to Hos. 10:8, in which the whole nation is judged for idolatry. When judgment comes, the people will want quick relief; they will want creation to collapse on them.[7] The image depicts great despair and the desire for relief (Foerster, TDNT 5:483 n. 96; Ernst 1977: 631; on Jewish background for this imagery as a way of expressing a just retaliatory judgment, see SB 2:263–64).[8] In Hos. 10:8 the people are judged for idolatry, in Luke 23:30 for rejecting Jesus, and in Rev. 6:16 (the other NT citation of Hos. 10:8) for persecuting God's people. The pattern of human response to God's judgment shows how painful is the realization that one is the object of God's irreversible wrath. The desire to live is gone.

23:31 Jesus makes a comparison: he is the green or damp wood, the nation in future judgment is the dry wood (ξύλον, xylon; Plummer 1896: 530; BAGD 549 §3; BAA 1113 §3). Jesus presents a lesser-to-greater argument: if this is what happens to a living tree, what might happen (a deliberative subjunctive; BDF §366.1) to a dead one? Though the basic image is clear, the referents are disputed (Fitzmyer 1985: 1498; Plummer 1896: 529):

1. If the Romans treat an innocent person like Jesus this way, how much more will they mistreat a nation in revolution? This view introduces the Romans into a context where they are absent.
2. If the Jews treat Jesus this way for coming to deliver them, how will they be treated for destroying him? The only thing against this view is that the subject shifts in the second half of the passage.[9]
3. If humankind behaves this way before wickedness is full, how much more will it do so when wickedness overflows? It is not clear, however, how the reference to green and dry trees can produce this sense. This view sees the green tree as a negative reference, which is unlikely.

4. If God has not spared Jesus, how much more will the impenitent nation not be spared when divine judgment comes? In this view "they" is an oblique third-person plural reference to God (12:20 has a similar reference). It is easier to burn dry wood than lush, moisture-filled green wood.
5. The proverb is a general remark about coming judgment that lacks more specific referents (Nolland 1993b: 1138).

The widely held fourth view is most likely correct (Creed 1930: 286; Danker 1988: 372; Manson 1949: 343; Marshall 1978: 865; J. Schneider, TDNT 5:38 n. 7 [who notes that the remark looks historical]). Schweizer (1984: 358) says the point is, "The fate of Jesus, like that of the prophets, is sure to befall his enemies." If view 4 is not correct, then view 2 is the next best option. Deciding between the two is not easy. A general reference to judgment (view 5) seems too vague. The concept of wood consumed in judgment is also found in Isa. 10:16–19 and Ezek. 20:47 [21:3 MT] (but Luke does not have the concept of burning found in these two references).[10] This is Jesus' last lament for the nation.

iii. Two Other Criminals are Led Away with Jesus (23:32)

23:32 Jesus is not executed alone. With him are two κακοῦργοι (kakourgoi, criminals), a rare term in the NT (elsewhere only Luke 23:33, 39; 2 Tim. 2:9). Mark 15:27 = Matt. 27:38 has forms of λῃστής (lēstēs, bandit or robber). This passage recalls Isa. 53:12 and Jesus' prediction in Luke 22:37 that he is to be reckoned among the lawless (ἀνόμων, anomōn). Κακοῦργος is a general term for any kind of lawbreaker. Luke's basic point is that Jesus does not go to his death alone; he is slain as a lawbreaker, with criminals at his side.[11]

b. Crucifixion (23:33–38)

i. The Location (23:33)

23:33 Luke moves right to the crucifixion without referring to the effort mentioned in Mark 15:23 = Matt. 27:34 to give Jesus drugged wine to dull the pain of death.[12] Since at the end of this particularly gruesome death one was unable to draw another breath (Wiefel 1988: 398), it was common custom to offer wine vinegar (Heidland, TDNT 5:288–89). The three condemned men face execution just north and outside the city, in a place called “Golgotha” in Aramaic. All the Synoptics use τόπον (topon, place), but only Matt. 27:33 = Mark 15:22 gives the Aramaic. Luke does not name Golgotha (as he also omitted the Semitic name of Gethsemane earlier), possibly because of his audience, but all three Synoptics give its meaning: “Skull” (κρανίον, kranion).[13] The name is not derived from the collection of the skulls of the dead (an idea that would greatly offend the Jews), but because the hill protruded from the ground in the shape of a skull (Plummer 1896: 530; Fitzmyer 1985: 1503; Jeremias 1926b). In this public locale, Jesus is placed on the cross, an innocent between two guilty men.

None of the Synoptics makes it clear that Jesus was nailed to the cross, but John 20:25 and Col. 2:14 indicate that at least his hands were nailed (also suggested in Luke 24:40). John specifies that his hands were nailed, but his feet may have been tied. All make it clear that Jesus was placed between two other criminals (Matt. 27:38 = Mark 15:27; John 19:18), though Matthew and Mark use a different term to refer to Jesus' left (εὐώνυμος [euōnymos; BAGD 329–30; BAA 666] as opposed to Luke's ἀριστερός [aristeros; BAGD 106; BAA 214; elsewhere in the Gospels only at Matt. 6:3 and Mark 10:37]). Independent multiple sources with differing terminology thus attest to Jesus' crucifixion.

ii. Jesus' Call to Forgive (23:34)

23:34 Jesus spoke as he suffered, asking God to forgive his enemies, since they did not know what they were doing. The meaning of this prayer is disputed (see the additional note for the dispute over its originality). Some argue that Jesus can be praying only for the Roman soldiers who executed him in ignorance (Arndt 1956: 469). The rationale for this view is twofold: (1) catastrophe for Israel is already predicted in God's plan and thus forgiveness is not available and (2) the nation is not ignorant of what it is doing.

The prayer must, however, be primarily for the Jews, though Luke's readers might apply it to all who had a role in killing Jesus. First, the Romans have not yet been explicitly mentioned in this pericope, so they are an unlikely referent (Fitzmyer 1985: 1503–4). Second, Stephen's parallel prayer (Acts 7:60) almost requires that this prayer be for Jesus' accusers. Third, the passage appears to have a conceptual tie to Isa. 53:12, where the Servant suffers for the transgressors, a point that has slightly more force if Jews are meant (Tiede 1988: 417; Plummer 1896: 531–32). The ignorance that Jesus attributes to the nation is not a lack of knowledge, but an erroneous judgment about God's activity, since the apostles will call the nation to repent for this ignorance as Jesus had warned them (Tiede 1988: 418; Luke 13:34; 19:42; Acts 2:38; 3:19; 13:38; 17:30). The issue of national forgiveness is also not an obstacle, since individuals can still respond. As to the inevitability of national catastrophe, Jesus is not asking for the judgment on the nation to be put off. The national consequences stand.

Jesus thus intercedes for his enemies, portraying the very standard he sets for his disciples in the Sermon on the Plain (Luke 6:29, 35; 1 Pet. 2:19–23; Ernst 1977: 634). He does not curse his opponents (contrast 2 Macc. 7:19, 34–35; 4 Macc. 9:15; Schweizer 1984: 360).[14] The moral tone of Jesus' response is high, although this lack of vindictiveness is also found in a few other ancient works.[15] Thinking of others, Jesus still desires that they change their thinking (as some do in the Book of Acts) and that God not hold their act against them. Jesus' love is evident even from the cross.

In language that recalls Ps. 22:18 [22:19 MT], Luke notes how the soldiers gambled for Jesus' garments by lot (all of the Gospels allude to this psalm: Mark 15:24 = Matt. 27:35; John 19:24; on the background to the distribution of the clothes of the crucified, see R. Brown 1994: 953–58). The original psalm portrays the mocking suffered by a righteous sufferer. The use of the psalm is thus typological and prophetic: Jesus is the model of righteous suffering at the hands of those who oppose God's people. Gambling for clothes is customary at crucifixion and is the final humiliation one suffers upon execution. One dies in shame and largely unclothed. R. Brown (1994: 870, 952–53) notes the custom of being crucified unclothed (Artemidorus Daldianus, Oneirokritika 2.53), though in Jewish executions this appears to have been delayed to the last possible moment (Dionysius of Halicarnassus, Roman Antiquities 7.69.2; Valerius Maximus, Facta 1.7.4; Josephus, Antiquities 19.4.5 §270). Even though some victims were beheaded or dragged around the public square (Josephus, Jewish War 2.12.7 §246; Antiquities 20.6.3 §136), disrobing is not mentioned. Other texts speak of the possibility of a loincloth (Jub. 3.30–31; 7.20). John 19:23–25 makes it clear that the gambling concerned the outer garment that Jesus had received at his trial.

Matthew and Mark are parallel to Luke, though Luke has more distinct terminology. Matthew and Mark have a participle for casting lots (βάλλοντες, ballontes) where Luke has a verb (ἔβαλον, ebalon). Only Mark specifies the purpose for the lot: to see who would keep the clothes. Matthew adds a note that they sat and watched Jesus. In Matthew and Mark, it is clear that these soldiers are Roman, but Luke does not specify their identity.

iii. Scoffing and Mocking (23:35–38)

23:35 Luke divides those observing this historic moment into two groups: watchers and mockers.[16] The people (λαός, laos) stand watching. The term for watching, θεωρῶν (theōrōn), comes from Ps. 22:7 [21:8 LXX], the same "righteous sufferer" psalm cited in the previous verse. In the psalm the same people both watch and mock. They are hostile to the sufferer. Luke's separation of "watchers" from "mockers" suggests that the people who watch are curious (3 Macc. 5:24) rather than neutral or mourning (against Plummer 1896: 532, who sees them as hostile). They want to see the outcome of their demand for Jesus' death (Luke 23:21, 23). Their actions are not as severe as the leaders, but neither are they supportive of Jesus (contra R. Brown 1994: 989, who sees them more positively, setting up later responses in Acts 2:41, 47; 4:4; 6:1). But the call for repentance in Acts 2 shows that the crowd was not positive on crucifixion day, but neither did they directly rebuke Jesus. They merely observe what is taking place.

The second group, the leaders, mock Jesus. The key verb mock (ἐκμυκτηρίζω, ekmyktērizō, lit., to turn up one's nose, to sneer) alludes to Ps. 22:7 [21:8 LXX] (elsewhere in the NT only at Luke 16:14; BAGD 243; BAA 490; Bertram, TDNT 4:798–99). Jesus is again the righteous sufferer. Perhaps because he is following another source or more possibly because he is focusing on the leadership's rebuke, Luke does not record that the mockers "wag their heads" and urge Jesus to save himself in light of the saying that he would destroy the temple and rebuild it in three days (Matt. 27:40 = Mark 15:29–30).[17]

The leaders mock Jesus' ability to deliver others (i.e., perform miraculous works for them) and not himself. They derisively taunt him to save himself if "this one" (οὗτος, houtos) is the anointed of God, the elect one. Precedent for such taunting may be found in Wis. 2–5, especially 2:17–22, which teaches that God will aid the righteous when they are tested (Tiede 1988: 418; Danker 1988: 374). If Jesus is God's elect, God will certainly save him. The taunt is sarcastic: they think they have stopped Jesus, they are feeling good about having executed him. The taunt also echoes Ps. 22:8 [21:9 LXX]. But God will answer their taunt in a surprising way in just a few days. God's Chosen One (cf. Luke 2:26; 9:20) will be vindicated (Fitzmyer 1985: 1505; Schrenk, TDNT 1 Enoch 4:189; Jeremias, TDNT 5:689; Luke 9:35; Isa. 42:1; John 1:34; 39.6; 40.5; 45.3–4; 49.2; 51.3–5).

The taunt is similar to Mark 15:31–32 = Matt. 27:42–43 (which almost match). The taunt is more direct in Matthew and Mark: "He saved others; he cannot save himself." The mockers then call on "the King of Israel" to come down from the cross (Mark adds an address to the Christ before calling on the king). The purpose for Jesus' coming down from the cross is that the sneerers might believe (Mark: see and believe). Ironically, Jesus will do this in his resurrection, but many will not respond. They will not keep their promise. At this point Matthew has an additional taunt: "He trusts in God; let God deliver him now, if he (God) desires him; for he said, 'I am the Son of God.'" Matthew's and Mark's witnesses are all hostile throughout the crucifixion until the centurion at the end. Luke has a simpler and more summary account, but whether he has simplified a source or used an additional source is not clear. Despite Luke's simplicity, he has a more complex portrait of the witnesses. He presents a fuller range of responses to the cross.

23:36 The third group, the soldiers, also mock (ἐμπαίζω, empaizō) Jesus and offer him some vinegar.[18] Ὄξος (oxos) describes a sour or dry wine as opposed to a sweet wine (Fitzmyer 1985: 1505; BAGD 574; BAA 1164; elsewhere in the NT only at Matt. 27:48 = Mark 15:36 = John 19:29–30 [three times]; cf. Ruth 2:14). R. Brown (1994: 997) calls it a "cheap wine" offered as a "burlesque gift." Its sharp taste was said to remove thirst more effectively than water, and since it was cheaper than regular wine it was used among the poor (MM 452–53; SB 2:264; P. Lond. 1245 line 9). Apparently the offer is made as a joke, since it is accompanied with a challenge that Jesus, if he is king, should save himself (Luke 23:37). Luce (1933: 351) doubts the historicity of the remark, saying that it is inappropriate for Roman soldiers on duty, but if the Jewish leadership was taunting Jesus, others would likely have joined the mocking (R. Brown 1994: 998 sees Luke as responsible for this summary). The point is that neither Jew nor Gentile understand what they are doing in nailing Jesus to the cross.

Matthew 27:48 = Mark 15:36 has this offer later in the account, after Jesus cries out with Ps. 22:1 [22:2 MT]. Luke lacks this cry, possibly because he does not typically include Aramaic phrases (e.g., Golgotha in 23:33). In the other Synoptics, Jesus takes the drink, the soldiers think that he is calling for Elijah and suggest waiting to see if God answers, but instead Jesus dies. That the soldiers think Jesus is calling Elijah may suggest that some of them are Jewish. The other Synoptics suggest an allusion to Ps. 69:21 [69:22 MT], where the enemies of the righteous sufferer give vinegar for drink (1QH 4.11; Ellis 1974: 268). John 19:28–30 also notes this sequence later and recalls that Jesus said that he was thirsty. This prompted the offer of a sponge full of vinegar or hyssop, which he received before dying. That the soldiers had to put the drink on a reed to reach Jesus' mouth suggests that he was raised up slightly on the cross. Jesus receives this act of kindness, but it seems to be distinct from the earlier sequence that Luke mentions. It may indicate the presence of another source (Grundmann 1963: 431; Marshall 1978: 869 [uncertain]).

23:37 The soldiers' mocking imitates the leadership, presented in a first-class condition: "Let's assume you are the King of the Jews, then save yourself!" The second note of mocking shows how the Romans viewed Jesus' claim of being the Anointed One, the Christ (23:35). They saw a regal claim in the term. The taunt is given because the belief is that Jesus cannot fulfill it. The remark about kingship recalls the examination of Pilate in 23:3 and is based on the note hung on the cross (23:38). (For the absence of a Synoptic parallel, see the exegesis of 23:36.) Ernst (1977: 636) sees a probable extra source.

23:38 A placard that revealed the charge was hung on the cross above Jesus. Such inscriptions (ἐπιγραφή, epigraphē) usually contained the criminal's name and the charge for which he was being executed (Fitzmyer 1985: 1505; BAGD 291; BAA 590; Mark 15:26; cf. Matt. 22:20 = Mark 12:16 = Luke 20:24).[19] In Latin, this inscription was called a titulus, which is what John 19:19 alludes to in noting that Pilate wrote the inscription (BDF §5.1). The Lucan wording of the inscription matches Mark 15:26 except for Luke's derogatory οὗτος (houtos, this one), which he uses constantly in his account (23:4, 14, 18, 22, 35). Matthew 27:37 shares all of Luke's elements but in a different word order: Οὗτός ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων (houtos estin Iēsous ho basileus tōn Ioudaiōn, this is Jesus, the King of the Jews). He has only the additional warning of Jesus. John 19:19 is even more complete, giving Jesus' name, origin, and crime: Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων (Iēsous ho Nazōraios ho basileus tōn Ioudaiōn, Jesus the Nazarean, the King of the Jews). Both Matthew and Mark note that the inscription bears the charge: Matthew says that they put the charge (τὴν αἰτίαν, tēn aitian) over Jesus' head, while Mark refers to the inscription of the charge (τῆς αἰτίας, tēs aitias). John simply notes that the inscription is "on the cross." All these minor details are differences of summary. The title King of the Jews indicates the main issue of Jesus' trials.

c. Two Thieves (23:39–43)

i. One Criminal Rebukes Jesus (23:39)

23:39 Luke now returns to the two criminals (κακούργων, kakourgōn; 23:32, 33; Grundmann, TDNT 3:484), who are "hanging" (κρεμασθέντων, kremasthentōn) beside Jesus. In many texts κρεμάννυμι (kremannymi) refers to hanging on a cross or tree (Gen. 40:19; Deut. 21:22; Esth. 8:7; Acts 5:30; 10:39; Gal. 3:13; Bertram, TDNT 3:918; Marshall 1978: 871; BAGD 450; BAA 914; BDR §101.42). One of the condemned criminals blasphemes Jesus, that is, he speaks with sarcastic disrespect (Luke 22:65). His taunt recalls those by the leadership and the soldiers (23:35, 37). It is expressed as total sarcasm, using the more bitter form of the first-class condition as an interrogative (Klostermann 1929: 229; Plummer 1896: 534): "Are you not (οὐχί, ouchi) the Christ? Then save yourself and us!” The premise is presented as true, as the “current option,” for “the sake of argument,” but it is not what the speaker really believes. The trite call for Jesus to save is spreading through the observers. All accost Jesus. Even a dying criminal makes a dig. But just in case, he ends with a selfish request for Jesus to save him too! The unbelief and callousness evident here is why Luke calls the remark blasphemous. The irony is great, and so is the blindness. The Righteous One dies while being taunted by the unrighteous. Everything is reversed from what one would expect. Luke as narrator has much more respect for Jesus than the criminal does.

This exchange is found only in Luke, though it is similar to Matt. 27:44 = Mark 15:32, where both criminals are said to reproach (ὠνείδιζον, ōneidizon) Jesus. The absence of any positive note in the other Gospels has caused great speculation. In fact, Luce (1933: 351) goes so far as to call the Lucan account unhistorical. Plummer (1896: 533–34) notes three possible explanations for this difference:

1. At the start both criminals revile Jesus, but the second criminal is later impressed with Jesus and changes his mind. This old explanation goes back to Origen, Chrysostom, and Jerome (Arndt 1956: 470).

2. In the other Synoptics, the criminals reproach Jesus for not doing enough against Rome, while in Luke only one robber sarcastically taunts Jesus. This view assumes that the robbers are Zealots or political insurrectionists, which is not clear in any of the accounts.
3. Each approach reflects different sources (Plummer's view). The other Synoptics treat the criminals as a group and depict only their reviling. Luke has an additional source that is aware of the positive response of the one robber.[20]

Views 1 and 3 are not incompatible. In fact, both are probably the case.

ii. A Second Criminal Rebukes the First and Confesses His Own Guilt (23:40–41)

23:40 The second criminal steps in to rebuke (ἐπιτιμάω, epitimaō; see the exegesis of 4:35) the first in simple terms: does he not fear God (οὐδὲ φοβῇ … τὸν θεόν, oude phobē … ton theon; Luke 1:50; 18:2; Acts 10:2, 22, 35; 13:16, 26)? The criminal offering the rebuke clearly sees the event as God's just judgment on them, but he also sees the taunting of Jesus as an expression of intense hypocrisy for which the other criminal would pay. His remarks are really a commentary on all who taunt Jesus, but especially the one who is justly suffering for crimes committed. God will take offense at what is said about his agent, since Jesus suffers death unrighteously. The criminal asks, "How can you taunt this innocent man when you are deservedly suffering the same sentence? What gives you the right and the nerve to put him down?"

23:41 The second criminal confesses that he and his companion are guilty of the charges for which they are being executed.[21] He makes a double confession of guilt: they suffer "justly" (δικαίως, dikaiōs), and they receive things "worthy" (ἄξιος, axios) of their crimes. The statement is one of recognition and repentance. The criminal also testifies to Jesus, so his next request is received by Jesus. It is often said that this criminal did nothing in terms of responding to Jesus; but this speech is an expression of his faith and what he learned while facing death. The criminal knows that Jesus has done nothing "improper" (ἄτοπος, atopos, lit., out of place or inappropriate; BAGD 120; BAA 241–42; elsewhere with this sense at Acts 25:5; elsewhere in the NT only at Acts 28:6 and 2 Thess. 3:2; cf. Job 27:6; 34:12; 35:13; Prov. 30:20; 2 Macc. 14:23). Jesus is innocent. This is the sixth confession of Jesus' innocence from a third source (Pilate and Herod also called Jesus innocent; Luke 23:4, 14, 15 [twice], 22).

iii. The Second Criminal Makes a Request (23:42)

23:42 The criminal moves past confessing his sin and his belief in Jesus to request that Jesus remember (μιμνήσκομαι, mimnēskomai; BAGD 522 §1c; BAA 1057 §1c; Epictetus 3.24.100) him. This request is similar to funerary inscriptions requesting that the dead be placed with the righteous at the judgment (Gen. 40:14; Ps. 106:4; Fitzmyer 1985: 1510; Marshall 1978: 872; Jeremias, TDNT 5:770). He is the only person to address Jesus simply by his name. The intimacy, setting, and sincerity are poignant (R. Brown 1994: 1005).

The timing of when Jesus is to remember the confessing criminal in the kingdom is textually disputed (see the second additional note on 23:42). Jesus will remember him either in the present (accepting εἰς [eis, into] as original) or by letting him be among the righteous who return with him (accepting ἐν [en, in] as original). Given the reference about entry into the kingdom, a request about being part of Messiah's returning entourage is slightly more likely (i.e., view 2). The criminal seems to anticipate that Jesus will one day (maybe even soon) have great power. When that happens, he wants to be there. The criminal does not, however, expect immediate deliverance, since in Judaism that was associated with the consummation. The remark is a messianic confession and expresses the hope of being with Messiah and the righteous. Plummer (1896: 535) summarizes the verse nicely: "Some saw Jesus raise the dead, and did not believe. The robber sees Him being put to death, and yet believes." The robber is an example of one who finally confesses when he confronts his inevitable death. He wants to follow Jesus even into glory.

iv. Jesus' Comforting Reply (23:43)

23:43 Jesus' response goes beyond the criminal's request: "The criminal's petition expresses the hope that he will attain to life at the parousia; Jesus' reply assures him of immediate entry into paradise"

(Marshall 1978: 873). The solemnity of the reply is noted by the expression ἀμήν σοι λέγω (amēn soi legō, truly I say to you).[22] Jesus does not speak of the unspecified future, but of the immediate present. The request is granted today (σήμερον, sēmeron). This emphasis on the current day involves an immediacy that Luke likes to use (2:11; 4:21; 5:26; 13:32–33; 22:34, 61; Grundmann 1963: 434). Ellis (1965–66) and Fitzmyer (1985: 1510) argue that σήμερον is a reference to the immediate present rather than to the day of Jesus' death, which is possible. They argue that Jesus comes into messianic authority as a result of resurrection-ascension, so that the actual day of being with Jesus is a few days hence. Yet this seems to split hairs too finely. It seems more likely that some sense of moving immediately into an intermediate state, conscious of God's blessing, is alluded to here; that is, it is not likely that Jesus was in limbo for a few days. He seeks to encourage the criminal in his confession. Jewish doctrine held that the dead go to Sheol. The concept of delay of blessing pertains only to obtaining the final resurrection body. This issue is bound up with the meaning of παράδεισος (paradeisos, paradise).

The term παράδεισος comes into Greek from the Persian world, though related terms appear in noneschatological contexts (Gen. 2:8; 13:10; Neh. 2:8; Song 4:13; Eccles. 2:5; BAGD 1 Enoch 614 §2; BAA 1241 §2; Fitzmyer 1985: 1510–11; Jeremias, TDNT 5:765–73; Grelot 1967; R. Brown 1994: 1010–12; Josephus, Antiquities 1.1.3 §37). The term later came to refer to the eschatological garden or paradise (Isa. 51:3; Ezek. 28:13; 31:8). In Judaism, it referred to the abode of the righteous (1 Enoch 17–19; 32.3; 60.8; 61.12; 2 Enoch 65.10; T. Levi 18.10–11; T. Dan 5.12; Ps. Sol. 14.3; Sipre 307.3 on Deut. 32:4 [= Neusner 1987: 2.319]; SB 2:264).[23] Arndt (1956: 471) correctly equates its meaning with Abraham's bosom, an image that also highlights immediate reception after death (Luke 16:23). The phrase appears in two other NT texts, 2 Cor. 12:4 (= 12:3 in RSV) and Rev. 2:7, both of which seem to allude to the heavenly realm where the righteous are gathered. Thus, Jesus promises this criminal that today he will be with him and live among the righteous (Acts 3:21; 7:55). Jesus' reply also suggests that the criminal will be in some conscious, intermediate state until the resurrection, though this conclusion is implied, rather than explicit. Death is a mere transition for this man.

He too will experience victory and deliverance through the King he confesses, and that deliverance is immediate (Nolland 1993b: 1152). Hope is thus provided by his confession and the Messiah's compassion. Jesus can and does save, despite what the taunts suggest. The irony should not be missed. A call to Jesus yields immediate results.

d. Jesus' Death (23:44–49)

i. Cosmic Signs (23:44–45)

23:44 As the crucifixion proceeds, the heavens begin to comment. The crucifixion began at the third hour (9:00 A.M.; Mark 15:25); at about[24] the sixth hour (midday), darkness fell over the entire land and lasted until the ninth hour (3:00 P.M.).[25] The Gospel of Peter 5.15 (Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.223) also describes this phenomenon, saying that darkness held sway over all Judea and that the people feared lest the sun set while Jesus was alive.

The darkness recalls an eschatological motif from the judgment imagery of the day of the Lord (Amos 8:9; Joel 2:10; 2:30–31 [3:3–4 MT]; Zeph. 1:15; Fitzmyer 1985: 1517). Given this background, these heavenly portents signal the significance of the events surrounding Jesus' death. An eschatologically significant time of judgment is present. God is watching and signaling his presence. The day-of-the-Lord imagery is not, however, consummated here, since in Acts 2:16–18 the day of the Lord is seen as something that still approaches, rather than something that had been fulfilled at the cross. It is questioned whether the Gentiles in Luke's audience would appreciate such imagery. R. Brown's reading (1994: 1042–43) of the darkness as a theological symbol in contrast to Jesus as light (Luke 1:78–79) is probably correct, though such a view need not exclude judgment. Brown also ties darkness to the Greek motif of signs at the death of a great person (Plutarch, Romulus 27.6; Plutarch, Caesar 69.4; Ovid, Fasti 2.493; Cicero, Republic 6.22 §24; Pliny, Natural History 2.30 §98; Grández 1989). Such background is not limited to Greco-Roman contexts, for the theistic Jewish culture also saw divinity active in all events (for the historicity debate, see the exegesis of 23:45). A foreboding mix of cosmic responses surround the cross.

Mark 15:33 is almost exact: he notes the time with the genitive absolute καὶ γενομένης (kai genomenēs, and when [the sixth hour] came), while Luke has the paratactic καὶ ἦν ἤδη ὡσεί (kai ēn ēdē hōsei, and it was already about). Matthew 27:45 starts with ἀπὸ δέ (apo de, but from) and also uses a different phrase to describe how the darkness covers the whole earth: ἐπὶ πᾶσαν (epi pasan, over all) versus Mark's and Luke's ἐφ' ὅλην (eph' holēn, upon the whole).

23:45 The sun was "failing" (ἐκλείπω, ekleipō; BAGD 242; BAA 488; elsewhere in the NT only at Luke 16:9; 22:32; Heb. 1:12). The debate whether this was an eclipse stretches back to the third century (Arndt 1956: 472–73; Plummer 1896: 537; defended by Tertullian, Apology 21). Many regard this remark as legendary because an eclipse is impossible at full moon (Luce 1933: 352; Creed 1930: 288).[26] Conzelmann (TDNT 7:439) argues that the details were added to impart a salvific significance to the event, but Fitzmyer (1985: 1518–19) correctly notes that this imagery has no such motif. Others suggest that a Mediterranean wind, a sirocco, was capable of darkening the sun (Fitzmyer 1985: 1518; Marshall 1978: 875; G. R. Driver 1965: 331–37). Plummer (1896: 536) says more directly that the events may be attributed "either to a supernatural cause or to a providential coincidence." Such portents were common in Judaism and the ancient world (Fitzmyer 1985: 1518).[27] Their real presence is the reason some bystanders change their view of the event.

The darkness parallels the day-of-the-Lord imagery in the previous verse. This event is part of God's working; the signs picture judgment, as well as the temporary prevailing of darkness. The heavenly testimony combines with the ripping of the temple curtain to give a twofold sign from creation that Jesus' death is important in God's plan. Citing Caird (1980: 213–14), Fitzmyer (1985: 1513, 1517) holds that the cosmic portents in Mark's version are intended to be only symbolic. This explanation seems unlikely since in the Synoptic accounts the spectators at the crucifixion are impressed by the testimony of the cosmic events. What else would lead to the reflections by the thief on the cross and the Roman centurion? These details are intended historically and literally (Nolland 1993b: 1156). Luke portrays Jesus' death as a public event that impressed a variety of people in a variety of ways.

Only Luke reports here the rending of the temple veil, which was made of fine Babylonian cloth of blue, scarlet, and purple (Matt. 27:51 = Mark 15:38 has it slightly later in the crucifixion account; Ellis 1974: 269; Jeremias 1969: 37; Josephus, Jewish War 5.5.4–5 §§207–21). Καταπέτασμα (katapetasma) is ambiguous (BAGD 416; BAA 845–46), however, since it is used of both the curtain that protected the Holy of Holies (Lev. 21:23; 24:3; Josephus, Jewish War 5.5.5 §219) and the curtain that separated the temple from the outer court (Exod. 26:37; 38:18; Num. 3:26; Josephus, Jewish War 5.5.4 §212). Many believe that καταπέτασμα refers to the inner curtain, because another term (κάλυμμα, kalymma; BAGD 400–401; BAA 813–14) is also used for the outer curtain (Exod. 27:16; Num. 3:25; Plummer 1896: 537–38; Arndt 1956: 473; Ellis 1974: 269; C. Schneider, TDNT 3:629).[28] Others argue that the public nature of this phenomenon would require that καταπέτασμα refer here to the outer curtain (Klostermann 1929: 227; Marshall 1978: 875; Fitzmyer 1985: 1518; Michel, TDNT 4:885 n. 21; Pelletier 1955; Pelletier 1958; Benoit 1969: 201; G. R. Driver 1965: 335–36). This argument is not entirely compelling, for the priests could have reported that the inner curtain was torn. A Jewish tradition about a similar event, along with the mysterious opening of the temple doors, is similarly ambiguous.[29] The tearing of either curtain would make the point that God is at work. It is slightly more likely that the outer curtain is meant, since the other signs associated with Jesus' death are so public.

The significance of the curtain's tearing operates at numerous levels (Ellis 1974: 268):

1. In association with the other signs, it pictures a time of judgment tied to the eschatological acts of God (R. Brown 1994: 1003–7).
2. It suggests the judgment that is coming on the temple (21:5–38; SB 1:1045). J. Green (1991) challenges this view by noting that the emphasis is not on the predicted judgment, but on the temple's cessation as the center of God's activity. In Green's view, the curtain's tearing signifies the end of the temple's dominant role as a sacred symbol.
3. It suggests that Jesus opens the doors to paradise (23:43). Sylva's variation (1986) of this view argues that it pictures heaven's open communion with Jesus (also Nolland 1993b: 1157–58).
4. A combination view is also possible. The association with paradise is likely because Jesus' death suggests that it is no longer necessary to worship God in the temple (Luke 19:45–20:18; John 4:21–24; Heb. 9–10). Perhaps the act should not be seen anthropologically, but in terms of theology proper. God is pictured coming out of his temple to reach out to all, he cannot be contained within it (Acts 7:45–50), and so Jesus' death represents the ultimate opening up of the way to God (Luke 5:31–32; 15:1–32; 19:10). The emphasis is not on atonement (as in Heb. 9–10), but on God's access to people.

Views 2 (specifically Green's approach) and 4 have the most merit.

As with the previous portent, some argue that the veil rending is a legendary detail. Others note that the same sirocco that darkened the sun could also have torn the temple curtain. Plummer's appeal (1896: 536) to supernatural causes or providential coincidence applies here as well. Luke has something definite in mind, not something fabricated or purely symbolic (against Nolland 1993b: 1158). Placed in such a cosmically active context, a mere symbolic assertion of the temple-veil rending is unlikely.

Luke has this text earlier than the parallels in Matt. 27:51–53 = Mark 15:38, which mention the curtain rending after Jesus dies. Arndt (1956: 473) regards the Lucan arrangement as topical so as to place all the cosmic portents together. Matthew and Mark both speak of the curtain's being ripped in two from top to bottom. All the Synoptics use the same ambiguous term to refer to the veil. Luke omits any reference to speculation that Jesus called for Elijah. These stylistic and editorial differences allow the accounts to complement one another.

ii. Jesus' Final Words: A Prayer of Trust (23:46)

23:46 Jesus dies with a cry of faith. Luke notes that he cries out in a loud voice as he makes his final statement (Marshall 1978: 875; Fitzmyer 1985: 1519; Plummer 1896: 538).[30] The Synoptic parallels also note this cry: κράξας φωνῇ μεγάλῃ (kraxas phōnē megalē, cried out in a loud voice; Matt. 27:50) and ἀφεὶς φωνὴν μεγάλην (apheis phōnēn megalēn, uttered a loud cry; Mark 15:37). Matthew and Mark do not, however, detail the content of this second cry. They both note earlier that Ps. 22:1 [22:2 MT] was the content of Jesus' first cry, but here they only note the second cry without giving its content. Luke alone supplies content, though John 19:30 has a short remark: “It is finished” (τετέλεσται, tetelestai).[31]

Jesus’ final words in Luke before his death come from Ps. 31:5 [31:6 MT]. In the original psalm, the remarks are the prayer of a righteous sufferer who wishes to be delivered from his enemies and expresses trust that his fate is in God’s hands. Jesus’ remarks are an expression of righteous faith. The use of the psalm is typico-prophetic: Jesus is the righteous sufferer par excellence. As he faces death, he expresses his trust that God will care for him. In fact, this is a call to resurrect him. Acts 2:27–28, 31 and 13:35–36 appeal to Ps. 16 to develop what happened to Jesus upon his death (Neyrey 1985: 151–53). Jesus had made numerous predictions of his resurrection (Luke 9:22; 18:33; 22:69; 23:43). This promise is alluded to later in 24:7, 26, 44, 46, and Paul also alludes to it when he says that he is on trial for the hope of resurrection from the dead (Acts 23:6; 24:15; 26:6, 8). Jesus’ prayer of trust is thus an expression of submission to God’s will, in which Jesus expresses faith that God will deliver him. Jesus is a model of the dying righteous one who can rest in God. Such hope is also expressed by Stephen in Acts 7:59, whose death mirrors that of Jesus (also 1 Pet. 4:19).

The prayer contains an address and a statement of faith. The address πάτερ (pater, Father) is frequent in Luke (10:21; 11:2; 22:42; 23:34) and shows the special familial appeal that Jesus makes. Jesus is giving over his spirit to God's care.[32] Χείρ (cheir, hand) indicates God's care (John 10:29; Acts 4:28, 30; 1 Pet. 5:6; BAGD 880 §2aβ; BAA 1756 §2aβ). Interestingly, Ps. 31 was used in later Judaism as an evening prayer. God was asked to care for and protect during sleep (b. Ber. 5a; SB 2:269; Marshall 1978: 876; Jeremias 1926a: 126 n. 3). Jesus submits to his death. He "sleeps" and leaves his vindication to God.

With this hope, Jesus dies. Luke and Mark 15:37 both use the euphemistic ἐκπνέω (ekpneō, to breathe out, expire; BAGD 244; BAA 492; Josephus, Antiquities 12.9.1 §357), while Matt. 27:50 has ἀφῆκεν τὸ πνεῦμα (aphēken to pneuma, he yielded his spirit) and John 19:30 has παρέδωκεν τὸ πνεῦμα (paredōken to pneuma, he gave up his spirit). Luke notes that death followed this last utterance. It is after this that Matt. 27:51–53 = Mark 15:38 describes the veil's rending. Matthew also uniquely records that an earthquake took place when Jesus died and many saints were subsequently resurrected. Luke's use of Ps. 31 probably reflects an additional source, as do the unique Matthean details ("a pre-Lukan impulse" according to Nolland 1993b: 1158).

iii. A Centurion's Remark and the Crowd's Mourning (23:47–48)

23:47 A centurion watches all that takes place. The title ἑκατοντάρχης (hekatontarchēs) describes the Roman soldier in charge of the crucifixion and indicates that he led a group of one hundred soldiers (also Luke 7:2, 6). Matthew 27:54 has the related ἑκατόνταρχος (hekatontarchos), while Mark 15:39 has the Latin equivalent ὁ κεντυρίων (ho kentyriōn), from which we get our term centurion (BDR §5.1a.3). Recension B of the Acts of Pilate 11.2 gives the centurion's name as Loginus, which means "soldier with a spear," a detail that alludes to John 19:34 (Fitzmyer 1985: 1519; Plummer 1896: 539). As the centurion sees what has happened, he praises (δοξάζω, doxazō) God.[33]

Upon observing what has happened, the centurion utters the scene's final remark, which functions as a judgment over the events. The remark is significant because it comes from a Gentile. The centurion declares that Jesus was δίκαιος (dikaios; BAGD 196 §3; BAA 394 §3; eleven times in Luke and six times in Acts). Δίκαιος normally means “righteous” (Nolland 1993b: 1158–59), but it can also mean “innocent” (Prov. 6:17; Joel 3:19 [4:19 LXX]; Jon. 1:14; Matt. 23:35; 27:19; James 5:6; 1 Pet. 3:18; Plummer 1896: 539; Fitzmyer 1985: 1520; Marshall 1978: 876). In this legal context, the more natural meaning is “innocent,” since numerous confessions of Jesus’ innocence have preceded this scene (Luke 23:4, 14, 22, 41; Kilpatrick 1942). R. Brown (1994: 1163–67) prefers “just” (i.e., righteous), which he correctly notes entails innocence. Brown posits three reasons for Luke’s change of Mark (or Matthew): (1) an allusion to Ps. 31:18 [31:19 MT], (2) the use of the title Righteous One in the church (cf. Isa. 53:11; Jer. 23:5; Zech. 9:9), and (3) the correspondence to Luke’s portrayal of Jesus in the earlier trial scene. But if the earlier declarations of innocence are the point, then an emphasis on Jesus’ being innocent is central. The centurion’s verdict affirms Jesus’ character and the execution’s injustice. Jesus is an innocent sufferer (a theme developed in Acts 3:14; 7:52; 13:28; 22:14; Neyrey 1985: 100). This seventh confession of innocence is the ultimate commentary on these events (cf. Luke 23:4, 14, 15 [twice], 22, 41). Jesus, not his executioners, stands before God without blame.

Luke's rendering of the remark is slightly simplified from Matt. 27:54 = Mark 15:39. Matthew's longer account notes that the centurion is not alone: other soldiers kept watch with him over Jesus, saw the earthquake, and were filled with awe. Mark notes only the centurion, who faced Jesus and saw him breathe his last. Matthew and Mark agree on what is said (though Matthew has it as a group confession): "Truly this (man) was the Son of God." For a Gentile, in this setting this statement probably has a functional, regal meaning instead of an ontological force. The soldiers accept Jesus' claims of sonship because of the signs accompanying his death. He is uniquely related to God and is his representative to the people. Pilate's inscription above the cross is true.

It is possible that Luke has rendered the centurion's remark in a more summarizing form, either because the expression Son of God would not mean anything to his audience or because it might be misunderstood to indicate that Jesus was a son of God (Schweizer, TDNT 8:381, prefers the latter). Conversely, Matthew and Mark might have rendered the result of what it means to regard Jesus as innocent. Perhaps several statements were said, especially given the multiple audience (noted by Matthew). The most likely choice, given Luke's preference for the term δίκαιος, is that he explicitly explains the force of the centurion's confession. If Jesus is confessed as Son of God, he is clearly innocent and has suffered unjustly—a theme that Luke develops more than the other Synoptics. Thus, the final note about Jesus' death is that he died as an innocent. He suffered unjustly at the hands of humans. He was whom he claimed to be—the King of the Jews, the Christ of God. A Gentile sensitive to the heavenly portents understands God's testimony. Many others had opinions about Jesus, but God's testimony is what counts. The centurion pictures a person sensitive and open to God's work.

23:48 The crowd (ὄχλοι, ochloi) now seems to reconsider its earlier decision to press for Jesus' death. The group mentioned here is simply the "gathered" (συμπαραγίνομαι, symparaginomai; BAGD 779; BAA 1554; a NT hapax legomenon) crowd, so some may not be the same group that pressed for Jesus' death in 23:18, 21, 23. Luke 23:35 also used θεωρέω (theōreō, to watch; BAGD 360 §1; BAA 731; BDR §101.32; elsewhere in Luke at 10:18; 14:29; 21:6; 24:37, 39) to note the people who watched these happenings. There were many witnesses to this public event, meaning that many could later describe what took place. These people see the signs and perhaps hear the centurion's reaction.

These events produce mourning over Jesus' death as the crowd observes the "spectacle" (θεωρία, theōria, a NT hapax legomenon; BAGD 360; BAA 732; Dan. 5:7; 2 Macc. 5:26; 15:12; 3 Macc. 5:24), the array of crucifixion events. Mourning is reflected in the beating of the breast (τύπτω, typtō; BAGD 830; BAA 1655; Stählin, TDNT 3:849). The same idiom appears in Luke 18:13, where the tax collector approached God in a mood of contrition (also Josephus, Antiquities 7.10.5 §252). Sorrow probably results from recognition of the divine signs, which indicate that someone of significance has died. This is not a routine mourning of death. Similar reflection comes from another crowd in Acts 2:37–38 (Ernst 1977: 640). The remarks suggest that this crowd has been moved by the events. They may be seeking mercy for what has taken place. Some taking a close look at Jesus may change their minds about him. They regret what has taken place to the Innocent One, a view that sees their previous call for his death as wrong. (I see more involved here than Nolland's overtones [1993b: 1159] of regret, which is less precise than guilt and contrition.)

After the events are finished, the crowd returns. Because many pilgrims are present in the city, Luke uses the intransitive ὑποστρέφω (hypostrephō, to return) and does not say "returned home." The pilgrims returned to where they were staying to celebrate the Passover. Jesus' death went from being desired to being regretted.

iv. The Disciples and Women Watch (23:49)

23:49 Two other groups watching the events are listed separately because they are distinct from the crowd, having traveled with Jesus. First are those who knew him (Marshall 1978: 877).[34] This is an oblique way to refer to the disciples, who apparently did not feel safe since they stand and observe events "from a distance" (ἀπὸ μακρόθεν, apo makrothen).

This seems to be a group broader than the Twelve (now eleven), since Luke can identify the more narrow group specifically by name (e.g., Acts 1:13–14). Second are the women who followed Jesus from Galilee.[35] This is a different group of women than those in 23:27. Some of these women were mentioned in 8:1–3, and others will be noted in 24:10 (Fitzmyer 1985: 1520–21). They had stayed faithful to Jesus and now stood to see all that was happening (ὁρῶσαι, horōsai, is a purpose participle: "so that they could see"; BDR §418.4.5).

The double grouping of Luke's text differs from Matt. 27:55–56 = Mark 15:40–41 = John 19:25–27. All the Synoptics use the phrase ἀπὸ μακρόθεν to show that the women are some distance from the events. Noting that these women are from Galilee, Matthew names three of them: Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James and Joseph, and the mother of the sons of Zebedee. Noting that many others also watched, Mark names Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James the younger and Joses, and Salome. Matthew and Mark are close verbally, sharing nineteen terms. Luke is more of a summary, except for the additional note that some friends were with the women (Marshall 1978: 877 sees a different source for Luke). John speaks of two people standing by the cross: Jesus' mother and the "disciple whom he (Jesus) loved," probably John himself. Jesus places his mother in John's care, a detail unique to John.

Summary

In Luke 23:26–49 Jesus goes to the cross in the midst of a swirl of events. His exhaustion causes someone to be appointed to bear the cross for him. The humanness of Jesus' death stands out here, but he is still in control. The mourning by women of the city causes him to issue a perilous warning. Jesus may be dying, but it is Jerusalem that will pay in judgment—judgment so severe that people will beg to die. Creation will reverse itself. By ridding themselves of Jesus, the nation increases its problems.

At the cross, five themes dominate. First, Jesus is crucified among the criminals. He shares the place of the unrighteous. Second are the variety of reactions produced by Jesus' death: people watch, rulers sneer, soldiers mock, and a criminal blasphemes. But another criminal confesses and asks for deliverance, and a centurion confesses Jesus' innocence, while women mourn and followers watch. The whole world watches with a variety of reactions. Third is Jesus' innocence, which is underlined by the criminal's and centurion's confessions. Jesus dies as an innocent, but he is in control, for he offers the confessing criminal paradise. He is the righteous sufferer, as the many allusions to the lament psalms show. But even more, he is judge and king. Fourth is creation's testimony to Jesus' death. The signs of darkness and the ripping of the temple veil testify that significant events are being fulfilled in God's plan. Creation speaks for the Creator on behalf of Jesus. Humans may have opinions about Jesus, but God sends the real testimony about him. The heavenly portents parallel the day of the Lord and also suggest judgment for rejecting the Son. Fifth is the exemplary trust of Jesus before his Father, entrusting his soul to God's care and relying on him for resurrection. It now remains only for God to act.

In the midst of the portrayal are numerous taunts to Jesus to save himself if he is a true miracle worker or king. Jesus does not save himself from death on the cross. God will, however, vindicate his Chosen One a few days hence. Those who reject Jesus think they have him, but the resurrection will show that Jesus has authority over them. As Jesus testified at his own trial, “From now on the Son of Man will be seated at the right hand of the Father.” Jesus’ trial has run its course. He is crucified, but the judgment stands not against Jesus. The Innocent One will be raised to exercise judgment. All will be asked to express where they stand. Luke’s reader is left to contemplate Jesus’ innocent sufferings. Will the reader be like the sneering crowds or the confessing criminal? They cannot remain neutral like the observing crowds, since paradise or judgment awaits. If there is one thing that Luke is after in his Gospel, it is the need to totally embrace the Innocent One who died. Resurrection makes that response a necessity.

Additional Notes

23:32. The way Jesus’ execution is expressed is disputed. Some manuscripts (P^{75}, ℵ, B) read ἕτεροι κακοῦργοι δύο

(other criminals two), which appears to identify Jesus as a criminal, though Plummer (1896: 530) argues that it could be translated "others, two criminals." Most manuscripts (A, C, D, L, W, Θ, Ψ, family 1, family 13, Byz) read ἕτεροι δύο κακοῦργοι (others, two criminals), reversing the word order so as to not view Jesus as a criminal. Because the second reading thus looks like a clarification, most take the harder first reading as original. Regardless, it is clear that three crucifixions are taking place and that the other two condemned men had engaged in criminal activity.

23:34. If Jesus' prayer forgiving his executioners is original, then it is unique to Luke. Many Alexandrian and Western witnesses omit the prayer ($\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, $\aleph^{1}$, B, D*, W, Θ, Syriac), while $\aleph^{*,2}$, (A), C, D^{2}, L, Byz, and some Syriac include it. External evidence leans toward rejecting the prayer, but internal factors also enter into the decision:

1. The parallel prayer of Stephen in Acts 7:60 argues for inclusion, since Luke frequently notes parallelism between events. (James the Just is said to utter a similar prayer in Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History 2.23.16.)
2. The absence of a parallel in the other Gospels speaks for inclusion here (i.e., there is no good reason to explain why a copyist would add such a remark).
3. The motif of ignorance is common in Acts (3:17; 13:27; 17:30) and finds endorsement here (Epp 1962).

4. It is easier to explain the prayer's omission than its insertion. A scribe might have omitted it if he considered the remarks too forgiving of the Jews (R. Brown 1994: 979) or if he regarded the prayer as unanswered in light of A.D. 70 (Jerome, Letter 120.8.2 says it delayed the judgment).
5. Each major subunit in Luke's crucifixion narrative contains a saying. If the prayer is omitted, then a saying is lacking from this subunit (Marshall 1978: 868).

These internal reasons suggest that the reading is original to Luke and should be included in his text. Ernst (1977: 634), Grundmann (1963: 432–33), Tiede (1988: 417), Ellis (1974: 267), and Marshall (1978: 867–68) are for inclusion. Luce (1933: 350) and Creed (1930: 286) are against it. Fitzmyer (1985: 1503) and Danker (1988: 373–75) are uncertain. Plummer (1896: 531) and Jeremias (TDNT 5:713 n. 455) argue that the prayer goes back to Jesus, but is perhaps misplaced in the textual tradition (cf. the double square brackets in UBS–NA). The classic discussion of the problem is Harnack 1901: 255–61. R. Brown (1994: 975–81) has a detailed summary of the discussion, including four options of how the prayer arose: (1) spoken by Jesus and preserved by Luke, (2) spoken by Jesus and inserted early on into Luke, (3) formulated by Luke, and (4) formulated after Luke. Brown prefers option 3 on the basis of Lucan style; I prefer option 1. Luke may be drawing on a source.

23:35. The textual dispute about the crowd's taunt only slightly affects meaning since the rebuke is clearly directed at Jesus for claiming to be Messiah. At least three variant readings should be abandoned in favor of the UBS–NA text, since it would be hard to explain how the title ὁ ἐκλεκτός (the Elect One, the Chosen One) came into the text if it was originally lacking.

23:38. Many manuscripts allude to the multilingual character of the inscription over Jesus, noting that it was written in Greek, Latin and Aramaic. The variety of word order and apparent harmonization with John 19:20 makes its originality in Luke unlikely. $\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, $\aleph^{1}$, B, C*, L, and some Syriac omit this detail. If Luke originally included it, the best of six variants is found in C^{3}, W, Δ, Θ, family 1, Byz, some Itala, Vulgate, and some Syriac: γεγραμμένη ἐπ' αὐτῷ γράμμασιν Ἑλληνικοῖς καὶ Ῥωμαϊκοῖς καὶ Ἑβραϊκοῖς (written upon it in the letters of the Greeks and Romans and Hebrews).

23:42. $\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, ℵ, B, and L read ἔλεγεν· Ἰησοῦ, μνήσθητί μου (he said, "Jesus, remember me"). Because Jesus is nowhere else addressed as Ἰησοῦ (Luce 1933: 351), this harder reading was softened by a copyist to address Jesus as κύριε (Lord): ἔλεγεν τῷ Ἰησοῦ· μνήσθητί μου κύριε (he said to Jesus, "Remember me, Lord"; A, C^{2}, W, Θ, Ψ, family 1, family 13, Byz, Vulgate, some Syriac).[36]

23:42. A few manuscripts ($\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, B, L; also NRSV and NIV) read εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν (into your kingdom); others (א, C, A, W, Θ, Ψ, family 1, family 13, Byz) read ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ (in your kingdom). The first reading would mean that Jesus is to remember the criminal when he is glorified and comes into the Father's presence. This perspective fits Judaism, but more important, it fits Luke's emphasis on Jesus' immediate rule (1:33; 16:22; 17:20–21; 22:30; 24:26). This reading is accepted with some hesitation by UBS–NA, Metzger (1975: 181), Arndt (1956: 470), Fitzmyer (1985: 1510), Grundmann (1963: 434), and Tiede (1988: 420). The second reading means that Jesus is to remember the criminal when he brings the resurrected righteous with him to set up his rule on earth. This reading also fits Lucan teaching (Luke 23:35, 37, 39; Acts 1:6–11; 3:19–21) and is accepted by Klostermann (1929: 229), Plummer (1896: 535), Schneider (1977a: 485), Ellis (1974: 268), Schweizer (1984: 361), Jeremias (1966: 249 n. 2), and Marshall (1978: 872). It is hard to know which reading is original. The second reading makes good sense and is slightly superior in literary sense, since Jesus' reply will heighten the request, making it more temporally specific ("Today!"). The criminal probably asks to be with Jesus at the unknown time of his future return, but Jesus says the criminal will be in God's presence today.

23:45. The remark about the sun failing is found in three textual variations. (1) The UBS–NA text has an aorist participle: τοῦ ἡλίου ἐκλιπόντος (the sun failed; P^{75}, ℵ, C, L, some Syriac). (2) Other manuscripts have a present participle: τοῦ ἡλίου ἐκλείποντος (the sun failing; P^{75c}, B). (3) The most commonly attested reading uses a different verb: καὶ ἐσκοτίσθη ὁ ἥλιος (and the sun was darkened; A, D, W, Θ, Ψ, family 1, family 13, Byz, Vulgate, some Syriac). All the readings mean basically the same thing. But since ἐκλείπω in the first two readings could refer to an eclipse, most consider the third reading a copyist's removal of the ambiguity that an eclipse could happen during the full moon of the Passover.[37] It could also be argued that the verb of the third reading conforms too closely to the noun in 23:44. The slightly better external evidence favors the first reading, which is printed in the UBS–NA text.

8. Burial (23:50–56)

Jesus' faithful followers are active as the Sabbath approaches. Two groups are singled out: Joseph of Arimathea and a group of women from Galilee. Joseph makes sure that Jesus receives an honorable burial, while the women watch to see where Jesus is laid to rest and then go to prepare spices for his body. Many have rejected Jesus, but a few faithful remain.

Sources and Historicity

The sources for this account seem clear enough. Much of the material found here is basic traditional material with parallels in Mark 15:42–47 = Matt. 27:57–61 (Aland 1985: §350), but there is also some new information. Unique to Luke are the note that the women are from Galilee and the detail that the tomb had never been used before (Matthew is close to this by saying the tomb is new). The other Synoptics tell us that Mary Magdalene and "the other" Mary (Matthew) or Mary mother of Joses (Mark) were there. Luke lacks some details: Joseph getting up courage (Mark 15:43), Pilate checking on Jesus' death (Mark 15:44–45), the purchase of the linen shroud (Mark 15:46a), the rolling of the stone (Mark 15:46b = Matt. 27:60), and the guards (Matt. 27:62–66). Most agree that Luke had access to additional material and chose to leave out some traditional details.[1] The account is accepted as historical.[2]

The account is a story about Jesus (Fitzmyer 1985: 1524; Bultmann 1963: 274). The outline of Luke 23:50–56 is as follows:

a. Joseph (23:50–53)
   i. Joseph's character (23:50–51)

ii. Joseph’s burial of Jesus (23:52–53)

b. Chronological note (23:54)

c. The women (23:55–56)

Some in Israel believe and look for the kingdom. Not everyone in the council condemned Jesus. Some of the faithful gave special care to Jesus’ body. Jesus was laid in an unused tomb; he was buried with honor, not as a criminal. Women watch and prepare spices for the body. Jesus’ followers engage in the pious observance of the Sabbath. The burial means that Jesus’ death was real, not an illusion.

Exegesis and Exposition

50 And behold there was a man named Joseph, being a member of the council and a good and righteous man— 51 this one ❒did not consent❒ to their purpose and deed—from Arimathea, a city of the Jews. And he was looking for the kingdom of God. 52 This one came to Pilate and asked for the body of Jesus. 53 Then he took it down and wrapped it in a linen shroud and laid him in a rock-hewn tomb where no one had ever been laid.

54 It was the Day of Preparation, and the Sabbath was beginning.

55The women who had come with him from Galilee followed after and watched the tomb and how his body was laid, but returning, 56they prepared spices and perfumes. And they rested on the Sabbath according to the commandment.

a. Joseph (23:50–53)

i. Joseph's Character (23:50–51)

23:50 Luke notes that not every Jewish leader sought Jesus' death. While many "fell" in Israel, some did "rise" (2:34; Neyrey 1985: 132). Joseph of Arimathea is regarded as a historical figure by even the most skeptical (e.g., Bultmann 1963: 274). A member of the council (βουλευτής, bouleutēs; elsewhere in the NT only at Mark 15:43), he is good and righteous, which recalls Luke's earlier descriptions of Zechariah, Elizabeth, Simeon, and Anna (Luke 1:6–7; 2:25–27, 36–38; Oepke, TDNT 1:363). Just as pious figures are involved in Jesus' birth, so also they are present at his death.

Matthew 27:57 mentions that Joseph is from Arimathea, that he is rich, and that he is a disciple. Mark 15:42–43 notes that Joseph is from Arimathea and that he was looking for the kingdom of God as he took courage and approached Pilate. Mark also says that Joseph is εὐσχήμων (euschēmōn), indicative of either his noble birth (Acts 13:50; 17:12) or noble character (Rom. 13:13; 1 Cor. 7:35). Creed (1930: 291) and Greeven (TDNT 2:770–72) argue that Luke emphasizes the moral sense and Matthew the social sense. But Marshall (1978: 879) correctly wonders if Luke intends to interpret the Marcan term. The phrase's placement after the name and place suggests that Luke is giving additional points about Joseph. Luke saves the chronological note that Matthew and Mark have here for Luke 23:54, which according to Marshall (1978: 879) speaks in favor of Luke's using another source. John 19:31–37 narrates the piercing of Jesus' side. Then John describes Joseph as a secret disciple because he feared the Jews. Joseph now goes public and acts on his association with Jesus. The Gospel of Peter 2.3 (Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.223) narrates and expands upon this event: Joseph asks for the body before Jesus dies, and Pilate obtains the body by begging for it from Herod.

23:51 Luke continues to describe Joseph, making a parenthetical comment, as the broken οὗτος (houtos, this one) construction shows (Marshall 1978: 879).[3] Joseph did not assent to the Sanhedrin's purpose (βουλή, boulē; elsewhere used by Luke in Luke

7:30; Acts 2:23; 4:28; 5:38; 13:36; 20:27; 27:12, 42) and action (πρᾶξις, praxis; elsewhere in the NT at Matt. 16:27; Acts 19:18; Rom. 8:13; 12:4; Col. 3:9), a phrase introduced by periphrastic ἦν συγκατατεθειμένος (ēn synkatatetheimenos; BAGD 773; BAA 1543; a hapax legomenon; cf. the variant readings in Acts 4:18 and 15:12; also Exod. 23:1, 32). He probably rejected the deal with Judas, the council's verdict, and their sending Jesus to Pilate (Fitzmyer 1985: 1526; Maurer, TDNT 6:642–44; Marshall 1978: 879). Plummer (1896: 541) notes that Joseph must have been absent from the evening trial, which gave a unanimous decision (Mark 14:64). In Luke's view, Joseph is a remnant saint, one who is faithful in the midst of the disobedience of others and who participates in the fulfillment of promises made to the nation (Tiede 1988: 426).[4]

Joseph is from Arimathea, probably his birthplace or earlier home, since he has a tomb in Jerusalem and serves on the Sanhedrin. All of the Gospels mention the locale in order to prevent confusion with any other Joseph (Matt. 27:57 = Mark 15:43 = John 19:38). The exact location of Arimathea is not certain. Many suggest Ramah (Samuel's birthplace), which is known as Ramathaim-zophim (1 Sam. 1:1), Rathamin (1 Macc. 11:34), or Ramathain (Josephus, Antiquities 13.4.9 §127). This town is located about five miles north of Jerusalem. (Another suggestion is Remphis, ten miles northeast of Lydda.)

Joseph is described as a disciple who awaits the kingdom of God (cf. Luke 2:25, 38). Some argue that this simply means that Joseph held to Jewish eschatological hope and was not necessarily a disciple (Luce 1933: 355; Creed 1930: 291). Arguing that Mark does not present Joseph as a disciple, R. Brown (1994: 1213–19) cites tradition that the Jews (i.e., Joseph?) buried Jesus (Acts 13:27–29; John 19:31; Gospel of Peter 6.21 [Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.224]; Justin Martyr, Dialogue with Trypho 97.1).[5] In light of the kingdom hope, however, this limited force is unlikely. Tradition seems clear that Joseph is a disciple (John 19:38 = Matt. 27:57; Marshall 1978: 880), though one should not forget that at the time he was part of the Jewish leadership. Asking to bury Jesus' body fulfills Deut. 21:22–23 (cf. Tob. 1:17–18; Josephus, Against Apion 2.29 §211). Joseph did not coordinate his effort with the women because he was a secret disciple (John 19:38).

ii. Joseph's Burial of Jesus (23:52–53)

23:52 Luke agrees exactly with Matt. 27:58a that Joseph asks for Jesus' body. Mark 15:43b notes that Joseph took courage, went to Pilate, and asked for the body. Mark describes Joseph's coming to Pilate with εἰσῆλθεν (eisēlthen, he came in), while Matthew and Luke have προσελθών (proselthōn, coming to). All the Synoptists and John 19:38 note that Joseph asked for Jesus' σῶμα (sōma, body) to make it clear that Jesus was physically dead. John notes that Joseph asked to take away (ἄρῃ, arē) the body. Matthew, Mark, and John all note that Pilate accepted the request: in Matthew, Pilate orders the body to be handed over (ἐκέλευσεν ἀποδοθῆναι, ekeleusen apodothēnai); in Mark, after determining from the centurion that Jesus was dead, Pilate grants the body to Joseph (ἐδωρήσατο τὸ πτῶμα τῷ Ἰωσήφ, edōrēsato to ptōma tō Iōsēph); and in John, Pilate permits him to take it (ἐπέτρεψεν ὁ Πιλᾶτος, epetrepsen ho Pilatos). Some suggest that the body of a political rebel would not likely be released after his death for fear of public turmoil. But Nolland (1993b: 1164) suggests that Pilate acts because (1) he has provincial authority to do so; (2) Joseph's Sanhedrin membership made him a safe trustee of the body; and

(3) the circumstances of Jesus' death made it unlikely that the release of his body would be exploited to inflame the nation. The remark in Mark suggests that Joseph went to Pilate almost immediately after Jesus' death, since Pilate is not sure that Jesus is dead yet. Matthew and Mark noted earlier that it was becoming evening (probably somewhere between 3:00 P.M. and 5:00 P.M.), which meant that Sabbath was approaching, so the body had to be dealt with quickly or else left until Sunday.

23:53 After taking Jesus' body down from the cross, Joseph wrapped (ἐνετύλιξεν, enetylixen; BAGD 270; BAA 545; elsewhere in the NT only in parallel accounts: Matt. 27:59 and John 20:7) it in linen.[6] All three Synoptics describe this cloth as σινδών (sindōn; BAGD 751; BAA 1502; R. Brown 1994: 1244–45; elsewhere in the NT at Matt. 27:59 = Mark 15:46 [twice]; 14:51, 52; cf. Judg. 14:12–13; Prov. 31:24), while John uses ὀθόνιον (othonion; 19:40; 20:5, 6, 7) and σουδάριον (soudarion; 20:7).[7] John may have more clothes in view, since his term is plural. Joseph's work probably means that he cleaned Jesus' body for burial, thus making himself unclean (m. ›Ohol. 2.2).

In a detail that the Synoptics lack, John 19:39 mentions that Joseph and Nicodemus anointed Jesus with one hundred pounds of spices, an amount normally reserved for a king. Such anointing was common, though the amount of spices was not (Ellis 1974: 270; Josephus, Antiquities 17.8.3 §199; Jewish War 1.33.9 §673; Jer. 34:5). The Gospel of Peter 6.24 (Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.224) also mentions the customary washing of the body. R. Brown (1994: 1206–11) discusses the Roman and Jewish customs of burial for a crucified body. Roman policy, when it was compassionate, did not refuse burial to relatives or to anyone who asked for the body (The Digest of Justinian 48.24). Jewish attitudes depended on the nature of the crime, but the situation of Jesus was in Roman hands (for reasons why the release of the body was politically safe, see the exegesis of 23:52).

Joseph then places Jesus in a tomb (μνῆμα, mnēma; BAGD 524; BAA 1061) hewn from rock (λαξευτός, laxeutos; BAGD 466; BAA 948; BDF §2; BDR §2.2; a NT hapax legomenon; Fitzmyer 1985: 1529). This tomb was probably tunneled into the side of the rock face, with a small doorlike entrance maybe a yard tall (R. Brown 1994: 1247–48). Brown (p. 1269) suggests a locale north of Jerusalem (i.e., the Old City) like that noted by Josephus for the high priests (Jewish War 5.6.2 §259; 5.7.3 §304), which is possible, given that it was Joseph's tomb (see Barkay 1986; Bahat 1986; Nolland 1993b: 1165). Luke alone notes that it was a tomb where no one had previously been laid to rest (although Matt. 27:60 speaks of a new tomb). The traditional location of the tomb in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre dates at least from the fourth century (Cox Evans 1968). The law of Deut. 21:22–23 is fulfilled by Joseph's kind act. Jesus is not buried in dishonor.

b. Chronological Note (23:54)

23:54 Luke makes a chronological note, which the other Synoptics present before discussing Joseph: Matt. 27:57 simply says it was becoming evening, while Mark 15:42 records that it already was becoming evening and notes that it was the day before the Sabbath, that is, the Day of Preparation (παρασκευή, paraskeuē; BAGD 622; BAA 1257; Matt. 27:62; Mark 15:42; John 19:14, 31, 42; Josephus, Antiquities 16.6.2 §163; CD 10.14–17). The Day of Preparation is so called because it was the day before the start of a feast or the Sabbath when everything had to be made ready so that one could rest. In this case, both the feast day and the Sabbath come together, but Luke has related it to the Sabbath, as the following phrase makes clear. Luke clearly portrays the disciples as faithful in their preparation to rest on the Sabbath.[8] After noting the time, Luke turns to the activity of some women who watched where Jesus was laid.

c. The Women (23:55–56)

23:55 Joseph did not act in secret. Some Galilean women (cf. 23:49) followed (κατακολουθέω, katakoloutheō; BAGD 412; BAA 836; elsewhere in the NT only at Acts 16:17; cf. Jer. 17:16; Dan. 9:10; 1 Macc. 6:23) Joseph as he placed Jesus' body in the tomb (Plummer 1896: 543).[9] Creed (1930: 292) argues that Luke has a large group of women in mind, but this is not certain, since 24:10 names only three women who went to the tomb: Mary Magdalene, Joanna, and Mary mother of James.[10] While this passage also mentions "others with them," it does not seem that the additional number is large. Luke specifies that these women were from Galilee (on the periphrasis, see BDR §339.2b.9) and that they see the tomb. Luke's θεάομαι (theaomai, to watch; BAGD 353; BAA 717; BDR §353.3.4) differs from Mark 15:47's θεωρέω (theōreō, to observe; BAGD 360; BAA 731). Mark makes the point that they watched where (ποῦ, pou) Jesus was laid, while Luke speaks of their watching how (ὡς, hōs) the body was laid (BDR §396.1.4). Luke speaks generally of women, Mark mentions Mary Magdalene and Mary mother of Joses, and Matt. 27:61 speaks of Mary Magdalene and the other Mary. Matthew uses a term unique to him among the Synoptic portrayals of the passion: τάφος (taphos, sepulcher; BAGD 806; BAA 1608; Matt. 23:27, 29; 27:61, 64, 66; 28:1; Rom. 3:13; Gospel of Peter 6.24; 8.31; 9.36–37; 10.39; 11.45; 13.55 [Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.224–25]).

23:56 The women return to their home and prepare to anoint Jesus' body after the Sabbath with a variety of perfumes (μύρον, myron; BAGD 529; BAA 1072; Josephus, Antiquities 19.9.1 §358) and spices (ἄρωμα, arōma; BAGD 114; BAA 228). Myrrh is probably a perfumed oil. The Jews did not embalm, so the spices and perfumes help to calm death's stench and slow decomposition (Michaelis, TDNT 4:801 and TDNT 7:458; SB 2:53). Luke mentions this preparation slightly earlier than Mark 16:1, which indicates that the women purchased spices after the Sabbath. Mark may have compressed the timing since the use of the spices did not occur until Sunday. On the other hand, Luke may have compressed the account thus giving the impression that the preparation occurs after the Sabbath while really only setting up a transition to the resurrection (Marshall 1978: 881). There is no way to be sure. It is not impossible that the women went with already prepared spices and also obtained some on the way. More likely the women bought spices twice. Certainly their devotion to the Lord caused them to be generous in their care. Plummer (1896: 543) argues that Mark has this journey take place on Saturday evening, while Danker (1988: 385) correctly notes that the morning after the Sabbath is meant, that is, Sunday morning. These women clearly did not anticipate a resurrection.

In making the transition to resurrection, only Luke speaks of the women resting (ἡσυχάζω, hēsychazō) on the Sabbath (BAGD 349; BAA 707; elsewhere in the NT at Luke 14:4; Acts 11:18; 21:14; 1 Thess. 4:11). The women are pious and obey the Mosaic law. Fitzmyer (1985: 1530) notes that m. Šab. 23.5

allowed people to prepare materials for the dead on the Sabbath, but there is also a contrary tradition that prevents taking “sufficient oil to anoint the smallest member” (m. Šab. 8.1). Luke, however, seems to suggest that the women did nothing on the Sabbath. They planned to care for the body first thing on Sunday morning, as soon as allowable according to Mosaic law.

Summary

Luke 23:50–56 shows the care that Jesus’ body receives. Jesus dies as a criminal, but is buried in honor. Joseph is a faithful disciple who honors his Lord: he asks for Jesus’ body, donates a new tomb as a resting place, and cares for the body as the law prescribed. Others also will honor the Lord. The women prepare to anoint the body with spices on Sunday, but on the Sabbath they honor the law by resting. Those who follow Jesus are pious people who serve God faithfully. The reader is to note the respect shown to Jesus and the effort made to give him care. The Sabbath rest serves as a transition into the resurrection.

Additional Note

23:51. With regard to Joseph's dissent to the decision to execute Jesus, UBS–NA's perfect participle συγκατατεθειμένος (had [not] consented to) is better attested: $\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, A, B, W, Θ, and Byz. The present participle συγκατατιθέμενος (was [not] consenting to) is found in ℵ, C, D, L, Δ, Ψ, family 1, and family 13.

E. Resurrection and Ascension of Jesus (24:1–53)

Luke's final chapter shows God vindicating the Innocent One via resurrection. In three scenes, Jesus shows himself to be alive. First, he appears to the women (24:1–12). His discussion with two disciples on the Emmaus road contains wonder and discovery, reversing previous disappointment (24:13–35). In the final scene he appears to a group of disciples, bids them farewell, and gives final instructions (24:36–53), ending with the opening of Scripture, commission, promise, and ascension. What was promised has happened, so now the disciples are commissioned to take the message of God's work in Jesus' death and resurrection to every nation, calling them to repent. In the Spirit's coming, God promises to give the disciples power for the task. Jesus ascends triumphantly to sit at God's side to rule and to distribute the Father's gifts (Acts 2:22–36).[1]

It makes little difference whether Luke's resurrection narrative was originally part of the tradition linked to Jesus' death or was a separate tradition. Either way this material contains the climactic events of Jesus' first coming. It is clear, however, that the diversity found in the resurrection tradition is greater than that in the passion material. The resurrection accounts have a distinct and more complex history.

The main biblical accounts of Jesus' resurrection are Matt. 28:1–20; Mark 16:1–8 (perhaps 16:1–20); John 20:1–29; 21:1–23; and 1 Cor. 15:3–11.[2] The resurrection tradition is primitive and was always a part of the church's view of Jesus: Paul (Rom. 4:24–25; 10:9; Phil. 2:9–11; 1 Thess. 1:10), John (John 3:14; 8:28; 12:32, 34), the Letter to the Hebrews (Heb. 9:12–24), and Peter (1 Pet. 1:3; 3:18).[3] The church clearly saw Jesus as bodily resurrected in glorified form (Fitzmyer 1985: 1538–39), but the NT writers do more than affirm the reality of the resurrection (though they never give details about how the resurrection occurred, only that God did it).[4] They declare the meaning, consequence, and effects of the resurrection: Jesus is gloriously raised to rule. Exaltation is the major theme of Jesus' new life, especially in Luke's writings (Acts 2:30–36). Jesus' exaltation signals reversal, installation into authority, and victory (Luke 22:69).

Luke 24 makes clear the identity and call of the community, which gathers in the temple to await the coming of the Father's promise, the Spirit. Just as Luke's Gospel opens at the temple (1:5), so it ends there. Another significant note in this chapter is the fulfillment of OT promise (24:19–21, 25–27, 44–47). God's plan is coming to pass, and the disciples and the new community have a major role in that plan. Luke is clear that the disciples were not waiting for the resurrection: it comes to disciples who were disillusioned, and it produces a major reversal of emotion, transforming despair into hope and action. Luke's account is unique in focusing on Jerusalem (he records no Galilean appearances by Jesus), a detail that fits his emphasis on Jerusalem as the mission's beginning point (Acts 1:8).

The most basic element shared by the various resurrection accounts is the empty tomb. While there are significant variations in the accounts (e.g., the wording of the angelic resurrection announcement [Matt. 28:5–6 = Mark 16:6 = Luke 24:5–6] or John's description of the role of Mary Magdalene [John 20:1]), their differences are complementary, not contradictory.[5] There are at least eight points of general agreement (Plummer 1896: 546):

1. The resurrection is not described.

2. The resurrection occurs to disciples who do not expect it.
3. Reports of the resurrection are doubted.
4. The women's visit is the first step in disclosure.
5. The rolled-away stone is the first physical clue.
6. Angels appear.
7. Jesus appears to a variety of people, both individually and corporately, both male and female.
8. The result is an unshakable conviction in Jesus' resurrection.

We are dealing here with sacred events that are part of the essential content of Christian faith, as 1 Cor. 15 makes clear. Paul declares that if Jesus is not raised then he cannot save and one cannot invoke him for present aid and future hope. To be something other than a human ethical or philosophical system, the Christian faith must be inextricably tied to resurrection. Without resurrection, Christianity is just another human approach to reach God; it is emptied of transforming power and hope; it is a mere shell, not worth the energy one devotes to it. To hope in a resurrection that did not occur makes Christians the most pitied of people (1 Cor. 15:19). It is to believe an illusion. Without a resurrected Jesus, Christianity has nothing special to offer the world, for a dead Savior is no Savior at all. The world is full of exemplary people, but a resurrected Savior who cares and who fulfills God's promises is the unique hope that the Christian faith offers to the world. This does not mean that the fact of the resurrection is the ground of the Christian faith; rather, it is the one who emerged from this reality—the resurrected Christ—who is Christianity's foundation. Only through a raised Christ, the Exalted One, is it possible to have a relationship to God. The resurrection is important, even essential, because it is the door to new life in Christ, the key to which is faith, but at the heart of Christianity is a relationship with God through Christ. Christ's resurrection by the power of God makes that relationship possible and offers testimony to the reality of life before God beyond the grave. Jesus' resurrection is not the end of his story; rather, it represents his transition to an expanded role in God's plan, which becomes the focal starting point for our potential new life in him. To believe in Christ is to believe not merely in his example, but in the power of his resurrection to grant new life.

1. Resurrection Discovered (24:1–12)

Five subunits compose the pericope dealing with the first report of the resurrection: setting (24:1), empty tomb (24:2–3), report of the two angels (24:4–8), report of the women (24:9–11), and Peter's response (24:12). The stress is on the declaration of Jesus' resurrection by the angels (24:5–6). Jesus' promise of resurrection (9:22) has come to pass. The divine necessity of events continues: God and Jesus are in control. The main feature of the passage is how the disciples ever so slowly come to see that God's plan is not derailed. The description of them may not be flattering, but it is honest and real. The church would not have created an account about the resurrection that portrayed its leading figures this way. The account rings true.

Sources and Historicity

Most regard Luke simply to have edited Mark 16:1–8 (Schneider 1977a: 490–92 [with oral tradition]; Fitzmyer 1985: 1541 [except Luke 24:12]; Bultmann 1963: 284–87; Dillon 1978 [see 1 n. 1 for other scholars who hold this view]), although Goulder (1989: 774) sees Luke using both Mark and Matthew. The problem centers on differences between Luke and Mark (Fitzmyer 1985: 1541; Creed 1930: 289–90 [who sees a source beyond Mark, like that used by Paul in 1 Cor. 15:3–5]; Nolland 1993b: 1177, 1184–85 [who notes that Luke 24:1–12 is close to Mark 16:1–8 but then goes “his own way”; a likely second source has points of contact in Matthew and John]):

1. Luke does not record the women’s discussion about moving the stone (Mark 16:3).
2. Luke 24:3 explicitly mentions that the women did not find Jesus’ body. In contrast, Mark 16:5 has the women enter and immediately encounter the messenger, as does Matt. 28:2–5, although in Matthew it is not clear that the women entered the tomb.
3. Mark 16:8 says that the women said nothing to anyone upon fleeing, while Luke 24:9 mentions their report to the apostles.[1]
4. In Luke 24:4, two men are seen as angels, while Mark 16:5 has one.[2] (John 20:12 has two angels in what may be a later scene; Matt. 28:2 agrees with Mark.)
5. Luke’s angelic announcement (24:5–7) is uniquely worded.
6. Luke 24:10 names the women at the end of the section, while Mark 16:1 = Matt. 28:1 does so at the beginning.
7. In Luke 24:12, Peter checks out the report (a detail shared by John 20:3–10).

8. Luke lacks a direct appearance by Jesus to the women, in distinction to Matt. 28:9–10 = Mark 16:9 = John 20:14–17.

These differences lead some to speak of other sources for Luke, though whether it was a single source or a variety of oral sources is debated (Grundmann 1963: 439; Ernst 1977: 650; Marshall 1970: 65–75; Marshall 1978: 882–83; V. Taylor 1972: 103–9; Wiefel 1988: 405). Key to the discussion are three points of contact with Matthew and two with John. The Matthean contacts are an echo between Matt. 28:1 and Luke 23:54, the call to remember what Jesus said (Matt. 28:6; Luke 24:6), and the women's reporting to the disciples (Matt. 28:7; Luke 24:9). The Johannine points of contact are the sharing of the name Mary Magdalene at a similar point in the narrative and the absence of any concern about moving the stone (with Matthew as well). Only 17 of Luke's 169 terms are in agreement with Mark. The nature of the differences makes it likely that Luke used additional material, which he no doubt rewrote in his own style (Fitzmyer 1985: 1541–42 notes twelve points of Lucan style). Luke's account complements the other Gospels, giving fresh information about these events.

The resolution of the order of the events is difficult and, to the degree that it relates to Luke, will be treated in the exegesis. Certainty about exact order is beyond our grasp since no Gospel account attempts to be exhaustive. Evaluations of historicity turn on how one views the possibility of resurrection on a philosophical level and the dispute over the variety in the various accounts.[3]

Philosophically, the resurrection is at the heart of primitive Christian hope (1 Cor. 15:3–5). To embrace the apostolic faith in Jesus means to embrace his resurrection and its historicity as they emerge from these accounts. The disciples do not view resurrection as a dramatic symbol of hope or an expression of a wish; they see it as core history that changed their view of what happened at the cross, as well as what happened afterward. “He is risen” is not the plea of an uncertain heart searching for meaning; it is an affirmation and confession of hope because of Jesus’ resurrection.

The account is a resurrection report and a story about Jesus (Fitzmyer 1985: 1542). The outline of Luke 24:1–12 is as follows:

a. Setting (24:1)
b. The empty tomb (24:2–3)
c. Report of the two angels (24:4–8)
    i. Report of the angels (24:4–7)
    ii. Response of the women (24:8)
d. Report of the women (24:9–11)
e. Peter’s response (24:12)

The resurrection is not expected by the disciples, but the empty tomb changes everything. The twofold angelic witness points to the resurrection as a fulfillment of Jesus’ teaching and the promise of Scripture. Women are the first witnesses, but their report is not believed. Confirmation begins with Peter’s discovery. The account’s mood involves surprise, disbelief, and amazement.

Exegesis and Exposition

1During the deep dawn of the first day of the week, they came to the ❒tomb❒, taking the spices they had prepared.❒ ❒

2They found the stone rolled away from the tomb. 3But when they went in, they did not find ❒the body of the Lord Jesus❒.

4And it came to pass as they were perplexed about this, behold, two men stood by them in shining apparel, 5and as they were frightened and bowed their faces to the ground, the men said to them, “Why do you seek the living among the dead? 6❒He is not here, but is raised.❒ Remember how he spoke to you while he was still in Galilee, saying that 7‘the Son of Man must be delivered over into the hands of sinful men and be crucified and on the third day be raised’?” 8And they remembered his words.

9Returning from the tomb, they told all of these things to the Eleven and to all the rest. 10Now ❒they were❒ Mary Magdalene, Joanna, Mary of James, and the other women with them. They were telling these things to the apostles. 11But these words appeared to them as an idle tale, and they did not believe them.

12❒But rising up, Peter ran to the tomb; and stretching and looking in, he saw the linen clothes by themselves, and he went home, amazed at what had happened.❒

a. Setting (24:1)

24:1 The new week starts normally enough. Having fulfilled the law of the Sabbath (Exod. 20:8–11; Deut. 5:12–15), the women go to the tomb to anoint the body.[4] All the accounts refer to the first (μιᾷ, mia; BDF §247.1; BDR §247.1.1) day of the week (Matt. 28:1 = Mark 16:2 = John 20:1; cf. John 20:19; Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:2), but Luke further specifies the time with the genitive phrase ὄρθρου βαθέως (orthrou batheōs, deep dawn; BDF §186.2; BDR §186.2.3).[5] Apparently, it is early in the morning, perhaps the initial portion of dawn, since John 20:1 speaks of it still being dark (Matt. 28:1 says "after the Sabbath in the dawn"; Mark 16:2 says "early in the morning after the sun has risen"). The women went to the tomb probably as soon as they could see. Given this slight difference in setting, Luke is not relying on Mark. Nolland (1993b: 1188) notes that God's actions are sometimes attributed to this time, are made evident then, or are a source of joy starting at that time of day (Exod. 14:24; 2 Kings 19:35; Ps. 30:5 [30:6 MT]; 90:14; 143:8; Isa. 37:36).

Matthew 28:1 names Mary Magdalene and the "other" Mary; Mark 16:1 mentions Mary Magdalene, Mary mother of James, and Salome; while John 20:1–2 mentions only Mary Magdalene. Luke saves his list for 24:10, where Mary Magdalene, Joanna, and Mary the mother of James are mentioned by name, though others are said to be with them. Matthew notes that the women went to see the sepulcher, Mark mentions that their purpose is to anoint the body, while John gives no explicit reason. Luke notes that they brought the spices they had prepared, an allusion to 23:56 (on the use of the relative pronoun, see BDR §294.5.8).

John says that when Mary discovered that the tomb was empty she ran to tell Peter and the "beloved disciple" (probably John himself) what happened. Upon her report that the body has been taken out of the tomb, both disciples run to the tomb. The "beloved disciple" believes upon seeing the empty tomb (John 20:8), while Mary stands outside the tomb weeping (20:11) because she believes that the body has been stolen (20:13). Jesus appears to her (20:16), and she tells the disciples of the appearance

(20:18). Squaring this Johannine account with the other Gospels is difficult, since the Synoptics appear to have an immediate angelic announcement on Mary's first trip to the tomb. There are four attempts to solve this apparent discrepancy:

1. Mary made two trips to the tomb (J. Wenham 1992a: 83, 90–95; Osborne 1984: 149 n. 2; Westcott 1908: 2.337). First, she saw the tomb empty and ran away immediately without checking inside. She left the other women, not mentioned in John, to go in and discover what actually happened. When Mary returned behind the running disciples, she still did not know what had happened. She then saw Jesus (Matt. 28:9–10; John 20:11–18). An apparent problem with this view is that the Synoptics indicate that the disciples went to the tomb as a result of the women's report about Jesus' resurrection (Luke 24:10–12), a detail that could fit only John 20:2 if Mary reported that the tomb was empty and the others came later to fill in the details.
   Telescoping is possible: Mary arrived first and the other women brought their report, having trailed slightly behind her. But there is also the question of where Matt. 28:9–10 fits, since these verses look as if they belong to the first return home. Matthew (and the shorter version of Mark) lacks a visit by Peter, making Matthew's event look like the first trip home. Wenham's suggestion can be right only if Matthew truncated the first report so that Matt. 28:9–10 equals John 20:11–18. The major obstacle is how Mary was in doubt in the second scene in John if an appearance occurred on the first return home. Matthew's truncation would mean either that Mary was not party to the Matthean vision (despite its similarity to John) or that Matthew (again telescoping) described this later vision here since he does not mention Peter's visit.

2. John truncated the disciples' response, giving the impression that two disciples went more immediately to the tomb than they did. If there is compression in the account, then in fact their journey came after a little time had passed. During the interim, the second group of women returned and gave the report of Jesus' appearance to them. The major problem with this suggestion, which is a variation of the first approach, is that Mary Magdalene appears to lack knowledge about a claim of resurrection, and yet she is listed first among the reporters of Luke 24:10–11. In addition, why are Mary's remarks presented as the catalyst in John? This could also represent a collapse of detail, since Mary would have been the first to raise the issue of the empty tomb and then the others followed with the explanation. But does not Mary's doubt in John 20:11–13, which appears to be a later scene, contradict the other women's report? If the women's report was met with doubt, maybe Mary became uncertain about what had happened, especially if she had not been at the tomb long. If her confirmation thus comes in John 20:14–18, then John 20:14–18 does not equal Matt. 28:9–10 but is a separate, similar appearance. This combination of events is possible, though it assumes a great deal of compression in all the accounts.

3. John 20:1–10 and 20:11–18 describe the same event; that is, they are sequential traditions. John 20:1–10 is not interested in how Mary saw the Lord, but simply notes that she saw the empty tomb. In addition, this tradition reflects that Mary was a little uncertain how to break the news to the disciples in a believable way. She opted for an ambiguous “half-report” and said that someone had taken the body, a view that probably honestly reflected her initial impression about what had happened. This first report led the disciples and later Mary after them to see what had really happened. John 20:11–18 then brings in the confirming appearance with it. The major question for this view is the apparent contrast between John 20:10 and 20:11. John 20:11–18 looks like an appearance to the two disciples later than the events in 20:1–10. For this view to work, the disciples’ largely negative reaction must have plunged Mary back into doubt.

4. John starts Mary’s account in John 20:2 with where her own experience started, wondering where the body was. The introductions to each account in John 20:2 and 20:13 are largely simultaneous in real time, but John tells the first account to reflect the discovery of the “beloved disciple.” The narrative perspective of the discovery in John 20:1–10 thus reflects his point of view, while the narrative perspective of John 20:11–18 is that of Mary, even though this event was first chronologically. John 20:2 has Mary say that “we” do not know where they have laid the body, which seems to assume that Mary is not alone. John 20:13 has the same question raised in the singular, and her reply stays in the singular as well. The beginning of Mary’s report about the empty tomb and missing body (20:2) set Peter and the beloved disciple off to the tomb before she could get any further. The other disciples who remained behind heard the whole account (i.e., 20:11–18). In this way, the account replays John’s actual perspective of the event when it happened. Since he did not hear Mary’s story all the way through, he must have heard it later. And he tells the story from the perspective of how he experienced the resurrection. This would mean that Matt. 28:9–10 does equal John 20:14–18. Mary made only one trip to the tomb. John tells of his discovery in full and then goes back to tell Mary’s story, which though earlier in time, was related to him later. The linkage is made literarily in the overlap of Mary’s note about the missing body in John 20:2 and 20:13. In the real sequence, John 20:13–18 belongs with and following John 20:2, detailing what happened to Mary and the other women on their first visit. This option preserves the primary role that Mary seems to have played as the first to see Jesus raised and the first to announce his resurrection, and it also explains the focus on John in John 20:1–10.

The exact sequence of resurrection events remains obscure because of the variety of witnesses to the event and the variety of perspectives from which the details are presented. It is possible to harmonize the traditions, but it is evident that literary variation is required to see a fit. I prefer the last option. Regardless of which view is taken, it is clear that the discovery of the resurrection started with the trip of these women, the empty tomb, and Jesus' appearance to at least some if not all of them. The accounts complement one another and were left distinct for a reason—to present the resurrection from many distinct angles.[6]

b. The Empty Tomb (24:2–3)

24:2 The first Lucan hint of the resurrection is the rolled-away stone (Marshall 1978: 884). It is an invitation to go in the tomb and anoint the body. There is a nice literary contrast in 24:2–3 between what they found on arrival (the stone rolled away) and what they surprisingly did not find upon entering (Jesus' body). Both verses use εὗρον (heuron) for "find" (in contrast to ἀναβλέψασαι θεωροῦσιν [anablepsasai theōrousin, looking up they saw] in Mark 16:3 and βλέπει [blepei, she saw] in John 20:1).

In first-century Israel a round stone disc was often placed in a channel carved in the rock so it could be rolled easily to cover the usually rectangular tomb entrance (Fitzmyer 1985: 1544; Abel 1925). But the stone might merely have plugged the entrance, with no channel (Nolland 1993b: 1189). There is no way to know which is the case here. Since this is Luke's first mention of the stone, its presence in the account without explanation assumes knowledge of Jewish practice. Marshall (1978: 884) thinks the detail may suggest a pre-Lucan tradition.

Mark is alone in recording the discussion about who will roll away the stone and in noting that the stone was very large. Matthew lacks mention of the effort to anoint the body, noting only that they went to see the grave. Dillon (1978: 16) attributes the difference to the presence of the guards (Matt. 28:11–15). The guards' job is to prevent anyone from gaining access to the body (seen in their sealing of the tomb), so Dillon argues that Matthew drops the anointing. But the ideas of anointing and guards are not mutually exclusive. According to ancient custom, the women should have been able to anoint the body as long as they did not remove it.[7]

Matthew 28:2 speaks most specifically of an earthquake caused by an angel who moves the stone and sits on it as the women approach. Mark and Luke speak of the stone being rolled away (ἀποκυλίω, apokyliō; only four times in the NT, all in this account; BAGD 94; BAA 188; cf. Gen. 29:3, 8, 10; Jdt. 13:9; BDF §101; BDR §101.44) upon the women's arrival. John 20:1 speaks of the stone's having being taken away (ἠρμένον, ērmenon). God's providence and control are in view in these events. This is clearly a surprising event that the women were not expecting. Coming face to face with Jesus' resurrection (Luke 24:2–3, 19–24, 36–43) brings repeated explanations (24:5–7, 25–27, 44–49; Dillon 1978: 20). The repetitive refrain is that Jesus is raised.

24:3 The women find the tomb open, but they do not find the body of the Lord Jesus (Mark 16:6 = Luke 24:6). If κυρίου (kyriou, of the Lord) is original (see the additional note), the title shows Luke's respect for Jesus. By using εὗρον (heuron, they found) again, Luke contrasts their not finding Jesus' body with the previous finding of the open tomb. Mark 16:5 speaks of the women entering the tomb and seeing a young man seated on the right side dressed in a robe, thus amazing them. Matthew 28:2–4 speaks of an angel rolling away the stone and sitting upon it. He is described as looking like lightning and having a garment white as snow. The guards trembled because of him and became like dead men. John 20 has no details of any of the women going into the tomb. Instead, Mary runs and reports that the Lord's body has been taken. Each Gospel goes its own way in summarizing the details (see the exegesis of 24:1 for how John and the Synoptics fit together).

c. Report of the Two Angels (24:4–8)

i. Report of the Angels (24:4–7)

24:4 The empty tomb leaves the women at a loss about what has happened. They are perplexed (ἀπορέω, aporeō; BAGD 97; BAA 195; elsewhere in the NT at Mark 6:20; John 13:22; Acts 25:20; 2 Cor. 4:8; Gal. 4:20). They had not expected an empty tomb and wonder about it (περὶ τούτου, peri toutou). In Mark 16:3 the women had been concerned about moving the stone; now there is much more to ponder.

During their reflection, two men appear (ἐπέστησαν, epestēsan; BAGD 330 §1a; BAA 668 §1a; cf. Luke 2:9, 38; Acts 1:10; 4:1; 10:30; 17:5; 23:11) to the women. Both Mark 16:5 and Matt. 28:2–4 mention only one man or angel. In Mark, the man is sitting inside the tomb on the right side and dressed in "white robes" (στολὴν λευκήν, stolēn leukēn), which agrees with Luke conceptually but not lexically. In Matthew, the angel is sitting on the stone, dressed in a shining robe white like snow (ὡς ἀστραπὴ καὶ τὸ ἔνδυμα αὐτοῦ λευκὸν ὡς χιών, hōs astrapē kai to endyma autou leukon hōs chiōn). That the tradition had variety seems clear from John 20:12, which also notes two angels.[8] Only later does Luke call these men angels (24:23). Here he simply describes their clothes as ἐσθῆτι ἀστραπτούσῃ (esthēti astraptousē, bright clothing), terms that usually describe heavenly phenomena (Luke 9:29; 10:18; Acts 9:3; 22:6; Bode 1970: 59).[9] The language recalls the transfiguration and parallels the two angels present at the ascension (Acts 1:10 also uses ἐσθής [esthēs] to describe the messengers' clothing).

The two men appear to reflect a two-witnesses motif (Deut. 19:15; Ellis 1974: 272; Osborne 1984: 106 [who lists other options]; Bode 1970: 60, 165–67). Bultmann (1963: 314–17, esp. 316) attributes the addition to a common "folk" motif, but the presence of two angels also in John suggests that this point is not merely a Lucan addition for literary reasons. There is no reason to challenge historicity, despite the numerical differences between Luke and the other Synoptics, which seem to summarize details in an independent but complementary manner.

24:5 The appearance of the angels produces terror (ἔμφοβος, emphobos) in the women (Matt. 28:4 speaks of the guards fearing, while Mark 16:5 says the women were amazed).[10] The women are in awe of the angels and bow their faces to the ground (κλινουσῶν, klinousōn; BAGD 436 §1a; BAA 887–88). They do not bow simply to avoid the bright light, since turning away would accomplish that goal (but so Marshall 1978: 885, citing Acts 9:4). Rather, bowing is a sign of recognition of the presence of heavenly beings and divine messengers (Tiede 1988:

430; Danker 1988: 388; Dillon 1978: 26–27; Dan. 7:28; 10:9, 15). The women know that something is happening, but they have no idea what it is, as the following rebuke shows.

In wording similar to Isa. 8:19, the angels rebuke the women not to seek the living among (μετά, meta; BDR §227.2.3) the dead.[11] The women do not recognize that Jesus is raised; they have not heeded his teaching about his suffering and exaltation (Luke 9:22, 44; 13:33; 17:25; 22:37). The Lucan angelic message is unique: John lacks any angelic remarks at this point in his narrative; in Matt. 28:5–6 the angel tells the women not to fear, for the crucified Jesus whom they seek is not here, but is raised; and in Mark 16:6 the angel tells the women not to be amazed, for Jesus of Nazareth who was crucified is raised and is not here. All the Synoptics share two terms: ἠγέρθη (ēgerthē, he is raised) and ζητεῖτε (zēteite, you are seeking). Luke has drawn on additional material or summarized the conversation in more detail.

24:6 In wording much like Matt. 28:6 (even matching the word order versus Mark 16:6b), the angels explain that the absence of Jesus' body is the result of resurrection. The angelic reference to resurrection uses a theological passive: ἠγέρθη (ēgerthē, he is raised [by God]). This divine activity is a consistent Lucan emphasis (Fitzmyer 1985: 1545; Luke 20:37; 24:34; Acts 3:15; 4:10; 5:30; 10:40; 13:30, 37; also of Jesus' exaltation: Luke 24:51; Acts 1:11, 22; Ignatius, Smyrneans 2.1; 7.1; Kremer 1979).

The angels tell the women to recall Jesus' teaching in Galilee (ὡς, hōs, with an indirect question; BDR §396.1.4). They are to remember (μιμνήσκομαι, mimnēskomai; BAGD 522; BAA 1057) what Jesus predicted, an allusion to 9:22 and 18:32–33. What has happened should not have been a surprise. Despite Jesus' teaching, the resurrection was too unbelievable to register with the disciples until after it occurred, a reaction that is natural enough, given the rarity of such an event.

That these remarks are found only in Luke again raises the issue of sources. V. Taylor (1972: 107–8) argues that the entirety of 24:6–8 is from another source. Since, however, 24:6a is extant in the triple tradition, this is unlikely. More correctly, 24:6b–8 (esp. 24:6b) is sourced in Luke's tradition (Osborne 1984: 107). In favor of another tradition is the instruction in Matt. 28:7 = Mark 16:7 to go to Galilee, where Jesus will go before the disciples (the scene in John 21:1–23 pictures such a Galilean appearance). That Luke's geography of appearances differs from Matthew and Mark shows that he has clearly gone his own way. The differences suggest additional input.

How Luke integrates with the other Gospels is not clear. Since resources would be needed for a group of 120, perhaps the disciples made trips to Galilee to fish for the group gathered in Jerusalem. The NT gives no explanation of how the Galilean and Jerusalem appearances relate to each other, but Acts 1:3 speaks of many appearances over forty days, and John 20:30 and 21:24 make clear that much more happened than is written in his Gospel. Although Jesus tells the disciples to stay in the city until the Father's promise, the Holy Spirit, comes (Luke 24:49), this remark may not have been an absolute ban on travel or departure as much as an instruction not to begin ministering and declaring Jesus' resurrection until the Spirit comes to them in the capital. That ministry will start in Jerusalem.

Some argue that Luke alone is responsible for the change, for he portrays Galilee as the place of acceptance for Jesus and Jerusalem as the place of rejection (Conzelmann 1960: 73–74). This symbolic geography does not work, however, since Jesus was not always accepted in Galilee (e.g., 4:16–30). Jesus simply gathers disciples in Galilee who will be his witnesses (Acts 1:22; 10:37–41; 13:31; Marshall 1978: 886; Osborne 1984: 107–10).

Dillon (1978: 35–38) proposes that Luke omits the Galilean appearances because Galilee is a place of miraculous display and plays a symbolic christological role in Luke. But this contrast is overdrawn. Jesus does miracles all the way up to the point of his arrest, not just in Galilee (Luke 22:50–51). He even does miracles in Gentile regions (8:26–39). The early concentration of miracles in Galilee merely indicates that it was then the principle location of Jesus' activity. Luke later zeroes in on Jerusalem because of the geographic focus of the Book of Acts on Jerusalem as central in the spread of the word of God (Ellis 1974: 272). Luke's unique focus seems fueled by additional tradition.

24:7 In one of the most important passages in the chapter, Luke summarizes Jesus' prediction that is now fulfilled. The angels allude to sayings reported in 9:22, 44 (other key Lucan passion sayings are Luke 17:22; 18:31–33; 22:22; 24:44, 46; Acts 2:36; 3:13–15; 4:27; 7:52; 10:39; Osborne 1984: 110). Luke 9:44 is particularly similar to this angelic report, although the angels uniquely refer to “sinful” (ἁμαρτωλός, hamartōlos) men (but see Mark 14:41) and use the verb σταυρόω (stauroō, to crucify) along with παραδίδωμι (paradidōmi, to give over). The phrase τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου (ton huion tou anthrōpou, the Son of Man), normally found on Jesus’ lips, occurs here in the angels’ report of what Jesus said. The title’s early position in anticipating the ὅτι (hoti, that) clause is emphatic (grammatically the phrase is a proleptic or anticipatory accusative that belongs to the ὅτι clause; BDF §476.3; BDR §476.2.4). The use of “Son of Man” describes Jesus’ authority, as 22:69 made clear, and since χριστός (christos, Christ) is the key title in the fulfillment sayings of 24:26, 46, it is evident that the titles share a certain amount of overlap.[12]

The angels speak of the necessity of these events, using the particularly Lucan δεῖ (dei, it is necessary; Bode 1970: 66). Luke uses δεῖ eighteen times in his Gospel: twelve times lacking Synoptic parallel (2:49; 11:42 [probably]; 13:14, 16, 33; 15:32; 17:25; 18:1; 19:5; 22:37; 24:26, 44; cf. Acts 17:3), four times having Synoptic parallels that do not use δεῖ (4:43; 12:12; 22:7; 24:7), and twice in the triple tradition (9:22; 21:9). Matthew uses δεῖ eight times, of which six lack parallel in Luke, and Mark uses it six times, of which four have no Lucan parallel. Luke stresses God's plan and the movement of divine history more than the other Synoptics, an emphasis that goes hand in hand with Luke's strong fulfillment motif (in this chapter alone at 24:25–26, 32, 44–47; cf. Luke 2:38–39; 4:14; 7:18–19; 9:22, 31, 43–44; 18:31–33; Acts 1:22; 3:18). What is happening is no surprise; it is a part of a divinely wrought event sequence.

The message is summarized in three infinitives that express what God's plan involved: παραδοθῆναι (paradothēnai, to be given over), σταυρωθῆναι (staurōthēnai, to be crucified), and ἀναστῆναι (anastēnai, to be raised). They portray what God is allowing to occur, though humans are directly responsible for the first two actions. Each idea is important to the event's movement. The act of executing Jesus is judged by heaven.

First, in speaking of Jesus' being given over, Luke has in mind the details of what he described in Luke 22–23: the Jewish leadership and Pilate's failure to stop the process (Acts 4:25–28). The reference to sinful (ἁμαρτωλῶν, hamartōlōn) people is unique to the passion sayings and in Luke's Gospel.[13] Sinful people were permitted to hand Jesus over and arrest him.

Second, Jesus is crucified (Matt. 20:19; Mark 16:6; Luke 24:20; Acts 2:36; 4:10). Luke's reference to crucifixion is unique to the passion sayings. Other sayings refer to the mistreatment that preceded Jesus' crucifixion (Luke 18:32–33), his being killed (9:22), or his being given over (9:44). The specific reference to crucifixion fills out the detail of what took place.

Third, Jesus was resurrected on the third day (τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, tē tritē hēmera; BDR §200.1). The focus on the third day is unique to Luke among Synoptic resurrection portrayals (cf. 9:22; 18:33; 24:46), evidence that many regard as proof that Luke is responsible for this saying. To argue thus, however, ignores Paul's explicit association of the third-day teaching with early church kerygma (1 Cor. 15:3–4). This is a traditional theme not unique to Luke. This last member of the three-part saying that the women need to recall explains why the tomb is empty. God has taken Jesus up to his side in heaven to rule (Luke 22:69).

The third-day emphasis fits not only history but Jewish expectation. In many passages, the third day was regarded as the day of salvation (SB 1:747; Gen. 22:4; 42:17; Esth. 5:1; Hos. 6:2; Jon. 1:17 [2:1 MT] and the targumim and midrashim on these texts). The age and breadth of the Targum tradition may suggest an earlier expectation. This makes for a better explanation of the third-day idea from Scripture than an appeal to Hos. 6:2 alone, as is often done (e.g., Dillon 1978: 48 n. 138). It is clear that the church counted the three days on an inclusive basis: Friday was day one, Saturday day two, and Sunday day three. The only apparent exception to this reckoning is the appeal to Jonah typology in Matt. 12:40, where Jonah's three days and nights are made parallel to Jesus. But it is probably a mistake to read this as giving precision beyond what is rhetorically intended, especially given Luke 9:22; Matt. 16:21; 17:23; 20:19; and 27:64. The key to the Jonah typology is resurrection associated with the third day. Jesus' resurrection not only fits his prediction, but a common pattern of expectation. The women are to realize that the resurrection is an expected part of God's plan. The reminder about promise is to teach them so they can proclaim it to others (Nolland 1993b: 1190–91).

This passage's uniqueness to Luke and its multiple Lucan traits lead many to regard it as a particularly Lucan summary of events. Some argue that he is responsible for the details (Dillon 1978: 38; Marshall 1978: 886; Fitzmyer 1985: 1545–46 [Son of Man, must, sinfulness, rise again, third day]). Black (1969; 1967: 53) argues that the syntax has traces of Semitism in it, so that the tradition is not Lucan (Fitzmyer 1985: 1545 and Marshall 1978: 886 reject this approach). The peculiar mention of crucifixion, the unique use of word ἁμαρτωλός, and the idea of resurrection on the third day make clear that though Luke conveys the material in his own style, it appears to be traditionally based and is not his own creation.

ii. Response of the Women (24:8)

24:8 Luke relates the first of two report-response sequences in this section. Here the angelic report brings the women's response of remembrance (later the women's report in 24:9–11 will lead to Peter's response in 24:12 to see the tomb for himself). The women recall Jesus' teaching and respond. The language recalls the command of 24:6. Dillon (1978:

51) argues that no Easter faith is found in this response since it is not said that their eyes or minds are opened (cf. 24:31, 45). It is only the Lord's teaching that is remembered as they take the first small step to faith. Dillon further argues that resurrection is hidden from them because, when the Lord originally gave the saying during his ministry, the apostolic group did not understand what resurrection meant. But Dillon argues that the text shows the fundamental retrospective awareness that came to the church as a result of Jesus' resurrection.

Though the latter point is surely correct, given that the women had come to anoint a corpse and did not expect a resurrection, three factors are against this general approach. First, the teaching is now given before an empty tomb. The context of Jesus' earlier remarks is now clear. Second, the teaching that they recall is specifically about resurrection, the key point in this context (24:5). If they take the reminder to heart and recognize the key point, there is hope, since what the angels declare is that Jesus' promise has been fulfilled. In fact, the reference to ταῦτα πάντα (tauta panta) in the next verse shows that they reported on "all these things." It is clear that the angelic message is discussed. In addition, this approach ignores the force of 24:11, where the apostolic group for the most part regards the women's story as "an idle tale." This judgment is not limited to the mere existence of the angelic vision or that Jesus' teaching is to be remembered, but must include what the teaching contained (24:22–23). Clearly, they report not only the angelic visit, but, more important, the fulfillment of Jesus' teaching about resurrection. They do not tell it as a mere passing on of information, but undoubtedly with some urgency since it is regarded as too strange to be true. After all, Peter does run to the tomb in 24:12. The apostolic lack of belief in the report in 24:11 shows that the women were way ahead of the disciples.[14]

d. Report of the Women (24:9–11)

24:9 The woman return from the tomb and report all these things (ταῦτα πάντα, tauta panta; 24:14, 21) to the apostles, who now number eleven without Judas, and the rest of the disciples.[15] For the first time, the larger group hears of the empty tomb, the angelic presence, and the declaration that Jesus is raised just as he predicted he would be.

Luke shares ἀπαγγέλλω with Matthew (though Matthew has the infinitival form). Mark has no parallel to this passage, though Mark 16:8 speaks of the women fleeing “from the tomb” (ἀπὸ τοῦ μνημείου, apo tou mnēmeiou), a phrase similar to Luke’s report of their return from the tomb. The shorter form of Mark’s Gospel ends abruptly with the women telling no one, but simply standing in fear. This does not mean that the women never spoke to anyone; rather their fear should be read in light of this common motif in the middle portion of Mark’s Gospel (4:41; 5:15, 33, 36; 6:50): when people meet God they should fear and respond in faith.

Opinion differs whether this Lucan report comes from traditional material. Dillon (1978: 52–53) argues that this is a Lucan redaction of the tradition rather than the use of additional tradition. But if so (and assuming that Mark 16:9 is a later addition), where did Luke get the names of the women?[16] This detail suggests that he had access to material that reported the event to the church. Dillon is right, however, that the verse shows indications of Lucan style in the use of ὑποστρέφω (hypostrephō, to return), which is used twenty-one times in Luke, eleven times in Acts, not at all in the other Gospels, and only three times elsewhere in the NT—partially because of Luke's preference for prefixed forms of verbs. In addition, Luke often reports returns (1:23, 56; 2:20, 39; 4:14; 5:25; 7:10; 23:48, 56; 24:33, 52). But touches of Lucan style do not necessarily mean Lucan critique of Marcan tradition. He can simply be including material that gives more detail. Another detail for a traditional origin is the reference to the remaining apostolic band in 1 Cor. 15:5, 7—material that clearly reflects church tradition since Paul speaks of all the church preaching the resurrection (cf. Matt. 28:16; Mark 16:14; Luke 24:33; Acts 1:26; 2:14; Marshall 1978: 887).

24:10 Luke identifies the women who gave the report. Except for Mary the mother of James, the women are already familiar to Luke: Mary Magdalene was mentioned in 8:2 and Joanna in 8:3. Mary Magdalene is listed in all the resurrection accounts (Matt. 28:1 = Mark 16:1 = John 20:1, 18). The reference to Μαρία ἡ Ἰακώβου (Maria hē Iakōbou, Mary the one of James) is unclear, since the genitive could mean James's mother, wife, or sister. Most take Luke's wording as equal to Mark 15:40 and 16:1, so that she is the mother of James and Joses (Plummer 1896: 549; BDR §162.3.5; Mark 6:3).

Luke’s repetition of the report to the apostles (24:9) may reflect the influence of another source that listed the women’s names with the report. Luke also makes the point that many other unnamed women were involved as word of the resurrection spread across the assembled group. Though 24:10 mentions only a report to the apostles, 23:9 suggests that the entire entourage is involved.

The major issues in the verse involve the text and syntax (Marshall 1978: 887; see the additional note). Does the phrase αἱ λοιπαὶ σὺν αὐταῖς (hai loipai syn autais, the rest of the women with them) go with the first part of the verse or is it the subject of the latter part of the verse? In other words, is this larger group of women part of the traveling entourage or did they give the report? The problem is caused by the presence of two third-person plural verbs before any object is noted: ἦσαν (ēsan, they were) and ἔλεγον (elegon, they said). That all the nominative constructions are linked by καί (kai, and) suggests that the three named women and the rest of the women should be treated together as the subject of the first verb (ἦσαν). In this case, the subject of the second verb (ἔλεγον) would be an understood “they.” But “they” is ambiguous in that it could refer to “the rest of the women” or the whole group just named. Dillon (1978: 57) argues that if a weaving of traditions is present, Luke has made it unclear syntactically (unlike the smooth way he handles most transitions) and thus made the addition himself. But the argument for “smoothness” cuts both ways. Since this is a rough way to compose a text, it is more likely that Luke brought together various traditions (such rough sutures occur in Acts 4:24–25; 21:17–18). Luke intends the group of women to be seen as part of the traveling entourage and as reporters of the event (cf. Luke 23:55; Nolland 1993b: 1191).

24:11 The women’s account does not gain immediate acceptance. In fact, Luke uses a unique graphic hapax legomenon to describe the reaction: λῆρος (lēros, nonsense or idle talk; BAGD 473; BAA 960; 4 Macc. 5:11; Josephus, Jewish War 3.8.9 §405), a term used in medical settings of the delirious talk of the very sick (Plummer 1896: 550). The apostles are not looking for any reversal of the tragic situation. Their dreams about God’s kingdom have been shattered. The women’s story looks like an absurd effort to challenge reality. Apparently no one believes them.[17] Marshall (1978: 888) notes that Luke does not mention that the women saw Jesus (Matt. 28:9–10 = Mark 16:9–11 = John 20:11–18), an omission that probably reflects the influence of another source or compressed summarization. In Luke, Jesus reveals himself for the first time on the Emmaus road. Since the Emmaus account is unique to Luke, he may have saved the drama of revelation for this new, recounted, confirming event and may have assumed traditional knowledge of the earlier appearance.

No one believes except possibly Peter. He has learned to believe what Jesus says, even when it goes against whatever convictions he might have (Luke 5:1–11; 22:61–62). His denials have taught him to trust Jesus. Luce (1933: 359) argues that 24:11 conflicts with the later report that some went to check out the tomb (24:24). Once Peter headed for the tomb or returned from it, however, it is likely that others went to see, even though they may have doubted whether they would find anything. Disbelief is not necessarily the same as outright rejection (Schweizer 1984: 367). Plummer (1896: 550) suggests that the disciples may have been expecting a future return to glory but never figured that Jesus was speaking of immediate, bodily resurrection. This view is problematic, however, since 18:31–34 mentions resurrection on the third day. Even though this earlier text makes clear that the disciples did not understand Jesus' remark, the question about their understanding turns on what point they failed to grasp. The remark about resurrection appears intelligible enough, but it was unclear how resurrection fit into God's plan (see the exegesis of 18:31–34). The disciples must understand that they can trust what Jesus promises.

This provides a lesson for Luke's readers, who cannot see Jesus but are under fire for believing in him. They can trust that he is alive (Osborne 1984: 113 n. 15). The larger group of apostles reacted to the resurrection, as many do when they hear it for the first time. It was not an expected or concocted event. It was a surprising miracle even to the original hearers, as it is to Luke's readers. If someone created the story of resurrection, would the apostles have been made to look so incredulous? The account's honesty has an air of reality, which points to its truth.

e. Peter's Response (24:12)

24:12 Peter reacts to the women's report by running to the tomb (μνημεῖον, mnēmeion; elsewhere in Luke's resurrection narrative at 24:2, 9, 22, 24) and looking in it.[18] The meaning of the term παρακύπτω (parakyptō) is disputed (Fitzmyer 1985: 1547; BAGD 619 §1; BAA 1251 §1; MM 486; elsewhere in the NT at John 20:5, 11; James 1:25; 1 Pet. 1:12; cf. Gospel of Peter 13.56 [Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.225]). Does it mean to stoop over or to stretch to see? Several OT examples (Gen. 26:8; Prov. 7:6; Sir. 21:23) show that it is unnecessary to insist that it mean "stoop." Here it means that Peter made some physical effort to look inside the tomb (e.g., peers in; Neirynck 1977). He sees the ὀθόνια (othonia, grave clothes; BAGD 555; BAA 1126; elsewhere in the NT only at John 19:40; 20:5, 6, 7), a term synonymous with σινδών (sindōn; Luke 23:53).

Peter goes home "amazed" (θαυμάζων, thaumazōn) at the things that have occurred. Since those who marvel are usually trying to understand what has happened, it is debated whether this is a note about Peter's faith. Most say no (Fitzmyer 1985: 1548; Marshall 1978: 889; Dillon 1978: 66–67; Nolland 1993b: 1192; perhaps Osborne 1984: 114). This verdict is possible in light of the report (24:24) that the apostles have failed to see Jesus and the contrast to the statement (24:34) that Peter has seen the Lord. A decisive appearance to Peter occurs after the initial report described in 24:24 and after his viewing the tomb here.

But this conclusion can be challenged. It may be that the only failure in 24:24 is that some do not believe, because there is no report of actually seeing Jesus. Perhaps 24:24 suggests that some were not persuaded by the mere presence of an empty tomb. After all, the complaint in 24:24 is that none of the apostles saw Jesus. Things were as the women said, but there was still something missing to clinch the case. In other words, doubting Thomas was not alone. The ranks were divided among hopeful believers and skeptical doubters. Upon their return, the Emmaus disciples would have been told that Peter had seen Jesus as a sign of confirmation, which they really did not need in light of their own recent experience. What had been lacking according to 24:24 had been supplied in duplicate! This option seems slightly more likely than a total denial of faith here, since it can explain why some disciples stayed together on resurrection day after Peter's initial report. In addition, the account links together the tomb and the angelic reminder about Jesus' teaching.

True, there are no words of confession of faith here, but that is not decisive in the building up of the drama of discovery and its spread throughout the ranks. It is also clear that all doubt was removed with the appearances. For Luke, the empty tomb starts the road to revelation and helps support the women's story and claim for resurrection.

The almost total agreement between Luke and John suggests the use of a similar source. There are two differences. In Luke only Peter goes to the tomb, while in John the "beloved disciple" actually beats Peter to the tomb (John 20:8). It would appear that Luke focuses on Peter as a representative disciple, especially since Peter is the speaking witness in Acts 2–5. In addition, Luke has Peter leave "amazed at what has happened," while John is clear that at least the "beloved disciple" believes (John 20:7–10). If my analysis of Luke is correct, this is not really a difference. It should be noted, however, that John is not explicit about Peter's faith. After Peter returns in Luke, the drama of resurrection revelation continues, so a decision about Peter's state does not greatly impact the force of Luke 24 as a whole. All that is at stake is the speed by which doubt turned into faith and whether the appearances confirmed faith, removed doubt, or did a little of both among the group.

Summary

Luke 24:1–12 is the first account that hints of a reversal of the tragedy of Jesus' death. An act of mourning and respect turns to perplexity for some devoted women. They appear at the tomb, only to find the stone moved, angels present, and the tomb empty. Jesus is brought to life, just as he predicted. The promise of God's power has come to pass, but the whole story is rather unbelievable. Nonetheless, the women go back to the disciples to relate the story, where they are met with unbelief, probably because they thought that resurrection from the dead would come at the end-time. But Peter is not sure. He has learned that what Jesus says is not only surprising, but right. He runs to the tomb. It is empty, except for the grave clothes, which suggests that Jesus was there at one time. Surely if he had been taken, the clothes would not still be there. No one would steal the body and leave the impression of resurrection. Peter is left to marvel over events and the reminder of Jesus' words. It is a moment for reflection, decision, and faith. Is resurrection the only adequate explanation for what Peter sees? Is not resurrection what Jesus promised? Has not God acted on behalf of Jesus? Is Jesus alive to carry out God's plan after all? These are questions not only for Peter in the moment of his discovery, but for all who relive that moment through Luke's retelling of the story. What else can explain these events? Can one really believe in resurrection hope? The story is not over. The apparent end has become a new beginning. Those who doubt will have their doubts laid to rest by the Lord who stands risen from his encounter with death.

Additional Notes

24:1. There is uncertainty about what term Luke used for "tomb": μνῆμα (A, B, F, L, W, family 1, family 13, Byz) or μνημεῖον (P^{75}, ℵ, C*, Δ). Most manuscripts that have μνῆμα alter the word order, placing ἦλθον (they came) before the phrase ἐπὶ τὸ μνῆμα (to the tomb). In Luke's writings, μνῆμα is found in Luke 8:27; 23:53; Acts 2:29; 7:16, while μνημεῖον appears in Luke 11:44, 47; 23:55; 24:2, 9, 12, 22, 24. Fitzmyer (1985: 1544) and Jeremias (1980: 310) prefer μνημεῖον, but lack explicit reasoning. The frequent use of μνημεῖον in Luke 24 makes μνῆμα the harder reading, but the variety in word order stands against it. Thus, the predominant and consistent use of μνημεῖον in Luke 24 makes it more likely to be original.

24:1. In Luke, only codex D records the women's discussion of who will roll away the stone, a remark that looks like Mark 16:3. This phrase is not original because it lacks attestation; in addition, Luke does not mention a stone in Luke 23.

24:3. Codex D and most Itala read τὸ σῶμα (the body), while 1241 and some Syriac have τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ (the body of Jesus). On the shorter-reading rule, the text of D is preferred, but the external evidence is too strong for that rule to apply here (Marshall 1978: 884; Luce 1933: 357).[19] The longer text, τὸ σῶμα τοῦ κυρίου Ἰησοῦ (the body of the Lord Jesus), is found in $\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, ℵ, A, B, C, W, Θ, family 1, family 13, and Byz. In addition, κύριος is common in Luke and thus is likely on internal grounds.[20]

24:6. Codex D and the Itala omit the remark about Jesus' being raised, an omission that is one of the disputed Western noninterpolations that many regard as original (Plummer 1896: 548; Creed 1930: 293; Luce 1933: 358). If the phrase is omitted, then the angels talk only about Jesus' teaching. External evidence for inclusion is large, and the textual factor against the omission is the presence of ἀλλά (but) in the middle of the phrase, a detail that would be unique to Luke (Marshall 1978: 885–86; Metzger 1975: 183–84).

24:10. The ambiguous syntax gave rise to variants that clarify the text: in A, D, W, and some Syriac ἦσαν (they were) is lacking (Klostermann 1929: 233), and in ℵ^{1}, Θ, and Byz αἳ (who) is added before ἔλεγον (were speaking) to smooth out the syntax. The punctuation of UBS–NA is correct, but the RSV and NIV give a good rendering of the sense.

24:12. Plummer (1896: 550) argues that Luke's record of Peter's visit to the tomb has "the look of an insertion," probably from John 20:3–10. As with other Western noninterpolations, D and Itala lack the verse (as does the first edition of UBS). The turning point in scholarly opinion came with the discovery of P^{75}, which included the verse, as do ℵ, A, B, L, W, Δ, Θ, Ψ, family 1, family 13, Byz, and Lect. On the basis of this overwhelming external evidence, UBS^{4} rates the verse more certain (B) than do previous editions (D). Marshall (1978: 888) suggests that it might have been omitted because it is in tension with 24:34, which specifies another appearance to Peter. Internal factors also argue for inclusion. For example, it is unclear without 24:12 how 24:24's remark that others went to check out the tomb after the women fits into the movement of events. Some regard the plural in 24:24 as a problem, but Luke elsewhere focuses on Peter (e.g., 5:1–11). In addition, the unique terms in the passage (i.e., not found in John 20) are Lucan: ἀναστάς (having risen), τὸ γεγονός (the things that have happened), and θαυμάζων (marveling) (Dillon 1978: 60–61 nn. 173, 175). Holding to the originality of this verse are Dillon (1978: 59–62), Grundmann (1963: 439–40), Marshall (1978: 888), Fitzmyer (1985: 1547), Ellis (1974: 272–73), Wiefel (1988: 404), and Bode (1970: 69). Creed (1930: 294), Klostermann (1929: 232–33), and R. Mahoney (1974: 41–69) argue for omission. See also Leaney (1955–56), Muddiman (1972), Hartmann (1964), and Snodgrass (1972).

2. Emmaus Road and a Meal of Discovery (24:13–35)

The appearance of Jesus on the Emmaus road is one of Luke’s most vivid and dramatic accounts about Jesus, and he tells the event with great skill and drama. Luke’s reader knows more than the travelers and can more easily see the unit’s many themes. (1) The gradual revelation of Jesus contains irony: the empty tomb has not yet created an ecstatic change of view; in fact, the travelers lament that Jesus has not been seen even though the tomb is empty. (2) As Jesus demonstrates his resurrection in a direct appearance, tragedy turns to triumph when it becomes clear who has instructed them about (3) the fulfillment of Scripture and God's plan. (4) The raised Jesus sits in table fellowship with his disciples. He is in the midst of his people even when they are not aware of it. Failure becomes fulfillment.[1]

The account has a four-part structure (Fitzmyer 1985: 1559): the meeting (24:13–16), the conversation about recent events (24:17–27), the meal with its startling revelation (24:28–32), and the return to report the event (24:33–35). The major point surfaces in the contrast between the travelers' report of recent events (24:19b–24) versus Jesus' teaching about what must take place (24:25–27). The travelers were deeply disappointed by Jesus' death, which they initially viewed as a severe setback. Through this appearance, God reversed in dramatic style the thinking of Cleopas and his companion. They would never be the same as they learned that death could be overcome and that God's plan had moved ahead. Jesus was alive, and as a result their hope was renewed. This appearance is the third evidence of Jesus' resurrection (the other two were the empty tomb and the angelic announcement; Arndt 1956: 488). For Luke, appearances are the most decisive proof, since they remove all doubt about resurrection.

Sources and Historicity

The sources of this unique passage (Aland 1985: §355) are much discussed. All recognize that Luke tells the story with his own stylistic touches (Fitzmyer 1985: 1555–56 lists twenty-four phrases in the passage that are typical of Lucan expression; see the exegesis for details). But where does the basic account come from? There are three views (Klostermann 1929: 233):

1. The material came (probably in written form) directly from one of the travelers. Plummer (1896: 551) argues that this is the only place where such vivid detail could arise.
2. Luke received the basic story from a source, although there is disagreement about which elements came from this source (Grundmann 1963: 443–44 and Wiefel 1988: 408–9 argue that it is a Jerusalem source tied to Jesus' family). Schweizer (1984: 369) argues for Emmaus, appearance to non-apostles, lack of recognition, recognition in the midst of the meal, and lack of a commission. P. Schubert (1957: 174–75) attributes only 24:13, 15b, 16, 28–31 to Luke's source; Ernst (1977: 655–57) argues for 24:22–24, 28–35; and Fitzmyer (1985: 1554–55) argues for the material paralleled in Mark 16:12–13, Emmaus, Cleopas, the material about the appearance to Peter in Luke 24:34 (which recalls 1 Cor. 15:4–5), the review of Luke 24:1–11 in 24:22–24, and the language of 24:30. Nolland (1993b: 1198–99) notes two variations of this approach: (a) the source emphasized fulfillment of the OT and Luke added the meal scene and (b) the meal scene was in the source and Luke added the emphasis on Scripture. Since "Luke is rarely an innovator and most of his motifs are given to him from the tradition," Nolland sees Luke reworking an existing Emmaus tradition (with roots in Jerusalem) that had both themes.

3. The material is basically Luke's, from his hand, and with his emphases (Dillon 1978: 155; Wanke 1973: 109–15). Dillon acknowledges that a few details and the meal scene may be traditional, but argues that Luke is responsible for the rest. Wanke's 1973 study (esp. 23–126) is the most exhaustive attempt to defend Lucan authorship.

The task of determining sources is difficult—in fact, Tiede (1988: 433) says it is futile—because (a) Luke told the story in his own terms, (b) there are traces of his style in the account (as the exegesis notes, with numerous statistics at the key points), and (c) many themes parallel Lucan emphases elsewhere. For example, the fulfillment of Scripture and the necessity of God's plan coming to pass are clear Lucan points. Rightly warning that Lucan style does not equal Lucan creation, Marshall (1973b: 75–78) notes that Lucan themes sometimes originate in a source (e.g., 23:50–24:11). The various points raised as evidence of a source suggest that Luke used traditional material for the account, but it cannot be determined whether it was written or oral or a mixture. Either of the first two views is possible. If view 2 is accepted, all the essential themes were likely in the source. Lucan stylization need not mean denial of essential historicity, since Luke's tendency is to draw on traditional themes, not create them (Nolland 1993b: 1199). The clear presence of the otherwise obscure Emmaus reference also speaks for the originality of some of this tradition, for there is no reason why anyone would create an unknown locale for this key event. Wiefel (1988: 408) summarizes well: a pure Lucan new creation is hardly profitable.

Dodd (1955) notes that this account is one of the most detailed of the resurrection stories. He calls it a "circumstantial narrative," which means that the appearance is developed with drama and detail. It also means that the narrative reflects the evangelist's interests (John 21:1–14 is the other example of this form, which he pejoratively calls "tales").[2] Interestingly, Dodd sees this category as one of the latest developing forms of resurrection accounts, probably because of its length and detail. In contrast, Bultmann (1963: 286, 288–91), though calling the account legend, argues that the absence of apologetic motifs makes it an early resurrection story, since the only concern is to verify resurrection through an appearance of Jesus (he compares it to John 20:1, 11–18, 24–29; 21:1–14).[3] This difference in judgment may show how ill equipped form criticism is to judge matters of historicity by rules of growth in the tradition, even though it can make excellent observations about a passage's structure (Bock 1991b; Marshall 1978: 891 notes that judgments about form cannot prove historicity).

The decision about legendary motifs is controlled by an interpreter's presuppositions about the possibility of resurrection and supernatural appearances. It should be noted, however, that the church did not portray expectation of the resurrection as a given. The disciples struggle to accept the resurrection and do not do so until forced to—despite Jesus' earlier proclamation about it. This perspective does not look like a created detail. The reality portrayed in the Gospel accounts rings true. While the apostles did not expect resurrection, once they saw it, they were ready to die for the faith because they knew that death could not conquer them. The variety of Jesus' appearances, both in Galilee and Jerusalem, is no reason to doubt their reality. The beauty of the Emmaus account is not only its picturesque narration but also its authenticity (Marshall 1978: 891 and Lake 1907: 211–12).

The outline of Luke 24:13–35 is as follows:

a. Meeting (24:13–16)

i. Setting (24:13–14)
ii. Jesus appears but is not recognized (24:15–16)

b. Conversation (24:17–27)
i. The men's explanation (24:17–24)
(1) Jesus' first question (24:17a)
(2) The sad reaction (24:17b)
(3) Cleopas's reply (24:18)
(4) Jesus' second question (24:19a)
(5) Cleopas's summary of events (24:19b–24)
ii. Jesus' response (24:25–27)

c. Meal and revelation (24:28–32)
i. The meal (24:28–29)
ii. Jesus' revelation (24:30–31)
iii. The men's response (24:32)

d. Report to disciples (24:33–35)

The account relates the travelers' disappointment over Jesus' death and their curiosity over the empty tomb. Since their "sight" is veiled, they do not initially recognize Jesus when he joins them. They think that all hope is lost. But things change as their new companion shows how Jesus is the fulfillment of all of the OT. There is a necessity to God's plan. During their meal and table fellowship, Jesus gradually reveals himself. Jesus' resurrection thus receives confirmation through an appearance. The travelers are overjoyed at being with Jesus and understanding God's plan as revealed in the Scriptures.

Exegesis and Exposition

13 And behold, on the same day, two of them were journeying to a village named ❒Emmaus❒, about ❒seven miles❒ from Jerusalem, 14 and they were talking with each other about all these things that had happened. 15 While they were talking and discussing together, Jesus himself drew near and traveled with them. 16 But their eyes were kept from recognizing him.

17 And he said to them, "What is this conversation you are holding with each other as you walk?" ❒And they stood still❒, looking sad. 18 And one of them, named Cleopas, said to him, "Are you the only one who dwells in Jerusalem and does not know the things that have happened in it during these days?" 19 And he said to them, "What sort of things?" And they said to him, "Concerning Jesus ❒of Nazareth❒, who was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people, 20 and how our chief priests and rulers handed him over to a judgment of death and crucified him. 21 But we were hoping that this one was the one who comes to redeem Israel. But even besides this, this is the third day he has spent since all these things came to pass. 22But also some of the women from us amazed us, going to the tomb early this morning 23and, not finding the body, came back to say also they had seen a vision of angels, who are saying he is living. 24And some of them with us went out to the tomb and found it so, as the women had said, but they did not see him.” 25And he said, “O you foolish and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets spoke! 26Was it not necessary for the Christ to suffer these things and come into his glory?” 27And beginning from Moses and from all the prophets, ❒he interpreted❒ for them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself.

28And they drew near to the town where they were going. And he acted as though he would go farther. 29But they constrained him, saying, “Remain with us, for it is near evening and the day is already spent.” And he entered to remain with them. 30And after he reclined at the table with them, he, taking the bread, blessed and having broken it gave it to them. 31And their eyes were opened, and they recognized him. And he disappeared from them. 32And they said to one another, “Did not our hearts burn ❒within us❒ as he spoke to us on the road, as he opened the Scripture?”

33And rising up in that hour, they returned to Jerusalem and found the Eleven gathered and those who were with them, 34who said, “❒Indeed❒ the Lord has been raised and has appeared to Simon.”

35And they told them about the things that happened on the road and how he made himself known to them in the breaking of bread.

a. Meeting (24:13–16)

i. Setting (24:13–14)

24:13 Using καὶ ἰδού (kai idou, and behold), a phrase he commonly uses to open new units (twenty-six times in Luke and eight times in Acts; Plummer 1896: 551), Luke introduces a second event that occurred on resurrection day (ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ [en autē tē hēmera] looks back to 24:1 and anticipates 24:33–34, 36, 50; cf. 1:59; 4:16; 10:12; 17:24; 19:42; 23:12). Luke is not, however, interested in an "eighth-day" or "new-creation" motif (Barn. 15.8–9; Justin Martyr, Dialogue with Trypho 138; against Ellis 1974: 276; with Marshall 1978: 892). Luke's reference to "two of them" is an allusion to the group of disciples mentioned in 24:9. That the apostles are not meant is clear from the name Cleopas (24:18), who is not one of the Eleven. The men are probably headed home to Emmaus (Moule 1957–58).

Three issues surround the reference to Emmaus (Ἐμμαοῦς): its distance from Jerusalem, its location, and the purpose of its mention (Fitzmyer 1985:

1561–62; Dillon 1978: 85–89). A textual problem affects the question of the village's distance from Jerusalem (see the additional note). The probable reading says the town is sixty stadia (i.e., 6.9 miles or 11.1 kilometers) from Jerusalem.

The location of Emmaus has never been decisively pinned down (BAGD 255; BAA 514; Mackowski 1980; Wanke 1973: 37–43), and the discussion has changed little in the last thirty years (Dillon 1978: 87 n. 49 calls it "stalemated"). Three locations are suggested:

1. The traditional location is Ammaous (Ἀμμαοῦς), a Maccabean battleground (1 Macc. 3:40, 57; 4:3; Fitzmyer 1985: 1561; Marshall 1978: 892) later called Nicopolis and ʿAmwâs (the modern Arab name). It was fortified for battle by Bacchides (1 Macc. 9:50; Josephus, Antiquities 13.1.3 §15), burned in 4 B.C. (Josephus, Antiquities 17.10.7 §282; 17.10.9 §291), and rebuilt by A.D. 66 into a major town again (Josephus, Jewish War 3.3.5 §55). Both Eusebius and Jerome identify Emmaus as Ammaous (see Fitzmyer for references), which is twenty miles from Jerusalem, not seven as Luke says.[4] If the textual variant of 160 stadia is correct (see the additional note), then Ammaous is the best candidate. One must ask, however, whether it would be possible to travel forty miles —from Jerusalem to Emmaus and back—in one day (24:33).

2. The Crusaders regarded el-Qubeibeh as Emmaus (Plummer 1896: 551–52; Rengstorf 1968: 271) and in A.D. 1099 established a fort there called Castellum Emmaus. Although located the right distance from Jerusalem (sixty-three stadia), the location is unattested in the first century, which makes the identification less than certain (DeGuglielmo 1941).
3. Josephus mentions an Ἀμμαοῦς located thirty stadia from Jerusalem (Jewish War 7.6.6 §217). Vespasian settled some eight hundred veterans here, a locale identified as ancient Mozah (Josh. 18:26; m. Suk. 4.5; Creed 1930: 295). If one accepts this locale, then Luke would be giving the round-trip distance for the journey (Ellis 1974: 277; Liefeld 1984: 1055; Nolland 1993b: 1201), which is not clear from the text, but is possible.

In short, a clear option does not emerge. Either view 2 or 3 is possible, with view 3 more likely.

The significance of Emmaus's mention is twofold: (1) it indicates an appearance in the Jerusalem area, which is Luke's geographic concern, and (2) it reflects the retention of historical detail. It is hard to imagine an appearance being tied to an obscure village unless it really occurred there. Luke thus sets the stage for one of the most famous of Jesus' appearances.

24:14 The two men are engaged in an intense discussion (ὁμιλέω, homileō; BAGD 565; BAA 1146; elsewhere in the NT only at Luke 24:15; Acts 20:11; 24:26) with one another (πρὸς ἀλλήλους, pros allēlous; the phrase elsewhere in the NT at Luke 2:15; 4:36; 6:11; 8:25; 20:14; 24:17, 32; Acts 4:15; 26:31; 28:4, 25). It had been an unusual few days, and they are reviewing what had transpired. The description suggests a wide-ranging conversation in which they rehashed all (περὶ πάντων, peri pantōn) these events (συμβεβηκότων, symbebēkotōn; BAGD 777; BAA 1551; elsewhere in the NT at Mark 10:32; Acts 3:10; 20:19; 21:35; 1 Cor. 10:11; 1 Pet. 4:12; 2 Pet. 2:22; cf. 1 Macc. 4:26; Josephus, Jewish War 4.1.6 §43; Antiquities 13.6.3 §194). Cleopas's summary in 24:19b–24 probably indicates the general content of their discussion. Luke uses his frequent καὶ αὐτοί (kai autoi, and they) construction to continue the account (the singular καὶ αὐτός is more common than the plural: e.g., 4:15; 15:14; 16:24; 17:13; 19:2 [twice]; Dillon 1978: 90 n. 57; Michaelis 1950).

ii. Jesus Appears but is Not Recognized (24:15–16)

24:15 The conversation was intense, as they "debated" (Danker 1988: 391) or "discussed" (Marshall 1978: 893). Συζητέω (syzēteō) suggests emotional dialogue (elsewhere in the NT at Mark 1:27; 8:11; 9:10, 14, 16; 12:28; Luke 22:23; Acts 6:9; 9:29; J. Schneider, TDNT 7:747). During this time, a third traveler catches up (ἐγγίσας, engisas) to the pair. Jesus apparently has a form of resurrection body that they could not recognize (24:16) as he travels with them and engages them in conversation. They probably think that he is another worshiper returning home from Jerusalem. Luke likes the idea of a journey, so he notes their travel here as well.

24:16 Luke makes it clear that the two travelers do not have the total picture: their eyes were kept from (ἐκρατοῦντο, ekratounto; BAGD 448 §2d; BAA 911 §2d) recognizing Jesus. The use of the articular infinitive τοῦ μὴ ἐπιγνῶναι (tou mē epignōnai, not to recognize) is epexegetical and specifies what they were kept from knowing (Plummer 1896: 552; Bultmann, TDNT 1:704; BDF §400.4; BDR §400.4.6; cf. Luke 4:42; Acts 10:47; 14:18; 20:20, 27; Gen. 16:2). The force of ἐκρατοῦντο … ἐπιγνῶναι is disputed. Did God conceal this information (Marshall 1978: 893; Fitzmyer 1985: 1563)? Was the disciples' own blindness the problem? Or was Satan at fault (Nolland 1993b: 1201; see the exegesis of Luke 9:45 and n. 4 there)? The first view is more likely, since the passive construction places responsibility outside the disciples and Satan is entirely absent from the resurrection account. There would come a time when the disciples would clearly see, but in their current uncertainty God still had things to teach them. The veil will be lifted in Luke 24:31. Such concealing is often noted by Luke (9:45 and 18:34, both probably by God; Fitzmyer 1985: 1563; Danker 1988: 391). The lack of recognition of the raised Jesus occurs elsewhere (John 20:14–15; 21:4).[5] One purpose of the verse is to show the reality of Jesus' bodily resurrection. Luke tells the story with dramatic flair, as the reader knows more about the situation than those who experienced the event—at least at this point. Part of the drama is when and how they will realize who their discussion partner is.

b. Conversation (24:17–27)

i. The Men's Explanation (24:17–24)

(1) Jesus' First Question (24:17a)

24:17a Jesus joins the conversation by asking about the words "exchanged" (ἀντιβάλλετε, antiballete; BAGD 74; BAA 146; a NT hapax legomenon; 2 Macc. 11:13) between them (Plummer 1896: 552; Marshall 1978: 894). The topic and tone catches Jesus' attention, and he wants to draw them out.

(2) The Sad Reaction (24:17b)

24:17b Their reaction to Jesus' question is simple: they stop walking (ἐστάθησαν, estathēsan; BAGD 382 §II.1a; BAA 774 §II.1a).[6] Their grief is obvious: σκυθρωποί (skythrōpoi, sad faced; BAGD 758; BAA 1514; elsewhere in the NT only at Matt. 6:16; cf. Gen. 40:7; Sir. 25:23) describes a look of remorse or gloom (Plummer 1896: 552). This type of questioning is something that Luke notes frequently (Acts 2:12; 4:7; 8:30–31; 10:4; 15:7–11; Tiede 1988:

434). They cannot believe that anyone coming out of Jerusalem does not know what has happened. Clearly these travelers are stunned and disappointed by recent events.

(3) Cleopas's Reply (24:18)

24:18 Jesus receives a response from one of the men, named Cleopas. It is not clear why only one figure is named. If Luke created the account, why would he name only one figure? The single name thus gives evidence of a source (Fitzmyer 1985: 1564). Κλεοπᾶς (Cleopas) is a shortened form of the name Κλεόπατρος (Cleopatros; BDF §125.2). It is not related to the name Κλωπᾶς (Clopas; John 19:25; Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History 3.11), which is a Greek form of a Semitic name (with Plummer 1896: 553; Klostermann 1929: 235; and Fitzmyer 1985: 1563; against Marshall 1978: 894; Grundmann 1963: 443; and BDF §125.2). This figure is not identified anywhere else in the NT. Suggestions abound about the companion's identity (Fitzmyer 1985: 1563):

Peter—Crehan 1953; Annand 1958; but this is unlikely given that in 24:34 the apostles tell Cleopas that Peter has seen Jesus

Cleopas's wife—C. Charlesworth 1922–23
Emmaus—which misreads the place-name as a person; Souter 1901–2; Nestle 1901–2; Bonus 1901–2
Nathanael—codex V (ninth century), as noted by Metzger 1975: 185[7]
Simon (not Peter)—codex S (A.D. 949), as noted by Metzger 1975: 185

Complicating the picture is a tradition in Origen's Against Celsus 2.62, 68 that identifies the other disciple as Simon—but not apparently Peter, for Eusebius's Ecclesiastical History 3.11 speaks of Simeon son of Clopas (John 19:25), who was a cousin of the Lord and succeeded James as leader of the Jerusalem church (Zahn 1920: 712; Creed 1930: 295; Luce 1933: 360). Plummer (1896: 551) sees the Simon that Origen named as a mistaken interpretation of Luke 24:34. None of these connections is compelling.

Cleopas asks if the traveler has had his head in the sand, since he does not know what has happened even after making a pilgrimage to Jerusalem (παροικεῖς, paroikeis; Plummer 1896: 553; BAGD 628; BAA 1269–70; παροικέω elsewhere in the NT only at Heb. 11:9; cf. Acts 7:6, 29; Gen. 17:8; 20:1; 21:34; Exod. 6:4). They are shocked at his ignorance. The emphatic σὺ μόνος (sy monos, you alone) asks this companion if he is the only one not aware of such events (Plummer 1896: 553). How could he have missed these events (τὰ γενόμενα, ta genomena; cf. Luke 8:34, 56; 23:48), which were so public and of such interest? The recent past is underscored by "these days," a reference to the noteworthy festival in Jerusalem. Dillon (1978: 113–14) argues that this emphasis on Jerusalem and the events' public character are evidence of Lucan themes (e.g., 2:52; 4:14–15; 8:47; 9:13; 20:45). The theme contrasts the public quality of Jesus' ministry with a lack of understanding about what his ministry meant. But surely the focus is also on the public nature of the trial, reflecting the leadership's involvement in Jesus' death and the way Jesus was brought before all (Luke 23). Mark 9:32 also notes the lack of understanding by the disciples, while John often notes how understanding comes later (John 12:16; 20:9). As such, the detail need not be seen as a Lucan touch, though it is true that Luke emphasizes this point.

(4) Jesus' Second Question (24:19a)

24:19a Jesus draws out his companions and asks them "what sort of things" (ποῖα, poia) they are discussing. BAGD 684 §2bα and BAA 1373 §2bα note that the understood object of the question is γενόμενα (genomena): "What sort of things have happened?"

(5) Cleopas's Summary of Events (24:19b–24)

24:19b The pair begins to tell about Jesus of Nazareth (Luke 4:34 = Mark 1:24; Luke 18:37 = Mark 10:47; Acts 2:22; 3:6; 4:10; 6:14; 10:38; 22:8; 24:5; 26:9; cf. Matt. 2:23; 26:71; Mark 14:67; 16:6; John 18:5, 7; 19:19) in terms that fit the portrait of Luke's Gospel. Jesus is called a prophet before (ἐναντίον, enantion) God and all the people (Fitzmyer 1985: 1564; Friedrich, TDNT 6:846–47; elsewhere used by Luke at Luke 1:6; 20:26; Acts 7:10; 8:32). The title prophet recalls Luke 4:16–30 and 13:31–35 and matches the public judgment about him (Luke 7:16, 39; 9:9, 18–19; Acts 10:38–39, a theme with popular and traditional roots [see Mark 6:15]). Jesus declared the way to God, so he was "mighty in word and deed" (a traditional combination found throughout the NT: Rom. 15:18; 2 Cor. 10:11;

Col. 3:17; 2 Thess. 2:17; 1 John 3:18). In Acts 7:22 this phrase describes Moses' work, and in Acts 3:14–26 Jesus is described as a prophet like Moses. Luke 9:35, with its allusion to Deut. 18:15 (cf. Acts 7:37), also suggests this Mosaic connection. It was hoped that Jesus would be the leader of a new people and a new era. The mighty character of his ministry may allude to his being empowered by the Spirit (Dillon 1978: 114–15; cf. Acts 10:38; Luke 9:1; 24:49). To call Jesus a prophet, even a prophet like Moses, is less than a full description of him, but it is a major and appropriate characterization of Jesus' ministry (Nolland 1993b: 1202). An additional title and function comes later in 24:21, when the pair says they had hoped that Jesus would redeem Israel. These travelers gradually reveal Jesus' complete identity, a sensitive topic among Jews at this time, so they are careful how they introduce him. They clearly had high regard and high hopes for Jesus.

24:20 But there is another side to the story: disappointment. Despite his impressive ministry, Jesus was rejected by the nation's religious officials (23:13), whom the travelers identify as "our" chief priests and leaders.[8] This summary clearly places the blame for Jesus' death on the leadership, who handed Jesus over to judgment.[9]

"Handing over" also alludes to the passive Roman role, since they are responsible for the execution (Plummer 1896: 553; Marshall 1978: 895; Luke 22:71; 23:21–23; Acts 4:25–27). These descriptions recall the many predictions Jesus made (Luke 9:44; 18:32; 24:7; cf. Acts 2:36; 4:10; 13:27). These terms are more prominent in the other Synoptics: παραδίδωμι (paradidōmi, to hand over) in Matt. 17:22 = Mark 9:31; Matt. 20:18–19 = Mark 10:33 (twice); Matt. 26:2 = Mark 14:41; Matt. 26:45 and σταυρόω (stauroō, to crucify) in Matt. 20:19; 26:2; 27:22, 23, 26, 31, 35, 38 = Mark 15:13, 14, 15, 20, 24, 25, 27; Matt. 28:5 = Mark 16:6. The reader of Luke's Gospel will recognize the language. The view of the Emmaus pair parallels the church's tradition and language about Jesus' death.

24:21 The two share their personal view of Jesus: they were downcast because they had hoped that he was going to redeem Israel. The imperfect ἠλπίζομεν (ēlpizomen, we were hoping) expresses the ongoing character of this hope. The idea is like Jer. 14:8, where Yahweh is called the hope of Israel (Fitzmyer 1985: 1564). They hoped that through Jesus, God would work for the nation and deliver it into a new era of freedom. This is the only time that Luke uses λυτρόω (lytroō, to redeem; Plummer 1896: 553; Marshall 1978: 895; Büchsel, TDNT 4:340–51).[10] If this hope equals that expressed by Zechariah in 1:68–79, then what was hoped for included Israel's political release from Rome (a major Jewish emphasis: Isa. 41:14; 43:14; 44:22–24; 1 Macc. 4:11; Ps. Sol. 9.1; Fitzmyer 1985: 1564).

Dillon's comment (1978: 129–30) that Israel means broadly "the people of God" and not strictly the nation fails (1) to note the disappointment expressed here, (2) to take seriously the tie to the infancy declarations, (3) to recall that part of the disappointment was that "our" chief priests and rulers handed Jesus over, and (4) the Jewish perspective that pervades the account. The pair is still thinking of Israel as a political-social unit. It fits the time period of the remarks, before the church was forced to operate as an autonomous unit, a change that Acts begins to detail. The nationalistic focus of activity in the early chapters of Acts makes a Jewish focus for this remark clear (Danker 1988: 392). In the pair's view, the possibility of such a hope coming to fruition for Israel died with Jesus on the cross. What they did not know is that this hope would be realized in an unexpected way, as the message of Acts and the rest of the NT show. Irony again exists, as the hope is even more comprehensively realized than these travelers had hoped.

The day of Jesus' death three days earlier is significant (Fitzmyer 1985: 1565; Creed 1930: 296; Plummer 1896: 554).[11] Although there is no expectation of resurrection here, the remark is an ironic echo of the "third-day" emphasis in 9:22; 13:32–33; 24:7.

24:22 Yet even death does not end the story, for events of the early morning (ὀρθρινός, orthrinos; BAGD 580; BAA 1176; BDR §113.3.4; §243.1.1) extend the drama. The pair summarizes what Luke recorded in 24:1–12 (Fitzmyer 1985: 1565 sees 24:22–24 as independent of Mark 16:1–8). Their reaction to these latest events is one of amazement (ἐξίστημι, existēmi; Marshall 1978: 896). When some of the women with the disciples went to the tomb, they did not find Jesus. The travelers are not impressed by the women's report, only astonished by it. They represent perplexed doubters. What had happened to Jesus' body? The recent news is also part of their discussion.[12]

24:23 The women did not find Jesus' body (an allusion to 24:5–11). They saw a "vision" (ὀπτασία, optasia; elsewhere in Luke only at 1:22; Michaelis, TDNT 5:372) of some angels, who said that Jesus was among the living (24:5). The present tense λέγουσιν (legousin, they say) describes the angels, while the report is summarized with a present infinitive (ζῆν, zēn, to live). While the present tense is normally used for reported speech, the effect of the two present tenses together draws attention to Jesus' being alive and repeats the report with a freshness that a past tense in either location would have lessened (BDR §88.1.2). Of course, the issue is whether the report will be believed. The Emmaus travelers are perplexed but not yet convinced.

24:24 The women's report did get a reaction: some of the disciples went to the tomb and found it empty just as the women said (24:9–11). Campenhausen (1968: 61) argues that this text shows that the women did not see Jesus as John 20:11–18 suggests, but this makes the text say too much. Luke has simply been selective (Osborne 1984: 234).

A note of doubt ends the summary by the Emmaus travelers: the disciples who went to the tomb did not see Jesus (24:12). Luke here notes that more than one disciple went to the tomb, which agrees with John 20:3–10. This difference suggests that Luke is stringing together pieces of tradition into a unified account.[13]

To those now walking unknowingly with Jesus, the decisive piece of empirical evidence was lacking, an appearance by Jesus (Marshall 1978: 896: “but him [αὐτὸν δέ, emphatic] they did not see”; Fitzmyer 1985: 1565: “no one saw him”). They are like modern people in their skepticism. Only the presence of the raised Jesus would convince them of what happened. The irony of the narrative is that they are in the midst of what they desired and what the others had not experienced (Tiede 1988: 435). The story is told so that the reader shares the irony. The travelers’ report of recent events ends with a note of pathos, though the reader knows that the emotions are uncalled for, since the reader already knows that Jesus is with them (24:15–16). These travelers are aware that unusual events have taken place, but unfortunately the decisive evidence was lacking.

They are about to find out what Luke's readers already know.

ii. Jesus' Response (24:25–27)

24:25 Jesus responds with rebuke. The interjection ὦ (ō, O!) usually indicates great emotion (BAGD 895 §1; BAA 1785 §1; BDR §146.1.2; Luke 9:41; Acts 1:1; 13:10; Rom. 2:1, 3; 9:20; Gal. 3:1; 1 Tim. 6:20; James 2:20). The rebuke expresses great disappointment and recalls Luke 24:5–7 where the angel gave the women at the tomb a similar reaction. Their failure, according to their new companion, is one of foolishness (ἀνόητος, anoētos; BAGD 70; BAA 139; elsewhere in the NT at Rom. 1:14; Gal. 3:1, 3; 1 Tim. 6:9; Titus 3:3) and slow-heartedness (βραδύς, bradys; BAGD 147; BAA 293; elsewhere in the NT twice at James 1:19). They do not believe the prophets, which Jesus will rectify when he explains the Scriptures to them (Luke 24:27).[14] Later he will do the same for the disciples (24:44–47; Marshall 1978: 896). In short, the resurrection's reality should not have been hidden (9:45; 18:34), but now the veil is being decisively removed (Dillon 1978: 133).

Jesus emphasizes that there is much OT teaching on this, and so he speaks of "all" (ἐπὶ πᾶσιν, epi pasin) that the prophets have spoken. The various speeches in Acts where Jesus is proclaimed from the OT indicate what texts are in view here; key among such texts are Deut. 18:15; Ps. 2:7; 16:8–11; 110:1; 118; and Isa. 53:8 (Bock 1987). Other summary references to the OT occur in Luke 24:44–47 and Acts 3:19–21.

24:26 Jesus' summary is very much like 24:7 and his earlier passion predictions. Using a rhetorical question that expects a positive reply (note οὐχί, ouchi, not), Jesus states what the travelers should have known from the prophets: that it was necessary for the Christ to suffer and come into his glory. Jesus has pushed the prophetic description of his travelers (24:19) into messianic categories. The use of ἔδει (edei, it was necessary) is a major Lucan theme and also recalls 24:7 (Grundmann, TDNT 2:22, 24; BDF §358.1; BDR §358.1.2; see the exegesis of 24:7). The theme of suffering is drawn from Ps. 118, Isa. 53, and the lament psalms that portray the righteous sufferer (e.g., Ps. 31, 69; Danker 1988: 393). The remark anticipates Luke 24:46 (cf. 9:22; 17:25; Acts 3:18; 17:3; 26:23). The consensus is that first-century Judaism did not anticipate a suffering Messiah (Fitzmyer 1985: 1565–66; Marshall 1978: 896).[15] Nonetheless, Jesus says that the OT prophets had such an expectation. Here is where Christian and Jewish messianic expectation and eschatology differed greatly.

The newly emphasized element in the summary is the idea of entry into glory. When δόξα (doxa) does not refer to praise in Luke, it refers to either the majesty or authority of Jesus: at the transfiguration (Luke 9:31–32), in his current rule (Acts 7:55), or at his return (Luke 21:27). Resurrection means reception into heavenly authority. Historical or prophetic summaries of Jesus' career usually discuss the resurrection after speaking of Jesus' suffering. Here the emphasis on glory is a focus on Jesus' position and authority, not just his coming to life. Such glory exists now for Jesus and looks to its manifestation in return (21:27). The emphasis here is on his entering glory, so that the exalted nature of his current position is stressed. This theme recalls the transfiguration (9:31) and the discussion about Jesus' exodus (9:26). The pointing to glory anticipates the emphasis on resurrection and exaltation mentioned in the speeches of Acts (2:30–36; 3:19–21; 4:10; 5:30–31; 10:41–43; 13:32–36).[16] Glory refers to the splendor of being in God's presence or, in Jesus' case, at God's side (Fitzmyer 1985: 1566; Marshall 1978: 897; Exod. 14:4, 17–18; 16:7, 10; Ps. 26:8; 72:19; Isa. 43:7; 58:8; 60:1–2; Luke 21:27; Acts 7:2, 55; Phil. 2:5–11; 1 Tim. 3:16; 1 Pet. 1:11, 21). Jesus is not only alive, he rules. He has entered (εἰσελθεῖν, eiselthein; Acts 14:22) into his glory, which means that he has been raised to reign next to God, just as he promised at his trial (Luke 22:69; 23:42–43). As such the background of the remark is Ps. 110 and Dan. 7:14. The great manifestation of that glory is yet to come (Luke 21:27), but Jesus has now emerged from the dark night of his suffering. The man that the Emmaus travelers are walking with is no mere disciple or pilgrim; he is a regal visitor.

24:27 Jesus explains the things taught about the Christ from all the Scriptures (διερμηνεύω [diermēneuō; BAGD 194 §2; BAA 390 §2] is used elsewhere by Luke at Acts 9:36 [interpreting a foreign name] and 18:6 [interpreting Scripture (variant reading)]). He teaches the OT in the new era (see Koet 1989: 56–72 for Luke's terms for interpretation). The comprehensiveness of the teachings is underlined in several ways: from “all” (πάντων, pantōn) the prophets he explains “all” (πάσαις, pasais) the Scriptures, and Jesus starts from (ἀρξάμενος, arxamenos) Moses and goes to all the prophets (“Moses and all the prophets” is a traditional phrase: 1QS 1.3; 4Q504 [= 4QDibHama] 3.12; Matt. 11:13; John 1:45; Nolland 1993b: 1205). This figure (called zeugma) describes the discussion’s scope: he went through the entire Scripture, front to back (Creed 1930: 297; Luce 1933: 361). Both the former and latter prophets are meant, since the Hebrew Scriptures are in view (Luke 16:31; Acts 26:22; 28:23; Fitzmyer 1985: 1567). The starting point in Moses was perhaps a text that Luke himself later notes: Deut. 18:15 (Acts 3:22; cf. 7:35).

That all Scripture points to Jesus is something that Luke likes to stress (Luke 24:45; Acts 17:2, 11; 18:24, 28; Schrenk, TDNT 1:752; Marshall 1978: 897). Luke sees continuity in God’s plan—not surprise or parenthesis. The Scripture teaches much of what Jesus did in his first coming (Luke 24:44–47 and the speeches of Acts, especially those of Peter and Paul in evangelistic contexts). In making this point, Jesus appeals to two types of prophetic fulfillment. Texts that are directly prophetic refer only to Jesus, while typico-prophetic texts reflect patterns that Jesus reenacts and escalates to show their fulfillment or their eschatological inauguration at a new level. This combination of texts shows that Jesus fulfills some things now, while he fulfills others things later (see Bock 1987 for details of the hermeneutic behind this use of OT texts; see Kimball 1994 for a solid form-critical analysis of these texts in terms of Jewish hermeneutical structures of argument). Jesus begins opening eyes that had been closed, as the rebuke sets up the revelation (9:45; 18:34; 24:16, 31; Tiede 1988: 436). He has not revealed himself yet, but he is opening up the truth as preparation for his self-revelation.

c. Meal and Revelation (24:28–32)

i. The Meal (24:28–29)

24:28 As the travelers draw near their destination, Jesus "pretended" (προσεποιήσατο, prosepoiēsato; BAGD 718; BAA 1438) to go on (πορρώτερον, porrōteron; BAGD 693 §2; BAA 1390; BDR §62.3.4). Marshall (1978: 897) argues that "pretend" is too strong, although Plummer (1896: 556) notes Mark 6:48 and 7:27 as comparable. The basic idea of προσποιέω is “to act as if” something is going to happen. To “pretend” suggests that Jesus was hoping to stay with them and not journey on. It seemed as if the meeting was over, but the travelers’ sensitivity and interest change the situation (on this kind of invitation in the OT, see Gen. 18:3; 19:2).

24:29 The travelers do not wish Jesus to go on, so they urge him (παρεβιάσαντο, parebiasanto; BAGD 612; BAA 1238; elsewhere in the NT only at Acts 16:15; cf. Gen. 19:9; 1 Sam. 28:23; 2 Kings 2:17; 5:16; Plummer 1896: 556) to stay with them.[17] John uses μένω (menō) in a theological sense to call people to remain or abide in Jesus, but Luke’s usage is an example of the term’s common meaning. The reason (ὅτι, hoti, for) the travelers ask Jesus to stay with them is that evening approaches (ἑσπέρα, hespera; BAGD 313; BAA 634; elsewhere in the NT only at Acts 4:3; 28:23; cf. Gen. 8:11; Exod. 12:6; Num. 9:11; Jer. 6:4; Zech. 14:7), the day is almost spent (κέκλικεν, kekliken; BAGD 436 §2; BAA 888 §2; cf. Jer. 6:4; Luke 9:12), and perhaps it is unsafe to travel at night (Fitzmyer 1985: 1567; Plummer 1896: 556). Jesus “came in to remain with them,” language that is similar to Rev. 3:20 (Grundmann 1963: 447; Marshall 1978: 897–98; Ernst 1977: 663; Gen. 24:55; Judg. 19:9; Tob. 10:8; Luke 7:36; 11:37; 19:5; John 1:38; Acts 16:15).

ii. Jesus' Revelation (24:30–31)

24:30 The travelers still do not know who Jesus is as he reclines at the table with them to share a meal of fellowship, which is described in a worshipful, liturgical way:[18] he takes bread, offers a blessing, breaks the bread, and gives it to the travelers.[19] The language recalls the feeding of the five thousand (9:16) and the last supper (22:19; cf. 24:43).[20] Why Jesus serves as host for the meal (seen in his giving the blessing) is not clear. Was he the oldest or was it out of respect for his scriptural exposition that he was asked to bless God? The detail seems to indicate that his hosts knew he was someone special, but just how special he was remains to be seen.

This meal is not a reenactment of the Lord's Supper since there is no wine and nothing is said over the elements (against, among others, Nolland 1993b: 1206). The imperfect ἐπεδίδου (epedidou, he was distributing) does not indicate continued distribution of the bread (Plummer 1896: 556). Neither is this the messianic banquet, though it may anticipate this decisive banquet meal that takes place in the eschaton after the gathering of all the saints.[21] The meal simply pictures Jesus as raised and present with his disciples in fellowship.

24:31 Everything changes as the travelers' earlier discussion about what happened to Jesus is resolved. The veil is lifted from their eyes, and they realize with whom they are eating.[22] The expression "their eyes were opened" is unique in the NT. The theological passive διανοίγω (dianoigō, to open; BAGD 187; BAA 375) is used with a variety of objects: womb (Luke 2:23), Scripture (Luke 24:32; Acts 17:3), mind (Luke 24:45), heaven (Acts 7:56), heart (Acts 16:14; 2 Macc. 1:4), ears (Mark 7:34–35), and eyes (Luke 24:31; Gen. 3:5, 7; 2 Kings 6:17). The travelers recognize Jesus. Luke uses language that reverses what was said about their lack of recognition in 24:16.

Just as quickly, Jesus vanishes from them (see Fitzmyer 1985: 1568 and BDR §211.1.1 on this use of ἀπό, apo). Ἄφαντος (aphantos, no longer visible) appears only here in the NT (BAGD 124; BAA 250).[23] With the revelation that Jesus lives, his visible presence is no longer necessary. Dillon (1978:

155) rightly notes that the appearance displays continuity between the Jesus of earthly ministry and the raised Jesus who sits over the church. Jesus can personally minister to anyone after his death and resurrection.

iii. The Men's Response (24:32)

24:32 The men's reaction almost reflects an absence of surprise. They were excited earlier when they heard Jesus expound the Scripture and they suspected that someone unusual was in their presence, but they had no idea who he was. Now that they know, it makes sense. Their initial remark is stated as a rhetorical question that expects a positive reply (οὐχί, ouchi, not). Their hearts were burning (καιομένη, kaiomenē; BAGD 396 §1b; BAA 804 §1b) within them as Jesus spoke to them.[24] His exposition gave them intense emotion and excitement. The idiom to light a fire under someone might be comparable to this only NT use of καίω with this figurative force.[25] They had great excitement and comfort at hearing the Scripture opened up to them in this way (διήνοιγεν, diēnoigen; BDR §101.54; cf. Luke 24:31; Acts 17:2–3). They sensed that something special was happening, but only after their eyes were opened could they see why this man had opened up the Scriptures so clearly to them. They had been treated to a rare tour of the OT and received insight into God's plan as a result.

d. Report to Disciples (24:33–35)

24:33 The travelers are anxious to pass on the news of what they have discovered. The disappointment that the disciples had not seen Jesus has been reversed by Jesus himself. So they return to Jerusalem, a note that makes clear the journey to Emmaus had started in Jerusalem even though 24:13 lacked such a detail. They undertook the journey fairly quickly (αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ [autē tē hōra, at that hour] is a general time marker that means "fairly soon after").[26] The idiom may suggest that the travelers did not necessarily return that night, a point often used against the account's historicity because of the distance to Emmaus and the time of day, but simply that they returned relatively quickly. It is possible, even probable, they did return in the same evening, but the wording need not have that force.

Upon arriving in Jerusalem, they find the Eleven gathered together (ἀθροίζω, athroizō, BAGD 21; BAA 40; a NT hapax legomenon; cf. 11:29; Marshall 1978: 899). The reference to the Eleven, a collective term for the remaining apostles, raises the issue of Luke's relationship to John 20:19–29. If all Eleven were at the gathering noted by Luke, then why was Thomas not convinced until a week later (John 20:24–29)?[27] John implies that Thomas is not at the first gathering. The now-exposed Judas is absent for reasons that Acts 1:15–26 will make clear. Luke's note also makes it clear that neither of the two Emmaus travelers was an apostle. With the Eleven are an unspecified number of other disciples who had stayed behind in Jerusalem. The Emmaus travelers are ready to give their good news, but another report comes before they have the chance.

24:34 There is good reason for the disciples' excitement: Jesus has appeared to Simon Peter. Danker (1988: 395) argues that questions, not statements, are present, because of the remarks in 24:11–12 ("idle tale," "did not believe," "departed … wondering") and 24:41 ("while they still disbelieved for joy"). Thus Danker reads, "Has the Lord really risen?" "Did he appear to Simon?" But making questions out of this syntax is difficult. The incredulity of 24:41 is a literary way to express total amazement (Marshall 1978: 899). As with earlier scenes, what happened was not expected. Λέγοντας (legontas) refers to the gathered group (the Eleven and those with them in 24:33), which makes this a report given to the Emmaus travelers. The shift from the Emmaus travelers to the gathered group is so abrupt that codex D and Origen read λέγοντες (legontes, saying), making the report about Peter come from the travelers. The problem with this reading is not only its poor external attestation, but also explaining why these travelers would report an appearance to Peter when he is a part of the group to whom the appearance came (Creed 1930: 298). C. F. Evans (1970: 106–7) is so troubled by this note that he argues Luke inserted this remark. But the interruption of this additional sighting is a clever, appropriate literary twist. The report shows that Jesus is really among them, no matter where they are. It shows the surprising, comprehensive way in which the appearances came. Not only did Jesus provide evidence for his resurrection on the road; he did it in Jerusalem too. The excitement is so great that one report is interrupted by another. This appearance to Peter is also recorded in 1 Cor. 15:5, but no where is it detailed. There are numerous witnesses to Jesus' resurrection (Ernst 1977: 665; Luke 24:48; Acts 1:22; 2:32; 3:15; 5:32; 10:41).

The report stresses the word ὄντως (ontōs, indeed; BAGD 574 §1; BAA 1163; elsewhere in the NT at Mark 11:32; Luke 23:47; John 8:36; 1 Cor. 14:25; Gal. 3:21 and four times in 1 Timothy; the NIV more paraphrastically has “it is true!” which correctly underscores the emphatic position of the Greek word order). These reports bring reassurance that Jesus was indeed raised and had indeed appeared. Also significant is the remark that “the Lord” is risen. This use of the title κύριος (kyrios) emphasizes the risen Jesus’ authority. He is not only alive, he bears authority.

24:35 The second account of the travelers follows. Luke thus gives two sets of witnesses to the resurrection. They explain (ἐξηγοῦντο, exēgounto; BAGD 275; BAA 557; John 1:18; Acts 10:8; 15:12, 14; 21:19) about the journey and about Jesus’ revealing himself (ἐγνώσθη, egnōsthē) at the meal, thus recalling 24:16, 31. One can imagine the thoughts in the room during these discussions. What is God going to do next?

Summary

Luke 24:13–35 is one of the most vivid appearance accounts in the NT. The Emmaus journey is full of irony and reversal. Two disciples are despondent that the prophet and redeemer of the nation has been crucified. How can God possibly work through a crucified person? Unknown to them, the answer appears in their midst.

As the three walk and talk, the travelers reveal their disappointment. God has seemingly thrown a cruel curve at his people. The entourage's third member says that all is not lost. He rebukes the other two for lack of understanding, since there is another way to look at the events. He begins to explain how the Scripture teaches the necessity of Christ's glorification through suffering. These events are no surprise in God's plan but should be believed. God's word and work come together to show his vindication of Jesus. As the group nears their destination, the two ask their learned friend to stay the night. What the reader already knows is made clear at the meal: the man is Jesus and he has been raised.

The two are transformed by the knowledge of Jesus' resurrection and victory. They are so excited that they go out to tell the group in Jerusalem. But here too there is a twist; Peter has already seen Jesus. Jesus is present among them everywhere. Failure becomes fulfillment. Remorse is reversed in resurrection. Absence is presence.

For Luke's reader the account functions as a summary to provide assurance about resurrection. God can work through crucifixion because it is followed by resurrection. His promise remains, as his work makes clear. The curve ball has not been thrown to humankind but to death, sin, and Satan. The Lord is risen. He lives and is in their midst. God's plan has not been thwarted. The disciples are not abandoned, but commissioned. In a world where many do not know their place, identity, or purpose, the resurrection means that disciples can know that God is at work, that Jesus is alive in glory, and that death is not the end. A life of purpose and unending relationship with God is possible. In short, resurrection means that humans can have their proper place with God. Jesus is at God's side, and he is among them. All that is needed is to believe what God has promised.

The key is Jesus, who in resurrection reveals that life is worth living. He reveals that life is found in him. If God is at work in saving Jesus, then he is at work in his message about Jesus as well. The disciples are again to sit, listen, learn, and believe. Another “class” is about to begin, after which the sitting will stop and the mission will start. For from faith should come faithfulness and service. God’s word of promise to us should become a proclaimed word of hope to others.

Additional Notes

24:13. Codex D reads Οὐλαμμαούς (Oulammaus), a reading too poorly attested to be original. Oulammaus is otherwise unknown, unless it is a corruption of the LXX name for Bethel in Gen. 28:19; Creed 1930: 295.

24:13. The distance of Emmaus from Jerusalem is disputed. Most manuscripts (P^{75}, A, B, D, L, W, Δ, Ψ, family 1, family 13, Byz) read ἑξήκοντα (sixty) stadia (a stadia is 607 feet; thus 6.9 miles). A few manuscripts (א, Θ, 079) add ἑκατόν (hundred), making the distance 160 stadia or 18.4 miles. This reading, though poorly attested, fits the distance of the traditional site noted by Eusebius and Jerome (see the exegesis). Nonetheless, it is too poorly attested to be original.

24:17. Codex D lacks καὶ ἐστάθησαν (and they stopped) after Jesus' question. Other manuscripts (A^c, W, Δ, Θ, Ψ, family 1, family 13, Byz, Vulgate, some Syriac) replace it with καί ἐστε (and they are), so that Jesus asks why they are sad. Both variants are too poorly attested to be original (Marshall 1978: 894).

24:19. Some manuscripts (A, D, W, Θ, Ψ, family 1, family 13, Byz) read Ναζωραίου (the Nazarean). If this reading is original, then the travelers describe Jesus as a Nazarean. Since this is the more natural form, it is regarded as secondary because the UBS–NA's Ναζαρηνοῦ (of Nazareth) reading is more difficult (supported by P^{75}, ℵ, B, L, 079, 0124, and Vulgate). The difference does not alter the sense. Marshall (1978: 894) argues that the reference to this locale reflects the presence of tradition.

24:27. Many manuscripts (A, Θ, Ψ, family 1, family 13, Byz) read the imperfect διερμήνευεν (he was interpreting) rather than UBS–NA's aorist διερμήνευσεν (he interpreted; P^{75}, B, L, $ℵ^1$). A few manuscripts (e.g., ℵ*) read infinitival διερμήνευειν (to interpret), which would be epexegetical to ἀρξάμενος (he began) at the start of the verse. It is hard to be sure of the original reading, but the choice does not really alter the sense. An imperfect is slightly more vivid, but because the imperfect is commonly Luke's choice of tense the aorist is the harder reading.

24:32. The scribes of $\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, B, and D probably omitted ἐν ἡμῖν (in us) as redundant. It is original (Metzger 1975: 186).

24:34. Some manuscripts (A, W^{c}, Θ, family 13, Byz) place ὄντως (indeed) after κύριος. External attestation favors the UBS–NA order ($\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, ℵ, B, D, L, Ψ, family 1, many Itala).

3. Commission, Promise, and Ascension (24:36–53)

The close of Luke's Gospel reassures (cf. 1:4) by confirming the reality of Jesus' resurrection and by commissioning the disciples for their universal mission. The bodily character of Jesus' resurrection is stressed: he calls on the disciples to touch him and see that he is really resurrected, and he eats a meal with them so they can see that he is not a phantom or spirit. The major theological note in the unit is that crucifixion and resurrection are part of the fulfillment of God's plan. What happened to Jesus was neither perplexing nor unexpected. The table fellowship that the disciples now have with the resurrected Jesus reveals his presence in their midst. The Scripture taught that he would suffer and be raised and that a message of forgiveness of sins would go out to all nations as a result. Two of those elements have happened, one remains for the disciples to carry out.

The pericope ends with two notes that look to the future. Jesus commands the disciples to wait in Jerusalem for the coming of the Father's promise, the Spirit's bestowal. The power provided by the Spirit for the disciples' ministry of proclamation is the first of many salvation benefits. The Spirit is the enabler who makes it possible to minister boldly in the face of opposition, as will be seen many times in the Book of Acts. Jesus' final blessing and the disciples' response of worship, joy, and thanksgiving reflect the effect that Jesus' resurrection has on disciples. Disciples are to rejoice in what God has done in Jesus.

The note of universal mission is important as well. Luke makes clear that Jesus' ministry is for all, not just some. Gentiles like Theophilus (1:3) need assurance that their presence in a Jewish movement is proper. Conversely, Jewish believers need to understand that the expansion of blessing into Gentile horizons is appropriate. Jesus called the church to be generous with God's promise, and God will continue to prod the church in this direction when it is slow to take the message out to all (Acts 1–10). This theological defense of Gentile mission is one of the major themes of Luke–Acts. Gentile mission occurs alongside the proclamation to Israel—not at its expense.

Luke's Gospel provides two keys to this view of mission. First, Luke shows how Israel defaulted, at least temporarily, on its central role. It rejected Jesus and now faces judgment. Luke's case for this point was made especially in the journey narrative of Luke 9–19. Second, Luke argues christologically that Jesus is the promised Messiah-Servant-Prophet and, most important, Lord of all, glorified and seated at God's right hand. Not fully developed in his Gospel, this argument is completed in Acts 2:30–36 and 10:34–43. The linkage of Christology to Gentile mission can be seen in Peter's speech in Acts 10. Paul's mission, which is the burden of Acts 13–28, is the supreme example of a mission that consciously includes those outside of Israel.[1]

Theophilus and anyone else who reads Luke's Gospel can know that Jesus' death and the church's mission to preach Jesus to all were ordained by God. In short, Luke's Gospel and the Book of Acts are about the plan of a faithful and gracious God to redeem all races through Jesus. Virtually every pericope is aimed at getting the reader to see that Jesus is the issue and that he holds the key to the way of God. Even Jesus' death opened the door to heaven, as it provided the means by which he could sit at God's side in rule. From there the exalted Lord distributes the Spirit to those who turn to God in repentance and trust him as the one who holds God's benefits, who provides forgiveness, who leads the way into salvation, and who will return to exercise judgment.

The emphasis on Jesus' session at God's right hand troubles some who rightly note that Luke says little about Jesus' work on the cross for atonement of sin. Luke 22:20 and Acts 20:28 are the only explicit Lucan texts that describe Jesus' death in relation to sin. But Luke wishes to press beyond what Jesus' work on the cross means to who he is and how he works after resurrection.

Luke wants the new community to understand what its role is. He seeks to explain how believers are to live before the living Lord they serve. The Gospel and Acts are thus very pastoral in their goal. Here is what the new community is. Here is the Lord they believe. Here is what the Lord they serve told them to do. Here is how he told them to live. The burden of the Gospel is summed up in this commission and in the promise of the Spirit's coming as power from on high (24:44–49).

The unit has three parts: (1) Jesus' reassuring appearance to the group with his call to touch his resurrected body (24:36–43), (2) the instruction that all has happened according to God's promise, the commission to await the Spirit, and the promise contained in Jesus' earlier teaching and in the entire law, prophets, and psalms (24:44–49), and (3) Jesus' blessing and departure (24:50–53). The Gospel closes with the disciples thanking God continually in the temple. Just as the beginning of the promise started with an announcement to an old priest in the temple (1:5), so the conclusion of Jesus' ministry ends with a group of pious Jews gathered in the temple thanking God for what he has done through Jesus. In Luke 1, Zechariah was looking and praying to God for the hope of Israel; in Luke 24, the disciples find that hope and thank God for him.

Sources and Historicity

Much of the material in this pericope is unique to Luke, though 24:36–43 has some points of connection with John 20:19–23 (Aland 1985: §356). Many (e.g., Osborne 1984: 246–51; Dillon 1978: 159–63) see a specific sharing of tradition at this point (Fitzmyer 1985: 1573–74 finds minimal stylistic editorial work by Luke in 24:36–43).[2] Themes held in common with John are the physical proof of Jesus' resurrection, the element of doubt, and the greeting of peace. The major difference is that joy is an immediate reaction in John, while Luke speaks of joy in the midst of incredulity. Nonetheless, these look like similar traditions.

The Lucan use of a meal scene corresponds with his frequent use of such settings (e.g., 7:36–50; 14:1–6). The appearances noted in 1 Cor. 15:5, 7 may well allude to this appearance. In addition, the physical nature of the appearance recalls 1 Cor. 15:35–49, where Paul contrasts the resurrection body and the earthly body (Ernst 1977: 666). Some argue that an antidocetic strain is expressed in Luke's portrait of physical resurrection (Grundmann 1963: 449). Still others argue that the concern is broader: Luke wishes to establish an identity between Jesus' resurrection body and his earthly personhood and so brings a note of continuity to resurrection hope (Marshall 1978: 900; Osborne 1984: 248). Others deny a polemical role here since, in the OT and Judaism, angels have such encounters (Gen. 18; Tob. 12:19; Nolland 1993b: 1214–15). It is not clear, however, that these concerns are mutually exclusive, though it is hard on the one hand to argue from just this one scene that Luke's Gospel is primarily directed at countering Gnostics, Docetists, or their precursors, and on the other hand deny that a polemical function to this section is unlikely. This scene reassures that Jesus' resurrection is physical, a new kind of life reclaimed out of death (as in Acts 2:16–32, esp. 2:22–31).

The commission account of Luke 24:44–49 is similar to Matt. 28:18–20, but is expressed in distinct terms and with a distinct setting (Aland 1985: §365). Matthew's account occurs in Galilee; Luke's meeting appears to be on resurrection day outside Jerusalem (but Acts 1:1–11 suggests that it is forty days later; see also Luke 24:44, 50). Luke may be engaged in literary compression here, since he lacks any chronological notes to these remarks (which is similar to the Jerusalem journey section). The result is that 24:50–53 may be nothing more than a summarizing variation of Acts 1:6–11. (This latter point is likely even if Luke 24:44–49 is not part of the compression and belongs to the meal; see below.) Matthew speaks of empowerment and making disciples; Luke speaks of fulfilled teaching, preaching, and empowerment. These are distinct accounts of distinct events, which means that Jesus' command for the disciples to go to Galilee came early (Matt. 28:7), that they later gathered in Bethany, and that some forty days later they were told to stay in Jerusalem (Luke 24:44–53). Luke 24:44–46 looks to Jesus' past work, while 24:47–49 looks to the disciples' future mission.[3]

Fitzmyer (1985: 1580–81) notes eleven touches of Lucan expression in this subunit (cf. Jeremias 1980: 321–22), among them are "law of Moses" (Luke 24:44; 2:22; Acts 13:39 [13:38 Engl.]; 15:5), "all that was written" (Luke 24:44; 18:31; 21:22; Acts 13:29; 24:14), "Messiah shall suffer" (Luke 24:46), "in his name repentance for the forgiveness of sins" (Luke 24:47), "witnesses" (Luke 24:48; thirteen times in Acts), "what my Father promised" (Luke 24:49; Acts 1:4). Though the account is told in Lucan terms, the teaching merely emphasizes what the tradition already declared (Marshall 1978: 903–4). Jesus' predictions of his death suggest that he is fulfilling what was promised (17:25; 18:31–34). Mission statements about the Son of Man (e.g., Mark 10:45) have the note of design that Luke strikes here, but this material has come to Luke through tradition. Lucan emphases include the call to wait for the Spirit in Jerusalem and the idea of including the nations (but see Mark 13:10, which uses the typically Lucan δεῖ; Dupont 1979).

Since Luke is the only one to describe the ascension as an event, many (e.g., Lohfink 1971: 147–51) regard it as a Lucan creation (Dillon's evaluation [1978: 173–75, esp. n. 52] of Lohfink holds out the possibility that Luke is drawing on tradition).[4] This position argues that Luke likes to turn apparitions into departures, but he is quite capable of not making a departure an ascension (Luke 24:31; Acts 8:39).

Luke presents two versions of the ascension (Luke 24:50–53; Acts 1:6–11). The ascension in Luke happens in Bethany apparently on resurrection day, while the ascension in Acts occurs on the Mount of Olives apparently at the end of forty days of appearances. Nolland (1993b: 1225) argues that the forty days is symbolic (Gen. 7:17; Exod. 16:35; 24:18; 34:28; 1 Kings 19:8; 2 Esdr. [=4 Ezra] 14:23, 36, 42–45). There is no need to argue for symbol here since numerology is not associated with the timing of Pentecost itself. A popular solution to the differences in the versions argues for a literary repetition by Luke of a single event to achieve a link between Luke–Acts (Parsons 1987; Plummer 1896: 561, 564, who suggests that Luke 24 is a later event). This view is possible, given the lack of explicit chronology in Luke 24. Another less likely view is that Luke used distinct departure accounts to note Jesus' first appearance to the group and his last appearance to them all. In other words, the connection not only brackets Luke–Acts, but also brackets the appearances of Jesus in a transition period (Toon 1983–84; Toon 1984; Ellis 1974: 280).[5] Since Luke is the only Gospel writer to discuss the early history of the church, he is the only one to note the ascension, since for him it portrays vividly where Jesus went as he became mediator of divine blessings. The other Gospel writers need only mention resurrection, but Luke's continuing his account in Acts demands that his readers know what happened to the resurrected Jesus. Luke 9:51, 22:69, and 24:26 anticipate this event, but the idea of Jesus' reception into glory or being seated in glory is not unique to Luke (Matt. 16:27 = Mark 8:38; Matt. 24:30 = Mark 13:26; Matt. 19:28; 25:31; 1 Cor. 2:8; 2 Cor. 3:7–11, 18; 4:4, 6; 1 Pet. 1:11). Most NT passages relate to Jesus' future eschatological appearance, but he does not receive glory then, he comes with glory (e.g., Matt. 28:18). The ascension received attention in the early church (Barn. 15.9; Gospel of Peter 12.50; 13.55–56 [Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.225–26]; Acts of Pilate 16.6 [Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.520]; Tertullian, Against the Jews 13.23; Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History 3.5; Fitzmyer 1985: 1589).

The form of this material is debated. The farewell scene, which includes a commission, reminds one of the farewell meal in Luke 22. But the parallel is too broad to be really helpful. Conversely, the meal element in 24:36–43 is too brief to be considered the dominant form. This appearance has four elements in common with other appearance scenes: (1) a note of doubt before the appearance, (2) an explanation, which refers to Scripture or to what Jesus said in his earthly ministry, (3) an instruction or commission, and (4) a departure. There is no doubt that an appearance scene is present, which is designed to reassure about the resurrection (Fitzmyer 1985: 1574, 1581, 1586). Jesus does not function as a priest in Luke, despite the priestly blessing in the last subunit. His blessing is one of a teacher-prophet (cf. 6:20–26), since his commission displays his directing, executive authority.

The outline of Luke 24:36–53 is as follows:

a. Appearance at a meal (24:36–43)
   i. Sudden appearance (24:36)
   ii. Mistaken reaction (24:37)
   iii. First proof: Jesus' call to touch him (24:38–40)
   iv. Second proof: Jesus eats a meal (24:41–43)
b. Commission, plan, and promise of the Spirit (24:44–49)
   i. Jesus' words and the Old Testament fulfilled (24:44)
   ii. Jesus' instruction (24:45)
   iii. Three scriptural elements fulfilled (24:46–47)
   iv. Naming the disciples as witnesses (24:48)
   v. Command to await the Spirit (24:49)
c. Ascension (24:50–53)
   i. Jesus' blessing and departure (24:50–51)

ii. Reaction: worship, joy, and thanksgiving (24:52–53)

Jesus' appearance to all the disciples opens the last section of Luke's Gospel. The disciples' fear shows that they are still adjusting to the reality of the resurrection, so Luke stresses the appearance's physical characteristics. The resurrection represents the fulfillment of Jesus' words, God's plan, and the OT. Jesus' instruction enlightens all. There are three elements in the current plan: Jesus' suffering, his resurrection, and the proclamation of forgiveness of sins to all nations in his name. The church is to issue a call to repent so forgiveness can come. Jesus commissions the disciples as witnesses, promises the provision of the Holy Spirit, and gives a final blessing. The disciples' response is worship, joy, and thanksgiving.

Exegesis and Exposition

36While they were saying these things, ❒he❒ stood in their midst and said to them, "❒Peace to you❒." 37And as they were terrified and startled, they thought they were seeing ❒a spirit❒. 38And he said to them, “Why are you alarmed? Why do doubts arise in your ❒hearts❒? 39Behold my hands and my feet, for it is I myself. Handle me and see, for a spirit has not flesh and bones as you see that I have.” 40❒And having said this, ❒he showed❒ them his hands and his feet.❒ 41But while they were still unbelieving from joy and amazed, he said to them, “Have you anything to eat here?” 42They gave him a piece of broiled fish❒ ❒, 43and taking he ate in front of them.❒ ❒

44And he said to them, “These are my words that I spoke to you while I was still with you, that it is necessary for all things written about me in the law of Moses, the Prophets, and the Psalms to be fulfilled.” 45Then he opened their minds to understand the Scripture. 46And he said to them, “Thus it is written that the Christ is to suffer and to be raised on the third day, 47and there should be preached in his name repentance for the forgiveness of sins to all the nations, beginning from Jerusalem. 48You are witnesses of these things. 49And ❒behold❒, I am sending the promise of my Father upon you. And you stay in the city until you are clothed with power from on high.”

50And he led them ❒out❒ to the neighborhood of Bethany, and lifting up his hands he blessed them. 51While he blessed them, he departed from them ❒and was carried up into heaven❒. 52And they ❒worshiped him❒ and they returned to Jerusalem with great joy, and 53they were continually in the temple, blessing God.❒ ❒

a. Appearance at a Meal (24:36–43)

i. Sudden Appearance (24:36)

24:36 Jesus' final appearance is linked to the previous event by a temporal genitive absolute.[6] Luke 24:1, 13, 33 suggests a link to resurrection day. Events are coming fast and furious. Jesus stands in the midst of the disciples (cf. John 20:19).[7] He appears as quickly as he disappeared in Luke 24:31. The greeting is one of comfort, in which Jesus wishes them well (cf. John 20:19 and Luke 10:5; Dillon 1978: 187). God's blessing is invoked on the anxious disciples. Jesus offers the peace he promised to bring (Luke 2:14; 7:50; Acts 10:36; Marshall 1978: 901). Appearances to individuals are often followed by appearances to a group (Matt. 28:9–10, 16–20; John 20:11–18, 19–23; Marshall 1978: 901). Jesus appeared in a variety of settings (1 Cor. 15:5–11).

ii. Mistaken Reaction (24:37)

24:37 Jesus' appearance startles (πτοέω, ptoeō; BAGD 727; BAA 1456; elsewhere in the NT only at 21:9) and frightens (ἔμφοβος, emphobos; BAGD 257; BAA 520; elsewhere in the NT at Luke 24:5; Acts 10:4; 24:25; Rev. 11:13) the group. The disciples think they are seeing a "spirit" (πνεῦμα, pneuma), a disembodied person (cf. Luke 24:39; Acts 23:8–9; Heb. 12:23; 1 Pet. 3:19; Dan. 8:17; Tob. 12:16; on possible cultural expectations about someone called back from the dead, see 1 Sam. 28:3–19; Isa. 8:19; 19:3; 29:4; Nolland 1993b: 1213). Their fear is understandable since the group does not initially recognize Jesus and they are not expecting another appearance. The disciples are not operating with expectations of the miraculous.

iii. First Proof: Jesus' Call to Touch Him (24:38–40)

24:38 To calm the alarmed group, Jesus asks two questions. The first addresses their mood: Why are you alarmed (τεταραγμένοι, tetaragmenoi; BAGD 805 §2; BAA 1606 §2; cf. Matt. 2:3; 14:26 = Mark 6:50; Luke 1:12; John 12:27; 1 Pet. 3:14)? The presence of an unknown disembodied spirit would certainly be disturbing, so Jesus is trying to tell them that they should recognize who is present and what it means.

The second question concerns their lack of perception: Why do doubts arise in your hearts?

Καρδία (kardia, heart) is a figure for the response of the inner person (Ernst 1977: 667).[8] Since they were reflecting about the reports that they are discussing (διαλογισμός, dialogismos), they should realize, if only because of the timing, that Jesus is in their midst. Yet again the disciples are portrayed as slow to accept the resurrection. They do not expect Jesus to be raised nor do they expect him to keep appearing. As with most people, they have to be persuaded. The disciples are as skeptical as the rest of humanity.

24:39 Jesus calls on the disciples to confirm with their own senses that it is he. Doubt is met with revelation (Klostermann 1929: 240; Exod. 4:1–8; Judg. 6:36–40). In a scene paralleling John 20:19–23, 27, especially 20:20, Jesus tells them to look at his hands and feet, a probable reference to the marks of crucifixion. Only this passage and John 20:25 suggest that Jesus was nailed to the cross (J. Schneider, TDNT 7:574–75). This is indeed Jesus (Luke 22:70; John 6:20, 35, 48, 51; Tiede 1988: 440). In identifying himself, Jesus does so emphatically by using the personal pronoun αὐτός (autos, [my]self). The second ὅτι (hoti) is either causal ("handle me and see because no spirit …") or an indication of indirect discourse (“handle me and see that no spirit …”). An explanatory connection of reported thought or perception is more likely because the causal idea would relate grammatically to seeing and handling, but logically that connection cannot work. Jesus’ remarks about flesh and bone answer the doubts expressed in Luke 24:37.

In addition to their eyes they are to use their sense of touch. They are to handle (ψηλαφήσατε, psēlaphēsate) Jesus.[9] A disembodied spirit does not possess flesh and bones (ὀστέον, osteon; elsewhere in the NT at Matt. 23:37; John 19:36; Heb. 11:22) as Jesus has (Marshall 1978: 902). The density of his presence might not have been immediately evident, given the full clothing that ancient Palestinians wore. Luke 24:39 is the only text that describes the resurrected body as having flesh and bones. This is not a phantom or a vision (Ruth Rab. 6.1 on 3:8 says “spirits have no hair”; Nolland 1993b: 1213). It is the raised Jesus whose body has been brought back to life. It has characteristics of the physical body, though it carries those characteristics in a way that the old body could not (e.g., this new body will not perish and it can appear and vanish) and in ways that make his initial appearance startling, not the appearance of merely another disciple.

In experiential form, this is what Paul discusses conceptually in 1 Cor. 15:35–49, especially 15:41–44. Schweizer (1984: 376) sees Luke contradicting 1 Cor. 15:50. This conclusion is not correct. Paul's point is that another force is the key to the resurrection body; it is a "spiritual" body as opposed to a "soulish" body. This is why it is more than flesh and bone and can be immortal.[10] The resurrection body is flesh and bone transformed into a form that is able to move through material matter (Tiede 1988: 440: he "was embodied although his body was also altered").[11] There is no way to distinguish the person of Jesus from the risen Christ except that his existence now takes place at an additional dimension of reality. They are basically one and the same. A spirit has not taken his place, nor is he just a spirit. The person buried in the tomb is raised and transformed, but Jesus is sufficiently distinct in appearance that he is not always immediately recognizable. In his resurrected state, he clearly is transformed, though in a way that still leaves traces of his former existence (e.g., the nail prints in his hands and feet).

24:40 Touch confirms Jesus' presence. In fact, Jesus shows the disciples his hands and feet as a follow-up to his call to handle him. He is resurrected in a form consonant with his previous existence. The person before the group is Jesus. For disciples and readers alike, there should be no doubt that God has done a miraculous work.

iv. Second Proof: Jesus Eats a Meal (24:41–43)

24:41 The disciples "were still unbelieving," which can be taken in two senses. The first option is to regard these words as a continued statement of disbelief (so Dillon 1978: 192, in the tradition's original form). Despite the appearances and the remarks, the disciples still doubt because it is so unbelievable. The other option is to regard the remark as a rhetorical expression of amazement: they were incredulous in the sense that it was hard to believe this was really happening (Schweizer 1984: 376–77). In others words, this does not express doubt but overwhelming and paralyzing realization (the servant's response to Peter in Acts 12:14 shows a similar paralysis of natural action resulting from joy; cf. Livy 39.49). Luke uses θαυμάζω (thaumazō, to marvel) to express reaction to miraculous events or to teaching (cf. Luke 1:63; 2:18; 4:22; 7:9; 8:25; 9:43; 11:14; 20:26). The combination of joy and amazement suggests the second option:[12] if they really did not believe, they would not have joy. This event enhances their growing belief (so “great joy” in 24:52), and the meal and scriptural teaching will enhance their faith (Nolland 1993b: 1214–15).

Jesus removes all doubt and frees them from any sense of terror at his presence by asking for something to eat: “Do you have anything (τι, ti) edible here (ἐνθάδε, enthade)?”[13] A meal shows that it is Jesus and not a phantom, and it also indicates table fellowship and oneness.[14]

24:42 The food available was broiled fish (ἰχθύς, ichthys). Though this meal is similar to John 21:9, it is given under distinct circumstances and John calls the fish ὀψάριον (opsarion; lit., cooked meat). Some object to the presence of fish in Jerusalem, but this should not be seen as problematic (Marshall 1978: 903; Jeremias 1969: 20; SB 1:683–84; Neh. 3:3; 13:16).

24:43 The empirical evidence of Jesus’ resurrection is stated briefly: Jesus appears to them, speaks with them, and eats before them. Truly he is raised.

Appealing to the preposition ἐνώπιον (enōpion, in front of), Dillon (1978: 200–201) draws out a whole range of significance tied to table fellowship, while deemphasizing any concern by Luke about the risen body's physical substance. True, there is eating and acceptance by Jesus, but it is not clear that it is a shared meal (Dillon alludes to Acts 10:41, a connection that Plummer 1896: 561 notes but does not comment on). Dillon may be pressing the setting too much, especially in deemphasizing the importance of the meal for verifying the resurrection. Jesus enjoyed a meal in front of the disciples; he really is in their midst—that is the lesson Luke teaches by recording this appearance.

b. Commission, Plan, and Promise of the Spirit (24:44–49)

i. Jesus' Words and the Old Testament Fulfilled (24:44)

24:44 Jesus returns to the theme of Scripture fulfillment and the necessity of God's plan coming to pass.[15] Luke 24:44–47 is an elaboration on Jesus' rebuke of the two disciples for being slow to believe all the prophets had written (24:25). Plummer (1896: 561), Creed (1930: 300), and Marshall (1978: 904) see a break here in the passage's movement, even though the event seems to follow directly after the meal (the common particle δέ, de, indicates only the most basic kind of transition; it is not a clear temporal indicator). Yet the absence of a specific chronological note makes it possible that this event is later, especially given the thematic repetitions in Acts 1:1–11 (see the discussion of sources and historicity above). In this meeting, Jesus mentions that he had spoken of such fulfillment before his death (cf. 9:22, 44; 17:25; 18:31–33; 22:37; Klostermann 1929: 241; Creed 1930: 300; Marshall 1978: 905).[16] The key term is πληρόω (plēroō, to fulfill), which appears in several Lucan texts to refer to something anticipated in God's design that has come to pass (Luke 1:20; 4:21 [Scripture]; 9:31; 21:24; 22:16; Acts 1:16 [Scripture]; 3:18; 13:27 [the prophets]; Delling, TDNT 6:295–96; Marshall 1978: 905; cf. Acts 2:23). Luke commonly uses the perfect participle γεγραμμένον (gegrammenon, written) to refer to Scripture: Luke 4:17; 18:31; 20:17; 21:22; 22:37; 24:44; Acts 13:29; 24:14 (Schrenk, TDNT 1:748).

Jesus is the topic of Scripture (cf. Luke 24:25; Acts 13:29; John 5:39; 20:9; Fitzmyer 1985: 1582). The events of his life are thus no surprise; they are in continuity with what God revealed throughout Scripture. It is fair to say that Jesus sees himself and his career outlined in the sacred texts of old. For Luke, Jesus is proclaimed through prophecy and pattern (see also the exegesis of 24:47).[17]

To underline the comprehensiveness of the fulfillment, the three divisions of the OT are noted: law, prophets and psalms (this threefold division is also found in the prologue to Sirach [lines 8–10] and the epilogue to 4QMMT, line 10; Schrenk, TDNT 1:756). Luke likes to mention the law (Luke 2:22–24, 27, 39; 5:14; 10:26; 16:16–17, 29, 31; 20:28, 37; 24:27; and many times in Acts [e.g., 24:14]). The law promised a prophet like Moses (Acts 3:22). Though Messiah is not mentioned as a title in the Pentateuch, relevant promises about God's plan are present there (the only "anointed ones" in the law are the priests, Lev. 4:3, 5, 16; 6:22 [6:15 MT]; Fitzmyer 1985: 1583). The prophets are also a frequent topic in Luke (e.g., Luke 1:70; 16:16, 29, 31; 18:31; 24:25, 27; Acts 3:18, 21, 24; 10:43; 24:14). The prophets contain not only an exposition of the promised Anointed One (almost never with the title, but discuss an ideal rule and ruler) but a whole array of promises tied to God's activity in inaugurating and consummating his plan. Another major contributor to these themes is the Psalter, which is mentioned explicitly in Luke 20:42; Acts 1:20; 13:33 (Marshall 1978: 905). Prophetic texts from the Psalter appear in Luke 13:35; 20:17, 41–44; 22:69; Acts 2:25–28, 32–36; 4:25–27. It is not certain that this reference to the Psalter is intended to stand for the other writings in the Jewish canon outside of Moses and the prophets. It may simply refer to the Book of Psalms as a key contributor to these themes.

Fitzmyer (1985: 1581) denies that the OT precisely taught such things about Christ. But his remarks unduly limit his investigation to discussion of the Messiah theme. Because the scope of fulfillment is broader than just this one title, Fitzmyer misses how the unification of these ideas pulls together this theme in the progress of revelation from within the OT. In fact, Fitzmyer says that this perspective is one where the OT is placed in service to Luke's Christology. That these themes were retrospectively realized by the disciples as a result of Jesus' own life and teaching cannot be doubted. The Gospels indicate as much in texts like this one, where exposition was required to reveal the points in question (cf. John 2:22; 12:16). The disciples came to read the OT in this manner because of their exposure to Jesus. However, Luke's point is that Jesus is showing how the whole of OT teaching fits together as promise and how it was always intended to be seen in this way. The Messiah need not be mentioned everywhere in the OT because in Jewish belief the eschaton involved the Messiah in an era of ideal rule and hope. It is in this holistic sense that Jesus speaks of Scripture's references to the Messiah here, although he adds the one element that Judaism lacked: a suffering Messiah. Luke's threefold division is thus another way to say that all the OT teaches these things. This is the only place in the NT where this three-part division occurs. Jesus makes it clear that he is the subject of these Scriptures and that when it comes to God's promise, he is at the center of those events.

ii. Jesus' Instruction (24:45)

24:45 Jesus walks the disciples through the Scripture, functioning like a prophet in revealing God's plan (cf. 9:35). Luke's language is general, and Jesus specifies no particular texts, only the basic topic (24:46–47). Likely texts for such an exposition are those that were used for christological points in Acts (Ernst 1977: 669–70; Tiede 1988: 442; 1 Cor. 1:21–25; 2 Cor. 3:12–16). In Luke 24:31–32 the disciples' eyes and the Scriptures were opened (διανοίγω, dianoigō; BDR §392.12); here it is their minds that are opened to understand God's message, in contrast to the blindness of 9:45 and 18:34. What the disciples could not grasp before the crucifixion and resurrection now becomes clear (cf. Luke 24:25, 27, 32; Acts 16:14; 26:17–18; John 12:16; Fitzmyer 1985: 1583). God's activity in Christ makes scriptural sense after this personal exposition. It is responding to Jesus in belief that enlightens. The Spirit is not given here, as Plummer (1896: 562) argues (see Luke 24:49 and Acts 2). What is given is understanding and insight into God's plan. Since these disciples have witnessed God's plan and now understand it, they are commissioned to proclaim it (Osborne 1984: 130–31).

An important point for Lucan theology is found here: the kerygma grows out of divine design, not the other way around. Fitzmyer begins his fine biblical-theological survey (1981: 149) with the theme of proclamation, but more important to Luke is the theme of divine design, emphasized both in the infancy material and in this final Gospel scene (cf.

Acts 2:22–23; 10:41–43; 17:24–31). The divine design emphasizes the inevitability of these events. The suffering, resurrection, and entry into glory (Luke 24:25–27, 44–47) must occur because they are in God's design. The Lucan description of God's plan and of the history of salvation that he designed is probably the most fundamental category of Lucan theology (Bock 1994c: 87–102). What the disciples preach is a result of the plan's outworking. At the center of that plan is what God has done and will do in Jesus, the Christ. Assurance can come to the believer because a faithful God is in control of events and knows where things are going.

iii. Three Scriptural Elements Fulfilled (24:46–47)

24:46 Luke introduces the basic content of the Scriptural teaching on God's plan, summarized in three infinitives.[18] The first is that the Christ should suffer (παθεῖν, pathein; mainly used of Jesus in Luke's writings: Luke 9:22; 17:25; 22:15; 24:26; Acts 1:3; 3:18; 17:3; BAGD 634 §3a; BAA 1279 §3a). The Psalter plays a key role for the theme of the suffering of the innocent righteous (R. Brown 1994: 1453–55). Since this suffering had already happened, the details are known to the disciples and to Luke's readers. Such suffering was anticipated by God (Ps. 22; 31; 69; 118; Isa. 53), although the concept of messianic suffering seems not to have been a part of first-century Jewish expectation. Even the disciples struggled to understand how it fit into God's plan. Yet in many ways it is the key to Jesus' career, for in it came the opportunity to deal with the issue of the forgiveness of sins and, as Luke will say in Acts 20:28, to purchase a church with his own blood.

The second infinitive is ἀναστῆναι (anastēnai, to rise).[19] Luke is clear that the promise is of a quick resurrection, since the usual Jewish hope was of a resurrection on the last day. This hope is defended in Acts primarily on the basis of two texts: Ps. 16:10 and 110:1. With Jesus having suffered and having been raised by God, the message can go forward (on these themes in broader NT teaching, see Osborne 1984: 283–87). The disciples are currently experiencing this element of the hope, but there is more to the plan.

24:47 With the third infinitive, κηρυχθῆναι (kērychthēnai, to preach), the future of God's plan appears.[20] In this rich term are bound up the message's elements that the disciples are to take to the world. The message is broken down in detail, so that Luke's form of the great commission differs from the one in Matt. 20:18–20 and the general commission in the longer ending of Mark 16:15. The theme seems to parallel Mark 13:10 and Matt. 28:19.

The first element is that this message goes out in Jesus' name, which will be a major theme in Acts (Acts 2:38; 3:6, 16; 4:7, 10, 12, 17–18, 30; 5:28, 40; 8:12, 16; 9:14–16, 21, 27–28; 10:43, 48; 15:14, 26; 16:18; 19:5, 13, 17; 21:13; 22:16; 26:9; Bietenhard, TDNT 5:278). In the OT, the phrase indicates Yahweh's authority—authority that has now been transferred to Jesus, the mediator of God's promise. Baptism and other blessings come through his name (Acts 2:17–21, 38–39; 4:10). This important theme reveals the absolute authority of the glorified Jesus.

The goal of the message is that others might respond appropriately to Christ's activity: repent before God (see the exegesis of 5:32; on the possible Semitism, see BDF §207.1; BDR §207.1–2). Because repentance is rooted in the OT, it involves "turning," not just "agreeing" (which is what μετανοέω and μετάνοια can mean). For Luke, repentance is the summary term for the response to the apostolic message (Acts 2:38; 3:19; 5:31; 8:22; 11:18; 13:24; 17:30; 19:4; 20:21; 26:20). Change in thinking (i.e., a reorientation) is basic to human response to God's message. People must change their minds about God and the way to him, especially their thinking about sin, their inability to overcome sin on their own, Christ's essential role in forgiveness, and the importance of depending on him for spiritual direction. Those responding to the apostolic message of the gospel must come to God on his terms in order to experience the forgiveness that comes in the name of Jesus. But repentance means more than changing one's mind about God. People must also change their minds about who they are and how they can approach God. Repentance involves turning to and embracing God in faith. Forgiveness of sin comes to those who stretch out a needy hand to Jesus, clinging to him alone and recognizing that without him there is no hope. The OT base seems to be the plea in Joel 2:28–32 [3:1–5 MT] to call on the Lord, along with the common prophetic call to repent and turn to God (Acts 2:17–21, 38–39; Rom. 10:9–12). In short, those who repent cast themselves upon God's mercy, grace, direction, and plan. In this way, spiritual healing comes through the glorified mediator, the Great Physician (Luke 5:31–32).

The message of hope tells of forgiveness of sins, although Luke does not develop the "how" of this message in Luke–Acts (Luke 1:77; 3:3; 4:18; Acts 2:38; 5:31; 10:43; 13:38; 26:18; only Luke 22:19 and Acts 20:28 address this issue). Forgiveness of sins enables one to come into relationship with God because the barriers caused by sin are removed. As a result one can experience God's enabling and transforming power, especially through the work of his Spirit. In short, forgiveness of sins brings the opportunity to leave the darkness and come into God's light (Luke 1:79; Acts 26:18; on other blessings such as righteousness, salvation, life, and the Spirit, see Bultmann, TDNT 6:216 n. 315).

The message of hope is to go to all nations (Isa. 42:6; 49:6; Luke 2:32; Acts 13:47). This is a universal message open to anyone from any nation. As Acts 10:36 puts it, Jesus is Lord of all humanity, Jew and Greek (also Rom. 10:12–13). This is the message of the prophets to all who believe (Acts 10:42–43; 26:22–23). The gospel message in Jesus' name knows no national or racial barriers. This message is no longer a Jewish message and hope; it is intended for all. It starts from Jerusalem (Luke 24:49; Acts 1:8), but is designed to go to the ends of the earth.

The contrast between this universal tone and the disciples' initial response is so striking and the controversy that this universalism brought to the church was so great that many do not regard this remark as authentic (Luce 1933: 364). The disciples initially stumbled over this element in Jesus' commission, seemingly assuming that Jesus meant the message was to go to Jews in every nation. While this would be a natural Jewish reading of this remark and a logical conclusion to draw from the international Jewish audience in Acts 2, it is not what Jesus meant. Only later (Acts 10–15) would the disciples see that this limited sense was inappropriate. One might argue that a major burden of Luke–Acts is to show that Jesus the Christ is Lord of all humanity, so the message of the gospel can go to all (Bock 1987: 259, 277–79; Bock 1994c). Acts depicts the working out of this commission, and Acts 10 in particular argues that the church took the message to all only because God made it clear that was what it was to do.

The mission will start (ἀρξάμενοι, arxamenoi; BDF §419.3; BDR §419.3.3) in Jerusalem (Acts 1:8). Jesus had gone up to Jerusalem to meet his fate (Luke 9:51–19:44, esp. 13:31–35), but now the direction reverses and the mission goes out from Jerusalem. It is time for the benefits of Jesus' death and resurrection to be proclaimed to all. Jesus is raised to God's right hand to distribute salvation's benefits on all who repent and come to him.

The key point of this passage is that everything from suffering to universal proclamation was predicted in the Scripture. This represents a strong emphasis on the continuity of God's plan, which is another major point of Luke's two volumes. While the NT argues that there are distinctions in God's plan (e.g., the difference between law and grace or references to Israel and all), one must not fail to note the emphasis on continuity in Luke. These events are no surprise. They are part of God's will. God always intended to offer salvation to all races through Jesus. God always intended that the Christ suffer and be raised. God always intended that the message of salvation in the name of the Christ be a call to repent for the forgiveness of sins. These are the fundamental aspects of God's plan.

One can also note the difference between this commission and those in Matt. 28:18–20 and Mark 16:15. Matthew's commission stresses making disciples, while noting Jesus' authority, the need to go into the world, and the importance of teaching obedience to all that Jesus taught. The commission, as stated in the longer (and probably secondary) ending of Mark, involves going into all the world to preach the gospel. Matthew's commission occurs in Galilee. Mark's setting lacks specifics. These are distinct traditions and events.

iv. Naming the Disciples as Witnesses (24:48)

24:48 Jesus defines the disciples' role in light of what they have seen fulfilled from the Scripture. They are witnesses (μάρτυς, martys; BAGD 494 §2c; BAA 1002 §2c) of these things (for the syntax, see BDR §252.5).[21] The concept of witness will become an important theme in Acts (Acts 1:8, 22; 2:32; 3:15; 5:32; 10:39, 41; 13:31; 22:15, 20; 26:16). The verb μαρτυρέω (martyreō, to witness) is also used with this sense (Acts 23:11), and it often speaks of divine witness to the disciples' testimony (Acts 14:3; 15:8). The disciples can testify to these events because they have seen them (Dillon 1978:

215–16, 291–92). Such events involve Jesus' passion, resurrection, teaching, and work (Nolland 1993b: 1220). Luke's commitment to the historicity of events is made clear here. Acts 1:8 reintroduces the concept and calls on the disciples to function as witnesses to the things Jesus did and taught. The remaining disciples required Judas's replacement to be a witness, especially of the resurrection (Acts 1:22; cf. the link of tradition and eyewitnesses in Luke 1:1–2; Bock 1991d). The speeches in Acts can be seen as examples of such testimony. In Jesus' absence, these disciples are to proclaim the message of God's work in Jesus. They have seen what Jesus did, and they have heard him open up the Scripture. Their faith is not just an ethic or a morality. It is the testimony of God's activity in history. Through Jesus, God personally reaches out to humankind in these events.

v. Command to Await the Spirit (24:49)

24:49 Jesus gives two instructions to his witnesses. First, he declares the coming of the Father's promise. By calling God "my Father," Jesus emphasizes their intimate relationship, which is also seen in Jesus' mediatorial role. The Spirit is the Father's promise, but Jesus says, "I will send" (ἐγὼ ἀποστέλλω, egō apostellō) him, thereby indicating that he has authority over the Spirit's distribution. This intermediary role for Jesus fits Peter's description of the Spirit's distribution at Pentecost (Acts 2:30–33). Jesus is the mediator of salvation's benefits and promises. As a result of his resurrection, he has authority over salvation. He is the channel through whom God's promises of salvation are provided.

When Jesus speaks of the Father's promise, he can only have one thing in mind—the Holy Spirit (see esp. Acts 1:4–5 and the contrast to John's baptism [Luke 3:16]). Acts 1:8 picks up this promise, speaks of receiving power, and names the Spirit as the gift. The disciples will "be clothed with power from on high" (Luke 24:49), and the Spirit will "come upon" them (Acts 1:8). The gift that Jesus promises from the Father is the Spirit in believers. The Father's promise is also the OT's promise (Joel 2:28–32 [3:1–5 MT] as cited in Acts 2:17–21; Marshall 1978: 907 lists Acts 1:4, 2:33; Gal. 3:14; Eph. 1:13; Luke 3:15–17; Nolland 1993b: 1220 adds Isa. 32:15; 44:3; Ezek. 39:29). Marshall is uncertain whether the promise reflected in Luke 12:12 is Jesus' or that of the OT. Given the contextual emphasis on divine design and fulfillment, the ultimate reference must be the OT (it is a both/and issue). The reason Jesus could issue a promise like that in Luke 12 and call the promise of the Spirit the Father's promise here is because God made it long ago. According to the NT, this is the promise of the new covenant (Jer. 31:33; Ezek. 36:26–27; Acts 2; 2 Cor. 3; Heb. 7–10). This permanent indwelling is a bestowal of power that enables believers to give evidence of God's presence, to appreciate the will of God (John 14:25–26; 16:12–15; 1 John 2:27). The Spirit's coming represents the inauguration of the kingdom blessings promised by the Father in the OT. Pentecost will be the beginning of God's new work in promise that eventually will manifest itself in the church (Acts 11:15). The Spirit's bestowal represents the earnestness of God's commitment to believers (Eph. 1:14; 2 Cor. 1:22; 5:5). The Spirit is also the key to what God gives. Paul can call the gospel the display of God's righteousness because the Spirit is the agent who enables the believer to live righteously, while God righteously deals with the issue of sin and its penalty (Rom. 3:20–21; 8:1–16; cf. John 3:1–21 [tied to Ezek. 36:24–27]). The Spirit's transforming and enabling ability is why Paul can speak of the gospel and the cross as the “power of God” (Rom. 1:16–17; 1 Cor. 1:18–31). Jesus does not detail here all that the Spirit provides. He simply notes that the promise is coming; the rest of the NT develops the depth of that promise.

This leads to Jesus’ second instruction: the disciples are to go to Jerusalem and wait to be clothed from on high (καθίζω [kathizō, to sit] means “to stay” in Acts 18:11; 1 Chron. 19:5; Neh. 11:1–2; Marshall 1978: 907). The image of being clothed is a traditional one that both Paul (Rom. 13:12–14; 1 Cor. 15:53; Gal. 3:27; Eph. 4:24; 6:11, 14; Col. 3:10, 12; 1 Thess. 5:8) and John (Rev. 15:6; 19:14) utilize. The OT also knows the image (e.g., 1 Chron. 12:18 [12:19 MT]). The NT image refers to various gifts that God makes available for believers to “wear” in their daily walk, but Gal. 3:14 shows the close connection to the realization of the promise of the Spirit.

The reception of this enablement will empower believers, which is why Jesus speaks of the Spirit’s coming as power from on high (Grundmann, TDNT 2:310–11; Schweizer, TDNT 6:407 n. 487). Πνεῦμα (pneuma) and δύναμις (dynamis) are almost synonymous terms since power is what the Spirit supplies (Mic. 3:8; Luke 1:17, 35; 4:14; Acts 1:5, 8; 6:8; 10:38). Here it is empowered testimony that is in mind (Acts 2:17–21; Osborne 1984: 135; Marshall 1970: 91–92). When Luke uses δύναμις, he usually has in mind the power to overcome evil forces, whether by miracles or by God's authority that comes through the Spirit (Luke 1:17; 4:36; 5:17; 6:19; 9:1; 10:13, 19; Acts 1:8; 2:22; 3:12; 4:33; 6:8; 8:13; 10:38; 19:11; Marshall 1970: 91–92). In Luke 9:1 it is tied to gospel preaching, the kingdom, and power over demons and disease. Word and works are the product of the Spirit. In addition, the Spirit enables boldness to declare God's message (Acts 1:8). This special gift of enablement is what disciples are to await in Jerusalem.

c. Ascension (24:50–53)

i. Jesus' Blessing and Departure (24:50–51)

24:50 The final scene of Jesus' ascension is told briefly. Luke first notes the locale: Bethany (elsewhere in Luke only at 19:29).[22] Broad NT usage suggests that the term is traditional (Matt. 21:17 = Mark 11:11; Matt. 26:6 = Mark 14:3; 11:1, 12; 14:3; John 1:28; 11:1, 18; 12:1). Though no time frame is given, the ascension seems to be on the same day as the other events (the connective is the general, nontemporal δέ, de, and or then). The location of this departure into heaven is seemingly different from that in Acts 1: the Mount of Olives. But this consideration is not decisive in distinguishing the two scenes since the two locales overlap: Bethany is on the eastern side of the Mount of Olives (Mark 11:1). Other reasons that some challenge the unity between Luke 24 and Acts 1 are the event's apparent timing and the possible allusion to this event in Acts 1:2 before the departure in 1:9–11.[23] My view is that these texts deal with a single event, but it is possible that Luke pictures the two departures as an inclusio bracketing Jesus' beginning appearance and his final appearance (Ellis 1974: 279; Tiede 1988: 444; Osborne 1984: 137–38).

Regardless of the choice, Jesus greets the disciples with peace (24:36) and departs after blessing them (εὐλογέω, eulogeō; elsewhere in Luke at 1:42 [twice], 64; 2:28, 34; 6:28; 9:16; 13:35; 19:38; 24:30, 51, 53). The act of raising hands and bestowing a benediction adds a note of solemnity and closure to the proceedings. There is no need to read into this act a "final" departure. Benedictions are often given to close significant occasions, and the commissioning of the disciples is such a time. Many compare this scene with the action of Simon II, the high priest (Sir. 50:20–21), and note that Jesus is acting like a priest here (Grundmann 1963: 453–54; Ernst 1977: 672).[24] But Luke lacks an emphasis on Jesus as priest (Fitzmyer 1985: 1590; Nolland 1993b: 1227). When Jesus offers beatitudes in Luke 6:20–26, he is speaking as a prophet-teacher, not as a priest. The benediction's content is not noted. Jesus' last act in the Gospel is his commending his disciples to God's care in benediction. God is watching over them.

24:51 There is something different about this moment. Jesus' blessing is not a normal benediction because of what follows. While he is blessing them, he departs. The numerous Western paintings that show Jesus' hands raised in blessing as he ascends attempt to depict what Luke describes here. The verb for the departure is rare: διΐστημι (diistēmi) is used only by Luke in the NT (Luke 22:59; Acts 27:28; BAGD 195 §1; BAA 393 §1).[25] The departure of supernatural figures is often noted by Luke (Luke 1:38; 2:15; 9:33; 24:31; Acts 10:7; 12:10; cf. Gen. 17:22; 35:13; Judg. 6:21; 13:20; Tob. 12:20–21; 2 Macc. 3:34; Marshall 1978: 909).

Luke is the only one to portray Jesus' departure to heaven (see the additional note). The act is a vindication of Jesus, for it represents the fulfillment of the prediction made at his trial that "from now on" the Son of Man would be seen at the Father's right hand (22:69). Jesus was convicted and put to death for making an offensive claim, but the ascension shows that the claim was true and that the execution was unjust. The claim of sonship was not rejected by the Father; rather the Son was received to the Father's side. The ascension is testimony to Jesus' mediatorial authority (Acts 2:30–36). The evidence of the presence of such authority is the Spirit's outpouring, as Peter's speech about the "witness" shows in Acts 2.

The ascension is not just a departure; it is also an arrival. The ascension may be the end of Jesus' earthly ministry, but it is the beginning of his heavenly reign and the precursor to the initial distribution of salvific benefits. To this portrait Heb. 2–3, 7–10 will add the note of an intercessory ministry, to which 1 John 2:2 also alludes.[26]

ii. Reaction: Worship, Joy, and Thanksgiving (24:52–53)

24:52 The entourage returns to the city worshiping Jesus, the first time this point is made in Luke (see the additional note). Such worship is not surprising, given the exposition that has taken place and their increased understanding of Jesus' role in God's plan. It shows a key shift in the disciples' appreciation of Jesus. Scripture, Jesus' word, and heaven's testimony have led to a deepening awareness of Jesus. The return to Jerusalem might have occasioned prayer and singing as well, though these are not mentioned. Accompanied by great joy, the return to Jerusalem pictures obedience to Jesus' instruction.[27] Both Jesus' birth and his departure bring joy (2:10; Marshall 1978: 910). Luke's Gospel ends where it starts: in Jerusalem.

24:53 The disciples return to Jerusalem and go to the temple. The Gospel events end as they began: at the temple. Luke's Gospel has gone from a priest unexpectedly participating in the arrival of God's promise to disciples expectantly awaiting the inauguration of God's blessings. Luke notes that they were continually at the temple (διὰ παντός, dia pantos; BDR §223.3.3; the phrase elsewhere in the NT at Matt. 18:10; Mark 5:5; Acts 2:25; 10:2; 24:16; Rom. 11:10; 2 Thess. 3:16; Heb. 2:15; 9:6; 13:15; Marshall 1978: 910). The Gospel ends with a note about the disciples' piety (Acts 2:46; 3:1; 5:42; Weinert 1981). In the temple, they are blessing God (εὐλογοῦντες, eulogountes; see the exegesis of 24:50; see Metzger 1975: 190–91 on the textual problem). God is to be praised for the blessings that come in Jesus. Luke's final note is that, as the disciples await the arrival of the Father's promise, God is to be praised for his work in Jesus Christ the exalted Lord.

Summary

Luke 24:36–53 emphasizes the reality of Jesus' resurrection and how it fits into God's plan. Jesus provides physical evidence of his resurrection when he asks the disciples to handle him and confirms it when he eats with them. He shows his acceptance of them by sitting at the table with them.

Jesus then reminds his disciples that all these things about the plan were promised in the OT. The events of the Christ's passion and resurrection were not surprising. Specifically, three elements are highlighted: Jesus' suffering, his resurrection, and the preaching of repentance in his name for the forgiveness of sins to all the nations. Jesus reminds the disciples that they are witnesses of these things. In addition, the Father's promise, the Holy Spirit, will be sent to them in Jerusalem, where they are to await the promise. That event commences the bestowal of salvation benefits from the hand of the risen, exalted Jesus, who sits at God's side. Finally, Jesus departs with blessing, and the disciples return to Jerusalem, worshiping Jesus and blessing God for his grace.

Luke desires his readers to see that the resurrection is real. He wants them to understand that God's plan goes on. That plan and promise are now realized in the new community God has formed in the disciples that come from every nation. This community is going to be equipped to carry out a task until the consummation of promise comes in Jesus' return.

In fact, Luke's ending is an open ending. The disciples' wait for the Spirit begins the second volume of his writings, where Luke details the new community's activity under God's direction. The end stresses the certainty and continuity of God's plan, along with an attitude that is to accompany the recognition that God is at work. That attitude is worship, joy, thanksgiving to God, and preparation to take the message to others. Luke's readers are to identify with the disciples. The resurrection may be perplexing, but it is real. God's plan is not off course; it is right on schedule. The church is not to withdraw or be silent, but to penetrate the world, seek the lost, and care for those in need. Disciples are not to be passive; they are to be alive as well as full of joy and thanksgiving for what it means to know the resurrected Lord.

This final scene is a commission from the Lord, who was always at the center of God's promise. The accomplishing of this promise required that Jesus suffer, but God raised and seated him at his side. This same promise calls disciples to take the message of God's hope to the ends of the earth. Luke's believing readers are to see that after the Gospel and its sequel comes a life of mission that reflects and proclaims the hope that God created through Jesus. God has given his message to those who know him, along with provision to proclaim that message. If Luke's readers do not know Jesus, they are to see that Jesus' resurrection means they must respond to him. God has acted in history through Jesus. The Gospel's ending is open ended because it portrays Jesus reigning at God's side, while the disciples rejoice in the knowledge that this authoritative Jesus cares for them. Such is the opportunity for blessing that Jesus brings. Such is the disciples' call as they bear the message of hope to all races. He is alive and in their midst, offering hope and blessing to those who will come to him. Now it is time for all to decide where they stand.

Additional Notes

24:36. Some manuscripts communicate the correct sense by naming Jesus as the subject of the sentence: ὁ Ἰησοῦς is found in A, W, Θ, Ψ, family 1, family 13, Byz, some Syriac, and Vulgate; it is omitted in P^{75}, ℵ, B, D, L, 1241, Itala, and some Syriac. The harder reading is the omission, which is supported by the Alexandrian-Western alliance.

24:36. The greeting "peace to you" is lacking in codex D and the Itala but is otherwise attested overwhelmingly. Although many (Plummer 1896: 559; Luce 1933: 363; Creed 1930: 299) omit the greeting on the basis of the shorter-reading rule, it should not be omitted since it is so well attested (see Dillon 1978: 183 and Aland 1965–66: 207–9 for full discussion). Codexes P, W, 579, Vulgate, and some Syriac add the more explicit, “It is I. Do not be afraid.” This additional greeting, which may be based on John 6:20, is too narrowly attested to be original.

24:37. Codex D has φάνταςμα (phantom) instead of πνεῦμα (spirit), but it is too weakly attested to be original (cf. Matt. 14:26).

24:38. The textual issue surrounding καρδίᾳ (heart) is the difference between a collective singular ($\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, B, D, Itala) or a plural (most manuscripts). The plural may well be original, though the singular is the more difficult reading and reflects Lucan style. There is no real difference in sense between the variants.

24:40. The originality of 24:40 (another of the debated Western noninterpolations in Luke 24) is disputed. Codex D, the Itala, and some Syriac lack the verse, but external evidence is overwhelmingly for inclusion (all other manuscripts, including $\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, have it). Only the shorter-reading rule can be invoked for omission, but it is not certain that this rule applies to a variant involving a whole verse. Some regard the text as added by a scribe to bring a tighter connection to John 20:20, 25, 27 (Plummer 1896: 560; Klostermann 1929: 241; Luce 1933: 363). But these factors are not strong enough to argue for omission, especially since there are variations of wording with John 20:20, which speaks of hands and side, not hands and feet (Dillon 1978: 183–84). Those who argue for inclusion suggest that the verse was omitted by a scribe because it seemed to repeat 24:39 (Metzger 1975: 187; Fitzmyer 1985: 1576).

24:40. The UBS–NA text has ἔδειξεν (he showed; $\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, ℵ, B, L, N, family 1, 33, 1241), but manuscript evidence for ἐπέδειξεν (he showed) is broad (A, W, Θ, Ψ, family 13, Byz). On the one hand, Luke's preference for prefixed forms may mean that ἐπέδειξεν is original (it appears in Luke 17:14; Acts 9:39; 18:28 and only four times in the rest of NT; Marshall 1978: 902), especially since an error of sight could have produced the shorter text. On the other hand, the prefixed verb in Luke 24:42 may have caused a scribe to use a prefixed verb here. There is no difference in meaning. External evidence favors the shorter form.

24:42. At the end of the verse, some manuscripts (Θ, Ψ, family 1, family 13, Byz, Itala, many Syriac) add καὶ ἀπὸ μελισσίου κηρίου [or κηρίον] (and from a honeycomb [or, a honeycomb from a beehive]). Most Alexandrian and Western manuscripts ($\mathfrak{P}^{75}$, ℵ, A, B, D, L, W, one Syriac manuscript), however, mention only fish (Nestle 1910–11). Plummer (1896: 561) argues against the additional detail. On the symbolism of the combination of fish and honey in the early postapostolic church, see Grundmann (1963: 451) and Ernst (1977: 668). In the early church, honey was associated with baptism and the Lord's Supper (Metzger 1975: 187–88; cf. Ps. 119:103, where it is compared to God's word).

24:43. With varying wording, a few manuscripts (K, family 13, Θ, Vulgate) add a reference to Jesus' distributing the rest of the meal to the disciples, but the witnesses are too few to regard this detail as original to Luke (cf. Ignatius, Trallians 9.1).

24:49. There is debate whether ἰδού (behold) should be in the text, but it is the best attested reading with good manuscript distribution. If it is not original, then the text reads καὶ ἐγώ (and I) (P^{75}, D; Marshall 1978: 906–7).

24:50. Ἔξω is omitted by P^{75}, ℵ, B, C*, L, 1, 33, and some Syriac, most likely because it looked redundant. It has some attestation (with ἕως in A, W, Θ, family 13, Byz; by itself in D), however, and is the more difficult reading, because of the repetition of similar letters and the imprecise reference to the area outside Bethany.

24:51. Codex ℵ*, D, and most Itala lack καὶ ἀνεφέρετο εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν (and he was carried up into heaven). If this omission is original, then we do not have an ascension here, since Jesus is said only to be taken from them, which happened in 24:31 (cf. Philip's departure in Acts 8:39). The attestation for omission is too thin to indicate originality, though the case for omission here is stronger than for the other Western noninterpolations in Luke 24.[28] Internal evidence, however, speaks for the originality of the phrase.

First, Acts 1:2 assumes an ascension here, something that is not clear if this phrase is lacking. Second, Marshall (1978: 909) notes that ἀναφέρω (to carry up) is not the normal verb that the early church used for ascension. A copyist inserting the verb would likely have used the more common ἀναλαμβάνω (to take up). Third, the three-part structure that dominates these verses is also Lucan (Metzger 1975: 189–90; Epp 1981: 135–36). Fourth, there is no doctrinal explanation for the addition.

24:52. Codex D, the Itala, and some Syriac lack the phrase προσκυνήσαντες αὐτόν (worshiped him)—the last Western noninterpolation in this chapter—while all other manuscripts include it. Some wish to exclude the phrase because it attributes worship to Jesus at a very early stage (this is Luke's first mention of the concept; cf. Mark 5:6; 15:19; Matt. 2:2, 8, 11; 8:2; 9:18; 14:33; 15:25; 18:26; 20:20; 28:9, 17). Attestation for the phrase is strong, and it should be accepted as original.

24:53. Some manuscripts (A, B, C^2, Θ, Ψ, family 13, Byz) add a liturgical ἀμήν (so be it) at the end of the Gospel. Since a distribution of manuscripts (P^{75}, ℵ, C*, D, L, W, 1, 33, most Itala) lack the ending, it is not original.

Excursus 11

Last Supper: The Nature and Timing of the Meal (22:7–13)

Most scholars acknowledge that Jesus had a “final meal” with his disciples at which significant events and sayings took place.[1] What kind of meal was it though, and when was it held? Bound up in this discussion is one of the most complex chronological issues in the NT. Two questions surround the problem. (1) What kind of meal did Jesus and the disciples have: a Passover meal, another type of special meal, or a regular evening meal? (2) How is the date of the meal to be reckoned? The clear impression from the Synoptics is that Jesus eats a Passover meal as the date moves from Nisan 14 to Nisan 15. On the other hand, John appears to have Jesus eat the meal the day before Passover, since Passover preparation begins while Jesus is on the cross. Many pit Luke 22:7= Matt. 26:17 = Mark 14:12 against John 18:28, where Jewish guards hesitate to enter Pilate’s pretorium for fear of defiling themselves for the Passover meal. How can this be if the meal was already eaten? Related to this is the possibility that different calendars—one popular, the other official—were in use. If so, what is the evidence for them, which one was used, and where?

When it comes to the meal's nature, one study stands out: Jeremias's magisterial Eucharistic Words of Jesus, which has set the course for discussion about the meal's nature.[2] Arguments that the last meal was a Passover supper operate at three evidentiary levels: direct (no. 1), circumstantial (nos. 2–7), and questionable (nos. 8–12):

1. A direct claim for a Passover meal comes from Mark 14:12 = Luke 22:7, which explicitly links the meal to Passover preparation (see also Matt. 26:17). These texts provide the most fundamental factor in the discussion. In fact, if it were not for John's details, esp. 18:28, this matter would probably not be debated at all.
2. Jesus made an effort to hold the meal in Jerusalem, the required location for a Passover meal (Mark 14:13 = Matt. 26:18 = Luke 22:10; John 18:1). Many pilgrims stayed in tents near the city in order to meet this requirement (Josephus, Jewish War 2.1.3 §§10–13; m. Pesaḥ. 5.10; 7.12–13; 10.1–3). During this time the population of Jerusalem (normally 30,000) swelled with the addition of 85,000–125,000 pilgrims (Jeremias 1966: 42).

3. Like the Passover meal, this meal is held in the evening and extends late into the evening, rather than at the normal mealtime of late afternoon (Matt. 26:20 = Mark 14:17; John 13:30; 1 Cor. 11:23; Exod. 12:8; Jub. 49.1, 12). In t. Pesaḥ. 2.22 [= Neusner 1977–86: 2.123–24]) the eating of the lamb is obligatory on the first night.
4. Like the Passover meal, the bread is eaten in the middle of the meal and not at the start (Mark 14:20, 22 = Luke 22:19–23).
5. Judas's departure does not cause surprise because it is thought that he is either going for last-minute supplies for the evening meal or to offer alms to the poor (John 13:29). (This is more inferential than the other arguments.)
6. Like the Passover meal, this meal ends with the singing of Hallel Psalms (ὑμνήσαντες, having hymned, in Mark 14:26 = Matt. 26:30). Such singing did not occur after normal meals.
7. The interpretation of the meal's elements recalls the Passover. It was customary during the Passover meal to describe the significance of certain items (Exod. 12:26–27; 13:8; Deut. 26:5– 11; m. Pesaḥ. 10.5). Jesus' discussion of the bread and wine is parallel to this ritual.

8. That the meal is limited to the Twelve indicates a Passover meal. This number is close to the minimum number of ten required for the meal. It is not entirely clear, however, that the meal was limited in size or that Jesus usually ate with a larger group.
9. Reclining at the meal is said to favor a Passover meal (Mark 14:18; John 13:23, 28). But the Passover meal is not the only meal where this occurred, so this point is of limited value.
10. The meal is observed with levitical purity (John 13:10). But such washing is common at meals, so not much can be made of this point. It should be noted, however, that Jesus' disciples did not always wash for meals (Mark 7:2).
11. The presence of red wine is said to be unusual and marks the Passover, where four such cups were required (Mark 14:23, 25; m. Pesaḥ. 10.1). Once again, this detail is not peculiar to the meal and so is inconsequential.
12. The decision not to leave Jerusalem is said to reflect the desire to stay in the city on Passover night. Jesus had been returning to Bethany each night before this evening, so his staying in Jerusalem is seen as fulfilling Passover requirements. This detail fits the Passover, but need not show it was present.

While no one piece of the circumstantial evidence (nos. 2–7) is conclusive, taken together with the Synoptic statements, they support the presence of a Passover meal. Items 8–12 are congruous with a Passover meal, but cannot establish its presence. Nonetheless, in the direct and circumstantial claims, there is a strong suggestion that a Passover meal is present.

Objections to this view are based on issues raised by the biblical text (nos. 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 10) and through strictly historical (nos. 2, 4, 6, 8) concerns. I list the claims from less impressive to more compelling. Claims 9 and 10 have the most substance.

1. Some suggest that because ἄρτος (bread) is used and not ἄζυμος (unleavened bread), a Passover meal—which required unleavened bread—cannot be intended. The problem with this argument is that ἄρτος is sometimes used of unleavened bread (Exod. 29:23; Lev. 7:12; 8:26;

Num. 6:15; Josephus, Antiquities 3.6.6 §143; 8.3.7 §90; Jewish War 5.5.5 §217).

2. The early church celebrated a meal regularly—not annually—a schedule that differs from the Passover. The Lord's Supper is not, however, a recreation of the Passover meal; elements of it were new, so that an annual repetition is not required.
3. There is no explicit reference to the Passover lamb or bitter herbs. This is disputed, however, for the lamb is alluded to in Mark 14:12 = Luke 22:15 (also 22:7).
4. The order of elements does not follow the Passover meal, since (a) the bread is broken and then blessing follows, (b) individual cups were used at Passover, not a common cup, and (c) each guest had his own dish of bitter herbs. Of these three objections only the second has possible merit (Marshall 1980: 63), though the issue of how the cups were circulated at the meal is not clear from rabbinic materials (m. Pesaḥ. 10.2, 7). Did a fixed prescription exist before the second century?
5. Mark 14:2 mentions resolve not to arrest Jesus during the feast. Thus Jesus would not be arrested on feast night. But this remark was made before Judas's offer. The rationale for this hesitation was the fear of popular revolt, which Judas removes. Given the possibility of a private arrest, this resolve melted in the face of golden opportunity. Another reply to this objection is that Luke 22:6 should be interpreted only as a resolve not to arrest Jesus in the midst of the festal crowd.

6. Some see m. Pesaḥ. 8.6 relating the custom of releasing a prisoner before the meal as a picture of forgiveness. Barabbas's release therefore shows that the meal has not been eaten yet. But there is no extrabiblical evidence (1) of this Roman practice, (2) that m. Pesaḥim refers to this practice, or (3) that it follows the Jewish calendar (see R. Brown 1994: 814–20 for a full treatment). One should be careful, however, about assuming that such a practice would be noted extrabiblically; for example, R. Brown (1994: 815) notes how little we know about Pilate's procedures in Judea. He suggests that the release may be equal to the venia, a Roman pardon for an individual, but Brown expresses uncertainty about such a custom, while I prefer to take the testimony of the text as it is. Barabbas may have been released late since part of Pilate's motivation in this case was to free Jesus. The timing of Barabbas's release does not appear to be dictated by habit but by impulse, so the timing can prove nothing (see also the exegesis of 23:25).

7. Two Pauline texts show that Jesus was crucified while the Passover lambs for the meal were slaughtered: 1 Cor. 5:7 describes Jesus as a Passover lamb, and 1 Cor. 15:20 alludes to Jesus as the firstfruits from the dead. The argument is that these texts show Jesus crucified when the lambs were slain and raised at the beginning of firstfruits, that is, on the "day after the Sabbath" (Lev. 23:9–14). But there is no indication that either of these metaphors intends to make a point about the timing of Jesus' death. Paul's concern is only with the theological image.
8. The early Christian Quartodecimanians fasted on Nisan 14 to memorialize the date of the Supper. More recent evidence (Epistula Apostolorum 15 [26]; A.D. 140–70) shows that this fast extended into Nisan 15, so this point has become inconclusive (Marshall 1980: 65; Jeremias 1966: 122–25).

9. The chronological data associated with John's Gospel provides a more substantial objection to the presence of a Passover meal: John 13:1 ("before the Feast of the Passover"); 18:28 (soldiers did not want to enter Pilate's pretorium so as to not defile themselves before Passover); 19:14 ("the preparation of the Passover"). It is possible, however, to explain each of these Johannine texts in light of the Passover-meal view. First, John 13:1 may apply not to the meal's timing, but to when Jesus knew his hour had come. Another, more likely suggestion is that Jesus' act of love, the footwashing, occurred before the Passover, that is, right before the meal that began the official festal week. Second, the difficulty of John 18:28 is bound up in the calendar issue (Carson 1984: 531). The least likely suggestion is that events delayed the meal since there were limits as to how late one could eat it (m. Pesaḥ. 10.9; m. Zebaḥ. 5.8). More likely, John's mention of uncleanness on Passover refers to other festal meals associated with Passover week, specifically the Ḥagigah, the feast on the first paschal morning (Num. 28:18–19). If one sees the entire Passover festival in view here, then this explanation makes sense. Nonetheless John 18:28 still requires a look because of the Jewish calendar issue it raises (see below). Third, the question of John 19:14 is not as difficult. This verse can be read to mean “preparation for the Sabbath, which fell on the Passover feast” and thus refer to a Friday (Marshall 1980: 70; Carson 1984: 531–32).[3] In this sense the point is not Passover-meal preparation, but preparation associated with other meals of the Passover week.

10. The final objection involves the claim that the arrest and trial do not fit a festal Passover day. As many as ten activities are seen as incompatible with Passover (Jeremias 1966: 75–79), three being particularly crucial: trial, death on a feast day, and burial. On the trial, Marshall (1980: 65) notes that this is a problem for either view, since such trials were prohibited on both feast day and the preceding day. As such, this objection seems to have merit no matter how one views the event’s timing. But it is also clear that the Jewish authorities thought Jesus’ situation so unusual and the opportunity to deal with him so great, that they acted as quickly as possible and changed intentions related to the feast. In addition, false prophets were supposed to be executed before all the people as a lesson, so what better time than Passover (Deut. 18:20; 17:13; Jeremias 1966: 78–79)? More important, since the decisive trial that condemns Jesus is Roman, one could argue that the Romans would not be bound by Jewish practice. In fact, for a Roman procedure to dictate when Jesus' death occurred would underline Roman responsibility for the decisive act, a point that could be exploited later if charges of Jewish responsibility were made. Concerning execution on a feast day, it is suggested that the presence of two criminals with Jesus (Luke 23:32) shows that his situation was not a special case for Rome. The Jews may have argued that they were helping their rulers along and that the condemnation belonged to the foreign authorities. These events fit a Roman setting. Once an execution was scheduled, the Romans carried it out efficiently, slaying all on "death row."[4] The burial is less problematic since the law permitted exceptions to burying on a > feast day where individual laws conflicted. An executed criminal's body was not to be left hanging overnight, and this took precedence over festal cleanliness (Deut. 21:22–23).

Thus, though some weighty objections exist as to the nature of the day, they are not sufficient to overturn the likelihood that Jesus was observing a Passover meal. All objections can be adequately explained.

But a potentially significant problem remains: the date of the meal (and the related calendar issue). My conclusion above was that the Synoptics correctly describe a Passover meal and that John can be reconciled to that understanding. But what if that explanation is wrong? What options do we have if the Synoptics have the supper on Nisan 15 and John has it on Nisan 14? The first four views argue that either the Synoptics or John is wrong. Views 5–10 appeal to differing calendars or practices related to the Passover meal (frequently some variation in the religious calendar among various groups). The last approach takes a literary approach to what is taking place. The final seven approaches attempt to put together all the data in a single package. For each view, I present the option and then assess it.

1. The data is irreconcilable. After laying out all the data, Fitzmyer (1985: 1381–83) states that harmonization runs “roughshod over the long-accepted analyses of so many of the passages involved according to form critical methods that it cannot be taken seriously.… In this regard it [the search to harmonize] manifests an unmistakably fundamentalist concern.” This explanation contains more rhetoric than substance. Form criticism has not been around long enough to be able to occupy a pontifical position on interpretation, and many of the various solutions, though older than form criticism, rest on concerns that fall outside the scope of that discipline.[5] This conclusion merely shows a bias against harmonization.
2. John is closer to being correct, the Synoptics are wrong, and the supper was not a Passover meal (Fitzmyer 1985: 1378–82, who argues that the meal was eaten just before the Passover and so quickly became associated with it). On this view, the Passover meal was an understandable product of early church reflection on the event, given the proximity of the two events. But this view makes it hard to determine what type of meal the disciples ate or to explain some of the meal's details. Other meals are usually posited in place of Passover. The Kʿiddush meal was a meal of sanctification associated with the Sabbath or feast day (Jeremias 1966: 26–29). Jeremias's examination shows that this term is not applied to a meal at all, but it is merely a blessing. This option is, to use Jeremias's description, "wholly illusory." The Hʿaburah meal was a special meal of religious solemnity that could be held at any time among Jewish friends. Jeremias replies that all meals had such significance and that this category is an "ad hoc conjecture for which there is absolutely no evidence." Fellowship events like this were not just random meals, but were tied to certain events (e.g., circumcision, betrothal, wedding, funeral) where such meals were required by commandment (Jeremias 1966: 29–31). A third possibility appealing to Essene or Essene-like meals is also rejected by Jeremias (1966: 31–36).

3. The Synoptics are right, John is wrong, and the supper was a Passover meal (Jeremias 1966: 79–83, esp. 82). Jeremias claims that the Johannine accounts are of mixed character, with some reflecting a Passover meal and others not. This kind of careless mixture of perspective by a Jewish author is unlikely. Either he intends a Passover meal, or he does not. On such a key issue of background, why would John vacillate?

4. The ambiguity results from a "theological motive": John knows that the last meal was a Passover, but for theological reasons he portrays Jesus as a Passover Lamb (Moo 1983: 318–23). This literary approach offers a clear rationale. Is the lamb imagery in John necessarily chronological? Might it be used merely as a metaphorical description like the later Pauline text 1 Cor. 5:7? Given the traces of evidence for a Passover meal in John, the metaphorical option is more likely than the chronological one (as with the Pauline imagery). Rejecting this approach assumes that the earlier explanation of the other Johannine texts (John 18:28; 19:14) is correct. This option is possible, but it is subtle.
5. Jaubert (1965) argues that Jesus celebrated the meal early, probably on Tuesday (see Ellis 1974: 249). According to this view, Jesus used a solar calendar like that in the Book of Jubilees and at Qumran, where Passover always occurred on Tuesday evening, in contrast to the official lunar calendar that celebrated the meal on Thursday–Friday. This hypothesis has received much careful attention, but it has several problems. First, there is no clear evidence that Jesus followed such a sectarian calendar, whereas the temple schedule was clearly regulated by an official lunar calendar, as the Gospels seem to clearly locate the Passover close to the Sabbath day (e.g., Luke 23:55–56). In addition, all the accounts are clear that Jesus was arrested the same night as the meal and that he was crucified on the next day. One could appeal to literary "telescoping," but none of the sources suggest this (this in fact is view 11; Nolland 1993b: 1024–26). The impression is that once Jesus was arrested, events moved like lightning. An early arrest would also mean that Jesus did not teach many days in the temple, as he suggests upon his arrest (Luke 22:53). But the fatal objection to this view is that Jesus must celebrate a meal with a lamb slain by the priests at the temple two to three days early (Marshall 1980: 73–74; Fitzmyer 1985: 1380; Beckwith 1979–81; VanderKam 1979; P. Davies 1983).

6. To deal with all the sacrificing required for the Passover, Chwolson (1908: 20–44) argues that lambs were slaughtered in the evening between Nisan 14 and Nisan 15, except when Nisan 15 was on the Sabbath. In this view, the slaughter was brought forward twenty-four hours and Jesus (and the Pharisees) celebrated Passover on Nisan 14, while the Sadducees celebrated on Nisan 15. This view also has problems. First, in the first century, lambs were slain in the afternoon, not in the evening (Marshall 1980: 71; Jeremias 1966: 21–23).[6] Second, Passover lambs were not to be kept overnight, which is what the Sadducees would have had to do, if they followed mishnaic procedure (m. Suk. 5.5) and the Torah (Exod. 12:10). Since the Sadducees were literalist about the Torah, this is unlikely. Third, it is unlikely that Jesus would have celebrated Passover on Nisan 13–14, when the law said Nisan 14–15 (Hoehner 1977: 82–83).
7. Billerbeck argues that the Sadducees and Pharisees had different calendars because of differing renderings of Lev. 23:15 (SB 2:812–53; Marshall 1980: 71–73).[7] This affected how the fifty days to Pentecost were counted and led to a debate about what the “day after the Sabbath” meant. Pharisees considered the festival as Passover and started their count the day after Passover, while Sadducees argued that Sabbath meant Sabbath and counted from the first Sunday after the Sabbath after Passover. The Sadducees, who were anxious for Nisan 16 to fall on a Sunday so Pentecost also would be on a Sunday, placed Nisan 14 on a Friday. One first-century group, the Boethusians, is known to have set the calendar this way. The reason for such flexibility in setting the days was to keep on a lunar calendar. Pharisees started Nisan 14 a day earlier so that two consecutive Passover days resulted. The Synoptics recorded this Pharisaic practice, while John went with the Sadducean. This position is developed by implication and circumstantial evidence only; there is no direct evidence for or against it. The major difficulty is arguing two separate days for Passover celebration when no such explicit discussion exists in ancient Jewish records for this holiday.

8. Pickl (1946: 120–22) argues for a regional calendrical distinction to deal with all the sacrifices over a two-day period. Under this view, the Galileans slew their lambs on “official” Nisan 13, which produced a rest day in Galilee (m. Pesaḥ. 4.5), while the Judeans followed a day later. Jeremias (1966: 24) and Marshall (1980: 71) note that there is no evidence for this view.[8]

9. Hoehner (1977: 85–90) argues that the start of a day was reckoned differently: sometimes from sunset (Exod. 12:18), sometimes from sunrise (Num. 14:14). Hoehner cites examples of variations within the same author. This view combines with Billerbeck’s to argue that the Synoptics figured Passover on the Galilean sunrise-to-sunrise model, which the Pharisees also followed. John followed the Sadducean, Judean sunset-to-sunset model, which enabled him to make a theological point and follow one reckoning of the Passover. There were two days of slaughter and Jesus observes a Passover meal. This Johannine reckoning means that the lambs slain after Jesus’ meal as he dies on the cross are for the Sadducees. The timing of Jesus as the Passover lamb is thus a matter of perspective. Hoehner notes that there is no explicit evidence for two days of slaughtering, and Marshall

(1980: 74) adds another cogent objection: if the sunrise-to-sunrise reckoning is used, then the Galileans eat the Passover on Nisan 14, not Nisan 15 as commanded, since there is no change of day in the evening. The preparation and the meal take place on the same day, not on different days, as is commanded.

10. Carson (1984: 531–32) argues that all the Johannine passages fit the Synoptic chronology (see no. 9 above in the discussion of the nature of the meal). The key here is that John's references to "Passover" are not to the meal, but to other sacred meals that were part of Passover week. This is the most likely solution in my judgment, though if it fails to convince, the position of Billerbeck, view 7 above, is a likely alternative, as in view 4.

11. Nolland (1993b: 1025–26) argues that Mark and John have each taken different literary directions, which create the appearance of a problem. Mark's passion day is artistic, not a literal twenty-four-hour day, since there appear to be too many events for a literal day (Nolland estimates six hours for supper and three hours for each of the following: praying at Gethsemane, the arrest and Jewish hearing, Pilate's hearing, hanging on the cross before darkness, and three more hours until death). John on the other hand more tightly connects the Passover sacrifice to the cross because of their proximity to each other and the similarity of their significance. The major objection to this option is that the Synoptic and Johannine texts seem to preclude an arrest as early as Tuesday night (see view 5 above). This view also seems to overestimate the time required for certain events (e.g., Gethsemane and the various trials). As such, this approach is not likely.

My conclusion is that Jesus ate a Passover meal with his disciples on Nisan 15, Thursday night. This view corresponds to the data in John if the Johannine references to Passover mean the entire week of the feast (view 10), if one posits a distinct calendar operating in the Synoptics versus that in John (view 7), or if one reads John as speaking theologically (view 4). Either of these approaches show that each account renders the events variously in terms of the perspective taken—yet accurately within that perspective.

Excursus 12

The Jesus Seminar and the Gospel of Luke

In 1985 a group of scholars came together under the sponsorship of the Westar Institute to form the Jesus Seminar. Their goal was to determine precisely what teaching in the Gospels actually went back to Jesus. They determined to vote on each saying of Jesus with the following code (Funk and Hoover 1993: 36):

red	Jesus undoubtedly said this or something very like it pink	Jesus probably said something like this gray	Jesus did not say this, but the ideas contained in it are close to his own
black	Jesus did not say this; it represents the perspective or content of a later or different tradition

After years of labor, the results of their work were published amid much media attention in The Five Gospels: The Search for the Authentic Words of Jesus (Funk and Hoover 1993).

In this commentary I have tried to interact fully with the Jesus Seminar, which represents its findings as a "collective report of gospel scholars" who come from "a wide array of Western religious traditions and academic institutions" (Funk and Hoover 1993: ix). Of the seventy-four fellows in the seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 533–37), only a few represent an evangelical perspective. Even some outside evangelical circles have questioned whether this group is really representative of current NT scholarship (Hays 1994: 47). Regardless of the makeup of the group, the issues they raise deserve attention, which is why this commentary has given careful attention to their work, including specific examination of the rationale they take in each passage where sayings of Jesus appear in Luke. This excursus summarizes the results and examines them as a whole, while contrasting the approach of the seminar to my own. After examining the seminar's suppositions, what they call "pillars," I shall consider their emerging portrait of Jesus, simply noting where in the commentary I have challenged a given conclusion (all references to Lucan passages in this excursus refer to the appropriate discussion of sources and historicity).

About 555 verses (roughly one-third of Luke's Gospel) contain sayings material. The seminar printed 4% of this material in red type, 23% in pink, 22% in gray, and 51% in black. These percentages are fairly representative of the seminar's results in each of the Synoptics, since they concluded that 82% of the words in the Gospels ascribed to Jesus do not come from him (i.e., gray plus black; Funk and Hoover 1993: 5). Behind these results stand what their introduction calls "seven pillars of scholarly wisdom," a list of seven fundamental premises of the study (Funk and Hoover 1993: 2–5):

1. The distinction should be drawn between the historical Jesus and the Christ of faith.
2. The Synoptic Gospels are much closer to the historical Jesus than is John's Gospel.
3. The Gospel of Mark is prior to Matthew and Luke.
4. The hypothetical source Q represents the teaching tradition shared between Luke and Matthew.

5. The noneschatological Jesus of aphorisms and parables should be separated from the eschatological Jesus.
6. The oral culture of the Gospels does not work in the same manner as our modern print culture.
7. The burden of proof in Jesus studies lies with those who hold to historicity.

Numerous matters are obscured by these ways of stating the interpretive base. For example, what does it mean to say the Synoptics are closer to the historical Jesus than is John? History is not a static entity in which something is immediately obvious upon its being said or done. Sometimes it takes later events to clarify earlier events and utterances. A Gospel like John's thus represents a reflective portrait of Jesus, as seen in John's comments that "after he was raised from the dead, his disciples remembered what he had said" (John 2:22) or "at first his disciples did not understand all this" (John 12:16). History is inevitably interpretive, so a reflective understanding of a person and his sayings may shed real light on that person. All of this is obscured in pillar 2, which is stated with a surprising philosophical naiveté about how history works.

In fact, if the intent is to drive a great wedge between the Jesus of history and the Christ of faith, then pillar 1, which is simply another way of saying that the gospel story is told by people who have come to trust in Jesus, is a variation of the same problem. The seminar apparently sees over half of the teaching tradition of the Gospels as "Christ-of-faith" embellishments that have no roots in the teaching of Jesus, but instead express the preferences of the given evangelist (i.e., the black material). Such a disjunction is hard to sustain historically in terms of explaining the tradition as we have it.

Pillar 5 on the opposition between Jesus the teacher of proverbs and the eschatological Jesus is simply a detailed application of pillar 1. Many NT scholars, including many nonevangelicals, reject this thorough denial of an eschatological Jesus (e.g., see the complex discussions about Mark 13; Luke 17:20–37; 21:5–38 in Beasley-Murray 1993). But the effect of this view is devastating, since rejecting an eschatological Jesus also rejects any teaching about judgment, any sense of Jesus as returning, and many elements of Jesus' teaching that parallel the OT prophets' calls to accountability before God. With one affirmation large strands of Jesus' teaching become excluded almost by definition. In fact, one could argue that the elevation of this point to “pillar” status is one of the gravest errors in the seminar’s methodology.

Most NT scholars see Mark as the first written Gospel and Q as a major source, thus agreeing with the seminar’s pillars 3 and 4 (see excursus 4). But it should be noted that both points have come into increasing question in the last quarter century, a point not even mentioned in the seminar’s statement of this apparently inviolate pillar. In this commentary I raised more questions about the nature of Q than about Marcan priority, by pointing out that oral tradition (or variant written traditions) may stand behind what is normally represented by Q. Variation may reflect the presence of multiple expressions of the itinerant Jesus, making it more difficult to conclude, based on variation, that the evangelist(s) altered the tradition (e.g., 9:46–50; 12:1–3). In some cases variation may well exist because Jesus taught the point in various ways on different occasions, a potential consideration that is rarely noted by the seminar—despite its supposed sensitivity to oral tradition. Once oral tradition becomes possible, the number of sources for input into the Gospels expands, making judgments harder to make (Reicke 1986: 24–67, 180–89).

As to how oral tradition works, the seminar seems to take a position that allows for much distortion by the evangelists. The seminar assumes that (1) the older the strand of tradition, the more likely it could go back to Jesus, and (2) the more stands of tradition such materials appear in, the more likely it could go back to Jesus (this is called the criteria of multiple attestation, which can be a useful tool of assessment). In discussing such "old" tradition, the key sources for the seminar are Thomas, Q, and Mark, since they are said to derive from the period A.D. 50–70 (Funk and Hoover 1993: 18). This surfaces another premise that a wide array of scholars challenge, namely, the prominent position given to Thomas in the assessment of the tradition. For many if not most NT scholars, Thomas is seen as a late first-century source, not a mid-first-century source (Meier 1994: 476–77 n. 106, 499–500 n. 200; for a solid summary of the Thomas debate, see Meier 1991: 123–39). This significantly impacts how the evidence is read, since Thomas is a sayings source that makes for an aphoristic Jesus, not someone who teaches like a prophet in longer discourses. As a result, discourse material is often considered suspect by the seminar. Is that a likely portrait of an itinerant preacher?

Neither is it clear that the presence of oral tradition is as distorting in a Jewish setting as the seminar suggests. Jews worked with longer pieces of oral material, as seen in their liturgical prayer tradition (11:2–4). They were not limited to aphorisms. In addition the work of scholars like B. Gerhardsson and R. Riesner shows that in Jewish culture the importance of traditional material meant it was handled with care, a point I have made in detail elsewhere (Bock 1995: 78–81). Luke makes much of how carefully the roots of the traditions were formed and passed on (see the exegesis of 1:1–4). To argue that fully half of the material is developed later does not fit the historical context of Jewish tradition.

To add a burden of proof that says in effect “guilty until proven innocent” so that single testimony does not count at all in favor of a saying (pillar 7), produces a method that will not allow any Gospel writer to complement the portrait of Jesus with fresh detail he may be aware of—even from oral sources. Even in cases where Thomas and the tradition argue for authenticity, some texts still do not pass this final test (e.g., 10:5–7, 19, 21). One addendum to this test makes matters more difficult: if someone else could say it, then Jesus did not (on the potential critical bias toward Q and against the historical Jesus, see Meier 1994: 207 n. 123). This test of dissimilarity says that something is authentic if it is unlike Judaism or early church teaching; when it is applied negatively, then only the Jesus that is unlike his cultural background is treated as authentic (16:14–18; 17:7–10). Such a Jesus would have been so eccentric that it is unlikely that he would have been taken seriously.

The seven pillars may in fact be eight, for an unstated premise seems to automatically exclude sayings tied to miracles from going back to Jesus (4:31–44; 5:1–11; 18:35–43). These are often said to be the product of the storyteller's creativity (Funk and Hoover 1993: 42 [on Mark 1:21–28], 310 [on Luke 8:22–56]).

The pillars function like a tightly knit strainer that allows little to get through the process of assessment. If we treated other ancient works with similar standards, there would be little that we could say about ancient history. My approach to the data does not accept many of these pillars nor, where they seem to have merit, do I apply them with the same implications that the seminar does. My examination proceeds on a text-by-text basis, looking for a congruence of themes in those cases where a parallel is lacking, so as to allow the possibility that a single witness could possess something of strict historical worth. Unlike the seminar, I do not reject the possibility of multiple versions of a saying or a theme in the tradition. This is not to argue that the text always gives verbatim quotations. I argue elsewhere (Bock 1995) that the nature of oral tradition and the textual evidence of variations in biblical texts depicting the same event show that the Gospel writers sometimes summarize in a way that makes "pink" or "gray" classifications possible. Sometimes the writers present us with a summary or gist of Jesus' teaching, as opposed to his exact words. Such summaries have a credible claim to being historical because history can be reported in a variety of ways that reflect well what an event represented. Implications of sayings can be historical and can claim such roots in the utterances of a speaker. Thus when I make the claim for the authenticity of a particular teaching by Jesus, what I claim is that the passage accurately represents either in word or summary what Jesus taught. Even when we do not have the words of Jesus, we have the voice of Jesus.

What kind of a Jesus emerges for the Jesus Seminar? He is a Jesus who had no mission (9:1–6), whose miraculous activity needs some other explanation (5:17–26), who did not judge (10:13–15) or make messianic claims (9:18–20). In fact, he rarely discussed himself or his mission, since the "I" sayings are later creations (12:49–59). There is no prediction of suffering (12:1–12; 18:31–34; excursus 10), no major apocalyptic concern (11:37–54; 17:22–37), and no concern about heavenly rewards in the future (18:18–30). The Jesus of the seminar was interested in the poor and other social concerns and in creating in humanity a devotion to God and a concern for others (11:2–4; 14:15–24, 26). On these points he created social offense, but he was not particularly offensive in his religious teaching. For a figure that multiple traditions attest was publicly perceived as a prophet, is this kind of distinction historically credible? Jesus was an ethical storyteller and sage of moral parables who called people to be totally devoted to God, as the seminar argues, but that portrait of him does not have enough historical credibility to explain how he ended up crucified for claiming to be Israel's Promised One. What emerges from the seminar's examination is a one-sided portrait of Jesus, a minimalist, even naturalistic, Jesus of sorts. The Jesus that surfaces from the application of the seminar's pillars is not well enough historically constructed to explain what happened to him and what caused him to be sent to the cross.

In sum, Luke has much more to offer us about the historical Jesus than the Jesus Seminar does, for Luke explains how this Jesus was crucified, how God was at work to shape a new community founded on his teaching, and how God's vindication came to him as the Promised One. He died innocent, but he was raised to serve at the right hand of God and to offer access to God's blessing. Jesus came making a claim to represent the way to God, a claim no person should ignore. Luke wrote his Gospel in order to reassure disciples. He sought to make clear the reasons to trust in the Jesus who came and is coming again. Luke builds such reassurance on the pillar of a historically grounded portrait of Jesus. After noting Luke's summary of Jesus' career according to Peter in Acts 10:37–38, Harvey (1982a: 10) describes his historical inquiry about Jesus this way:

> But it is an enquiry for which, I believe, the materials are now available, and which will enable us to understand better what it might mean to claim that "God was with" a person of history in such a > unique and decisive way that he could be regarded as an actual agent of the divine, and become thereby an object, not only of our endless and fascinated study, but of our love and worship.

To put it another way: In the beginning there was Jesus, and without him there would be no Gospel, no explanation for the existence of the church, and no need for commentary.

Works Cited

ABD The Anchor Bible Dictionary. Edited by D. N. Freedman et al. 6 vols. New York: Doubleday, 1992.

Abel, F.-M.
1925 “Deux Tombeuax à Meule à Abou Ghoch.” Revue Biblique 34:275–79.

Achtemeier, P. J.
1978 “The Lukan Perspective on the Miracles of Jesus: A Preliminary Sketch.” Pp. 153–67 in Perspectives on Luke–Acts. Edited by C. H. Talbert. Danville, Va.: Association of Baptist Professors of Religion/Edinburgh: Clark.

Ackermann, H.
1952 Jesus: Seine Botschaft und deren Aufnahme im Abendland. Göttingen: Musterschmidt.

Ahern, B.
1943 “Staff or No Staff?” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 5:332–37.

Aitken, W. E. M.
1912 “Beelzebul.” Journal of Biblical Literature 31:34–53.

Aland, K.
1965–66 “Neue neutestamentliche Papyri II.” New Testament Studies 12:193–210.
1985 Synopsis Quattuor Evangelorum. 13th edition. Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung.

Aland, K., and B. Aland
1987 The Text of the New Testament: An Introduction to the Critical Editions and to the Theory and Practice of Modern Textual Criticism. Translated by E. F. Rhodes. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/Leiden: Brill.

Alexander, L.
1986 “Luke’s Preface in the Context of Greek Preface-Writing.” Novum Testamentum 28:48–74.

Alford, H.
1874 The Greek Testament, vol. 1: The Four Gospels. 7th edition. London: Rivingtons/Cambridge: Deighton, Bell.

Allison, D. C., Jr.
1983 “Matt. 23:39–Luke 13:35b as a Conditional Prophecy.” Journal for the Study of the New Testament 18:75–84.
1985 The End of the Ages Has Come: An Early Interpretation of the Passion and Resurrection of Jesus. Philadelphia: Fortress.
1987 “Jesus and the Covenant: A Response to E. P. Sanders.” Journal for the Study of the New Testament 29:57–78.
1992 “The Baptism of Jesus and a New Dead Sea Scroll.” Biblical Archaeology Review 18/2:58–60.

Annand, R.
1958 “ ‘He Was Seen of Cephas’: A Suggestion about the First Resurrection Appearance to Peter.” Scottish Journal of Theology 11:180–87.

Annen, F.
1976 Heil für die Heiden: Zur Bedeutung und Geschichte der Tradition vom besessenen Gerasener (Mk 5,1–20 parr.).

Frankfurter theologische Studien 20. Frankfurt am Main: Knecht.

Applebaum, S.
1976 “Economic Life in Palestine.” Vol. 2 / pp. 631–700 in The Jewish People in the First Century. Edited by S. Safrai and M. Stern. Compendia Rerum Iudaicarum ad Novum Testamentum 1/2. Philadelphia: Fortress/Assen: Van Gorcum.

Arbeitman, Y.
1980 “The Suffix of Iscariot.” Journal of Biblical Literature 99:122–24.

Arndt, W. F.
1943 “Ἄγει, Luke 24:21.” Concordia Theological Monthly 14:61.
1956 The Gospel according to St. Luke. St. Louis: Concordia.

Audet, J.-P.
1956 “L’Annonce à Marie.” Revue Biblique 63:346–74.

Aufhauser, J. B.
1926 Buddha und Jesus in ihren Paralleltexten. Kleine Texte für Vorlesungen and Übungen 157. Bonn: Marcus & Weber.

Aune, D. E.
1975 “The Significance of the Delay of the Parousia for Early Christianity.” Pp. 87–109 in Current Issues in Biblical and Patristic Interpretation: Studies in Honor of Merrill C. Tenney. Edited by G. F. Hawthorne. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

Austin, M. R.
1985 “The Hypocritical Son.” Evangelical Quarterly 57:307–15.

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur. 6th edition. By W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland. Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988.

Badian, E.
1972 Publicans and Sinners: Private Enterprise in the Service of the Roman Republic. Oxford: Blackwell/Ithaca, N.Y.: Cornell University Press.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature. 2d edition. By W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979.

Bahat, D.
1986 "Does the Holy Sepulchre Church Mark the Burial of Jesus?" Biblical Archaeology Review 12/3:26–45.

Bahr, G. J.
1970 "The Seder of Passover and the Eucharistic Words." Novum Testamentum 12:181–202.

Bailey, K. E.
1976 Poet and Peasant: A Literary Cultural Approach to the Parables in Luke. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.
1980 Through Peasant Eyes: More Lucan Parables, Their Culture and Style. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

Bajsicá, A.
1967 "Pilatus, Jesus und Barabbas." Biblica 48:7–28.

Baldi, D.
1955 Enchiridion Locorum Sanctorum. 2d edition. Jerusalem: Franciscan Printing Press.

Baltensweiler, H.
1959 Die Verklärung Jesu: Historisches Ereignis und synoptische Berichte. Abhandlungen zur Theologie des Alten und Neuen Testaments 33. Zurich: Zwingli.

Bammel, E.
1959 “Das Gleichnis von den bösen Winzern und das jüdische Erbrecht.” Revue Internationale des Droits de l’Antiquité, 3d series, 6:11–17.

Bammel, E. (ed.)
1970 The Trial of Jesus: Cambridge Studies in Honour of C. F. D. Moule. Studies in Biblical Theology 2/13. London: SCM/Naperville, Ill.: Allenson.

Banks, R. J.
1975 Jesus and the Law in the Synoptic Tradition. Society for New Testament Study Monograph Series 28. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Barbet, P.
1953 A Doctor at Calvary: The Passion of Our Lord Jesus Christ as Described by a Surgeon. New York: Kenedy.

Barbour, R. S.
1969–70 “Gethsemane in the Tradition of the Passion.” New Testament Studies 16:231–51.

Barkay, G.
1986 “The Garden Tomb: Was Jesus Buried Here?” Biblical Archaeology Review 12/2:40–53, 56–57.

Barr, J.
1988 “ Abbā Isn’t Daddy.” Journal of Theological Studies n.s. 39:28–47.

Barrett, C. K.
1947 The Holy Spirit and the Gospel Tradition. London: SPCK.
1958 “Luke xxii.15: To Eat the Passover.” Journal of Theological Studies n.s. 9:305–7.

1975 “The House of Prayer and the Den of Thieves.” Pp. 13–20 in Jesus und Paulus: Festschrift für Werner Georg Kümmel zum 70. Geburtstag. Edited by E. E. Ellis and E. Grässer. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

1978 The Gospel according to St. John: An Introduction with Commentary and Notes on the Greek Text. 2d edition. Philadelphia: Westminster/London: SPCK.

Bateman, H. W., IV

1992 “Psalm 110:1 and the New Testament.” Bibliotheca Sacra 149:438–53.

Bauman, C.

1985 The Sermon on the Mount: The Modern Quest for Its Meaning. Macon, Ga.: Mercer University Press/Louvain: Peeters.

Baur, F. C.

1831 “Die Christuspartei in der korinthischen Gemeinde: Der Gegensatz des petrinischen und paulinischen Christenthums in der altesten Kirche, der Apostel Petrus in Rom.” Tübinger Zeitschrift für Theologie 4:61–206. Reprinted in Baur’s Ausgewählte Werke in Einzelausgaben, vol. 1: Historisch-kritische Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament, pp. 1–146. Stuttgart: Frommann, 1963.

1850–51 “Die Einleitung ins NT als theologische Wissenschaft: Ihr Begriff und ihre Aufgabe, ihr Entwicklungsgang und ihr Organismus.” Theologische Jahrbücher 9:463–566; 10:70–94, 222–53, 329.

Bayer, H. F.

1986 Jesus’ Predictions of Vindication and Resurrection: The Provenance, Meaning and Correlation of the Synoptic Predictions. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 2/20. Tübingen: Mohr.

BDB A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament. By F. Brown, S. R. Driver, and C. A. Briggs. Oxford: Clarendon, 1907.

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature. By F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961.

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch. By F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984.

Beare, F. W.
1970 "The Mission of the Disciples and the Mission Charge: Matthew 10 and Parallels." Journal of Biblical Literature 89:1–13.

Beasley-Murray, G. R.
1952–53a "A Century of Eschatological Discussion." Expository Times 64:312–16.
1952–53b "The Rise and Fall of the Little Apocalypse Theory." Expository Times 64:346–49.
1954 Jesus and the Future: An Examination of the Criticism of the Eschatological Discourse, Mark 13, with Special Reference to the Little Apocalypse Theory. London: Macmillan.

1957 A Commentary on Mark Thirteen. London: Macmillan.

1970 "Jesus and the Spirit." Pp. 463–78 in Mélanges Bibliques en Hommage au R. P. Béda Rigaux. Edited by A. Descamps and A. de Halleux. Gembloux: Duculot.

1986 Jesus and the Kingdom of God. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/Exeter: Paternoster.

1993 Jesus and the Last Days: The Interpretation of the Olivet Discourse. Peabody, Mass.: Hendrickson.

Beauvery, R.

1957 "La Route Romaine de Jérusalem à Jéricho." Revue Biblique 64:72–101.

Beckwith, R. T.

1979–81 "The Earliest Enoch Literature and Its Calendar: Marks of Their Origin, Date and Motivation." Revue de Qumran 10:365–403.

1985 The Old Testament Canon of the New Testament Church and Its Background in Early Judaism. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/London: SPCK.

Bellinzoni, A., Jr., J. B. Tyson, and W. O. Walker Jr. (eds.)
1985 The Two-Source Hypothesis: A Critical Appraisal. Macon, Ga.: Mercer University Press.

Bemile, P.
1986 The Magnificat within the Context and Framework of Lukan Theology: An Exegetical Theological Study of Lk 1:46–55. Regensburger Studien zur Theologie 34. Frankfurt am Main: Lang.

Ben-Dor, I.
1945 “Palestinian Alabaster Vases.” Quarterly of the Department of Antiquities in Palestine 11:93–112.

Benoit, P.
1956–57 “L’Enfance de Jean-Baptiste selon Luc 1.” New Testament Studies 3:169–94.
1969 The Passion and Resurrection of Jesus Christ. Translated by B. Weatherhead. New York: Herder &

Herder/London: Darton, Longman & Todd.

Berger, K.

1972 Die Gesetzesauslegung Jesu: Ihr historischer Hintergrund im Judentum und in Alten Testament. Wissenschaftliche Monographien zum Alten und Neuen Testament 40. Neukirchen-Vluyn: Neukirchener Verlag.

1973–74 “Die königlichen Messiastraditionen des Neuen Testaments.” New Testament Studies 20:1–44.

1984 Formgeschichte des Neuen Testaments. Heidelberg: Quelle & Meyer.

Bertrand, D. A.

1973 Le Baptême de Jésus: Histoire de l’Exégèse aux Deux Premiers Siècles. Beiträge zur Geschichte der biblischen Exegese 14. Tübingen: Mohr.

Betz, H. D.

1969 “The Origin and Nature of Christian Faith according to the Emmaus Legend (Luke 24:13–32).” Interpretation 23:32–46.

1971 “The Cleansing of the Ten Lepers (Luke 17:11–19).” Journal of Biblical Literature 90:314–28.

1981 Review of Die Reinigung der zehn Aussätzigen und die Heilung des Samariters by W. Bruners. Theologische Literaturzeitung 106:338–39.

1985 Essays on the Sermon on the Mount. Translated by L. L. Welborn. Philadelphia: Fortress.

Betz, O.

1957–58 “Jesu heiliger Kreig.” Novum Testamentum 2:116–37.

1964–66 “The Dichotomized Servant and the End of Judas Iscariot (Light on the Dark Passages: Matthew 24,51 and Parallel; Acts 1,8).” Revue de Qumran 5:43–58.

1982 “Probleme des Prozesses Jesu.” Pp. 565–647 in Aufstieg und Niedergang der römi-schen Welt, part II: Principat, vol. 25: Religion. Edited by W. Haase. Berlin: de Gruyter.

1985 Jesus und das Danielbuch, vol. 2: Die Menschensohnworte Jesu und die Zukunfts-erwartung des Paulus (Daniel 7,13–14). Arbeiten zum Neuen Testament und Judentum 2/6.2. Frankfurt am Main: Lang.

Beyer, K.
1968 Semitische Syntax im Neuen Testament, vol. 1/1. 2d edition. Studien zur Umwelt des Neuen Testaments 1. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

Billerbeck, P.
1964 “Ein Synagogengottesdienst in Jesu Tagen.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 55:143–61.

Bishop, E. F. F.
1949–50 “Three and a Half Years.” Expository Times 61:126–27.
1951 “Jesus and the Lake.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 13:398–414.
1962 “The Parable of the Lost or Wandering Sheep: Matthew 18.10–14; Luke 15.3–7.” Anglican Theological Review 44:44–57.
1963 “Down from Jerusalem to Jericho.” Evangelical Quarterly 35:97–102.

1970 “People on the Road to Jericho: The Good Samaritan—and Others.” Evangelical Quarterly 42:2–6.

1973 “A Yawning Chasm.” Evangelical Quarterly 45:3–5.

Black, M.

1959–60 “The Parables as Allegory.” Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 42:273–87.

1967 An Aramaic Approach to the Gospels and Acts. 3d edition. Oxford: Clarendon.

1969 “The ‘Son of Man’ Passion Sayings in the Gospel Tradition.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 60:1–8.

1976 “The Throne-Theophany Prophetic Commission and the ‘Son of Man’: A Study in Tradition-History.” Pp. 57–73 in Jews, Greeks, and Christians: Religious Cultures in Late Antiquity: Essays in Honor of William David Davies. Edited by R. Hamerton-Kelly and R. Scroggs. Studies in Judaism of Late Antiquity 21. Leiden: Brill.

Blackman, P.

1983 Mishnayoth. 7 vols. 2d edition. Gateshead, N.Y.: Judaica.

Blaising, C. A.
1979 “Gethsemane: A Prayer of Faith.” Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 22:333–43.

Blaising, C. A., and D. L. Bock
1993 Progressive Dispensationalism. Wheaton, Ill.: Victor.

Blank, J.
1974 “Die Sendung des Sohnes: Zur christologischen Bedeutung des Gleichnisses von den bösen Winzern Mk 12,1–12.” Pp. 11–41 in Neues Testament und Kirche: Für Rudolf Schnackenburg. Edited by J. Gnilka. Freiburg im Breisgau: Herder.

Blass, F.
1898–99a “On Mark xii.42.” Expository Times 10:286–87.
1898–99b “On Mark xii.42 and xv.16.” Expository Times 10:185–87.

Blinzler, J.

1957–58 “Die Niedermetzelung von Galiläern durch Pilatus.” Novum Testamentum 2:24–49.

1958 “Qumran-Kalender und Passionschronologie.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 49:238–51.

1967 Die Brüder und Schwestern Jesu. Stuttgarter Bibelstudien 21. Stuttgart: Katholisches Bibelwerk.

1969 Der Prozess Jesu: Das jüdische und das römische Gerichtsverfahren gegen Jesus Christus auf Grund der ältesten Zeugnisse. 4th edition. Regensburg: Pustet.

1970 “The Jewish Punishment of Stoning in the New Testament Period.” Pp. 147–61 in The Trial of Jesus: Cambridge Studies in Honour of C. F. D. Moule. Edited by E. Bammel. Studies in Biblical Theology 2/13. London: SCM/Naperville, Ill.: Allenson.

Blomberg, C. L.

1982a “New Horizons in Parable Research.” Trinity Journal 3:3–17.

1982b The Tradition History of the Parables Peculiar to Luke's Central Section. Ph.D. diss. University of Aberdeen.

1983 "Midrash, Chiasmus, and the Outline of Luke's Central Section." Pp. 217–61 in Gospel Perspectives, vol. 3: Studies in Midrash and Historiography. Edited by R. T. France and D. Wenham. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

1984a "The Law in Luke–Acts." Journal for the Study of the New Testament 22:53–80.

1984b "New Testament Miracles and Higher Criticism: Climbing up the Slippery Slope." Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 27:425–38.

1990 Interpreting the Parables. Downers Grove, Ill.: InterVarsity.

1994 " 'Your Faith Has Made You Whole': The Evangelical Liberation Theology of Jesus." Pp. 75–93 in Jesus of Nazareth: Lord and Christ—Essays on the Historical Jesus and New Testament

Christology [I. Howard Marshall Festschrift]. Edited by J. B. Green and M. Turner. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/Carlisle: Paternoster.

Böcher, O.
1972 Das Neue Testament und die dämonischen Mächte. Stuttgarter Bibelstudien 58. Stuttgart: Katholisches Bibelwerk.

Bock, D. L.
1985 “Evangelicals and the Use of the Old Testament in the New.” Bibliotheca Sacra 142:209–23, 306–19.
1986 “Jesus as Lord in Acts and in the Gospel Message.” Bibliotheca Sacra 143:146–54.
1987 Proclamation from Prophecy and Pattern: Lucan Old Testament Christology. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 12. Sheffield: JSOT Press.
1990 “The Use of the Old Testament in Luke–Acts: Christology and Mission.” Pp. 494–511 in Society of Biblical Literature

1990 Seminar Papers. Edited by K. H. Richards. Chico, Calif.: Scholars Press.

1991a “Athenians Who Have Never Heard.” Pp. 117–24 in Through No Fault of Their Own? The Fate of Those Who Have Never Heard. Edited by W. V. Crockett and J. G. Sigountos. Grand Rapids: Baker.

1991b “Form Criticism.” Pp. 175–96 in New Testament Criticism and Interpretation. Edited by D. A. Black and D. S. Dockery. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.

1991c “The Son of Man in Luke 5:24.” Bulletin for Biblical Research 1:109–21.

1991d “Understanding Luke’s Task: Carefully Building on Precedent (Luke 1:1–4).” Criswell Theological Review 5:183–202.

1992a “Evidence from Acts.” Pp. 181–98 in A Case for Premillennialism: A New Consensus. Edited by D. K. Campbell and J. L. Townsend. Chicago: Moody.

1992b “Luke, Gospel of.” Pp. 495–510 in Dictionary of Jesus and the Gospels. Edited by J. B. Green, S. McKnight, and I.

H. Marshall. Downers Grove, Ill.: InterVarsity.

1992c “The Reign of the Lord Christ.” Pp. 37–67 in Dispensationalism, Israel and the Church: The Search for Definition. Edited by C. A. Blaising and D. L. Bock. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.

1993 “The Son of David and the Saints’ Task: The Hermeneutics of Initial Fulfillment.” Bibliotheca Sacra 150:440–57.

1994a “Current Messianic Activity and OT Davidic Promise: Dispensationalism, Hermeneutics, and NT Fulfillment.” Trinity Journal 15:55–87.

1994b “The Son of Man Seated at God’s Right Hand and the Debate over Jesus’; ‘Blasphemy.’ ” Pp. 181–91 in Jesus of Nazareth: Lord and Christ; Essays on the Historical Jesus and New Testament Christology. Edited by J. B. Green and M. Turner. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/Carlisle, Cumbria: Paternoster.

1994c “The Theology of Luke–Acts.” Pp. 87–166 in A Biblical Theology of the New Testament. Edited by R. B. Zuck and D. L. Bock. Chicago: Moody.

1994d “Use of the Old Testament in the New.” Pp. 97–114 in Foundations for Biblical Interpretation. Edited by D. S. Dockery, K. A. Mathews, and R. B. Sloan. Nashville: Broadman & Holman.

1995 “The Words of Jesus in the Gospels: Live, Jive, or Memorex?” Pp. 74–99 in Jesus under Fire. Edited by M. J. Wilkins and J. P. Moreland. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.

Böckh, A.

1828–77 Corpus Inscriptionum Graecarum. Berlin: Reimer.

Bode, E. L.

1970 The First Easter Morning: The Gospel Accounts of the Women’s Visit to the Tomb of Jesus. Analecta Biblica 45. Rome: Pontifical Biblical Institute Press.

Bonus, A.

1901–2 “Emmaus Mistaken for a Person.” Expository Times 13:561–62.

Boobyer, G. H.

1942 St. Mark and the Transfiguration Story. Edinburgh: Clark.

1954 “Mark ii,10a and the Interpretation of the Healing of the Paralytic.” Harvard Theological Review 47:115–20.

Booth, R. P.

1986 Jesus and the Laws of Purity: Tradition History and Legal History in Mark 7. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 13. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Borg, M. J.

1987 Jesus: A New Vision—Spirit, Culture, and the Life of Discipleship. San Francisco: Harper & Row.

Bornkamm, G.

1963 “The Stilling of the Storm in Matthew.” Pp. 52–57 in Tradition and Interpretation in Matthew. By G. Bornkamm, G. Barth, and H. J. Held. Translated by P. Scott. New Testament Library. Philadelphia: Westminster/London: SCM.

Borsch, F. H.

1967 The Son of Man in Myth and History. New Testament Library. Philadelphia: Westminster/London: SCM.

Bousset, W.

1926 Die Religion des Judentums im späthellenistischen Zeitalter. 3d edition. Edited by H. Gressmann. Handbuch zum Neuen Testament 21. Tübingen: Mohr.

Bover, J. M.

1951 “Una Nueva Interpretación de Luc 2,50.” Estudios Bíblicos 10:205–15.

Bovon, F.

1987 Luke the Theologian: Thirty-three Years of Research (1950–1983). Translated by K. McKinney. Princeton Theological Monograph Series 12. Allison Park, Pa.: Pickwick.

1989 Das Evangelium nach Lukas, vol. 1: Lk 1,1–9,50. Evangelisch-katholischer Kommentar zum Neuen Testament 3/1. Zurich: Benziger/Neukirchen-Vluyn: Neukirchener Verlag.

Bowker, J.

1969 The Targums and Rabbinic Literature: An Introduction to Jewish Interpretations of Scripture. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Braude, W. G.
1959 The Midrash on Psalms. 2 vols. Yale Judaica Series 13. New Haven: Yale University Press.
1968 Pesikta Rabbati: Discourses for Feasts, Fasts, and Special Sabbaths. 2 vols. Yale Judaica Series 18. New Haven: Yale University Press.

Braunert, H.
1957 “Der römische Provinzialzensus und der Schätzungsbericht des Lukas-Evangeliums.” Historia 6:192–214.

Brawley, R. L.
1987 Luke–Acts and the Jews: Conflict, Apology, and Conciliation. Society of Biblical Literature Monograph Series 33. Atlanta: Scholars Press.
1992 “Canon and Community: Intertextuality, Canon, Interpretation, Christology, Theology, and Persuasive Rhetoric in Luke 4:1–13.” Pp. 419–34 in Society of Biblical Literature 1992 Seminar Papers. Edited by E. Lovering Jr. Atlanta: Scholars Press.

Bretscher, P. G.

1951 “The Parable of the Unjust Steward —A New Approach to Luke 16:1–9.” Concordia Theological Monthly 22:756–62.

1968 “Exodus 4:22–23 and the Voice From Heaven.” Journal of Biblical Literature 87:301–11.

Brightman, F. E.

1927–28 “Six Notes, I: S. Luke xix 21: Αἴρεις Ὃ Οὐκ Ἔθηκας.” Journal of Theological Studies o.s. 29:158.

Brindle, W. A.

1984 “The Origin and History of the Samaritans.” Grace Theological Journal 5:47–75.

Brodie, T. L.

1983 “Luke 7,36–50 as an Internalization of 2 Kings 4,1–37: A Study in Luke’s Use of Rhetorical Imitation.” Biblica 64:457–85.

1986 “Towards Unravelling Luke’s Use of the Old Testament: Luke 7.11–17 as an Imitatio of 1 Kings 17.24.” New Testament Studies 32:247–67.

1987 Luke the Literary Interpreter: Luke–Acts as a Systematic Rewriting and Updating of the Elijah and Elisha Narrative in 1 and 2 Kings. Ph.D. diss. Rome: Pontifical University of St. Thomas.

Brooke, G. J.

1985 Exegesis at Qumran: 4QFlorilegium in Its Jewish Context. Journal for the Study of the Old Testament Supplement 29. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Brooten, B. J.

1982 Women Leaders in the Ancient Synagogue: Inscriptional Evidence and Background Issues. Brown Judaic Studies 36. Chico, Calif.: Scholars Press.

Brown, R. E.

1962a “Parable and Allegory Reconsidered.” Novum Testamentum 5:36–45.

1962b “The Problem of Historicity in John.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 24:1–14. Reprinted in Brown’s New Testament Essays, pp. 143–67. Milwaukee: Bruce, 1965.

1970 The Gospel according to John (xiii–xxi). Anchor Bible 29a. Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday.

1971 “Jesus and Elisha.” Perspective 12:85–104.

1977 The Birth of the Messiah: A Commentary on the Infancy Narratives in Matthew and Luke. London: Chapman/Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday.

1993 The Birth of the Messiah: A Commentary on the Infancy Narratives in the Gospels of Matthew and Luke. Revised edition. Anchor Bible Reference Library. New York: Doubleday.

1994 The Death of the Messiah, from Gethsemane to the Grave: A Commentary on the Passion Narratives in the Four Gospels. 2 vols. Anchor Bible Reference Library. New York: Doubleday.

Brown, S.
1969 Apostasy and Perseverance in the Theology of Luke. Analecta Biblica 36. Rome: Pontifical Biblical Institute Press.

Bruce, A. B.
1897 The Synoptic Gospels. Expositor's Greek Testament 1. London: Hodder & Stoughton.

Bruce, F. F.
1952 "Justification by Faith in the Non-Pauline Writings of the New Testament." Evangelical Quarterly 24:66–77.
1972 New Testament History. Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday.
1974 Jesus and Christian Origins outside the New Testament. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.
1975–76 "Is the Paul of Acts the Real Paul?" Bulletin of the John Rylands University Library of Manchester 58:282–305.
1982 "The Background to the Son of Man Sayings." Pp. 50–70 in Christ the Lord:

Studies in Christology Presented to Donald Guthrie. Edited by H. H. Rowdon. Leicester, Inter-Varsity.

1984 “Render to Caesar.” Pp. 249–63 in Jesus and the Politics of His Day. Edited by E. Bammel and C. F. D. Moule. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

1988 The Book of the Acts. 2d edition. New International Commentary on the New Testament. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

Bruners, W.

1977 Die Reinigung der zehn Aussätzigen und die Heilung des Samariters, Lk 17,11–19: Ein Beitrag zur lukanischen Interpretation der Reinigung von Aussätzigen. Forschung zur Bibel 23. Stuttgart: Katholisches Bibelwerk.

Brutscheck, J.

1986 Die Maria-Marta–Erzählung: Eine redaktionskritische Untersuchungen zu Lk 10,38–42. Bonner biblische Beiträge 64. Frankfurt am Main/Bonn: Hanstein.

Buchanan, G. W., and C. Wolfe

1978 “The ‘Second-First Sabbath’ (Luke 6:1).” Journal of Biblical Literature 97:259–62.

Büchele, A.
1978 Der Tod Jesu im Lukasevangelium: Eine redaktionsgeschichtliche Untersuchung zu Lk 23. Theologische Studien 26. Frankfurt am Main: Knecht.

Bultmann, R.
1951–55 Theology of the New Testament. 2 vols. Translated by K. Grobel. New York: Scribner/London: SCM.
1963 The History of the Synoptic Tradition. Translated by J. Marsh. New York: Harper & Row/Oxford: Blackwell.
1971 The Gospel of John: A Commentary. Translated by G. R. Beasley-Murray, R. W. N. Hoare, and J. K. Riches. Philadelphia: Westminster/Oxford: Blackwell.

Burchard, C.
1970 “Das doppelte Liebesgebot in der frühen christlichen Überlieferung.” Pp. 39–62 in Der Ruf Jesu and die Antwort der Gemeinde: Exegetische Untersuchungen Joachim Jeremias zum 70. Geburtstag. Edited by E. Lohse. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

Burger, C.
1970 Jesus als Davidssohn: Eine traditions-geschichtliche Untersuchung. Forschungen zur Religion und Literatur des Alten und Neuen Testaments 98. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

Burkitt, F. C., and A. E. Brooke
1907–8 "St Luke xxii 15, 16: What is the General Meaning?" Journal of Theological Studies o.s. 9:569–72.

Burns, J. L.
1992 "The Future of Ethnic Israel in Romans 11." Pp. 188–229 in Dispensationalism, Israel and the Church: The Search for Definition. Edited by C. A. Blaising and D. L. Bock. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.

Burrows, E.
1940 The Gospel of the Infancy and Other Biblical Essays. Edited by E. F. Sutcliffe. London: Burns, Oates & Washbourne.

Burrows, M.
1940 “Levirate Marriage in Israel.” Journal of Biblical Literature 59:23–33.

Burton, E. D.
1900 Syntax of the Moods and Tenses in New Testament Greek. 3d edition. Chicago: University of Chicago Press. Reprinted Grand Rapids: Kregel, 1976.

Busse, U.
1978 Das Nazareth-Manifest Jesu: Eine Einführung in das lukanische Jesusbild nach Lk 4,16–30. Stuttgarter Bibelstudien 91. Stuttgart: Katholisches Bibelwerk.
1979 Die Wunder des Propheten Jesus: Die Rezeption, Komposition und Interpretation der Wundertradition im Evangelium des Lukas. 2d edition. Forschung zur Bibel 24. Stuttgart: Katholisches Bibelwerk.

Buth, R.
1984 “Hebrew Poetic Tenses and the Magnificat.” Journal for the Study of the New Testament 21:67–83.

Byington, S. T.

1957 “יהוה and אדני.” Journal of Biblical Literature 76:58–59.

Cadbury, H. J.

1917 “A Possible Case of Lukan Authorship (John 7:53–8:11).” Harvard Theological Review 10:237–44.

1922a “Commentary on the Preface of Luke.” Vol. 2 / pp. 489–510 in The Beginnings of Christianity, part 1: The Acts of the Apostles. Edited by F. J. Foakes Jackson and K. Lake. London: Macmillan. Reprinted Grand Rapids: Baker, 1979.

1922b “The Knowledge Claimed in Luke’s Preface.” Expositor, 8th series, 24:401–20.

1926 “Lexical Notes on Luke–Acts, II: Recent Arguments for Medical Language.” Journal of Biblical Literature 45:190–209.

1933 “Dust and Garments.” Vol. 5 / pp. 269–77 in The Beginnings of Christianity, part 1: The Acts of the Apostles. Edited by F. J. Foakes Jackson and K. Lake. London: Macmillan. Reprinted Grand Rapids: Baker, 1979.

1950 “The Kingdom of God and Ourselves.” Christian Century 67:172–173.
1956–57 “ ‘We’ and ‘I’ Passages in Luke–Acts.” New Testament Studies 3:128–32.
1958 The Making of Luke–Acts. 2d edition. London: SPCK.
1962 “A Proper Name for Dives (Lexical Notes on Luke–Acts VI).” Journal of Biblical Literature 81:399–402.
1965 “The Name for Dives.” Journal of Biblical Literature 84:73.

Caird, G. B.
1963 The Gospel of St Luke. Pelican Gospel Commentaries. Baltimore: Penguin.
1980 The Language and Imagery of the Bible. Philadelphia: Westminster.

Callan, T.
1982 “Psalm 110:1 and the Origin of the Expectation That Jesus Will Come Again.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 44:622–36.

Calvin, J.

1972 A Harmony of the Gospels: Matthew, Mark and Luke. Translated by A. W. Morrison and T. H. L. Parker. 3 vols. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/Edinburgh: Saint Andrew.

Campbell, D. K.
1953 Interpretation and Exposition of the Sermon on the Mount. Th.D. diss. Dallas Theological Seminary.

Campbell, J. Y.
1936–37 "The Kingdom of God Has Come." Expository Times 48:91–94.

Campenhausen, H. von
1968 Tradition and Life in the Church: Essays and Lectures in Church History. Translated by A. V. Littledale. London: Collins.

Candlish, R.
1911–12 "The Pounds and the Talents." Expository Times 23:136–137.

Caragounis, C. C.
1974 "Ὀψώνιον: A Reconsideration of Its Meaning." Novum Testamentum 16:35–

57.

1986 The Son of Man: Vision and Interpretation. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 38. Tübingen: Mohr.

1989 “Kingdom of God, Son of Man and Jesus’ Self-Understanding [Part 1].” Tyndale Bulletin 40:3–23.

Carlston, C. E.

1975 The Parables of the Triple Tradition. Philadelphia: Fortress.

1981 “Parable and Allegory Revisited: An Interpretive Review [of Allegorie und Allegorese in synoptischen Gleichnistexten by H.-J. Klauck].” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 43:228–42.

Carmignac, J.

1969 Recherches sur le “Notre Père.” Paris: Letouzey.

Carroll, J. T.

1988 “Luke’s Portrayal of the Pharisees.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 50:604–21.

Carroll R., M. D.

1992 “La Cita de Isaías 58:6 en Lucas 4:18: Una Nueva Propuesta.” Kairós 11:61–78.

Carson, D. A.
1978 The Sermon on the Mount: An Evangelical Exposition of Matthew 5–7. Grand Rapids: Baker.
1982 “Jesus and the Sabbath in the Four Gospels.” Pp. 57–97 in From Sabbath to Lord’s Day: A Biblical, Historical, and Theological Investigation. Edited by D. A. Carson. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.
1984 “Matthew.” Vol. 8 / pp. 1–599 in The Expositor’s Bible Commentary. Edited by F. E. Gaebelein. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.

Casey, M.
1979 Son of Man: The Interpretation and Influence of Daniel 7. London: SPCK.
1985 “The Jackals and the Son of Man (Matt. 8.20 // Luke 9.58).” Journal for the Study of the New Testament 23:3–22.

Cassidy, R. J.

1978 Jesus, Politics, and Society: A Study of Luke's Gospel. Maryknoll, N.Y.: Orbis.

Catchpole, D. R.
1965 "You Have Heard His Blasphemy." Tyndale Bulletin 16:10–18.
1971 The Trial of Jesus: A Study in the Gospels and Jewish Historiography from 1770 to the Present Day. Studia Post-Biblica 18. Leiden: Brill.
1977 "The Son of Man's Search for Faith (Luke xviii 8b)." Novum Testamentum 19:81–104.
1984 "The 'Triumphal' Entry." Pp. 319–34 in Jesus and the Politics of His Day. Edited by E. Bammel and C. F. D. Moule. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Cave, C. H.
1968–69 "Lazarus and the Lukan Deuteronomy." New Testament Studies 15:319–25.

Ceroke, C. P.
1960 "Is Mk 2,10 a Saying of Jesus?" Catholic Biblical Quarterly 22:369–90.

Chafer, L. S.

1951 “The Teachings of Christ Incarnate.” Bibliotheca Sacra 108:389–413.

Chajes, C.
1892 “Les Juges Juifs en Palestine.” Revue des Études Juives 39:39–52.

Chapman, J.
1911–12 “Zacharias, Slain between the Temple and the Altar.” Journal of Theological Studies o.s. 13:398–410.

Charles, R. H.
1913 The Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament in English. 2 vols. Oxford: Clarendon.

Charlesworth, C. E.
1922–23 “The Unnamed Companion of Cleopas.” Expository Times 34:233–34.

Charlesworth, J. H. (ed.)
1983–85 The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha. 2 vols. Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday.

Chavel, C. B.
1941 “The Releasing of a Prisoner on the Eve of Passover in Ancient Jerusalem.” Journal of Biblical Literature 60:273–78.

Chilton, B. D.
1979 God in Strength: Jesus' Announcement of the Kingdom. Studien zum Neuen Testament und seiner Umwelt B/1. Freistadt: Plöchl.
1981 "Announcement in Nazara: An Analysis of Luke 4:16–21." Pp. 147–72 in Gospel Perspectives, vol. 2: Studies of History and Tradition in the Four Gospels. Edited by R. T. France and D. Wenham. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Chilton, B. D. (ed.)
1984 The Kingdom of God in the Teaching of Jesus. Issues in Religion and Theology 5. Philadelphia: Fortress/London: SPCK.

Chisholm, R. B., Jr.
1991 "A Theology of the Psalms." Pp. 257–304 in A Biblical Theology of the Old Testament. Edited by R. B. Zuck, E. H. Merrill, and D. L. Bock. Chicago: Moody.

Christ, F.
1970 Jesus Sophia: Die Sophia-Christologie bei den Synoptikern.

Abhandlungen zur Theologie des Alten und Neuen Testaments 57. Zurich: Zwingli.

Chwolson [Khvol’son], D. A.
1908 Das Letzte Passamahl Christi und der Tag seines Todes, nach den in übereinstimmung gebrachten berichten der Synoptiker und des Evangelium Johannis. Leipzig: Haessel.

Clark, K. W.
1940 “Realized Eschatology.” Journal of Biblical Literature 59:367–83.

Cohen, A.
1948 The Twelve Prophets: Hebrew Text, English Translation and Commentary. Soncino Books of the Bible. London: Soncino Press.
1965 The Minor Tractates of the Talmud. 2 vols. London: Soncino.

Cohen, B.
1930 “The Rabbinic Law Presupposed by Matthew xii.1 and Luke vi.1.” Harvard Theological Review 23:91–92.

Cohn, H.
1967 The Trial and Death of Jesus. New York: Harper & Row.

Colani, T.
1864 Jésus-Christ et les Croyances Messianiques de Son Temps. Strasbourg: Treuttel & Wurtz.

Coleridge, M.
1993 The Birth of the Lukan Narrative: Narrative as Christology in Luke 1–2. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 88. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Collins, J. J.
1974 "The Son of Man and the Saints of the Most High in the Book of Daniel." Journal of Biblical Literature 93:50–66.
1993 "A Pre-Christian 'Son of God' among the Dead Sea Scrolls." Bible Review 9/3:34–38, 57.

Colson, F. H.
1941 Philo, with an English Translation, vol. 9. Loeb Classical Library 363.

Cambridge: Harvard University Press/London: Heinemann.

Combrink, H. J. B.
1973 “The Structure and Significance of Luke 4:16–30.” Neotestamentica 7:27–47.

Connally, R. H.
1948 “The Appeal to the Aramaic Sources of Our Gospels.” Downside Review 66:25–37.

Conzelmann, H.
1960 The Theology of St. Luke. Translated by G. Buswell. New York: Harper & Row.

Corbishley, T.
1936 “Quirinius and the Census: A Re-study of the Evidence.” Klio 29:81–93.

Corrington, G. P.
1993 “Redaction Criticism.” Pp. 87–99 in To Each Its Own Meaning: An Introduction to Biblical Criticisms and Their Application. Edited by S. R. Haynes and S. L. McKenzie. Louisville: Westminster/John Knox.

Cortés, J. B., and F. M. Gatti

1970 “Jesus’ First Recorded Words (Lk. 2:49–50).” Marianum 32:404–18.
1987 “On the Meaning of Luke 16:16.” Journal of Biblical Literature 106:247–59.

Couroyer, B.
1970 “De la Mesure dont Vous Mesurez il Vous Sera Mesuré;.” Revue Biblique 77:366–70.

Cox Evans, L. E.
1968 “The Holy Sepulchre.” Palestine Exploration Quarterly 100:112–36.

Craig, W. L.
1980 “The Bodily Resurrection of Jesus.” Pp. 47–74 in Gospel Perspectives, vol. 1: Studies of History and Tradition in the Four Gospels. Edited by R. T. France and D. Wenham. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Cranfield, C. E. B.
1947–48 “The Cup Metaphor in Mark xiv. 36 and Parallels.” Expository Times 59:137–38.
1959 The Gospel according to Saint Mark: An Introduction and Commentary.

Cambridge Greek Testament Commentary. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

1963 “The Parable of the Unjust Judge and the Eschatology of Luke–Acts.” Scottish Journal of Theology 16:297–301.

Creed, J. M.

1921–22 “Josephus on John the Baptist.” Journal of Theological Studies o.s. 23:59–60.

1930 The Gospel according to St. Luke. London: Macmillan.

Crehan, J. H.

1953 “St. Peter’s Journey to Emmaus.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 15:418–26.

Crockett, L.

1966 “Luke iv.16–30 and the Jewish Lectionary Cycle: A Word of Caution.” Journal of Jewish Studies 17:13–46.

Crossan, J. D.

1971 “The Parable of the Wicked Husbandmen.” Journal of Biblical Literature 90:451–65.

1971–72 “Parable and Example in the Teaching of Jesus.” New Testament Studies

18:285–307.

1973 In Parables: The Challenge of the Historical Jesus. New York: Harper & Row.

1991 The Historical Jesus: The Life of a Mediterranean Jewish Peasant. San Francisco: Harper.

Cullmann, O.

1950 Baptism in the New Testament. Translated by J. K. S. Reid. Studies in Biblical Theology 1. London: SCM/Chicago: Regnery.

1963 The Christology of the New Testament. Translated by S. C. Guthrie and C. A. M. Hall. 2d edition. New Testament Library. Philadelphia: Westminster.

Cutler, A.

1966 “Does the Simeon of Luke 2 Refer to Simeon the Son of Hillel?” Journal of Bible and Religion 34:29–35.

Dahl, N. A.

1951 “The Parables of Growth.” Studia Theologica 5:132–66.

1955 “The Origin of Baptism.” Pp. 36–42 in Interpretationes ad Vetus Testamentum pertinentes Sigmundo Mowinckel septuagenario missae. Edited by A. S. Kapelrud. Oslo: Land og Kirge.

1966 “The Story of Abraham in Luke–Acts.” Pp. 139–58 in Studies in Luke–Acts: Essays Presented in Honor of Paul Schubert. Edited by L. E. Keck and J. L. Martyn. Nashville: Abingdon. Reprinted Philadelphia: Fortress, 1980.

Dalman, G. H.

1909 The Words of Jesus Considered in the Light of Post-biblical Jewish Writings and the Aramaic Language. Translated by D. M. Kay. Edinburgh: Clark.

1924 Orte und Wege Jesu. 3d edition. Gütersloh: Bertelsmann.

1929 Jesus-Jeshua: Studies in the Gospels. Translated by P. P. Levertoff. New York: Macmillan.

Danby, H.

1933 The Mishnah: Translated from the Hebrew with Introduction and Brief

Explanatory Notes. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Danker, F. W.

1960–61 "The Υἱός Phrases in the New Testament." New Testament Studies 7:94.

1972 Jesus and the New Age according to St. Luke: A Commentary on the Third Gospel. St. Louis: Clayton.

1982 Benefactor: Epigraphic Study of a Graeco-Roman and New Testament Semantic Field. St. Louis: Clayton.

1983 "Graeco-Roman Cultural Accommodation in the Christology of Luke–Acts." Pp. 391–414 in Society of Biblical Literature 1983 Seminar Papers. Edited by K. H. Richards. Chico, Calif.: Scholars Press.

1988 Jesus and the New Age: A Commentary on St. Luke's Gospel. Revised edition. Philadelphia: Fortress.

Darr, J. A.

1987 "Glorified in the Presence of Kings": A Literary-Critical Study of Herod the Tetrarch in Luke–Acts. Ph.D. Diss. Vanderbilt University.

1992 On Character Building: The Reader and the Rhetoric of Characterization in Luke–Acts. Literary Currents in Biblical Interpretation. Louisville: Westminster/John Knox.

Daube, D.

1955 “Jewish Inheritance in Two Lukan Pericopes.” Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für romanistische Rechtsgeschichte 72:326–34.

1956 The New Testament and Rabbinic Judaism. Jordan Lectures 1952. London: University of London/Athlone.

1960 “Three Notes Having to Do with Johanan Ben Zaccai.” Journal of Theological Studies n.s. 11:53–62.

1961 “ ‘For They Know Not What They Do’: Luke 23,34.” Pp. 58–70 in Studia Patristica, vol. 4: Papers Presented to the Third International Conference on Patristic Studies Held at Christ Church, Oxford, 1959, part 2: Biblica, Patres Apostolici, Historica. Edited by F. L.

Cross. Texte und Untersuchungen 79. Berlin: Akademie-Verlag.

1972–73 “Responsibilities of Master and Disciples in the Gospels.” New Testament Studies 19:1–15.

Davies, P. R.

1983 “Calendrical Change and Qumran Origins An Assessment of VanderKam’s Theory.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 45:80–89.

Davies, W. D.

1962 Christian Origins and Judaism. London: Darton, Longman & Todd.

1964 The Setting of the Sermon on the Mount. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Davies, W. D., and D. C. Allison Jr.

1988 A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Gospel according to Saint Matthew, vol. 1: Introduction and Commentary on Matthew i–vii. International Critical Commentary. Edinburgh: Clark.

Deatrick, E. P.

1962 “Salt, Soil, Savior.” Biblical Archaeologist 25:41–48.

DeGuglielmo, A.
1941 “Emmaus.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 3:293–301.

De Jonge, H. J.
1977–78 “Sonship, Wisdom, Infancy: Luke ii.41–51a.” New Testament Studies 24:317–54.

De Jonge, M.
1960 “Christian Influence in the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs.” Novum Testamentum 4:182–235. Reprinted in Studies on the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs: Text and Interpretation, pp. 193–246. Edited by M. De Jonge. Studia in Veteris Testamenti Pseudepigrapha 3. Leiden: Brill, 1975.
1966 “The Use of the Word ‘Anointed’ in the Time of Jesus.” Novum Testamentum 8:132–48.

Delling, G.
1962 “Das Gleichnis vom gottlosen Richter.” Zeitschrift für die

Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 53:1–25.

Delobel, J.
1973 “La Rédaction de Lc., iv,14–16a et le ‘Bericht vom Anfang.’ ” Pp. 203–23 in L’Évangile de Luc: Problèmes Littéraires et Théologiques: Mémorial Lucien Cerfaux. Edited by F. Neirynck. Bibliotheca Ephemeridum Theologicarum Lovaniensium 32. Gembloux: Duculot.

Denney, J.
1909–10 “The Word ‘Hate’ in Luke xiv.26.” Expository Times 21:41–42.

Derrett, J. D. M.
1970 Law in the New Testament. London: Darton, Longman & Todd.
1971 “Law in the New Testament: The Palm Sunday Colt.” Novum Testamentum 13:243–58.
1971–72 “Law in the New Testament: The Parable of the Unjust Judge.” New Testament Studies 18:178–91.
1972a “ ‘Eating up the Houses of Widows’: Jesus’ Comment on Lawyers?” Novum Testamentum 14:1–9.

1972b “Take Thy Bond … and Write Fifty (Luke xvi.6): The Nature of the Bond.” Journal of Theological Studies, n.s 23:438–40.

1973 “Law in the New Testament: The Syro-Phoenician Woman and the Centurion of Capernaum.” Novum Testamentum 15:161–86.

1974 “Allegory and the Wicked Vinedressers.” Journal of Theological Studies n.s. 25:426–32.

1977a “Nisi Dominus Aedificaverit Domum: Towers and Wars (Luke xiv 28–32).” Novum Testamentum 19:241–61.

1977b “The Rich Fool: A Parable of Jesus concerning Inheritance.” Heythrop Journal 18:131–51.

1979–80 “Fresh Light on the Lost Sheep and the Lost Coin.” New Testament Studies 26:36–60.

Dessau, H.

1892–1916 Inscriptiones Latinae Selectae. 3 vols. in 5. Berlin: Weidmann.

1921 “Zu den neuen Inschriften des Sulpicius Quirinius.” Klio 17:252–58.

Dibelius, M.
1934 From Tradition to Gospel. Translated by B. L. Woolf. London: Nicholson & Watson.
1956 Studies in the Acts of the Apostles. Edited by H. Greeven. Translated by M. Ling and P. Schubert. New York: Scribner/London: SCM.

Dietrich, W.
1972 Das Petrusbild der lukanischen Schriften. Beiträge zur Wissenschaft vom Alten und Neuen Testament 5/14. Stuttgart: Kohlhammer.

Dillon, R. J.
1978 From Eye-Witnesses to Ministers of the Word: Tradition and Composition in Luke 24. Analecta Biblica 82. Rome: Pontifical Biblical Institute Press.
1981 "Previewing Luke's Project from His Prologue (Luke 1:1–4)." Catholic Biblical Quarterly 43:205–27.

Dinkler, E.
1971 "Peter's Confession and the Satan Saying: The Problem of Jesus' Messiahship.” Pp. 169–202 in The Future of Our Religious Past: Essays in Honour of Rudolf Bultmann. Edited by J. M. Robinson. Translated by C. E. Carlston and R. P. Scharlemann. New York: Harper & Row.

Dittenberger, W.
1903–5 Orientis Graeci Inscriptiones Selectae: Supplementum “Sylloges Inscriptionum Graecarum.” 2 vols. Leipzig: Hirzel.

Dodd, C. H.
1936–37 “The Kingdom of God Has Come.” Expository Times 48:138–42.
1947 “The Fall of Jerusalem and the ‘Abomination of Desolation.’ ” Journal of Roman Studies 37:47–54. Reprinted in Dodd’s More New Testament Studies, pp. 69–83. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/Manchester: Manchester University Press, 1968.
1955 “The Appearances of the Risen Christ: An Essay in Form-Criticism of the Gospels.” Pp. 9–35 in Studies in the Gospels: Essays in Memory of R. H. Lightfoot. Edited by D. E. Nineham. Oxford: Blackwell. Reprinted in Dodd's More New Testament Studies, pp. 102–33. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/Manchester: Manchester University Press, 1968.

1961 The Parables of the Kingdom. Revised edition. New York: Scribner/London: Nisbet.

Donahue, J. R.

1971 "Tax Collectors and Sinners: An Attempt at Identification." Catholic Biblical Quarterly 33:39–61.

Donald, T.

1963 "The Semantic Field of 'Folly' in Proverbs, Job, Psalms, and Ecclesiastes." Vetus Testamentum 13:285–92.

Doran, R.

1983 "Luke 20:18: A Warrior's Boast?" Catholic Biblical Quarterly 45:61–67.

Driver, G. R.

1965 "Two Problems in the New Testament." Journal of Theological Studies n.s. 16:327–37.

Driver, S. R.
1900 The Book of Daniel. Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Drury, J.
1976 Tradition and Design in Luke's Gospel: A Study in Early Christian Historiography. London: Darton, Longman & Todd.

Duling, D. C.
1975 "Solomon, Exorcism, and the Son of David." Harvard Theological Review 68:235–52.

Dungan, D. L. (ed.)
1990 The Interrelations of the Gospels. Bibliotheca Ephemeridum Theologicarum Lovaniensium 95. Louvain: Leuven University Press/Macon, Ga.: Mercer University Press.

Dunkerley, R.
1957 Beyond the Gospels. Baltimore: Penguin.
1958–59 "Lazarus." New Testament Studies 5:321–27.

Dunn, J. D. G.

1970a Baptism in the Holy Spirit: A Re-examination of the New Testament Teaching on the Gift of the Spirit in Relation to Pentecostalism Today. Studies in Biblical Theology 2/15. London: SCM/Naperville, Ill.: Allenson.

1970b "The Messianic Secret in Mark." Tyndale Bulletin 21:92–117. Reprinted in The Messianic Secret, pp. 116–31. Edited by C. Tuckett. Philadelphia: Fortress/London: SPCK, 1983.

1975 Jesus and the Spirit: A Study of the Religious and Charismatic Experience of Jesus and the First Christians as Reflected in the New Testament. New Testament Library. Philadelphia: Westminster/London: SCM.

1980 Christology in the Making: A New Testament Inquiry into the Origins of the Doctrine of the Incarnation. London: SCM.

1988 "Matthew 12:28 / Luke 11:20—A Word of Jesus?" Pp. 29–49 in Eschatology and the New Testament: Essays in Honor of George Raymond Beasley-Murray. Edited by W. H. Gloer. Peabody, Mass.: Hendrickson.

Duplacy, J.
1963 “Une Variante Méconnue du Texte Reçu: Ἤ Ἀπολύσητε (Lc 22,68).” Pp. 42–52 in Neutestamentliche Aufsätze: Festschrift für Prof. Josef Schmid zum 70. Gebertstag. Edited by J. Blinzler, O. Kuss, and F. Mussner. Regensburg: Pustet.

Du Plessis, I. I.
1974 “Once More: The Purpose of Luke’s Prologue (Lk i 1–4).” Novum Testamentum 16:259–71.

Dupont, J.
1959 “ ‘Soyez Parfaits’ (Mt., v,48) —‘Soyez Miséricordieux’ (Lc., vi,36).” Vol. 2 / pp. 150–62 in Sacra Pagina: Miscellanea Biblica Congressus Internationalis Catholici de re Biblica. Edited by J. Coppens, A. Descamps, and É. Massaux. Bibliotheca Ephemeridum Theologicarum Lovaniensium 13. Paris:

Lecoffre/Paris: Gabalda/Gembloux: Duculot.

1964 “Le Logion des Douze Trônes (Mt 19,28; Lc 22,28–30).” Biblica 45:355–92.

1966a “ ‘Béatitudes’ Égyptiennes.” Biblica 47:185–222.

1966b “L’Appel à Imiter Dieu en Matthieu 5,48 et Luc 6,36.” Rivista Biblica 14:137–58.

1968 Les Tentations de Jésus au Désert. Studia Neotestamentica 4. Bruges: Desclée de Brouwer.

1979 The Salvation of the Gentiles: Essays on the Acts of the Apostles. Translated by J. R. Keating. New York: Paulist Press.

1980 “Le Pharisien et la Pécheresse (Lc 7,36–50).” Communautés et Liturgies 4:260–68.

Dupont-Sommer, A.

1961 The Essene Writings from Qumran. Translated by G. Vermes. Oxford: Blackwell. Reprinted Gloucester, Mass.: Peter Smith, 1973.

Easton, B. S.
1913 “The Beezebul Sections.” Journal of Biblical Literature 32:57–73.

Edersheim, A.
1889 The Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah. New York: Longmans, Green.

Edwards, R. A.
1971 The Sign of Jonah in the Theology of the Evangelists and Q. Studies in Biblical Theology 2/18. London: SCM.

Egelkraut, H. L.
1976 Jesus’ Mission to Jerusalem: A Redaction Critical Study of the Travel Narrative in the Gospel of Luke, Lk 9:51–19:48. Europäische Hochschulschriften 23/80. Frankfurt am Main/Bern: Lang.

Ehrman, A.
1978 “Judas Iscariot and Abba Saqqara.” Journal of Biblical Literature 97:572–73.

Ehrman, B. D.
1991 “The Cup, the Bread, and the Salvific Effect of Jesus’ Death in Luke–Acts.” Pp. 576–91 in Society of Biblical Literature 1991 Seminar Papers. Edited by K. H. Richards. Chico, Calif.: Scholars Press.

Einheitsübersetzung Einheitsübersetzung der Heiligen Schrift. Stuttgart: Katholische Bibelanstalt, 1979.

Eisler, R. I.

1931 The Messiah Jesus and John the Baptist according to Flavius Josephus' Recently Discovered "Capture of Jerusalem" and the Other Jewish and Christian Sources. Translated by A. H. Krappe. New York: Dial/London: Methuen.

Ellingworth, P.

1980 "Luke 12.46—Is There an Anti-climax Here?" Bible Translator 31:242–43.

Elliott, J. K.

1969 "The Use of Ἕτερος in the New Testament." Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 60:140-41.

Ellis, E. E.
1965–66 “Present and Future Eschatology in Luke.” New Testament Studies 12:27–41.
1972 Eschatology in Luke. Facet Books, Biblical Series 30. Philadelphia: Fortress.
1974 The Gospel of Luke. 2d edition. New Century Bible. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/London: Marshall, Morgan & Scott.
1977 “How the New Testament Uses the Old.” Pp. 199–219 in New Testament Interpretation: Essays on Principles and Methods. Edited by I. H. Marshall. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/Exeter: Paternoster.

Emerton, J. A.
1958 “The Origin of the Son of Man Imagery.” Journal of Theological Studies n.s. 9:225–42.

Epp, E. J.
1962 “The ‘Ignorance Motif’ in Acts and Antijudaic Tendencies in Codex Bezae.” Harvard Theological Review 55:51–62.
1966 The Theological Tendency of Codex Bezae Cantabrigiensis in Acts. Society for

New Testament Studies Monograph Series 3. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

1981 “The Ascension in the Textual Tradition of Luke–Acts.” Pp. 131–45 in New Testament Textual Criticism, Its Significance for Exegesis: Essays in Honour of Bruce M. Metzger. Edited by E. J. Epp and G. D. Fee. Oxford: Clarendon.

Eppstein, V.

1964 “The Historicity of the Gospel Account of the Cleansing of the Temple.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 55:42–58.

Ernst, J.

1977 Das Evangelium nach Lukas. Regensburger Neues Testament 3. Regensburg: Pustet.

Esler, P. F.

1987 Community and Gospel in Luke–Acts: The Social and Political Motivations of Lucan Theology. Society for New Testament Studies Monograph Series 57. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Evans, C. A.
1987a " 'He Set His Face': Luke 9,51 Once Again." Biblica 68:80–84.
1987b "Luke's Use of the Elijah/Elisha Narrative and the Ethic of Election." Journal of Biblical Literature 106:75–83.
1989a "Jesus' Action in the Temple and Evidence of Corruption in the First-Century Temple." Pp. 522–39 in Society of Biblical Literature 1989 Seminar Papers. Edited by D. J. Lull. Atlanta: Scholars Press.
1989b "Jesus' Action in the Temple: Cleansing or Portent of Destruction?" Catholic Biblical Quarterly 51:237–70.
1989c To See and Not Perceive: Isaiah 6.9–10 in Early Jewish and Christian Interpretation. Journal for the Study of the Old Testament Supplement 64. Sheffield: JSOT Press.
1990 Luke. New International Biblical Commentary 3. Peabody, Mass.: Hendrickson.
1991 "In What Sense 'Blasphemy'? Jesus before Caiaphas in Mark 14:61–64." Pp.

215–34 in Society of Biblical Literature 1991 Seminar Papers. Edited by E. A. Lovering Jr. Atlanta: Scholars Press.

Evans, C. A., and J. A. Sanders
1993 Luke and Scripture: The Function of Sacred Tradition in Luke–Acts. Minneapolis: Fortress.

Evans, C. F.
1955 “The Central Section of St. Luke’s Gospel.” Pp. 37–53 in Studies in the Gospels: Essays in Memory of R. H. Lightfoot. Edited by D. E. Nineham. Oxford: Blackwell.
1970 Resurrection and the New Testament. Studies in Biblical Theology 2/12. London: SCM/Naperville, Ill.: Allenson.
1990 Saint Luke. Trinity Press International New Testament Commentaries. Philadelphia: Trinity/London: SCM.

Farmer, W. R.
1961–62 “Notes on a Literary and Form-Critical Analysis of Some of the Synoptic Material Peculiar to Luke.” New Testament Studies 8:301–16.

1964 The Synoptic Problem: A Critical Analysis. New York: Macmillan. Reprinted Dillsboro, N.C.: Western North Carolina Press, 1976.

Farrell, H. K.

1986 “The Structure and Theology of Luke’s Central Section.” Trinity Journal 7/2:33–54.

Farris, S.

1985 The Hymns of Luke’s Infancy Narratives: Their Origin, Meaning and Significance. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 9. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Fee, G. D.

1981 “ ‘One Thing Is Needful?’ Luke 10:42.” Pp. 61–75 in New Testament Textual Criticism, Its Significance for Exegesis: Essays in Honour of Bruce M. Metzger. Edited by E. J. Epp and G. D. Fee. Oxford: Clarendon.

Feinberg, J. S. (ed.)

1988 Continuity and Discontinuity: Perspectives on the Relationship between the Old and New Testaments: Essays in Honor of S. Lewis Johnson, Jr. Westchester, Ill.: Crossway.

Feine, P.
1922 Theologie des Neuen Testaments. 4th edition. Leipzig: Hinrichs.

Field, F.
1875 Origenis Hexaplorum quae Supersunt; sive Veterum Interpretum Graecorum in Totum Vetus Testamentum Fragmenta. 2 vols. Oxford: Clarendon.

Finegan, J.
1964 Handbook of Biblical Chronology: Principles of Time Reckoning in the Ancient World and the Problems of Chronology in the Bible. Princeton: Princeton University Press.

Finkel, A.
1963 “Jesus’ Sermon at Nazareth (Luk. 4,16–30).” Pp. 106–15 in Abraham unser Vater: Juden und Christen im Gespräch über die Bibel: Festschrift für Otto Michel zum 60. Geburtstag. Edited by O. Betz, M. Hengel, and P. Schmidt. Arbeiten zur Geschichte des Spätjudentums und Urchristentums 5. Leiden: Brill.

Finn, T. M.
1985 "The God-fearers Reconsidered." Catholic Biblical Quarterly 47:75–84.

Fischel, H. A.
1946–47 "Martyr and Prophet: A Study in Jewish Literature." Jewish Quarterly Review 37:265–80, 363–86.

Fitzgerald, J. T.
1972 "The Temptation of Jesus: The Testing of the Messiah in Matthew." Restoration Quarterly 15:152–60.

Fitzmyer, J. A.
1958 " 'Peace upon Earth among Men of His Good Will' (Lk 2:14)." Theological Studies 19:225–27. Reprinted in Fitzmyer's Essays on the Semitic Background of the New Testament, pp. 101–4. London: Chapman, 1971.
1964 "The Story of the Dishonest Manager (Lk 16:1–13)." Theological Studies 25:23–42.

1972 “The Use of Agein and Pherein in the Synoptic Gospels.” Pp. 147–60 in Festschrift to Honor F. Wilbur Gingrich. Edited by E. H. Barth and R. E. Cocroft. Leiden: Brill.

1973–74 “The Contribution of Qumran Aramaic to the Study of the New Testament.” New Testament Studies 20:382–407. Reprinted in Fitzmyer’s Wandering Aramean: Collected Aramaic Essays, pp. 85–113. Society of Biblical Literature Monograph Series 25. Missoula, Mont.: Scholars Press, 1979.

1978 “Crucifixion in Ancient Palestine, Qumran Literature, and the New Testament.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 40:493–513.

1979a “Another View of the ‘Son of Man’ Debate.” Journal for the Study of the New Testament 4:58–68.

1979b A Wandering Aramean: Collected Aramaic Essays. Society of Biblical Literature Monograph Series 25. Missoula, Mont.: Scholars Press.

1981 The Gospel according to Luke (i–ix). Anchor Bible 28. Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday.

1985 The Gospel according to Luke (x–xxiv). Anchor Bible 28a. Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday.

1989 Luke the Theologian: Aspects of His Teaching. Mahwah, N.J.: Paulist Press/London: Chapman.

Flanagan, N. M.

1978 “The Position of Women in the Writings of St. Luke.” Marianum 40:288–304.

Fletcher, D. R.

1963 “The Riddle of the Unjust Steward: Is Irony the Key?” Journal of Biblical Literature 82:15–30.

1964 “Condemned to Die: The Logion on Cross-Bearing: What Does It Mean?” Interpretation 18:156–64.

Flückiger, F.

1972 “Luk. 21,20–24 und die Zerstörung Jerusalems.” Theologische Zeitschrift 28:385–90.

Flusser, D.
1957 “Healing through the Laying-on of Hands in a Dead Sea Scroll.” Israel Exploration Journal 7:107–8.
1959 “Two Notes on the Midrash on II Sam. vii.” Israel Exploration Journal 9:99–109.

Ford, J. M.
1984 My Enemy Is My Guest: Jesus and Violence in Luke. Maryknoll, N.Y.: Orbis.

Fornara, C. W.
1983 The Nature of History in Ancient Greece and Rome. Berkeley: University of California Press.

Foulkes, F.
1958 The Acts of God: A Study of the Basis of Typology in the Old Testament. Tyndale Old Testament Lecture 1955. London: Tyndale.

Fraenkel, E.
1935 “Namenwesen.” Vol. 32 [= 16.2] / cols. 1611–70 in Paulys Realencyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft. Stuttgart: Metzler.

France, R. T.
1971 Jesus and the Old Testament: His Application of Old Testament Passages to Himself and His Mission. London: Tyndale/Downer Grove, Ill.: InterVarsity.
1985 The Gospel according to Matthew: An Introduction and Commentary. Tyndale New Testament Commentaries. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/Leicester: Inter-Varsity.

Franklin, E.
1975 Christ the Lord: A Study in the Purpose and Theology of Luke–Acts. Philadelphia: Westminster/London: SPCK.

Frey, J.-B.
1930 “La Signification du Terme Πρωτότοκος d’après une Inscription Juive.” Biblica 11:373–90.

Friedlander, G.
1916 Pirk\ê de Rabbi Eliezer (the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer the Great) according to the Text of the Manuscript Belonging to Abraham Epstein of Vienna. London: Paul, Trench, Trübner/New York:

Bloch. Reprinted New York: Sepher-Hermon, 1981.

Funk, R. W.
1985 New Gospel Parallels. 2 vols. Philadelphia: Fortress.

Funk, R. W., and R. W. Hoover
1993 The Five Gospels: The Search for the Authentic Words of Jesus. New York: Macmillan.

Gaebelein, A. C.
1910 The Gospel of Matthew: An Exposition. New York: Our Hope. Reprinted Neptune, N.J.: Loizeaux, 1961.

Gaechter, P.
1955 Maria im Erdenleben: Neutestamentliche Marienstudien. 3d edition. Innsbruck: Tyrolia.

Garbe, R.
1959 India and Christendom: The Historical Connections between Their Religions. Translated by L. G. Robinson. La Salle, Ill.: Open Court.

Garland, D. E.

1979 The Intention of Matthew 23. Novum Testamentum Supplement 52. Leiden: Brill.

Garrett, S. R.
1989 The Demise of the Devil: Magic and the Demonic in Luke's Writings. Minneapolis: Fortress.

Gärtner, B. E.
1970–71 "The Person of Jesus and the Kingdom of God." Theology Today 27:32–43.

Gaston, L.
1962 "Beelzebul." Theologische Zeitschrift 18:247–55.
1970 No Stone on Another: Studies in the Significance of the Fall of Jerusalem in the Synoptic Gospels. Novum Testamentum Supplement 23. Leiden: Brill.

Geiger, R.
1976 Die lukanischen Endzeitreden: Studien zur Eschatologie des Lukas-Evangeliums. 2d edition. Europäische Hochschulschriften 23/16. Frankfurt am Main/Bern: Lang.

Geldenhuys, N.
1951 Commentary on the Gospel of Luke. New International Commentary on the New Testament. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

Gerhardsson, B.
1966 The Testing of God's Son (Matt. 4:1–11 and Par): An Analysis of an Early Christian Midrash. Coniectanea Biblica, New Testament 2/1. Lund: Gleerup.
1967–68 "The Parable of the Sower and Its Interpretation." New Testament Studies 14:165–93.

Gerstenberger, E.
1962 "The Woe-Oracles of the Prophets." Journal of Biblical Literature 81:249–63.

Gerstner, J. H.
1991 Wrongly Dividing the Word of God: A Critique of Dispensationalism. Brentwood, Tenn.: Wolgemuth & Hyatt.

Gewiess, J.
1967 "Die Mariefrage, Lk 1,34." Pp. 184–217 in Struktur und Theologie der lukanischen Kindheitsgeschichte, by R.

Laurentin. Stuttgart: Katholisches Bibelwerk.

Giblin, C. H.
1971 " 'The Things of God' in the Question concerning Tribute to Caesar (Lk 20:25; Mk 12:17; Mt 22:21)." Catholic Biblical Quarterly 33:510–27.
1985 The Destruction of Jerusalem according to Luke's Gospel: A Historical-Typological Moral. Analecta Biblica 107. Rome: Pontifical Biblical Institute Press.

Glickman, S. C.
1983 The Temptation Account in Matthew and Luke. Ph.D. diss. University of Basel.

Glöckner, R.
1976 Die Verkündigung des Heils beim Evangelisten Lukas. Walberberger Studien, Theologische Reihe 9. Mainz: Matthias-Grünewald.
1983 Neutestamentliche Wundergeschichten und das Lob der Wundertaten Gottes in den Psalmen: Studien zur sprachlichen und theologischen Verwandtschaft zwischen neutestamentlichen Wundergeschichten und Psalmen. Walberberger Studien, Theologische Reihe 13. Mainz: Matthias-Grünewald.

Glombitza, O.

1958 “Die Titel Διδάσκαλος und Ἐπιστάτης für Jesus bei Lukas.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 49:275–78.

1962 “Das grosse Abendmahl: Luk. xiv 12–24.” Novum Testamentum 5:10–16.

1971 “Die christologische Aussage des Lukas in seiner Gestaltung der drei Nachfolgeworte Lukas ix 57–62.” Novum Testamentum 13:14–23.

Gnilka, J.

1961 Die Verstockung Israels: Isaias 6,9–10 in der Theologie der Synoptiker. Studien zum Alten und Neuen Testament 3. Munich: Kösel.

1961–62 “Die essenischen Tauchbäder und die Johannestaufe.” Revue de Qumran 3:185–207.

Godet, F.

1875 A Commentary on the Gospel of St. Luke. 2 vols. Translated by E. W. Shalders and M. D. Cusin. Edinburgh: Clark.

Goldin, J.
1955 The Fathers according to Rabbi Nathan. Yale Judaica Series 10. New Haven: Yale University Press.

Gooding, D. W.
1987 According to Luke: A New Exposition of the Third Gospel. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/Leicester: Inter-Varsity.

Goppelt, L.
1981–82 Theology of the New Testament. Edited by J. Roloff. Translated by J. E. Alsup. 2 vols. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.
1982 Typos: The Typological Interpretation of the Old Testament in the New. Translated by D. H. Madvig. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

Gordon, C. H.
1977 “Paternity at Two Levels.” Journal of Biblical Literature 96:101.

Gore, C.

1910 The Sermon on the Mount: A Practical Exposition. 2d edition. London: Murray.

Goulder, M. D.

1964 “The Chiastic Structure of the Lucan Journey.” Pp. 195–202 in Studia Evangelica, vol. 2: Papers Presented to the Second International Congress on New Testament Studies Held at Christ Church, Oxford, 1961, part 1: The New Testament Scriptures. Edited by F. L. Cross. Texte und Untersuchungen 87. Berlin: Akademie-Verlag.

1989 Luke: A New Paradigm. 2 vols. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 20. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Gradwohl, R.

1974 “Sünde und Vergebung im Judentum.” Concilium 10/10:563–67.

Grández, R. M.

1989 “Las Tinieblas en la Muerte de Jesús: Historia de la Exégesis de Lc 23,44–45a (Mt 27,45; Mk 15,33).” Estudios Bíblicos 47:177–223.

Grässer, E.
1960 Das Problem der Parusieverzögerung in den synoptischen Evangelien und in der Apostelgeschichte. 2d edition. Beiheft zur Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 22. Berlin: Töpelmann.

Gray, G. B.
1899–1900 “The Nazirite.” Journal of Theological Studies o.s. 1:201–11.

Grayston, K.
1973–74 “The Study of Mark xiii.” Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 56:371–87.

Graystone, G.
1968 Virgin of All Virgins: The Interpretation of Luke 1:34. Rome: Tipografia S. Pio X.

Green, J. B.
1987 “Preparation for Passover (Luke 22:7–13): A Question of Redactional Technique.” Novum Testamentum 29:305–19.

1988 The Death of Jesus: Tradition and Interpretation in the Passion Narrative. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 2/33. Tübingen: Mohr.

1991 “The Death of Jesus and the Rending of the Temple Veil (Luke 23:44–49): A Window into Luke’s Understanding of Jesus and the Temple.” Pp. 543–57 in Society of Biblical Literature 1991 Seminar Papers. Edited by E. A. Lovering Jr. Atlanta: Scholars Press.

1994 “Good News to Whom? Jesus and the ‘Poor’ in the Gospel of Luke.” Pp. 59–74 in Jesus of Nazareth: Lord and Christ—Essays on the Historical Jesus and New Testament Christology [I. Howard Marshall Festschrift]. Edited by J. B. Green and M. Turner. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/Carlisle: Paternoster.

Green, M. P.

1983 “The Meaning of Cross-Bearing.” Bibliotheca Sacra 140:117–33.

Greeven, H.
1959–60 “Erwägungen zur synoptischen Textkritik.” New Testament Studies 6:281–96.

Grelot, P.
1967 “Aujourd’hui tu Seras avec Moi dans le Paradis (Luc, xxiii,43).” Revue Biblique 74:194–214.

Grensted, L. W.
1914–15 “The Use of Enoch in St. Luke xvi.19–31.” Expository Times 26:333–34.

Gressmann, H.
1911 “Mitteilungen 14: Salzdüngung in den Evangelien.” Theologische Literaturzeitung 36:156–57.
1914 Das Weihnachts-evangelium auf Ursprung und Geschichte. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

Grigsby, B.
1984 “Compositional Hypotheses for the Lucan ‘Magnificat’—Tensions for the Evangelical.” Evangelical Quarterly 56:159–72.

Grobel, K.
1963–64 "… Whose Name Was Neves." New Testament Studies 10:373–82.

Grundmann, W.
1963 Das Evangelium nach Lukas. Theologischer Handkommentar zum Neuen Testament 3. Berlin: Evangelische Verlagsanstalt.

Guelich, R.
1975–76 "The Antitheses of Matthew v.21–48: Traditional and/or Redactional?" New Testament Studies 22:444–57.
1982 The Sermon on the Mount. Waco: Word.

Guenther, H. O.
1985 The Footprints of Jesus' Twelve in Early Christian Traditions: A Study in the Meaning of Religious Symbolism. American University Studies 7/7. New York: Lang.

Gundry, R. H.
1967 The Use of the Old Testament in St. Matthew's Gospel, with Special Reference to the Messianic Hope. Novum Testamentum Supplement 18. Leiden: Brill.

1982 Matthew: A Commentary on His Literary and Theological Art. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

1990 “Jesus’ Blasphemy according to Mark 14:61b–64 and Mishnah Sanhedrin 7:5.” Paper Read at Annual Meeting of the Society of Biblical Literature, New Orleans.

Gunkel, H.

1921 “Die Lieder in der Kindheitsgeschichte Jesu bei Lukas.” Pp. 43–60 in Festgabe von Fachgenossen und Freunden A. von Harnack zum siebzigsten Geburtstag. Edited by K. Holl. Tübingen: Mohr.

Guthrie, D.

1970 New Testament Introduction. 3d edition. Downers Grove, Ill.: InterVarsity.

Hadas, M.

1951 Aristeas to Philocrates (Letter of Aristeas). Jewish Apocryphal Literature. New York: Harper for Dropsie College.

Haenchen, E.
1961 “Das ‘Wir’ in der Apostelgeschichte und das Itinerar.” Zeitschrift für Theologie und Kirche 58:329–66.
1971 The Acts of the Apostles: A Commentary. Translated by B. Noble, G. Shinn, H. Anderson, and R. M. Wilson. Philadelphia: Westminster/Oxford: Blackwell.

Hahn, F.
1969 The Titles of Jesus in Christology: Their History in Early Christianity. Translated by H. Knight and G. Ogg. London: Lutterworth.
1973 “Die Worte vom Licht Lk 11,33–36.” Pp. 107–38 in Orientierung an Jesus: Zur Theologie der Synoptiker: Für Josef Schmid. Edited by P. Hoffmann, N. Brox, and W. Pesch. Freiburg: Herder.

Hamerton-Kelly, R. G.
1964–65 “A Note on Matthew xii.28 par. Luke xi.20.” New Testament Studies 11:167–69.

Hamilton, N. Q.

1964 “Temple Cleansing and Temple Bank.” Journal of Biblical Literature 83:365–72.

Hamm, D.
1991 “Zacchaeus Revisited Once More: A Story of Vindication or Conversion?” Biblica 72:249–52.

Harbarth, A.
1978 “Gott hat sein Volk heimgesucht”: Eine form- und redaktionsgeschichtliche Untersuchungen zu Lk 7,11–17: Die Erweckung des Jünglings von Nain. Ph.D. diss. Freiberg im Breisgau.

Hardy, E. R., Jr.
1945 “The Date of Psalm 110.” Journal of Biblical Literature 64:385–90.

Hare, D. R. A.
1967 The Theme of Jewish Persecution of Christians in the Gospel according to St Matthew. Society for New Testament Studies Monograph Series 6. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Harnack, A. von

1900 “Das Magnificat der Elisabet (Luc. 1,46–55) nebst einigen Bermerkungen zu Luc. 1 und 2.” Sitzungsberichte der königlichen preussischen Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Berlin 27:538–56. Reprinted in Harnack’s Kleine Schriften zur alten Kirche: Berliner Akademieschriften, 1890–1920, vol. 1 / pp. 439–57. Opuscula 9/1. Leipzig: Zentralantiquariat der Deutschen Demokratischen Republik, 1980.

1901 “Probleme im Texte der Leidensgeschichte Jesu.” Sitzungsberichte der königlichen preussischen Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Berlin 11:251–66. Reprinted in Harnack’s Kleine Schriften zur alten Kirche: Berliner Akademieschriften, 1890–1920, vol. 1 / pp. 470–85. Opuscula 9/1. Leipzig: Zentralantiquariat der Deutschen Demokrati-schen Republik, 1980.

1907 Luke the Physician: The Author of the Third Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles. New Testament Studies 1.

Translated by J. R. Wilkinson. London: Williams & Norgate/New York: Putnam.

Hart, H. St. J.
1984 "The Coin of 'Render unto Caesar …' (A Note on Some Aspects of Mark 12:13–17; Matt. 22:15–22; Luke 20:20–26)." Pp. 241–48 in Jesus and the Politics of His Day. Edited by E. Bammel and C. F. D. Moule. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Hartin, P. J.
1991 James and the Q Sayings of Jesus. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 47. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Hartman, L.
1966 Prophecy Interpreted: The Formation of Some Jewish Apocalyptic Texts and of the Eschatological Discourse Mark 13 Par. Translated by N. Tomkinson and J. Gray. Con-iectanea Biblica, New Testament 1. Lund: Gleerup.
1969 Review of Naherwartungen: Tradition und Redaktion in Mk 13 by R.

Pesch. Biblica 50:576–80.

Hartman, L. F., and A. A. Di Lella
1978 The Book of Daniel. Anchor Bible 23. Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday.

Hartmann, G.
1964 “Die Vorlage der Osterberichte in Joh 20.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 55:197–220.

Harvey, A. E.
1982a Jesus and the Constraints of History. Philadelphia: Westminster.
1982b “ ‘The Workman Is Worthy of His Hire’: Fortunes of a Proverb in the Early Church.” Novum Testamentum 24:209–21.

Hay, D. M.
1973 Glory at the Right Hand: Psalm 110 in Early Christianity. Society of Biblical Literature Monograph Series 18. Nashville: Abingdon.

Hayles, D. J.
1973 “The Roman Census and Jesus’ Birth: Was Luke Correct?, part 1: The Roman Census System.” Buried History 9:113–32.

1974 “The Roman Census and Jesus’ Birth: Was Luke Correct?, part 2: Quirinius’ Career and a Census in Herod’s Day.” Buried History 10:16–31.

Hays, R. B.

1994 “The Corrected Jesus[: Review of The Five Gospels by R. W. Funk and R. W. Hoover].” First Things 43:43–48.

Heard, W.

1988 “Luke’s Attitude toward the Rich and the Poor.” Trinity Journal n.s. 9:47–80.

Heater, H.

1986 “A Textual Note on Luke 3.33.” Journal for the Study of the New Testament 28:25–29.

Hemer, C. J.

1989 The Book of Acts in the Setting of Hellenistic History. Edited by C. H. Gempf. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 49. Tübingen: Mohr.

Hendriksen, W.
1973 Exposition of the Gospel according to Matthew. New Testament Commentary. Grand Rapids: Baker.
1975 Exposition of the Gospel according to Mark. New Testament Commentary. Grand Rapids: Baker.
1978 Exposition of the Gospel according to Luke. New Testament Commentary. Grand Rapids: Baker.

Hengel, M.
1961 Die Zeloten: Untersuchungen zur jüdischen Freiheitsbewegung in der Zeit von Herodes I. bis 70 n. Chr. Arbeiten zur Geschichte des Spätjudentums und Urchristentums 1. Leiden: Brill.
1963 “Maria Magdalena und die Frauen als Zeugen.” Pp. 243–56 Abraham unser Vater: Juden und Christen im Gespräch über die Bibel: Festschrift für Otto Michel zum 60. Geburtstag. Edited by O. Betz, M. Hengel, and P. Schmidt. Arbeiten zur Geschichte des Spätjudentums und Urchristentums 5. Leiden: Brill.

1968 “Das Gleichnis von den Weingärtnern Mc 12,1–12 im Lichte der Zenonpapyri und der rabbinischen Gleichnisse.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 59:1–39.

1977 Crucifixion in the Ancient World and the Folly of the Message of the Cross. Translated by J. Bowden. Philadelphia: Fortress/London: SCM.

1980 Acts and the History of Earliest Christianity. Translated by J. S. Bowden. Philadelphia: Fortress/London: SCM.

1981 The Charismatic Leader and His Followers. Translated by J. Greig. Edinburgh: Clark/New York: Crossroad.

Hengel, R., and M. Hengel

1959 “Die Heilungen Jesu und medizinisches Denken.” Pp. 331–61 in Medicus Viator: Fragen und Gedanken am Wege Richard Siebecks. Tübingen: Mohr/Stuttgart: Thieme.

Herrenbrück, F.

1981 “Wer waren die ‘Zöllner’?” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche

Wissenschaft 72:178–94.

Herrmann, W.
1907 Die sittlichen Weisungen Jesu: Ihr Mißbrauch und ihr richtiger Gebrauch. 2d edition. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

Hesse, F.
1955 Das Verstockungsproblem im Alten Testament: Eine frömmigkeitsgeschichtliche Untersuchung. Beiheft zur Zeitschrift für die Alttestamentliche Wissenschaft 74. Berlin: Töpelmann.

Heth, W. A., and G. J. Wenham
1984 Jesus and Divorce: The Problem with the Evangelical Consensus. London: Hodder & Stoughton/Nashville: Nelson.

Heutger, N.
1983 "Münzen im Lukasevangelium." Biblische Zeitschrift 27:97–101.

Hewitt, J. W.
1932 "The Use of Nails in the Crucifixion." Harvard Theological Review

25:29–45.

Hiers, R. H.
1973–74 “The Problem of the Delay of the Parousia in Luke–Acts.” New Testament Studies 20:145–55.

Higgins, A. J. B.
1969 “Sidelights on Christian Beginnings in the Graeco-Roman World.” Evangelical Quarterly 41:197–206.

Hill, D.
1971 “The Rejection of Jesus at Nazareth (Luke iv 16–30).” Novum Testamentum 13:161–80.
1972 The Gospel of Matthew. New Century Bible. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/London: Marshall, Morgan & Scott.
1973–74 “On the Evidence for the Creative Role of Christian Prophets.” New Testament Studies 20:262–74.

Hobart, W. K.
1882 The Medical Language of St. Luke. Dublin: Hodges, Figgis. Reprinted Grand Rapids: Baker, 1954.

Hock, R. F.
1987 “Lazarus and Micyllus: Greco-Roman Backgrounds to Luke 16:19–31.” Journal of Biblical Literature 106:447–63.

Hoehner, H. W.
1970 “Why Did Pilate Hand Jesus over to Antipas?” Pp. 84–90 in The Trial of Jesus: Cambridge Studies in Honour of C. F. D. Moule. Edited by E. Bammel. Studies in Biblical Theology 2/13. London: SCM/Naperville, Ill.: Allenson.
1972 Herod Antipas. Society for New Testament Studies Monograph Series 17. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
1977 Chronological Aspects of the Life of Christ. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.
1987 “A Response to Divorce and Remarriage.” Pp. 240–46 in Applying the Scriptures: Papers from ICBI Summit III. Edited by K. S. Kantzer. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.

Hoffmann, P.
1967 “Πάντες Ἐργάται Ἀδικίας: Redaktion und Tradition in Lc 13:22–30.”

Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 58:188–214.

1970 “Die Offenbarung des Sohnes: Die apokalyptischen Voraussetzungen und ihre Verarbeitung im Q-Logion Mt 11,27 par. Lk 10,22.” Kairos 12:270–88.

Hofius, O.

1977–78 “Alttestamentliche Motive in Gleichnis vom verlorenen Sohn.” New Testament Studies 24:240–48.

Holmes, M. W.

1983 “The ‘Majority Text Debate’: New Form of an Old Issue.” Themelios 8/2:13–19.

1989 “New Testament Textual Criticism.” Pp. 53–74 in Introducing New Testament Interpretation. Edited by S. McKnight. Guides to New Testament Exegesis 1. Grand Rapids: Baker.

Holtz, T.

1968 Untersuchungen über die alttestamentlichen Zitate bei Lukas. Texte und Untersuchungen 104. Berlin: Akademie-Verlag.

Holzmeister, U.
1938 “Exempla Sudoris Sanguinei (Lc. 22,44).” Verbum Domini 18:73–81.

Hooker, M. D.
1967 The Son of Man in Mark: A Study of the Background of the Term “Son of Man” and Its Use in St. Mark’s Gospel. London: SPCK.

Horowitz, G.
1953 The Spirit of Jewish Law: A Brief Account of Biblical and Rabbinical Jurisprudence, with a Special Note on Jewish Law and the State of Israel. New York: Central Book.

Horsley, R. A.
1987 Jesus and the Spiral of Violence: Popular Jewish Resistance in Roman Palestine. San Francisco: Harper & Row.

Hort, F. J. A.
1908–9 “A Note … on the Words Κόφινος, Σπυρίς, Σαργάνη.” Journal of Theological Studies o.s. 10:567–71.

Hospodar, B.

1956 “Meta Spoudes in Lk 1,39.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 18:14–18.

House, H. W. (ed.)
1990 Divorce and Remarriage: Four Christian Views. Downers Grove, Ill.: InterVarsity.

Howard, V.
1977 “Did Jesus Speak about His Own Death?” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 39:515–27.

Hubbard, B. J.
1977 “Commissioning Stories in Luke–Acts: A Study of Their Antecedents, Form and Content.” Semeia 8:103–26.

Huck, A., and H. Lietzmann
1936 A Synopsis of the First Three Gospels. 9th edition revised by H. Lietzmann. English edition prepared by F. L. Cross. Tübingen: Mohr.

Hull, J. M.
1974 Hellenistic Magic and the Synoptic Tradition. Studies in Biblical Theology

2/28. London: SCM/Naperville, Ill.: Allenson.

Hunter, A. M.
1965 A Pattern for Life, An Exposition of the Sermon on the Mount: Its Making, Its Exegesis and Its Meaning. Philadelphia: Westminster.

Hyldahl, N.
1961 “Die Versuchung auf der Zinne des Tempels (Matth 4,5–7 ≠ Luk 4,9–12).” Studia Theologica 15:113–27.

Ireland, D. J.
1989 “A History of Recent Interpretation of the Parable of the Unjust Steward (Luke 16:1–13).” Westminster Theological Journal 51:293–318.
1992 Stewardship and the Kingdom of God: An Historical, Exegetical, and Contextual Study of the Parable of the Unjust Steward in Luke 16:1–13. Novum Testamentum Supplement 70. Leiden: Brill.

Isaac, E.

1981 “Another Note on Luke 6:1.” Journal of Biblical Literature 100:96–97.

ISBE The International Standard Bible Encyclopedia. Edited by G. W. Bromiley et al. 4 vols. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1979–88.

James, M. R.
1953 The Apocryphal New Testament. Corrected edition. Oxford: Clarendon.

Jarvis, P. G.
1965–66 “The Tower-Builder and the King Going to War (Luke 14$^{25–33}$).” Expository Times 77:196–98.

Jaschke, H.
1971 “ ‘Λαλεῖν’ bei Lukas: Ein Beitrag zur lukanischen Theologie.” Biblische Zeitschrift 15:109–14.

Jastrow, M.
1903 A Dictionary of the Targumim, the Talmud Babli and Yerushalmi, and the Midrashic Literature. London: Trübner/New York: Putnam. Reprinted New York: Judaica, 1950.

Jaubert, A.
1965 The Date of the Last Supper. Translated by I. Rafferty. Staten Island, N.Y.: Alba.

Jellicoe, S.
1959–60 “St Luke and the ‘Seventy(-two).’ ” New Testament Studies 6:319–21.

Jeremias, J.
1926a “Das Gebetsleben Jesu.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 25:123–40.
1926b Golgotha. Ἄγγελος: Archiv für Neutestamentliche Zeitgeschichte und Kulturkunde 1. Leipzig: Pfeiffer.
1929a “Ἄνθρωποι Εὐδοκίας (Lc 2:14).” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 28:13–20.
1929b “Der Ursprung der Johannestaufe.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 28:312–20.
1931 “Zöllner und Sünder.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 30:293–300.

1936 “Die ‘Zinne’ des Tempels (Mt. 4,5; Lk. 4,9).” Zeitschrift des Deutschen Palätina-Vereins 59:195–208.

1949 “Proselytentaufe und Neues Testament.” Theologische Zeitschrift 5:418–28.

1958a Heiligengräber in Jesu Umwelt (Mt. 23,29; Lk. 11,47): Eine Untersuchung zur Volksreligion der Zeit Jesu. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

1958b Jesus’ Promise to the Nations. Translated by S. H. Hooke. Franz Delitzsch Lectures 1953. Studies in Biblical Theology 24. London: SCM/Naperville, Ill.: Allenson.

1959 “Paarweise Sendung im Neuen Testament.” Pp. 136–43 in New Testament Essays: Studies in Memory of Thomas Walter Manson. Edited by A. J. B. Higgins. Manchester: Manchester University Press. Reprinted in Jeremias’s Abba: Studien zur neutestamentlichen Theologie und Zeitgeschichte, pp. 132–39. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1966.

1960a Infant Baptism in the First Four Centuries. Translated by D. Cairns. Library of History and Doctrine. London: SCM/Philadelphia: Westminster.

1960b “Lukas 7,45: Εἰσῆλθον.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 51:131.

1961 “Drei weitere spätjüdische Heiligengräber.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 52:95–101.

1963a The Parables of Jesus. Translated by S. H. Hooke. Revised edition. New Testament Library. Philadelphia: Westminster/London: SCM.

1963b The Sermon on the Mount. Translated by N. Perrin. Facet Books, Biblical Series 2. Philadelphia: Fortress. (British edition: London: Athlone, 1961.)

1966 The Eucharistic Words of Jesus. 2d edition. Translated by N. Perrin. New Testament Library. London: SCM/New York: Scribner.

1966–67 “Palästinakundliches zum Gleichnis vom Säemann (Mark iv.3–8 par.).” New Testament Studies 13:48–53.

1967a “Die älteste Schicht der Menschensohn-Logien.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 58:159–72.

1967b The Prayers of Jesus. Translated by J. Bowden, C. Burchard, and J. Reumann. Studies in Biblical Theology 2/6. London: SCM.

1969 Jerusalem in the Time of Jesus: An Investigation into Economic and Social Conditions during the New Testament Period. Translated by F. H. Cave and C. H. Cave. London: SCM/Philadelphia: Fortress.

1971a New Testament Theology: The Proclamation of Jesus. Translated by J. Bowden. New Testament Library. London: SCM/New York: Scribner.

1971b “Tradition und Redaktion in Lukas 15.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 62:172–89.

1980 Die Sprache des Lukasevangeliums: Redaktion und Tradition im Nicht-Markusstoff des dritten Evangeliums.

Kritisch-exegetischer Kommentar über das Neue Testament, Sonderband. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

Jervell, J.
1972 Luke and the People of God: A New Look at Luke–Acts. Minneapolis: Augsburg.

John, M. P.
1975 “Luke 2.36–37: How Old Was Anna?” Bible Translator 26:247.

Johnson, A. F.
1979 “Assurance for Man: The Fallacy of Translating Anaideia by ‘Persistence’ in Luke 11:5–8.” Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 22:123–31.

Johnson, L. T.
1977 The Literary Function of Possessions in Luke–Acts. Society of Biblical Literature Dissertation Series 39. Missoula, Mont.: Scholars Press.
1991 The Gospel of Luke. Sacra Pagina 3. Collegeville, Minn.: Liturgical Press.

Johnson, M. D.

1988 The Purpose of Biblical Genealogies, with Special Reference to the Setting of the Genealogies of Jesus. 2d edition. Society for New Testament Studies Monograph Series 8. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Johnson, S. E.
1935 "A Note on Luke 13:1–5." Anglican Theological Review 17:91–95.

Jones, D. R.
1968 "The Background and Character of the Lukan Psalms." Journal of Theological Studies n.s. 19:19–50.

Joüon, P.
1939 "La Parabole des Mines (Luc, 19,12–27) et la Parabole des Talents (Matthieu, 25,14–30)." Recherches de Science Religieuse 29:489–94.

Juel, D.
1977 Messiah and Temple: The Trial of Jesus in the Gospel of Mark. Society of Biblical Literature Dissertation Series 31. Missoula, Mont.: Scholars Press.

Jülicher, A.
1899 Die Gleichnisreden Jesu. 2 vols. 2d edition. Freiburg im Breisgau: Mohr. Reprinted 1960.

Karris, R. J.
1977 Invitation to Luke: A Commentary on the Gospel of Luke with Complete Text from the Jerusalem Bible. Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday.

Käser, W.
1963 “Exegetische und theologische Erwägungen zur Seligpreisung der Kinderlosen Lc 23:29b.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 54:240–54.
1968 “Exegetische Erwägungen zur Seligpreisung des Sabbatarbeiters Lk 6,5 D.” Zeitschrift für Theologie und Kirche 65:414–30.

Keck, L. E.
1965 “The Poor among the Saints in the New Testament.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 56:100–29.

1970–71 “The Spirit and the Dove.” New Testament Studies 17:41–67.

Kee, H. C.
1967–68 “The Terminology of Mark’s Exorcism Stories.” New Testament Studies 14:232–46.

Keen, W. W.
1892 “The Bloody Sweat of Our Lord.” Baptist Quarterly Review 14:169–75.
1897 “Further Studies on the Bloody Sweat of Our Lord.” Bibliotheca Sacra 54:469–83.

Kelly, H. A.
1964 “The Devil in the Desert.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 26:190–220.

Kelly, W.
1943 Lectures on the Gospel of Matthew. Revised edition. New York: Loizeaux.

Kelso, J. L.

1962 “House.” Pp. 544–46 in The New Bible Dictionary. Edited by J. D. Douglas. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

Kenyon, F. G., and H. I. Bell
1907 Greek Papyri in the British Museum, vol. 3. London: British Museum.

Kerr, A. J.
1986–87 “Zacchaeus’s Decision to Make Fourfold Restitution.” Expository Times 98:68–71.

Kertelge, K.
1970 Die Wunder Jesu im Markusevangelium: Eine redaktionsgeschichtliche Untersuchung. Studien zum Alten und Neuen Testament 23. Munich: Kösel.

Kik, J. M.
1971 The Eschatology of Victory. Phillipsburg, N.J.: Presbyterian & Reformed.

Kilgallen, J. J.
1982 “What Kind of Servants Are We? (Luke 17,10).” Biblica 63:549–551.

Kilpatrick, G. D.
1942 “A Theme of the Lucan Passion Story and Luke xxiii.47.” Journal of Theological Studies o.s. 43:34–36.
1943 “Western Text and Original Text in the Gospels and Acts.” Journal of Theological Studies n.s. 44:24–36.
1965a “The Greek New Testament Text of Today and the Textus Receptus.” Pp. 189–208 in The New Testament in Historical and Contemporary Perspective: Essays in Memory of G. H. C. Macgregor. Edited by H. Anderson and W. Barclay. Oxford: Blackwell.
1965b “Λαοί at Luke ii.31 and Acts iv.25, 27.” Journal of Theological Studies n.s. 16:127.
1969 “Some Problems in New Testament Text and Language.” Pp. 198–208 in Neotestamentica et Semitica: Studies in Honour of Matthew Black. Edited by E. E. Ellis and M. Wilcox. Edinburgh: Clark.

Kim, C.-H.
1975 “The Papyrus Invitation.” Journal of Biblical Literature 94:391–402.

Kim, S.
1985 “The ‘Son of Man’ ” as Son of God. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans. (European edition: Tübingen: Mohr, 1983.)

Kimball, C. A.
1994 Jesus’ Exposition of the Old Testament in Luke’s Gospel. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 94. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Kinman, B.
1991 “Pilate’s Assize and the Timing of Jesus’ Trial.” Tyndale Bulletin 42:282–95.
1993 The “A-triumphal” Entry (Luke 19:28–48): Historical Backgrounds, Theological Motifs, and the Purpose of Luke. Th.D. thesis, University of Cambridge.

Kirk, J. A.
1972 “The Messianic Role of Jesus and the Temptation Narrative: A Contemporary Perspective (Concluded).” Evangelical Quarterly 44:91–102.

Kissinger, W. S.

1975 The Sermon on the Mount: A History of Interpretation and Bibliography. American Theological Library Association Bibliography Series 3. Metuchen, N.J.: Scarecrow/ATLA.

1979 The Parables of Jesus: A History of Interpretation and Bibliography. American Theological Library Association Bibliography Series 4. Metuchen, N.J.: Scarecrow/ATLA.

Kistemaker, S. J.

1980 The Parables of Jesus. Grand Rapids: Baker.

Kittel, G.

1925 “Die Bergpredigt und die Ethik des Judentums.” Zeitschrift für systematische Theologie 2:555–94.

Klassen, W.

1980–81 “ ‘A Child of Peace’ (Luke 10.6) in First Century Context.” New Testament Studies 27:488–506.

Klauck, H.-J.

1978 Allegorie und Allegorese in synoptischen Gleichnistexten.

Neutestamentliche Abhandlungen n.s. 13. Münster: Aschendorff.

1981 “Die Frage der Sündenvergebung in der Perikope von der Heilung des Gelähmten (Mk 2,1–12 parr).” Biblische Zeitschrift 25:223–48.

Klausner, J.

1925 Jesus of Nazareth: His Life, Times, and Teaching. Translated by H. Danby. New York: Macmillan.

Klein, G.

1974 “Lukas 1,1–4 als theologisches Programm.” Pp. 170–203 in Das Lukas-Evangelium: Die redaktionsgeschichtliche und kompositionsgeschichtliche Forschung. Edited by G. Braumann. Wege der Forschung 280. Darmstadt: Wissenschaftliche Buchgesellschaft. Originally published in Zeit und Geschichte: Dankesgabe an Rudolf Bultmann zum 80. Geburtstag, pp. 193–216. Edited by E. Dinkler. Tübingen: Mohr, 1964. Reprinted in Klein’s Rekonstruktion und Interpretation:

Gesammelte Aufsätze zum Neuen Testament, pp. 237–61. Beiträge zur evangelischen Theologie 50. Munich: Kaiser, 1969.

Klemm, K. G.

1969–70 “Das Wort von der Selbstbestattung der Toten: Beobachtungen zur Auslegungsgeschichte von Mt. viii.22 Par.” New Testament Studies 16:60–75.

Kloppenborg, J. S.

1978 “Wisdom Christology in Q.” Laval Théologique et Philosophique 34:129–47.

1987 The Formation of Q: Trajectories in Ancient Wisdom Collections. Studies in Antiquity and Christianity. Philadelphia: Fortress.

1988 Q Parallels: Synopsis, Critical Notes, and Concordance. Foundations and Facets Reference Series. Sonoma, Calif.: Polebridge.

Klostermann, E.

1929 Das Lukasevangelium. Handbuch zum Neuen Testament 5. Tübingen: Mohr. Reprinted 1975.

Knox, J.
1942 Marcion and the New Testament: An Essay in the Early History of the Canon. Chicago: University of Chicago Press.

Koch, K.
1969 The Growth of the Biblical Tradition: The Form-Critical Method. Translated by S. M. Cupitt. New York: Scribner.

Kodell, J.
1969 “Luke’s Use of Laos, ‘People,’ Especially in the Jerusalem Narrative (Lk 19,28–24,53).” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 31:327–43.

Koet, B. J.
1989 Five Studies on Interpretation of Scripture in Luke–Acts. Studiorum Novi Testamenti Auxilia 14. Louvain: Leuven University Press.

Köppen, K.-P.
1961 Die Auslegung der Versuchungsgeschichte unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der Alten Kirche: Ein Beitrage zur Geschichte der Schriftauslegung. Beiträge zur Geschichte der biblischen Exegese 4. Tübingen: Mohr.

Kosmala, H.

1963–68 “The Time of the Cock-Crow.” Annual of the Swedish Theological Institute 2:118–20; 6:132–34.

1965 “The Three Nets of Belial: A Study in the Terminology of Qumran and the New Testament.” Annual of the Swedish Theological Institute 4:91–113.

Kossen, H. B.

1956 “Quelques Remarques sur l’Ordre des Paraboles dans Luc xv et sur la Structure de Matthieu xviii 8–14.” Novum Testamentum 1:75–80.

Krämer, M.

1972 Das Rätsel der Parabel vom ungerechten Verwalter, Lk 16,1–13: Auslegungsgeschichte-Umfang-Sinn: Eine Diskussion der Probleme und Lösungsvorschläge der Verwalterparabel von den Vätern bis heute. Biblioteca di Scienze Religiose 5. Zurich: PAS.

Kraus, H.-J.

1989 Psalms 60–150: A Commentary. Translated by H. C. Oswald. Continental Commentaries. Minneapolis: Fortress.

Kremer, J.
1979 “Auferstanden-auferweckt.” Biblische Zeitschrift 23:97–98.

Kuhn, G.
1923 “Die Geschlechtsregister Jesu bei Lukas und Matthäus, nach ihrer Herkunft untersucht.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 22:206–28.

Kuhn, K. G.
1950 Achtzehngebet und Vaterunser und der Reim. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 1. Tübingen: Mohr.

Kümmel, W. G.
1950 “Das Gleichnis von den bösen Weingärtnern (Mark 12.1–9).” Pp. 120–31 in Aux Sources de la Tradition Chrétienne: Mélanges Offert à M. Maurice Goguel. Neuchâtel/Paris: Delachaux & Niestlé.

1957 Promise and Fulfilment: The Eschatological Message of Jesus. Translated by D. M. Barton. Studies in Biblical Theology 23. London: SCM/Naperville, Ill.: Allenson.

1975 Introduction to the New Testament. Revised edition. Translated by H. C. Kee. Nashville: Abingdon.

Kurz, W. S.

1985 “Luke 22:14–38 and Greco-Roman and Biblical Farewell Addresses.” Journal of Biblical Literature 104:251–68.

Kürzinger, J.

1974 “Lk 1,3: … Ἀκριβῶς Καθεξῆς Σοι Γράψαι.” Biblische Zeitschrift 18:249–55.

Lachs, S. T.

1987 A Rabbinic Commentary on the New Testament: The Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke. New York: Ktav.

Ladd, G. E.

1962 “The Kingdom of God—Reign or Realm?” Journal of Biblical Literature

81:230–38.

1974a The Presence of the Future: The Eschatology of Biblical Realism. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

1974b A Theology of the New Testament. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

Lagrange, M. J.

1921 Évangile selon Saint Luc. 2d edition. Paris: Gabalda.

Lake, K.

1907 The Historical Evidence for the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. London: Williams & Norgate/New York: Putnam.

1910 “Christmas.” Vol. 3 / pp. 601–8 in Encyclopaedia of Religion and Ethics. Edited by J. Hastings. Edinburgh: Clark/New York: Scribner.

Lambert, W. G.

1960 Babylonian Wisdom Literature. Oxford: Clarendon.

Lambrecht, J.

1967 Die Redaktion der Markus-Apokalypse: Literarische Analyse und Strukturuntersuchung. Analecta Biblica

28. Rome: Pontifical Biblical Institute Press.

Lane, W. L.
1974 The Gospel according to Mark. New International Commentary on the New Testament. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

La Potterie, I. de
1970 “Le Titre Κύριος Appliqué à Jésus dans l’Évangile du Luc.” Pp. 117–46 in Mélanges Bibliques en Hommage au R. P. Béda Rigaux. Edited by A. Descamps and A. de Halleux. Gembloux: Duculot.

LaSor, W. S.
1972 The Dead Sea Scrolls and the New Testament. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

Lattke, M.
1984 “On the Jewish Background of the Synoptic Concept ‘The Kingdom of God.’ ” Translated by M. Rutter. Pp. 72–91 in The Kingdom of God in the Teaching of Jesus. Edited by B. Chilton. Issues in Religion and Theology 5. Philadelphia: Fortress/London: SPCK.

Laufen, R.
1980 Die Doppelüberlieferungen der Logienquelle und des Markus-Evangeliums. Bonner biblische Beiträge 54. Königstein-Ts./Bonn: Hanstein.

Laurentin, R.
1957a Structure et Théologie de Luc I–II. Paris: Gabalda.
1957b “Traces d’Allusions Étymologiques en Luc 1–2, [part] II.” Biblica 38:1–23.
1967 Struktur und Theologie der lukanischen Kindheitsgeschichte. Translated by P. W. Arnold. Stuttgart: Katholisches Bibelwerk.

Lauterbach, J. Z.
1933–35 Mekilta de-Rabbi Ishmael. 3 vols. Philadelphia: Jewish Publication Society.

Leaney, A. R. C.
1955–56 “The Resurrection Narratives in Luke (xxiv.12–53).” New Testament Studies 2:110–14.
1958 A Commentary on the Gospel according to St. Luke. Harper’s (Black’s)

New Testament Commentaries. New York: Harper/London: Black.

1961–62 “The Birth Narratives in St Luke and St Matthew.” New Testament Studies 8:155–66.

Lee, G. M.

1970–71 “The Story of the Widow’s Mite.” Expository Times 82:344.

Légasse, S.

1969 Jésus et l’Enfant: “Enfants,” “Petits” et “Simples” dans la Tradition Synoptique. Études Bibliques. Paris: Gabalda.

Legault, A.

1954 “An Application of the Form-Critique Method to the Anointings in Galilee (Lk. 7,36–50) and Bethany (Mt. 26,6–13; Mk. 14,3–9; Jn. 12,1–8).” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 16:131–45.

Leipoldt, J.

1955 Die Frau in der antiken Welt und im Urchristentum. 2d edition. Leipzig: Koehler & Amelang.

Leisegang, H.
1922 Pneuma Hagion: Der Ursprung des Geistbegriffs der synoptischen Evangelien aus der griechischen Mystik. Veröffentlichungen des Forschungsinstituts für vergleichende Religionsgeschichte an der Universität Leipzig 4. Leipzig: Hinrichs.

Lentzen-Deis, F.
1970 Die Taufe Jesus nach den Synoptikern: Literarkritische und gattungsgeschichtliche Untersuchungen. Frankfurter Theologische Studien 4. Frankfurt am Main: Knecht.

Lerner, M. B.
1987 “The External Tractates.” Pp. 367–403 in The Literature of the Sages, vol. 1: Oral Tora, Halakha, Mishna, Tosefta, Talmud, External Tractates. Edited by S. Safrai. Compendia Rerum Iudaicarum ad Novum Testamentum 2/3. Philadelphia: Fortress/Assen: Van Gorcum.

Levey, S. H.

1974 The Messiah: An Aramaic Interpretation: The Messianic Exegesis of the Targum. Cincinnati: Hebrew Union College—Jewish Institute of Religion.

Liefeld, W. L.
1974 “Theological Motifs in the Transfiguration Narrative.” Pp. 162–79 in New Dimensions in New Testament Study. Edited by R. N. Longenecker and M. C. Tenney. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.
1984 “Luke.” Vol. 8 / pp. 797–1059 in The Expositor’s Bible Commentary. Edited by F. E. Gaebelein. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.

Lightfoot, J. B.
1889–90 The Apostolic Fathers. 5 vols. in 2 parts. London: Macmillan. Reprinted Grand Rapids: Baker, 1981.
1890 “The Brethren of the Lord.” Pp. 252–91 in Saint Paul’s Epistle to the Galatians. 10th edition. London: Macmillan.

Lindars, B.

1983 Jesus Son of Man: A Fresh Examination of the Son of Man Sayings in the Gospels in the Light of Recent Research. London: SPCK.

Linnemann, E.

1966 Jesus of the Parables: Introduction and Exposition. Translated by J. Sturdy. New York: Harper & Row. (British edition: The Parables of Jesus: Introduction and Exposition. London: SPCK.)

Linton, O.

1975–76 “The Parable of the Children’s Game: Baptist and Son of Man (Matt. xi.16–19 = Luke vii.31–5): A Synoptic Text-Critical, Structural and Exegetical Investigation.” New Testament Studies 22:159–79.

Ljungvik, H.

1963–64 “Zur Erklärung einer Lukas-Stelle (Luk. xviii.7).” New Testament Studies 10:289–94.

Loader, W. R. G.

1977–78 “Christ at the Right Hand—Ps. cx.1 in the New Testament.” New Testament Studies 24:199–217.

Loewe, W. P.
1974 “Towards an Interpretation of Lk 19:1–10.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 36:321–31.

Lohfink, G.
1971 Die Himmelfahrt Jesu: Untersuchungen zu den Himmelfahrts- und Erhöhungstexten bei Lukas. Studien zum Alten und Neuen Testament 26. Munich: Kösel.
1975 “ ‘Ich habe gesündigt gegen den Himmel und gegen dich’: Eine Exegese von Lk 15,18.21.” Theologische Quartalschrift 155:51–52.

Lohmeyer, E.
1959 Das Evangelium des Markus. Meyers kritisch-exegetischer Kommentar über das Neue Testament 1/2. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

Lohse, E.

1960 “Jesu Worte über den Sabbat.” Pp. 79–89 in Judentum-Urchristentum-Kirche: Festschrift für Joachim Jeremias. Edited by W. Eltester. Beiheft zur Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 26. Berlin: Töpelmann.

Loisy, A.
1924 L’Évangile selon Luc. Paris: Nourry.

Longenecker, R. N.
1970 The Christology of Early Jewish Christianity. Studies in Biblical Theology 2/17. London: SCM/Naperville, Ill.: Allenson.

Löning, K.
1971 “Ein Platz für die Verlorenen: Zur Formkritik zweier neutestamentlicher Legenden (Lk 7,36–50; 19,1–10).” Bibel und Leben 12:198–208.

Lorenzen, T.
1975–76 “A Biblical Meditation on Luke $16^{19–31}$.” Expository Times 87:39–43.

Lövestam, E.

1968 Spiritus Blasphemia: Eine Studie zu Mk 3,28f par Mt 12,31f, Lk 12,10. Scripta Minora Regiae Societatis Humaniorum Litterarum Lundensis 1966–67/1. Lund: Gleerup.

LSJ A Greek-English Lexicon. 9th edition. By H. G. Liddell, R. Scott, and H. S. Jones. Oxford: Clarendon, 1968.

Luce, H. K.
1933 The Gospel according to S. Luke. Cambridge Greek Testament for Schools and Colleges. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Lührmann, D.
1969 Die Redaktion der Logienquelle. Wissenschaftliche Monographien zum Alten und Neuen Testament 33. Neukirchen-Vluyn: Neukirchener Verlag.

Lundström, G.
1963 The Kingdom of God in the Teaching of Jesus: A History of Interpretation from the Last Decades of the Nineteenth Century to the Present Day.

Translated by J. Bulman. Edinburgh: Oliver & Boyd.

Luther, M.
1956 "The Sermon on the Mount." Translated by J. Pelikan. Pp. 1–294 in Luther's Works, vol. 21: The Sermon on the Mount (Sermons) and the Magnificat. Edited by J. Pelikan. St. Louis: Concordia. Originally 1530–32. Reprinted as "Wochenpredigten über Matth. 5–7" in D. Martin Luthers Werke: Kritische Gesamtausgabe, vol. 32 / pp. 299–544. Weimer: Böhlaus, 1906.

McArthur, H. K.
1959–60 "The Dependence of the Gospel of Thomas on the Synoptics." Expository Times 71:286–87.
1960 Understanding the Sermon on the Mount. New York: Harper.

Maccoby, H.
1982 "The Washing of Cups." Journal for the Study of the New Testament 14:3–15.

McCulloch, W.

1911–12 “The Pounds and the Talents.” Expository Times 23:382–83.

MacDonald, D.
1898–99 “Malchus’ Ear.” Expository Times 10:188.

McGaughy, L. C.
1975 “The Fear of Yahweh and the Mission of Judaism: A Postexilic Maxim and Its Early Christian Expansion in the Parable of the Talents.” Journal of Biblical Literature 94:235–45.

Machen, J. G.
1930 The Virgin Birth. New York: Harper. Reprinted Grand Rapids: Baker, 1965.

McHugh, J.
1975 The Mother of Jesus in the New Testament. Garden City: Doubleday/London: Darton, Longman & Todd.

McKelvey, R. J.
1969 The New Temple: The Church in the New Testament. Oxford Theological Monographs. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

McKnight, S.
1991a A Light among the Gentiles: Jewish Missionary Activity in the Second Temple Period. Minneapolis: Fortress.
1991b "Source Criticism." Pp. 135–72 in New Testament Criticism and Interpretation. Edited by D. A. Black and D. S. Dockery. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.

Mackowski, R. M.
1980 "Where is Biblical Emmaus?" Science et Esprit 32:93–103.

MacLaurin, E. C. B.
1978 "Beelzeboul." Novum Testamentum 20:156–60.

McNeile, A. H.
1915 The Gospel according to St. Matthew: The Greek Text with Introduction, Notes and Indices. London: Macmillan. Reprinted Grand Rapids: Baker, 1980.

Maddox, R.

1982 The Purpose of Luke–Acts. Forschungen zur Religion und Literatur des Alten und Neuen Testaments 126. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht. Reprinted Edinburgh: Clark, 1982.

Mahoney, M.
1980 "Luke 21:14–15: Editorial Rewriting or Authenticity?" Irish Theological Quarterly 47:220–38.

Mahoney, R.
1974 Two Disciples at the Tomb: The Background and Message of John 20.1–10. Theologie und Wirklichkeit 6. Frankfurt am Main: Lang.

Major, H. D. A.
1944 Basic Christianity. Oxford: Blackwell.

Malina, B. J., and J. H. Neyrey
1991 "Honor and Shame in Luke–Acts: Pivotal Values of the Mediterranean World." Pp. 25–65 in The Social World of Luke–Acts: Models for Interpretation. Edited by J. H. Neyrey. Peabody, Mass.: Hendrickson.

Mánek, J.
1957–58a “Fishers of Men.” Novum Testamentum 2:138–41.
1957–58b “The New Exodus in the Books of Luke.” Novum Testamentum 2:8–23.
1967 “On the Mount—On the Plain (Mt. v 1—Lk. vi 17).” Novum Testamentum 9:124–31.

Mann, J., and I. Sonne
1940 The Bible as Read and Preached in the Old Synagogue: A Study in the Cycles of the Readings from Torah and Prophets, as well as from Psalms, and in the Structure of the Midrashic Homilies, vol. 1: The Palestinian Triennial Cycle: Genesis and Exodus. Cincinnati: Hebrew Union College, 1940. Reprinted New York: Ktav, 1971.

Manson, T. W.
1949 The Sayings of Jesus: As Recorded in the Gospels according to St. Matthew and St. Luke. London: SCM.
1950–51 “The Cleansing of the Temple.” Bulletin of the John Rylands Library

33:271–82.

1955–56 “The Lord’s Prayer.” Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 38:99–113, 436–48.

Marcus, J.

1989 “Mark 14:61: ‘Are You the Messiah-Son-of-God?’ ” Novum Testamentum 31:125–41.

Marshall, I. H.

1965–66 “The Synoptic Son of Man Sayings in Recent Discussion.” New Testament Studies 12:327–51.

1968–69 “Son of God or Servant of Yahweh?—A Reconsideration of Mark i.11.” New Testament Studies 15:326–36.

1969 “Tradition and Theology in Luke (Luke 8:5–15).” Tyndale Bulletin 20:56–75.

1970 Luke: Historian and Theologian. Grand Rapids: Zondervan/Exeter: Paternoster.

1973a Eschatology and the Parables. 2d edition. London: Tyndale.

1973b “The Resurrection of Jesus in Luke.” Tyndale Bulletin 24:55–98.

1978 The Gospel of Luke: A Commentary on the Greek Text. New International Greek Testament Commentary. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

1980 Last Supper and Lord's Supper. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans/Exeter: Paternoster.

Martin, J. A.

1986 "Dispensational Approaches to the Sermon on the Mount." Pp. 35–48 in Essays in Honor of J. Dwight Pentecost. Edited by S. D. Toussaint and C. H. Dyer. Chicago: Moody.

1992 "Christ, the Fulfillment of the Law in the Sermon on the Mount." Pp. 248–63 in Dispensationalism, Israel and the Church: The Search for Definition. Edited by C. A. Blaising and D. L. Bock. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.

Martin, R. P.

1976 "Salvation and Discipleship in Luke's Gospel." Interpretation 30:366–80.

Marxsen, W.

1969 Mark the Evangelist: Studies on the Redaction History of the Gospel. Translated by J. Boyce et al. Nashville: Abingdon.

Mattill, A. J., Jr.

1975 "The Jesus-Paul Parallels and the Purpose of Luke–Acts: H. H. Evans Reconsidered." Novum Testamentum 17:15–46.

1979 Luke and the Last Things: A Perspective for the Understanding of Lukan Thought. Dillsboro, N.C.: Western North Carolina Press.

Mauser, U.

1963 Christ in the Wilderness: The Wilderness Theme in the Second Gospel and Its Basis in the Biblical Tradition. Studies in Biblical Theology 39. London: SCM/Naperville, Ill.: Allenson.

May, E. E.

1952 " '… For Power Went Forth from Him …' (Luke 6,19)." Catholic Biblical Quarterly 14:93–103.

Mayer-Maly, T.

1955 “Das Auftreten der Menge im Prozess Jesu und in den ältesten Christenprozessen.” Österreichisches Archiv für Kirchenrecht 6:231–45.

Meier, J. P.
1991 A Marginal Jew: Rethinking the Historical Jesus, vol. 1: The Roots of the Problem and the Person. Anchor Bible Reference Library. New York: Doubleday.
1994 A Marginal Jew: Rethinking the Historical Jesus, vol. 2: Mentor, Message, and Miracles. Anchor Bible Reference Library. New York: Doubleday.

Meijboom, H. U.
1993 A History and Critique of the Origin of the Marcan Hypothesis, 1835–1866: A Contemporary Report Rediscovered. Translated and edited by J. J. Kiwiet. New Gospel Studies 8. Macon, Ga.: Mercer University Press.

Meinertz, M.
1957 “ ‘Dieses Geschlecht’ im Neuen Testament.” Biblische Zeitschrift 1:283–89.

Ménard, J.-É.
1975 L'Évangile selon Thomas. Nag Hammadi Studies 5. Leiden: Brill.

Menzies, R. P.
1991 The Development of Early Christian Pneumatology, with Special Reference to Luke–Acts. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 54. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Merkel, H.
1967–68 "Jesus und die Pharisäer." New Testament Studies 14:194–208.

Merritt, R. L.
1985 "Jesus Barabbas and the Paschal Pardon." Journal for Biblical Literature 104:57–68.

Metzger, B. M.
1958–59 "Seventy or Seventy-two Disciples?" New Testament Studies 5:299–306.
1975 A Textual Commentary on the Greek New Testament. Corrected edition. London: United Bible Societies.

1992 The Text of the New Testament. 3d edition. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Meyer, B. F.
1964 “But Mary Kept All These Things … (Lk 2,19.51).” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 26:31–49.
1965 “Jesus and the Remnant of Israel.” Journal of Biblical Literature 84:121–30.
1979 The Aims of Jesus. London: SCM.

Meynet, R.
1978 “Comment Établir un Chiasme: À Propos des ‘Pèlerins d’Emmaüs.’” Nouvelle Revue Théologique 100:233–49.

Michaelis, W.
1950 “Das unbetonte καὶ Αὐτός bei Lukas.” Studia Theologica 4:86–93.

Michel, O.
1959–60 “Eine philologische Frage zur Einzugsgeschichte.” New Testament Studies 6:81–82.

Michel, O., and O. Betz
1960 “Von Gott gezeugt.” Pp. 3–23 in Judentum, Urchristentum, Kirche:

Festschrift für Joachim Jeremias. Edited by W. Eltester. Beiheft zur Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 26. Berlin: Töpelmann.

1962–63 “Nocheinmal: ‘Von Gott gezeugt.’ ” New Testament Studies 9:129–30.

Miller, M. P.

1969 “The Function of Isa 61:1–2 in 11Q Melchizedek.” Journal of Biblical Literature 88:467–69.

Miller, R. J.

1991 “The (A)historicity of Jesus’ Temple Demonstration: A Test Case in Methodology.” Pp. 235–52 in Society of Biblical Literature 1991 Seminar Papers. Edited by E. A. Lovering Jr. Atlanta: Scholars Press.

Milligan, W.

1892 “A Group of Parables.” Expositor, 4th series, 6:114–26.

Minear, P. S.

1964–65 “A Note on Luke xxii 36.” Novum Testamentum 7:128–34.

Mitchell, A. C.
1990 “Zacchaeus Revisited: Luke 19,8 as a Defense.” Biblica 71:153–76.

Miyoshi, M.
1974 Der Anfang des Reiseberichts, Lk 9,51–10,24: Eine redaktionsgeschichtliche Untersuchung. Analecta Biblica 60. Rome: Pontifical Biblical Institute Press.

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources. By J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan. Reprinted Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980.

Moessner, D. P.
1983 “Luke 9:1–50: Luke’s Preview of the Journey of the Prophet like Moses of Deuteronomy.” Journal of Biblical Literature 102:575–605.
1989 Lord of the Banquet: The Literary and Theological Significance of the Lukan Travel Narrative. Minneapolis: Fortress.
1990 “ ‘The Christ Must Suffer,’ The Church Must Suffer: Rethinking the Theology of the Cross in Luke–Acts.” Pp.

165–95 in Society of Biblical Literature 1990 Seminar Papers. Edited by D. J. Lull. Atlanta: Scholars Press.

Montefiore, C. G.
1930 Rabbinic Literature and Gospel Teachings. London: Macmillan.

Moo, D. J.
1983 The Old Testament in the Gospel Passion Narratives. Sheffield: Almond.

Moore, A. L.
1966 The Parousia in the New Testament. Novum Testamentum Supplement 13. Leiden: Brill.

Moore, G. F.
1905 “Συμφωνία Not a Bagpipe.” Journal of Biblical Literature 24:166–75.
1927–30 Judaism in the First Centuries of the Christian Era: The Age of the Tannaim. 3 vols. Cambridge: Harvard University Press.

Moran, W. L.
1963 “The Ancient Near Eastern Background of the Love of God in Deuteronomy.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 25:77–87.

Morgan, G. C.
1931 The Gospel according to Luke. New York: Revell.

Morganthaler, R.
1948 Die lukanische Geschichtsschreibung als Zeugnis: Gestalt und Gehalt der Kunst des Lukas. 2 vols. Abhandlungen zur Theologie des Alten und Neuen Testaments 14–15. Zurich: Zwingli.

Morosco, R. E.
1979 “Redaction Criticism and the Evangelical: Matthew 10 a Test Case.” Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 22:323–31.

Moule, C. F. D.
1957–58 “The Post-Resurrection Appearances in the Light of Festival Pilgrimages.” New Testament Studies 4:58–61.
1959 An Idiom Book of New Testament Greek. 2d edition. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

1966 “The Christology of Acts.” Pp. 159–85 in Studies in Luke–Acts: Essays Presented in Honor of Paul Schubert. Edited by L. E. Keck and J. L. Martyn. Nashville: Abingdon. Reprinted Philadelphia: Fortress, 1980.

Moulton, J. H., and W. F. Howard

1929 A Grammar of New Testament Greek, vol. 2: Accidence and Word-Formation. Edinburgh: Clark.

Muddiman, J.

1972 “A Note on Reading Lk 24,12.” Ephemerides Theologicae Lovanienses 48:542–48.

Müller, H.-P.

1960 “Die Verklärung Jesu: Eine motivgeschichtliche Studie.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 51:56–64.

Müller, U. B.

1977 “Vision und Botschaft: Erwägungen zur prophetischen Struktur der Verkündigung Jesu.” Zeitschrift für Theologie und Kirche 74:416–48.

Muller, V.
1944 “The Prehistory of the ‘Good Shepherd.’ ” Journal of Near Eastern Studies 3:87–90.

Murray, J.
1953 Divorce. Philadelphia: Committee on Christian Education, Orthodox Presbyterian Church.

Mussner, F.
1968 The Miracles of Jesus: An Introduction. Translated by A. Wimmer. Notre Dame, Ind.: University of Notre Dame Press.
1975 “Καθεξῆς im Lukasprolog.” Pp. 253–55 in Jesus und Paulus: Festschrift für Werner Georg Kümmel zum 70. Geburtstag. Edited by E. E. Ellis and E. Grässer. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

NA Novum Testamentum Graece. 26th edition. Edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland. Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979.

Nauck, W.
1955 “Freude in Leiden: Zum Problem einer urchristlichen Verfolgungstradition.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 46:68–80.

Neale, D. A.
1991 None but the Sinners: Religious Categories in the Gospel of Luke. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 58. Sheffield: Sheffield Academic Press.

Neirynck, F.
1973 “Minor Agreements Matthew-Luke in the Transfiguration Story.” Pp. 253–66 in Orientierung an Jesus: Zur Theologie der Synoptiker: Für Josef Schmid. Edited by P. Hoffmann, N. Brox, and W. Pesch. Freiburg: Herder. Reprinted in Neirynck’s Evangelica: Collected Essays [vol. 1 /] pp. 797–810. Edited by F. Van Segbroeck. Bibliotheca Ephemeridum Theologicarum Lovaniensium 60. Louvain: Leuven University Press/Peeters, 1982.

1977 “Παρακύψας Βλέπει: Lc 24,12 et Jn 20,5.” Ephemerides Theologicae Lovanienses 53:113–52. Reprinted in Neirynck’s Evangelica: Collected Essays [vol. 1 /] pp. 401–40. Edited by F. Van Segbroeck. Bibliotheca Ephemeridum Theologicarum Lovaniensium 60. Louvain: Leuven University Press/Peeters, 1982.

1985 “Lc 24,36–43: Un Récit Lucanien.” Pp. 655–80 in À Cause de l’Évangile: Études sur les Synoptiques et les Acts, Mélanges Offertes au R. P. Jacques Dupont. Edited by F. Refoulé. Lectio Divina 123. Paris: Cerf. Reprinted in Neirynck’s Evangelica: Collected Essays, vol. 2: 1982–1991, pp. 205–26. Edited by F. Van Segbroeck. Bibliotheca Ephemeridum Theologicarum Lovaniensium 99. Louvain: Leuven University Press/Peeters, 1991.

Nestle, E.

1901–2 “ ‘Emmaus’ Mistaken for a Person.” Expository Times 13:477.

1903 “Sykophantia im biblischen Griech.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 4:271–72.

1910–11 “The Honeycomb of Luke xxiv.” Expository Times 22:567–68.

1912 “Wer nicht mit mir ist, der ist wider mich.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 13:84–87.

Neugebauer, F.

1974–75 “Die Davidssohnfrage (Mark xii.35–37 parr.) und der Menschensohn.” New Testament Studies 21:81–108.

Neu Luther Die Bibel nach der Übersetzung Martin Luthers. Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft, 1984.

Neusner, J.

1977–86 The Tosefta. 6 vols. New York: Ktav.

1984 Judaism in the Beginning of Christianity. Philadelphia: Fortress.

1986 Sifré to Numbers: An American Translation and Explanation. 2 vols.

(through §115). Brown Judaic Studies 118 and 119. Atlanta: Scholars Press. (Vol. 3 forthcoming by W. S. Green.)

1987 Sifre to Deuteronomy: An Analytical Translation. 2 vols. Brown Judaic Studies 98, 101. Atlanta: Scholars Press.

1988a Mekhilta according to Rabbi Ishmael: An Analytical Translation. 2 vols. Brown Judaic Studies 148 and 154. Atlanta: Scholars Press.

1988b Sifra: An Analytical Translation. 3 vols. Brown Judaic Studies 138–40. Atlanta: Scholars Press.

Neusner, J., and B. D. Chilton

1991 "Uncleanness: A Moral or an Ontological Category in the Early Centuries A.D..?" Bulletin for Biblical Research 1:63–88.

Neusner, J., W. S. Green, and E. S. Frerichs (eds.)

1987 Judaisms and Their Messiahs at the Turn of the Christian Era. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Neusner, J., et al.

1982–93 The Talmud of the Land of Israel: A Preliminary Translation and Explanation. 35 vols. Chicago: University of Chicago Press.

Neyrey, J. H.
1985 The Passion according to Luke: A Redaction Study of Luke's Soteriology. Mahwah, N.J.: Paulist.
1991 "Ceremonies in Luke–Acts: The Case of Meals and Table Fellowship." Pp. 361–87 in The Social World of Luke–Acts: Models for Interpretation. Edited by J. H. Neyrey. Peabody, Mass.: Hendrickson.

Nickelsburg, G. W. E.
1978–79 "Riches, the Rich and God's Judgment in 1 Enoch 92–105 and the Gospel according to Luke." New Testament Studies 25:324–44.

NIDNTT The New International Dictionary of New Testament Theology. Edited by L. Coenen, E. Beyreuther, and H. Bietenhard. English translation edited by C. Brown. 4 vols. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1975–86.

Nissen, A.

1974 Gott und der Nächste im antiken Judentum: Untersuchungen zum Doppelgebot der Liebe. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 15. Tübingen: Mohr.

Noack, B.
1948 Das Gottesreich bei Lukas: Eine Studie zu Luk. 17,20–24. Symbolae Biblicae Upsalienses 10. Uppsala: Gleerup.

Nolland, J.
1979 “Classical and Rabbinic Parallels to ‘Physician, Heal Yourself’ (Lk. iv 2).” Novum Testamentum 21:193–209.
1986 “Grace as Power.” Novum Testamentum 28:26–31.
1989 Luke 1–9:20. Word Biblical Commentary 35a. Dallas: Word.
1993a Luke 9:21–18:34. Word Biblical Commentary 35b. Dallas: Word.
1993b Luke 18:35–24:53. Word Biblical Commentary 35c. Dallas: Word.

North, C. R.

1956 The Suffering Servant in Deutero-Isaiah: An Historical and Critical Study. 2d edition. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

1964 The Second Isaiah: Introduction, Translation, and Commentary to Chapters xl–lv. Oxford: Clarendon.

Noth, M.

1928 Die israelitischen Personennamen im Rahmen der gemeinsemitischen Namengebung. Beiträge zur Wissenschaft vom Alten und Neuen Testament 3/10. Stuttgart: Kohlhammer.

Núñez C., E. A.

1985 Liberation Theology. Translated by P. E. Sywulka. Chicago: Moody.

Ogg, G.

1940 The Chronology of the Public Ministry of Jesus. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

1962 “Chronology of the New Testament.” Pp. 728–32 in Peake’s Commentary on the Bible. Edited by M. Black and H. H. Rowley. London: Nelson.

O’Hanlon, J.
1981 “The Story of Zacchaeus and the Lukan Ethic.” Journal for the Study of the New Testament 12:2–26.

Olmstead, A. T.
1942 Jesus in the Light of History. New York: Scribner.

O’Neill, J. C.
1959 “The Six Amen Sayings in Luke.” Journal of Theological Studies n.s. 10:1–9.
1970 The Theology of Acts in Its Historical Setting. 2d edition. London: SPCK.

Orchard, B., and H. Riley
1987 The Order of the Synoptics: Why Three Synoptic Gospels? Macon, Ga.: Mercer University Press.

O’Rourke, J. J.
1971–72 “Some Notes on Luke xv.11–32.” New Testament Studies 18:431–33.

Osborne, G. R.
1984 The Resurrection Narratives: A Redactional Study. Grand Rapids: Baker.

O’Toole, R. F.
1984 The Unity of Luke’s Theology: An Analysis of Luke–Acts. Good News Studies 9. Wilmington, Del.: Glazier.
1987a “The Kingdom of God in Luke–Acts.” Pp. 147–62 in The Kingdom of God in Twentieth-Century Interpretation. Edited by W. Willis. Peabody, Mass.: Hendrickson.
1987b “Luke’s Message in Luke 9:1–50.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 49:74–89.

Ott, W.
1965 Gebet und Heil: Die Bedeutung der Gebetsparänese in der lukanischen Theologie. Studien zum Alten und Neuen Testament 12. Munich: Kösel.

Pagenkemper, K. E.
1990 An Analysis of the Rejection Motif in the Synoptic Parables and Its Relationship to Pauline Soteriology. Th.D diss. Dallas Theological Seminary.

Palmer, H.
1976 “Just Married, Cannot Come.” Novum Testamentum 18:241–57.

Parsons, M. C.
1987 The Departure of Jesus in Luke–Acts: The Ascension Narratives in Context. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 21. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Patsch, H.
1971 “Der Einzug Jesu in Jerusalem: Ein historischer Versuch.” Zeitschrift für Theologie und Kirche 68:1–26.
1972 Abendmahl und historischer Jesus. Calwer Theologische Monographien A.1. Stuttgart: Calwer.

Patterson, S. J.
1989 “Fire and Dissension: Ipsissima Vox Jesu in Q 12:49, 51–53?” Forum 5:121–39.

Payne, D. F.
1962 “Bethlehem.” P. 144 in The New Bible Dictionary. Edited by J. D. Douglas. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.

Payne, J. B.
1967 “Zachariah Who Perished.” Grace Theological Journal o.s. 8/3:33–35.

Payne, P. B.
1978–79 “The Order of Sowing and Ploughing in the Parable of the Sower.” New Testament Studies 25:123–29.
1980 “The Authenticity of the Parable of the Sower and Its Interpretation.” Pp. 163–207 in Gospel Perspectives, vol. 1: Studies of History and Tradition in the Four Gospels. Edited by R. T. France and D. Wenham. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Pegg, H.
1926–27 “ ‘A Scorpion for an Egg’ (Luke xi.12).” Expository Times 38:468–69.

Pelletier, A.
1955 “Le ‘Voile’ du Temple de Jérusalem est-il Devenu la ‘Portière’ du Temple d’Olympie?” Syria 32:289–307.
1958 “Le Grand Rideau du Vestibule du Temple de Jérusalem.” Syria 35:218–26.

Pentecost, J. D.
1980 The Sermon on the Mount: Contemporary Insights for a Christian Lifestyle. Revised edition. Portland: Multnomah. (Originally Design for Living:

The Sermon on the Mount. Chicago: Moody, 1975.)

Perles, F.
1919–20 “Zwei Übersetzungsfehler im Text der Evangelien.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 19:96.

Perrin, N.
1963 The Kingdom of God in the Teaching of Jesus. New Testament Library. Philadelphia: Westminster/London: SCM.
1967 Rediscovering the Teaching of Jesus. New York: Harper & Row.

Perrot, C.
1973 “Luc 4,16–30 et la Lecture Biblique de l’Ancienne Synagogue.” Revue des Sciences Religieuses 47:324–40.

Pesch, R.
1968a “Levi-Matthäus (Mc 2:14 / Mt 9:9, 10:3): Ein Beitrag zur Lösung eines alten Problems.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 59:40–56.
1968b Naherwartungen: Tradition und Redaktion in Mk 13. Düsseldorf: Patmos.

1970a “Jaïrus (Mk 5,22/Lk 8,41).” Biblische Zeitschrift 14:252–56.

1970b Jesu ureigene Taten? Ein Beitrag zur Wunderfrage. Questiones Disputatae 52. Freiburg: Herder.

1970c “Das Zöllnergastmahl (Mk 2,15–17).” Pp. 63–87 in Mélanges Bibliques en Hommage au R. P. Béda Rigaux. Edited by A. Descamps and A. de Halleux. Gembloux: Duculot.

1971 “The Markan Version of the Healing of the Gerasene Demoniac.” Ecumenical Review 23:349–76.

1972 Der Besessene von Gerasa: Einstehung und Überlieferung einer Wundergeschichte. Stuttgarter Bibelstudien 56. Stuttgart: Katholisches Bibelwerk.

1973–74 “Das Messiasbekenntnis des Petrus (Mk 8,27–30): Neuverhandlung einer alten Frage.” Biblische Zeitschrift 17:178–95; 18:20–31.

1976–77 Das Markusevangeliums. 2 vols. Herders theologischer Kommentar zum Neuen Testament 2. Freiburg: Herder.

Petersen, W. L.

1981 “The Parable of the Lost Sheep in the Gospel of Thomas and the Synoptics.” Novum Testamentum 23:128–47.

Petuchowski, J. J., and M. Brocke (eds.)
1978 The Lord’s Prayer and Jewish Liturgy. New York: Seabury.

Petzke, G.
1975 “Der historische Jesus in der sozialethischen Diskussion: Mk 12,13–17 par.” Pp. 223–35 in Jesus Christus in Historie und Theologie: Neutestamentliche Festschrift für Hans Conzelmann zum 60. Geburtstag. Edited by G. Strecker. Tübingen: Mohr.

PG Patrologiae Cursus Completus, Series Graeca. Edited by J. P. Migne. 161 vols. Paris, 1857–66.

Pickl, J.
1946 The Messias. Translated by A. Green. St. Louis: Herder.

Pilgrim, W. E.
1971 The Death of Christ in Lukan Soteriology. Th.D. diss., Princeton University.

1981 Good News to the Poor: Wealth and Poverty in Luke–Acts. Minneapolis: Augsburg.

PL Patrologiae Cursus Completus, Series Latina. Edited by J. P. Migne. 221 vols. Paris, 1844–55.

Plevnik, J.

1991 “Son of Man Seated at the Right Hand of God: Luke 22,69 in Lucan Christology.” Biblica 72:331–47.

Plummer, A.

1896 A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Gospel according to St. Luke. International Critical Commentary. Edinburgh: Clark/New York: Scribner.

Plymale, S. F.

1991 The Prayer Texts of Luke–Acts. American University Studies, series 7: Theology and Religion 118. New York: Lang.

Pöhlmann, W.

1979 “Die Absichtung des verlorenen Sohnes (Lk 15.12f.) und die erzählte Welt der Parabel.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 70:194–213.

Polag, A.
1982 Fragmenta Q: Textheft zur Logienquelle. 2d edition. Neukirchen-Vluyn: Neukirchener Verlag.

Porter, S. E.
1990 “The Parable of the Unjust Steward (Luke 16.1–13): Irony Is the Key.” Pp. 127–53 in The Bible in Three Dimensions: Essays in Celebration of Forty Years of Biblical Studies in the University of Sheffield. Edited by D. J. A. Clines, S. F. Fowl, and S. E. Porter. Journal for the Study of the Old Testament Supplement 87. Sheffield: JSOT Press.
1992 “ ‘In the Vicinity of Jericho’: Luke 18:35 in the Light of Its Synoptic Parallels.” Bulletin for Biblical Research 2:91–104.

Pousma, R. H.

1975 “Diseases of the Bible.” Vol. 2 / pp. 132–42 in The Zondervan Pictorial Encyclopedia of the Bible. Edited by M. C. Tenney. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.

Power, E.
1923 “The Staff of the Apostles: A Problem in Gospel Harmony.” Biblica 4:241–66.

Power, M. A.
1912 “Who Were They Who ‘Understood Not’?” Irish Theological Quarterly 7:261–81, 444–59.

Rad, G. von
1962–65 Old Testament Theology. 2 vols. Translated by D. M. G. Stalker. New York: Harper & Row/Edinburgh: Oliver & Boyd.

Ragaz, L.
1945 Der Bergpredigt Jesus. Bern: H. Lang.

Ramsay, W. M.
1898 Was Christ Born at Bethlehem? A Study on the Credibility of St. Luke.

London: Hodder & Stoughton/New York: Putnam.

1898–99 “On Mark xii.42.” Expository Times 10:232, 336.

1920 The Bearing of Recent Discovery on the Trustworthiness of the New Testament. 4th edition. London: Hodder & Stoughton.

Ranke, L. von

1901 The History of the Popes. 3 vols. Translated by E. Fowler. New York: Colonial.

Rau, G.

1965 “Das Volk in der lukanischen Passionsgeschichte: Eine Konjektur zu Lk 23,13.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 56:41–51.

Rehkopf, F.

1959 Die lukanische Sonderquelle: Ihr Umfang und Sprachgebrauch. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 5. Tübingen: Mohr.

1961 “Mt. 26,50: Ἑταῖρε, ἐφ’ ᾧ Πάρει.” Zeitschrift für die

Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 52:109–15.

Reicke, B.
1968 New Testament Era: The World of the Bible from 500 B.C.. to A.D.. 100. Translated by D. E. Green. Philadelphia: Fortress.
1973 “Jesus in Nazareth—Lk 4,14–30.” Pp. 47–55 in Das Wort und die Wörter: Festschrift Gerhard Friedrich zum 65. Geburtstag. Edited by H. Balz and S. Schulz. Stuttgart: Kohlhammer.
1986 The Roots of the Synoptic Gospels. Philadelphia: Fortress.

Reiling, J., and J. L. Swellengrebel
1971 A Translator’s Handbook on the Gospel of Luke. Helps for Translators 10. Leiden: Brill, for the United Bible Societies.

Rengstorf, K. H.
1967 Die Re-Investitur des verlorenen Sohnes in der Gleichniserzählung Jesu Lk 15,11–32. Arbeitsgemeinschaft für Forschung des Landes Nordrhein-Westfalen, Geistswissenschaften 137. Cologne/Opladen: Westdeutscher Verlag.

1968 Das Evangelium nach Lukas. Das Neue Testament Deutsch 3. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

Rese, M.

1963 “Überprüfung einiger Thesen von Joachim Jeremias zum Thema des Gottesknechtes im Judentum.” Zeitschrift für Theologie und Kirche 60:21–41.

1969 Alttestamentliche Motive in der Christologie des Lukas. Studien zum Neuen Testament 1. Gütersloh: Mohn.

Resseguie, J. L.

1975 “Interpretation of Luke’s Central Section (Luke 9:51–19:44) since 1856.” Studia Biblica et Theologica 5/2:3–36.

Ridderbos, H.

1962 The Coming of the Kingdom. Translated by H. De Jongste. Edited by R. O. Zorn. Philadelphia: Presbyterian & Reformed.

Riesenfeld, H.

1949 “Ἐμβολεύειν–Ἐντός.” Nuntius 2:11–12.

Rigaux, B.
1970 “La Petite Apocalypse de Luc (xvii,22–37).” Pp. 407–38 in Ecclesia a Spiritu Sancto Edocta: Mélanges Théologiques Hommage à Mgr Gérard Philips. Bibliotheca Ephemeridum Theologicarum Lovaniensium 27. Gembloux: Duculot.

Rigg, H. A., Jr.
1945 “Barabbas.” Journal of Biblical Literature 64:417–56.

Ringgren, H.
1963 The Faith of Qumran: Theology of the Dead Sea Scrolls. Translated by E. T. Sander. Philadelphia: Fortress.

Rist, J. M.
1978 On the Independence of Matthew and Mark. Society for New Testament Studies Monograph Series 32. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Roberts, C. H.

1948 “The Kingdom of Heaven (Lk. xvii.21).” Harvard Theological Review 41:1–8.

Robertson, A. T.

1923 A Grammar of the Greek New Testament in the Light of Historical Research. 4th edition. Nashville: Broadman.

1923–24 “The Implications in Luke’s Preface.” Expository Times 35:319–21.

Robinson, J. A. T.

1957 “The Baptism of John and the Qumran Community: Testing a Hypothesis.” Harvard Theological Review 50:175–91. Reprinted in Robinson’s Twelve New Testament Studies, pp. 11–27. Studies in Biblical Theology 34. London: SCM/Naperville, Ill.: Allenson, 1962.

Robinson, W. C., Jr.

1964 Der Weg des Herrn: Studien zur Geschichte und Eschatologie im Lukas-Evangelium. Theologische Forschung 36. Hamburg-Bergstedt: Reich.

1966 “On Preaching the Word of God (Luke 8:4–21).” Pp. 131–38 in Studies in Luke–Acts: Essays Presented in Honor of Paul Schubert. Edited by L. E. Keck and J. L. Martyn. Nashville: Abingdon. Reprinted Philadelphia: Fortress, 1980.

Roloff, J.
1970 Das Kerygma und der irdische Jesus: Historische Motive in den Jesus-Erzählungen der Evangelien. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

Ropes, J. H.
1923–24 “St. Luke’s Preface: Ἀσφάλεια and Παρακολουθεῖν.” Journal of Theological Studies o.s. 25:67–71.

Rowley, H. H.
1950 “The Suffering Servant and the Davidic Messiah.” Oudtestamentische Studien 8:100–36.

Ruckstuhl, E.
1980 “Neue und alte Überlegungen zu den Abendmahlsworten Jesu.” Studien zum

Neuen Testament und seiner Umwelt 5:79–106.

Rüger, H. P.

1969 “Mit welchem Maß ihr meßt, wird euch gemessen werden.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 60:174–82.

1973 “Μαμωνᾶς.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 64:127–31.

Rüstow, A.

1960 “Ἐντὸς Ὑμῶν Ἐστιν: Zur Deutung von Lukas 17:20–21.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 51:197–224.

Safrai, S.

1974 “Relations between the Diaspora and the Land of Israel.” Vol. 1 / pp. 184–215 in The Jewish People in the First Century. Edited by S. Safrai and M. Stern. Compendia Rerum Iudaicarum ad Novum Testamentum 1/2. Philadelphia: Fortress/Assen: Van Gorcum.

1976a “Home and Family.” Vol. 2 / pp. 728–92 in The Jewish People in the First Century. Edited by S. Safrai and M. Stern. Compendia Rerum Iudaicarum ad Novum Testamentum 1/2. Philadelphia: Fortress/Assen: Van Gorcum.

1976b “Religion in Everyday Life.” Vol. 2 / pp. 793–833 in The Jewish People in the First Century. Edited by S. Safrai and M. Stern. Compendia Rerum Iudaicarum ad Novum Testamentum 1/2. Philadelphia: Fortress/Assen: Van Gorcum.

1976c “The Synagogue.” Vol. 2 / pp. 908–44 in The Jewish People in the First Century. Edited by S. Safrai and M. Stern. Compendia Rerum Iudaicarum ad Novum Testamentum 1/2. Philadelphia: Fortress/Assen: Van Gorcum.

1976d “The Temple.” Vol. 2 / pp. 865–907 in The Jewish People in the First Century. Edited by S. Safrai and M. Stern. Compendia Rerum Iudaicarum ad Novum Testamentum 1/2. Philadelphia: Fortress/Assen: Van Gorcum.

Sahlin, H.

1945a Der Messias und das Gottesvolk: Studien zur protolukanischen Theologie. Acta Seminarii Neotestamentici Upsaliensis 12. Uppsala: Almqvist & Wiksell.

1945b Zwei Lukas-Stellen: Lk 6:43–45; 18:7. Symbolae Biblicae Upsalienses 4. Uppsala: Wretman.

Saldarini, A. J.

1975 The Fathers according to Rabbi Nathan (Abot de Rabbi Nathan), Version B. Studies in Judaism in Late Antiquity 11. Leiden: Brill.

Salmon, M.

1988 “Insider or Outsider? Luke’s Relationship with Judaism.” Pp. 76–82 in Luke–Acts and the Jewish People: Eight Critical Perspectives. Edited by J. B. Tyson. Minneapolis: Augsburg.

Sanders, E. P.

1985 Jesus and Judaism. Philadelphia: Fortress.

1990 Jewish Law from Jesus to the Mishnah: Five Studies. Philadelphia:

Trinity/London: SCM.
1992 Judaism: Practice and Belief, 63 BCE–66 CE. London: SCM/Philadelphia: Trinity.
1993 The Historical Figure of Jesus. New York/London: Penguin.

Sanders, J. A.
1974 “The Ethic of Election in Luke’s Great Banquet Parable.” Pp. 245–71 in Essays in Old Testament Ethics (J. Philip Hyatt, In Memorium). Edited by J. L. Crenshaw and J. T. Willis. New York: Ktav.
1975 “From Isaiah 61 to Luke 4.” Pp. 75–106 in Christianity, Judaism, and other Greco-Roman Cults: Studies for Morton Smith at Sixty, vol. 1: New Testament. Edited by J. Neusner. Studies in Judaism in Late Antiquity 12/1. Leiden: Brill. Reprinted and revised in C. A. Evans and J. A. Sanders’s Luke and Scripture: The Function of Sacred Tradition in Luke–Acts, pp. 46–69. Minneapolis: Fortress, 1993.
1993 “Isaiah in Luke.” Pp. 14–25 in Luke and Scripture: The Function of Sacred

Tradition in Luke–Acts. By C. A. Evans and J. A. Sanders. Minneapolis: Fortress.

Sanders, J. T.
1968–69 "Tradition and Redaction in Luke xv.11–32." New Testament Studies 15:433–38.
1987 The Jews in Luke–Acts. Philadelphia: Fortress.

Saucy, M.
1994 "The Kingdom-of-God Sayings in Matthew." Bibliotheca Sacra. 151:175–97.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch. By H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck. 6 vols. Munich: Beck, 1922–61.

Schaberg, J.
1989 "Mark 14.62: Early Christian Merkabah Imagery?" Pp. 69–94 in Apocalyptic and the New Testament: Essays in Honor of J. Louis Martyn. Edited by J. Marcus and M. L. Soards. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 24. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Schalit, A.
1968 Namenwörterbuch zu Flavius Josephus. Supplement 1 to A Complete Concordance to Flavius Josephus, edited by K. H. Rengstorf. Leiden: Brill.

Schenk, W.
1974 Der Passionsbericht nach Markus: Untersuchungen zur Überlieferungsgechichte der Passionstraditionen. Gütersloh: Mohn.

Schenke, L.
1974 Die Wundererzählungen des Markusevangeliums. Stuttgarter biblische Beiträge. Stuttgart: Katholisches Bibelwerk.

Schlatter, A. von 1960 Das Evangelium des Lukas aus seinen Quellen erklärt. 2d edition. Stuttgart: Calwer.

Schlosser, J.
1980 Le Règne de Dieu dans les Dits de Jésus. 2 vols. Études Bibliques. Paris: Gabalda.

Schmahl, G.
1974 “Lk 2,41–52 und die Kindheitserzählung des Thomas 19,1–5: Ein Vergleich.” Bibel und Leben 15:249–58.

Schmid, J.
1959 Das Evangelium nach Mätthaus. 4th edition. Regensburger Neues Testament 1. Regensburg: Pustet.
1960 Das Evangelium nach Lukas. 4th edition. Regensburger Neues Testament 3. Regensburg: Pustet.

Schmidt, T. E.
1987 Hostility to Wealth in the Synoptic Gospels. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 15. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Schnackenburg, R.
1970 “Der eschatologische Abschnitt Lk 17,20–37.” Pp. 213–34 in Mélanges Bibliques en Hommage au R. P. Béda Rigaux. Edited by A. Descamps and A. de Halleux. Gembloux: Duculot.

Schneemelcher, W.

1991–92 New Testament Apocrypha. Revised edition. 2 vols. English translation edited by R. M. Wilson. Philadelphia: Westminster/John Knox.

Schneider, G.

1971 “Luke 1,34.35 als redaktionelle Einheit.” Biblische Zeitschrift 15:255–59.

1975 Parusiegleichnisse im Lukas-Evangelium. Stuttgarter Bibelstudien 74. Stuttgart: Katholisches Bibelwerk.

1977a Das Evangelium nach Lukas. 2 vols. Ökumenischer Taschenbuch-Kommentar 3. Gütersloh: Mohn.

1977b “Zur Bedeutung von Καθεξῆς im lukanischen Doppelwerk.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 68:128–31.

Schoedel, W. R.

1972 “Parables in the Gospel of Thomas: Oral Tradition or Gnostic Exegesis?” Concordia Theological Monthly 43:548–60.

Schoonheim, P. L.

1966 “Der alttestamentliche Boden der Vokabel Ὑπερήφανος in Lukas i 51.” Novum Testamentum 8:235–46.

Schottroff, L.
1971 “Das Gleichnis vom verlorenen Sohn.” Zeitschrift für Theologie und Kirche 68:27–52.

Schottroff, L., and W. Stegemann
1986 Jesus and the Hope of the Poor. Translated by M. J. O’Connell. Maryknoll, N.Y.: Orbis.

Schrage, W.
1964 Das Verhältnis des Thomas-Evangeliums zur synoptischen Tradition und zu den koptischen Evangelienübersetzungen: Zugleich ein Beitrag zur gnostischen Synoptikerdeutung. Beiheft zur Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 29. Berlin: de Gruyter.

Schramm, T.
1971 Der Markus-Stoff bei Lukas: Eine literarkritische und redaktionsgeschichtliche Untersuchung. Society for New Testament Studies Monograph Series 14. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Schreck, C. J.
1989 "The Nazareth Pericope: Luke 4,16–30 in Recent Study." Pp. 399–471 in L'Évangile de Luc—The Gospel of Luke. Edited by F. Neirynck. 2d edition. Bibliotheca Ephemeridum Theologicarum Lovaniensium 32. Louvain: Leuven University Press/Peeters.

Schubert, K.
1957 "The Sermon on the Mount and the Qumran Texts." Pp. 118–28 and 270–73 in The Scrolls and the New Testament. Edited by K. Stendahl. New York: Harper.

Schubert, P.
1957 "The Structure and Significance of Luke 24." Pp. 165–88 in Neutestamentliche Studien für Rudolf Bultmann. 2d edition. Beiheft zur Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 21. Berlin: Töpelmann.

Schulz, S.
1972 Q: Die Spruchquelle der Evangelisten. Zurich: Theologischer Verlag.

Schürer, E.
1890 A History of the Jewish People in the Time of Jesus Christ, vol. 2. Translated by J. Macpherson. Edinburgh: Clark/New York: Scribner.
1973–87 The History of the Jewish People in the Age of Jesus Christ (175 B.C..–A.D.. 135). Revised edition. 3 vols. Edited by G. Vermes, F. Millar, and M. Black. Edinburgh: Clark.

Schürmann, H.
1951 “Lk 22,19b–20 als ursprüngliche Textüberlieferung.” Biblica 32:364–92, 522–41.
1952 Einer quellenkritischen Untersuchung des lukanischen Abendmahlsberichtes, Lk 22,7–38, vol. 1: Der Paschamahlbericht, Lk 22,(7–14.) 15–18. Neutestamentliche Abhandlungen 19/5. Münster im Westphalia: Aschendorff.

1955 Einer quellenkritischen Untersuchung des lukanischen Abendmahlsberichtes, Lk 22,7–38, vol. 2: Der Einsetzungsbericht, Lk 22,19–20. Neutestamentliche Abhandlungen 20/4. Münster im Westphalia: Aschendorff.

1957 Einer quellenkritischen Untersuchung des lukanischen Abendmahlsberichtes, Lk 22,7–38, vol. 3: Jesu Abschiedsrede, Lk 22,21–38. Neutestamentliche Abhandlungen 20/5. Münster im Westphalia: Aschendorff.

1960 " 'Wer daher eines dieser geringsten Gebote auflöst …': Wo fand Matthäus das Logion Mt 5,19." Biblische Zeitschrift 4:238–50.

1964 "Der 'Bericht vom Anfang': Ein Rekonstruktionsversuch auf Grund von Lk. 4,14–16." Pp. 242–58 in Studia Evangelica, vol. 2: Papers Presented to the Second International Congress on New Testament Studies Held at Christ Church, Oxford, 1961, part 1: The New Testament

Scriptures. Edited by F. L. Cross. Texte und Untersuchungen 87. Berlin: Akademie-Verlag. Reprinted in Schürmann's Traditionsgeschichtliche Untersuchungen zu den synoptischen Evangelien, pp. 69–80. Düsseldorf: Patmos, 1968.

1968 Traditionsgeschichtliche Untersuchungen zu den synoptischen Evangelien. Kommentare und Beiträge zum Alten und Neuen Testament. Düsseldorf: Patmos.

1969 Das Lukasevangelium, vol. 1: Kommentar zu Kap. 1,1–9,50. Herders theologischer Kommentar zum Neuen Testament 3. Freiburg: Herder.

1973 "Wie hat Jesus seinen Tod bestanden und verstanden? Eine methodenkritische Besinnung." Pp. 325–63 in Orientierung an Jesus: Zur Theologie der Synoptiker: Für Josef Schmid. Edited by P. Hoffmann, N. Brox, and W. Pesch. Freiburg: Herder.

1994 Das Lukasevangelium, vol. 2/1: Kommentar zu Kapitel 9,51–11,54.

Herders theologischer Kommentar zum Neuen Testament 3. Freiburg: Herder.

Schwarz, G.
1974 “ ‘… Lobte den betrügerischen Verwalter’? (Lukas 16,8a).” Biblische Zeitschrift 18:94–95.
1975 “Ἰῶτα Ἓν ἢ Μία Κεραία (Matthäus 5,18).” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 66:268–69.
1978 “Καλὸν τὸ Ἅλας.” Biblische Notizen 7:32–35.
1979 “Κύριε, Ἰδοὺ Μάχαιραι Ὧδε Δύο.” Biblische Notizen 8:22.

Schweitzer, A.
1910 The Quest for the Historical Jesus: A Critical Study of Its Progress from Reimarus to Wrede. Translated by W. Montgomery. London: Macmillan.
1956 Das Messianitäts- und Leidensgeheimnis: Eine Skizze des Lebens Jesu. 3d edition. Tübingen: Mohr.

Schweizer, E.

1970 The Good News according to Mark. Translated by D. H. Madvig. Richmond: John Knox.

1984 The Good News according to Luke. Translated by D. E. Green. Atlanta: John Knox.

Scobie, C. H. H.

1964 John the Baptist. Philadelphia: Fortress.

Scott, B. B.

1989 Hear Then the Parable: A Commentary on the Parables of Jesus. Minneapolis: Fortress.

Scott, E. F.

1911 The Kingdom and the Messiah. Edinburgh: Clark.

1924 The Ethical Teaching of Jesus. New York: Macmillan.

Seeberg, A.

1914 Die vierte Bitte des Vaterunsers. Rostock: Erben.

Seecombe, D. P.

1982 Possessions and the Poor in Luke–Acts. Studien zum Neuen Testament und seiner Umwelt B/6. Linz: Plöchl.

Seitz, O. J. F.

1969–70 “Love Your Enemies: The Historical Setting of Matthew v.43f.; Luke vi.27f.” New Testament Studies 16:39–54.

Sellin, G.

1974–75 “Lukas als Gleichniserzähler: Die Erzählung vom barmherzigen Samariter (Lk 10:25–37).” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 65:166–89 and 66:19–60.

Seng, E. W.

1978 “Der reiche Tor: Eine Untersuchung von Lk. xii 16–21 unter besonderer Berücksichtigung form- und motivgeschichtlicher Aspekte.” Novum Testamentum 20:136–55.

Sherwin-White, A. N.

1963 Roman Society and Roman Law in the New Testament. Sarum Lectures 1960–61. Oxford: Clarendon.

Shin Kyo-Seon, G.
1989 Die Ausrufung des endgültigen Jubeljahres durch Jesus in Nazaret: Eine historisch-kritische Studie zu Lk 4,16–30. Europäische Hochshulschriften 23/378. Bern: Lang.

Shirock, R.
1992 “Whose Exorcists Are They? The Referents of οἱ Υἱοὶ Ὑμῶν at Matthew 12.27 / Luke 11.19.” Journal for the Study of the New Testament 46:41–51.

Siegman, E. F.
1968 “St. John’s Use of the Synoptic Material.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 30:182–98.

Sjöberg, E. K. T.
1938 Gott und die Sünder im palästinischen Judentum nach, dem Zeugnis der Tannaiten und der apokryphisch-pseudepigraphischen Literatur. Beiträge zur Wissenschaft vom Alten und Neuen Testament 79 (4/27). Stuttgart: Kohlhammer.

Skeat, T. C.
1988 “The ‘Second-First’ Sabbath (Luke 6:1): The Final Solution.” Novum Testamentum 30:103–6.

Sloan, R. B., Jr.
1977 The Favorable Year of the Lord: A Study of Jubilary Theology in the Gospel of Luke. Austin: Schola.

Smalley, S. S.
1973 “Spirit, Kingdom, and Prayer in Luke–Acts.” Novum Testamentum 15:59–71.

Smith, B. D.
1991 “The Chronology of the Last Supper.” Westminster Theological Journal 53:29–45.

Smith, M.
1971 “Zealots and Sicarii: Their Origins and Relation.” Harvard Theological Review 64:1–19.

Sneed, R.
1962 “ ‘The Kingdom of God Is within You’ (Lk 17,21).” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 24:363–82.

Snodgrass, K. R.
1972 "Western Non-interpolations." Journal of Biblical Literature 91:369–79.
1974–75 "The Parable of the Wicked Husbandmen: Is the Gospel of Thomas Version the Original?" New Testament Studies 21:142–44.
1980 "Streams of Tradition Emerging from Isaiah 40:1–5 and Their Adaptation in the New Testament." Journal for the Study of the New Testament 8:24–45.
1983 The Parable of the Wicked Tenants: An Inquiry into Parable Interpretation. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 27. Tübingen: Mohr.

Soards, M. L.
1987 The Passion according to Luke: The Special Material of Luke 22. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 14. Sheffield: JSOT Press.
1994 The Speeches in Acts: Their Content, Context, and Concerns. Louisville: Westminster/John Knox.

Souter, A.
1901–2 “ ‘Emmaus’ Mistaken for a Person.” Expository Times 13:429–30.
1914 “Interpretations of Certain New Testament Passages.” Expositor, 8th series, 8:94–96.

Sparks, H. F. D.
1936 “The Partiality of Luke for ‘Three,’ and Its Bearing on the Original of Q.” Journal of Theological Studies o.s. 37:141–45.

Sperber, D.
1967 “Mark xii 42 and Its Metrological Background: A Study in Ancient Syriac Versions.” Novum Testamentum 9:178–90.

Spicq, C.
1994 Theological Lexicon of the New Testament. 3 vols. Translated and edited by J. D. Ernest. Peabody, Mass.: Hendrickson.

Stamm, F. K.
1943 Seeing the Multitudes. New York: Harper.

Stanley, D. M.

1959–60 “The Mother of My Lord.” Worship 34:330–32.

Stauffer, E.
1960 Jesus and His Story. Translated by D. M. Barton. New York: Knopf/London: SCM.

Stegner, W. R.
1989 Narrative Theology in Early Jewish Christianity. Louisville: Westminster/John Knox.

Stein, R. H.
1976 “Is the Transfiguration (Mark 9:2–8) a Misplaced Resurrection-Account?” Journal of Biblical Literature 95:79–96.
1977 “Was the Tomb Really Empty?” Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 20:23–29.
1978 The Method and Message of Jesus’ Teachings. Philadelphia: Westminster.
1981 An Introduction to the Parables of Jesus. Philadelphia: Westminster.
1987 The Synoptic Problem: An Introduction. Grand Rapids: Baker.

1992 Luke. New American Commentary 24. Nashville: Broadman.

Stendahl, K.
1954 The School of St. Matthew and Its Use of the Old Testament. Acta Seminarii Neotestamentici Upsaliensis 20. Lund: Gleerup/Copenhagen: Munksgaard. Reprinted Philadelphia: Fortress, 1968.

Sterling, G. E.
1992 Historiography and Self-Definition: Josephos, Luke–Acts and Apologetic Historiography. Novum Testamentum Supplement 64. Leiden: Brill.

Stern, J. B.
1966 “Jesus’ Citation of Dt 6,5 and Lv 19,18 in the Light of Jewish Tradition.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 28:312–16.

Stern, M.
1974 “The Province of Judaea.” Vol. 1 / pp. 308–76 in The Jewish People in the First Century. Edited by S. Safrai and M. Stern. Compendia Rerum Iudaicarum ad Novum Testamentum 1/2. Philadelphia: Fortress/Assen: Van Gorcum.

1976 “Aspects of Jewish Society: The Priesthood and Other Classes.” Vol. 2 / pp. 561–630 in The Jewish People in the First Century. Edited by S. Safrai and M. Stern. Compendia Rerum Iudaicarum ad Novum Testamentum 1/2. Philadelphia: Fortress/Assen: Van Gorcum.

Strack, H. L., and G. Stemberger
1991 Introduction to the Talmud and Midrash. Translated by M. Bockmuehl. Edinburgh: Clark.

Strauss, D. F.
1972 The Life of Jesus Critically Examined. Translated by G. Eliot (from the 4th edition, 1840). Edited by P. C. Hodgson. Philadelphia: Fortress/London: SCM.

Strecker, G.
1978 “Die Antithesen der Bergpredigt (Mt 5:21–48 par).” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 69:36–72.
1988 The Sermon on the Mount: An Exegetical Commentary. Translated by O. C. Dean Jr. Nashville: Abingdon.

Streeter, B. H.
1924 The Four Gospels: A Study of Origins, Treating of the Manuscript Tradition, Sources, Authorship, and Dates. London: Macmillan.

Strobel, A.
1958a "Lukas der Antiochener (Bemerkungen zu Act 11,28 D)." Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 49:131–34.
1958b "Die Passa-Erwartung als urchristliches Problem in Lc 17:20f." Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 49:157–96.
1961a "In dieser Nacht (Luk 17,34): Zu einer älteren Form der Erwartung in Luk 17,20–37." Zeitschrift für Theologie und Kirche 58:16–29.
1961b Untersuchungen zum eschatologischen Verzögerungsproblem: Auf Grund der spätjüdisch-urchristlichen Geschichte von Habakuk 2,2ff. Novum Testamentum Supplement 2. Leiden: Brill.
1972 "Das Ausrufung des Jobeljahrs in der Nazarethpredigt Jesu: Zur apokalyptischen Tradition Lc 4:16–30.” Pp. 38–50 in Jesus in Nazareth. By E. Grässer et al. Beiheft zur Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 40. Berlin: de Gruyter.

1980 Die Stunde der Wahrheit: Untersuchungen zum Strafverfahren gegen Jesus. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 21. Tübingen: Mohr.

Stuhlmacher, P.

1968 Das paulinische Evangelium, vol. 1: Vorgeschichte. Forschungen zur Religion und Literatur des Alten und Neuen Testamentes 95. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

1986 Reconciliation, Law, and Righteousness: Essays in Biblical Theology. Translated by E. Kalin. Philadelphia: Fortress.

Suggs, M. J.

1970 Wisdom, Christology, and Law in Matthew’s Gospel. Cambridge: Harvard University Press.

1978 “The Antitheses as Redactional Products.” Pp. 93–107 in Essays on the Love Commandment. By L. Schottroff et al. Philadelphia: Fortress.

Surkau, H. W.
1938 Martyrien in jüdischer und frühchristlicher Zeit. Forschungen zur Religion und Literatur des Alten und Neuen Testaments 54. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

Swartley, W. M.
1983 “Politics or Peace (Eirēnē) in Luke’s Gospel.” Pp. 18–37 in Political Issues in Luke–Acts. Edited by R. J. Cassidy and P. J. Scharper. Maryknoll, N.Y.: Orbis.

Sylva, D. D.
1986 “The Temple Curtain and Jesus’ Death in the Gospel of Luke.” Journal of Biblical Literature 105:239–50.
1990 Reimaging the Death of the Lukan Jesus. Bonner biblische Beiträge 73. Frankfurt am Main: Hain.

Talbert, C. H.

1974 Literary Patterns, Theological Themes, and the Genre of Luke–Acts. Society of Biblical Literature Monograph Series 20. Missoula, Mont.: Scholars Press.

1978 Luke and the Gnostics: An Examination of the Lucan Purpose. Special Studies Series 5. Danville, Va.: Association of Baptist Professors of Religion.

1982 Reading Luke: A Literary and Theological Commentary on the Third Gospel. New York: Crossroad.

Tanenbaum, M. H.

1974 “Holy Year 1975 and Its Origins in the Jewish Jubilee Year.” Jubilaeum 7:63–79.

Tannehill, R. C.

1972 “The Mission of Jesus according to Luke iv 16–30.” Pp. 51–75 in Jesus in Nazareth. By E. Grässer et al. Beiheft zur Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 40. Berlin: de Gruyter.

1974 “The Magnificat as Poem.” Journal of Biblical Literature 93:263–75.

1975 The Sword of His Mouth. Semeia Supplements 1. Philadelphia: Fortress/Missoula, Mont.: Scholars Press.

1981a “The Pronouncement Story and Its Types.” Semeia 20:1–13.

1981b “Varieties of Synoptic Pronouncement Stories.” Semeia 20:101–19.

1985 “Israel in Luke–Acts: A Tragic Story.” Journal of Biblical Literature 104:69–85.

1986 The Narrative Unity of Luke–Acts: A Literary Interpretation, vol. 1: The Gospel according to Luke. Foundations and Facets. Philadelphia: Fortress.

Taylor, C.

1901 “Plato and the New Testament.” Journal of Theological Studies o.s. 2:432.

Taylor, V.

1926 Behind the Third Gospel: A Study of the Proto-Luke Hypothesis. Oxford: Clarendon.

1935 The Formation of the Gospel Tradition. 2d edition. London: Macmillan.

1966 The Gospel according to St. Mark. 2d edition. London: Macmillan. Reprinted Grand Rapids: Baker, 1981.

1972 The Passion Narrative of St Luke: A Critical and Historical Investigation. Edited by O. E. Evans. Society for New Testament Studies Monograph Series 19. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament. Edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich. Translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley. 10 vols. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76.

Thackeray, H. St. J.

1912–13 “A Study in the Parable of the Two Kings.” Journal of Theological Studies o.s. 14:389–99.

Theissen, G.

1983 The Miracle Stories of the Early Christian Tradition. Translated by F. McDonagh. Edited by J. Riches. Philadelphia: Fortress/Edinburgh: Clark.

Theobald, M.
1984 “Die Anfänge der Kirche: Zur Struktur von Lk. 5.1–6.19.” New Testament Studies 30:91–108.

Thiessen, H. C.
1934 “The Parable of the Nobleman and the Earthly Kingdom, Luke 19:11–27.” Bibliotheca Sacra 91:180–90.

Thomas, R. L., and S. N. Gundry
1978 A Harmony of the Gospels, with Explanations and Essays. Chicago: Moody.

Thrall, M. E.
1962 Greek Particles in the New Testament: Linguistic and Exegetical Studies. New Testament Tools and Studies 3. Leiden: Brill/Grand Rapids: Eerdmans.
1969–70 “Elijah and Moses in Mark’s Account of the Transfiguration.” New Testament Studies 16:305–17.

Thyen, H.
1970 Studien zur Sündenvergebung im Neuen Testament und seinen alttestamentlichen und jüdischen

Voraussetzungen. Forschungen zur Religion und Literatur des Alten und Neuen Testamentes 96. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

Tiede, D. L.
1980 Prophecy and History in Luke–Acts. Philadelphia: Fortress.
1988 Luke. Augsburg Commentary on the New Testament. Minneapolis: Augsburg.

Tödt, H. E.
1979 Der Menschensohn in der synoptischen Überlieferung. 4th edition. Gütersloh: Mohn. (An English edition of the 2d German edition [1963] is available: The Son of Man in the Synoptic Tradition. Translated by D. M. Barton. New Testament Library. Philadelphia: Westminster/London: SCM, 1965.)

Tolbert, M. A.
1979 Perspectives on the Parables: An Approach to Multiple Interpretations. Philadelphia: Fortress.

Toon, P.

1983–84 “Historical Perspectives on the Doctrine of Christ’s Ascension.” Bibliotheca Sacra 140:195–205, 291–301; 141:16–27, 112–19.

1984 The Ascension of Our Lord. Nashville: Nelson.

Torrey, C. C.

1933 The Four Gospels: A New Translation. New York: Harper.

1943 “The Name ‘Iscariot.’ ” Harvard Theological Review 36:51–62.

Toussaint, S. D.

1980 Behold the King: A Study of Matthew. Portland: Multnomah.

Townsend, J. T.

1984 “The Date of Luke–Acts.” Pp. 47–62 in Luke–Acts: New Perspectives from the Society of Biblical Literature Seminar. Edited by C. H. Talbert. New York: Crossroad.

1989 Midrash Tanh\uma (S. Buber Recension), vol. 1: Genesis. Hoboken, N.J.: Ktav.

Trudinger, L. P.

1976 “Once Again, Now, ‘Who Is My Neighbour?’ ” Evangelical Quarterly 48:160–63.

Tuckett, C. M.
1983 The Revival of the Griesbach Hypothesis: An Analysis and Appraisal. Society for New Testament Studies Monograph 44. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Tuckett, C. M. (ed.)
1983 The Messianic Secret. Issues in Religion and Theology 1. Philadelphia: Fortress/London: SPCK.

Turner, C. H.
1925–26 “Ὁ Υἱός Μου ὁ Ἀγαπητός.” Journal of Theological Studies o.s. 27:113–29.

Turner, D. L.
1991 “ ‘Dubious Evangelicalism?’ A Response to John Gerstner’s Critique of Dispensationalism.” Grace Theological Journal 12:263–77.

Turner, M. M. B.

1982 “The Sabbath, Sunday, and the Law in Luke/Acts.” Pp. 99–157 in From Sabbath to Lord’s Day: A Biblical, Historical, and Theological Investigation. Edited by D. A. Carson. Grand Rapids: Zondervan.

Turner, N.
1963 A Grammar of New Testament Greek, vol. 3: Syntax. Edinburgh: Clark.

Twelftree, G. H.
1993 Jesus the Exorcist: A Contribution to the Study of the Historical Jesus. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 2/54. Tübingen: Mohr/Peabody, Mass.: Hendrickson.

Tyson, J. B.
1960 “Jesus and Herod Antipas.” Journal of Biblical Literature 79:239–46.
1986 The Death of Jesus in Luke–Acts. Columbia: University of South Carolina Press.

UBS[3] The Greek New Testament. 3d corrected edition. Edited by K. Aland, M. Black, C. M. Martini, B. M. Metzger, and

A. Wikgren. New York: United Bible Societies, 1983.

UBS[4] The Greek New Testament. 4th edition. Edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger. New York: United Bible Societies, 1993.

Untergassmair, F. G.
1980 Kreuzweg und Kreuzigung Jesu: Ein Beitrag zur lukanischen Redaktionsgeschichte und zur Frage nach der lukanischen "Kreuzestheologie." Paderborner theologische Studien 10. Paderborn/Munich: Schöningh.

VanderKam, J. C.
1979 "The Origin, Character, and Early History of the 364-Day Calendar: A Reassessment of Jaubert's Hypotheses." Catholic Biblical Quarterly 41:390–411.

Van Der Loos, H.
1965 The Miracles of Jesus. Novum Testament Supplement 9. Leiden: Brill.

Van Iersel, B. M. F.

1960 “The Finding of Jesus in the Temple: Some Observations on the Original Form of Luke ii 41–51a.” Novum Testamentum 4:161–73.

1967 “La Vocation de Lévi (Mc., ii,13–17; Mt., ix,9–13; Lc., v,27–32): Traditions et Rédactions.” Pp. 212–32 in De Jésus aux Évangiles: Tradition et Rédaction des le Évangiles Synoptiques, vol. 2. Edited by I. de La Potterie. Bibliotheca Ephemeridum Theologicarum Lovaniensium 25/2. Gembloux: Duculot.

Van Unnik, W. C.

1960 “The ‘Book of Acts’ the Confirmation of the Gospel.” Novum Testamentum 4:26–59.

1964 “Die rechte Bedeutung des Wortes treffen, Lukas 2,19.” Pp. 129–47 in Verbum: Essays on Some Aspects of the Religious Function of Words, Dedicated to Dr. H. W. Obbink. By T. P. Van Baaren et al. Studia Theologica Rheno-Traiectina 6. Utrecht: Kemink. Reprinted in Sparsa Collecta: The Collected Essays of W. C. Van Unnik, vol. 1: Evangelia, Paulina, Acta, pp. 72–91. Novum Testamentum Supplement 29. Leiden: Brill, 1973.

1966 “Die Motivierung der Feindesliebe in Lukas vi 32–35.” Novum Testamentum 8:284–300.

1973 “Once More St. Luke’s Prologue.” Neotestamentica 7:7–26.

1979 “Luke’s Second Book and the Rules of Hellenistic Historiography.” Pp. 37–60 in Les Actes des Apôtres: Traditions, Rédaction, Theólogie. Edited by J. Kremer. Bibliotheca Ephemeridum Theologicarum Lovaniensium 48. Gembloux: Duculot/Louvain: Leuven University Press.

Vermes, G.

1967 “The Use of בר נש / בר נשא in Jewish Aramaic.” Pp. 310–30 in An Aramaic Approach to the Gospels and Acts, by M. Black. 3d edition. Oxford: Clarendon.

1973 Jesus the Jew: A Historian’s Reading of the Gospels. New York:

Macmillan/London: Collins. Reprinted Philadelphia: Fortress, 1981.

Vielhauer, P.

1952 “Das Benedictus des Zacharias (Luk. 1,68–79).” Zeitschrift für Theologie und Kirche 49:255–72.

1965 “Ein Weg zur neutestamentlichen Christologie? Prüfung der Thesen Ferdinand Hahn.” Evangelische Theologie 25:24–72. Reprinted in Vielhauer’s Aufsätze zum Neuen Testament, pp. 141–98. Theologische Bücherei 31. Munich: Kaiser, 1965.

1966 “On the ‘Paulinism’ of Acts.” Translated by W. C. Robinson Jr. and V. P. Furnish. Pp. 33–50 in Studies in Luke–Acts: Essays Presented in Honor of Paul Schubert. Edited by L. E. Keck and J. L. Martyn. Nashville: Abingdon/London: SPCK.

Violet, B.

1938 “Zum rechten Verständnis der Nazareth-Perikope Lc $4^{16–30}$.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 37:251–71.

Vogt, E.
1959 “Sabbatum ‘Deuteróprōton’ in Lc 6,1 et Antiquum Kalendarium Sacerdotale.” Biblica 40:102–5.

Völkel, M.
1973–74 “Exegetische Erwägungen zum Verständnis des Begriffs Καθεξῆς im lukanischen Prolog.” New Testament Studies 20:289–99.
1978 “Freund der Zöllner und Sünder.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 69:1–10.

Volkmar, G.
1870 Die Evangelien; oder, Marcus und die Synopsis der kanonischen und ausserkanonischen Evangelien nach dem ältesten Text. Leipzig: Fues.

Wainwright, A. W.
1977–78 “Luke and the Restoration of the Kingdom to Israel.” Expository Times 89:76–79.

Walker, W. O., Jr.
1978 “Jesus and the Tax Collectors.” Journal of Biblical Literature 97:221–38.

Wall, R. W.
1987 “ ‘The Finger of God’: Deuteronomy 9.10 and Luke 11.20.” New Testament Studies 33:144–50.
1989 “Martha and Mary (Luke 10.38–42) in the Context of a Christian Deuteronomy.” Journal for the Study of the New Testament 35:19–35.

Walls, A. F.
1959 “ ‘In the Presence of the Angels’ (Luke xv 10).” Novum Testamentum 3:314–16.

Walton, B.
1657 Biblia Sacra Polyglotta. 6 vols. London: Roycroft.

Walvoord, J. F.
1974 Matthew: Thy Kingdom Come. Chicago: Moody.

Wanke, J.

1973 Die Emmauserzählung: Eine redactionsgeschichtliche Untersuchungen zu Lk 24,13–35. Erfurter theologische Studien 31. Leipzig: St. Benno.

Warfield, B. B.

1914 “Jesus’ Alleged Confession of Sin.” Princeton Theological Review 12:177–228. Reprinted in Warfield’s Christology and Criticism, pp. 97–145. New York: Oxford University Press, 1929. Reprinted Grand Rapids: Baker, 1981.

Weatherly, J. A.

1994 Jewish Responsibility for the Death of Jesus in Luke–Acts. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 106. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Webb, R. L.

1991 John the Baptizer and Prophet: A Socio-Historical Study. Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement 62. Sheffield: Sheffield Academic Press.

Wegner, U.

1985 Der Hauptmann von Kafarnaum (Mt 7,28a; 8,5–10.13 par Lk 7,1–10): Ein Beitrag zur Q-Forschung. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 2/14. Tübingen: Mohr.

Weinert, F. D.

1977 "The Parable of the Throne Claimant (Luke 19:12, 14–15a, 27) Reconsidered." Catholic Biblical Quarterly 39:505–14.

1981 "The Meaning of the Temple in Luke–Acts." Biblical Theology Bulletin 11:85–89.

Weiser, A.

1971 Die Knechtgleichnisse der synoptischen Evangelien. Studien zum Alten und Neuen Testament 29. Munich: Kösel.

Weiss, J.

1971 Jesus' Proclamation of the Kingdom of God. Translated and edited by R. H. Hiers and D. L. Holland. Philadelphia: Fortress. Reprinted Chico, Calif.: Scholars Press, 1985.

Weizsäcker, K. H. von

1864 Untersuchungen über die evangelische Geschichte: Ihr Quellen und den Gang ihrer Entwicklung. Gotha: Besser.

Wellhausen, J.
1904 Das Evangelium Lucae. Berlin: Reimer.
1911 Einleitung in die drei ersten Evangelien. 2d edition. Berlin: Reimer.

Wenham, D.
1972 “The Synoptic Problem Revisited: Some New Suggestions about the Composition of Mark 4:1–34.” Tyndale Bulletin 23:3–38.
1973–74 “The Interpretation of the Parable of the Sower.” New Testament Studies 20:299–319.
1984 The Rediscovery of Jesus’ Eschatological Discourse. Gospel Perspectives 4. Sheffield: JSOT Press.

Wenham, J. W.
1978–79 “How Many Cock-Crowings? The Problem of Harmonistic Text-Variants.” New Testament Studies 25:523–25.

1992a Easter Enigma. 2d edition. Grand Rapids: Baker.

1992b Redating Matthew, Mark and Luke: A Fresh Assault on the Synoptic Problem. Downers Grove, Ill.: InterVarsity.

Westcott, B. F.

1908 The Gospel according to St. John: The Greek Text with Introduction and Notes. 2 vols. Edited by A. Westcott. London: Murray. Reprinted Grand Rapids: Baker, 1980.

Westcott, B. F., and F. J. A. Hort

1881 The New Testament in the Original Greek. 2 vols. London: Macmillan/New York: Harper.

Westermann, C.

1969 Isaiah 40–66: A Commentary. Old Testament Library. Translated by D. M. G. Stalker. Philadelphia: Westminster/London: SCM.

White, K. D.

1964 “The Parable of the Sower.” Journal of Theological Studies n.s. 15:300–307.

Wiefel, W.
1988 Das Evangelium nach Lukas. Theologischer Handkommentar zum Neuen Testament 3. Berlin: Evangelische Verlagsanstalt.

Wiener, A.
1978 The Prophet Elijah in the Development of Judaism: A Depth-Psychological Study. London/Boston: Routledge & Kegan Paul.

Wifstrand, A.
1964–65 “Lukas xviii.7.” New Testament Studies 11:72–74.

Wight, F. H.
1953 Manners and Customs of Bible Lands. Chicago: Moody.

Wikgren, A.
1950 “Ἐντός.” Nuntius 4:27–28.

Wilckens, U.
1973 “Vergebung für die Sünderin (Lk 7,36–50).” Pp. 394–424 in Orientierung an Jesus: Zur Theologie der Synoptiker:

Für Josef Schmid. Edited by P. Hoffmann, N. Brox, and W. Pesch. Freiburg: Herder.

Wilcox, M.
1965 The Semitisms of Acts. Oxford: Clarendon.

Wilkinson, J.
1977 “The Case of the Bent Woman in Luke 13:10–17.” Evangelical Quarterly 49:195–205.

Wilson, S. G.
1969–70 “Lukan Eschatology.” New Testament Studies 16:330–47.
1973 The Gentiles and the Gentile Mission in Luke–Acts. Society for New Testament Studies Monograph Series 23. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
1983 Luke and the Law. Society for New Testament Studies Monograph 50. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Winandy, J.
1965 “La Prophétie de Syméon (Lc, ii,34–35).” Revue Biblique 72:321–51.

Windisch, H.

1951 The Meaning of the Sermon on the Mount: A Contribution to the Historical Understanding of the Gospels and to the Problem of Their True Exegesis. Translated by S. M. Gilmour. Philadelphia: Westminster.

Wink, W.

1968 John the Baptist in the Gospel Tradition. Society for New Testament Studies Monograph Series 7. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Winter, P.

1954 “Lc 2:49 and Targum Yerushalmi.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 45:145–79.

1954–55 “Magnificat and Benedictus—Maccabaean Psalms?” Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 37:328–47.

1955 “Ὅτι Recitativum in Luke i 25, 61, ii 23.” Harvard Theological Review 48:213–16.

1956 “On Luke and Lucan Sources: A Reply to the Reverend N. Turner.”

Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 47:217–42.

1958 “Lukanische Miszellen, III: Lc 2[11]: Χριστὸς Κύριος oder Χριστὸς Κυρίου?” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 49:67–75.

1974 On the Trial of Jesus. 2d edition revised and edited by T. A. Burkill and G. Vermes. Studia Judaica 1. Berlin: de Gruyter.

Witherington, B., III

1979 “On the Road with Mary Magdalene, Joanna, Susanna, and Other Disciples—Luke 8:1–3.” Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft 70:243–48.

1984 Women in the Ministry of Jesus: A Study of Jesus’ Attitudes to Women and Their Roles as Reflected in His Earthly Life. Society for New Testament Studies Monograph Series 51. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

1990 The Christology of Jesus. Minneapolis: Fortress.

Wolff, H. J.
1974 “Private Law, II: Hellenistic Private Law.” Vol. 1 / pp. 534–60 in The Jewish People in the First Century. Edited by S. Safrai and M. Stern. Compendia Rerum Iudaicarum ad Novum Testamentum 1/2. Philadelphia: Fortress/Assen: Van Gorcum.

Wood, H. G.
1954–55 “The Use of Ἀγαπάω in Luke viii.42, 47.” Expository Times 66:319–20.

Wrede, W.
1971 The Messianic Secret. Translated by J. C. G. Greig. Cambridge: Clarke. (Originally Das Messiasgeheimnis in den Evangelien: Zugleich ein Beitrag zum Verständnis des Markusevangeliums. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1901.)

Wrege, H.-T.
1968 Die Überlieferungsgeschichte der Bergpredigt. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 9. Tübingen: Mohr.

Wright, A. G.
1982 “The Widow’s Mites: Praise or Lament?—A Matter of Context.” Catholic Biblical Quarterly 44:256–65.

Wright, G. E.
1939 “The Good Shepherd.” Biblical Archaeologist 2:44–48.

Wuellner, W. H.
1967 The Meaning of “Fishers of Men.” New Testament Library. Philadelphia: Westminster.

Yates, J. E.
1964 “Luke’s Pneumatology and Lk. 11,20.” Pp. 295–99 in Studia Evangelica, vol. 2: Papers Presented to the Second International Congress on New Testament Studies Held at Christ Church, Oxford, 1961, part 1: The New Testament Scriptures. Edited by F. L. Cross. Texte und Untersuchungen 87. Berlin: Akademie-Verlag.

Zahn, T.
1920 Das Evangelium des Lucas. 3d/4th edition. Kommentar zum Neuen Testament

3. Leipzig: Diechert/Erlangen: Scholl. Reprinted Wuppertal: Brockhaus, 1988.

Zenner, J. K.
1894 “Philologisches zum Namen Nazareth.” Zeitschrift für katholische Theologie 18:744–47.

Zerwick, M.
1959 “Die Parabel vom Thronanwärter.” Biblica 40:654–74.
1963 Biblical Greek. Translated by J. Smith. Rome: Pontifical Biblical Institute Press.

Zlotnick, D.
1966 The Tractate “Mourning” (Séĕbmaḥoṯ): Regulations Relating to Death, Burial, and Mourning. Yale Judaica Series 17. New Haven: Yale University Press.

Zmijewski, J.
1972 Die Eschatologiereden des Lukas-Evangeliums: Eine traditions- und redaktionsgeschichtliche Untersuchung zu Lk 21,5–36 und Lk 17,20–37. Bonner biblische Beiträge 40. Bonn: Hanstein.

Zugibe, F. T.
1989 “Two Questions about Crucifixion: Does the Victim Die of Asphyxiation? Would Nails in the Hand Hold the Weight of the Body?” Bible Review 5/2:35–43.

Zürcher Bibel Die Heilige Schrift des Alten und des Neuen Testaments: Zürcher Bibel. 19th edition. Zurich: Verlag der Zürcher Bibel, 1987.

Index of Subjects

Aaron 433, 562
Abel 1122–24, 1560
Abilene 277, 283
abomination of desolation 1675–77
Abraham 78, 159–60, 350, 358, 1238, 1239, 1591, 1625, 1628–29 bosom 1368–70, 1857
  “children” 301, 305–6, 314, 1218, 1240, 1370–71, 1514, 1522 covenant 34, 155, 160, 181, 184–85
abyss 775
acceptable year of the Lord 410 accountability to God 1190, 1200, 1202, 1206, 1525, 1528, 1529, 1552, 1597, 1602 to people 1387, 1394
Acts, Book of 3, 12–13, 18, 27
Adam 21, 276, 331, 345, 348–50, 359–60, 363, 371, 383–84, 923
Admin 361
Adoptionism 71, 112, 344, 346–47 adultery 1356–57, 1462 adulthood, attaining 264

afterlife 1136–37, 1360–79, 1616–29 ages 1450, 1474, 1490–91, 1622
Agrippa I 283, 1819
Agrippa II 1816
ʿ*Ain Karim* 140
Akiva 516, 697, 1015, 1036, 1461, 1468, 1686, 1689, 1798, 1799
Alexandrian text type 19–20 alibi parallels 951 alms 1156, 1166–67, 1333, 1350 already-not yet 28, 31–32, 411, 572, 672, 850, 902, 1418, 1665, 1688
Ananias 1167
Anawim 143–44
ancestral registration 204
Andrew 543–44
angaría 1549–50, 1554
angels 80–81, 214, 370–71, 382, 1304, 1368, 1623, 1760–61, 1889–95, 1935
Anna 230, 233–34, 251–53, 255, 258, 1872
Annas 283–84, 910, 1775, 1779–82
annihilationism 1137 anointing 696–97, 702, 1885, 1888
Antiochus IV Epiphanes 757
Antipater 282

anti-Semitism 38–39, 679, 1535 anxiety 43, 1156, 1158–68, 1761–62
apocalyptic 1409, 1413–14, 1429, 1655 apostasy 1141, 1382, 1384–85 apostles 538–39, 541–42, 1732, 1737–38, 1741–42, 1750, 1897–98 apostolic faith 1883–84
Archelaus 282–83, 905, 1205, 1525–26, 1532, 1534
Aretas IV 328
Arimathea 1568, 1873–74
arrogance 614
ascension 27, 33, 869, 967–68, 972, 1797 assurance 64–66, 1650, 1673, 1696, 1923, 1925, 1938
Assyria 307, 1126, 1656
Atonement, Day of 515
Augustine 1681
Augustinian hypothesis 7, 914 authenticity see historicity avarice 1349 awe 460, 487, 653 ax 306–8, 669, 1210

babies 1009–10, 1679
Babylon 1656, 1685 bag (purse) 814, 1745–47

ban, the 579, 1783
banquet (table) 494–95, 1239, 1253, 1271–72, 1295
baptism 315, 326, 1190, 1939
  ancient 288–89
  John's 288–89, 296, 320 of death 1193–94
  of spirit and fire 320–25
  proselyte 288
Baptist tradition 100–101, 163–64, 173
Barabbas 1752, 1823, 1829, 1833, 1953–54
Barnabas 1002, 1569
barrenness 78, 98, 1846
Bartholomew (= Nathaniel) 544
Bartimaeus 1506 bath (measure) 1330–31 bath qol 339–40 battle imagery 1082, 1084–85 beating 1184, 1598
Beatitudes 138–39, 559, 570–72, 669–70, 992, 1086, 1089, 1094–95, 1175, 1179, 1944–45
Beelzebub (Baal-Zebub/Beezebul) 748–49, 751, 970, 1074, 1092, 1140–42 begging 1328, 1506
Belial (Beliar) 737, 1074, 1082, 1704 beloved disciple 1885, 1887–88, 1900

Benedictus 163, 172, 174–75, 177, 196–97, 253, 258
Bethany 1038, 1040, 1400, 1552–53, 1568, 1701, 1929, 1944
Bethlehem 50, 127–28, 203–5, 209, 216, 256, 903–5
Bethphage 1552–53
Bethsaida 388, 543–44, 828, 950, 1003–4 betrayal 1730, 1732–35, 1744, 1750 betrothal 107, 205–6 bier 651–52
birds 733, 1226, 1437–40
birth account 163, 201 birth announcement 73–74, 81, 83, 102–3, 105, 107, 111–17, 127, 211, 213–14 birth from God 124 blasphemy 465–66, 482–84, 705, 1567, 1576, 1792–93, 1797–99, 1828 against Jesus 1790
against Son of Man 1140–42 against the Holy Spirit 1140–1142 nature of 1798–1802 blessing 94–95, 138, 1175, 1234–35, 1266–67, 1360, 1481, 1484–86, 1488, 1591 blessings and cursings 179 blindness 399–401, 409, 610–13, 668, 1266, 1275, 1473, 1482, 1501, 1506–8, 1513, 1561, 1565, 1589, 1826 boats 455, 759–60

Boethusians 1959
boldness 42, 1059–60, 1134–35
Book of Life 1008–9 bowing 473, 797, 1891
Branch (messianic) 191–92 branch waving 1547, 1549
bread 524–25, 1367, 1717, 1724–25, 1919 bribe 312
burial 651, 979–981, 1875
burial wrappings 651, 979–981, 1875
Byzantine text type 19–20

Caesar Augustus (= Octavian) 202–3, 225, 282, 903–4, 910–11
Caesarea Philippi 865–66
Caiaphas 283–84, 910, 1703, 1779, 1781, 1809
calendars 910–13
Caligula 1652
call narrative 490, 537
Calvary 1849
Capernaum 388, 416, 423–24, 428–29, 435–36, 444, 1003–5 capital cases 1781, 1806, 1808–9, 1811 captives 399–401, 409

caravans 264–66
carob pods 1311–12
census 200, 202–4, 209, 903–9 centurion 629, 635–38, 1405, 1825, 1836, 1838, 1841, 1863–65 chaos 1659, 1665–68, 1696 character 625, 1115, 1335, 1337, 1588
chiasmus 50, 89, 145, 399, 405, 425, 893 chief priests 1580, 1820, 1913–14 children 261, 680–81, 894–97, 899, 1058–59, 1467–72, 1473, 1482 chiliasm 1681
choice 1432, 1436, 1441
Chorazin 1003–4
Christmas, date of 227
Christology 29–33, 45, 333–34 church 938, 1267, 1388, 1418, 1456, 1741, 1925, 1930, 1941, 1947 fasting and 518
  Israel and 41, 541
  Jewish versus Gentile 3, 569 kingdom and 1222
  mission 489
  new community 35–43
  rejection 40–41

Sabbath and 523 sinner and 489 society and 401
the Twelve and 539
Church of the Holy Sepulchre 1876
Church of the Nativity 208 church-state 1607–8, 1613–14
Chuza 714, 1817
circumcision 166, 224–25, 520
civil disorder 1665–68
Cleopas 1903, 1907, 1909, 1911 clothes 1365, 1746, 1820–21 clothing 592–93, 670–71, 867, 1365, 1890 clouds 673, 866, 872–73, 1650, 1685–86 cock crows 1786–88 coin 1607, 1612–14 comfort 1372, 1673
Coming One 665 commission 785, 814–18, 1330 commission narrative 452 commitment 41, 1565, 1672 community 1387, 1419, 1738, 1880, 1926, 1947 comparison 1318, 1462–64, 1466 compassion 1032–33, 1214, 1262, 1313, 1372, 1377–78, 1450

Constantine 227
consummation 1444, 1491, 1525, 1527, 1536–37, 1567, 1667, 1675–77 continuity-discontinuity 520–21 controversy 1066, 1076, 1108–9, 1254, 1412, 1582, 1616, 1647 conversion 1513
cor 1331
Corinth 611, 1150, 1260
cosmic signs 1650, 1667–68, 1682–84, 1686, 1840–41, 1858–61 cosmic spiritual battle 770, 772–74, 782, 805–6 Court of Women 1645 covenantal unfaithfulness 1550, 1561, 1564, 1656, 1675, 1678 covenants 34, 146–47, 158–60, 183–84
  Abrahamic see Abraham, covenant Davidic 114–17, 182, 938, 1635, 1797 new 1943
covenant theology 942
covetousness 1153, 1482 creation 518, 1547, 1560, 1866–67 criminals on the cross 1848–49 cross 33–34, 1830–31, 1842 bearing 1280, 1286, 1289

date 1821
placard 1811
crippled 1266
crowd 38, 302–3, 435, 453–54, 722–23, 791, 1283, 1812, 1829–32 crucifixion 1497, 1706, 1830–31, 1894, 1923
date 1550
injustice 1841 inscription 1831, 1853–54
Jesus' clothes and 1850–51 reactions to 1840, 1866
Roman 1830 cup of wrath 1759–60, 1763 cursing 589–90
Cynics 997, 999
Cyrene 1568, 1842
Cyrus 292, 354

dancing 680–81, 1316
Daniel 1496, 1613
darkness 193, 409, 1100–1103, 1238, 1510–11, 1773–74, 1858–59
date setting 1414
David 34, 180–81, 218, 356–57, 524–27, 1000, 1335, 1508, 1556, 1635–38, 1799 covenant 114–17, 182, 938, 1635, 1797

genealogies and 918–23
hope 1523
promise 114–15, 1081, 1638–39
Psalter 1635–36
rule 1224, 1226
servant 180
son 105, 114–15, 172, 1639 throne 114–15
day(s) are coming 142, 1561, 1662–63 laborer 1312–13 of Messiah 1424, 1427 of Noah and Lot 1427, 1434 of preparation 1876 of the Lord 299, 1002, 1181–82, 1430, 1440, 1663, 1858–59 of the Son of Man 1424, 1427–28, 1430–32, 1434, 1438 of visitation 1546, 1551, 1676, 1679
that day 480–81, 1002
dead/death 193, 802, 1117, 1206–7, 1367–70, 1439–40, 1618, 1623, 1674, 1857–58, 1923 debt 1200, 1207, 1329–32, 1339–40 debtor’s prison 1199
Decapolis 388

deceit 1608, 1611, 1664–65 decision (/call to . . .) 1192, 1200, 1210, 1219, 1236, 1252, 1285 defection 1382–83, 1394, 1757 defilement 651, 1030 delay (of coming/return) 1181, 1426–27, 1444–47, 1453–55
deliverance 182, 186, 193–94, 408–9, 573–74, 764, 778, 1520 demons 426–27, 430–34, 770, 781–82, 878, 993, 1006, 1091–93; see also spirits abyss 775 binding 773 casting out 882–83 cries 431, 773–75 influence 1215 possession 430–31, 443, 565, 766, 771, 773–74, 776–78, 1704 seizures and 881–84
  waterless places and 1091
denarius 698–99, 831, 1199–1200, 1331–32, 1533, 1612, 1645 dependence 1210, 1390, 1457, 1482, 1757
destruction 1662, 1673 deuteronomistic books 1592, 1606 devil 303, 733; see also Satan disasters 1659, 1667–68 disbelief 1898, 1934

disciples 22–23, 460–62, 566, 570–71, 728, 755, 850, 875, 890–92, 954–55, 1128, 1132, 1285–86, 1441, 1444, 1457, 1473, 1525, 1696 associations 1320–21
  assurance 1143–45
  authority 812–13, 897–99, 992–93, 1005–8
  blessing 1013–14
  call 452–53, 537, 559–60, 861
  care 898
  commission 1569, 1939–41, 1947
  commitment 1284
  cost 1280, 1287–89, 1292–93 cross bearing see taking up cross defense 1671
  denying self 852, 861
  exorcists 1077–78
  failure 877–78, 882–83, 885–86, 889–91, 965–66, 970–71, 1494–95, 1499–1501, 1804
  Father and 603–4, 1038 following 1260, 1280, 1282, 1285–87, 1481–82, 1488, 1491
  forgiveness 1055

gathering 446–47 homeless 978–79
honoring God 1696 leaving (selling/giving) all (half) 1280, 1283, 1285, 1287–88, 1473, 1481–83, 1488, 1490–91, 1521 lodging 816–17 losing one's life 854–56, 861 love and 559–60, 587, 603–4, 896, 1027, 1035, 1037–38, 1304–5 missions 809–19, 972, 982, 975, 986–1016, 1304–5, 1925–26, 1928 misunderstanding 889–91, 954–55, 1531, 1753
new way 850–61
not be led astray 1664 organization 537, 994 persecution 1143–45, 1668–75 position 1008–9
prayer 1045–65
provisions 1143–45
reaction at Jesus' arrest 1765
reception 997–1001, 1005
rejection 40–41, 577–82, 975, 1001–2, 1004–5, 1014, 1132, 1444
relationships 1017

responsibility 1531, 1534, 1537
resurrection and 954–55, 1882, 1884, 1889, 1895–1901, 1910, 1915–20, 1932, 1937–38 roots 446–47, 547
service 780
seventy or seventy-two? 1014–16
submission 853–54
taking up cross (cross bearing) 852–54, 1280, 1286, 1289 temptation 1753, 1757, 1762–63, 1769–71 trust 1128–29, 1132, 1138, 1156–68 warned about suffering 852–57, 876 watching 1569 wise 618 witness 1670
worship 1945–47
discipleship 23–24, 35–43, 45–47 demands 974–85, 1133–45 double-minded 984
price 1672
priority 1164–65, 1167–68, 1280, 1283
rejection 977–78, 1285
restoration 984
dismember 1182–84 distress 1679, 1682–83

Dives 1360
divine man 367 division 1188, 1189, 1191–92, 1194–96, 1200, 1214, 1219, 1232–33 divorce 1344, 1348, 1356–59
Docetism 112, 1927–28
dogs 1366–67 door 1058, 1230–31, 1234–36 doubt 1930, 1933 dove 334, 338–39 dowry 1303
drachma 1303–4, 1533 dropsy 1253–54, 1256–57 drunkenness 1181, 1693 duty 1381, 1392–94
dysentery 436

earthquakes 1667, 1683, 1838, 1863, 1889 eating and drinking 514–15
“Eighteen Benedictions” 180, 182, 579, 979, 1047, 1050–54, 1084 elders 1447, 1583–84, 1767, 1772, 1782, 1794, 1826–27, 1838
elect 1445, 1451–56
Eleven, the 1739–41, 1767, 1896, 1922
Eli 107, 135, 137, 144–45

Elijah 88, 417–19, 652–54, 660, 672, 674, 823, 868–71, 901–2, 971, 980, 982 Elisha 417–19, 465, 646, 652–53, 982 elitism 1738
Elizabeth 68–69, 76–78, 96–100, 125–26, 132–39, 143, 160–61, 165, 167, 1872–73
embassy 1289
Emmaus 1568, 1700, 1879, 1900, 1903–23 empty tomb 1880, 1882, 1884, 1886, 1888–90, 1894–96, 1898, 1900, 1903 end-time 1501, 1650–51, 1657, 1664, 1666, 1675–76, 1679, 1682–94, 1696 endurance 1650–51, 1659, 1674, 1696 enemies 182–83, 185, 1237 eras 1344–45, 1348, 1350–54, 1727–29 old and new 675–76, 686 promise and fulfillment 672, 675
Esau 135, 1235, 1368 eschatological discourse 1444 eschatological fervor 1656
eschatological hope 1510, 1558 eschatological renewal 1576 eschatological reversal 157–58, 577, 1232, 1239–40, 1265, 1360, 1364, 1369–73, 1464 eschatological signs 1412–14, 1419

eschatology 42, 1144–45, 1396, 1414, 1441, 1536, 1657–58, 1679–82
overrealized 1525 personal 42 realized 1180, 1427
eschaton 668–69, 868, 1273, 1322, 1350, 1409, 1512, 1549, 1557, 1740
Essenes 288, 478, 999, 1609, 1616 eternal life 1018, 1023, 1272, 1474, 1476, 1478, 1481, 1484, 1491–92, 1726 ethnarch 1526, 1532
Eucharist 832
evangelism 461, 1027, 1305 exaltation 1265, 1800–1801 examining others 614–15 example story 1021, 1039, 1363, 1459 exile 1243, 1250
exodus 182, 292, 381–82, 866, 868, 872, 1376, 1716–17, 1726, 1728 exorcism 427, 434, 565, 766, 769, 776, 897–99, 1006, 1073, 1077–78, 1091–93 by others 897–99 defeat of Satan 1083–85
God’s activity 1079–85 in the Gospels 1068–69

reactions to 1074–75
extortion 312–13 eye 1100–1103

face cloth 1538
fainting 1684
faith (trust) 35–36, 41, 456–57, 459–60, 629–30, 642–43, 704–5, 707–8, 733–34, 763–65, 798–800, 805–6, 1091–92, 1145–46, 1380–81, 1389–92, 1396, 1405–6, 1455–56, 1471, 1482–83, 1510–13, 1520–21, 1523–24, 1899–1900 examples 630, 637, 642–43, 707–8, 1405–6 falling away from 735–36, 739 Gentile 642–43
gift 1390
little 763, 794
faithfulness 185–86, 1166–67, 1177–82, 1322–23, 1335–37, 1445–46, 1530–31, 1535–37, 1543–44, 1693–95, 1742–43, 1762–63 falling and rising 246–47, 683 false claims 1659, 1664–65, 1696 false prophets 419, 1665, 1674, 1683 false teachers 586, 609–10, 612, 616, 1110, 1186, 1380, 1385 family 1195–96, 1280, 1283, 1285, 1189, 1489–90, 1672

famine 1311, 1667
farewell discourse (testament) 1717, 1719, 1730–51, 1930 fasting 371, 508–9, 512, 515–16, 521, 1463 fasting controversy 502–4, 508–9, 511–12, 514–18 fathers, the 159–60, 585, 1120, 1368 favus 472
fear 43, 81–82, 110–11, 169–70, 215, 462, 653, 763, 778, 797, 873, 1165, 1683, 1930, 1932 feasts 263–65, 1365, 1702–3, 1709 fellowship 1266–67, 1271, 1278, 1518, 1521, 1719, 1721, 1730, 1740; see also banquet and meals and table fellowhsip fever 436–37
figs/fig tree 1208–10, 1212, 1243, 1250, 1547, 1553, 1574, 1582, 1584, 1687 fire 307–8, 321–25, 970–71, 1191–92, 1194, 1370–71, 1433–34 firstborn, presentation of 234–35, 237, 240 fishers of men 446–47, 452–53, 460–62, 832 fishing 456–58
flagella 1828
flee 1434–35, 1441, 1677–78 flogging 1670 flood 1194

following 461–62, 781–82, 852–54, 977–78, 1285–87, 1481–82, 1488, 1491 food 310, 495, 520, 1053–54, 1057 fool/foolishness 1113–14, 1153–54, 1288–89, 1916 footwashing 1736, 1739, 1954 foreigner 1397–98, 1403–5 forgiveness 693, 703, 1055, 1380–82, 1387–89
Jesus' 705–8
John the Baptist and 289
justice and 1317–20
of debt 699
of others 607, 1055
of sins 189–90, 409, 482, 927–29, 1055, 1725, 1728, 1925–26, 1928, 1930, 1938–41, 1946
Son of Man and 927–30
form criticism 1905, 1956
forty days 369–70, 1929
fourfold payment 1520
Four Source theory 8–13, 914–17 fraud 313
"from now on" 151, 1195, 1251, 1351
fruit 304, 309–14, 616, 618, 717, 726, 733–34, 739, 1597–98, 1604, 1674 obstacles to 721–22, 735–38 fruitless 307–8

fulfillment 20–23, 28, 49, 56–57, 96–97, 114–15, 279–80, 411–13, 938, 1013–14, 1351, 1648–49, 1671, 1675–76, 1747–49, 1893–95, 1918, 1935–41 funerals 649, 651, 981 fustes 1828
fustigatio 1828

Gabriel 92, 106, 109–10, 121, 125–26
Gadara 388, 768, 782–84
Galilean ministry 22–23, 386–87, 446–47, 629, 715, 837, 899–900 Marcan portrayal 386–87
  miracles in 386
  outline 44–45, 387
  purpose 386, 389, 899–900
Galilee 106, 277, 388, 472, 759, 761, 775, 790, 866, 1003, 1244, 1400–1401, 1568, 1818, 1928
Galilee, Sea of see Gennesaret, Lake of Gamaliel 757
Gehenna 1136–37, 1234, 1238, 1370 genealogy 348–49, 918–23 generation 1095–99
  crooked and perverse 883 evil 1088, 1095, 1101, 1115 this generation 679–82, 1098, 1122, 1688–92

wicked 1092, 1105
generosity 587, 607, 1265–67, 1322, 1333–37, 1360, 1364, 1375, 1521, 1646
Gennesaret, Lake of (= Sea of Galilee) 388, 454, 472, 759, 1003 Gentiles 243–45, 634, 766, 1226–27, 1239–40, 1276–77, 1675, 1925–26; see also nations fullness of 1251
God's salvation and 2–3, 28 inclusion in blessing 399
Israel and 18, 28
law and 40
relationship to church 3, 18 times of 1251, 1548, 1680–82
Gerasa 388, 768, 771, 782–84
Gergesa 388, 782–84
Gerizim, Mount 969–70, 1205
Gethsemane 1744, 1752, 1754, 1756–57, 1849 gezerah shewah 290–91, 293, 404–5 girding loins 1174–75
giving 593–94, 1114, 1337, 1633, 1646–48 glory 214, 220, 224, 244–45, 291, 295–96 gnashing teeth 1183, 1238, 1542
God

acceptance by 1306, 1308, 1458, 1460–61, 1465–66, 1472, 1603 activity 3, 195–96, 653–54, 1066–67, 1198, 1429, 1891 aid 1852
allegiance to 378, 1482 approachable 1057, 1060, 1063–64, 1860–61 arm 153
authority 1218–20, 1607, 1939
blessing 1592, 1637, 1662, 1926, 1932, 1946
care 1137–38, 1144, 1154, 1156–57, 1160, 1162–65, 1168, 1249, 1301, 1481, 1841, 1862, 1945
children 1332–33
compassion 191, 1212, 1214, 1307, 1368 counsel 677, 684, 686
delay 1451–55
deliverance 668, 1229
dependence upon 1757, 1762 devotion to 1326, 1336 divine testimony 332, 334–47
elect 220, 1239
failure to respond to 1093, 1376
faithfulness 152, 292, 368, 1677
Father 1051–52, 1062, 1164, 1306, 1320, 1470–72, 1740, 1862, 1942

fear 1129, 1132, 1135–36, 1138, 1144–45, 1447–48, 1855
finger 1079, 1083, 1085
forgiveness 588, 607, 677, 683, 686, 703–5, 1055, 1295, 1307–8, 1320, 1743 generosity 1271, 1276, 1306, 1320
glory 872–73, 1052
goodness 1009–10, 1406, 1475 grace 460, 570–71, 603, 1061–62, 1278, 1318, 1320–21, 1404–6, 1524, 1542 gratitude 1404, 1406
Great Shepherd 996
harshness 1538–39, 1544
holiness 1052–53, 1056, 1478, 1799 honor 1577, 1579, 1613
honoring 1116, 1696 intimacy with 1051–52
Jesus' crucifixion and 2
Jesus' miracles and 1066–67, 1072, 1076–85 judgment 306–9, 314–15, 318–19, 1134–36, 1563–64, 1846–47, 1855 justice 1318, 1320, 1444–45, 1447, 1451–52, 1456, 1474
Lord 87, 188–89, 1051
Lord of the Harvest 995

love 700, 1035, 1053, 1116, 1307, 1314, 1419, 1478
master 242, 1051
mercy 152–53, 183–84, 603–5, 1313, 1398–99, 1403, 1464–65, 1940 merit 1459, 1461
Mighty One 151
name 1052–53, 1799
neglect 1375
new age 407–8, 521
of Abraham 1629 of the living 1625
omniscience 1134–35 patience 1202, 1209–11, 1452–55, 1592, 1594, 1600, 1606
peace 1561
plan 1–3, 12, 26, 27–29, 38, 40–41, 661–62, 889–90, 1220–21, 1409–10, 1656–57, 1663–64, 1734–35, 1749–50, 1880–82, 1893–94, 1898–99, 1903–4, 1925–26, 1935–36, 1938–41, 1946–47 power 153–56, 170, 479–81, 884–85, 1221–22, 1229, 1255, 1474, 1487, 1491, 1557, 1563, 1617, 1622, 1625, 1686, 1797, 1881, 1900 presence 873, 1235, 1371, 1434, 1637, 1917, 1943 promises 602–3, 1936–37, 1942–44, 1946–47; see also promise and fulfillment protection 673, 1055–56

providence 1168, 1613
Provider 871, 999, 1053–54, 1145, 1745, 1750 pursuit of sinner 1294–1321 relating to others and 1260, 1263 response to prayer 1755, 1760–61, 1763–64
resurrection and 1376, 1891, 1893
reward from 1334, 1337
righteousness 570–71, 1053, 1450, 1478
rule 1212, 1222, 1356, 1472, 1559, 1564 salvation 233, 241–43, 471, 474, 1009, 1723, 1725, 1729
Savior 149
service to 1324, 1326, 1336–37, 1392–94; see also discipleship Shekinah 1801
social classes and 153–54, 156–57, 572
sons of 1624
sovereignty 993–95, 1009–14, 1060, 1114, 1625, 1759, 1763, 1773, 1822, 1938 strength 1694, 1696 submission to 1240
testing of 378–82

trust of 1146, 1157, 1159–68, 1396, 1862 truth 745–47
vindication 156–58, 677, 1451–55, 1655 visit 122, 178–81, 654, 667 voice 340–43, 346–47, 862 walking with 1472 way 1236 will 1248, 1581, 1756, 1758–60, 1774, 1941 wisdom of 1120–22, 1589 word 93, 165–66, 170–71, 226, 242, 285, 383, 731–32, 751–52, 1094–96, 1377 work 1557–58, 1569–70
worship 1573, 1581
wrath 299, 303–4, 1003, 1385, 1452, 1682, 1734, 1759
God-fearers/God-fearing 146, 151–53, 156, 158, 161, 220, 238–39, 638, 1128–29, 1134–37, 1144–46, 1153, 1155 godless 1299, 1302
Golden Rule 595–98
Golgotha 1756, 1836–37, 1848–49
good Samaritan 1017–36, 1363, 1367 gospel (good news) 215, 216, 325, 401, 408, 1268, 1295, 1307, 1353, 1490, 1940, 1943
Gospel of Ebionites 338, 340

Gospel of Hebrews 338
Gospel of Nazareans 338, 528
Gospel of Thomas see Index of Scripture and Other Ancient Writings Goulder (Two-Gospel) Hypothesis 8 grain controversy 510–20, 522–23, 607–8 graves 1117–18, 1120, 1125
Great Commandment 1024–26, 1631 great omission of Luke 821, 950–51 greatness 891, 893–97, 1708, 1730, 1732, 1734–39, 1750 greed 1113–14, 1147–48, 1150–55, 1482, 1484 greetings 109–10, 997–98, 1117, 1642
Gregory of Nyssa 130
Griesbach (Two-Gospel) Hypothesis 7–8, 914–17 grumbling 496, 1298, 1321, 1519

Ḥaburah 1957
Hades 1004–5, 1361, 1363, 1367, 1369–70
Haftarah 411
Hallel Psalms 1721–22
hand washing 1111–12, 1824, 1832
Hannah 78, 236, 1462 harvest 324–25, 719–20, 995, 1084
Hasmoneans 1811 hate 578, 1284–86, 1336, 1389, 1672

healings 425, 565, 633, 713, 778, 818, 999–1000, 1212, 1409 amazement at 1073
in Acts 566
in Judaism 465 in synagogues 531
purpose 1067
sociology of 785 healthy, the 497–98
hear 635, 727, 746–47, 862, 888, 890, 899, 1292, 1298 hearing and doing 620, 748, 1094–95 heart 156, 250, 319, 617, 728–29, 738, 1113–14, 1167–68, 1344–45, 1375–76, 1378, 1647–48, 1670, 1693 heaven 211–12, 220, 333, 337–38, 1302–4, 1354, 1361, 1369–70, 1692 heavenly host 219–20, 334–47, 873–75 Heli 353 hell 1136, 1146
heritage 1371, 1375
Hermon, Mount 388, 866
Herod Agrippa I 283, 1819
Herod Agrippa II 1816

Herod Antipas 26, 282–83, 327–30, 713–15, 820–25, 1243–47, 1818–20, 1827–28, 1833
Herod Philip 329
Herod the Great 75, 256, 282, 664, 903–6, 908–9, 1256, 1532, 1660, 1811, 1819
Herodians 505, 507, 1609–10
Herodias 328–29 high priests 283–84, 1777, 1779, 1792, 1794–95 highway for God 293–95 historicity see also Sources and Historicity section in each unit apocalyptic material 1420–24, 1650–58, 1662–63
authenticity 1965
Barabbas's release 1833, 1953–54
Beelzebul dispute 1067–71
census of Quirinius 903–9
Jesus Seminar's view 1962, 1964–65
Son-of-Man sayings 926–30, 952–55 supernatural 72–73, 80–81, 103–5, 164, 211, 232
virgin birth 120–21
historiography 51–54, 66–67
holiness 152, 186–87, 1357
holy place 80, 94–95, 240, 524
Holy Spirit 32–33, 40–41, 121–23, 135–36, 172, 177, 239–40, 337–40, 1569–70, 1927–28, 1942–

47 anointing of Jesus 344–45 bestowal 1925–26
blaspheming against 1129, 1132, 1138–45 clothed with 1943 disciples and 27, 1144–45 end-time and 322–23 guide 1063
Jesus and 21, 115, 123, 320–25, 335, 337–47, 369, 391–92, 407–10, 433, 675
John the Baptist and 85–86, 194, 276
kingdom and 115, 1001, 1079, 1081–82
Messiah's baptism and 1532 prayer and 1062–63
honey 1949
hope 33, 157–58, 1320–21, 1446, 1453, 1456, 1481, 1913–14, 1923, 1940, 1947 horn of salvation 180
Hosanna 1559–60 hospitality 1057–58, 1265–67, 1918 hour 667, 1161, 1773 house 622–23, 1057, 1083, 1100, 1782 abandoned 1676 desolate 1250–51, 1547, 1581 destroyed 623–24 divided 1076

empty 1092–93 foundation 622
Jacob's 116
Palestinian 480, 621
two types 621–24
"how much more" argument 1062, 1444, 1450 hug 1313–14
humility 146–47, 154, 156–57, 408, 499–500, 568, 629–30, 639–40, 1260–67, 1313–14, 1320–21, 1393–95, 1457–60, 1464–66, 1487–88, 1501, 1524, 1565 hungry 146–47, 154, 157, 575–76 hymns 142–46, 148, 158, 175, 177–78, 232, 241 hypocrisy 614, 1109–10, 1118–19, 1128–29, 1132–33, 1183–84, 1197–98, 1217, 1587–88, 1610, 1773–74, 1855
Hyrcanus 81

idolatry 1150, 1345, 1482
Idumea 282, 1532
ignorance 1185–86, 1868
illness 667, 772
immediately 169, 1451–55
immorality 329–30, 1357–58, 1629 imprecatory Psalms 588–89

incense 95 infancy narrative 44, 49, 68–72, 273–74
infant baptism 1470 inheritance 1023, 1309–10, 1476, 1600–1601 inn 208, 1033
INRI 1853
integrity 738, 1356–59, 1388 intermediate state 1369–70, 1858 invitations 1265–67, 1271–73, 1276–78, 1284
irresponsibility 1181
Isaac 78, 102, 194, 342, 1238–39, 1625
Isaiah 244–45, 279–80, 290–96, 1547–48, 1558, 1560, 1704
I sayings 992, 1190
Iscariot 1704
Ishmael 102, 111
Israel (the nation) 24, 28, 146–47, 194, 215–16, 243–45, 1202–3, 1208–10, 1230–32, 1234, 1237–40, 1243–45, 1249–52, 1591–92, 1596–97, 1669–70, 1678–82, 1684–86, 1740–41, 1747–48, 1844–45, 1912–14, 1925–26 church and 41, 541
consolation 238–39, 253
divided 246–50, 689, 1078, 1597, 1602, 1605, 1643

firstborn 341
future hope 1251, 1427–28, 1681–82
Gentiles and 18, 417–19
God's people 158–59
God's plan and 38
hostility to believers 2–3 hostility to Jesus 1–2, 37–39, 246–50, 394, 399, 1595, 1603 lament over 1243–52
leaders 1219, 1253, 1741, 1752
OT prophets and 394 redemption 253
servant 158–59
Son of Man and 953
"is about to" 888
"it is necessary" 269–70, 1248, 1430, 1893, 1916
Iturea 277

Jacob 135, 358, 1238, 1239, 1244, 1625
Jairus 652, 791–93, 800–808
James brother of Jesus 71, 1260
James son of Alphaeus 545
James son of Zebedee (= the Just) 379, 544, 800, 1672, 1679, 1736
Jeconiah 354–55, 922
Jeremiah 1250, 1547, 1561, 1572, 1578, 1637

Jericho 1022, 1029, 1501–3, 1505–6, 1513, 1515–16, 1527, 1531
Jerome 145, 753
Jerusalem 50, 1029, 1400, 1495, 1531, 1560–65, 1657–58, 1676–78, 1906, 1941 desolation 1656, 1675, 1677–82 end-time 1650, 1656–57, 1659, 1663, 1667–68, 1675, 1679–80 fall 16–17, 308, 515, 859–60, 1096, 1122, 1567, 1573, 1605, 1650–97, 1719, 1836–37, 1845–46
Jesus' entry 1546–65
judgment 1561–64
lament over 1243–52, 1547–48, 1560–65 representative of nations 1249 siege 1561–64
spelling 255–56
Jerusalem journey 23–25, 45–47, 957–64, 968, 1514
chiasmus 961–62
ending 957, 959, 1546 formation 960–62
miracles 959–60
narrative characteristics 959–60 parables 960
sources 959
structure 961–64

Jesus 112, 206, 230
abstinence 1716, 1720, 1724 allegiance 1284–85, 1287, 1290, 1456, 1743
apocalyptic 1420–24, 1651–58
arrest 1497, 1567, 1752, 1760, 1765–74, 1779 ascension (exaltation) 27, 33, 869, 967–68, 972, 1532, 1569, 1879–81, 1929–31, 1944–47, 1949–50 asceticism 508, 514 ashamed of 856–57
associations 492, 508–9, 547, 564, 683, 689–709, 1295, 1298–99, 1304–5, 1308, 1321, 1518
authority 429–30, 464–65, 510–12, 526–27, 532–33, 640–43, 651–52, 754–55, 764–66, 774–75, 796–97, 1011–14, 1067, 1079–85, 1254–55, 1344–48, 1354–59, 1581–89, 1631–32, 1638–39, 1647–48, 1686–87, 1696–97, 1795–97, 1916–17, 1949–50
baptism 320–25, 331–47, 407–8, 862, 874–75, 1599
betrayal 1701–9, 1714, 1730, 1767 blood 1727–29 brothers or cousins? 752–53
burial 1871–78
charges against 1807–8, 1810–11

chosen (Chosen One) 344–45, 873–75, 1838 Christ (= Anointed One) 216–18, 225, 293, 342–44, 439, 442, 837–38, 841–43, 851, 1893, 1916–17, 1923
circumcision 224–25
come to/after 620, 1284, 1287
Coming One 299, 338, 345, 409–10, 657, 665–66, 685, 1073, 1251–52 commands silence 438–39, 475–76, 785–86, 790, 804–5, 844–45, 875 commission by 812–19, 1879–80, 1930, 1939–41, 1947
compassion 650, 654–55, 884–85, 1259, 1402, 1406, 1501, 1505, 1511, 1767, 1771, 1774, 1836, 1858
confession 1132, 1138–45, 1672, 1857 controlling events 1554–55, 1582–83, 1708–9, 1712–13, 1774–75, 1836, 1841, 1866, 1882 conviction 1775, 1778, 1796–1803 cries from the cross 1838, 1853, 1862 criminal 1806, 1819, 1866
cross 2, 1926, 1933, 1943
date 227, 284, 904, 911, 913
David and 20, 113–15, 123–24, 175–76, 180–81, 199, 205, 218, 344, 512–13, 524–27, 532, 668

Dayspring 175, 191–94 death 25–26, 517–18, 869–70, 1193–94, 1724–25, 1863–64, 1900, 1914, 1926, 1928 death for sinners 1829, 1834 demons and 431–34, 438–39, 772–77 denial 1139–40, 1704, 1706–7, 1745 departure 1927, 1945
dependence 1753, 1756 discerning thoughts 250, 484, 529, 895 divider of people 324, 394
divine endorsement 332, 334–47 emotions 1754
eschatological agent/prophet 405, 410, 657, 661, 844, 1075, 1139, 1219
eschatology 1474, 1692
ethics 33, 41, 408–9, 512–13, 559–60, 587–92, 625–26, 936–44, 1035, 1324, 1356–57, 1364, 1378, 1565, 1644 exaltation 1748, 1800–1801, 1880–81, 1891, 1894, 1913, 1916–17, 1926, 1945–47 example 1753, 1756, 1763
exodus 862–63, 869–70, 876, 968 exorcisms 422, 425–27, 430–34, 438–39, 442, 1067–71
firstborn 206–7, 234–35

first love 1283, 1285
foreknowledge 1711–12
forgiveness 406, 464–65, 470, 481–86, 488, 502, 689, 705–8, 1523, 1849–51 given over 1496–97, 1893–94
glory 862, 1686, 1916–17, 1929, 1938, 1940
glory to Israel 179, 244–45 greater than Jonah and Solomon 1095–99 great prophet 653–55
great shepherd 1084
groom 517–18
growth 254, 274
healings 410, 422–24, 435–39, 464–66, 474–75, 477, 479–86, 527–33, 559, 564–66, 785, 1066–67, 1077–85, 1216
Holy One 123, 130–31, 425, 433, 458, 842
Holy Spirit and 21, 115, 123, 320–25, 335, 337–47, 369, 391–92, 405, 407–10, 566
humility 1555, 1758
imminence 1688–92
in his (your) name 619, 1006, 1664, 1669, 1672, 1939–40 “inner” 1753–54
innocence 1569, 1812–13, 1817, 1822–24, 1826–27, 1830–31, 1833–34, 1836, 1838, 1840, 1856,

1864, 1866–67
Innocent One 25–27, 34, 1752, 1778, 1804, 1806–8, 1815, 1817, 1822, 1826, 1833, 1841, 1865, 1879 intercession 1730, 1732, 1742–43, 1750, 1850
Israel and 24–25, 116–17, 246–50
Jerusalem and 23–24, 25–27, 47–48, 1246–52
John the Baptist and 68–69, 132–39, 187–92, 194–96, 279–80, 284–85, 307–9, 317–26, 656–88
Joseph and 104–5, 114
journey to Egypt 128
Judaism and 23, 25, 512, 521 judge 42, 856–57, 1192, 1493, 1604–5, 1797, 1799–1800, 1804, 1840, 1867 judgment 1136–37, 1231–32, 1246–52, 1344–46, 1426, 1431, 1456, 1550–51, 1565, 1677
justice and 406, 567, 1541
king (of Jews/Israel) 31, 112–17, 407–8, 1419, 1546–49, 1558, 1603, 1807, 1811, 1820–21, 1824, 1838, 1840, 1852–54, 1864, 1867 kingdom 115, 413, 440–41, 559, 572, 656, 813, 1079–84, 1408, 1409–41 knowledge 1730, 1743, 1745, 1750, 1777–78 lamb 1727–28

lament 1558, 1847–48
law 512–13, 1024, 1354–56
liberation 406, 426
light 179, 192–93, 244–45, 744–46
Lord 25–26, 29–31, 124–25, 216–18, 618–19, 650–51, 1389–90, 1630–31, 1633–42, 1647–48, 1940, 1946
Lord over Sabbath 510–11, 525–27 lost people and 1513, 1515, 1520, 1523–24 lost sayings of 536
love 512–13, 537, 548, 559–60, 567, 586–605, 624, 899, 1850
Luke’s view 3 martyr 1190, 1698, 1753, 1756, 1763, 1765, 1790, 1803, 1836, 1840, 1850
Master 456, 761, 1401 mediator 1011, 1942, 1945
mercy 1397, 1399, 1405–6
Messiah 23, 25–26, 29–31, 178–83, 191–96, 322–23, 335, 342–45, 619–20, 657, 665–66, 668–69, 841–44, 846–47, 849–50, 874–75, 899–900, 1250–52, 1563–64, 1570–71, 1633–42, 1647–48, 1795–96, 1936–37
Messiah-Servant 255, 344, 876

Mightier One (= Stronger One) 276, 278, 289, 317–18, 320, 325, 384, 409–10, 435, 1083–85 ministry 389–90, 446, 448, 500, 1221, 1274, 1276, 1557, 1632–33 ministry style 658, 661, 682–84
miracles 22, 34, 392, 422–23, 425–27, 448, 485, 667–68, 754, 785, 899–900, 1815, 1819 missing body 1889–95
mission 2, 22, 28–29, 262, 363, 404–11, 498–500, 656, 1191–92, 1246, 1248, 1251, 1353, 1523 mocked 1497, 1752, 1775–76, 1789, 1803, 1816–17, 1820–21, 1837, 1851–54
name 129–30, 225
Nazareth 1506–7, 1512, 1912
new Moses 562, 564, 980 news about 391–92, 477
new way 837, 850–61, 899
old and new periods 519–22, 531–32 one who comes 1558, 1586, 1603 ontological sonship 123–25, 343–44, 781 openness to children 1467, 1470, 1472 opposition 22–23, 509, 528–31, 577, 1071, 1193, 1352–53 origins 111–12, 115, 124–25 parents 235, 260, 263–69, 272–74

physician 447, 497–500, 1302, 1307, 1523, 1940 plot against 1580–81, 1592, 1600–1601 popularity 393, 646, 1133, 1574, 1703 popular view 646, 653–54
power 344–45, 487–88, 565–66, 654–55, 757–58, 796–97, 1083–85, 1216, 1398–99 prayers 336, 478, 540, 1009–12, 1045–64, 1050–56, 1752, 1753–54, 1837, 1841, 1849, 1861
predictions 1783, 1786–88, 1790, 1893–95, 1913, 1928 predictions of suffering 837, 844–49, 860–61, 886–90, 952–55, 1430–31 priest 1944–45
promise 1895, 1899
prophet 29–31, 335, 348–49, 416–17, 473–74, 653–54, 703–4, 1250–51, 1571–73, 1936–37 prophet like Moses 521, 809, 862, 864, 874, 876, 1252, 1565, 1912, 1923 provider 825, 827, 832–33, 836
rabbi 698, 1286, 1401
rebukes 433, 436–37, 679–85, 763, 883, 1111, 1126, 1915–16
reception 967–68, 972, 1471
Redeemer 179, 253
regal entry 1546–47, 1551, 1558–59 rejected stone 1592, 1603–4, 1606 rejection by 1236–37, 1543 rejection of 415–20, 521–22, 847–48, 886–87, 899–900, 971–72, 1345–48, 1430–32, 1530–31, 1543, 1547, 1752, 1753, 1775, 1778, 1790, 1804, 1834 relationship to Father 259, 262, 269–71, 344, 372–84, 1011–12 religious agitator 1810, 1818 reports about 391–92, 477, 654 response to 2, 777–81, 1090, 1094–96, 1099–1103, 1345–48, 1356, 1375–77, 1523 resurrection 26–27, 33, 1494–95, 1498, 1532, 1569, 1879–1950 return (parousia) 42, 1173–74, 1180–81, 1439–41, 1444–47, 1453–55, 1650, 1664, 1666, 1669, 1679, 1681, 1684–87, 1693, 1696–97 revolutionary 1614, 1771–72, 1774, 1811–13 riding clouds 1799–1800 righteous sufferer 34, 1850–51, 1862, 1864, 1866 right hand of God 1775, 1796–1801, 1804, 1926, 1929, 1941, 1945–47, 1966

rule 114–17, 1011–14, 1425, 1428, 1879, 1917
Sabbath and 523–33, 1216–19, 1257–59

Savior 31, 216–18, 1305, 1524, 1569, 1836, 1840–41, 1858, 1881
Second Adam 123, 125, 366
Second Moses 23, 867, 872 self-condemnation 1802–4
self-declaration 259, 263, 269–71, 274–75, 404–13, 656
Servant 29–31, 341–42, 344–45, 405–7, 656, 662, 667, 1849, 1926 sign 219, 222, 246–47 sign of kingdom 1414, 1417–19
silence 1795–96, 1815, 1819, 1822 social teaching 400–401, 408–9, 559, 576, 1372–73 socially ostracized/sinners and 464, 487–89, 500, 1276, 1295–1321
Son 21, 31, 114, 341–43, 345, 363, 367–68, 372–74, 378, 380–84, 842, 873–75, 993, 1011–14, 1595–96, 1599–1601
Son of Adam 21, 331, 348–49, 366
Son of David 20, 24, 31, 105, 114–17, 124–25, 1073, 1075, 1493, 1505, 1507–10, 1512, 1558–59, 1571, 1630, 1638–42
Son of God 113–16, 123–25, 130–31, 255, 271, 331, 348–50, 359, 439, 1795–96, 1798, 1801,

1803, 1864
Son of Man 27, 29, 31, 42, 179, 484–86, 506, 526–27, 568, 579–80, 840–42, 845, 847, 856–57, 859–60, 888–89, 926–30, 1096–98, 1138–40, 1417–20, 1426–31, 1436–39, 1444–46, 1454–56, 1495–96, 1684–87, 1695–97, 1734–35, 1768–69, 1799–1801, 1893, 1945
Son of Most High 113–14, 123–24 spitting upon 1497, 1789
stone of stumbling 246–47
Stronger One see Jesus, Mightier One submission 336–37, 346, 1753, 1756, 1758–60, 1763
substitutionary death 1725, 1748 suffering 246–50, 952–55, 1430–31, 1495–1500, 1732–33, 1916–17, 1923, 1925, 1928, 1930, 1938–39, 1941, 1946 supranatural 1799–1800
taunting 1836–37, 1841 tax collectors and 1515 teaching 31, 269–71, 429–30, 559–60, 564–66, 731–32, 744–45, 1100, 1149–50, 1344–48, 1349, 1357, 1376, 1401, 1575, 1580–81, 1584, 1610, 1627, 1650, 1659, 1663, 1675, 1692, 1695, 1773, 1891, 1903, 1930, 1942 temptations 363–85, 1764

testimony 254, 780–81
touches 438, 474, 651–52, 803 trials 25–26, 1567–69, 1700, 1752, 1775–76, 1791–94, 1955
trust 1840, 1867
vanishing 1920, 1923
vice-regent 1797
vindication 844, 1606, 1763, 1801, 1852, 1867, 1945, 1966
warning see prophetic warning
weeping 1493, 1546, 1560–61, 1564
wisdom 254, 259, 267–68, 369, 661, 1098, 1582, 1626
woe and 582–86, 626–27, 1003–5, 1105–26, 1846
word 433–35, 453–54, 641–42, 1282
Jesus Seminar 1961–66; see also Sources and Historicity section for units containing sayings of Jesus
Jewish Christians 3, 39
Jewish Christian tradition 143–44, 164, 173–74, 200, 231
Jewish leaders (elders) 496–97, 636–40, 678–79, 681–82, 811–12, 1267–68, 1271–722, 1306–7, 1530, 1534–35, 1547–48, 1560–65, 1567, 1572–

74, 1577, 1580–89, 1591–92, 1605–9, 1626–27, 1641–42, 1701–7, 1777, 1781–82, 1820, 1822, 1829, 1833–34, 1851, 1912–13
Joanan 354
Joanna 713–14, 1817, 1876, 1885, 1897
Job 238, 365, 367, 1491, 1742
John son of Zebedee 456–58, 460, 544, 800, 866, 970, 1710, 1736, 1739, 1754, 1758
John the Baptist 20–21, 23, 28, 44, 49, 68–69, 83–91, 278–80, 336–37, 345–46, 656–58, 672–79, 820, 868, 870, 986, 988, 994, 1000, 1004, 1050, 1074, 1097, 1123–24, 1351, 1354, 1582–83, 1585–89, 1605 ancient sources 285, 328
baptism 190, 198, 276, 287–89, 296, 304, 656–57, 676, 1586–87
bridge 279–80, 656, 672
Christian message 87–88, 190
date 75, 284, 910–13
disciples 514–15, 517, 657, 663–64, 666
Elijah and 20, 88, 188, 672–75, 901–2
ethics 309–14
forerunner 90–91, 187–89, 317, 661, 675, 901 greatest born of woman 660, 672, 675–76 greatest prophet 656, 672

Holy Spirit and 85–86
humility 320–21
imprisonment 317, 327–30 in John's Gospel 901–2
Jesus and 657–58, 663–70
lifestyle 84–85
message 189–91, 280–81, 284–89, 299–316
Messiah? 187, 319–20
ministry style 658, 682–84
mission 190, 297–98, 675
name 165, 168, 666
Nazirite? 85
prophet 87–88, 187, 318, 328 prophet of the Most High 175, 187–89
Qumranian? 198, 296–97
reformer 87–91, 656
repentance and 287–89, 299–301, 307, 309–15, 317
Scripture and 290–96, 672–75
witness 329–30, 901
Jonah 757, 1086–88, 1090, 1095–97, 1099, 1894
Jordan 286–87, 369, 670
Jose 1686
Joseph 72, 108, 114, 118–19, 127–28, 204–6, 211, 235, 348, 350, 352, 903, 905–6, 919–23

Joseph of Arimathea 253, 583, 1644, 1776, 1871–73
Joseph son of Jacob 351, 1315, 1742
Josephus 52, 283, 545–46, 664, 903–4, 906–8, 911–12, 1131, 1175, 1205, 1246, 1256, 1286 joy 42–43, 83, 138, 165–66, 215–16, 580–81, 1008–10, 1302–5, 1315–16, 1320–21, 1536–37, 1946–47 jubilee 399, 405–6, 410
Judah 370
Judah son of Jacob 357
Judas Iscariot 546–47, 1185–86, 1695, 1698, 1700–1701, 1703–6, 1730–31, 1733–35, 1739, 1750, 1752, 1765, 1767–68, 1769, 1774, 1828, 1873
Judas son of James (= Thaddaeus?) 546
Judea 277, 388, 441, 564, 654, 1435, 1532, 1568, 1677, 1813 judges 1447–48
judgment 93, 306–9, 314–15, 318–19, 605–7, 669–70, 728–31, 811–12, 970–72, 1134–37, 1194–95, 1206–7, 1369–71, 1382–83, 1424–25, 1431–34, 1436–41, 1529–30, 1538–40, 1542–44, 1561–65, 1656–57, 1676–81, 1686–87, 1693–94, 1844–48, 1850, 1858–60, 1866–67
Judith 136, 252

justice 1116, 1118, 1318, 1320, 1444, 1448, 1453, 1458
justification 1458, 1465

king 1636–38, 1669
kingdom 31–32, 440–41, 675–76, 813–14, 1053, 1071–72, 1079–82, 1164–65, 1226–29, 1238–40, 1271–72, 1344–48, 1350–54, 1444–47, 1470–72, 1475–76, 1489–91, 1535–36, 1720–21, 1723–24, 1728–29, 1740–41, 1939 already-not yet 1418, 1481, 1491
apocalyptic 858
authority 1732
church and 1082, 1222, 1418–19
citizens 1419
consummation 1412–13, 1417–18, 1425, 1427–28
delay 1525
earthly 32
entering 1352–54, 1484, 1486 future form 32
growth 1224, 1227–28
hiddenness 1413
Holy Spirit and 1415
“in your grasp” 1416
“in your presence” 1416–17 inauguration 1001–2

inside you 1415
invisible 1081–82
Israel and 441
Jesus and 1409–19
John and 675–76
miracles and 1079–85
mystery 858–59, 1221–22, 1227 nearness 1000–1002, 1079–81 of God/heaven 441 present form 31–32, 1081 present/future 1409–10, 1412, 1414, 1417–19
repentance and 1416 righteousness and 1412–13
rule 1000–1001, 1081–82
Sabbath and 1413
“see before death” 857–60
society and 1419
stages 160, 1001, 1080–81 surprising form 1221–22, 1227 visible 1082
world’s kingdoms 375–76
Kinnereth (= Chinnereth) 454 kiss 696–97, 701–2, 1314, 1828
knapsack 997

L (source) 8–9, 11–12, 914–17

lame 480, 1266, 1275 lamp 742, 744–45, 1100, 1174 landlord 1594–95, 1597
last discourse 1717, 1719, 1730–51
Last Supper 825, 834, 845, 1700, 1708–30, 1736, 1756, 1951–60 laughing 584–85, 680–81, 803
law 39–40, 512–13, 554–55, 1023–24, 1344–48, 1358, 1360, 1481–83, 1936
  continued validity 1344
  creation and 1354
  faith and 1025
  Gentiles and 40
  Jesus and 39–40, 512–13, 1024–26, 1355
  Jews and 40
  John the Baptist and 1351–54
  love and eternal life 1024–26 moral 1355
  Mosaic 1355
  of love 1024–26
  Paul and 40
  Pharisaic challenges 523 points to Christ 1355 promise and 1344
  prophets and 1351–54, 1813

“lawful, is it?” 523, 525, 529 lawyer 267, 1022
Lazarus, the raised 652, 690
Lazarus and the rich man 157, 1360–79, 1514 leader 1177–78, 1184 leadership 1737–40, 1750–51 least, the 891–92, 896 leaven 1133, 1228
leaving all 462, 494
legalism 1110, 1118
legend 334, 398, 692, 767, 794, 839, 864 legion 771, 773–74
lending 600–602
lepers/leprosy 419, 476–77, 472–74, 487–88, 1092, 1366, 1397, 1399, 1401–2, 1409
lepton 1199–1200, 1645
Levi the disciple 446, 464, 489–501, 515, 1514
levirate marriage 354–55, 920–22, 1616, 1619–21
Levites 524, 1031 liberation theology 400–401
life 737, 1150, 1154, 1158–60, 1168, 1435–36, 1441, 1625
light 244, 409, 742–47, 1086, 1099–1103, 1510–11, 1541
inner 1101–2

sons of 1332–33
take in 1100–1103
lightning 1429–30, 1439–41
Little Apocalypse 1652–58
Lord 218, 1639–41, 1647–48
only in church? 1639–40
used as vocative 459, 473, 618
Lord's mountain 294
Lord's Prayer 1045–65, 1160
Lord's Supper 497, 1720–21, 1725–26, 1729, 1741 lost, the 41, 1295, 1297–1321
Lot 1420, 1431, 1433–35, 1437, 1441, 1444 lots, casting of 79, 1850
love 41, 586–605, 699–701, 703–5, 1284–85, 1297, 1334, 1336, 1378, 1467, 1565, 1631, 1644 absence 598–99
enemies 588–91, 1774
faith and 1025–27
God and 1035
in early church 589
in Judaism 588, 1025–27, 1035–36
in law 588, 1024–26
in Qumran community 588–89 mark of disciple 603 non-limitations 1027–28

radical 598–605, 624–25 sinners' love 599
supernatural 590
lowly 896–97
loyalty 1167–68, 1420
Luke, Gospel of allusions to by church fathers 5 anti-Semitism and 1680 audience 554 authorship 4–7 burden 2–3 central section 2, 23–25, 45–47
Christology 29–34
chronology 62–63, 281–82, 284
date 16–18, 1675–76
eras of salvation 1351–54
eschatology 42–43, 1681–82
ethics 12, 41; see also Jesus, ethics eyewitness account 4, 57–58 geography 29, 441, 1400
great omission 821, 950–51 historical arrangement 13–14, 53, 55–56, 62–63, 66–67 length 1 manuscripts 19–20

Mark and 9–10
Matthew and 10–11
oral sources 55–56
origin and purpose 4–20
outline 20, 43–48
overview 1–4
Paul and 4–5, 16–17
place of writing 18
preface 20–21, 49, 51, 66–67
purpose 4–20, 64–66
reader's response/application 514; see also shaded areas at beginning and end of each unit readers and destination 14–18 relationship to Acts 1–3, 12–13, 1926, 1941 second or third generation? 58 silent examples in 1645
sources 7–14, 53, 55, 914–17 structure and argument 20–27 subordinationism 857
theodicy 194, 1562
tour section 711
women 710–14, 1845
world history 281–84 lupus 472
lynch law 419–20

Lysanius 283, 910

Machaerus 277, 654, 664
Magi 256–57
magic 427, 566, 796
Magnificat 142–146, 148–50, 165, 253 maimed 480, 1275–76
Malchus 1770–71
mammon 1333, 1336–37, 1483–84
manna 1054, 1075
Mark 16–17, 914–17, 1652–53 longer ending 1888, 1928 parallels to Luke 9–10
  priority 8, 915, 950–51
marriage 1275, 1348, 1356–58, 1617, 1622–23 Martha 690, 1017, 1022, 1037–1044, 1400 martyrdom 1135, 1167, 1193, 1196, 1368, 1659, 1672–73, 1839–40
Mary Magdalene 695, 713, 1866, 1876, 1883, 1885–88, 1897
Mary mother of James 1885, 1897
Mary mother of Jesus 20–21, 68–69, 71–72, 102–3, 107–8, 125–27, 154–55, 205–6, 221–23, 247–50, 752–53, 905, 919–23 betrothed 205–6, 210 daughter of Zion 128, 249

David and 107–8, 112, 114, 180–81
Elizabeth and 126, 132–39, 160–61
God’s handmaiden 150 humble social status 150–51
ignorance 272–73
Magnificat and 144–46
“mother of my Lord” 137 pain 247–50
perpetual virginity 119, 130
status 109–11, 128–29, 136–37, 151
Mary sister of Lazarus 690, 1017, 1037–44, 1095 māšāl 416
materialism 158, 1128, 1148, 1155, 1156, 1165, 1273, 1289–90
Matthat 353
Matthew 544
Gospel of, as source 914–17
Levi? 493–94, 544
parallels to Luke 10–11, 71–72, 205, 253–54, 256–57 meals 694–95, 1111, 1253, 1256, 1265, 1268, 1272, 1393, 1716–18, 1927, 1930, 1935; see also banquet and fellowhsip and table fellowhsip Melchizedek 1636

mercy 587, 603–5, 1032, 1034, 1401, 1467, 1473, 1501, 1508–9, 1512, 1522
Meron, Mount 388, 866
Messiah 1630, 1634, 1638–42, 1647–48, 1748, 1916, 1937–38 messianic
age 160, 465, 668–69
pretenders 1664
salvation 184–87, 191–94
secret 844–45, 1499 woe 1679
millennium 441, 938–39, 1082, 1740 millstone 1385–86, 1438
mina 1533
minim 579
miracles 34, 72–73, 485, 754, 769, 805–6, 887, 1221, 1396; see also healings and individual passages classification 442–43
double 785
gift 451–52, 455–56, 826
in Jerusalem journey 959–60, 1501 listing 878, 959–60
mirror 1212, 1244 nature 451, 457, 755, 758, 826

parables and 455–56, 832 rescue 758
resuscitations 646, 648, 788–89, 803–4
rule 470, 511, 1216, 1254 storms and 757–58
Mishnah 479, 1116
mission 1650; see also church and discipleship of the seventy-two 986–1016 of the Twelve 809–19, 986
Samaritan 968–73
statements 28–29, 490 traveling instructions 997
mocking 1288, 1851–54
money 43, 592, 600–602, 1154–55, 1322–24, 1326, 1333–40, 1345, 1347–48, 1349, 1359, 1520–21, 1524, 1572
Moses 30, 370, 809, 864–65, 867–72, 1335, 1360, 1362, 1364, 1375–76, 1378, 1624, 1912, 1917, 1928, 1936–37
Most High 113–14, 187, 766 mountain imagery 374–75, 878 mourning 649–50, 680–81, 801–2, 1844
Mozah 1908
mustard seed 1225, 1390
myrrh 696, 1877

mystery of God 727–31

Naaman 418–19, 1397
Nabatea 905
nails 1831, 1849, 1933
Nain 388, 648–49, 792 naming a child 166–67
nard 696
Nathan 348–49, 352, 356
Nathaniel 544, 1911
nations 1164, 1650, 1671, 1683, 1686–87, 1939–41, 1947; see also Gentiles naturalists 1607, 1617, 1626
nature 762–64, 1572–75, 1579
Nazareth 50, 106, 127–28, 134, 264, 273, 388, 866, 1568 needy 1271, 1277–78, 1643–45 neighbor 309–10, 406, 590, 595–98, 1018–36 nets 454, 457
Neves 1379
new community 35–43
new covenant 25, 34, 37, 39–41, 189, 1082, 1567, 1718, 1727–29, 1943 new era 982–84, 1000
Nicodemus 583, 1875–76
Nicopolis 1908

Nineveh 1095–97, 1099
Noah 339, 359, 1420, 1431–32, 1437, 1441, 1444 now-not yet see already-not yet and kingdom, already-not yet Nunc Dimittis 240–45

oaths 1118
obedience 618, 623–25, 1095, 1345, 1393, 1395, 1475, 1491 obstacles to knowledge 1124–25
Octavian (= Caesar Augustus) 202–3, 225, 282
Old Testament and birth announcements 83, 102, 111 olive oil/tree 696, 1226, 1330–31
Olives, Mount 1552–53, 1557, 1568, 1663, 1678, 1756–57, 1929, 1944
“one stone on another” 1563, 1662 opportunity 1268–69, 1271, 1278, 1295, 1353
opposition 1730, 1732, 1739, 1747–48, 1750
oppressed 156–57, 401, 409–10 oral tradition 104, 509–10, 1616, 1619, 1963–64
“other” Mary 1885 outer darkness 1183, 1537, 1542 oxen 1258, 1274

Palestine 1196–97

parables 416, 519, 557, 610, 661, 692, 717–18, 721, 727, 945–49, 960; see also the relevant exegetical units and list on pp. 948–49
allegory 946, 1591 categorization 946–47 definition 945–46 listing 948–49
multiple points 731–32
pastoral concern 949 rhetorical features 947 sinners and 1296
stewardship and 1128
use of Isaiah 728–31, 740 paradise 1370, 1752, 1841, 1857–58, 1861, 1866 paralytic 480, 482, 488
parousia 1096–97, 1654 passion 1698, 1942
narrative 1698–1700 predictions 1430–31, 1494–1500, 1512
sources 1698–1700
Passover 263–64, 1205, 1549, 1706, 1719–21, 1725–28, 1818, 1843 amnesty on 1824, 1833–35, 1954
calendars 1951, 1957–60
Hallel Psalms 1952

lambs 1952
meal 1700, 1702–3, 1708–9, 1711–14, 1717–18, 1721–29, 1951–56 night 1413, 1437
uncleanness 1954–55
patibulum 1831
patience 42, 739, 1427
patriarchs 1230, 1232, 1238, 1617, 1625–26, 1628–29 pattern fulfillment 292, 406, 1657, 1668, 1936
Paul 4–5, 16–17, 591–92, 1142–43, 1681–82, 1879–81, 1894, 1897, 1926, 1933 peace 193–94, 220, 707–8, 798–99, 998, 1194–95, 1558, 1561, 1932 peer pressure 1504, 1509
Pentecost 263, 322, 1942 people, the 319, 564, 1073, 1511, 1580–81, 1602, 1826–27, 1851 people of God 1226
Perea 277, 282, 287, 313, 388, 654, 1244, 1246, 1400 perfume 696, 702
persecution 66, 577–82, 591–93, 735, 854, 1167, 1194, 1285–86, 1436, 1447, 1454, 1656, 1659, 1668–75, 1694, 1696

perseverance 738–39, 1456, 1654, 1657, 1757 persistence 42, 1444, 1449–50 pestilence 1667
Peter (= Simon) 380, 435–36, 448, 452–64, 543–44, 795–96, 809–10, 871–74, 1139–40, 1142–43, 1177–78, 1488–89, 1743, 1750, 1781–88, 1882–88, 1898–1902, 1921–23, 1943
call 458–59
confession 825, 837–44
denials 1708, 1730, 1742–45, 1750, 1752, 1775–76, 1780–90, 1803 mother-in-law 435–37, 528
name 458
restoration 1788
role 454–55
Pharisees 37–38, 302–3, 478–79, 495–96, 514–15, 521–23, 612–13, 676–79, 697–700, 1246–47, 1253–58, 1322–23, 1344–50, 1358–59, 1409–12, 1414–17, 1457–58, 1460–64, 1559–60, 1609–10, 1616–17, 1634–35, 1958–59
associations 495–96, 695
charging Jesus 528–30, 705–7, 1125–26
controversy 1066
hypocrisy 1128–31, 1133–35
Jesus’ rebuke 530, 615, 1257–59 plotting 531 sin and 702–3

tax collector and 1363
woes against 1105–26
Philip son of Herod 282–83, 910
Philip the disciple 544, 831, 979 physicians 794, 806–7 piety 1630, 1633, 1644, 1648
pigs see swine
Pilate 26, 282–83, 1202–5, 1609–10, 1778–79, 1801–2, 1806–16, 1821–35, 1873–75, 1894, 1913, 1951, 1954 pilgrims 1572, 1702, 1711, 1713, 1865, 1952 plowing 724, 980–84
poor 35, 143–44, 156–57, 399–401, 570–77, 580–82, 667–68, 1260–61, 1360–61, 1371–76, 1448, 1521, 1646–47 popular eschatological expectation 318–19 possessions 1148, 1150–55, 1156–57, 1159, 1166–68, 1289–90, 1434–35, 1441
power 313–14, 891, 1240, 1732, 1737–38, 1881, 1925, 1942–44 praise 42–43, 148–49, 224, 252–53, 486–87, 1216, 1402–3, 1504–5, 1511–12

prayer 41–42, 80, 336–37, 439–40, 508–9, 539–41, 865–66, 994–95, 1444–47, 1450–51, 1454–56, 1464–65, 1581, 1643–44, 1694–95, 1762–63
boldness in 1059–60 community and 1050–51 enemies and 590–91
fasting and 515–16
liturgical 1050–51
Lord's/Disciples' Prayer 1045–56 making requests 1060–64
standing for 1758 preaching 404–11, 780–81, 1278, 1670–71, 1939–41, 1946–47
prefects 282–83, 311 pregnancy 107, 160–61
premillennialism 1681 prepared people 90–91, 674 pride 893–97, 1110, 1116–17, 1188, 1260–62, 1345, 1348, 1350, 1358, 1633, 1643–44, 1648 priests 76, 79, 100, 351, 466, 475–77, 525, 1030 prodigy account 232, 261
prologues 52–53
promise 20–21, 26, 28, 114–15, 146–47, 181–85, 233, 241, 360, 399, 672, 993, 1345–53, 1376, 1591, 1597, 1880

promise of the Father 289, 1045, 1942–44, 1946–47 prophecy 177, 1550, 1562, 1656, 1936 prophetic pronouncement 317, 557, 624–26 prophetic warning 300–301, 623–24, 1233–34, 1252–53, 1291–92, 1385–86, 1543–44, 1550, 1552, 1597, 1633, 1641, 1651, 1658, 1664, 1678 prophets 697, 823, 968, 981, 986, 1013, 1157, 1192, 1230, 1232, 1238–39, 1249, 1252, 1350–51, 1578, 1592, 1598, 1632, 1643, 1666, 1913, 1916, 1936–37 apostles and 1121–22 false 1653
  murdering 1119–24, 1126, 1597, 1599, 1606
  Old Testament 181, 582, 585, 1113, 1118 short and long term 1656–57, 1675, 1691 suffering 1248
prophetesses 251
prosperity theology 1135 proud 146–47, 154, 156, 568, 1265, 1458–61, 1463 prudent 1332–33, 1337
Psalms 1936–37
  imprecatory 588–89
  in Judaism 1638–39
  messianic 1636–40, 1796–1800
  New Testament 146

punishment 1184–85, 1451
purgatory 1373 purification 234–36, 237 purses 1166, 1745–47

Q (source) 8–11, 332–33, 339, 550, 914–17
quadrans 1199–1200, 1646
Queen of Sheba (of the South) 1096, 1098–99 questions 1411–12
quest story 633–34, 692, 705, 1397, 1474, 1513
Quirinius 203, 903–9
Qumran 50, 246, 277, 297, 567, 706, 995, 1047, 1050, 1055, 1100, 1192, 1217–18, 1239, 1266, 1641
  baptism 288
  Holy Spirit and 322
  Isaiah 40 and 188
  John the Baptist and 198
  messianic hope 113–14
  national salvation 178
  Son of God and 124

rabbi 1146, 1149, 1285–86
Raphael 880
rapture 1456

reader’s response/application 514; see also shaded areas at beginning and end of each unit readiness 1173–74, 1176–77, 1654, 1659, 1659, 1747–49 reassurance 1627, 1656, 1925, 1927–28, 1966 rebuke 1387–88, 1394, 1469 reconciliation 88–90, 1192, 1195, 1314, 1317, 1743, 1750, 1822
redemption 179, 1687–88, 1696, 1913–14 rejection see Jesus, rejection of and disciples, rejection and disciples, persecution remarriage 1348, 1357–59 remembrance 1435, 1725–26, 1729, 1891–92, 1895 remnant 91, 159–60, 1747–48, 1873
repentance 35–36, 87–89, 287–89, 309–15, 490–91, 498–500, 854–55, 1003, 1095–96, 1202–3, 1206–7, 1295–97, 1306–7, 1312–15, 1320–21, 1374–78, 1388–89, 1520–21, 1573–74, 1850–51, 1939–41 response to message 721–22, 739–40, 1090–91, 1093–95, 1102–3, 1234–35, 1237–38, 1240, 1269
responsibility 1180, 1185–86
restitution 1513, 1515, 1518–21
restoration 1388, 1395, 1576, 1655, 1732, 1750 resurrection 117, 967–68, 1095–96, 1360–62, 1373–74, 1376–77, 1616, 1622–26, 1700, 1720, 1801,

1867 appearances 1879, 1899–1900, 1915, 1922, 1927–28, 1935 argument for Exod. 3 1628–29 bodily 1857, 1925, 1927–28, 1933–35, 1946 forms 1905
in Judaism 1361, 1619
John’s Gospel and 1885–88
of just 1623
reports 1896–99, 1921–22
Scripture and 1939
Synoptic agreements 1880–81, 1883
Synoptic differences 1882–83, 1886–88, 1892 traditions 1879–81 resuscitation 647, 652, 1377 retribution 594, 1361
revenge 591, 593, 1747 rewards 581, 602–3, 1180, 1265, 1334–35, 1481, 1484, 1488–91, 1739 rich/riches 146–47, 154, 157, 400, 567–68, 574, 582–85, 721, 737, 1146, 1154, 1360–79, 1484–87, 1490–91, 1514–15, 1523–24, 1565 righteous 77–78, 193, 238, 1363, 1369, 1373, 1856–58, 1862 righteousness 186–87, 1348, 1387–88, 1677

ring 1314–15 ritual cleanliness 474–76, 640, 651–52, 1109 robbery 593, 1029, 1113 robes 1314, 1642, 1746
Rome 1548–49, 1562–64, 1607–15, 1798, 1808, 1810–11, 1813, 1816–17, 1821–22, 1847, 1849, 1853, 1913–14, 1955 roof 480–81, 1434, 1515 rulers 156–57, 1000–1001, 1011–12, 1476, 1669, 1737–39, 1826–27

Sabbath 39–40, 422–23, 435, 510–11, 524, 1216–18, 1253–59, 1286, 1413, 1876 breaking 1185 controversies 502, 505–8, 510–13, 522–33 doing good and 529–30, 533
fasting and 516
healings 508, 528, 1212, 1219, 1253
in Judaism 523, 528
Jesus and 526–27
labor on 1217–19, 1221, 1253
miracles 1188
permitted activities 528
plucking grain 522–23
Qumran and 1217–18
“second-first” 534–35

sackcloth 1003 sacrifices 79–80, 94–95, 1572
sacrilege 1676
Sadducees 37–38, 302–3, 1349, 1368, 1609, 1616–19, 1623–24, 1626–27, 1958–59
Sala 358–59
Salome 544, 1866, 1885
salt 1280, 1282–83, 1290–92
salvation 1, 33, 35–39, 87–88, 193–96, 291–93, 295–96, 322–23, 707–8, 733–34, 1232–35, 1398–99, 1405–6, 1486–89, 1522–23, 1925–26, 1941–42, 1946
  “being saved” 1023 blessings 37 earning 1479, 1481, 1487, 1491–92
  epochs 1345, 1351–54
  Gentile 1, 40
  history 57, 62–63, 1591, 1594–95 opponents 37
  response to 35–36
  saved, the 1234
Samaria 282, 965, 966–73, 974–75, 1017–36, 1031–32, 1040, 1095, 1205, 1397–99, 1400–1401, 1403–5, 1418, 1532
Samson 78, 102, 111, 194, 433

Samuel 78, 102, 181, 194, 236, 868, 1374 sandals 320–21, 997, 1315, 1745
Sanhedrin 1447, 1567, 1584, 1776–77, 1779, 1791–1804, 1873
Satan 21, 29, 276, 363, 375–82, 732–34, 1000–1001, 1006–9, 1066–67, 1071–72, 1076–77, 1082–86, 1140–41, 1143, 1198, 1218, 1698, 1703–6, 1742–43, 1909–10
  authority 375–76
  departure? 382
  fall 1006–8
  offer to Jesus 376–77
  terms for 370
  using Scripture 380–81
  worship 377–78
satanic escort 1368
Saturnalia 227, 1175
Saul 881, 1374, 1844
scorpions 1007–8
scribes 267, 478–79, 482–83, 678–79, 1118–26, 1257–58, 1642–44, 1782, 1794, 1826–27
Scripture 1360–61, 1375–77, 1494–96, 1622–25, 1749–50, 1879–80, 1884, 1903–4, 1916–18, 1925–27, 1935–41
  God’s plan and 27–28

Jesus and 20–27
Jesus' use 363 narrative and 68
seah 1331
seats
last 1264, 1267–68
of honor 1116–17, 1262–64, 1267, 1642–43 security 1164, 1166, 1466, 1674 self-adoration 1350, 1359 self-centeredness 1644 self-confidence 1475, 1480 self-correcting 615–16
self-critical 614–15
self-examination 614–16, 618–19, 625 self-importance 1737 self-indulgence 1152–53, 1181, 1372, 1377 selfishness 1334–35
self-righteousness 613–14, 1317, 1461, 1466, 1473 selling all 1167, 1473, 1481–83, 1488, 1490–91 Sermon on the Plain 1836, 1850 anthology? 934–36
believer's ethic 937–38
dispensational views 937–39, 942
1 Peter and 938
Golden Rule 595–98

grace or law 568–71, 625–26, 939–40
James and 938
level place 562–63
Mark's omission 548–49
Matthew and 933
message 567, 586–87
OT influence 937, 939–40
rhetorical features 594–95, 609–10, 940–41
Sermon on the Mount and 549–57, 562–63, 566–71, 595, 604–5, 618–19, 931–44 setting 931–36
sources 549–57, 931–36
structure 548, 557–59
summary 624–26, 943–44
theological thrust 936–44
serpent 1007–8
servant 158–59, 180, 1380, 1536, 1541–42, 1598, 1748
Servant Songs 405–6, 1748–49
service 1392–95, 1543–44, 1737–39, 1750–51, 1923 shake dust from feet 817, 1001–2 shame 1264, 1283
Shealtiel 354–55
sheep 226–27, 996, 1300–1303, 1762
Shekinah 1686

Shema› 1801
Sheol 1368, 1857
shepherds 211–14, 216, 221–22, 224–26, 229, 1299–1303, 1305, 1523
Shroud of Turin 1875
Sidon 388, 564, 950, 1003 sifting grain 324–25 signs 91, 96, 125–26, 135, 219, 222, 415–16, 1075, 1376, 1378, 1663–64, 1683, 1696, 1819 before the end 1664–75 cosmic 1650, 1667–68, 1682–84, 1686, 1840–41, 1858–61
  heavenly 1075
  of the time 1189, 1191, 1198, 1200, 1204, 1212, 1234 physical 1667–68
  soul 1674
silence 1257–59, 1360, 1626
Simeon 230, 232–50, 252, 255, 259, 1872
Simon Magus 380, 566
Simon not Peter 1911
Simon of Cyrene 1836, 1840, 1842–44
Simon the leper 690
Simon the Pharisee 690, 693–94, 697–701
Simon the Zealot 545–46

sin 470–71, 1056, 1200, 1202, 1206–7, 1312–13, 1384–88, 1923, 1926, 1939–40 sinners 35, 446–48, 452–53, 458–60, 495–500, 508–9, 695, 698–708, 1301, 1314–15, 1319–20, 1338, 1388–89, 1459, 1464, 1522–23 sirocco 1859, 1861 slap of rejection 592 slaves 320–21, 1174, 1392–94 sleep 802, 870
snakes 303, 1061
social ostracism 578–79, 1260, 1521
Sodom and Gomorrah 970, 1002, 1005, 1433, 1435 soldiers 310–14, 1789, 1820, 1833, 1838, 1842, 1850, 1852–53
soliloquy 697, 1328, 1449
Solomon 114–15, 178, 668, 970, 1097–98, 1103, 1162, 1548, 1556, 1636, 1638
Son of Man 924–30, 952–55, 975, 978–79, 1684–85 authenticity and 952, 1171–72
  blasphemy 1140–43
  classification 925
  current discussion 924–25
  Daniel and 924, 952–53
  in Aramaic 925–26
  in Judaism 924–25, 1685–86

Israel and 953
Jesus' development 924, 928–30
OT roots 924, 952–53 suffering king and 952–53
suffering sayings 952–55
Suffering Servant and 952–53
soul 855–86, 1153
source criticism 914–17, 951 speech 616, 1134–35, 1142 spirits 804, 1091–93, 1932–34; see also Holy Spirit and demons spiritual health 1100–1103 spirituality 1459
state authority 1607–8, 1613–14
Stephen 337, 589, 856, 1139, 1143, 1427, 1672, 1674, 1695, 1849, 1862, 1868 steward 1179–80, 1327, 1329–30, 1340–43 stewardship 1146, 1178–79, 1183, 1267, 1326–27, 1335–41, 1348, 1493, 1525, 1530, 1535 stones at tomb 1883, 1889–89 bringing to life 305–6 foundation 1603
in Judaism 1603
of stumbling 246–47, 1592, 1605 rejected 1592, 1603–4 stoning 1587

suffering 1424, 1435, 1653, 1669, 1674, 1730 suffering-Son-of-Man sayings 952–55 summary account 328, 425, 539, 557, 711–12 supernatural worldview 72–73, 80–81, 103–5, 364, 443, 467, 633, 647, 863–64, 879 swine 767, 770–71, 775–77, 779, 1311 swords 1730–31, 1746–49, 1765, 1770, 1772, 1774 sycamine tree 1517
sycamore tree 1391, 1517
sycomore tree 1391
symposium 1253, 1261, 1269, 1383 synagogue 392, 402–4, 428–29, 441, 1214–15, 1668–69, 1672, 1783 Gentiles and 638–39
healings 434
leaders/rulers 791–92, 1216–17
Scripture in 403–4
service 403–4, 411–12
Synoptic problem 7–13, 1651, 1653–54
Syria 388, 904–5, 907, 912

tabernacle 524, 696
Tabernacles (Booths), Feast of 263, 865, 869–72, 1549, 1557–58, 1564

Tabitha 652
table fellowship 40, 497, 999, 1237, 1253, 1298–99, 1306, 1521, 1880, 1919–20, 1925; see also banquet and fellowhsip and meals
Tabor, Mount 388, 866 talent 1534–36
Talmud 479
Targums 403
tax (toll) collectors 35, 310–14, 493, 676–77, 1298, 1464, 1513–15, 1519, 1521, 1611 taxes 282, 310–12, 1567, 1582, 1607–15, 1807, 1810–11, 1813 temple 25, 240, 270, 379, 1582, 1645, 1662–63, 1666, 1776–77, 1792, 1798–99, 1821, 1860, 1946 beauty 1661
  cleansing 1571–81 commerce 1572–73, 1576–79, 1581 curtain 1859–61
  fall 1650, 1656, 1659, 1677
  gifts 1645
  guards (officers) 1705, 1767, 1772, 1789 Holy of Holies 1860 house of prayer 1572, 1578
  ministry 79–80 national 1579

outer court 1860 police 1575
Second 1660–61
Solomon's 1660 tax 1572, 1577
treasury 1644–45
worship 1572, 1577–79, 1581
temptations of Jesus 370–84, 1694, 1786 form 366–67
message 383–84
order 365–66, 374
use of Deuteronomy 363, 373, 378, 381–82, 384–85
Ten Commandments 1478–80, 1482, 1491 tenant farming 1594, 1597, 1600
testimony 477, 1669–70
thanksgiving 1402–5, 1462, 1466, 1925, 1927, 1930, 1947
that day 480–81, 1002
theodicy 14, 194, 1206, 1562
theonomy 942
theophany 334, 1429
Theophilus 2, 34, 40, 51, 63–66, 196, 222, 658, 1925 thief 1166, 1176, 1693

thieves on the cross 1825, 1836–38, 1840–41, 1854–58 third day 848, 954–55, 1247–48, 1894
Thomas 544, 979, 1921 thorns 616, 725
throne 1741
Tiberius Caesar 280, 282, 713, 910–11, 1821 tiles 480–81
tithes 1115–16, 1463–64
Titus 1680
today 28, 216, 412, 487, 1518, 1522 tombs 771, 1871, 1875–76 torment 1370–71, 1378
Trachonitis 277
tragedy 1203, 1206, 1211 transfiguration 859–60, 862–76, 880, 1599, 1710, 1758, 1916–17 treasure 617, 1170
  heavenly 1166–68, 1290, 1491–92 treatment of others 57–59, 309–14, 1360–62, 1375, 1378, 1479, 1482 tree 1391, 1395, 1515
trials 721, 736, 1055–56, 1146, 1420, 1427, 1732 trials of Jesus before Herod 1815–22

before Pilate 1806–14 before Sanhedrin 1791–1805 before the people 1823–35 blasphemy charge 1798–1803
irregularities 1792–93
justice and 1815, 1822, 1826, 1833–34
location of Sanhedrin 1793–94
nature 1781
number 1779–80
political charges 1795, 1803, 1808, 1810–11, 1813 political maneuvering 1815–16, 1821, 1830, 1832 Roman procedure 1810, 1823 timing 1791–92
tribulation 938–39, 942, 1656, 1696, 1675, 1678–79 trumpet, great 1687 trust see faith
Trypho the Jew 869
turn the other cheek 591–92
turning 35–36, 87–89, 287, 1743, 1939
Twelve, the 446, 493, 537–47, 712–13, 812–13, 1495–96, 1498, 1567, 1729, 1730, 1732–33, 1742, 1767
listing 543
number 541, 835
two witnesses 1828, 1890–91

typological-prophetic fulfillment 1648–49, 1918 typology 1657, 1676, 1680
Tyre 388, 564, 950, 1003

unclean animals 1311–12
uncleanness 234–36, 473–76, 771, 775, 785, 793–94, 804, 817, 1030, 1117, 1366–67, 1601 unclean spirits 773, 884 undergarment 309–10, 592–93
underworld 1371, 1375 unfaithfulness 1180–86, 1334–35, 1357, 1394, 1543, 1578, 1676–78, 1680, 1750, 1753 unity 1725, 1729, 1736 unleavened bread 263, 1702–3, 1709 unrighteous 1369, 1373, 1456, 1462 unworthy 1458, 1464
Ur-Markus 821
usury 1340

values 586, 1323, 1344, 1348, 1358–59, 1377 vaticinium ex eventu 1550, 1562, 1656
vengeance 1670, 1678, 1681
verbera 1828
verberatio 1828
Vespasian 1680
Vibius Maximus 204

vindication 1396, 1428, 1444–45, 1450–56, 1458, 1465, 1488, 1681, 1686, 1690 vineyard 1208–9, 1240, 1567, 1582, 1591, 1596–97, 1600, 1606 virgin birth 103–4, 108, 112, 118–21, 229, 257, 260, 352, 922 visions 211, 1914–15, 1933 vultures 1438–41

wages 314, 998–99 war 1288–89, 1666
warning see prophetic warning washing feet 701–2
watchfulness 42, 1174–79, 1386, 1414, 1456, 1650, 1653, 1655, 1657, 1693–94 wealth 1146, 1152, 1154–55, 1240, 1334, 1372–73, 1380, 1473–75, 1479, 1483–86, 1491–92, 1514 weather 621–22, 761, 1196–98, 1200, 1212 wedding 516–17, 1174, 1235
weeping 576–77, 696, 1183, 1238, 1542
“we” sections of Acts 4–5
Western culture 426–27, 578
Western text type 19–20, 1901, 1949–50
wicked 1113, 1299, 1302
widows 252, 419, 649–50, 1113, 1445, 1448, 1567, 1630–33, 1644–48 wilderness 194–95, 286, 290, 369, 670–71 wine 510–11, 520, 1718, 1724, 1837–38, 1844, 1848

wisdom 1325, 1659
  children 684–85, 1010
  personified 1012, 1120–21, 1249 sayings 992, 1089, 1148, 1348, 1383
witness 780–81, 1669–70, 1740, 1928, 1930, 1941–42
woes 582–86, 989, 992, 1003–5, 1245, 1385, 1644, 1679, 1734, 1750 against Pharisees and scribes 1105–26
  authenticity 626–27
  form 582–83, 991
  messianic 1195, 1679
wolves 609, 996
women 35, 629, 710–14, 1037, 1040, 1215–16
  Galilean 1838, 1865–66, 1871–72, 1876–77 genealogies 918
  listing 710–11
  men and, in Judaism 110 pilgrimage 263–64
  prophetesses 251
  resurrection witnesses 1879, 1882–1900, 1914–15 wailing 1825, 1836, 1843–48 wonder 222, 245–46, 763 word links 290–91, 293, 404–5 world 375, 855, 1164, 1332–33, 1737–39, 1747–48, 1752, 1778, 1804, 1947 worry 721, 736–37, 1156, 1161–62, 1164, 1670 worship 186–87, 377–78, 1685, 1925, 1930, 1945–47, 1950, 1966

wrath 1679

yield of crops 726

Zacchaeus 43, 583, 1473, 1482, 1493, 1501, 1503, 1513–24, 1565, 1644
Zadok 1616
Zarephath 388, 418
Zealots 478, 545–46, 1204, 1353, 1607, 1614, 1855
Zechariah 20, 70, 76–78, 163–64, 167–69, 177, 193, 196, 285–86, 1872, 1913–14
Zechariah of Berakiah 1123–24
Zerubbabel 354
Zion 969, 1244, 1637, 1680; see also Jerusalem

Index of Authors

Abel, F.-M. 1888
Achtemeier, P. J. 813 n. 9
Ackermann, H. 1575
Ahern, B. 815
Aitken, W. E. M. 1074
Aland, B. 1 n. 1, 19, 19 n. 8
Aland, K. 1 n. 1, 19, 19 n. 8, 280, 299 n. 1, 317 n. 1, 332, 394, 423 n. 1, 423 n. 2, 423 n. 4, 424, 440 n. 35, 450 n. 4, 466, 468, 489, 502, 504, 507, 537, 549, 549 n. 1, 550, 553, 555, 556, 630, 633 n. 5, 646, 658, 659, 660, 689, 710, 718, 742, 749, 755, 767, 786, 810, 820, 825, 826, 838, 844, 850, 862, 878, 879, 886, 892, 918, 959 n. 4, 974, 987, 988, 989 n. 5, 990, 1005, 1006, 1014, 1015 n. 59, 1018, 1045, 1047, 1067, 1086, 1087, 1088, 1105, 1129, 1147, 1156, 1171, 1189, 1203, 1213, 1222, 1230, 1243, 1254, 1261, 1269, 1281, 1296, 1324, 1345, 1346, 1347, 1361, 1381, 1398, 1410, 1412 n. 2, 1420, 1445, 1459, 1467, 1473, 1494, 1502, 1514, 1525, 1548, 1574, 1583, 1592, 1607, 1617, 1631, 1632, 1701, 1708, 1716, 1730, 1753, 1765, 1775,

1806, 1815, 1816, 1823, 1824, 1836, 1837, 1871, 1904, 1927, 1928, 1948
Alexander, L. 52
Alford, H. 97, 98, 98 n. 70, 109, 114, 130, 137, 139, 150, 169, 224, 248, 253, 265, 266, 313, 396, 412, 430, 450, 595, 636, 666, 676, 698 n. 12, 701, 859, 932
Allison, D. C., Jr. 305 n. 15, 339 n. 16, 562, 562 n. 12, 563, 563 n. 14, 1251 n. 17
Andrews, H. T. 596 n. 46
Annand, R. 1911
Annen, F. 769
Annius of Viterbo 919
Applebaum, S. 1274 n. 9
Arbeitman, Y. 546 n. 12
Arndt, W. F. 120, 427, 657, 664, 668, 670 n. 12, 671, 674, 675, 676, 679, 699 n. 14, 700, 704, 704 n. 24, 710, 712 n. 7, 713, 714, 723 n. 11, 728 n. 23, 733 n. 39, 742, 745, 746, 749, 752, 760, 761, 761 n. 13, 768 n. 5, 771, 772 n. 10, 775, 776, 778, 779 n. 26, 783 n. 32, 784 n. 33, 791, 792 n. 11, 793, 796, 798 n. 25, 799, 803, 807 n. 33, 813, 816, 818, 819, 825, 828 n. 5, 828 n. 6, 828 n. 7, 829, 833, 833 n. 13, 834, 838, 840, 855, 856, 858, 866, 868, 869, 870 n. 16, 875, 876, 883, 887, 889, 897, 957, 960, 962, 963, 969, 974, 975, 980, 983, 987, 994, 995 n. 17, 1002, 1010, 1011, 1012, 1013, 1016 n. 62, 1041, 1042, 1046, 1050, 1053, 1054, 1056, 1059, 1061, 1074, 1075 n. 14, 1077 n. 17, 1092, 1094, 1095 n. 8, 1098 n. 12, 1102, 1122, 1125, 1133, 1136, 1141, 1143, 1149, 1154, 1156, 1183, 1184, 1195 n. 14, 1198, 1204, 1206, 1209, 1210, 1211, 1215, 1216 n. 8, 1237, 1244, 1251, 1257, 1264, 1265, 1289, 1307, 1334, 1339, 1352, 1355 n. 22, 1358, 1367, 1369 n. 19, 1370, 1375, 1380–81, 1387 n. 10, 1391 n. 16, 1393, 1400, 1402, 1405, 1407, 1416, 1427, 1435, 1436, 1439, 1439 n. 29, 1450, 1453, 1463, 1465 n. 13, 1477, 1482, 1490, 1503, 1506, 1517, 1519, 1520, 1521, 1522, 1527, 1528, 1535 n. 12, 1538, 1553, 1554, 1580 n. 10, 1585, 1588, 1599, 1601, 1605, 1613, 1620, 1645, 1662 n. 13, 1673, 1676 n. 28, 1681, 1690, 1691, 1704 n. 6, 1708, 1713, 1721, 1724 n. 17, 1743 n. 22, 1745 n. 26, 1749 n. 34, 1787, 1819, 1834, 1849, 1855, 1857, 1859, 1860, 1861, 1869, 1903, 1914 n. 11, 1921 n. 27

Audet, J.-P. 119

Aufhauser, J. B. 231 n. 4

Aune, D. E. 1181

Austin, M. R. 1323

Badian, E. 310 n. 24
Bahat, D. 1876
Bahnmaier, J. F. 1338
Bahr, G. J. 1722
Bailey, K. E. 701, 1027, 1059 n. 34, 1060, 1297, 1300 n. 10, 1300 n. 11, 1307 n. 6, 1310, 1310 n. 10, 1311, 1312 n. 15, 1314, 1314 n. 24, 1315, 1323, 1325, 1339 n. 32, 1340–41, 1343 n. 42
Bajsica, A. 1833
Baldi, D. 866
Baltensweiler, H. 864 n. 5
Balz, H. 81, 82 n. 35, 153 n. 20, 460, 653, 763, 870 n. 15, 873
Bammel, E. 494 n. 10, 573, 1349 n. 7, 1600, 1793 n. 16
Banks, R. J. 1347, 1355
Barbet, P. 1831
Barbour, R. S. 1757
Barkay, G. 1876
Barr, J. 1052 n. 15
Barrett, C. K. 322, 631, 1576, 1710, 1719
Bateman, H. W., IV 1636
Bauernfeind, O. 616 n. 61, 1083, 1101 n. 16, 1137 n. 8, 1166, 1611, 1705, 1820
Bauman, C. 936 n. 9, 940

Baur, F. C. 569, 892 n. 1
Bayer, H. F. 845, 846 n. 4, 847, 888 n. 3, 953, 953 n. 3, 1193, 1193 n. 11, 1194
BDF [F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk] 51, 54, 57, 59 n. 17, 63 n. 33, 67, 78 n. 19, 79 n. 22, 81 n. 33, 83 n. 37, 85 n. 43, 89 n. 48, 96 n. 64, 106, 111, 116 n. 29, 126 n. 48, 129, 131 n. 56, 134 n. 4, 136, 140 n. 15, 141 n. 16, 149, 149 n. 16, 152 n. 19, 154 n. 22, 159 n. 27, 165 n. 2, 170 n. 11, 170 n. 13, 177 n. 11, 183, 184 n. 24, 189 n. 34, 194, 195 n. 48, 197, 202 n. 11, 215, 239 n. 19, 243 n. 25, 244 n. 26, 247, 251, 257, 263 n. 9, 270 n. 21, 319, 325 n. 10, 329, 329 n. 2, 336, 351, 353, 418 n. 42, 419 n. 45, 429, 457, 475, 531 n. 41, 621, 637, 649, 654, 675 n. 20, 687 n. 39, 723 n. 11, 729, 750 n. 3, 784 n. 33, 830 n. 10, 865 n. 6, 889 n. 4, 894 n. 3, 1040 n. 4, 1041 n. 5, 1042 n. 6, 1184, 1192 n. 8, 1199 n. 24, 1206 n. 6, 1210 n. 18, 1233 n. 5, 1234 n. 7, 1264, 1273, 1274, 1275, 1315 n. 25, 1316 n. 26, 1318 n. 28, 1328, 1369, 1384 n. 6, 1391 n. 16, 1417, 1447 n. 5, 1451, 1452, 1465 n. 14, 1469, 1481, 1521, 1524, 1531, 1533, 1540 n. 19, 1544, 1544 n. 24, 1553, 1561 n. 17, 1566, 1597 n. 6, 1601, 1602 n. 8, 1605, 1609, 1611, 1611 n. 6, 1614, 1625, 1628, 1662 n. 12,

1670, 1736 n. 5, 1737 n. 9, 1759, 1770, 1794 n. 17, 1795, 1802, 1819 n. 5, 1821, 1827, 1828 n. 4, 1829, 1829 n. 6, 1842, 1845 n. 5, 1847, 1854, 1875, 1885, 1889, 1893, 1909, 1911, 1913 n. 9, 1914 n. 11, 1916, 1920 n. 24, 1939, 1941
BDR [F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf] 51, 110 n. 21, 116 n. 29, 117 n. 32, 126 n. 48, 131 n. 56, 134 n. 4, 140 n. 14, 141 n. 16, 149 n. 16, 152 n. 19, 165, 165 n. 2, 167, 168, 170, 170 n. 11, 170 n. 13, 177 n. 11, 178 n. 13, 184 n. 24, 185 n. 27, 197, 219 n. 16, 220 n. 20, 221, 221 n. 22, 251, 319, 325 n. 10, 457, 475, 531 n. 41, 620 n. 65, 637, 654, 723 n. 11, 750 n. 3, 865 n. 6, 870, 881, 890, 894, 894 n. 3, 1192 n. 8, 1233 n. 5, 1234 n. 7, 1264, 1274, 1275, 1369, 1384 n. 6, 1447 n. 5, 1451, 1465 n. 14, 1521, 1524, 1531, 1533, 1536, 1539, 1540 n. 19, 1555, 1556 n. 13, 1557, 1557 n. 15, 1559, 1561 n. 17, 1563, 1563 n. 22, 1580 n. 11, 1581 n. 12, 1585 n. 5, 1598, 1600, 1601, 1602 n. 8, 1603 n. 9, 1606, 1610, 1611, 1611 n. 6, 1614, 1670, 1705, 1719, 1803, 1811, 1813, 1821, 1829 n. 6, 1842, 1845 n. 5, 1846 n. 7, 1854, 1863, 1865, 1866, 1875, 1877, 1885, 1889, 1891, 1891 n. 10, 1893, 1894, 1897, 1909, 1913 n. 9, 1914, 1914 n. 11, 1915, 1916, 1916 n. 14, 1918, 1920, 1920 n.

22, 1931 n. 6, 1932 n. 8, 1934 n. 12, 1937, 1939, 1941, 1944 n. 22, 1946
Beare, F. W. 987 n. 3
Beasley-Murray, G. R. 1046 n. 5, 1050 n. 11, 1079 n. 23, 1144 n. 16, 1221 n. 1, 1231, 1239 n. 18, 1412, 1414 n. 9, 1415, 1415 n. 11, 1416, 1416 n. 12, 1417 n. 13, 1420 n. 1, 1424, 1651, 1651 n. 3, 1652 n. 4, 1963
Beauvery, R. 1029
Beckwith, R. T. 1123, 1124, 1124 n. 29, 1958
Behm, J. 138 n. 11, 156, 184, 223 n. 24, 250, 307 n. 20, 499 n. 20, 508, 515, 519 n. 20, 531, 617, 682 n. 31, 738, 867 n. 10, 1053 n. 17, 1076, 1265, 1272 n. 3, 1321, 1350, 1463, 1661, 1721 n. 11, 1739 n. 13, 1919 n. 20
Bell, H. I. 204
Bellinzoni, A., Jr. 914 n. 1
Bemile, P. 143 n. 3, 145 n. 9, 148 n. 12, 148 n. 13, 158 n. 25
Ben-Dor, I. 696
Bengel, J. A. 1691
Benoit, P. 174 n. 6, 174 n. 7, 1860
Berger, K. 146 n. 10, 173 n. 2, 173 n. 3, 201 n. 9, 211, 232, 232 n. 8, 261, 281, 300, 301, 317, 328, 334, 367 n. 8, 398, 452 n. 10, 470 n. 12, 470 n. 14,

490 n. 3, 490 n. 4, 509 n. 7, 510 n. 10, 539, 557, 557 n. 10, 633, 648 n. 3, 661, 668, 692 n. 3, 712 n. 5, 721, 743 n. 3, 750, 758, 758 n. 8, 769 n. 7, 786 n. 1, 789 n. 9, 812 n. 7, 821 n. 5, 826, 839, 845, 851, 879, 893, 967, 977, 991 n. 11, 991 n. 12, 992, 1021, 1039, 1048 n. 9, 1071, 1089, 1109 n. 8, 1131 n. 3, 1148 n. 5, 1158, 1172, 1190 n. 4, 1213 n. 2, 1224, 1232 n. 4, 1245, 1255 n. 3, 1261, 1270, 1282 n. 3, 1297, 1307, 1326, 1348 n. 6, 1355 n. 22, 1363 n. 8, 1383 n. 5, 1397 n. 1, 1411, 1425, 1446, 1460, 1468, 1474, 1495, 1504, 1508, 1515, 1529, 1550, 1577, 1583, 1595, 1608, 1618, 1633, 1658 n. 9, 1701

Bertram, G. 87, 113, 122 n. 41, 136 n. 8, 156, 222, 435 n. 22, 571, 572, 608, 642, 776 n. 23, 1009, 1061, 1113 n. 14, 1118, 1150, 1235, 1238 n. 15, 1265, 1288, 1349, 1371, 1497, 1581, 1668, 1737, 1738, 1828, 1851, 1854, 1945 n. 26

Bertrand, D. A. 335 n. 6

Betz, H. D. 568–69, 571, 932, 941, 1397 n. 2, 1398, 1905 n. 3

Betz, O. 124 n. 45, 136 n. 7, 140, 339 n. 14, 339 n. 15, 431, 772 n. 12, 925, 1083 n. 34, 1182–83, 1265 n. 11, 1777 n. 5

Beyer, K. 64, 178, 438, 483, 529 n. 38, 590, 654, 714, 1041, 1140, 1453, 1563, 1738
Beza, T. 858
Bieder, W. 434 n. 21
Bietenhard, H. 777, 1006, 1939
Billerbeck, P. 403 n. 17, 1958, 1959, 1960; see also SB
Bishop, E. F. F. 421, 455 n. 15, 1029, 1300, 1373 n. 27
Black, M. 229, 249, 305 n. 13, 306 n. 16, 307, 307 n. 19, 325, 605 n. 53, 695, 695 n. 8, 731, 815 n. 12, 981 n. 7, 1178 n. 15, 1194, 1247, 1273, 1286, 1291 n. 24, 1292 n. 27, 1297, 1302 n. 19, 1524, 1536, 1684 n. 37, 1813, 1895
Blackman, P. 236
Blaising, C. A. 159, 1759
Blank, J. 1591
Blass, F. 1646; see also BDF and BDR
Blinzler, J. 207 n. 19, 419, 752, 752 n. 6, 1203, 1204 n. 5, 1205, 1781, 1792, 1793 n. 16, 1821, 1951 n. 2
Blomberg, C. L. 39, 456, 456 n. 16, 731, 945 n. 2, 947 n. 5, 957, 960 n. 6, 961, 962 n. 9, 963, 1019 n. 4, 1020, 1057, 1059 n. 34, 1146 n. 1, 1270 n. 2, 1277 n. 15, 1278 n. 18, 1282 n. 3, 1307 n. 6, 1313

n. 22, 1325, 1325 n. 4, 1329 n. 11, 1338 n. 31, 1339, 1339 n. 32, 1355, 1362 n. 6, 1363, 1381, 1383, 1394 n. 22, 1444, 1444 n. 1, 1450, 1459, 1460, 1465, 1527, 1528, 1537, 1591, 1591 n. 1, 1594
Böcher, O. 1091
Bock, D. L. 28, 30, 31, 63, 88, 111, 112 n. 23, 113, 114 n. 25, 115, 115 n. 28, 116, 125 n. 46, 159, 178 n. 14, 189 n. 33, 192, 204 n. 15, 205, 209, 217, 218, 228, 236, 237, 245, 246 n. 28, 290, 292 n. 17, 298 n. 22, 301 n. 6, 341, 347 n. 23, 394 n. 1, 404, 405, 406 n. 22, 407, 410 n. 29, 426 n. 8, 439, 441 n. 37, 441 n. 39, 483, 642, 665, 668, 674, 674 n. 17, 706 n. 26, 730 n. 29, 823 n. 7, 841, 847, 864 n. 4, 867 n. 10, 870, 874 n. 20, 924 n. 1, 924 n. 2, 928, 938 n. 12, 953, 1000 n. 30, 1082 n. 29, 1082 n. 30, 1139 n. 11, 1198, 1229 n. 12, 1249 n. 12, 1251, 1255 n. 3, 1418 n. 16, 1549 n. 4, 1557, 1558, 1592, 1603, 1631, 1636, 1638 n. 10, 1639, 1640 n. 16, 1648, 1682, 1684, 1684 n. 37, 1688 n. 42, 1776 n. 4, 1793, 1797, 1800, 1800 n. 27, 1800 n. 28, 1800 n. 29, 1803 n. 32, 1816, 1905, 1916, 1918, 1926 n. 1, 1936 n. 17, 1938, 1941, 1942, 1964, 1965
Böckh, A. 283

Bode, E. L. 1890, 1891 n. 11, 1893, 1894 n. 13, 1902
Boniface VIII 1749 n. 34
Bonus, A. 1911
Boobyer, G. H. 864 n. 5, 871 n. 18, 872, 928
Booth, R. P. 1112 n. 11
Borg, M. J. 1245 n. 2
Bornkamm, G. 636, 730 n. 28, 754, 756, 952, 996, 1116, 1604, 1813
Borsch, F. H. 527 n. 33, 580, 1523, 1686 n. 40
Bousset, W. 92 n. 51
Bover, J. M. 272 n. 23
Bovon, F. 16 n. 7, 18, 52 n. 1, 56 n. 8, 63 n. 33, 66 n. 37, 68 n. 1, 70 n. 1, 71 n. 4, 73 n. 6, 76 n. 11, 84 n. 39, 84 n. 40, 94 n. 56, 103 n. 5, 104 n. 6, 108 n. 12, 121 n. 39, 121 n. 40, 130 n. 55, 135 n. 5, 136, 136 n. 8, 146 n. 10, 173 n. 2, 173 n. 3, 173 n. 5, 176, 178, 181 n. 19, 181 n. 20, 182, 189 n. 34, 190, 190 n. 37, 192, 193 n. 44, 195 n. 49, 198 n. 50, 204 n. 14, 206 n. 18, 207 n. 19, 207 n. 21, 214 n. 6, 232 n. 8, 238 n. 13, 241, 241 n. 20, 243 n. 23, 244, 248, 250, 251, 252, 254, 257, 261 n. 7, 266 n. 15, 267 n. 16, 268 n. 18, 271 n. 22, 279 n. 1, 280 n. 2, 284, 301, 305 n. 15, 307, 308 n. 21, 312, 322, 333, 334, 334 n. 5, 335 n. 6, 337 n. 10, 346, 351 n.

4, 365, 367, 367 n. 7, 369 n. 9, 370 n. 10, 370 n. 11, 375 n. 16, 377 n. 22, 384 n. 35, 390, 391 n. 3, 397 n. 11, 398, 410, 414, 416, 430, 433, 449 n. 2, 454 n. 12, 463, 468, 470, 473, 475 n. 18, 478 n. 22, 481, 490 n. 3, 498 n. 18, 510 n. 9, 510 n. 10, 511 n. 11, 516 n. 15, 517 n. 16, 519 n. 20, 528 n. 34, 528 n. 36, 534 n. 42, 535, 536 n. 44, 538 n. 3, 539 n. 5, 539 n. 6, 542, 549 n. 1, 550, 554 n. 7, 557, 557 n. 10, 564, 564 n. 18, 573 n. 28, 578, 590, 590 n. 38, 591 n. 39, 595, 601, 601 n. 49, 609, 611, 621 n. 67, 626 n. 73, 630 n. 1, 631 n. 2, 638, 642, 646 n. 1, 647, 648 n. 4, 649, 649 n. 5, 650 n. 8, 653, 656 n. 1, 659, 659 n. 6, 678 n. 23, 681 n. 29, 691, 698, 701 n. 17, 711, 712, 719 n. 4, 723, 723 n. 11, 726, 726 n. 18, 728 n. 22, 732 n. 35, 733 n. 37, 736 n. 44, 737 n. 46, 738 n. 49, 743 n. 3, 750, 757, 758 n. 7, 761, 766, 769 n. 6, 769 n. 7, 772 n. 11, 773, 774, 775, 779, 782, 783 n. 32, 784 n. 33, 787 n. 5, 789 n. 9, 791 n. 10, 794, 798 n. 25, 803, 807 n. 33, 810, 810 n. 2, 816 n. 14, 817, 818, 818 n. 18, 821 n. 3, 826, 826 n. 2, 831, 841, 850 n. 1, 850 n. 2, 851, 854 n. 3, 859, 860, 862, 863 n. 1, 864, 865, 865 n. 7, 866, 868, 869, 870 n. 15, 873, 874 n. 19, 879, 880, 880 n. 5, 881, 889, 892, 893 n. 2, 919 n. 3, 932, 951, 951 n. 3

Bowker, J. 1007 n. 40
Braude, W. G. 166 n. 5, 213, 290 n. 15, 292, 379 n. 26, 669 n. 11, 1007 n. 42, 1008 n. 44, 1094 n. 7, 1250 n. 15, 1302, 1302 n. 21, 1368 n. 16, 1450, 1560 n. 16, 1639, 1799
Braun, H. 735 n. 40, 1023, 1664
Braunert, H. 904 n. 6
Brawley, R. L. 14, 37, 370 n. 10, 418 n. 44, 1680
Bretscher, P. G. 341, 1338
Brightman, F. E. 1538 n. 17
Brindle, W. A. 969 n. 7
Brocke, M. 1047 n. 7
Brodie, T. L. 646 n. 1, 691 n. 2, 868 n. 11, 982
Brooke, A. E. 1720
Brooke, G. J. 114
Brooten, B. J. 713 n. 10
Brown, C. 190, 237
Brown, R. E. 71, 73, 73 n. 5, 84, 84 n. 40, 85, 85 n. 41, 86, 87, 88, 89, 92 n. 50, 93, 95, 96 n. 63, 96 n. 66, 97, 97 n. 68, 98, 99, 100, 102, 102 n. 1, 107 n. 11, 108, 108 n. 12, 112, 112 n. 22, 113, 114, 116, 118 n. 34, 119, 119 n. 36, 120, 120 n. 37, 121, 122, 125, 126 n. 47, 126 n. 48, 127–28, 129 n. 51, 130, 130 n. 53, 131, 132, 134, 135, 136, 136 n. 7, 137, 137 n. 10, 138, 138 n. 12, 140, 143, 143 n. 3, 148 n. 13, 149, 151, 152, 152 n. 19, 153, 154, 156, 157, 159, 160, 161, 161 n. 30, 162, 164 n. 1, 165, 166 n. 4, 166 n. 5, 167, 169, 173 n. 4, 173 n. 5, 174, 174 n. 6, 174 n. 7, 177, 178, 180, 181, 184, 189, 190, 191, 194, 195 n. 48, 196, 198, 198 n. 50, 199 n. 2, 200 n. 5, 202, 203, 203 n. 13, 205, 206, 206 n. 17, 207 n. 19, 207 n. 20, 209, 210, 213, 214 n. 5, 216, 221, 222, 223, 224, 227, 228 n. 32, 231 n. 3, 235, 236 n. 11, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 244 n. 26, 246, 246 n. 30, 247, 248, 249, 252, 256 n. 37, 257, 261 n. 7, 264, 264 n. 12, 265 n. 13, 266, 267, 268, 269, 269 n. 20, 272, 449, 449 n. 2, 545 n. 8, 731, 901 n. 1, 903 n. 1, 905 n. 9, 909 n. 19, 921, 982, 1052 n. 15, 1507, 1754 n. 3, 1757 n. 8, 1759, 1761, 1761 n. 11, 1761 n. 12, 1764, 1766 n. 2, 1771, 1772, 1773 n. 7, 1776 n. 1, 1777, 1779, 1780, 1781, 1788, 1789, 1789 n. 13, 1790, 1792, 1793, 1794 n. 18, 1795, 1796, 1801 n. 30, 1802, 1803 n. 32, 1806, 1807, 1809, 1809 n. 5, 1810, 1811, 1813, 1815, 1816, 1817, 1818 n. 2, 1819, 1820 n. 7, 1820 n. 9, 1821, 1821 n. 10, 1827, 1827 n. 3, 1828 n. 5, 1829, 1830, 1830 n. 10, 1831, 1832, 1837, 1839, 1842, 1843, 1846, 1846 n. 6, 1848 n. 11, 1849 n. 13, 1850, 1850 n. 14, 1851, 1852, 1853, 1855 n. 20, 1856, 1857, 1858, 1859 n.

2–6, 1860, 1863, 1868, 1871 n. 1, 1874, 1875, 1938, 1951 n. 2, 1954
Brown, S. 382, 383, 736, 736 n. 43
Bruce, A. B. 242, 257, 265, 313, 414, 431, 432, 595, 636, 688, 705, 712 n. 6, 749, 795, 807 n. 33, 932
Bruce, F. F. 5, 16 n. 7, 282 n. 4, 285 n. 9, 487, 909 n. 17, 952, 1458 n. 1, 1610, 1843
Bruners, W. 1397 n. 2, 1402
Brutscheck, J. 1038
Buber, M. 591 n. 39
Buber, S. 924 n. 3
Buchanan, G. W. 534 n. 42, 535 n. 43
Büchele, A. 33, 1825, 1825 n. 2
Büchsel, H. M. F. 53, 56 n. 10, 61 n. 26, 152 n. 19, 179, 199 n. 1, 253, 303 n. 10, 419, 589, 606, 649, 675 n. 19, 679, 737 n. 46, 883, 1011 n. 53, 1062 n. 38, 1098 n. 11, 1116, 1259, 1267, 1286, 1311, 1343 n. 41, 1426, 1431, 1464, 1519, 1687, 1690 n. 43, 1712 n. 2, 1724 n. 16, 1738, 1810 n. 6, 1913
Bultmann, R. 64 n. 34, 71, 132, 138, 143, 145 n. 8, 152, 173, 189 n. 35, 193, 199 n. 3, 200 n. 4, 221 n. 21, 231 n. 2, 231 n. 4, 236, 238 n. 15, 259 n. 1, 261, 286, 300, 300 n. 3, 316, 321 n. 6, 334, 334 n. 3, 365 n. 2, 366–67, 396 n. 8, 398, 425 n. 7, 451, 451 n. 8, 470 n. 12, 470 n. 13, 490, 490 n. 4, 508,

509 n. 7, 509 n. 8, 510 n. 10, 511 n. 11, 550, 553, 577, 591 n. 39, 600, 601, 602 n. 50, 604, 633, 644, 648, 660, 661, 692 n. 3, 706, 719 n. 7, 735, 737 n. 47, 743 n. 3, 750, 757, 758, 758 n. 7, 767 n. 2, 768, 769, 769 n. 7, 787, 789 n. 9, 802, 812 n. 7, 821 n. 5, 826, 838, 839 n. 4, 845 n. 2, 850 n. 2, 851, 856, 864, 879, 879 n. 4, 893, 895, 926, 947, 952, 966, 967 n. 1, 976, 978, 987 n. 3, 991 n. 11, 991 n. 12, 992 n. 13, 1019, 1019 n. 4, 1023, 1039, 1048 n. 9, 1068 n. 2, 1071, 1078, 1089, 1109 n. 8, 1114, 1121, 1131 n. 3, 1139 n. 11, 1148 n. 5, 1153, 1159, 1165, 1166 n. 8, 1172, 1190, 1192 n. 5, 1198, 1198 n. 22, 1203 n. 3, 1213, 1213 n. 2, 1219, 1232 n. 4, 1245, 1249 n. 12, 1254 n. 2, 1255 n. 3, 1261, 1265 n. 9, 1270, 1282 n. 3, 1297 n. 5, 1307, 1307 n. 4, 1315, 1326, 1338, 1340 n. 35, 1346, 1348 n. 6, 1361 n. 3, 1363 n. 8, 1365, 1382, 1383 n. 5, 1397 n. 1, 1398, 1410, 1411, 1417, 1425, 1435 n. 23, 1437, 1445, 1446, 1459, 1460, 1468, 1468 n. 3, 1474, 1476, 1483, 1484 n. 10, 1504, 1514, 1515, 1515 n. 3, 1523, 1529, 1549, 1562, 1577, 1583, 1595, 1608, 1618, 1633, 1658 n. 9, 1701 n. 1, 1709, 1712, 1717, 1731, 1742 n. 21, 1755, 1766, 1766 n. 2, 1777, 1787 n. 8, 1807,

1807 n. 1, 1815, 1836, 1839, 1871, 1871 n. 2, 1872, 1882, 1890, 1905, 1909, 1940
Burchard, C. 1036
Burger, C. 1508
Burkitt, F. C. 1720
Burns, J. L. 541 n. 7, 1209 n. 15, 1591 n. 2
Burrows, E. 70 n. 1, 248
Burrows, M. 1620 n. 3
Burton, E. D. 1328 n. 7, 1790
Busse, U. 397 n. 9, 475 n. 18, 530 n. 39, 632 n. 4, 785, 879 n. 2, 1212, 1216 n. 9
Buth, R. 149 n. 16
Byington, S. T. 1799

Cadbury, H. J. 7, 55, 56 n. 7, 56 n. 12, 59, 59 n. 20, 59 n. 21, 60, 60 n. 23, 61 n. 27, 65, 67, 142 n. 1, 436 n. 24, 817, 1002 n. 31, 1379, 1416 n. 12, 1697 n. 52
Caird, G. B. 55, 63, 64, 129, 1654, 1859
Callan, T. 1639
Calvin, J. 858, 931, 932, 941, 941 n. 15, 1503, 1527
Campbell, D. K. 939
Campbell, J. Y. 1080 n. 24
Campenhausen, H. von 1915
Candlish, R. 1528

Caragounis, C. C. 314 n. 33, 924 n. 1, 924 n. 3, 929, 1080 n. 25
Carlston, C. E. 719, 1591 n. 1
Carmignac, J. 1054 n. 20
Carroll, J. T. 479 n. 25, 1280
Carroll R., M. D. 406 n. 23
Carson, D. A. 341, 364 n. 1, 370 n. 11, 386, 396, 444 n. 41, 450, 466, 468, 469, 470, 493 n. 8, 497, 522 n. 23, 523, 526, 543, 544, 546 n. 12, 562 n. 12, 563, 563 n. 16, 581, 592, 596, 632 n. 4, 658, 756 n. 5, 768, 811, 918, 920, 921, 921 n. 7, 921 n. 8, 921 n. 9, 931 n. 1, 932, 934, 934 n. 4, 934 n. 5, 936, 936 n. 9, 942, 962, 1123, 1482, 1759, 1769, 1792, 1954, 1955, 1955 n. 3, 1960
Casey, M. 924 n. 1, 975, 1684 n. 37, 1800
Cassidy, R. J. 37, 400
Catchpole, D. R. 1454, 1455 n. 23, 1548 n. 2, 1549, 1776 n. 4, 1777 n. 5, 1780, 1781, 1783–84, 1787, 1787 n. 8, 1789, 1791, 1793, 1793 n. 16, 1795 n. 20, 1798, 1804, 1805
Cave, C. H. 1365 n. 11
Ceroke, C. P. 928
Chafer, L. S. 938 n. 13
Chajes, C. 1447 n. 7
Chapman, J. 1124 n. 30

Charles, R. H. 596, 596 n. 46, 1101, 1208 n. 12
Charlesworth, C. E. 1911
Charlesworth, J. H. 122 n. 41, 192 n. 42, 455 n. 15, 596 n. 46, 772 n. 13, 1101 n. 19, 1152 n. 11, 1274 n. 8
Chavel, C. B. 1834
Chilton, B. D. 405, 474 n. 17, 1079 n. 23, 1352 n. 15
Chisholm, R. B., Jr. 1636
Christ, F. 1121
Chwolson [Khvol'son], D. A. 1956 n. 5, 1958
Clark, K. W. 1080 n. 24
Clough, A. H. 1030
Cohen, A. 226, 1413 n. 5
Cohen, B. 523
Cohn, H. 1834
Colani, T. 1651–52
Coleridge, M. 259 n. 1
Collins, J. J. 114 n. 25, 1684
Colpe, C. 580, 888 n. 3, 924 n. 1, 952, 978 n. 2, 1427 n. 8, 1429, 1432, 1433, 1444, 1445, 1455, 1456, 1523, 1686 n. 40
Colson, F. H. 597
Combrink, H. J. B. 399 n. 13
Connally, R. H. 1259

Conzelmann, H. 14, 28, 55 n. 5, 63, 83, 111, 140, 193, 279, 285 n. 8, 286, 308, 375, 382, 390 n. 1, 412, 441, 454, 472 n. 15, 563, 564, 599, 649, 739, 751, 874, 952, 1077 n. 16, 1218 n. 16, 1351 n. 12, 1355, 1400, 1426 n. 8, 1428, 1453, 1502, 1573, 1654, 1663 n. 18, 1683 n. 36, 1690, 1801, 1859, 1892
Corbishley, T. 904 n. 6
Corrington, G. P. 396 n. 8
Cortés, J. B. 272 n. 23, 1352, 1353 n. 18
Couroyer, B. 608
Cox Evans, L. E. 1876
Craig, W. L. 1880 n. 4
Cranfield, C. E. B. 510 n. 9, 718 n. 2, 783 n. 32, 787, 929 n. 10, 1452 n. 20, 1455, 1455 n. 22, 1759
Cranmer, T. 545
Creed, J. M. 55, 59, 59 n. 21, 60 n. 23, 61, 65 n. 35, 67, 76 n. 8, 77, 79 n. 22, 82, 82 n. 35, 89 n. 49, 94 n. 57, 95, 97, 98, 102 n. 1, 107, 108, 109, 110 n. 18, 111, 120 n. 37, 122, 126 n. 48, 127, 135 n. 5, 139, 145 n. 8, 150 n. 18, 159, 166 n. 6, 167, 168, 170 n. 14, 177, 182, 184, 189, 199 n. 2, 199 n. 3, 204, 208, 210, 215, 221, 226, 231 n. 4, 235, 236 n. 11, 241, 241 n. 20, 242, 246, 248, 259 n. 1, 261 n. 6, 266, 267, 270, 280 n. 2, 283, 285 n. 9, 286, 288

n. 14, 299 n. 2, 304, 307, 309, 313, 316, 319, 320, 321 n. 6, 325, 329, 338, 365, 374, 375, 381 n. 31, 396 n. 8, 414, 416 n. 38, 431, 433, 437 n. 26, 437 n. 27, 439, 441, 451, 451 n. 5, 455, 457, 460, 466, 474, 476, 480, 495, 526, 534, 539, 545, 549, 564, 575, 576, 581, 587, 597, 602 n. 50, 605, 616, 618, 619, 622, 638, 640, 646, 647, 649, 650, 651 n. 9, 652, 652 n. 11, 654, 656, 657, 659, 664, 666, 667, 675, 677 n. 22, 678 n. 24, 681 n. 28, 684, 704 n. 25, 713 n. 8, 725, 726 n. 17, 733 n. 37, 755 n. 1, 760, 767 n. 2, 774, 787, 790, 795, 800 n. 27, 801, 807 n. 33, 822, 825, 829, 847, 863, 863 n. 2, 865, 867, 873, 876, 883, 888, 892, 896, 911, 913, 932, 969, 972, 981, 987, 999 n. 27, 1012 n. 54, 1016 n. 62, 1019, 1019 n. 2, 1040, 1045, 1054, 1054 n. 19, 1056, 1061, 1062, 1068, 1070 n. 5, 1078, 1083, 1091, 1097 n. 10, 1102, 1105, 1113, 1118, 1120, 1134, 1135, 1141, 1146, 1153, 1161, 1162, 1174, 1175, 1179 n. 16, 1182, 1184, 1194, 1202 n. 1, 1206, 1213, 1215, 1215 n. 5, 1216 n. 10, 1218, 1219, 1230, 1236, 1239, 1240, 1241, 1257, 1258 n. 9, 1263, 1273, 1283, 1284, 1286, 1289, 1290, 1296, 1303, 1307, 1309, 1309 n. 7, 1311, 1311 n. 13, 1324, 1325 n. 4, 1332 n. 17, 1335 n. 28, 1350, 1354 n. 21, 1357 n. 23, 1362, 1366, 1369, 1370,

1371, 1381 n. 2, 1384, 1390, 1392 n. 17, 1394, 1398, 1410, 1415, 1415 n. 11, 1427, 1435, 1436, 1439, 1449, 1449 n. 11, 1452, 1455, 1459, 1468, 1469, 1492, 1506 n. 7, 1514, 1515, 1516, 1520, 1525, 1527, 1531, 1541, 1545, 1548, 1556, 1558, 1579, 1583, 1598, 1601, 1620, 1623, 1625, 1626, 1628, 1635, 1654, 1665, 1667 n. 21, 1673, 1675, 1681, 1722, 1725, 1736, 1739, 1744, 1757, 1766, 1772, 1775, 1776, 1776 n. 1, 1790 n. 14, 1791, 1801, 1805, 1811, 1815, 1818, 1823, 1838, 1842, 1843, 1847, 1859, 1868, 1873, 1874, 1876, 1876 n. 10, 1882, 1902, 1908, 1911, 1914, 1917, 1920 n. 23, 1922, 1924, 1935, 1936, 1948

Crehan, J. H. 1911

Crockett, L. 403

Crossan, J. D. 333, 364 n. 1, 397 n. 11, 427 n. 10, 451, 468, 469, 633, 659, 947, 975, 976, 1032 n. 18, 1261, 1269 n. 1, 1317, 1361 n. 3, 1593, 1596

Cullmann, O. 341, 455, 543, 653, 952, 1470 n. 7

Cutler, A. 238 n. 12

Dahl, N. A. 160 n. 28, 287 n. 13, 731

Dalman, G. H. 1412, 1413, 1413 n. 6, 1415 n. 11, 1515, 1792, 1802

Danby, H. 651 n. 10

Danker, F. W. 16 n. 7, 56, 80 n. 29, 82, 83, 84, 87, 91, 92, 92 n. 50, 97, 103 n. 2, 116, 126 n. 49, 126 n. 50, 128, 137, 138 n. 12, 145 n. 8, 150 n. 18, 152, 155 n. 23, 157, 168, 182, 183, 186 n. 29, 187 n. 31, 188, 193 n. 43, 194, 207, 214 n. 7, 219, 220, 221, 222, 235, 239 n. 17, 239 n. 18, 246 n. 30, 247 n. 31, 252, 253, 263 n. 9, 265, 266, 266 n. 15, 267, 268, 269 n. 19, 272, 281, 290, 293, 303 n. 9, 307, 309, 312 n. 30, 316, 319, 320, 348, 349, 377, 380, 381, 411, 419, 421, 429, 432, 437 n. 26, 438, 440, 454 n. 12, 455, 456, 458, 461, 463, 464, 476, 478, 479, 482, 489, 495, 498, 515, 517, 518, 519 n. 19, 523, 525, 527, 527 n. 32, 529, 530, 535 n. 43, 540, 565 n. 20, 575, 576, 581, 583, 585, 587, 588, 593, 593 n. 40, 594, 597, 599, 600, 603, 604, 604 n. 52, 613, 614, 615 n. 59, 636, 640, 642, 643, 651, 652, 653, 656, 664, 666, 668, 670, 674, 675, 676, 679, 681, 684 n. 37, 700, 702 n. 20, 708, 713, 729 n. 25, 744, 746, 751 n. 4, 752, 757, 775, 777, 779 n. 26, 781, 784 n. 33, 791, 794, 803, 804, 805, 816, 817 n. 17, 828, 831, 835, 860, 866, 867, 868, 869, 872, 875, 876, 878, 881, 883, 890, 895 n. 4, 901, 950, 968 n. 2, 970, 974, 978, 981–82, 982, 984, 997, 998, 998 n. 22, 999, 1000, 1001, 1005, 1010, 1012, 1016 n. 62, 1026, 1030, 1033, 1043,

1050, 1052, 1054 n. 21, 1055, 1057, 1059, 1061, 1062, 1073, 1082 n. 30, 1092, 1094, 1095, 1100, 1101 n. 17, 1113, 1114, 1118, 1120, 1121, 1133, 1134, 1136, 1141, 1150 n. 6, 1153, 1160, 1161, 1163, 1164, 1168, 1168 n. 11, 1170, 1174, 1174 n. 5, 1176, 1181, 1185, 1192 n. 7, 1195, 1198, 1202 n. 1, 1206, 1206 n. 7, 1208, 1216 n. 7, 1217, 1218, 1219, 1228, 1234, 1235, 1287–88, 1298 n. 7, 1306 n. 2, 1312 n. 19, 1313 n. 21, 1314, 1334, 1339, 1341, 1350, 1367, 1371, 1373, 1377 n. 36, 1384, 1391, 1392 n. 18, 1404, 1406, 1409, 1416, 1429, 1435, 1439, 1439 n. 29, 1453, 1455, 1458, 1465, 1477, 1479, 1494 n. 1, 1499 n. 7, 1518, 1519, 1520, 1523, 1528, 1531, 1540 n. 21, 1542, 1552, 1556 n. 14, 1557, 1558, 1559, 1562 n. 21, 1563 n. 25, 1582, 1585, 1604, 1609, 1612, 1616, 1623, 1624, 1625, 1626, 1639, 1643, 1647 n. 21, 1663 n. 18, 1666, 1675, 1678, 1679, 1680, 1680 n. 32, 1682, 1687, 1690, 1694, 1705, 1718, 1718 n. 3, 1719, 1723 n. 15, 1737, 1738, 1739 n. 12, 1741 n. 18, 1759, 1764, 1771, 1773, 1783, 1786, 1811, 1812 n. 9, 1820, 1820 n. 7, 1833, 1843, 1847, 1852, 1868, 1877, 1891, 1909, 1910, 1914, 1916, 1919 n. 21, 1920 n. 23, 1921–22

Darr, J. A. 1247, 1819

Daube, D. 122, 174 n. 8, 507 n. 6, 578, 578 n. 30, 701 n. 17, 871 n. 18, 999 n. 26, 1019 n. 4, 1024 n. 6, 1247, 1310 n. 9, 1630 n. 1, 1642, 1770 n. 6, 1850 n. 15
Davies, P. R. 1958
Davies, W. D. 562, 562 n. 12, 563, 563 n. 14, 932, 1412
Deatrick, E. P. 1291
Debrunner, A. see BDF and BDR
De Groot, A. 249
DeGuglielmo, A. 1908
Deissner, E. F. K. 608, 1163 n. 4
De Jonge, H. J. 261 n. 4
De Jonge, M. 218, 841, 1428, 1860 n. 29
Delling, G. 55 n. 5, 56, 78 n. 19, 112 n. 23, 129, 130 n. 53, 130 n. 54, 135 n. 6, 141 n. 17, 195 n. 48, 206 n. 17, 251, 309 n. 22, 392, 605, 641, 700, 823, 848 n. 7, 968, 1002 n. 33, 1041, 1198, 1215, 1290, 1437, 1447 n. 6, 1448, 1450, 1451 n. 17, 1451 n. 18, 1455, 1495 n. 2, 1609, 1664, 1706, 1721, 1749, 1809 n. 4, 1936
Delobel, J. 390
Denney, J. 1284
Derrett, J. D. M. 640, 695 n. 7, 1024 n. 5, 1024 n. 6, 1026, 1026 n. 11, 1028, 1028 n. 13, 1030, 1033 n.

21, 1033 n. 22, 1150, 1278, 1287 n. 10, 1303, 1324, 1327 n. 5, 1330, 1331 n. 14, 1331 n. 16, 1332 n. 17, 1339, 1339 n. 33, 1340, 1365 n. 11, 1447, 1449, 1521, 1535, 1550, 1553, 1591 n. 1, 1594 n. 5, 1643
Dessau, H. 907 n. 15
Dibelius, M. 13, 71, 470 n. 12, 975 n. 1, 976 n. 1
Dietrich, W. 451 n. 6
Di Lella, A. A. 1684
Dillon, R. J. 57, 58 n. 15, 59, 62 n. 31, 1882, 1889, 1890 n. 8, 1891, 1892, 1893 n. 12, 1894, 1895, 1896, 1896 n. 14, 1896 n. 16, 1897, 1899, 1902, 1904, 1908, 1908 n. 4, 1909, 1910 n. 6, 1912, 1913 n. 8, 1914, 1916, 1917 n. 16, 1919 n. 20, 1920, 1927, 1929, 1932, 1934, 1934 n. 12, 1935, 1942, 1948
Dinkler, E. 838 n. 3, 845 n. 2
Dittenberger, W. 215, 311, 638
Dodd, C. H. 17, 946, 1080 n. 26, 1338, 1415 n. 11, 1427, 1562 n. 19, 1594, 1594 n. 5, 1656, 1675, 1905
Döderlein, J. 269 n. 20
Donahue, J. R. 310 n. 24, 311, 312
Donald, T. 1113 n. 14
Doran, R. 1604

Driver, G. R. 1859, 1860
Driver, S. R. 1684, 1685
Drury, J. 142 n. 1, 551
Duling, D. C. 668, 1508
Dungan, D. L. 914 n. 1, 1651 n. 2
Dunkerley, R. 1365 n. 11, 1366, 1843
Dunn, J. D. G. 322, 323, 323 n. 8, 323 n. 9, 339, 397, 845 n. 1, 1052 n. 14, 1052 n. 15, 1070, 1071, 1071 n. 6, 1684 n. 37
Duplacy, J. 1805
Du Plessis, I. I. 56 n. 11, 57 n. 13, 58 n. 14, 60 n. 24, 61 n. 29
Dupont, J. 364 n. 1, 375, 377, 385 n. 37, 571, 605, 691 n. 2, 1741 n. 18, 1928
Dupont-Sommer, A. 124 n. 45, 297 n. 19, 706 n. 26

Easton, B. S. 1068 n. 1, 1070 n. 5
Edersheim, A. 227, 563 n. 14, 936
Edwards, R. A. 1096
Egelkraut, H. L. 957, 957 n. 1, 957 n. 3, 959, 959 n. 4, 960, 960 n. 5, 974, 979 n. 5, 981, 987, 987 n. 2, 989 n. 6, 994 n. 15, 1015 n. 61, 1018, 1019 n. 4, 1025 n. 9, 1033, 1034 n. 24, 1046 n. 2, 1050, 1050 n. 10, 1069 n. 4, 1105, 1105 n. 2, 1106, 1222 n. 3, 1226 n. 9, 1230, 1244, 1268, 1269, 1284, 1381 n. 2, 1467, 1476, 1528

Ehrman, A. 546 n. 12
Ehrman, B. D. 1722 n. 12
Eisenman, R. H. 339 n. 16
Eisler, R. I. 322, 833
Ellingworth, P. 1183 n. 24
Elliott, J. K. 687 n. 39
Ellis, E. E. 4, 6, 16, 18, 58, 58 n. 15, 59 n. 21, 63, 66, 97, 112, 121, 136, 155 n. 23, 159, 166, 205, 205 n. 16, 223, 251, 264 n. 11, 268, 272, 284, 303, 307, 310, 312, 320, 321, 322, 349, 366, 403 n. 16, 416, 433 n. 18, 434 n. 19, 440, 455, 460, 484, 539 n. 5, 546, 562, 562 n. 11, 565, 568, 576, 588 n. 37, 592, 593, 594, 596, 598, 606, 636, 638, 640, 665–66, 690, 694, 695 n. 7, 711, 730, 732, 751 n. 4, 772, 775, 776, 791, 807 n. 33, 813, 815, 816 n. 14, 822, 824, 825, 828, 831, 835, 846, 853, 854, 858, 859, 863, 869, 871 n. 18, 872, 879, 883, 889, 894, 898, 932, 952, 957, 960, 962, 963, 968, 971, 972, 975, 977, 979, 981, 983, 997 n. 21, 1007, 1008 n. 47, 1009 n. 49, 1011, 1016 n. 62, 1019 n. 4, 1022, 1023, 1024, 1030, 1031, 1040, 1045 n. 1, 1053, 1054, 1073, 1082, 1091, 1096, 1098 n. 12, 1105 n. 1, 1117, 1121, 1134, 1135, 1137, 1140, 1146, 1159, 1165, 1171 n. 3, 1177, 1178 n. 14, 1184, 1186, 1192, 1196 n. 18, 1202, 1202 n. 1, 1204 n.

5, 1212, 1217 n. 14, 1222 n. 2, 1237, 1239, 1239 n. 19, 1246, 1247, 1248, 1249, 1250 n. 14, 1253, 1256, 1261, 1267 n. 14, 1270 n. 2, 1272, 1276, 1280, 1295 n. 1, 1300 n. 14, 1339, 1341, 1342, 1352, 1358, 1381 n. 2, 1390, 1394, 1402, 1409, 1413, 1416, 1418, 1422, 1427, 1437, 1445, 1453, 1455, 1463 n. 7, 1473, 1476, 1482, 1501, 1505, 1511, 1519, 1520, 1521, 1528 n. 3, 1532, 1538, 1546, 1552, 1555, 1556, 1558, 1562, 1584, 1592, 1595, 1603, 1603 n. 10, 1607, 1616, 1623, 1624, 1626, 1629, 1636, 1640, 1642, 1643, 1645, 1660, 1663, 1671 n. 25, 1673, 1675 n. 27, 1681, 1689, 1691, 1691 n. 46, 1711, 1712, 1713, 1719, 1722, 1725, 1739, 1741 n. 18, 1757 n. 8, 1780, 1783, 1801, 1838, 1844, 1845, 1853, 1857, 1860, 1868, 1869, 1875, 1890, 1892, 1902, 1907, 1908, 1929, 1944, 1957

Emerton, J. A. 1685 n. 38

Epp, E. J. 347, 1868, 1950

Eppstein, V. 1572 n. 1, 1575 n. 5, 1576 n. 6

Erasmus, D. 858

Ernst, J. 103 n. 4, 120 n. 37, 132, 163, 173 n. 4, 199 n. 2, 236, 279, 285, 291, 295, 300 n. 5, 304 n. 12, 316, 317 n. 1, 320, 332, 334, 351 n. 5, 352, 376, 385, 397 n. 11, 402, 419, 420 n. 46, 433, 436, 438,

439 n. 33, 441, 451 n. 6, 483, 496, 530 n. 39, 534 n. 42, 542, 549–50, 563, 564, 564 n. 18, 575, 577, 581, 582, 584, 585, 586, 588 n. 35, 618, 653, 654, 665, 670 n. 12, 677, 679, 681 n. 29, 683, 684, 700, 704, 704 n. 25, 719, 733 n. 39, 745, 751, 781, 813 n. 9, 825, 832, 842, 886, 913 n. 6, 919 n. 3, 936, 970, 976, 979, 979 n. 5, 987, 996 n. 19, 1006, 1010, 1012, 1015, 1016 n. 62, 1019 n. 4, 1030, 1031, 1038, 1038 n. 3, 1040, 1058, 1059, 1061, 1063 n. 39, 1064 n. 41, 1068, 1074 n. 7, 1074 n. 10, 1091, 1102, 1106, 1111, 1113, 1121, 1122, 1129 n. 1, 1141, 1150 n. 7, 1160, 1165, 1195, 1196, 1207, 1237, 1248, 1250, 1253, 1254 n. 2, 1261, 1263, 1265, 1266, 1269, 1270 n. 2, 1281, 1281 n. 1, 1282, 1284 n. 6, 1293, 1300 n. 9, 1303, 1332 n. 17, 1345, 1346 n. 3, 1355, 1363 n. 8, 1365, 1366, 1368, 1371, 1381 n. 2, 1383 n. 5, 1391, 1392, 1399, 1402, 1414 n. 8, 1418, 1433, 1445, 1449, 1465 n. 13, 1467 n. 2, 1485 n. 12, 1487, 1490, 1508, 1510, 1514, 1517, 1518, 1528, 1533, 1536, 1554, 1583, 1586, 1603, 1619, 1623, 1625, 1645, 1666, 1669, 1677, 1678, 1680, 1682, 1692, 1704, 1718, 1720 n. 9, 1728, 1738, 1745, 1753, 1754, 1754 n. 4, 1757, 1764, 1766, 1769, 1771, 1775, 1776, 1776 n. 1, 1789, 1790, 1791,

1805, 1806, 1824, 1836, 1837, 1838, 1846, 1850, 1853, 1865, 1868, 1871 n. 1, 1883, 1904, 1908 n. 4, 1919, 1922, 1927, 1932, 1937, 1945, 1949
Esler, P. F. 13, 14, 16 n. 7, 17, 39
Evans, C. A. 16 n. 7, 646 n. 1, 654, 728 n. 24, 740, 868 n. 11, 966, 968 n. 4, 969 n. 7, 972, 983, 1004, 1016 n. 62, 1029, 1034, 1052 n. 16, 1079, 1318, 1349 n. 8, 1391 n. 15, 1447 n. 7, 1517, 1535, 1565 n. 28, 1576, 1680 n. 33, 1681 n. 34, 1719, 1754 n. 4, 1798, 1843, 1944 n. 23
Evans, C. F. 8, 9, 10, 11, 16 n. 7, 29, 52 n. 1, 75, 104 n. 6, 121 n. 39, 123 n. 44, 132 n. 1, 143 n. 3, 167 n. 6, 193, 240, 250, 261 n. 4, 282, 282 n. 3, 304 n. 11, 334, 348 n. 1, 352 n. 5, 365, 365 n. 4, 373 n. 14, 374 n. 15, 380 n. 29, 392 n. 4, 396 n. 8, 406 n. 22, 430 n. 12, 435 n. 22, 440, 478 n. 23, 482, 697, 768 n. 5, 888, 919 n. 3, 960 n. 7, 962 n. 9, 1016 n. 62, 1565 n. 28, 1738, 1766, 1879 n. 3, 1922, 1933 n. 9

Farmer, W. R. 7, 8, 437 n. 30, 914 n. 1, 914 n. 3, 932, 1203
Farrell, H. K. 962 n. 9
Farris, S. 142, 142 n. 1, 143, 143 n. 3, 143 n. 4, 144, 145 n. 9, 146 n. 10, 151, 154, 173 n. 4, 174 n. 6,

174 n. 7, 230 n. 1, 241, 243, 243 n. 24, 244, 244 n. 26, 245 n. 27, 257
Fee, G. D. 1043
Feinberg, J. S. 441 n. 39
Feine, P. 957
Fichtner, J. 1035
Field, F. 1417 n. 13
Finegan, J. 913
Finkel, A. 410–11
Finn, T. M. 638
Fischel, H. A. 1248 n. 10
Fitzer, G. 138 n. 11, 867, 1000 n. 30, 1079, 1418 n. 15
Fitzgerald, J. T. 372
Fitzmyer, J. A. 4, 4 n. 2, 5, 6, 8, 9, 16 n. 7, 18, 19, 28, 52, 54, 54 n. 3, 55, 56, 57, 57 n. 13, 58, 59, 59 n. 17, 59 n. 21, 61, 62, 62 n. 30, 63, 64, 65 n. 35, 66 n. 36, 67, 70 n. 1, 70 n. 2, 71, 75, 76, 76 n. 8, 78 n. 18, 79 n. 23, 80 n. 30, 84, 85, 85 n. 41, 86, 87, 88, 91, 92, 92 n. 51, 94 n. 57, 95 n. 62, 96, 96 n. 64, 96 n. 65, 97, 99 n. 71, 106, 107, 108 n. 12, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 113 n. 24, 114, 114 n. 25, 115, 116, 120, 120 n. 37, 121 n. 39, 123 n. 43, 126, 128, 129, 130, 131, 131 n. 56, 132, 134 n. 2, 134 n. 4, 136, 138, 143 n. 3, 145 n. 9, 146 n. 10,

149, 151, 154, 159, 159 n. 27, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166 n. 6, 167, 169, 169 n. 9, 172, 173 n. 4, 174 n. 6, 174 n. 7, 175, 177, 180, 183, 184, 187, 188, 190, 191 n. 38, 192 n. 42, 193, 193 n. 44, 194, 196–97, 198, 199 n. 2, 200 n. 5, 201 n. 8, 202, 202 n. 12, 203, 203 n. 13, 204, 205, 206, 207 n. 20, 207 n. 21, 209, 209 n. 24, 214, 214 n. 5, 215, 219, 220 n. 17, 220 n. 19, 223, 224, 228 n. 32, 229, 231 n. 5, 236, 236 n. 11, 238, 238 n. 12, 240, 242, 242 n. 22, 243, 244, 247, 248, 249, 254, 255, 256 n. 37, 258, 259, 259 n. 1, 261 n. 7, 263, 264, 266, 266 n. 15, 268, 269, 270 n. 21, 279, 283, 285, 286, 288, 290, 295, 299 n. 2, 303, 303 n. 8, 303 n. 10, 305 n. 15, 306, 307, 310 n. 24, 311 n. 26, 312, 313, 314, 322, 323, 325, 326, 327, 328, 333, 333 n. 2, 334, 343, 346, 348 n. 2, 352, 354, 357, 358, 359, 364, 365, 366, 367, 367 n. 7, 369, 371, 372, 373, 375, 376 n. 19, 379, 381 n. 31, 382, 383, 384 n. 35, 390, 391, 392, 392 n. 4, 396 n. 8, 398, 404, 406, 411, 412, 413, 415, 418 n. 41, 419, 420 n. 46, 423 n. 3, 423 n. 4, 425 n. 6, 425 n. 7, 428, 429, 432, 433, 436 n. 24, 437, 437 n. 30, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 448 n. 1, 449, 449 n. 3, 450, 451, 451 n. 6, 452, 453, 454, 459, 460, 461, 462, 467, 467 n. 9, 468, 469, 470, 470 n. 12, 472 n. 15,

474, 476, 476 n. 20, 479, 481, 482, 483, 484, 489, 490, 491, 493, 493 n. 8, 494, 496 n. 14, 498, 503, 504 n. 3, 505–6, 507, 509 n. 7, 509 n. 8, 520, 521, 523, 524 n. 27, 524 n. 28, 527, 529 n. 37, 530, 534, 536 n. 44, 537, 539 n. 5, 540, 542, 543, 545, 546, 546 n. 12, 547, 549, 550, 557, 562 n. 12, 563, 564, 564 n. 18, 565, 567, 568 n. 26, 572, 572 n. 27, 576, 577, 578, 580, 581, 584, 585, 587, 588, 589, 590, 592, 595, 598, 599, 600, 602 n. 50, 603, 608, 610, 614, 615, 616, 618, 620 n. 65, 622, 626, 630, 631 n. 2, 632 n. 3, 633, 635, 636, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 645, 646, 647, 648, 648 n. 3, 649, 650, 653, 654, 657, 657 n. 3, 659, 659 n. 6, 660, 661, 664, 665, 667, 668, 670, 670 n. 12, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675 n. 19, 675 n. 20, 679, 681 n. 28, 682, 682 n. 31, 683 n. 35, 684, 690, 691, 692 n. 3, 695 n. 8, 696, 698, 699, 702, 702 n. 21, 711 n. 3, 712 n. 7, 713, 713 n. 13, 719, 719 n. 5, 719 n. 6, 719 n. 7, 724, 727, 728, 729, 729 n. 27, 730 n. 29, 731 n. 31, 732 n. 35, 732 n. 36, 733 n. 39, 737, 738, 740, 742, 743 n. 3, 744, 745, 748, 750, 751 n. 4, 752, 753, 754 n. 1, 757, 758, 758 n. 7, 758 n. 9, 759, 760 n. 12, 761, 762, 763, 767, 769, 769 n. 6, 771, 774, 774 n. 18, 775, 776 n. 23, 778, 779, 780, 782, 784, 784 n. 33, 786, 787, 787 n. 4, 789 n. 9,

792 n. 11, 795 n. 16, 800, 801, 803, 807 n. 33, 809, 810, 811, 811 n. 4, 812, 815, 816 n. 14, 819, 820 n. 3, 821, 821 n. 5, 822, 823, 824, 826, 827, 828, 828 n. 6, 829, 830, 831, 834, 835, 839, 842, 842 n. 9, 845, 845 n. 2, 846, 847, 847 n. 6, 848, 848 n. 7, 850 n. 2, 853, 854 n. 3, 855, 856, 862, 863, 863 n. 1, 864, 864 n. 4, 865, 866, 867, 869, 872, 874, 878, 879, 882, 883, 884, 888, 888 n. 3, 891, 892, 893, 895, 896 n. 6, 897, 898, 899, 902, 904, 904 n. 6, 910, 911 n. 1, 913 n. 6, 918, 919 n. 3, 924, 924 n. 3, 925–26, 926 n. 7, 928, 929, 932, 950, 950 n. 2, 952, 954, 957, 960, 961, 961 n. 8, 963 n. 10, 966, 967, 968 n. 2, 969, 973, 976, 979 n. 3, 981, 981 n. 7, 987, 987 n. 2, 989, 990, 990 n. 7, 990 n. 8, 991, 1000 n. 29, 1001, 1003, 1003 n. 34, 1006 n. 38, 1007, 1008, 1008 n. 47, 1009, 1011, 1015, 1016 n. 62, 1019 n. 4, 1021, 1024, 1025, 1029, 1031, 1033, 1034, 1034 n. 25, 1036, 1037, 1038, 1038 n. 3, 1039, 1040, 1042, 1043, 1046, 1046 n. 2, 1047, 1050 n. 11, 1053 n. 18, 1054, 1054 n. 19, 1055 n. 22, 1056 n. 26, 1057 n. 29, 1059 n. 32, 1060, 1061 n. 36, 1062, 1063, 1064, 1064 n. 41, 1065, 1068 n. 1, 1070 n. 5, 1074, 1074 n. 10, 1074 n. 11, 1076, 1077 n. 16, 1088, 1089, 1091, 1093, 1094, 1094 n. 7, 1095,

1096, 1096 n. 9, 1097, 1097 n. 10, 1099, 1100, 1101 n. 15, 1101 n. 17, 1105, 1107, 1107 n. 5, 1109, 1111, 1111 n. 9, 1113 n. 14, 1115, 1115 n. 17, 1116 n. 18, 1117, 1120, 1121, 1126, 1129 n. 1, 1131 n. 3, 1133, 1134, 1136 n. 6, 1137 n. 7, 1137 n. 8, 1138 n. 10, 1139, 1139 n. 12, 1140, 1144, 1144 n. 16, 1147 n. 2, 1148, 1148 n. 5, 1149, 1150 n. 7, 1151, 1151 n. 8, 1152, 1152 n. 11, 1153, 1154, 1155, 1156, 1158, 1160, 1161, 1161 n. 2, 1162, 1163, 1163 n. 4, 1164, 1165, 1167 n. 10, 1168, 1171 n. 3, 1172, 1172 n. 4, 1174, 1175 n. 9, 1176, 1177, 1178, 1180, 1181, 1182, 1185 n. 26, 1189 n. 1, 1190, 1192, 1193 n. 11, 1194, 1195 n. 16, 1196–97, 1198, 1198 n. 22, 1199, 1199 n. 24, 1199 n. 25, 1203, 1205, 1206 n. 6, 1207, 1213, 1213 n. 2, 1214 n. 3, 1215 n. 5, 1216 n. 11, 1217, 1218 n. 16, 1222, 1222 n. 3, 1225, 1226, 1231 n. 2, 1232 n. 4, 1235, 1236, 1238 n. 16, 1239 n. 19, 1240, 1240 n. 21, 1243 n. 1, 1244, 1245, 1246, 1247, 1248, 1249 n. 12, 1253, 1254, 1254 n. 2, 1256, 1258, 1259, 1261, 1263, 1263 n. 5, 1265, 1265 n. 9, 1266, 1268, 1269 n. 1, 1270, 1272, 1272 n. 5, 1277, 1277 n. 14, 1281, 1282 n. 3, 1283, 1286, 1292 n. 27, 1295, 1295 n. 1, 1296, 1296 n. 2, 1296 n. 3, 1297, 1300 n. 12, 1301 n. 16,

1301 n. 18, 1302 n. 19, 1303, 1303 n. 23, 1306, 1306 n. 1, 1307, 1309 n. 7, 1310 n. 12, 1312, 1313, 1313 n. 20, 1314, 1315, 1316, 1317, 1319 n. 29, 1321, 1325, 1327, 1328, 1329 n. 9, 1330 n. 12, 1331, 1331 n. 14, 1331 n. 15, 1333 n. 19, 1334, 1336, 1336 n. 30, 1338, 1339, 1339 n. 33, 1340, 1341, 1341 n. 38, 1342 n. 40, 1343, 1344, 1346 n. 3, 1347, 1348 n. 6, 1351 n. 12, 1353, 1354 n. 19, 1356, 1357, 1363, 1365, 1366, 1366 n. 12, 1367, 1369, 1370, 1371, 1373, 1374 n. 30, 1379, 1380, 1381 n. 2, 1383 n. 5, 1384, 1388, 1389 n. 11, 1389 n. 13, 1390, 1391 n. 14, 1391 n. 15, 1394, 1394 n. 22, 1395, 1397, 1397 n. 2, 1398, 1399, 1400, 1401, 1402, 1405, 1410, 1411, 1412, 1413, 1414, 1415, 1416 n. 12, 1422, 1425, 1426, 1427, 1428, 1428 n. 9, 1428 n. 10, 1430, 1431 n. 13, 1432, 1433, 1435, 1436, 1437, 1437 n. 26, 1438, 1439, 1439 n. 29, 1442, 1444, 1445, 1446, 1447, 1448, 1449, 1450, 1451, 1453, 1455, 1458 n. 1, 1459, 1460, 1461, 1462, 1462 n. 4, 1463, 1464, 1465 n. 13, 1466, 1467 n. 1, 1468, 1468 n. 3, 1469, 1469 n. 4, 1470 n. 7, 1471, 1471 n. 11, 1474, 1476, 1477, 1479, 1481, 1483, 1484, 1485, 1486, 1487, 1490, 1494, 1495, 1496, 1498, 1501, 1502, 1504, 1507, 1511, 1512, 1513, 1514, 1515, 1515 n. 3,

1516, 1516 n. 4, 1517 n. 6, 1519–20, 1521, 1522, 1524, 1525, 1526, 1527, 1527 n. 2, 1529, 1532, 1533, 1533 n. 10, 1535, 1538 n. 15, 1538 n. 16, 1538 n. 17, 1543 n. 23, 1548, 1549, 1550, 1552, 1553, 1554 n. 8, 1554 n. 10, 1555, 1557, 1559, 1560, 1561, 1562, 1563, 1563 n. 26, 1572, 1573, 1574, 1575, 1576, 1577, 1580, 1583, 1585, 1586 n. 6, 1588, 1590, 1591, 1592, 1593, 1594 n. 4, 1594 n. 5, 1595, 1598, 1599, 1600, 1601, 1602 n. 8, 1603, 1604, 1605, 1607, 1608, 1610, 1611 n. 5, 1612, 1613, 1613 n. 10, 1613 n. 12, 1613 n. 13, 1614, 1617, 1617 n. 2, 1618, 1619, 1620, 1625, 1628, 1629, 1630, 1631, 1632, 1633, 1635, 1638, 1639, 1642, 1643, 1645, 1647, 1654 n. 6, 1658 n. 9, 1660 n. 10, 1661, 1662 n. 14, 1663, 1663 n. 18, 1665, 1666, 1667 n. 21, 1667 n. 22, 1669, 1670, 1673, 1676, 1678, 1682, 1687, 1688, 1691, 1692, 1694, 1698, 1698 n. 1, 1699, 1701 n. 1, 1703, 1704 n. 7, 1705, 1708, 1709, 1710, 1711, 1712 n. 1, 1713, 1715, 1717, 1717 n. 2, 1718 n. 4, 1719, 1720, 1720 n. 8, 1721, 1722, 1724, 1725, 1727, 1727 n. 19, 1728 n. 20, 1731, 1734 n. 3, 1735, 1736 n. 7, 1739 n. 11, 1739 n. 12, 1740, 1740 n. 14, 1741 n. 18, 1742, 1742 n. 19, 1742 n. 21, 1744 n. 25, 1746, 1747, 1749, 1749 n. 31, 1749 n. 33,

1753 n. 1, 1753 n. 2, 1755, 1757, 1761 n. 12, 1762, 1763, 1765, 1766, 1769 n. 5, 1773 n. 7, 1776 n. 1, 1776 n. 4, 1777, 1783 n. 6, 1789, 1790, 1793 n. 16, 1795, 1797 n. 23, 1801, 1801 n. 30, 1805, 1806, 1807, 1808, 1808 n. 3, 1809 n. 4, 1811, 1811 n. 8, 1816, 1817, 1818 n. 2, 1818 n. 3, 1821, 1823, 1824, 1825, 1827, 1830, 1830 n. 9, 1831, 1832 n. 11, 1834, 1836, 1838, 1839, 1845, 1846, 1847, 1849, 1852, 1853, 1856, 1856 n. 21, 1857, 1858, 1859, 1860, 1861, 1863, 1866, 1868, 1869, 1870 n. 37, 1871, 1871 n. 1, 1873, 1875, 1875 n. 7, 1877, 1879 n. 2, 1880, 1882, 1883, 1884, 1888, 1891, 1895, 1899, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1903 n. 1, 1904, 1905 n. 2, 1908, 1909, 1910, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1919, 1920, 1927, 1928, 1930, 1931 n. 6, 1931 n. 7, 1933 n. 10, 1936, 1937, 1938, 1938 n. 18, 1945, 1948, 1956, 1956 n. 5, 1958

Flanagan, N. M. 251 n. 34

Fletcher, D. R. 852, 1338

Flückiger, F. 1562 n. 20

Flusser, D. 438, 846 n. 3

Foerster, W. 129, 180 n. 17, 183 n. 22, 185 n. 26, 190, 217, 217 n. 11, 295, 303 n. 9, 374 n. 15, 430 n. 12, 431 n. 13, 540, 588, 618, 637, 637 n. 7, 650,

707, 734, 799, 997, 1007, 1007 n. 39, 1008, 1054, 1061 n. 36, 1062 n. 37, 1074, 1082, 1102, 1122 n. 27, 1136, 1215, 1293, 1311 n. 13, 1350, 1429, 1561, 1566, 1623, 1773, 1846
Fohrer, G. 217, 217 n. 11
Ford, J. M. 401
Fornara, C. W. 13
Foulkes, F. 292 n. 17
Fraenkel, E. 166
France, R. T. 418 n. 43, 507 n. 6, 674 n. 17, 932, 1575, 1637, 1685, 1686 n. 40
Franklin, E. 30, 33, 650, 1689
Frerichs, E. S. 1412, 1634 n. 4
Frey, J.-B. 207 n. 21
Friedlander, G. 166 n. 4, 516 n. 15, 647, 1007 n. 40
Friedrich, G. 87, 135 n. 6, 177 n. 12, 215, 215 n. 9, 430, 439 n. 33, 440, 484 n. 36, 529, 582, 653, 697 n. 11, 698, 712, 823, 1075 n. 13, 1099, 1134, 1248 n. 10, 1351 n. 13, 1351 n. 14, 1912
Fuchs, E. 412, 1101, 1742
Funk, R. W. 261 n. 5, 338 n. 11, 364 n. 1, 397, 427 n. 10, 451, 467, 469, 490, 504, 506, 507, 508, 553, 556, 633, 647, 659, 660, 661, 691, 720, 743, 749, 756, 767, 787, 811, 826, 839, 845, 850, 879, 886, 892, 967 n. 1, 975, 976 n. 1, 987, 987 n. 3, 988, 989, 990, 991, 1019, 1020, 1038, 1045 n. 1, 1047, 1048, 1071, 1086, 1087, 1088, 1108, 1130, 1147, 1147 n. 3, 1157, 1171, 1190, 1203, 1213, 1224 n. 5, 1231, 1245, 1254, 1261, 1269 n. 1, 1270, 1274, 1282, 1296, 1307, 1325, 1346, 1347, 1361 n. 3, 1382, 1398, 1410, 1423, 1445, 1459, 1468, 1470 n. 7, 1474, 1494, 1504, 1514, 1529, 1548, 1550, 1575, 1583, 1593, 1608, 1617, 1631, 1632, 1633, 1655, 1708, 1717 n. 2, 1731, 1755 n. 4, 1776 n. 4, 1807 n. 2, 1839, 1883 n. 3, 1905 n. 3, 1929 n. 4, 1961–66; see also BDF

Gaebelein, A. C. 1226
Gaechter, P. 120
Garbe, R. 231 n. 4
Garland, D. E. 1122, 1123, 1124
Garrett, S. R. 443 n. 40
Gärtner, B. E. 413
Gaston, L. 1074, 1562 n. 19, 1652, 1654, 1676
Gatti, F. M. 272 n. 23, 1352, 1353 n. 18
Geiger, R. 1409, 1412, 1412 n. 4, 1414, 1417, 1429, 1430, 1431, 1433, 1434 n. 19, 1436, 1436 n. 24, 1654, 1689
Geldenhuys, N. 292, 313, 328, 336, 343 n. 19, 372, 373, 414, 450, 476, 563, 583, 585, 664, 675, 676, 681 n. 28, 701, 702, 704, 714, 742, 744, 749, 750,

760, 760 n. 10, 771, 778, 779, 781, 919 n. 4, 920 n. 5, 1305 n. 25, 1439, 1477, 1673, 1675, 1689, 1849 n. 13
Gerhardsson, B. 372, 380, 732, 1964
Gerstenberger, E. 582
Gerstner, J. H. 942 n. 17
Gewiess, J. 120 n. 37
Giblin, C. H. 968 n. 4, 1562 n. 20, 1591 n. 1, 1592, 1596, 1614 n. 14, 1680, 1681
Glickman, S. C. 338, 342 n. 18, 349, 372, 373 n. 14, 375, 379 n. 25
Glöckner, R. 33, 1399, 1401 n. 5
Glombitza, O. 456, 976 n. 1, 1269
Gnilka, J. 288, 728 n. 24
Godet, F. 116, 118 n. 33, 120, 123, 126, 129, 130, 131, 134, 136, 145 n. 7, 149, 150, 151, 155 n. 23, 158, 159, 160, 168, 169, 175, 180, 181, 182, 185, 186, 188, 190, 190 n. 37, 193 n. 43, 194, 198 n. 50, 207, 208, 210, 210 n. 25, 213, 222, 224 n. 27, 228 n. 32, 238 n. 12, 239, 241, 246, 247 n. 32, 249 n. 33, 253, 257, 258, 271, 273, 283, 285, 291, 302, 316, 324, 325, 337, 337 n. 10, 341, 376, 379, 396, 414, 416, 419, 421, 428, 436, 438, 439, 444, 445, 449 n. 3, 457, 466, 473, 475, 476, 483, 493, 495, 521, 534 n. 42, 545, 546 n. 11, 547, 568 n. 25,

576, 578, 582, 583, 585, 588, 592, 595, 601, 602, 602 n. 50, 612, 613, 616, 628, 631, 636, 649, 651, 657, 664, 668, 670, 672, 673, 681 n. 28, 687 n. 39, 694, 696, 696 n. 10, 701 n. 17, 704, 705, 713, 726, 730, 737, 745, 749, 751, 768, 773, 776 n. 22, 777, 804, 811 n. 3, 816, 828 n. 6, 856, 858, 873, 909 n. 18, 919, 919 n. 4, 932, 934 n. 4, 936, 1045 n. 1, 1052, 1074 n. 10, 1077 n. 17, 1077 n. 19, 1099, 1105 n. 2, 1106, 1106 n. 3, 1130, 1134, 1141, 1171 n. 3, 1230, 1243, 1346 n. 3, 1353 n. 18, 1449–50, 1482, 1519, 1779–80, 1782
Goldin, J. 579, 622, 651, 1210 n. 17, 1265 n. 9
Gooding, D. W. 1362 n. 6
Goppelt, L. 292 n. 17, 575, 683, 701, 762, 1040, 1112, 1153, 1221 n. 1, 1286 n. 9, 1539 n. 18, 1727, 1759
Gordon, C. H. 920
Gore, C. 937
Goulder, M. D. 5, 8, 11, 13, 58, 148 n. 13, 167, 192 n. 41, 243 n. 23, 280 n. 2, 333 n. 2, 366, 382 n. 34, 390 n. 1, 391, 391 n. 2, 396 n. 8, 425, 892 n. 1, 914 n. 4, 918 n. 1, 918 n. 2, 959 n. 4, 961 n. 9, 1020, 1079 n. 21, 1307 n. 3, 1325, 1382 n. 3, 1410, 1445, 1754 n. 4, 1764, 1882
Gradwohl, R. 483 n. 33

Grández, R. M. 1858
Grässer, E. 858, 1171, 1181 n. 21, 1429, 1689
Gray, G. B. 85
Grayston, K. 1651
Graystone, G. 130 n. 53
Green, J. B. 1368, 1699, 1704 n. 5, 1705 n. 8, 1710, 1714, 1717 n. 2, 1776 n. 1, 1776 n. 4, 1777 n. 5, 1860–61
Green, M. P. 852
Green, W. S. 1412, 1634 n. 4
Greeven, H. 82, 235, 338, 338 n. 13, 377 n. 21, 516 n. 14, 882, 1027, 1035, 1050, 1122, 1185 n. 29, 1590, 1873
Grelot, P. 1857
Grensted, L. W. 1370
Gressmann, H. 109 n. 16, 199 n. 3, 229, 1292 n. 27, 1536
Grigsby, B. 143 n. 4, 154 n. 22
Grobel, K. 1361 n. 3, 1379
Grundmann, W. 117, 122 n. 41, 143, 148, 150, 151, 164, 200 n. 4, 227, 238 n. 16, 245 n. 27, 307 n. 20, 392, 410 n. 30, 431, 434 n. 20, 439 n. 33, 458, 479, 494 n. 11, 566, 579, 585, 600, 627, 632, 643, 649, 676, 705, 708, 711 n. 3, 738, 772 n. 12, 791, 796, 813, 841 n. 8, 847 n. 5, 869 n. 14, 882, 885 n.

8, 894, 896 n. 7, 950, 968, 972, 974, 976, 996 n. 19, 1002 n. 31, 1007 n. 42, 1008, 1010, 1012 n. 54, 1019 n. 4, 1023, 1024, 1028, 1030, 1038, 1039, 1047, 1053, 1054, 1059, 1061 n. 36, 1064, 1070 n. 5, 1075, 1077 n. 18, 1082, 1083, 1092, 1093, 1094 n. 7, 1096 n. 9, 1098 n. 13, 1100 n. 15, 1101, 1102, 1105, 1113, 1115 n. 17, 1121, 1124 n. 31, 1129, 1129 n. 1, 1153, 1156, 1160, 1162, 1164, 1165, 1166 n. 8, 1167 n. 10, 1168 n. 11, 1171 n. 3, 1175, 1176 n. 10, 1177 n. 11, 1184, 1192 n. 5, 1196, 1198, 1206, 1213, 1215, 1216, 1219, 1222 n. 3, 1231 n. 1, 1233, 1234, 1237, 1246, 1249, 1253, 1263, 1264, 1270 n. 2, 1277, 1281 n. 1, 1285, 1299, 1301, 1312, 1315, 1316, 1321, 1340 n. 35, 1371, 1381 n. 2, 1385, 1391 n. 14, 1394, 1404, 1413, 1422, 1436, 1445, 1445 n. 3, 1447, 1447 n. 6, 1448, 1449, 1450, 1452, 1455, 1461, 1462, 1464, 1465, 1470 n. 7, 1476, 1494, 1497, 1499, 1504, 1511, 1514, 1517, 1522, 1536, 1537, 1541, 1543 n. 23, 1556, 1561, 1563, 1574, 1582, 1591, 1604, 1640 n. 15, 1668, 1679, 1690, 1711, 1718 n. 4, 1719, 1722, 1734, 1736 n. 6, 1747, 1757, 1766, 1771, 1776 n. 1, 1787, 1789, 1796, 1797 n. 23, 1805, 1806, 1810 n. 6, 1819, 1820, 1824, 1827, 1836, 1838, 1845, 1853, 1854, 1857,

1868, 1869, 1871 n. 1, 1883, 1902, 1904, 1911, 1916, 1919, 1920 n. 23, 1927, 1943, 1945, 1949
Guelich, R. 550, 552, 552 n. 6, 554, 568, 568 n. 26, 572, 572 n. 27, 573, 574, 576, 577, 580, 581, 582, 588, 588 n. 37, 593, 594, 595, 595 n. 43, 599, 602, 603, 604, 605, 618, 621, 621 n. 68, 932, 933, 936, 941, 941 n. 16
Guenther, H. O. 538 n. 4
Gundry, R. H. 342, 444 n. 41, 1123, 1124, 1124 n. 28, 1479, 1798
Gundry, S. N. 256, 1068, 1069, 1070
Gunkel, H. 142, 146, 173
Gutbrod, W. 637, 679, 1024 n. 8, 1319
Guthrie, D. 916 n. 7

Hadas, M. 596 n. 46
Haenchen, E. 4, 13, 14, 60, 60 n. 22
Hahn, F. 174 n. 7, 341, 651 n. 9, 952, 976, 1102, 1508, 1631, 1639
Hahn, G. L. 858
Hamerton-Kelly, R. G. 1079 n. 21
Hamilton, N. Q. 1574 n. 4
Hamm, D. 1521 n. 8
Hanse, H. 79 n. 24, 457 n. 19, 584, 682, 738 n. 50, 739, 746, 767 n. 3, 1125 n. 33, 1391 n. 16
Harbarth, A. 646 n. 1

Harder, G. 1101 n. 16
Hardy, E. R., Jr. 1636 n. 7
Hare, D. R. A. 579, 582
Harnack, A. von 142, 145 n. 8, 173, 230 n. 1, 1012 n. 54, 1868
Harrison, R. K. 472 n. 16, 1208
Hart, H. St. J. 1612 n. 9
Hartin, P. J. 938 n. 11
Hartman, L. 1652, 1653, 1654
Hartman, L. F. 1684
Hartmann, G. 1902
Harvey, A. E. 999 n. 26, 1966
Hauck, F. 77 n. 15, 157, 186 n. 29, 268, 430 n. 12, 457, 519 n. 18, 568 n. 26, 571, 573, 583, 699 n. 15, 737, 773 n. 14, 834, 884, 945, 995 n. 16, 1055, 1058, 1094 n. 7, 1122 n. 27, 1207, 1225 n. 6, 1291, 1309 n. 7, 1333, 1363 n. 8, 1372, 1645
Hay, D. M. 1630, 1639
Hayles, D. J. 904 n. 6, 904 n. 7, 904 n. 8, 906 n. 13, 906 n. 14, 908, 909, 909 n. 19
Hays, R. B. 1961
Heard, W. 1373
Heater, H. 362
Heidland, H. W. 313, 314 n. 33, 1848
Hemer, C. J. 4, 13, 18

Hendriksen, W. 115, 127, 136, 137, 138, 139, 145 n. 7, 149, 153, 154 n. 22, 155, 157, 160, 167, 168, 170, 177, 179, 180, 181 n. 20, 182, 185, 189 n. 34, 190, 194, 205, 207, 208 n. 23, 210, 210 n. 25, 213, 215, 224, 227, 235, 242, 246, 246 n. 30, 247, 249 n. 33, 252 n. 35, 253, 257, 264, 265, 266, 271, 274, 292, 306, 308, 313, 327, 336, 343 n. 19, 352 n. 6, 366, 366 n. 5, 369–70, 371, 376, 377 n. 20, 378, 379, 380, 381, 414, 415, 416, 419, 421, 429, 432, 433, 439 n. 33, 440, 443, 454, 457, 467 n. 4, 473, 476, 476 n. 20, 482, 483, 484, 485, 493, 502, 505, 517 n. 16, 518, 524, 530, 540, 541, 544, 545, 563 n. 14, 568, 581, 594, 612, 614, 615 n. 60, 616, 630, 664, 670, 670 n. 12, 671, 674, 677, 681, 696, 707, 737, 744, 748, 761, 776, 779 n. 26, 780, 781 n. 30, 790, 794, 798 n. 22, 800, 801, 807 n. 33, 816, 831, 854, 858, 872, 911, 911 n. 3, 919, 936, 957, 961, 983, 995 n. 17, 1002, 1004, 1006, 1007, 1007 n. 43, 1016 n. 62, 1019 n. 4, 1029, 1046, 1053, 1058 n. 30, 1068, 1084 n. 36, 1095 n. 8, 1111, 1113, 1143, 1154, 1225, 1236, 1249, 1251, 1275 n. 10, 1353, 1380, 1380 n. 1, 1482, 1533, 1780, 1782, 1796

Hengel, M. 13, 52, 208, 436 n. 24, 545 n. 8, 714 n. 14, 853, 975, 976, 978, 979 n. 5, 980, 981, 1033,

1213, 1497 n. 5, 1593, 1594, 1594 n. 5, 1828, 1830
Hengel, R. 436 n. 24
Hengstenberg, E. W. 546 n. 11
Herbert, George 1265
Herrenbrück, F. 1298 n. 6
Herrmann, W. 940, 941
Hervey, A. 920
Hesse, F. 728 n. 24, 1033
Heth, W. A. 1357 n. 25, 1358, 1358 n. 27
Heutger, N. 698, 1033 n. 23
Hewitt, J. W. 1831
Hiers, R. H. 1689
Higgins, A. J. B. 909
Hill, D. 411, 920, 1352 n. 16, 1562
Hobart, W. K. 7, 436 n. 23
Hock, R. F. 1361 n. 3, 1362 n. 4
Hoehner, H. W. 202 n. 11, 227, 329, 713 n. 13, 903 n. 3, 904, 904 n. 5, 905, 905 n. 10, 905 n. 12, 906, 906 n. 13, 908, 909 n. 17, 909 n. 18, 909 n. 19, 910, 911, 911 n. 2, 912, 912 n. 4, 913 n. 5, 913 n. 6, 1246, 1358 n. 27, 1550, 1609, 1816, 1819, 1820, 1951 n. 2, 1958, 1959
Hoffmann, P. 1011, 1234 n. 9
Hofius, O. 1307 n. 3, 1312

Holmes, M. W. 19 n. 8, 20 n. 9
Holtz, T. 237, 298, 384, 404, 1747 n. 29
Holtzmann, H. J. 858, 1697 n. 52
Holzmeister, U. 922, 1761 n. 12
Hooker, M. D. 526 n. 31, 527, 929, 930, 930 n. 12, 952, 953, 1686 n. 40, 1798, 1800 n. 27, 1819 n. 6
Hoover, R. W. 261 n. 5, 364 n. 1, 397, 427 n. 10, 451, 467, 469, 490, 504, 506, 507, 508, 553, 556, 633, 647, 659, 660, 661, 691, 720, 743, 749, 756, 767, 787, 811, 826, 839, 845, 850, 879, 886, 892, 967 n. 1, 975, 976 n. 1, 987, 987 n. 3, 988, 989, 990, 991, 1019, 1020, 1038, 1045 n. 1, 1047, 1048, 1071, 1086, 1087, 1088, 1108, 1130, 1147, 1147 n. 3, 1157, 1171, 1190, 1203, 1213, 1224 n. 5, 1231, 1245, 1254, 1261, 1269 n. 1, 1270, 1282, 1296, 1307, 1325, 1346, 1347, 1361 n. 3, 1382, 1398, 1410, 1423, 1445, 1459, 1468, 1470 n. 7, 1474, 1494, 1504, 1514, 1529, 1548, 1550, 1575, 1583, 1593, 1608, 1617, 1631, 1632, 1633, 1655, 1708, 1717 n. 2, 1731, 1755 n. 4, 1776 n. 4, 1807 n. 2, 1839, 1883 n. 3, 1905 n. 3, 1929 n. 4, 1961–66
Horowitz, G. 1310 n. 9
Horsley, R. A. 310 n. 24, 1245 n. 2, 1261, 1269 n. 1, 1514

Horst, J. 413, 727, 740, 888, 1013, 1292, 1452, 1455, 1770 n. 6
Hort, F. J. A. 819 n. 19, 835, 1721, 1901 n. 19
Hospodar, B. 134
House, H. W. 1357 n. 25
Howard, V. 845
Howard, W. F. 1192 n. 8
Hubbard, B. J. 452 n. 9
Huck, A. 957, 959 n. 4
Hull, J. M. 776
Hunter, A. M. 932, 936 n. 9, 937
Hunzinger, C.-H. 313, 616, 1208, 1209, 1222 n. 3, 1225, 1391, 1517
Hyldahl, N. 379 n. 24

Ireland, D. J. 1323, 1323 n. 1, 1329 n. 11, 1338, 1339, 1339 n. 33
Isaac, E. 534 n. 42, 1152 n. 11

James, M. R. 862
Jarvis, P. G. 1287 n. 10
Jaschke, H. 829 n. 8
Jastrow, M. 433 n. 18, 1310 n. 10
Jaubert, A. 1951 n. 2, 1957
Jellicoe, S. 1015 n. 60

Jeremias, J. 76 n. 10, 83, 100, 107 n. 10, 134 n. 2, 159, 180 n. 18, 213 n. 3, 214 n. 5, 220 n. 19, 246 n. 29, 246 n. 30, 263 n. 8, 263 n. 10, 264 n. 12, 288, 305 n. 15, 306 n. 17, 341, 347, 355, 366 n. 6, 369 n. 9, 379, 413 n. 33, 415, 418 n. 43, 479, 491, 496 n. 14, 516 n. 15, 546 n. 10, 554, 568, 570, 577 n. 29, 580, 582, 606, 607, 608, 615, 621, 625, 649 n. 6, 661, 668, 678, 680, 681 n. 29, 694, 694 n. 4, 695 n. 8, 696 n. 10, 700 n. 16, 702 n. 21, 717, 717 n. 1, 724 n. 12, 729 n. 25, 731, 731 n. 33, 732 n. 34, 740, 741, 743 n. 3, 775 n. 20, 823 n. 7, 841, 868, 932, 936 n. 9, 939–40, 946, 947, 969 n. 7, 972, 983, 994, 1004, 1011, 1019 n. 4, 1024 n. 5, 1030, 1031, 1032, 1033, 1033 n. 23, 1034, 1040, 1046 n. 5, 1050, 1051, 1052 n. 14, 1052 n. 16, 1053 n. 18, 1054, 1057, 1058, 1060, 1083, 1096, 1120 n. 22, 1124 n. 31, 1136, 1152, 1171, 1182 n. 24, 1192 n. 5, 1196 n. 17, 1205, 1206 n. 6, 1208, 1209, 1224 n. 5, 1226 n. 9, 1228 n. 11, 1230, 1235, 1235 n. 10, 1248 n. 10, 1250 n. 15, 1269, 1269 n. 1, 1272, 1272 n. 5, 1273, 1274, 1275, 1275 n. 12, 1277 n. 17, 1283, 1287, 1290 n. 23, 1291, 1296, 1299, 1300, 1300 n. 14, 1301, 1302 n. 19, 1303, 1303 n. 22, 1304, 1306 n. 1, 1307, 1307 n. 3, 1310 n. 9, 1311, 1313, 1313 n. 20, 1315,

1317, 1318 n. 28, 1319, 1321, 1324 n. 3, 1327, 1329 n. 10, 1329 n. 11, 1331, 1331 n. 13, 1337, 1341 n. 38, 1342 n. 39, 1349 n. 7, 1349 n. 8, 1362 n. 4, 1366, 1367, 1368, 1368 n. 17, 1370, 1370 n. 21, 1371, 1372, 1373 n. 29, 1374, 1375 n. 32, 1394, 1410, 1410 n. 1, 1416 n. 13, 1429, 1430, 1431, 1432, 1434, 1445, 1446, 1447, 1448, 1449, 1451, 1451 n. 16, 1452, 1455, 1459, 1461, 1463, 1464 n. 11, 1465 n. 13, 1466, 1470 n. 7, 1515, 1523, 1528, 1531 n. 6, 1534, 1536, 1538 n. 15, 1540 n. 21, 1541, 1560 n. 16, 1572, 1584, 1593, 1594, 1594 n. 5, 1600, 1603, 1603 n. 10, 1605, 1616, 1617, 1642, 1643, 1687, 1690 n. 45, 1702, 1710, 1713, 1717, 1718, 1720, 1721, 1722 n. 13, 1723, 1723 n. 15, 1733, 1747, 1748, 1758 n. 9, 1819, 1834, 1849, 1852, 1856, 1857, 1860, 1862, 1868, 1869, 1901, 1916 n. 15, 1928, 1935, 1951 n. 2, 1952, 1954, 1955, 1957, 1958, 1958 n. 6, 1959, 1959 n. 8

Jervell, J. 14, 39, 970, 1354, 1398 n. 3

John, M. P. 252

Johnson, A. F. 1059 n. 34

Johnson, L. T. 16 n. 7, 20, 57 n. 13, 1153, 1153 n. 12, 1166, 1336, 1360 n. 2

Johnson, M. D. 348, 348 n. 2, 349, 355, 920

Johnson, S. E. 1205
Jones, D. R. 143 n. 3, 162, 243
Joüon, P. 1528
Juel, D. 1573 n. 3
Jülicher, A. 694 n. 5, 1263, 1338, 1374 n. 31, 1594

Karris, R. J. 984
Kasch, W. F. 183 n. 22, 185 n. 26, 583, 737
Käser, W. 536 n. 44, 1837, 1844
Keck, L. E. 338, 339 n. 16, 574
Kee, H. C. 122 n. 41, 192 n. 42, 433 n. 18, 1101 n. 19
Keen, W. W. 1761 n. 12
Kelly, H. A. 371
Kelly, W. 938 n. 13
Kelso, J. L. 481 n. 29
Kenyon, F. G. 204
Kerr, A. J. 1520
Kertelge, K. 769, 769 n. 8
Kik, J. M. 1689
Kilgallen, J. J. 1394 n. 22
Kilpatrick, G. D. 243, 1127, 1590, 1834, 1863
Kim, C.-H. 1272 n. 5
Kim, S. 924 n. 1, 924 n. 2, 924 n. 3, 952 n. 1
Kimball, C. A. 1595, 1605, 1918
Kinman, B. 1548 n. 2, 1808 n. 3, 1955 n. 4

Kirk, J. A. 379 n. 26
Kissinger, W. S. 936, 947, 947 n. 5, 948
Kistemaker, S. J. 724 n. 12, 733 n. 38, 945, 948, 1029, 1057, 1182 n. 23, 1185 n. 28, 1208, 1210, 1222 n. 3, 1228–29, 1270 n. 2, 1291, 1301, 1303 n. 23, 1305, 1306, 1328 n. 7, 1331 n. 13, 1339, 1362, 1365, 1448, 1449, 1450, 1462, 1535, 1536
Kittel, G. 59 n. 21, 202, 214, 214 n. 8, 241, 377 n. 20, 409, 430, 439, 456 n. 18, 462, 487 n. 42, 641 n. 11, 752, 829, 937, 940, 943, 1051, 1264, 1264 n. 7, 1890 n. 9
Klassen, W. 998 n. 22
Klauck, H.-J. 483 n. 33, 723 n. 11, 732 n. 35, 1591 n. 1
Klausner, J. 1630
Klein, G. 62
Klemm, K. G. 981
Kloppenborg, J. S. 299 n. 2, 991
Klostermann, E. 55, 61, 67, 70, 75, 77, 77 n. 16, 79 n. 22, 80, 80 n. 29, 81 n. 31, 82, 85, 85 n. 45, 88, 92, 97, 99 n. 72, 108 n. 13, 109 n. 16, 110 n. 18, 116 n. 29, 118 n. 35, 119, 126, 126 n. 48, 127, 128, 133, 134 n. 4, 137, 139, 143, 145 n. 8, 148 n. 13, 150 n. 18, 155 n. 23, 156 n. 24, 165, 166 n. 6, 167, 168, 170 n. 12, 173, 177, 178, 179, 188, 197,

199 n. 2, 199 n. 3, 202, 204, 205, 208, 210, 214 n. 6, 215, 221, 222, 227, 229, 231, 231 n. 3, 259 n. 1, 261 n. 6, 264, 268 n. 17, 273, 280 n. 2, 299 n. 2, 346, 371, 382, 396 n. 8, 418 n. 42, 421, 429, 439, 441, 462, 474, 477, 568 n. 26, 578, 581, 584, 587, 599, 600, 601, 617, 621, 622, 635, 638, 647, 650, 652, 653, 661, 663, 706, 714, 719, 751, 816 n. 15, 903 n. 3, 957, 968, 984, 1013 n. 55, 1019 n. 2, 1019 n. 4, 1024, 1038, 1062, 1073, 1102, 1105, 1114, 1133, 1152 n. 11, 1165, 1175, 1176, 1178 n. 14, 1195, 1196, 1198 n. 22, 1202 n. 2, 1207 n. 9, 1215 n. 6, 1216 n. 10, 1256, 1259, 1261, 1266, 1273 n. 6, 1275, 1303 n. 23, 1311, 1312, 1314, 1316, 1317, 1328, 1331, 1332, 1332 n. 17, 1341, 1350 n. 9, 1353, 1367 n. 13, 1368, 1369 n. 19, 1371, 1380, 1390, 1392, 1401 n. 5, 1402, 1414, 1417, 1427, 1430, 1431, 1432, 1434, 1436, 1439, 1448, 1455, 1462, 1465 n. 14, 1467, 1468, 1485, 1496, 1506, 1515, 1517 n. 6, 1518, 1520, 1524, 1527, 1531, 1536, 1539, 1540 n. 21, 1542, 1543, 1544, 1545, 1581, 1598, 1654, 1673, 1680, 1697 n. 52, 1706, 1748, 1757, 1790, 1794 n. 17, 1807, 1815, 1821, 1822, 1844, 1846, 1854, 1860, 1869, 1902, 1904, 1911, 1920 n. 23, 1933, 1936, 1938 n. 18, 1948

Knox, J. 16
Koch, K. 568 n. 26
Kodell, J. 1581
Koet, B. J. 1917
Köppen, K.-P. 367 n. 7
Kosmala, H. 737, 1787 n. 10
Kossen, H. B. 1295 n. 1
Köster, H. 191 n. 38, 436, 1032, 1193 n. 10
Krämer, M. 1323 n. 1
Kraus, H.-J. 1635, 1636, 1637, 1638
Kremer, J. 1891
Kuhn, G. 355
Kuhn, K. G. 76 n. 12, 1050 n. 11, 1080
Kümmel, W. G. 16 n. 7, 659, 858, 916 n. 7, 1079 n. 23, 1080 n. 26, 1418, 1426 n. 8, 1431, 1594, 1652, 1689
Kurz, W. S. 1719 n. 7
Kürzinger, J. 62

Lachs, S. T. 1225 n. 7, 1349 n. 7, 1450, 1463, 1471 n. 8, 1478 n. 5, 1480, 1482, 1486 n. 13, 1520, 1527
Ladd, G. E. 1000–01, 1079 n. 23, 1080, 1080 n. 26, 1081 n. 28, 1221 n. 1, 1229 n. 12
Lagrange, M. J. 957, 1527
Lake, K. 227 n. 30, 1906

Lambert, W. G. 590
Lambrecht, J. 1653, 1662
Lane, W. L. 396, 929 n. 10
Lang, F. 308, 321 n. 6, 322, 324, 1192 n. 6, 1442
Lange, J. P. 931
La Potterie, I. de 651
LaSor, W. S. 297
Lattke, M. 1079 n. 23
Laufen, R. 987 n. 2
Laurentin, R. 97 n. 68, 109 n. 17, 112 n. 22, 113, 113 n. 24, 120 n. 37, 122, 128, 130 n. 53, 137, 161, 249
Lauterbach, J. Z. 321, 516 n. 15, 526, 528, 604, 1036, 1299, 1335 n. 27, 1350 n. 11, 1413 n. 7, 1710, 1718
Leaney, A. R. C. 55, 57, 58 n. 16, 76 n. 8, 78 n. 20, 84 n. 39, 85, 89, 97, 99, 112 n. 22, 127, 131, 185, 187 n. 31, 189, 219 n. 15, 249, 252, 257, 313, 335, 346, 396, 397 n. 9, 414, 430, 454, 478, 495, 584, 585, 613, 637, 668, 681 n. 28, 707, 714, 726, 727, 739, 748, 982, 1002, 1007 n. 40, 1008, 1009, 1025, 1247, 1249 n. 12, 1257, 1264, 1281, 1334 n. 22, 1352, 1366, 1368, 1374 n. 31, 1400, 1413, 1416 n. 12, 1428, 1429, 1431, 1433, 1436, 1439 n. 29, 1494, 1501, 1509, 1521, 1522 n. 9, 1534,

1558, 1599, 1613 n. 11, 1636 n. 7, 1643, 1661 n. 11, 1665, 1667 n. 21, 1673, 1680, 1690, 1695, 1720, 1724 n. 16, 1726, 1736, 1743, 1801, 1803, 1902
Lee, G. M. 1646
Légasse, S. 681 n. 29
Legault, A. 691 n. 2
Leipoldt, J. 711 n. 3, 1040
Leisegang, H. 122
Lenski, R. H. 1689
Lentzen-Deis, F. 338
Lerner, M. B. 649 n. 7
Levey, S. H. 1916 n. 15
Lewis, C. S. 1067
Lieberman, S. 638
Liefeld, W. L. 285, 300, 336, 337, 374 n. 15, 380, 381, 396, 405, 408, 412, 417, 418, 430, 431, 434, 438, 448, 449 n. 3, 458, 481, 482, 489, 495 n. 13, 525 n. 29, 542, 546, 581, 594, 599, 600, 601, 632 n. 4, 664, 665, 677, 681 n. 29, 703 n. 22, 730, 734, 736 n. 43, 742, 745, 766, 776, 783 n. 32, 784, 794, 795, 802, 811, 815, 816, 817, 847, 859, 863, 864 n. 5, 866, 867, 868, 869, 872, 897, 898, 918, 962, 968, 973, 974, 978, 980, 988, 999, 1005, 1008, 1011, 1016 n. 62, 1019 n. 4, 1023, 1046, 1057,

1060, 1068, 1073, 1074, 1092 n. 5, 1097, 1100, 1116 n. 19, 1117, 1120, 1123, 1125, 1134, 1144, 1146, 1150, 1181, 1184, 1195 n. 13, 1235, 1270 n. 2, 1792, 1908
Lietzmann, H. 957, 959 n. 4
Lightfoot, J. B. 752, 895 n. 5, 1024 n. 5
Lindars, B. 526, 527, 580
Linnemann, E. 724, 724 n. 12, 725, 726, 945, 946, 947, 1300 n. 14, 1315, 1317, 1362, 1363, 1445 n. 4, 1450 n. 14, 1453, 1455, 1455 n. 22, 1465 n. 13
Linton, O. 681 n. 29
Ljungvik, H. 1452
Loader, W. R. G. 1639
Loewe, W. P. 1513
Lohfink, G. 1312 n. 18, 1929
Lohmeyer, E. 440
Lohse, E. 108, 115, 170 n. 14, 180 n. 18, 183, 220 n. 17, 438, 438 n. 31, 456, 507 n. 6, 508, 523, 524, 528, 534 n. 42, 535, 536, 641 n. 11, 919 n. 3, 968, 1098, 1213, 1248, 1249, 1254 n. 2, 1559, 1580, 1584, 1610, 1634, 1635, 1668, 1733 n. 2, 1792, 1794 n. 18, 1876 n. 8
Loisy, A. 89 n. 49, 1213
Longenecker, R. N. 434, 846, 846 n. 3
Löning, K. 691 n. 2

Lorenzen, T. 1375 n. 33
Lövestam, E. 1140
Luce, H. K. 58, 59 n. 20, 61 n. 28, 77, 80, 98 n. 70, 99, 108, 118, 132, 144 n. 6, 145 n. 8, 150 n. 18, 153, 166, 198, 203 n. 13, 210, 223, 229, 238 n. 15, 244, 246, 248, 253, 258, 272, 291, 303 n. 9, 313, 346, 365, 365 n. 3, 370, 371, 372, 373, 397, 404, 413, 415, 439, 451, 451 n. 5, 457, 476, 496 n. 14, 519, 519 n. 19, 536, 546, 568, 576, 578, 584, 593, 594, 600, 601, 619, 621, 626, 644, 647, 655, 664, 665, 670, 671, 680, 682 n. 33, 690, 694, 697, 704 n. 25, 730, 738 n. 48, 760, 767, 767 n. 2, 772 n. 11, 774, 794, 794 n. 15, 805, 807 n. 33, 816 n. 15, 817, 824, 833, 846, 854 n. 3, 860, 863 n. 1, 864, 871, 872, 888, 892 n. 1, 932, 950, 954, 957, 987, 1006, 1012, 1016 n. 62, 1019 n. 4, 1023, 1026, 1027, 1029, 1032, 1032 n. 20, 1053, 1055, 1060, 1061, 1062, 1068, 1070, 1093, 1094, 1096, 1105, 1111, 1120, 1121, 1124, 1139, 1142, 1147, 1161, 1162, 1167, 1171 n. 3, 1177, 1184, 1186, 1196, 1224, 1231 n. 1, 1236, 1243, 1259, 1264, 1270 n. 2, 1273, 1276, 1281, 1281 n. 2, 1296, 1314, 1327, 1329 n. 10, 1340 n. 35, 1349 n. 8, 1350, 1353, 1354, 1355, 1365, 1366, 1367, 1372 n. 26, 1373 n. 28, 1390, 1391 n. 14, 1398, 1403, 1417, 1427, 1435, 1439, 1479, 1494, 1517, 1517 n. 6, 1519, 1522, 1536, 1548, 1557, 1563, 1575, 1579, 1580, 1581, 1585, 1586, 1594 n. 4, 1601, 1613, 1625, 1630, 1636 n. 7, 1676, 1677, 1689, 1710, 1711, 1720, 1722, 1744 n. 25, 1800, 1801, 1815, 1819, 1831, 1834, 1846 n. 6, 1852, 1855, 1859, 1868, 1869, 1871 n. 1, 1874, 1890 n. 8, 1898, 1901, 1902, 1911, 1915 n. 13, 1917, 1940, 1948

Luck, U. 643, 778 n. 24
Lührmann, D. 193, 1429, 1431 n. 15
Lundström, G. 1079 n. 23
Luther, M. 940, 941–42
Lyonnet, S. 109 n. 17

McArthur, H. K. 936 n. 9, 940 n. 14, 1593
Maccoby, H. 1112 n. 12
McCulloch, W. 1528
MacDonald, D. 1771
McGaughy, L. C. 1541 n. 22
Machen, J. G. 103 n. 4, 121 n. 38, 132, 142, 144, 144 n. 5, 175 n. 9, 199 n. 3, 236, 355, 920, 921, 921 n. 6, 921 n. 7
McHugh, J. 752
McKelvey, R. J. 1603
McKnight, S. 6, 55 n. 4, 257 n. 38, 914 n. 1
Mackowski, R. M. 1908

MacLaurin, E. C. B. 1074
McNeile, A. H. 1160, 1689
McNicol, A. J. 1651 n. 2
Maddox, R. 12–13, 14, 16 n. 7, 56 n. 6, 59 n. 20, 1369 n. 20, 1689, 1691 n. 46, 1691 n. 47
Mahoney, M. 1654, 1654 n. 5
Mahoney, R. 1902
Major, H. D. A. 936
Malina, B. J. 1264 n. 6
Mánek, J. 463, 563, 870
Mann, J. 410
Manson, T. W. 299 n. 2, 305 n. 13, 321 n. 6, 364 n. 1, 365, 365 n. 4, 366, 374 n. 15, 550, 551, 552 n. 5, 598 n. 47, 615, 670 n. 13, 684, 811 n. 4, 976, 979, 987, 1003 n. 34, 1006, 1007 n. 41, 1008 n. 47, 1009 n. 48, 1013, 1016 n. 62, 1019, 1019 n. 4, 1025, 1029 n. 14, 1032 n. 20, 1033, 1034, 1042, 1045 n. 1, 1050, 1055, 1059, 1059 n. 31, 1060, 1061, 1064 n. 41, 1068, 1070 n. 5, 1075 n. 13, 1079 n. 21, 1084, 1088, 1091, 1094, 1094 n. 7, 1100, 1102, 1105 n. 1, 1107, 1107 n. 5, 1113 n. 13, 1114, 1115 n. 17, 1116, 1117, 1118, 1119, 1120, 1122, 1124 n. 30, 1125 n. 32, 1133 n. 4, 1134, 1135, 1137, 1139, 1141, 1143 n. 14, 1147 n. 2, 1148, 1150, 1150 n. 7, 1156, 1159, 1160, 1161, 1162, 1163 n. 5, 1164 n. 6, 1167 n. 10, 1171 n. 3, 1175, 1176, 1177, 1178 n. 14, 1179, 1180, 1181, 1182 n. 24, 1185 n. 26, 1189, 1195, 1197, 1200 n. 26, 1202, 1206 n. 7, 1208 n. 12, 1209 n. 14, 1210 n. 18, 1217, 1218, 1225 n. 7, 1228, 1235, 1236, 1240, 1240 n. 22, 1246, 1247, 1248, 1250 n. 14, 1262 n. 3, 1263, 1265, 1266, 1269, 1272, 1275, 1277 n. 15, 1278, 1281, 1281 n. 2, 1284 n. 6, 1289, 1291, 1295, 1296, 1300 n. 12, 1302, 1306 n. 1, 1307, 1310 n. 11, 1311, 1312, 1312 n. 18, 1323, 1327, 1331, 1331 n. 13, 1334, 1335 n. 27, 1339, 1342 n. 40, 1346 n. 3, 1349, 1349 n. 7, 1350 n. 11, 1353, 1354, 1357 n. 26, 1365, 1367, 1368, 1371, 1375, 1381, 1383, 1386, 1387, 1390, 1391 n. 14, 1394, 1415, 1417, 1422, 1423, 1423 n. 6, 1427, 1428 n. 9, 1431, 1433, 1437, 1440, 1448, 1450, 1451, 1452, 1455, 1461, 1526, 1527 n. 2, 1532, 1532 n. 9, 1533, 1538, 1539, 1543, 1562 n. 19, 1563, 1563 n. 23, 1575, 1652, 1654, 1665, 1667 n. 22, 1669, 1670, 1672, 1673, 1676, 1680, 1683 n. 36, 1689, 1740, 1748, 1847

Marcus, J. 1798

Marshall, I. H. 9, 13, 14, 16, 18, 55, 57, 57 n. 13, 59 n. 21, 61 n. 27, 62, 63, 65, 65 n. 35, 71, 73 n. 6, 75, 76, 76 n. 13, 77 n. 14, 77 n. 15, 79 n. 22, 79 n.

23, 80, 80 n. 29, 81 n. 31, 82, 82 n. 34, 82 n. 35, 83, 83 n. 37, 84 n. 39, 85, 85 n. 41, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 93, 93 n. 53, 95 n. 60, 95 n. 62, 97, 99 n. 72, 103 n. 4, 103 n. 5, 104 n. 8, 106, 107, 109, 109 n. 16, 110, 111, 112 n. 22, 113, 114, 115, 115 n. 28, 116, 116 n. 29, 117, 120, 121, 122 n. 42, 123, 123 n. 44, 124, 126 n. 49, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 135, 136, 138, 139, 140, 140 n. 14, 140 n. 15, 144, 144 n. 5, 145, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 154, 155 n. 23, 158, 159, 159 n. 27, 160, 162, 164 n. 1, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170 n. 14, 173 n. 2, 173 n. 3, 173 n. 4, 174, 174 n. 8, 178, 179, 180, 182, 183, 184, 186 n. 28, 187, 188, 190, 191, 191 n. 38, 192, 192 n. 41, 193, 199 n. 2, 200, 202, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 214 n. 5, 214 n. 7, 215, 216, 219 n. 15, 220, 220 n. 19, 221, 222, 223, 226 n. 29, 227 n. 31, 231, 232 n. 7, 234, 235 n. 9, 238, 240, 241, 242, 243 n. 23, 245, 246, 246 n. 29, 247, 249 n. 33, 250, 252, 253, 257, 258, 259 n. 1, 260, 261 n. 5, 264, 264 n. 12, 265, 266, 271, 274, 276 n. 1, 279, 279 n. 1, 283, 284, 286, 287, 287 n. 12, 295, 300 n. 5, 302, 303, 303 n. 8, 304, 305 n. 13, 306, 306 n. 16, 307, 312, 313, 316, 318, 320 n. 2, 322, 322 n. 7, 323, 324, 325, 325 n. 10, 329, 329 n. 2, 332, 336, 338, 341, 342, 343, 343 n. 19, 344

n. 20, 346, 348, 349, 352, 352 n. 6, 353 n. 8, 354, 355, 358, 361, 364, 367, 370, 372, 373, 375, 377, 378, 380, 382, 385 n. 36, 387, 391, 392, 396, 397, 397 n. 11, 403 n. 16, 412, 413 n. 33, 415, 416 n. 38, 417 n. 39, 418, 418 n. 42, 419, 426, 428, 431 n. 13, 436, 437 n. 26, 438, 439, 439 n. 33, 440, 450, 451, 451 n. 6, 454, 455, 458 n. 20, 461, 465, 466, 467, 468, 470, 473, 475, 479, 481, 481 n. 29, 482, 483, 485, 487, 490, 495, 496, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 510 n. 9, 515, 516, 517 n. 16, 518, 519 n. 18, 519 n. 19, 521, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 530, 531, 534 n. 42, 535 n. 43, 536 n. 44, 538 n. 3, 539 n. 5, 542, 544, 546, 548, 549, 550, 550 n. 3, 551, 562 n. 11, 563, 563 n. 14, 564, 564 n. 18, 565, 568, 571, 572, 573, 575, 576, 577, 577 n. 29, 578, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 588, 588 n. 35, 592, 593, 593 n. 40, 594, 595, 598, 598 n. 48, 599, 600, 601, 602 n. 50, 604, 605, 606, 608, 610, 612, 615, 616, 616 n. 63, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 621 n. 68, 622, 623, 623 n. 72, 626, 627, 632, 636, 637, 638, 640, 641, 641 n. 10, 642, 644, 647, 649, 650, 651, 651 n. 9, 652, 653, 655, 657, 659, 659 n. 6, 660, 661, 663, 665, 665 n. 8, 666, 667, 668, 670, 670 n. 12, 671, 672, 673, 673 n. 16, 679, 680, 681 n. 29, 682, 683, 684, 687, 691, 694, 695 n. 8, 697, 698, 699 n. 16, 700, 701, 704, 707, 709, 711, 713 n. 11, 713 n. 13, 717, 719, 721 n. 9, 724, 725, 726, 727, 727 n. 21, 731 n. 31, 732 n. 34, 732 n. 35, 733 n. 37, 733 n. 39, 737, 738, 742, 744, 745, 746, 750 n. 3, 751, 751 n. 4, 754, 754 n. 1, 757 n. 6, 764, 767, 768 n. 5, 769 n. 6, 773, 774, 776, 778, 780, 781, 782, 782 n. 31, 785, 786, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 798 n. 23, 798 n. 24, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 805, 807 n. 33, 809, 810, 811, 811 n. 4, 815, 817 n. 16, 819, 821, 822, 825, 828, 830, 830 n. 10, 832, 833, 834, 835, 838, 838 n. 3, 839, 840, 842, 845, 848, 851, 853, 856, 857, 858, 863 n. 1, 864, 865, 866, 869, 870, 871, 871 n. 17, 873, 876, 878, 881, 883, 886, 886 n. 1, 887, 888, 888 n. 3, 889 n. 4, 892 n. 1, 896, 896 n. 7, 910, 918, 919, 920, 929, 932, 936, 950, 952, 953, 954, 957, 962, 963, 968 n. 4, 970 n. 9, 973, 975, 976 n. 1, 978, 981, 982, 983–84, 987, 990 n. 7, 990 n. 8, 996, 998, 1000 n. 30, 1001, 1002, 1002 n. 31, 1004, 1005, 1008 n. 46, 1010, 1012, 1012 n. 54, 1013, 1015, 1015 n. 60, 1016 n. 62, 1019 n. 3, 1019 n. 4, 1024, 1026, 1028, 1030, 1031, 1032, 1035, 1036, 1038, 1040, 1043, 1046 n. 5, 1048 n. 8, 1050, 1052, 1053 n. 17, 1055 n. 23, 1056, 1056 n. 25, 1058, 1059 n. 33, 1060, 1062 n. 37, 1062 n. 38, 1064, 1068 n. 1,

1070, 1074 n. 9, 1074 n. 10, 1075, 1080 n. 26, 1083 n. 34, 1087, 1088, 1092, 1093, 1094, 1096, 1102, 1105 n. 1, 1105 n. 2, 1106, 1107, 1108, 1111 n. 10, 1112, 1114, 1115, 1117, 1119, 1120 n. 23, 1121, 1121 n. 25, 1123, 1129 n. 1, 1131, 1133, 1134, 1136, 1138, 1139, 1139 n. 13, 1140, 1141, 1144 n. 16, 1147, 1147 n. 2, 1148, 1149, 1150, 1151, 1152, 1152 n. 11, 1153, 1155, 1156, 1159, 1160, 1161, 1161 n. 2, 1162, 1163 n. 4, 1164, 1165, 1166, 1167 n. 10, 1168, 1169, 1171, 1171 n. 3, 1172, 1174, 1175, 1175 n. 8, 1176, 1177, 1178 n. 14, 1178 n. 15, 1181, 1182, 1182 n. 22, 1182 n. 24, 1183 n. 25, 1184, 1185 n. 28, 1189, 1192, 1192 n. 5, 1193 n. 12, 1194, 1195 n. 15, 1195 n. 16, 1196, 1196 n. 17, 1198, 1198 n. 22, 1199, 1203, 1204 n. 4, 1205, 1206 n. 6, 1207, 1207 n. 10, 1208 n. 13, 1209, 1210 n. 17, 1211, 1213, 1215, 1215 n. 5, 1218, 1219, 1222, 1222 n. 3, 1224 n. 5, 1225 n. 6, 1228, 1231 n. 2, 1233 n. 6, 1234, 1236 n. 12, 1237, 1238 n. 14, 1239 n. 19, 1240, 1240 n. 22, 1243, 1245 n. 2, 1246, 1247, 1248 n. 7, 1248 n. 8, 1249, 1249 n. 12, 1250 n. 14, 1251 n. 17, 1253, 1254, 1254 n. 2, 1255 n. 4, 1258, 1259, 1260 n. 2, 1261, 1263, 1264, 1265, 1266, 1270 n. 2, 1272, 1273, 1273 n. 6, 1273 n. 7, 1274, 1275, 1277,

1277 n. 16, 1278, 1281 n. 1, 1285, 1285 n. 7, 1287, 1290, 1291 n. 24, 1292, 1293, 1295, 1296, 1297, 1298, 1299, 1299 n. 8, 1300 n. 14, 1301, 1302, 1304, 1307 n. 3, 1309, 1310 n. 10, 1311 n. 15, 1312, 1314, 1315, 1315 n. 25, 1319, 1320, 1321, 1323 n. 1, 1324 n. 3, 1328, 1329 n. 9, 1331 n. 13, 1331 n. 15, 1332, 1334, 1334 n. 25, 1335, 1336, 1339, 1340 n. 36, 1346 n. 3, 1347, 1349, 1351, 1352 n. 16, 1353, 1356, 1357, 1357 n. 24, 1361 n. 3, 1366, 1367, 1368, 1368 n. 15, 1370, 1371, 1375 n. 33, 1379, 1380, 1381 n. 2, 1386, 1386 n. 9, 1390, 1391, 1393, 1394, 1395, 1397 n. 2, 1398, 1400, 1401, 1402, 1403, 1404, 1405, 1409, 1412, 1414, 1415, 1416, 1418, 1421 n. 2, 1422, 1426, 1427, 1427 n. 8, 1428, 1429, 1430, 1431, 1431 n. 15, 1432, 1433, 1434, 1434 n. 21, 1435, 1436, 1436 n. 25, 1437, 1438, 1439 n. 29, 1442, 1444, 1445, 1447, 1449, 1449 n. 13, 1450, 1451–52, 1455, 1458, 1459, 1460, 1461, 1462, 1462 n. 4, 1463, 1464, 1465, 1465 n. 13, 1468, 1468 n. 3, 1469, 1470 n. 7, 1471, 1476, 1479, 1484, 1485, 1486 n. 13, 1488, 1489, 1490, 1496 n. 4, 1497, 1498 n. 6, 1499 n. 8, 1502, 1504, 1507, 1510, 1514, 1515, 1515 n. 3, 1516, 1517, 1518, 1519, 1520, 1522 n. 9, 1523, 1524, 1528, 1528 n.

3, 1532, 1538, 1540, 1540 n. 20, 1540 n. 21, 1541, 1544, 1548, 1552, 1553, 1554, 1555, 1556, 1557, 1557 n. 15, 1558, 1559, 1560 n. 16, 1561, 1563 n. 26, 1566, 1572, 1580, 1580 n. 8, 1582, 1583, 1585, 1586, 1587, 1590, 1593, 1597, 1601, 1603 n. 9, 1604, 1610, 1612, 1614 n. 14, 1617, 1619, 1620, 1621, 1623, 1625, 1626, 1628, 1629, 1630, 1631, 1634, 1635, 1642, 1643, 1645, 1646, 1646 n. 20, 1647, 1651, 1652 n. 4, 1654, 1662 n. 12, 1663, 1663 n. 16, 1663 n. 18, 1664, 1665, 1666, 1667, 1667 n. 21, 1668, 1670, 1671, 1671 n. 25, 1673, 1674, 1676, 1677, 1678, 1680, 1682, 1683 n. 36, 1685, 1686 n. 40, 1686 n. 41, 1687, 1688, 1691, 1692, 1693, 1694, 1695, 1700, 1702, 1703, 1705, 1706, 1708, 1710, 1711, 1712 n. 1, 1716 n. 1, 1717, 1717 n. 2, 1718, 1718 n. 4, 1719, 1722, 1722 n. 13, 1723 n. 15, 1724, 1725, 1726 n. 18, 1727, 1728 n. 20, 1733 n. 2, 1734 n. 3, 1735, 1736 n. 6, 1737, 1737 n. 9, 1738, 1739, 1739 n. 12, 1740, 1741, 1741 n. 18, 1742 n. 19, 1742 n. 20, 1742 n. 21, 1743 n. 22, 1744 n. 24, 1745 n. 26, 1747, 1748, 1749 n. 33, 1756, 1757, 1758, 1759, 1762, 1764, 1766, 1768 n. 3, 1769 n. 5, 1770 n. 6, 1771, 1772, 1773, 1773 n. 8, 1776 n. 1, 1783, 1784, 1785, 1786, 1787, 1787 n. 8, 1789, 1790,

1791, 1795, 1801, 1801 n. 30, 1802, 1803, 1805, 1806, 1809 n. 4, 1810, 1816, 1818, 1819, 1819 n. 4, 1819 n. 6, 1820, 1824, 1827, 1828, 1829, 1829 n. 7, 1830, 1834, 1836–37, 1838, 1842, 1844, 1845 n. 4, 1846 n. 6, 1847, 1847 n. 8, 1848 n. 12, 1853, 1854, 1856, 1857, 1859, 1860, 1861, 1862, 1863, 1865, 1866, 1868, 1869, 1871 n. 1, 1873, 1874, 1876 n. 8, 1877, 1883, 1888, 1889, 1890 n. 8, 1891, 1891 n. 11, 1892, 1895, 1897, 1898, 1899, 1901, 1902, 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910, 1911, 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919, 1919 n. 20, 1920 n. 23, 1920 n. 24, 1921, 1922, 1924, 1928, 1932, 1933, 1935, 1935 n. 13, 1936, 1937, 1938 n. 18, 1942, 1943, 1944 n. 22, 1945, 1946, 1948, 1949, 1951 n. 2, 1953, 1954, 1955, 1955 n. 4, 1958, 1958 n. 7, 1959

Martin, J. A. 936 n. 9, 937, 937 n. 10, 939, 942 n. 17

Martin, R. P. 1277 n. 15

Marxsen, W. 1690

Mattill, A. J., Jr. 14, 1412, 1413, 1415 n. 11, 1416, 1416 n. 12, 1416 n. 13, 1417 n. 14, 1689, 1690 n. 45, 1691

Maurer, C. 307 n. 20, 337 n. 10, 438 n. 31, 519 n. 20, 665, 1185 n. 29, 1199, 1533, 1831, 1873

Mauser, U. 290 n. 15

May, E. E. 566
Mayer-Maly, T. 1833
Meier, J. P. 987, 991, 1000 n. 30, 1013, 1013 n. 56, 1045 n. 1, 1046 n. 5, 1047, 1068 n. 3, 1070, 1071 n. 6, 1213, 1231, 1231 n. 2, 1232 n. 3, 1254, 1254 n. 2, 1346, 1346 n. 3, 1362, 1365 n. 11, 1366, 1397 n. 2, 1398, 1399, 1410, 1411, 1412, 1413, 1414, 1414 n. 9, 1415, 1416, 1417, 1417 n. 13, 1504, 1508 n. 11, 1515, 1550, 1576 n. 6, 1583, 1652, 1766, 1964
Meijboom, H. U. 915
Meinertz, M. 1690
Ménard, J.-É. 1593
Menzies, R. P. 122, 177 n. 12
Merk, A. 1413
Merkel, H. 1317
Merritt, R. L. 1833
Metzger, B. M. 20 n. 9, 129, 131, 198, 227, 229, 258, 361, 421, 534, 534 n. 42, 628, 687, 688, 782, 784, 808, 900 n. 8, 985, 1004 n. 36, 1014, 1015 n. 57, 1015 n. 59, 1016, 1036, 1211, 1241, 1279, 1379, 1395, 1442, 1443, 1492, 1544, 1590, 1628, 1694, 1697, 1729, 1813, 1814, 1834, 1869, 1902, 1911, 1924, 1946, 1948, 1949, 1950
Meyer, A. 1413 n. 6

Meyer, B. F. 223 n. 23, 1157, 1515
Meyer, E. 863 n. 2
Meyer, H. A. W. 858, 1077 n. 19
Meyer, R. 166 n. 4, 239 n. 18, 453, 479 n. 25, 1112, 1120, 1368 n. 16, 1428, 1616, 1665
Meynet, R. 1879 n. 1
Michaelis, W. 58 n. 14, 79 n. 23, 80 n. 30, 95 n. 61, 153, 188, 207 n. 21, 219 n. 15, 248, 338, 472 n. 16, 610, 611, 614 n. 57, 696 n. 9, 744, 746, 814, 864, 867 n. 9, 869, 871 n. 17, 871 n. 18, 997, 1003, 1029, 1101 n. 16, 1117, 1174, 1231 n. 1, 1240, 1262, 1276, 1287, 1333 n. 20, 1464 n. 11, 1580, 1580 n. 9, 1610, 1642, 1720, 1749 n. 32, 1797, 1877, 1909, 1914
Michel, O. 124, 124 n. 45, 159 n. 27, 180 n. 18, 184, 202 n. 12, 253, 310 n. 24, 311, 311 n. 28, 311 n. 29, 375 n. 16, 489, 683 n. 34, 771 n. 9, 1076, 1084 n. 35, 1084 n. 37, 1091, 1120, 1139, 1179, 1225 n. 7, 1285, 1298, 1310, 1315, 1327, 1367 n. 14, 1386, 1390, 1391, 1435, 1463, 1486, 1489 n. 16, 1516, 1520, 1554, 1578, 1706, 1725, 1860
Miller, M. P. 407 n. 26
Miller, R. J. 1576 n. 6
Milligan, W. 1338
Minear, P. S. 1748

Mitchell, A. C. 1521 n. 8
Miyoshi, M. 957, 970 n. 8, 994 n. 15, 1006 n. 38, 1008 n. 44
Moessner, D. P. 18, 809 n. 1, 1122 n. 26, 1431 n. 13, 1565, 1565 n. 28
Montefiore, C. G. 598 n. 47, 1218
Moo, D. J. 1957
Moore, A. L. 1181 n. 21, 1801 n. 30
Moore, G. F. 76 n. 13, 1302, 1316
Moran, W. L. 1024
Morgan, G. C. 694, 698 n. 12
Morganthaler, R. 957
Morosco, R. E. 987 n. 4
Moule, C. F. D. 130 n. 55, 650, 703 n. 22, 1192 n. 8, 1907
Moulton, J. H. 1192 n. 8
Muddiman, J. 1902
Muller, H.-P. 864 n. 4
Müller, U. B. 1006
Muller, V. 1301 n. 16
Murray, J. 1358 n. 27
Mussner, F. 62, 989

Nahor, P. 833
Nauck, W. 581
Neale, D. A. 310 n. 24

Neander, J. A. W. 1502
Neirynck, F. 863 n. 1, 1651 n. 2, 1899, 1927 n. 2
Nestle, E. 313, 898, 1520, 1536, 1911, 1949
Neugebauer, F. 1634, 1799
Neusner, J. 135 n. 5, 226, 238, 321, 367 n. 7, 474 n. 17, 483, 495 n. 13, 579, 596 n. 45, 598 n. 48, 604, 638, 651, 696 n. 10, 711, 757, 766, 771, 919 n. 4, 924 n. 3, 972, 1002 n. 32, 1008 n. 44, 1036, 1112 n. 11, 1112 n. 12, 1117, 1137, 1138, 1160, 1164, 1166 n. 8, 1238, 1275 n. 12, 1300, 1302, 1349 n. 8, 1362, 1371, 1412, 1450, 1461, 1463 n. 7, 1623 n. 6, 1634 n. 4, 1642, 1723, 1793, 1844, 1857, 1952
Neyrey, J. H. 1264 n. 6, 1719 n. 7, 1720–21, 1734, 1740 n. 15, 1746, 1747, 1761, 1764, 1810, 1812, 1815, 1819 n. 4, 1823, 1844, 1862, 1862 n. 31, 1864, 1872
Nickelsburg, G. W. E. 1151 n. 8, 1362 n. 5
Nissen, A. 1036
Noack, B. 1415
Nolland, J. 58, 70, 71, 77 n. 14, 81 n. 31, 102, 103 n. 4, 104 n. 8, 116 n. 29, 121, 149, 149 n. 17, 150, 153, 153 n. 21, 158, 166 n. 6, 173 n. 4, 177, 177 n. 12, 178, 186 n. 29, 189 n. 36, 192, 192 n. 40, 199 n. 2, 220, 220 n. 17, 220 n. 19, 231 n. 2, 243 n. 23,

249 n. 33, 251 n. 34, 261 n. 4, 261 n. 5, 261 n. 6, 271, 282, 288, 288 n. 14, 289, 290 n. 15, 303 n. 10, 304, 322 n. 7, 333–34, 343, 348 n. 2, 351, 364 n. 1, 372, 373 n. 14, 375, 378, 379, 380 n. 30, 382 n. 32, 385 n. 37, 386, 390, 392, 392 n. 5, 397 n. 9, 398, 406 n. 24, 407 n. 26, 414 n. 35, 416 n. 38, 420 n. 46, 424, 427 n. 10, 434 n. 19, 437 n. 26, 438 n. 31, 451, 457 n. 19, 458, 459, 463, 476, 481, 483 n. 33, 506, 508, 520, 534 n. 42, 537, 538 n. 3, 538 n. 4, 539 n. 4, 545 n. 8, 551, 562 n. 11, 578, 579, 581, 586, 587, 590, 591, 592, 595 n. 41, 596, 597, 605, 608, 614 n. 58, 623, 629, 633, 635, 641 n. 11, 647, 649 n. 6, 659, 665, 675 n. 20, 681 n. 29, 684 n. 36, 691 n. 2, 692 n. 3, 697, 699, 703, 705, 723, 726 n. 15, 730, 733, 737, 738, 750, 757, 758, 768–69, 769 n. 8, 783 n. 32, 787–88, 792 n. 11, 793, 794, 794 n. 15, 798, 800, 804 n. 32, 810, 811, 839, 845, 847, 851, 864, 879 n. 3, 886, 888 n. 3, 889 n. 4, 892, 893, 903 n. 2, 907 n. 15, 909, 918, 918 n. 1, 918 n. 2, 920, 922, 922 n. 10, 957, 962 n. 9, 966, 970 n. 9, 971 n. 10, 972, 975, 976, 978, 981, 987, 988, 989, 990, 994 n. 14, 995 n. 16, 1000 n. 30, 1006, 1006 n. 38, 1009, 1011, 1012, 1016 n. 62, 1019 n. 4, 1020, 1021, 1026 n. 11, 1029, 1029 n. 14, 1030 n. 16, 1032, 1037, 1038,

1039, 1040, 1046, 1046 n. 5, 1047, 1048, 1071, 1074, 1075, 1075 n. 12, 1077 n. 17, 1079 n. 21, 1080 n. 25, 1083 n. 31, 1084, 1086, 1087, 1088, 1096, 1108, 1123, 1129 n. 1, 1130, 1131, 1133, 1134, 1135, 1136, 1138 n. 9, 1140, 1141, 1147, 1153, 1154, 1156, 1157, 1160, 1161, 1168, 1171, 1172, 1172 n. 4, 1175, 1177, 1183 n. 25, 1190, 1192 n. 6, 1199, 1199 n. 23, 1204 n. 5, 1205, 1208 n. 13, 1215 n. 5, 1217 n. 12, 1226, 1227, 1228 n. 10, 1231, 1231 n. 2, 1234 n. 9, 1235, 1236, 1245, 1245 n. 2, 1245 n. 3, 1249 n. 12, 1254, 1266, 1270, 1272 n. 5, 1276, 1289 n. 19, 1291, 1291 n. 24, 1296, 1299, 1300 n. 14, 1302, 1303, 1307 n. 3, 1310 n. 8, 1312 n. 15, 1313, 1314, 1314 n. 24, 1315, 1317, 1323, 1325, 1339, 1346, 1347 n. 4, 1357 n. 23, 1361, 1366, 1383, 1399, 1401 n. 5, 1402, 1403, 1427, 1434, 1434 n. 21, 1434 n. 22, 1445, 1459, 1460, 1468, 1469, 1474, 1479 n. 7, 1481, 1496, 1501, 1504, 1505, 1507, 1508 n. 11, 1510, 1514, 1516, 1517 n. 6, 1519, 1520, 1521, 1523, 1528, 1531, 1533, 1540 n. 21, 1548 n. 2, 1550, 1552, 1553 n. 7, 1554 n. 10, 1555, 1558, 1561, 1562 n. 20, 1575 n. 5, 1576, 1580 n. 9, 1581, 1583, 1586, 1588, 1593, 1594, 1597, 1608 n. 3, 1608 n. 4, 1609, 1618, 1631–32, 1633, 1636,

1643, 1644, 1647, 1655, 1656, 1665, 1666, 1667, 1667 n. 22, 1670, 1671, 1673, 1677, 1695, 1699 n. 2, 1700, 1704 n. 5, 1705, 1708, 1709, 1711, 1712, 1716, 1720, 1723, 1726 n. 18, 1728 n. 20, 1731, 1731 n. 1, 1735, 1737, 1741, 1742 n. 20, 1744 n. 25, 1747, 1748, 1753 n. 2, 1758 n. 10, 1759, 1763, 1766, 1770, 1776 n. 1, 1785, 1786, 1787, 1794, 1806, 1807, 1816, 1821, 1824, 1824 n. 1, 1827 n. 3, 1829, 1833, 1836, 1838, 1842, 1843, 1846, 1847, 1848 n. 12, 1849 n. 13, 1853 n. 19, 1858, 1860, 1861, 1863, 1865, 1871 n. 1, 1874, 1875 n. 6, 1876, 1879 n. 1, 1882, 1883 n. 3, 1885, 1888, 1894, 1898, 1899, 1904, 1905, 1908, 1909, 1912, 1913 n. 8, 1917, 1919, 1920 n. 23, 1927 n. 2, 1928, 1929, 1929 n. 4, 1931 n. 6, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1942, 1945, 1951 n. 2, 1958, 1960

Norden, E. 1011 n. 51

North, C. R. 291, 1748

Nösgen, K. F. 858

Noth, M. 129

Núñez C., E. A. 400

Odeberg, H. 1617

Oepke, A. 135 n. 5, 214 n. 8, 250, 285, 320, 416 n. 38, 437 n. 29, 456, 666, 707, 802, 815 n. 12, 816 n. 13, 872, 873, 895, 997, 1006, 1037, 1120, 1175,

1193, 1194, 1215, 1216, 1249 n. 13, 1301 n. 15, 1406, 1429, 1523, 1561, 1820, 1872
Ogg, G. 912
O'Hanlon, J. 1513, 1516
Olmstead, A. T. 1205
Olshausen, H. 796
O'Neill, J. C. 14, 16, 417 n. 39
Orchard, B. 914 n. 4, 916 n. 7
O'Rourke, J. J. 1307 n. 3
Osborne, G. R. 1886, 1890, 1892, 1893, 1893 n. 12, 1899, 1902 n. 20, 1913 n. 8, 1915, 1919 n. 18, 1927, 1928, 1938, 1939, 1943, 1944, 1944 n. 23, 1946 n. 27
O'Toole, R. F. 14, 116, 809 n. 1, 938 n. 12
Ott, W. 1045, 1452
Otto, R. 833

Pagenkemper, K. E. 1541
Palmer, H. 1275
Parsons, M. C. 1929, 1944 n. 23, 1949 n. 28
Patsch, H. 1548, 1726 n. 18
Patterson, S. J. 1190
Paulus, H. E. G. 796, 833
Payne, D. F. 209
Payne, J. B. 1123
Payne, P. B. 721 n. 9, 724 n. 12

Pegg, H. 1062
Pelletier, A. 1860
Pentecost, J. D. 937, 942 n. 17
Perles, F. 981 n. 7, 1292 n. 27
Perrin, N. 661, 952, 1000, 1000 n. 29, 1352 n. 16, 1410, 1686 n. 40
Perrot, C. 410–11
Pesch, R. 467, 493, 493 n. 8, 501, 766, 767, 768, 769, 769 n. 7, 769 n. 8, 806, 839, 1652, 1662
Petersen, W. L. 1296
Petuchowski, J. J. 1047 n. 7
Petzke, G. 1608 n. 4
Pickl, J. 1959, 1959 n. 8
Pilgrim, W. E. 33, 43, 407 n. 28, 409, 410, 583 n. 34, 1150, 1153, 1154, 1167 n. 9, 1324 n. 3, 1339, 1361 n. 3, 1513, 1839
Plevnik, J. 1802
Plummer, A. 55, 60 n. 24, 61, 62, 63, 75, 76, 76 n. 13, 77, 77 n. 16, 78 n. 18, 80, 82, 82 n. 34, 82 n. 35, 85, 86, 87, 88, 94 n. 54, 94 n. 55, 95 n. 60, 95 n. 61, 96 n. 65, 96 n. 67, 97, 99, 99 n. 71, 100, 110 n. 21, 117 n. 31, 118 n. 33, 120, 126 n. 47, 127, 129, 131, 136, 137, 138 n. 13, 139, 140, 140 n. 15, 141 n. 16, 148, 148 n. 13, 149 n. 15, 152, 153, 154, 155 n. 23, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 165, 167,

168, 169, 170, 179, 181, 182, 183, 184, 184 n. 25, 186 n. 29, 189, 189 n. 35, 189 n. 36, 190, 191 n. 38, 193, 199 n. 2, 200 n. 7, 204, 204 n. 15, 205, 206, 206 n. 18, 208, 209, 209 n. 24, 210 n. 25, 214, 215, 219, 219 n. 16, 221, 222, 224, 224 n. 26, 225, 227, 228 n. 32, 229, 235, 236, 236 n. 11, 238 n. 12, 238 n. 15, 239, 240, 241, 243 n. 25, 244, 244 n. 26, 246, 247, 248, 250, 256, 257, 258, 263 n. 9, 263 n. 10, 264 n. 11, 265, 266 n. 14, 267, 273, 274, 283, 284, 285, 300, 302, 304, 306, 312, 313, 316, 318, 320, 321 n. 5, 325, 336, 353, 354, 355, 359, 364 n. 1, 366, 369, 370, 375, 375 n. 17, 377 n. 22, 378, 379, 379 n. 25, 382, 386, 390, 406, 412, 414, 416, 417 n. 40, 419, 421, 428, 429, 430, 432, 434 n. 19, 436, 437, 437 n. 27, 437 n. 30, 438, 444, 449 n. 2, 455, 456 n. 17, 457, 463, 466, 469, 475, 476, 479, 480, 481, 483, 485, 493, 495, 505, 515, 520, 522, 524, 529, 534, 536, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546 n. 9, 546 n. 10, 547, 549, 551, 563, 568, 571, 576, 578, 582, 583, 584, 585, 589, 590, 591, 592, 594, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 608, 614, 614 n. 58, 616, 622 n. 70, 623, 627, 635, 636, 637, 637 n. 7, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 649, 650 n. 8, 652, 653, 654, 664, 665, 667, 669, 671, 676, 678, 681 n. 29, 682, 687 n. 39, 690, 695

n. 6, 697, 698, 700, 701 n. 17, 701 n. 18, 702, 705, 706, 707, 710, 714, 717, 725, 726 n. 16, 732 n. 36, 733 n. 39, 735, 737, 739, 742 n. 1, 744, 746, 749, 752, 753, 761, 762, 767 n. 2, 768, 771, 772 n. 11, 773, 776, 778, 779, 781, 783 n. 32, 786 n. 2, 791, 792, 793, 795, 800, 801, 802, 804, 805, 807 n. 33, 815, 818, 820, 823, 825, 829, 829 n. 9, 834, 846, 858, 858 n. 4, 863 n. 1, 867, 868, 869, 873, 875, 880, 882, 883, 894, 895 n. 5, 896, 904, 931, 932, 962, 963 n. 10, 970 n. 9, 972, 973, 977, 979 n. 4, 980, 981, 987, 988, 991 n. 10, 995, 998, 1008, 1008 n. 45, 1009, 1010, 1013, 1016 n. 62, 1019 n. 4, 1023, 1024, 1026, 1032, 1033, 1034, 1035, 1036, 1041, 1046 n. 4, 1050, 1052, 1052 n. 14, 1053, 1054, 1055 n. 22, 1056, 1057 n. 27, 1060, 1062, 1074, 1075, 1076, 1082 n. 30, 1083, 1084 n. 36, 1091, 1092 n. 5, 1093, 1094, 1095 n. 8, 1098, 1100, 1111, 1113 n. 14, 1117, 1118, 1121, 1121 n. 25, 1122, 1124, 1133, 1137, 1137 n. 8, 1138 n. 10, 1141, 1147, 1149, 1151 n. 8, 1152, 1154, 1156, 1159 n. 1, 1160, 1161, 1162, 1167, 1174, 1174 n. 5, 1175, 1175 n. 9, 1176 n. 10, 1179, 1181, 1182, 1184, 1192, 1194, 1195, 1197, 1199, 1200, 1204 n. 4, 1206 n. 7, 1207, 1210, 1210 n. 18, 1211, 1215 n. 6, 1218 n. 16, 1225, 1228, 1235, 1238 n. 14, 1239 n. 18, 1240, 1241, 1248, 1249, 1251, 1254 n. 1, 1259, 1263 n. 4, 1264, 1265, 1266 n. 12, 1270 n. 2, 1272, 1274, 1277 n. 16, 1283 n. 4, 1286, 1287, 1289, 1291 n. 26, 1298, 1303, 1309, 1311, 1312 n. 18, 1314, 1314 n. 23, 1315, 1316, 1316 n. 27, 1317, 1319, 1328, 1328 n. 7, 1329 n. 11, 1330, 1331, 1331 n. 15, 1332 n. 18, 1336, 1338, 1341, 1349, 1350, 1355 n. 22, 1367, 1368, 1368 n. 17, 1370, 1371, 1375, 1384 n. 6, 1385, 1387, 1391 n. 14, 1393, 1400, 1403, 1404, 1405, 1412, 1414, 1416, 1428 n. 9, 1429, 1430, 1432, 1434, 1434 n. 21, 1436 n. 25, 1437, 1439, 1447 n. 7, 1448, 1451, 1452, 1462 n. 4, 1463 n. 8, 1464, 1465, 1467, 1476, 1478 n. 5, 1479, 1481, 1483, 1485, 1486, 1487, 1490, 1491, 1496, 1499, 1502, 1503, 1505, 1506, 1506 n. 5, 1509, 1510, 1512, 1516 n. 4, 1517, 1519, 1520, 1521, 1522, 1523, 1524, 1526, 1527, 1528, 1528 n. 3, 1532, 1536, 1537, 1538, 1540, 1540 n. 21, 1542, 1544, 1552, 1554, 1556 n. 13, 1557, 1559, 1560, 1561 n. 17, 1562, 1562 n. 19, 1566, 1576, 1579, 1580, 1580 n. 8, 1581, 1583, 1584, 1585, 1591, 1593, 1597 n. 6, 1598, 1601, 1602, 1604, 1606, 1609, 1610, 1613, 1616, 1620, 1621, 1623, 1634, 1635 n. 5, 1640 n. 15, 1641, 1645, 1646, 1649, 1656, 1661, 1667 n.

2 2, 1673, 1674, 1676 n. 2 8, 1678, 1679, 1681, 1682, 1685, 1689, 1691, 1703, 1705, 1711, 1713, 1719, 1720, 1722, 1723, 1723 n. 1 5, 1725, 1727 n. 1 9, 1728, 1736 n. 7, 1738, 1739, 1740, 1744 n. 2 5, 1746, 1747 n. 2 8, 1749, 1749 n. 3 3, 1749 n. 3 4, 1758, 1759, 1761, 1762 n. 1 3, 1763, 1767, 1769, 1770, 1771, 1772, 1773, 1780, 1785, 1786, 1789, 1790, 1791 n. 1 5, 1801, 1801 n. 3 1, 1803, 1809, 1810 n. 6, 1812, 1813 n. 1 0, 1818 n. 1, 1820, 1827, 1829 n. 6, 1832 n. 1 1, 1842, 1845, 1846, 1847, 1848 n. 1 1, 1849, 1849 n. 1 3, 1851, 1851 n. 1 6, 1854, 1855, 1856, 1857 n. 2 2, 1858 n. 2 4, 1859, 1860, 1861, 1863, 1863 n. 3 3, 1867, 1868, 1869, 1873, 1876, 1876 n. 8, 1877, 1880, 1883 n. 2, 1891 n. 1 0, 1897, 1898, 1902, 1904, 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910, 1911, 1913, 1914, 1918, 1919, 1919 n. 1 8, 1920 n. 2 4, 1921 n. 2 7, 1929, 1933 n. 9, 1934 n. 1 2, 1935, 1935 n. 1 3, 1938, 1948, 1949

Plymale, S. F. 336 n. 8

Pöhlmann, W. 1310 n. 9

Polag, A. 299 n. 2

Porter, S. E. 1338 n. 3 1, 1340–41, 1342, 1343 n. 4 2, 1503 n. 3, 1505

Pousma, R. H. 472 n. 1 6

Power, E. 815

Power, M. A. 272, 272 n. 23
Preisigke, F. 1306 n. 2
Preisker, H. 219 n. 13, 264, 498, 581, 774, 999, 1137, 1300, 1301, 1312, 1610, 1756 n. 5
Procksch, O. 122 n. 41, 241 n. 20, 433, 433 n. 17, 1052, 1141

Rad, G. von 291, 997, 1080
Ragaz, L. 937
Ramsay, W. M. 907, 1646
Ranke, L. von 1613 n. 12
Raphelius, G. 52 n. 1
Rau, G. 1580
Reeland, A. 140
Rehkopf, F. 1766, 1769; see also BDR
Reicke, B. 17, 234, 237, 282 n. 3, 282 n. 4, 283, 421, 435, 912 n. 5, 914 n. 1, 951, 1099 n. 14, 1550 n. 5, 1963
Reiling, J. 1795
Rengstorf, K. H. 57, 58 n. 14, 218, 219, 242, 247, 267, 267 n. 16, 458, 458 n. 21, 479, 496, 517, 524, 542, 577, 584, 599, 610, 612, 621 n. 68, 636 n. 6, 640, 650, 683 n. 34, 695 n. 6, 698, 713 n. 11, 792, 801, 888 n. 2, 918 n. 1, 983, 994, 997, 1005, 1015, 1029, 1075 n. 13, 1077 n. 17, 1096, 1112, 1166, 1199, 1205, 1238 n. 14, 1286, 1298 n. 6, 1310 n.

10, 1453, 1682, 1683, 1749 n. 33, 1766, 1787, 1824, 1908
Rese, M. 346, 405 n. 20, 1916 n. 15, 1936 n. 17
Resseguie, J. L. 957, 957 n. 3, 959 n. 4, 960 n. 7
Ricoeur, P. 591 n. 39
Ridderbos, H. 1417
Riesenfeld, H. 223 n. 23, 528 n. 36, 612 n. 56, 1256, 1414, 1416, 1416 n. 12
Riesner, R. 1964
Rigaux, B. 1428 n. 9
Rigg, H. A., Jr. 1834
Riley, H. 914 n. 4, 916 n. 7
Ringgren, H. 191
Rist, J. M. 914 n. 5
Roberts, C. H. 1416 n. 12
Robertson, A. T. 60, 60 n. 25, 154 n. 22, 319, 1369
Robinson, J. A. T. 198
Robinson, W. C., Jr. 744, 957
Roloff, J. 426, 507 n. 6, 508, 1213
Ropes, J. H. 59 n. 20
Rowley, H. H. 1916 n. 15
Ruckstuhl, E. 1728 n. 20
Rüger, H. P. 608, 1333 n. 19
Rüstow, A. 1416 n. 12
Ryrie, C. C. 942 n. 17

Safrai, S. 76 n. 13, 79 n. 24, 107 n. 10, 207, 208 n. 23, 266, 392 n. 4, 403 n. 17, 480, 651, 1215 n. 4, 1262, 1645
Sahlin, H. 99 n. 72, 257, 1452
Saldarini, A. J. 651
Salmon, M. 6
Sanders, E. P. 310 n. 24, 495 n. 13, 496 n. 14, 1112 n. 11, 1112 n. 12, 1116 n. 18, 1117 n. 20, 1474, 1515, 1572, 1572 n. 2, 1573 n. 3, 1575 n. 5, 1576 n. 6, 1776 n. 4, 1800 n. 28, 1800 n. 29
Sanders, J. A. 405, 406 n. 22, 407 n. 26, 407 n. 27, 646 n. 1, 654, 966, 968 n. 4, 983, 1565 n. 28
Sanders, J. T. 14, 38, 1307, 1498, 1680 n. 33
Sasse, H. 117 n. 32, 215 n. 9, 220, 375 n. 16, 855, 1661
Saucy, M. 441 n. 37
SB [H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck] 76, 76 n. 13, 78 n. 20, 79, 80, 92 n. 51, 95, 97, 98, 107, 107 n. 10, 132, 135 n. 5, 166 n. 5, 166 n. 6, 168, 180 n. 18, 184 n. 25, 204 n. 15, 213, 226, 238, 239, 239 n. 18, 244, 264, 266, 267, 290 n. 15, 303 n. 9, 305, 310, 320, 339 n. 14, 352, 416 n. 38, 421, 431, 436 n. 23, 458 n. 21, 465, 472 n. 16, 474, 483, 495 n. 13, 508, 516 n. 15, 523, 524 n. 27, 528, 579, 592, 596, 604, 606, 608, 612, 615, 622, 638, 647, 649,

649 n. 7, 650, 666, 694, 694 n. 5, 695, 698, 701, 702, 711 n. 3, 713 n. 13, 757, 766, 771, 791, 792, 794, 794 n. 15, 817, 831 n. 12, 853, 854 n. 3, 855, 869 n. 12, 881, 896 n. 6, 919 n. 4, 920 n. 5, 979 n. 5, 981, 981 n. 7, 984, 995 n. 16, 996, 998 n. 22, 1001, 1002, 1003, 1005, 1007, 1008, 1008 n. 47, 1009, 1023, 1026, 1030, 1033, 1040, 1050, 1050 n. 10, 1052, 1055, 1061, 1074, 1074 n. 7, 1075 n. 12, 1076 n. 15, 1091, 1091 n. 4, 1094 n. 7, 1096 n. 9, 1101 n. 16, 1111, 1113 n. 14, 1116, 1117, 1119, 1121, 1122, 1123, 1133 n. 4, 1136, 1138, 1140, 1149, 1160, 1163, 1164, 1166 n. 8, 1175, 1179, 1185 n. 26, 1204 n. 5, 1206, 1207 n. 9, 1208, 1208 n. 13, 1210, 1217, 1225 n. 6, 1225 n. 7, 1234, 1236, 1237, 1239 n. 19, 1247, 1249, 1250 n. 15, 1256, 1258, 1261, 1263 n. 4, 1265, 1265 n. 9, 1266, 1267, 1272, 1274, 1291, 1299, 1300 n. 12, 1301, 1301 n. 14, 1302, 1302 n. 20, 1303 n. 24, 1310, 1311, 1311 n. 14, 1312, 1312 n. 18, 1331, 1334, 1349 n. 8, 1354, 1357 n. 24, 1365, 1365 n. 11, 1366 n. 12, 1368 n. 15, 1368 n. 18, 1370, 1371, 1375 n. 33, 1389, 1391 n. 14, 1394, 1413 n. 5, 1414, 1414 n. 8, 1427, 1431 n. 15, 1435, 1447, 1462, 1462 n. 4, 1463, 1469, 1476, 1480, 1486 n. 13, 1490, 1508, 1516, 1520, 1531, 1538, 1539,

1549 n. 3, 1560 n. 16, 1572, 1578, 1604, 1616, 1616 n. 1, 1623, 1639, 1642, 1645, 1679, 1685, 1692, 1705, 1710, 1718, 1723, 1739, 1758, 1783, 1847, 1848 n. 10, 1852, 1857, 1860, 1862, 1877, 1894, 1935, 1958
Schaberg, J. 1798
Schaeder, H. H. 421, 1507
Schäfer, H. 833
Schalit, A. 76 n. 8, 690
Schenk, W. 1839
Schenke, L. 757
Schlatter, A. von 695, 771, 1102, 1105 n. 1, 1422, 1548, 1757
Schleiermacher, F. E. D. 258, 931, 1528 n. 4
Schlier, H. 153 n. 21, 192, 192 n. 40, 696, 735 n. 40, 994 n. 15, 1033, 1079, 1182, 1239, 1309 n. 7, 1511, 1783
Schlosser, J. 1416 n. 12
Schmahl, G. 261 n. 7
Schmid, J. 155, 1015, 1527
Schmidt, K. L. 65 n. 35, 116 n. 29, 440, 571, 732, 812 n. 8, 813 n. 10, 961 n. 8, 983, 1000 n. 28, 1053, 1080, 1164, 1265 n. 11, 1311, 1418 n. 15, 1734, 1811, 1920 n. 25

Schmidt, T. E. 43, 583 n. 34, 588 n. 35, 1150, 1167, 1333 n. 20, 1360 n. 2, 1476
Schmitz, O. 114 n. 27, 238, 238 n. 16, 239, 774, 792 n. 12
Schnackenburg, R. 1410
Schneemelcher, W. 130, 267, 336, 338 n. 11, 340, 380, 528, 647, 786 n. 2, 862, 1256 n. 5, 1368, 1525, 1672, 1743 n. 23, 1817, 1848 n. 11, 1856 n. 21, 1858, 1873, 1874, 1875, 1876 n. 8, 1877, 1880 n. 4, 1885 n. 5, 1899, 1929
Schneider, G. 55, 59, 61, 62, 62 n. 31, 63, 65, 71, 78, 80, 82, 97, 102 n. 1, 103, 103 n. 5, 104, 108 n. 12, 112 n. 22, 118, 120 n. 37, 125, 126, 136, 139, 143 n. 3, 146 n. 10, 153, 159, 188, 193, 196, 219, 223, 224, 235, 236, 242, 245, 246, 252 n. 35, 253, 259, 259 n. 1, 271, 273, 280 n. 2, 312, 320, 321, 333, 365 n. 4, 375, 380, 390, 391, 396 n. 8, 416, 419, 431, 433, 437, 437 n. 30, 439, 451 n. 6, 461, 462, 465, 467, 469, 472 n. 15, 484, 515, 565, 578, 608, 617, 619, 627, 631 n. 2, 690, 778, 787, 804 n. 32, 840, 863 n. 1, 869, 879 n. 3, 883, 886, 912, 912 n. 4, 960 n. 7, 963, 975–76, 976, 981, 987, 1009, 1016 n. 62, 1019 n. 4, 1042, 1045, 1045 n. 1, 1052, 1053, 1056, 1073, 1074, 1094, 1095, 1096, 1105, 1112, 1129 n. 1, 1141, 1151, 1171 n. 3,

1172, 1183 n. 25, 1189, 1192, 1198, 1217, 1230, 1254, 1265, 1266, 1281, 1290, 1296 n. 3, 1306, 1307, 1341, 1346 n. 3, 1373, 1389, 1389 n. 13, 1391 n. 14, 1410, 1422, 1431, 1433, 1445, 1453, 1456, 1459, 1468, 1488, 1507, 1666, 1690, 1746, 1757, 1766, 1807, 1839, 1869, 1882
Schneider, C. 157, 193 n. 43, 267, 411, 455, 815, 1003, 1497, 1797 n. 22, 1828, 1860, 1860 n. 28
Schneider, J. 78 n. 18, 240, 274, 498, 578, 651, 654, 665, 679, 772, 794, 852, 884, 1125, 1161, 1287, 1312, 1354 n. 20, 1370, 1830, 1830 n. 10, 1846, 1847–48, 1909, 1933
Schniewind, J. 667, 797 n. 21, 982 n. 8
Schoedel, W. R. 1593
Schonfield, H. J. 1839
Schoonheim, P. L. 156
Schottroff, L. 591, 1151, 1307 n. 3
Schrage, W. 403 n. 17, 434, 438 n. 31, 531 n. 40, 611, 638, 638 n. 8, 668, 791, 1143 n. 15, 1217 n. 12, 1593, 1642, 1668
Schramm, T. 397, 397 n. 10, 397 n. 11, 423 n. 4, 436, 437 n. 27, 437 n. 28, 438 n. 32, 444, 451 n. 6, 467 n. 8, 468, 503, 505, 632, 719, 760 n. 11, 768 n. 6, 775 n. 21, 786, 787 n. 5, 821 n. 3, 822, 863 n. 1, 879 n. 3, 886 n. 1, 1503, 1548, 1654, 1667 n. 21

Schreck, C. J. 396 n. 8
Schrenk, G. 76 n. 10, 77 n. 14, 77 n. 16, 79 n. 21, 79 n. 23, 110, 183 n. 23, 186 n. 29, 187 n. 30, 210 n. 25, 220 n. 19, 228 n. 33, 238 n. 14, 250, 319, 379 n. 24, 476, 484 n. 35, 498, 529, 677, 678 n. 24, 848, 1008, 1008 n. 47, 1009, 1011, 1024, 1027, 1051, 1051 n. 13, 1080, 1120 n. 22, 1246, 1285 n. 7, 1310, 1331 n. 14, 1343 n. 41, 1351 n. 14, 1352 n. 15, 1353, 1448, 1450, 1465 n. 14, 1496 n. 4, 1573, 1678, 1693, 1759, 1852, 1918, 1936
Schubert, K. 1217 n. 14
Schubert, P. 1904, 1936 n. 17
Schulz, D. 1339 n. 33
Schulz, S. 77 n. 15, 122 n. 42, 299 n. 2, 300, 300 n. 4, 303 n. 8, 323 n. 8, 325, 365, 366, 367, 371 n. 13, 374 n. 15, 380 n. 28, 385 n. 36, 385 n. 37, 632 n. 3, 680, 682 n. 33, 684, 687, 976 n. 1, 987, 1071, 1079 n. 21, 1171, 1224 n. 5, 1236, 1269 n. 1, 1300, 1301, 1528
Schürer, E. 76 n. 10, 79 n. 24, 79 n. 25, 79 n. 26, 180, 182, 220 n. 19, 283, 403 n. 16, 403 n. 17, 479 n. 25, 545, 579, 903 n. 2, 903 n. 3, 906, 934, 1047, 1050, 1051 n. 13, 1052 n. 16, 1053, 1054, 1084 n. 35, 1447, 1629, 1634, 1794 n. 18

Schürmann, H. 70, 71, 82, 102, 102 n. 1, 103 n. 5, 104, 107, 112 n. 22, 118 n. 33, 120 n. 37, 123 n. 43, 131, 132, 132 n. 1, 134, 136, 142 n. 2, 144 n. 5, 151, 152, 152 n. 19, 159, 163, 164 n. 1, 165, 170 n. 14, 172, 173 n. 4, 173 n. 5, 174 n. 7, 178, 183, 184, 188, 189, 189 n. 34, 190, 192 n. 40, 194, 198 n. 50, 199 n. 2, 200 n. 6, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 207 n. 20, 207 n. 21, 208, 208 n. 22, 209 n. 24, 213 n. 3, 213 n. 4, 214, 220 n. 17, 221, 222, 223 n. 23, 223 n. 25, 227, 228, 231, 231 n. 2, 231 n. 4, 234, 235 n. 9, 236, 237, 238, 240, 242, 243, 244, 245, 248, 249, 252, 253, 259, 259 n. 1, 260, 260 n. 2, 260 n. 3, 264, 268, 270, 271, 273, 276 n. 1, 279, 281, 282, 284, 285, 286, 287 n. 12, 288, 289, 290, 295, 296, 300 n. 5, 303, 304 n. 11, 305 n. 14, 307 n. 19, 308, 309, 315, 316, 317, 317 n. 1, 320 n. 4, 322, 325, 326, 329, 330, 331, 332, 334, 334 n. 4, 338, 340, 344, 346, 347, 347 n. 23, 349, 351 n. 5, 352, 356, 358, 360 n. 10, 363, 365, 365 n. 2, 365 n. 4, 367, 369, 371, 371 n. 12, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 376 n. 18, 377, 379, 381, 384, 386, 390, 392, 393, 397 n. 9, 403 n. 16, 404, 407, 412, 413, 414 n. 35, 415, 415 n. 36, 416, 419, 421, 421 n. 47, 426, 428, 429, 431 n. 15, 432, 432 n. 16, 433, 435, 439, 440, 454, 458 n. 21, 460, 461, 465, 469, 473, 474, 475, 477, 478, 480, 483, 484, 485, 487, 490 n. 3, 494 n. 9, 496 n. 14, 497 n. 17, 504, 511 n. 11, 515, 517, 517 n. 16, 528 n. 36, 529, 530 n. 39, 531, 534 n. 42, 535 n. 43, 536 n. 44, 538 n. 3, 539 n. 5, 542, 543, 544, 546, 546 n. 10, 551, 552 n. 5, 555, 562, 564, 564 n. 17, 564 n. 18, 565, 576, 577 n. 29, 578, 579, 580, 581 n. 32, 582, 583, 584, 586, 595, 596, 599, 602 n. 50, 603, 605, 607, 608, 610, 613, 615 n. 60, 616, 618, 620, 620 n. 66, 622, 626 n. 73, 627, 631 n. 2, 632 n. 4, 635, 636, 639, 640, 643, 649, 649 n. 5, 650, 654, 659 n. 6, 665 n. 8, 666, 666 n. 9, 667, 668, 668 n. 10, 669, 670 n. 12, 671, 672, 673, 674, 676 n. 21, 679, 679 n. 25, 680, 681 n. 28, 682 n. 33, 683, 684, 684 n. 36, 687, 689, 690, 694, 695 n. 8, 696, 696 n. 9, 697, 700, 701, 702, 704, 707, 708, 712 n. 7, 714 n. 14, 719, 719 n. 6, 720, 722 n. 10, 724, 726, 726 n. 15, 727, 730 n. 30, 732 n. 36, 735, 742, 744, 744 n. 4, 745, 748, 751, 751 n. 4, 752 n. 5, 754, 757, 760, 762, 763, 766, 766 n. 1, 768 n. 6, 772, 776, 778, 779, 779 n. 28, 786, 787, 791, 791 n. 10, 792, 793 n. 14, 794 n. 15, 801, 802, 803, 807 n. 33, 809, 810, 810 n. 2, 814, 816 n. 14, 818, 818 n. 18, 820, 821 n. 3, 822, 826 n. 3, 829, 830, 833, 835, 838, 845, 854 n. 3, 858, 863 n. 1, 868, 869, 869 n.

12, 878, 883, 886, 888, 898, 904, 905 n. 9, 910, 913, 918 n. 2, 919 n. 3, 932, 950, 950 n. 1, 957, 960 n. 7, 966, 971, 973, 975, 982, 990, 997, 1000 n. 30, 1010, 1016 n. 62, 1019 n. 4, 1026, 1026 n. 11, 1034, 1038, 1039, 1042, 1047, 1082 n. 30, 1087, 1088, 1095, 1107, 1108 n. 6, 1114 n. 15, 1123, 1253, 1346, 1410, 1717, 1717 n. 2, 1718, 1722, 1722 n. 12, 1723 n. 15, 1726 n. 18, 1736 n. 6

Schwarz, G. 1291 n. 24, 1343 n. 42, 1354 n. 19, 1749 n. 31

Schweitzer, A. 833, 939, 940, 1613, 1652

Schweizer, E. 57 n. 13, 59 n. 21, 65, 75, 75 n. 7, 76 n. 7, 89, 93, 102, 108 n. 14, 114, 122 n. 42, 123 n. 43, 127, 135, 165, 167, 178, 182, 184 n. 25, 194, 194 n. 47, 198 n. 50, 206, 216, 221, 225, 227, 240, 242, 243, 246 n. 29, 248, 253, 316, 337 n. 10, 342, 366, 366 n. 5, 377 n. 20, 392, 403 n. 15, 412, 414, 416, 429, 433, 448, 449 n. 3, 455, 496, 515, 523, 595, 612, 626, 643, 654, 666, 700, 726, 745, 746, 771, 778, 792, 797 n. 19, 801, 803, 804, 818, 822, 857, 863, 863 n. 1, 864, 867, 868, 891, 952, 972, 980, 984, 987 n. 2, 997, 998, 998 n. 23, 999, 1000 n. 30, 1012, 1012 n. 54, 1016 n. 62, 1031, 1037, 1046, 1050 n. 12, 1051, 1091, 1095, 1102, 1105,

1106, 1113 n. 14, 1114, 1122, 1139, 1147 n. 2, 1151 n. 8, 1152, 1153, 1179 n. 17, 1180, 1185 n. 26, 1189, 1213, 1215 n. 4, 1216, 1217, 1218, 1231 n. 1, 1253, 1256, 1259, 1261, 1267, 1272 n. 4, 1276 n. 13, 1287 n. 12, 1290, 1290 n. 21, 1296, 1328, 1353, 1355 n. 22, 1367, 1368, 1371, 1376 n. 35, 1388, 1394 n. 23, 1413 n. 5, 1414, 1418, 1427, 1453, 1470 n. 7, 1497, 1504, 1510, 1515 n. 3, 1522, 1534, 1545, 1556, 1561, 1584, 1585, 1592, 1602, 1610, 1624, 1630, 1654, 1661, 1663, 1674, 1677, 1678, 1690, 1723, 1801, 1803, 1822, 1833, 1848, 1850, 1864, 1869, 1898, 1904, 1933, 1934, 1943

Scobie, C. H. H. 322, 322 n. 7

Scott, B. B. 947 n. 5, 1030, 1031 n. 17, 1146 n. 1, 1147 n. 3, 1150 n. 7, 1151 n. 9, 1152 n. 10, 1208, 1225, 1225 n. 8, 1266 n. 13, 1269, 1361 n. 3, 1362, 1363 n. 8, 1365 n. 11, 1367 n. 14, 1369, 1445 n. 3, 1447, 1447 n. 7, 1448, 1527, 1541 n. 22, 1591, 1594 n. 3

Scott, E. F. 1080 n. 24, 1372 n. 26

Seeberg, A. 1054 n. 20

Seecombe, D. P. 43

Seesemann, H. 432 n. 16, 519, 736, 1007 n. 42, 1023, 1075, 1185 n. 28, 1236 n. 11, 1287, 1536,

1757 n. 8
Seitz, O. J. F. 590 n. 38
Sellin, G. 1020
Seng, E. W. 1148, 1148 n. 4
Sherwin-White, A. N. 282 n. 3, 283 n. 6, 635, 783, 906 n. 13, 907 n. 16, 909, 1781, 1793 n. 16, 1812, 1816, 1823, 1828 n. 5
Shin Kyo-Seon, G. 406
Shirock, R. 1077 n. 19
Shutt, R. J. H. 596 n. 46, 1274 n. 8
Siegman, E. F. 631
Sjöberg, E. K. T. 339 n. 14, 483 n. 33, 803
Skeat, T. C. 534 n. 42
Sloan, R. B., Jr. 405 n. 20, 406, 406 n. 23, 410 n. 30
Smalley, S. S. 1045
Smith, B. D. 1702
Smith, M. 545 n. 8, 546
Smith, R. W. 1003 n. 34
Sneed, R. 1413, 1415, 1415 n. 11
Snodgrass, K. R. 292 n. 16, 953, 1591 n. 1, 1593, 1594 n. 4, 1605, 1902
Soards, M. L. 1699, 1699 n. 2, 1699 n. 3, 1705 n. 8, 1711, 1717 n. 2, 1718, 1718 n. 4, 1744 n. 24, 1745, 1746 n. 27, 1754 n. 4, 1776 n. 1, 1791, 1936 n. 17

Sonne, I. 410
Souter, A. 1555, 1911
Sparks, H. F. D. 309 n. 22
Sperber, D. 1646
Spicq, C. 1353 n. 18
Stählin, G. 151, 208 n. 22, 238, 239, 252, 304, 381, 592, 601, 639, 649, 650, 669, 680 n. 27, 681 n. 29, 683 n. 34, 702, 737 n. 46, 801, 1003, 1004 n. 35, 1033, 1057, 1058, 1135, 1181 n. 19, 1182, 1185 n. 29, 1195, 1209, 1215 n. 5, 1266 n. 13, 1384, 1384 n. 7, 1385, 1447, 1449, 1464, 1632, 1643, 1712 n. 2, 1724, 1742, 1767–68, 1768 n. 3, 1769, 1789 n. 13, 1797, 1832, 1844 n. 2, 1865
Stamm, F. K. 937
Stanley, D. M. 137
Stauffer, E. 433 n. 18, 516 n. 15, 674, 729, 762, 841 n. 8, 908, 1009, 1011 n. 53, 1174, 1234, 1350, 1451 n. 19
Stegemann, W. 591, 1151
Stegner, W. R. 342 n. 18
Stein, R. H. 55 n. 4, 87, 299 n. 2, 346, 864 n. 4, 914 n. 1, 945, 1018, 1108, 1108 n. 7, 1109, 1343, 1880 n. 4
Stemberger, G. 290 n. 15, 669 n. 11, 924 n. 3, 1015, 1076 n. 15

Stendahl, K. 290, 291
Sterling, G. E. 6 n. 3, 14, 52, 56 n. 6, 57 n. 13
Stern, J. B. 1036
Stern, M. 310 n. 24, 545 n. 8, 678, 1447
Strack, H. L. 669 n. 11, 924 n. 3, 1015, 1076 n. 15; see also SB
Strathmann, H. 96 n. 65, 108 n. 13, 178, 186, 199 n. 1, 216, 252, 378, 493 n. 7, 496 n. 14, 564 n. 17, 635, 817 n. 16, 1375, 1802, 1941 n. 21
Strauss, D. F. 665, 796, 833, 903 n. 2, 1528 n. 3, 1583, 1640 n. 15
Strecker, G. 553, 554, 932, 941 n. 16
Streeter, B. H. 8, 915, 950, 1064 n. 41
Strobel, A. 410, 665 n. 8, 912 n. 4, 1410, 1413, 1437, 1833
Stuhlmacher, P. 570, 665
Stumpff, A. 545, 855
Suggs, M. J. 553, 661, 1121
Surkau, H. W. 1839
Swartley, W. M. 220 n. 18, 400
Swellengrebel, J. L. 1795
Sylva, D. D. 34, 1861

Talbert, C. H. 13, 14, 20, 28, 67, 71 n. 3, 135, 137 n. 9, 399 n. 13, 405 n. 21, 452, 464, 514 n. 12, 630, 637, 642, 690, 694, 697, 704, 706, 710, 710 n. 1, 713 n. 10, 744, 764, 766, 785, 809, 820 n. 1, 850, 901, 961 n. 9, 978, 979, 1015 n. 58, 1019, 1023, 1028, 1028 n. 12, 1037, 1038 n. 3, 1045, 1051, 1053, 1056 n. 25, 1077 n. 18, 1091, 1095, 1098, 1098 n. 12, 1100, 1161, 1166 n. 8, 1174, 1175, 1178, 1185 n. 26, 1189, 1192, 1202, 1205, 1299, 1300, 1318, 1320, 1324 n. 3, 1337, 1340 n. 36, 1344, 1398, 1414 n. 9, 1444, 1459, 1474, 1482, 1485, 1501, 1504, 1513, 1515, 1525, 1547, 1548 n. 1

Tanenbaum, M. H. 405

Tannehill, R. C. 20, 38, 53, 68, 142 n. 1, 172 n. 1, 194 n. 46, 213 n. 2, 259, 305 n. 14, 363, 396 n. 8, 422, 434 n. 20, 514 n. 12, 538, 633, 692, 705, 723, 753, 785, 786, 809, 820, 825, 835, 838 n. 1, 847, 891, 981, 984, 986, 994, 1003, 1015 n. 58, 1018 n. 1, 1039, 1045, 1105, 1170, 1212, 1247 n. 6, 1251 n. 17, 1260, 1260 n. 1, 1280, 1284, 1290 n. 20, 1295, 1306, 1360, 1397 n. 1, 1474, 1474 n. 1, 1513 n. 1, 1592, 1607, 1819, 1822

Taylor, C. 1538 n. 17

Taylor, V. 490 n. 3, 506 n. 5, 510, 510 n. 9, 633, 750, 757, 787, 811 n. 4, 821 n. 5, 864, 967, 976, 1226, 1471, 1504, 1654, 1699, 1699 n. 2, 1718, 1736 n.

6, 1766, 1776 n. 1, 1791, 1806, 1836, 1837, 1838, 1871 n. 1, 1883, 1892
Thackeray, H. St. J. 1289 n. 19
Theissen, G. 426, 426 n. 8, 434, 436–37, 442, 451, 455, 470, 470 n. 12, 470 n. 14, 511, 630, 633, 646, 648, 757 n. 6, 758 n. 7, 769 n. 7, 785, 789 n. 9, 826, 879, 879 n. 2, 1254, 1398
Theobald, M. 446
Thiering, B. 1839
Thiessen, H. C. 1528 n. 4
Thomas, R. L. 256, 1068, 1069, 1070
Thomas Aquinas 941 n. 16
Thrall, M. E. 868, 1248 n. 7
Thyen, H. 483 n. 33
Tiede, D. L. 14, 16 n. 7, 20, 51, 52, 63 n. 32, 77 n. 17, 81, 85, 102 n. 1, 103 n. 2, 115, 120, 194, 194 n. 46, 222, 253, 288 n. 14, 364, 365, 366, 367, 394, 394 n. 1, 399, 399 n. 13, 405 n. 21, 407, 417, 451 n. 7, 452 n. 9, 458, 473, 482 n. 30, 485 n. 37, 495, 518, 518 n. 17, 541, 564 n. 18, 617, 629 n. 1, 659 n. 6, 665, 681 n. 29, 754 n. 1, 798 n. 25, 805, 837, 838, 842, 889 n. 4, 963, 1016 n. 62, 1068, 1070 n. 5, 1073, 1087 n. 1, 1105, 1131, 1135, 1136, 1141, 1150 n. 7, 1156, 1162, 1166 n. 7, 1171 n. 3, 1178 n. 13, 1192, 1196, 1202 n. 1, 1217, 1230, 1234, 1250, 1260 n. 1, 1261, 1270 n. 2, 1280, 1287 n. 12, 1296 n. 2, 1309, 1344–45, 1345 n. 1, 1350, 1385, 1404, 1418, 1430, 1437, 1445 n. 2, 1448, 1453, 1470 n. 7, 1476 n. 3, 1494, 1496 n. 3, 1514, 1523, 1525, 1550, 1561, 1562, 1562 n. 19, 1564 n. 27, 1604, 1607 n. 1, 1607 n. 2, 1624, 1634, 1654, 1656, 1667, 1669, 1672, 1678, 1681 n. 34, 1690, 1719, 1741, 1759, 1772, 1794, 1809, 1818, 1820, 1846, 1847 n. 9, 1849, 1850, 1852, 1868, 1869, 1873, 1891, 1904, 1910, 1915, 1918, 1920 n. 24, 1933, 1934, 1937, 1944

Tödt, H. E. 924 n. 1, 952
Tolbert, M. A. 1307 n. 6
Tolstoy, L. 940
Toon, P. 1929
Torrey, C. C. 546, 1102, 1428 n. 9
Toussaint, S. D. 936 n. 9
Townsend, J. T. 16, 924 n. 3
Traub, H. 219 n. 16, 220, 334 n. 5, 1008 n. 47, 1312, 1429
Tristram, H. B. 266 n. 14
Trudinger, L. P. 1021
Tuckett, C. M. 8, 845 n. 1, 1651 n. 2
Turner, C. H. 342 n. 18
Turner, D. L. 942 n. 17

Turner, M. M. B. 39
Turner, N. 78 n. 19, 85 n. 43, 86 n. 46, 88, 89 n. 48, 156 n. 24, 167, 325, 329, 800, 1195 n. 16, 1234 n. 7
Twelftree, G. H. 1068 n. 3, 1080
Tyson, J. B. 34, 914 n. 1, 1246 n. 4, 1819 n. 5

Untergassmair, F. G. 1839, 1858 n. 24, 1863 n. 33, 1866 n. 35
Ussher, J. 911

VanderKam, J. C. 1958
Van Der Loos, H. 431, 432, 436 n. 23, 436 n. 25, 438, 443, 443 n. 40, 449, 451 n. 6, 455, 457, 458 n. 21, 460, 469, 472 n. 16, 480 n. 27, 481 n. 29, 483, 528 n. 34, 631, 635, 636, 638, 640, 642, 647, 653, 756 n. 5, 757, 758, 760, 762, 766, 772, 772 n. 13, 774 n. 19, 793, 795 n. 16, 796, 796 n. 17, 797, 802 n. 31, 804, 804 n. 32, 826, 829, 830 n. 11, 831 n. 12, 832, 833–34, 881, 881 n. 6, 1074 n. 7, 1215, 1256, 1256 n. 6, 1399, 1401, 1401 n. 5, 1404, 1405, 1502, 1503
Van Iersel, B. M. F. 260 n. 2, 491
Van Oosterzee, J. J. 126, 1339 n. 33
Van Unnik, W. C. 14, 56 n. 11, 223, 598 n. 48
Vermes, G. 925 n. 5, 928 n. 9, 1802

Vielhauer, P. 4, 173, 651, 952
Violet, B. 405
Vogt, E. 534 n. 42, 535 n. 43
Völkel, M. 62, 496 n. 14
Volkmar, G. 1477
Völter, D. 71

Wainwright, A. W. 1548
Walker, W. O., Jr. 497, 497 n. 16, 914 n. 1
Wall, R. W. 1037 n. 1, 1079 n. 21, 1079 n. 22
Walls, A. F. 1304
Walton, B. 1603 n. 10, 1692
Walvoord, J. F. 931
Wanke, J. 1904, 1908
Warfield, B. B. 1477
Weatherly, J. A. 1564 n. 27
Webb, R. L. 297, 298, 298 n. 21, 656
Wegner, U. 631, 632, 635
Weinert, F. D. 1528, 1528 n. 4, 1946
Weiser, A. 1171 n. 3, 1181, 1183 n. 24, 1186
Weiss, B. 99 n. 72, 834, 932
Weiss, H.-F. 479 n. 25, 528 n. 35, 694, 1124, 1256
Weiss, J. 97, 858, 1102, 1417, 1652, 1673
Weiss, K. 202 n. 11, 436 n. 23, 603, 1118, 1403, 1449, 1607, 1811
Weizsäcker, K. H. von 1652

Wellhausen, J. 283, 316, 451 n. 5, 612, 815 n. 12, 864, 895, 1115, 1236, 1307, 1394 n. 22, 1452, 1515, 1654
Wenham, D. 719, 719 n. 6, 730, 740, 1171 n. 3, 1172 n. 4, 1422, 1423, 1423 n. 6, 1651, 1652 n. 4, 1653–54, 1655
Wenham, G. J. 1357 n. 25, 1358, 1358 n. 27
Wenham, J. W. 914 n. 5, 1788 n. 11, 1886
Westcott, B. F. 819 n. 19, 1721, 1880 n. 5, 1886, 1901 n. 19
Westermann, C. 291, 405
Wette, W. M. L. de 1077 n. 19
Wettstein, J. J. 52 n. 1, 859
White, K. D. 724
Wiefel, W. 52, 76 n. 10, 91, 102, 103, 120 n. 37, 122 n. 42, 130 n. 53, 132, 143 n. 3, 145, 145 n. 9, 149 n. 17, 151, 173 n. 4, 189 n. 34, 192 n. 42, 199 n. 1, 251 n. 34, 252, 259 n. 1, 268 n. 18, 285, 301, 322, 333, 333 n. 2, 334, 346, 365, 369 n. 9, 379 n. 26, 384, 386, 390, 416, 430, 472 n. 15, 475, 517 n. 16, 523, 534 n. 42, 536 n. 44, 613, 616 n. 61, 627, 630 n. 1, 632 n. 4, 647, 659 n. 6, 665 n. 8, 674, 678, 681 n. 29, 695 n. 8, 698, 704, 711 n. 3, 724, 743 n. 3, 751 n. 4, 754 n. 1, 769 n. 6, 791, 793, 810 n. 2, 825, 863 n. 1, 864, 868, 869, 918 n. 2, 932, 950,

976, 995 n. 16, 1003 n. 34, 1015 n. 59, 1016 n. 62, 1019 n. 4, 1022, 1026, 1038, 1040, 1043, 1045 n. 1, 1046 n. 5, 1047, 1064, 1068, 1071, 1076, 1088, 1091, 1102, 1105 n. 1, 1133, 1137 n. 8, 1149, 1152 n. 11, 1166 n. 8, 1167 n. 10, 1171 n. 3, 1177, 1192 n. 6, 1196, 1199, 1204 n. 5, 1222 n. 3, 1245, 1253, 1269, 1281 n. 1, 1293, 1296 n. 3, 1346 n. 3, 1347 n. 4, 1364, 1397 n. 2, 1398, 1410, 1426, 1427, 1450, 1511, 1517, 1654, 1764, 1845, 1848, 1883, 1902, 1904, 1905
Wiener, A. 982
Wifstrand, A. 1453
Wight, F. H. 266 n. 14
Wikgren, A. 1416
Wilckens, U. 614, 681 n. 29, 684, 699, 1184, 1197 n. 21, 1314, 1642
Wilcox, M. 197, 1916 n. 14
Wilkinson, J. 1215
Wilson, S. G. 39, 216, 1355, 1689
Winandy, J. 248
Windisch, H. 136, 568, 569, 635, 932, 939–40, 997, 997 n. 20, 998 n. 25, 1117, 1133 n. 4, 1228, 1642, 1702
Wink, W. 279 n. 1, 286, 325, 326, 418 n. 43, 1346

Winter, P. 71, 98 n. 70, 142, 143 n. 3, 173, 174 n. 7, 227, 270, 1793 n. 16
Witherington, B., III 322, 334 n. 5, 443 n. 40, 474 n. 17, 522 n. 25, 525 n. 29, 541 n. 7, 542, 545 n. 8, 659, 661, 684 n. 38, 711 n. 3, 713 n. 10, 980, 991 n. 12, 1040, 1052 n. 15, 1190 n. 3, 1195 n. 15, 1548 n. 2, 1574 n. 4, 1575 n. 5, 1576, 1741 n. 17
Wolfe, C. 534 n. 42, 535 n. 43
Wolff, H. J. 1200
Wood, H. G. 700 n. 16
Wrede, W. 272, 838, 845, 845 n. 1
Wrege, H.-T. 551
Wright, A. G. 1632, 1647
Wright, G. E. 1301 n. 16
Wuellner, W. H. 461
Wycliffe, J. 126 n. 47

Yates, J. E. 1079 n. 21
Yoder, J. H. 400

Zahn, T. 713 n. 12, 1019 n. 4, 1022, 1032, 1038, 1045 n. 1, 1074, 1102, 1106 n. 4, 1175, 1205, 1367 n. 14, 1517, 1694, 1911
Zenner, J. K. 421
Zerwick, M. 112, 149 n. 17, 160, 1008 n. 46, 1064, 1264, 1328 n. 7, 1343 n. 41, 1469 n. 4, 1506 n. 9,

1528 n. 4
Zimmerli, W. 109 n. 17
Zlotnick, D. 649 n. 7, 651, 651 n. 10
Zmijewski, J. 1410, 1410 n. 1, 1422, 1426 n. 8, 1427, 1429, 1430, 1431, 1433, 1434, 1434 n. 20, 1436, 1436 n. 24, 1437, 1438 n. 28, 1440, 1442, 1654, 1663 n. 18, 1675, 1677, 1678, 1690, 1694 n. 50
Zugibe, F. T. 1831

Index of Greek Words

Ἀβραάμ 159–60
ἄβυσσος 775
ἀγαθοποιέω 529–30, 600
ἀγαθός 1476, 1477
ἀγαλλίασις 83, 138
ἀγαλλιάω 149–50
ἀγαπητός 341–43, 874
ἅγιος 121, 123, 130–31, 181, 239, 323, 378 ἀγρυπνέω 1694 n. 49
ἄγω 1809 n. 4
ἀγωνία 1761
ἀγωνίζομαι 1234 n. 9
ἀδελφός 752–53, 1489
ᾅδης 775, 1004–5
ἀδικία 1334, 1341, 1343
ἄδικος 1335 n. 26, 1335 n. 29, 1336, 1462 ἀετός 1439 n. 29
αἰνέω 1557
αἴρω 852
αἰτέω 593–94
ἀκάθαρτος 430–31

ἀκαταστασία 1665
ἀκολουθέω 461–62, 852, 898, 1488 n. 15, 1511
ἀκούω 588, 874
ἀκριβῶς 61–62
ἄλας 1290–91
ἀλλογενής 1404–5
ἄλλος 325, 687
ἀλώπηξ 1247
ἁμαρτωλός 496, 555, 599, 683, 695
ἀμήν 416–17
Ἀμμαοῦς 1908
ἀμφίβληστρον 457
ἀναβαίνω 204
ἀναβλέπω 1510
ἀνάβλεψις 1510
ἀναβοάω 1451 n. 19
ἀναγινώσκω 1024 n. 5
ἀνάγκη 1679 n. 31
ἀνάγω 760
ἀναδείκνυμι 994 n. 15
ἀνάθημα 1661
ἀναίδεια 1059
ἀνακαθίζω 652
ἀνακρίνω 1827

ἀναλαμβάνω 869 n. 14, 967–68 ἀναλύω 1174 n. 7
ἀνάπειρος 1266 n. 12
ἀναπέμπω 1818
ἀνάστασις 1377 n. 38
ἀνατάσσομαι 56
ἀνατολή 191–92
ἀναφέρω 1949
ἄνθρωπε 1149
ἄνθρωπός τις 1029
ἀνθ’ ὧν 1134
ἀνίστημι 419, 848, 1377,
1939 n. 19
Ἄννα 251–52
ἄνοια 531
ἀνοίγω 333
ἀνορθόω 1216 n. 10
ἄνωθεν 60–61
ἄξιος 637
ἀπαγγέλλω 777, 1204 n. 4, 1506 n. 9
ἀπαιτέω 594 ἀπελπίζω 602
ἀπέχω 583–84, 1372 n. 25
ἁπλοῦς 1101

ἀποβαίνω 1669
ἀπογράφω 907, 908 ἀποδεκατόω 1463
ἀποδέχομαι 791
ἀποδίδωμι 1519–20, 1613
ἀποδοκιμάζω 848
ἀποκαλύπτω 1434, 1499 n. 8
ἀποκάλυψις 244, 1434 n. 20
ἀπόκειμαι 1538
ἀποκρύπτω 1499 n. 8
ἀποκτείνω 848
ἀπολαμβάνω 1372 n. 25, 1490 n. 18
ἀπολύω 1216 n. 8, 1805
ἀπὸ μιᾶς 1273
ἀποπνίγω 776 n. 23
ἀπορία 1683
ἀποστέλλω 409, 440, 813–14
ἀπόστολος 538 n. 4, 541–42, 827, 1389 ἀποτίμησις 908 ἀπὸ τότε 1351
ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν 151, 155, 162, 461, 1195, 1251, 1351, 1720 n. 8 ἅπτομαι 1469
ἀργύριον 1539 n. 18

ἄριστον 1111 n. 10
ἀρνέομαι 852, 1783
ἅρπαξ 1462
ἄρτος 1053 n. 17, 1953
ἀρχή 61, 351 n. 4
ἀρχιερεύς 283–84
ἀρχισυνάγωγος 636, 791, 1217 n. 12
ἀρχιτελώνης 493, 1516
ἄρχομαι 305 n. 13, 1810 n. 6
ἀρχόμενος 351 n. 4
ἄρχων 791, 1476
ἄρωμα 1877
ἀσφάλεια 64–65
ἀτενίζω 412
αὐλίζομαι 1695
αὐστηρός 1538 n. 16
αὐτόπτης 58
αὐτῷ 1828 n. 4
ἄφαντος 1920 n. 23
ἄφεσις 410
ἀφίημι 481–82, 1437
ἀφίστημι 735, 739
ἀφορίζω 578–79
ἄφρων 1113, 1153

ἀχρεῖος 1393–94
βαπτίζω 336
βάπτισμα 1193–94
βαπτιστής 666, 683
βαρέω 870 n. 15, 1693
βάσανος 1370
βασιλεία 1869
βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ 440, 857–60 βασίλειος 671
βασιλεύς 822, 1558, 1811
βασιλεύω 116
βαστάζω 1711
βάτος (masc.) 1330–31
βδέλυγμα 1350
βδέλυγμα τῆς ἐρημώσεως 1676
βελόνη 1485
βιάζω 1351–54
βιαστής 1352
βίος 737, 1646 n. 20
βλασφημέω 1790
βλέπω 614 n. 57, 746
βοάω 1451 n. 19, 1509
βουλή 1794 n. 18

βουλὴ τοῦ θεοῦ 677–78
βουνός 1846 n. 7
βρέφος 135 n. 5, 219, 274, 1468, 1469, 1471 n. 8 βρέχω 696
βύσσος 1365

Γαδαρηνῶν 782–84
γαζοφυλάκιον 1644–45
Γαλιλαία 445
γάμος 1263 n. 5
γέγραπται 290
γέεννα 775, 1136
γελάω 584–85
γενεά 679, 883, 1098 n. 11, 1688–92
γένεσις 83
Γερασηνῶν 771, 782–84
Γεργεσηνῶν 782–84
γερουσία 1794
γῆ 1292 n. 27
γίνομαι see ἐγένετο, ἐγένετο δέ, καὶ ἐγένετο, and μὴ γένοιτο γνωρίζω 221 n. 21
γνῶσις 1124 n. 31
γνωστός 1865 n. 34

γογγύζω 496, 1519
γράμμα 1331 n. 14
γραμματεύς 267, 479, 482, 678 γρηγορέω 1694 n. 49

δαιμόνιον 430
δαίρω 1184
δακτύλιος 1315
δαν(ε)ίζω 600–601, 602, 1057
δαρήσεται 1184
Δαυίδ 180, 356–57
δέησις 82, 516 n. 14
δεῖ 26, 29, 261 n. 5, 269, 270, 349, 440, 845, 847, 1218, 1245 n. 2, 1248, 1320, 1430, 1431 n. 13, 1447, 1495 n. 2, 1518, 1547, 1893
δειπνέω 1393 n. 20
δεῖπνον 1111 n. 10, 1393 n. 20
δεκτός 417
δέομαι 473, 1694 n. 50
δέρω 1184, 1598
δεσπότης 242, 1051 n. 13
δέχομαι 735, 896, 1471 n. 10
δέω see δεῖ δημόσιος 311 n. 26

δημοσιώνης 311
δηνάριον 698–99, 1533
διαβαίνω 1373
διάβολος 370 n. 11
διαγγέλλω 982
διαγογγύζω 496, 1298 n. 7, 1519
διακονέω 714, 1393 n. 19
διαλογισμός 250, 484 n. 35, 529, 894, 895, 1932 n. 8
διαμαρτύρομαι 1375
διανοίγω 1920, 1937
διασείω 313
διασκορπίζω 1310, 1327
διαστρέφω 883, 1810
διασῴζω 637
διαταράσσω 110
διατάσσω 1393
διατηρέω 273
διατίθημι 1739 n. 13
διδάσκαλος 267, 312, 694, 698, 762, 799, 898, 977, 978, 1149, 1286, 1401, 1619, 1663 δίδωμι 1519–20
διερμηνεύω 1917
διηγέομαι 53, 827

διήγησις 53, 56 n. 10
δίκαιος 77, 238, 1863
δικαιόω 677, 1465
δίκτυον 456–57
διχοτομέω 1182
δοκέω 747 δοκός 614
δόξα 214, 220, 244, 377 n. 20, 856, 869 n. 14
δοξάζω 393, 1402
δούλη 126, 150
δοῦλος 242, 631, 1313
δοχή 494, 1266
δραχμή 1303, 1533
δύναμις 88, 121–22, 435, 813, 1943
δυνατός 151–52
δυσμή 1197 n. 19
δῶμα 1434 n. 22

ἐγγίζω 1000, 1080, 1503 n. 3, 1505 n. 5, 1557 n. 15
ἐγγράφω 1008
ἐγείρω 180, 653, 803, 848, 1891
ἐγένετο 865, 967
ἐγένετο δέ 96, 134 n. 4, 1367
ἐγκάθετος 1609

ἐγκακέω 1447
ἐδαφίζω 1563
ἔδει see δεῖ εἰμί 1417
εἰρήνη 220, 242, 798–99
εἰσέρχομαι 1537
εἰωθός 402
ἑκατόν 1924
ἑκατοντάρχης 635–36, 1863
ἐκβάλλω 995 n. 17, 995 n. 18, 1238 n. 15, 1601 ἐκδικέω 1448, 1451 n. 17
ἐκδίκησις 1678
ἐκκρεμάννυμι 1581
ἐκλέγομαι 342, 874
ἐκλείπω 1742 n. 20, 1859, 1869–70 ἐκλεκτός 874 n. 20, 1451, 1868
ἐκμυκτηρίζω 1349
ἐκπληρόω 86
ἐκπλήσσω 268, 429
ἔλαιον 696, 702
Ἐλαιῶν 1566
Ἐλαιών 1566
ἐλαύνω 761 ἔλεγεν 302

ἐλέγχω 328
ἐλεέω 1401, 1508
ἔλεος 152, 159, 165, 183–84, 191, 587
ἐλεύσονται ἡμέραι 1426
Ἐμμαοῦς 1907–8
ἐμπαίζω 1820 n. 8
ἔμπροσθεν 1552
ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ 1009 n. 49, 1244, 1606 ἔνδοξος 671
ἔνειμι 1114–15
ἐνέχω 1125 n. 33
ἐν μέσῳ 1416
ἐντολαὶ καὶ δικαιώματα 77
ἐντός 1410 n. 1, 1414, 1415–17 ἐντρέπω 1448 n. 8
ἐξαίφνης 219
ἐξαστράπτω 867 n. 9
ἔξεστι 523, 525, 529
ἑξήκοντα 1924
ἑξῆς 880
ἐξίστημι 267–68, 804 ἔξοδος 869
ἐξομολογέομαι 1009
ἐξουθενέω 1461, 1820 n. 8

ἐξουσία 429, 435, 813
ἐπαινέω 1332, 1343 n. 42 ἐπαιτέω 1506 n. 6
ἐπαρχεία 134
ἐπειδή 635
ἐπειδήπερ 54–55, 67
ἐπιβάλλω 1605, 1668 n. 23
ἐπιγινώσκω 1818 n. 1
ἐπιγραφή 1853–54
ἐπιθυμέω 1719
ἐπικρίνω 1832 n. 11
ἐπιλαμβάνομαι 1258, 1609
ἐπιούσιος 1053–54
ἐπιρίπτω 1556 n. 12
ἐπισιτισμός 830
ἐπισκέπτομαι 99, 178–79, 654
ἐπισκιάζω 122–23, 872 ἐπισκοπή 1563
ἐπιστάτης 456, 459, 761, 762, 898, 1401
ἐπιστρέφω 36, 87–88
ἐπιτιμάω 433–34, 436–37, 762, 1469 n. 5
ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό 1438
ἐπίτροπος 713
ἐπιχειρέω 55–56

ἔρημος 194, 286, 290–91, 828–29
ἔρχομαι 869 n. 14, 1417, 1426
ἐρχόμενος, ὁ 665–66, 1250–51
ἐσθίων καὶ πίνων 515
ἕτερος 325, 527, 687, 994, 1542, 1544 ἑτοιμάζω 90–91, 243, 295, 969
ἕτοιμος 1177 n. 11
εὐαγγελίζω 92, 215, 325, 408, 440, 982 εὐδοκέω 341
εὐδοκία 220, 228 n. 32
εὐεργέτης 1737
εὔθετος 984
εὐθέως 474
εὐθύς 294
εὐλαβής 238
εὑρίσκω 1436 n. 24
εὐσχήμων 1872–73
εὐφραίνω 1315 n. 25, 1365 n. 10
εὐχαριστέω 1462 n. 5
ἐφίστημι 214
ἐφοράω 99
ἐχθρός 182–83
ἔχων ὦτα ἀκούειν, ὁ 727
ἕως ὅτου 1720 n. 8

Ζακχαῖος 1516
ζηλωτής 545
ζῳογονέω 1435 n. 23, 1436
ἡγεμονεύω 907, 908 ἤδη 306
ἡδονή 737
Ἠλίας 972–73
ἡλικία 274, 1161, 1517 n. 5
ἦν + aorist participle 1829 n. 6 ἡσυχάζω 1877–78
θάλασσα 454 n. 13, 759
θαυμάζω 94, 222, 414, 1073
θεάομαι 492–93
θεῖος ἀνήρ 433
θεός 780, 841 n. 8
Θεόφιλος 63–64
θεραπεία 1179 n. 16
θεραπεύω 814
θεωρέω 1851
θησαυρός 617
θορυβάζω 1042 n. 7, 1043
θορυβέω 1042 n. 7
θρηνέω 1844

θυγάτηρ 798
θυμός 419

ἰάομαι 814, 884
ἰδοὺ γάρ 138, 162
ἱερόν 240, 1578
Ἱεροσόλυμα 255–56
Ἰερουσαλήμ 253, 255–56, 378
Ἰησοῦς 351, 1869
ἱλάσκομαι 1464
ἱμάτιον 310, 592–93
ἱματισμός 671
Ἰορδάνης 287
Ἰουδαία 441, 445, 654, 1813 n. 10
Ἰουδαῖος 637
Ἰσκαριώθ 546–47
Ἰσραήλ 247, 258
ἵστημι 869 n. 14, 1462 n. 4 ἱστορία 53
ἰσχυρότερος 320

καθαρίζω 1402 n. 6
καθεξῆς 62, 712 n. 6
καθεύδω 802, 870 n. 15
καθῆσθαι ἐκ δεξιῶν τοῦ θεοῦ 869 n. 14

καθίζω 1943
καθώς 57
καὶ ἐγένετο 96, 134 n. 4, 478
καὶ ἰδού 1022, 1907
καινός 519 n. 20
καιρός 93, 1198, 1664, 1665, 1682 κακοῦργος 1848, 1867
κάλυμμα 1860
κάμηλος 1485
κάμιλος 1485
καρδία 156, 223 n. 24, 250, 319, 617, 738 καρπός 304
κάρφος 614
κατακλίνω 694
καταλιθάζω 1587 n. 7
κατάλυμα 208, 1033, 1712 n. 2
καταλύω 1518–19
κατανεύω 457 n. 19
κατανοέω 614 n. 58
καταπέτασμα 1860
κατασύρω 1199
καταφιλέω 697, 702
κατέχω 738
κατηχέω 65–66

κατισχύω 1694 κατοικέω 1093
κελεύω 1509 n. 13
κεραία 1354
κέραμος 481 n. 28
κέρας 180
κεράτιον 1311
κεφαλὴ γωνίας 1603
κῆνσος 1611
κηρύσσω 410, 780, 982
κίχρημι 1057
κλαίω 1560, 1788
Κλεοπᾶς 1911
κλίνη 480
κλισία 832
Κλωπᾶς 1911
κοδράντης 1646
κοιμάω 802, 870 n. 15
κοινωνός 460
κολλάω 1311
κόλποις 1369
κοπιάω 456
κόπτομαι 801, 1844
κόραξ 1160

κοράσιον 803
κόρος 1331
κοσμέω 1661
κόσμος 375
κόφινος 834–35
κράβαττος 480
κράζω 1509
κραιπάλη 1693 n. 48
κρανίον 1849
κράσπεδον 794
κρύπτω 1499 n. 8
κτάομαι 1674
κυλλός 480 n. 27
κύριος 31, 87, 137, 188, 217, 218, 221, 227–28, 459, 462, 473, 525–26, 527, 618, 619–20, 639–40, 650–51, 762, 780, 994 n. 15, 1043, 1051 n. 13, 1338, 1340, 1341, 1342, 1389, 1401, 1554–55, 1556, 1639, 1869, 1902 n. 20, 1922 κωλύω 1470 n. 7
κώμη 818
κωφός 168

λαῖλαψ 761
λαμβάνω 832

λαμβάνω πρόσωπον 1610
λαμπρός 1820–21
λαός 178, 189, 215–16, 243, 319, 325, 564, 635, 791 n. 10, 1073, 1511, 1580–81, 1695, 1827 λατρεύω 186, 252, 378
λεγιών 774
λέγω 1802, 1811, 1922
λέγω ὑμῖν 1059 n. 32, 1095, 1464, 1541 λέπρα 472
λεπτόν 1199–200
Λευίτης 1031
λῆρος 1898
λῃστής 1772
λικμάω 1604 n. 11
λίμνη 454, 759
λογίζομαι 1747 n. 29
λόγος 65, 66, 221, 285, 290, 414, 429–30, 435, 720, 740–41, 856 λόγος τοῦ θεοῦ 453–54
λυσιτελέω 1385
λύτρον 1913 n. 10
λυτρόω 1913 n. 10 λύτρωσις 253, 1913 n. 10
λυτρωτής 1913 n. 10

λύχνος 744
Μαγδαληνή 713
μαθητής 563–64, 1285–86 μακάριος 138
μακροθυμέω 1454
μαμωνᾶς 1333, 1335 n. 29, 1336
Μάρθα 1040
Μαρία/Μαριάμ 107–8, 223 n. 25, 229
μαρτυρέω 413, 1942
μαρτύριον 476–77, 1670
μάρτυς 1669 n. 24
μαστιγόω 1497–98
μάστιξ 667
μάχαιρα 1770
μεγαλειότης 885 n. 8
μεγαλύνω 148, 149, 165
μέγας 84, 113
μέθη 1693 n. 48
μεθίστημι 1328–29
μείγνυμι 1204 n. 5
μείζων 894 n. 3, 1736 n. 5
μελισσίου κηρίου 1948–49 μέλλω 888 n. 3

μενοῦν 1094–95
μέριμνα 736 n. 44, 1693 n. 48
μεταμορφόω 867
μετανοέω 35–36, 1939
μετάνοια 35–36, 287–88, 854–55, 1939
μετὰ ταῦτα 994
μέτοχος 460
μὴ γένοιτο 1602 n. 8
μίγνυμι 1204 n. 5
μικρός 1385–86
μικρότερος 675 n. 20, 894 n. 3 μιμνήσκομαι 184
μισέω 182–83, 578
μίσθιος 1312, 1313
μνᾶ 1533
μνηστεύω 205–6, 905
μοιχός 1462
μονογενής 342, 649, 881
μόσχος 1315
μυλικός 1385
μύρον 696, 702, 1877
μυστήριον 730
μωραίνω 1291 n. 24

Ναζαρά 420
Ναζαρέθ 127, 420
Ναζαρηνός 443–44, 1507
Ναζωραῖος 432, 443–44, 1506–7 ναός 240
νεκρός 981
νέος 519 n. 20
νεότης 1480
Νευης 1379
νήπιος 1009–10
νομίζω 352, 919
νομικός 267, 678
νομοδιδάσκαλος 479
νόσος 667
νύμφη 1196 n. 17
νῦν 576; see also ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν

ὁδός 1610
ὀδυνάομαι 268, 1372
ὀθόνιον 1899
οἰκονόμος 1179, 1327
οἶκος 210
οἰκουμένη 202
οἰκουμένης 375

οἰκτιρμός 587, 604–5
ὅμοιος 679
ὁμοιόω 679
ὀνειδίζω 579
ὄνομα 1006
ὄξος 1852
ὀπτασία 95
ὁράω 80, 864 n. 4, 876
ὀργή 303–4, 1679 n. 31
ὀρεινός 134
ὀρθρίζω 1695
ὁρίζω 1734–35
ὅριον 779
ὁρμάω 776 n. 23
ὄρος 934, 1846 n. 7
Οὐλαμμαούς 1924
οὐρανός 1949
οὗτος 1318 n. 28, 1535 n. 11
οὕτως 1938 n. 18
οὐχί, λέγω ὑμῖν 1095; see also λέγω ὑμῖν ὀφειλέτης 1207
ὀφείλω 1055
ὄχλος 302–3, 319, 453, 563–64, 635, 723, 791 n. 10, 840, 1073, 1580 ὀψώνιον 314

παγίς 1693
παιδεύω 1828 n. 5
παιδίον 274, 631, 1468, 1469, 1471 n. 8
παῖς 158–59, 180, 265, 274, 341, 631, 641, 803 παῖς θεοῦ 265
πανδοχεῖον 208, 1033
πανουργία 1611
πανταχοῦ 818
παραβιάζομαι 1918 n. 17
παραβολή 416, 519, 1151, 1299 n. 8, 1363 παραγγέλλω 475
παράδεισος 1857–58
παραδίδωμι 58–59, 886, 1668
παρακαλέω 328, 792 n. 12, 1372 παρακαλύπτω 1499 n. 8
παράκλησις 238–39, 584
παρακολουθέω 59–60
παρακύπτω 1899
παραλαμβάνω 1437, 1495
παραλελυμένος 480 n. 27
παραλυτικός 480 n. 27
παραλύω 480 n. 27

παρασκευή 1876
παρατήρησις 1412–14
παρατίθημι 1862 n. 32
παραχρῆμα 169, 798
πάρειμι 1204 n. 4
παρέρχομαι 1506 n. 8
παρέχειν κόπον 1449
παρθένος 107, 108, 112
παροικέω 1093
πάσχα 1710, 1955 n. 3
πάσχω 848, 1698 n. 1
πατήρ 269–71, 1051–52
πατριά 210
πεδινός 562–63, 934
πεινάω 575–76
πειράζω 370, 1023
πειρασμός 1055–56
πενιχρός 1645
περίλυπος 1483, 1492
περιποιέω 1435 n. 23, 1436
περιποίησις 1436 n. 24
περίχωρος 287, 435, 779
πέτρα 724
Πέτρος 543

πήρα 814, 997
πῆχυς 1161
πίμπλημι 86, 96, 165, 206, 224
πίπτω 1354–56
πίστιν ἔχειν 1391 n. 16
πίστις 36–37, 481, 854–55
πλανάω 1664
πλατεῖα 1275 n. 11
πλέω 761
πλημμύρης 622
πληροφορέω 56–57
πληρόω 93, 412, 869, 1936
πλοῖον 759
πλούσιος 737
πλουτέω 737
πλοῦτος 737
πνεῦμα 88, 121, 148, 149, 194, 239, 240, 323, 430, 803–4, 1862 n. 32, 1943 ποιέω 299, 309
πόλις 472, 649 n. 5, 818
πολύς 83
πονηρός 329, 579
πορεύω 420 n. 46
πορνεία 1357–58

πορφύρα 1365
ποταμός 622
πραγματεύομαι 1533
πράκτωρ 1199
πράσσω 312, 1540 n. 18
πρεσβυτέριον 1794
πρεσβύτερος 636
προμελετάω 1670
προσαίτης 1506 n. 6
προσδέχομαι 1299
προσδοκάω 318–19
προσέρχομαι 651
προσευχή 516 n. 14, 540
προσεύχομαι 1694 n. 50
προσέχω 1693
προσκυνέω 377, 377 n. 22, 1950
προσποιέω 1918
προστίθημι 1389 n. 13, 1531, 1598
προφήτης 124, 708, 1122
πρωτοκαθεδρία 1642
πρωτοκλισία 1262, 1642
πρῶτος 907, 909, 1133 πρωτότοκος 207, 341
πτοέω 1665–66

πτωχός 408, 573–74
πύλη 649, 1366
πυλών 1366
πυνθάνομαι 1506 n. 7
πῦρ 321–24, 1192
πυρετός 436 n. 23
πῦρ καὶ θεῖον 1433 n. 17
πῶς 1640

ῥαββί 456, 698, 1286, 1401, 1510 n. 14
ῥαββουνί 1510 n. 14
ῥάβδος 815
ῥαφίς 1485 n. 12
ῥῆμα 126, 131, 170 n. 12, 221, 285
ῥίπτω 434
ῥομφαία 248
ῥύμη 1275 n. 11

σάββατον 429, 522
σαλεύω 1683–84
Σαμαρίτης 1031
σατάν 1704
σατανᾶς 370 n. 11
σάτον 1228
σεισμός 761 n. 13

σεληνιάζομαι 881
σήμερον 216, 412, 487, 1787 n. 10, 1857 σιαγών 592
σίκερα 85
Σίμων 545, 698
Σίμων Πέτρος 458, 543
σίναπι 1390
σινδών 1899
σιτευτός 1315
σιωπάω 1509 n. 12
σκανδαλίζω 669, 736 n. 42 σκάνδαλον 669, 1384
σκάπτω 1328
σκηνή 871, 1333 n. 20 σκιρτάω 581
σκολιός 294
σορός 652
σουδάριον 1538
σπλάγχνα 191
σπλαγχνίζομαι 650, 1034
στάσις 1829 n. 6
σταυρόω 1830–31
στῆθος 1464 n. 11
στολή 1314, 1642

στράτευμα 1820
στρατηγός 1705
στρέφω 642 στρωννύω 1713
συγκαλέω 1301
συκάμινος 1391, 1517
συκῆ 1687
συκομορέα 1391, 1517
συκοφαντέω 313–14
συλλαμβάνω 111
συμβάλλω 223
συμπληρόω 968
συμπνίγω 793
συμφωνία 1316
σύν 161
συναντάω 880
συναρπάζω 773 n. 15
συνέδριον 1669, 1794
σύνεσις 268
συνέχω 795
συνθλάω 1604 n. 11
συνοχή 1682–83
συντηρέω 222–23
σῴζω 529, 707, 778, 798, 1406 n. 10, 1436 n. 24

σῶμα 1440 n. 30
σωτήρ 217
σωτηρία 180, 182, 1522
σωτήριον 295

ταμεῖον 1134–35
ταπεινός 156–57, 408
ταπεινόω 294
ταπείνωσις 150–51
ταράσσω 81–82, 110
ταρταρόω 775
τάχος 1454–55
τέλειος 604–5, 1480
τελειόω 1246 n. 5, 1248
τελείωσις 139, 141
τελέω 1193, 1495 n. 2
τέλος 1611, 1666, 1748–49
τελώνης 310–12, 493, 599
τετραάρχης 822
τόκος 1539 n. 18
τράπεζα 1539 n. 18
τρέμω 797 τρέφω 421 n. 47
τύπτω 592

τυρβάζω 1043
τυφλός 409
ὑβρίζω 1497
ὑγιαίνω 497 n. 17, 643–44
ὑδρωπικός 1256
υἱός 113, 114, 124, 286, 341–43, 373 n. 14, 517, 631 υἱὸς (τοῦ) θεοῦ 131, 439, 842 n. 9 υἱός + genitive 817, 998, 1077–78
υἱὸς Δαυίδ 1507–8
υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου 485–86, 580, 683, 856, 888, 1426–28, 1496, 1893 υἱὸς ὑψίστου 113, 124 ὑμνέω 1952
ὑπάρχω 1520
ὑπέρ 1725
ὑπηρέτης 58
ὕπνος 870 n. 15
ὑποκριτής 614, 615 n. 60, 1197 n. 21 ὑπόμνημα 53
ὑπομονή 739, 1674
ὑποστρέφω 161 n. 29, 1402, 1532–33, 1865
ὑπωπιάζω 1449

ὑστέρημα 1646
ὕψιστος 113, 121, 124, 187, 220

φθάνω 1000, 1079–80
φιλέω 1767–68
φοβέομαι 152–53
φόβος 81, 653
φόρος 1611, 1811
φορτίον 1118
φραγμός 1276
φρόνιμος 1341 n. 37
φρονίμως 1332, 1341
φυλακή 1175
φυλάσσω 1480 n. 8
φωνή 1401 n. 5
φῶς 244, 745

χαῖρε 109
χαίρω 83
χαρά 83, 1946 n. 27
χαρίζομαι 667, 699
χάρις 111, 128–29, 274, 414, 598, 599, 603, 667 χείρ 1862
χιτών 309–10, 592–93
Χουζᾶς 713–14

χρηστός 587, 603, 605
χριστός 124, 217, 218, 228, 319, 439, 841–42, 843, 1795, 1811, 1893 χριστὸς κύριος 217–18, 227 χρίω 407
χρόνος 1198, 1682
χωλός 480 n. 27, 1266 n. 12
χώρα 768

ψευδοπροφήτης 585–86
ψηλαφάω 1933 n. 9
ψηφίζω 1287 n. 11
ψυχαγωγία 53
ψυχή 148, 248, 804, 854 n. 3, 855, 1152, 1435–36

ὥρα 667, 1718 n. 4; see also ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ ὡσεί 1858 n. 24

Index of Scripture and Other Ancient Writings

Old Testament Pseudepigrapha
New Testament Apocrypha
Mishnah
Tosepta
Babylonian Talmud
Jerusalem (Palestinian) Talmud
Targumim
Midrashim
Other Rabbinic Writings
Qumran / Dead Sea Scrolls
Papyri
Josephus
Philo
Classical Writers
Church Fathers
Miscellanea

Old Testament Pseudepigrapha

Ahiqar (Syriac)

8.35 1208 n. 12, 1210 n. 17

Apocalypse of Abraham

13.3–7 733
29.2 918

2 (Syriac) Baruch

9.2 516
10.6–7 572
10.6–10 1846 n. 6
12.5 516
21.4 121
21.11 1234 n. 8
22.1 334 n. 5
27.1 918
29.4 1239 n. 19
29.7 465
29.8 1272 n. 3
37.1 1192 n. 6
41.3–4 1249
44.7 238
44.15 1234 n. 8
46.7 972
48.23 1234 n. 8
48.39 323 n. 8, 1192 n. 6
48.45–50 1234 n. 8
51 867 n. 9

51.1–6 1234 n. 8
51.5–6 1369
51.10 1623
52.5–7 581
53 872
53–74 1414
53.6 918
53.8–9 1429
54–74 1429
54.10 1094 n. 7
70 1682
70.6 1195 n. 15, 1196 n. 18
72.2 1682
73 117
76.3 374
77.15 1354 n. 21
85.1 181

1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

2.1–5.4 1160
5.4 735 n. 40
5.7 583
5.8–9 465
9.3 113
10.1 113

10.4–6 775
10.6 323 n. 8
10.12 1543
10.13 1137 n. 7
10.13–14 1371
10.16 1591
13.5 1464 n. 11
15.6 1623
15.6–9 1616 n. 1
17–19 1857
18.11–12 1373
18.11–16 775, 1137 n. 7
18.15 1192 n. 6
19.1 430 n. 12
20 92 n. 51
22 1369, 1370 n. 22
22.1–14 804 n. 32
22.8–10 1373
22.9 1371
22.10–11 1368 n. 18
24–25 1573 n. 3
25.3 374
25.5 1272 n. 3
27.1–3 1137 n. 7
32.3 1857

37–71 1685
37.4 1476
38.4 867 n. 9
39 1369
39.4 1333 n. 20
39.4–8 804 n. 32
39.6 1852
40.9 92 n. 51, 1476
40.5 1852
41–44 1121
42 684 n. 36, 1249 n. 12
45.3–4 1852
46–48 924 n. 3
46.3–7 924 n. 3
46.7 113
47 1122
47.3 1008 n. 47
48.4–10 924 n. 3
49.1 117
49.1–3 1098 n. 13
49.2 1852
51.4 1623
51.3 1799 n. 26
51.3–5 1852
54.6 323 n. 8

55.4 1007 n. 40
56.3 772 n. 13
58.3 1476
60.1 113
60.22 113
60.8 1857
61.12 1857
61.8 1799 n. 26
62 1741
62–71 924 n. 3
62.3–9 924 n. 3
62.8 723, 732 n. 36, 1695
62.11 603
62.13 1695
62.14 117, 924 n. 3, 1239 n. 19, 1272
63.10 1334, 1371
63.11 924 n. 3, 1195 n. 15
69.27–29 924 n. 3
72.1 1692
77.4–5 374
80 1682
84.4–6 304 n. 11
84.6 1591
87.3 374
89–90 1573 n. 3

89.10 1247
89.14 996 n. 19
89.18–20 996 n. 19
89.42–43 1367 n. 14
89.42–49 1247
89.47 1367 n. 14
89.49 1367 n. 14
89.55 996 n. 19, 1247
89.73–90.29 1576 n. 6
90.6–17 996 n. 19
90.8–13 733
90.24–27 323 n. 8
90.26 1137 n. 7
90.28–40 1573 n. 3
91 1414
91.10 1623, 1629
91.12 1195 n. 15
91.16 1692
92.3 1623, 1629
93 1414
93.3–10 918 n. 2
93.5 1591 n. 2
96.3 465
97.8–10 1150 n. 7, 1151 n. 8, 1152 n. 11
98.3 1207

98.16 1207
99.1–16 583
99.4 1666
99.5 1196 n. 18
99.9 1207
99.10–15 572
100.1–2 1195 n. 15, 1196 n. 18
100.2 1666
100.2 1885 n. 5
102.1 1192 n. 6
102.4–5 1369
102.7 1233 n. 6
102.9–10 1349 n. 7
103 1207
103.3–4 1623, 1629
103.5 572
103.5–8 1368 n. 18
103.7–8 1238 n. 14
104.1 1008 n. 47
104.2 867 n. 9
104.4–6 1623
104.6 1694
104.6 1832
108 1361
108.5–14 1238 n. 14

108.7 1008 n. 47
108.7–9 516
108.11 1332

2 (Slavonic) Enoch

33.12 1120 n. 22
35.2 1120 n. 22
45.2 1239 n. 19
50.5 1166 n. 8
61.2 597
65.10 1857

3 (Hebrew) Enoch

17.8 1015
18.2–3 1015
30.2 1015

Joseph and Asenath

13.2 1481
15 1226 n. 9
15.11 697

Jubilees

1.15–17 1573 n. 3
1.16 1591
1.23 289

1.24–25 603
2.19 523
3.30–31 1850
5.6–7 775
5.13–14 1008 n. 47
7.26 77 n. 15
7.20 1850
9.15 323 n. 8, 1137 n. 7, 1192 n. 6
10.1 773 n. 14
10.5 430 n. 12
10.5–9 433 n. 18
10.8 1007 n. 42, 1074 n. 11
10.11 1704 n. 5
11.4 773 n. 14
11.11 724 n. 12
11.11–13 733
11.15 167 n. 6
11.24 724 n. 12
12.20 773 n. 14
15.34 304 n. 11
16.18 113
22.10–24 305
23.16 1195
23.19 1195, 1196 n. 18
23.26–30 465

23.29 1007 n. 40
23.31 1629
23.32 1008 n. 47
30.5–6 969 n. 7
30.8–9 1357 n. 23
30.19–23 1008 n. 47
30.23 969 n. 7
33.9 1357 n. 23
36.4–8 1026
36.10 323 n. 8, 1192 n. 6
49 1710
49.1 1952, 1958 n. 6
49.12 1952
49.15–16 1708
49.19 1958 n. 6
50.3 523
50.8–13 523
50.10 516
50.12 516

Letter of Aristeas

1 52
1–8 52
6 52
8 53

46–50 1015
95 100
116 1274
207 596
322 53

Life of Adam and Eve

13.1 1704 n. 5

Martyrdom and Ascension of Isaiah

in toto 1839
3.11 1704 n. 5
5.1 1704 n. 5
5.1–14 1248 n. 9
5.14 1850 n. 15

Odes of Solomon

24.1–2 338
28.2 135 n. 5
38.17–21 995 n. 16

Pseudo-Philo

Biblical Antiquities

8–9 104 n. 6
11–12 539 n. 5
15 539 n. 5

32.9 972
42 104 n. 6
60.1 1508

Sibylline Oracles

3.316 249
3.796–807 1007 n. 40
4.27–28 168 n. 7

Testament of Abraham (version A)

8.10 455 n. 15
14.11 323 n. 8
15–20 972
20.11–12 1368 n. 15
20.13–14 1368 n. 17

Testament of Asher

2.5 1462
4.1 1476
6.4–6 1368 n. 15
7.3 173 n. 3, 178, 1007 n. 42

Testament of Benjamin

3.3 1026, 1742
4.3 590
4.2 1850 n. 14

5.2 430 n. 12, 773 n. 14
6.4–5 614
6.1 1704 n. 5
9.3 1860 n. 29

Testament of Dan

1.4 1476
2.4 455 n. 15
5.3 1026
5.10–11 1007 n. 42
5.1 1704 n. 5
5.12 1857
5.6 1704 n. 5
6.3–4 1007 n. 42

Testament of Gad

6.3–4 1388, 1389
6.7 1389

Testament of Issachar

3.4 1101 n. 16
4.6 1101 n. 16
5.1 1480 n. 8
5.1–2 1026
7.6 1036

Testament of Job

27.3–5 367 n. 8
33.3 1638
39.12 972
47.11 1368 n. 15
52.2 1368 n. 15
52.5 1368 n. 15

Testament of Joseph

3.4–5 516
3.9 1312
4.8 516
7.4 565
8.1 1885 n. 5
10.1 516
18.2 590

Testament of Judah

2.1 794 n. 15
9.7 1289 n. 19, 1293
13.1 77 n. 16
18–19 1150 n. 7
20 1093
23.3 1667
23.5 173 n. 3

24.1 192
24.6 192
25.3 1007 n. 40
26.1 1480 n. 8
26.3 651 n. 10

Testament of Levi

2.2 1448
2.6–8 337 n. 10
2.11 218
4.1 1682
4.3–4 192 n. 42
4.4 173 n. 3, 178, 191 n. 38
6.2 223
7.2 969 n. 7
8.3 1638
8.15 187
10.3 1860 n. 29
14.4 77 n. 16
16.3 113, 122 n. 41
17–18 84 n. 40
18 772 n. 13, 1008 n. 44, 1638 n. 13
18.1–3 1638
18.3 192 n. 42
18.4 1429

18.5 173
18.6–7 334 n. 5, 337 n. 10
18.8 152, 1638
18.12 1007 n. 42, 1082, 1638
18.10–11 1857

Testament of Moses

6.1 187 n. 31
6.2 173
7.3 1349 n. 7
7.4 1117
7.6 1643
7.7–9 1113
9.6 1677
9.6–7 1122
10.1 431, 1007 n. 42
10.1–3 1007 n. 40
10.3 603
10.3–4 292
10.5 1682
10.11–12 772 n. 13
10.12 972

Testament of Naphtali

3.4–5 1431 n. 15
4.5 191 n. 38

6 757
7.4 1920 n. 25
8.2 192 n. 42

Testament of Naphtali (Hebrew version)

1.6 596, 1036
10.9 1101

Testament of Reuben

1.6 77 n. 15
2–3 1093
3.1–8 1093
3.13 226
4.1 77 n. 15
7.2 652 n. 11

Testament of Simeon

4.4 1476
4.9 773 n. 14
5.2 193 n. 44
6.5 218
6.6 773 n. 14, 1007 n. 40, 1082 n. 30
7.1–2 192 n. 42

Testament of Solomon

5.11 776

11.6 776
18.20 437
18.23 437
20.16–17 1006 n. 38
22.4 1451

Testament of Zebulun

5.1 1036
6.6 1490
7.2–3 173 n. 3
8.2 173 n. 3
9.8 431, 1007 n. 42, 1082 n. 30

New Testament Apocrypha

Acts of John

90–91 862

Acts of Paul

2 647
3 647
4 1256 n. 5
5–6 549 n. 1
7 647

Acts of Peter

20 862
32 380, 381 n. 31
37–38 1672, 1743 n. 23

Acts of Philip

60 862

Acts of Pilate

1.7 786 n. 2
8 1848 n. 11
9 1848 n. 11
10.2 1856 n. 21
16.2 238 n. 13
16.6 238 n. 13, 1929
B.11.2 1863

Acts of Thomas

30–33 647
32 1817
51–54 647

Apocalypse of Paul

14 1368

Apocalypse of Peter

15–17 862

Arabic Infancy Gospel

23 1848 n. 11
50–52 267

Gospel of Peter

1–3 1817
2.3 1873
2.5 1876 n. 8
5.15 1858
6.21 1874
6.24 1875, 1877
8.31 1877
9.34–35 1876 n. 8
9.35–10.42 1880 n. 4
9.36–37 1877
10.39 1877
11.45 1877
12.50 1929, 1885 n. 5
13.55 1877
13.55–56 1929
13.56 1899
14.60 501

Gospel of Pseudo-Matthew

13 206

15.2 238

Gospel of the Nazareans

18 1525

Gospel of Thomas

2 1048
3 536, 1410
4 1232, 1240 n. 20
5–6 746 n. 5
5.2 1130
6.4 1130
6.5 1130
9 718, 741
10 1189 n. 2, 1192 n. 9
13 838 n. 2
14 536
14.4 988, 811 n. 6
16 1189 n. 2, 1192 n. 9
20 1222 n. 3
21 1171
22 1467 n. 1
31 416 n. 38
33 744, 1099 n. 14
34 611
35 1071, 1083

36 1157, 1158
44–45 1130, 1142
45b–c 618
45a 616 n. 61
46.1 676, 675 n. 19
47b–c 504, 504 n. 4
47 510 n. 9, 1324 n. 2, 1325, 1337
54 549 n. 1
55 850 n. 1, 1281 n. 1
63 1147 n. 3
64 1270, 1274, 1361
64–65 1269
65 1592, 1593, 1600 n. 7
67 850 n. 1
68–69 549 n. 1
72 1147 n. 3
73 995 n. 18
76 1168
76.3 1157
78 659
79 1094, 1836, 1094 n. 7
82 1192 n. 9
86 975, 979 n. 3
91 1197
92 1048

94 1048
96–97 1222 n. 3
98 1281 n. 1
99 749, 1087
100 1607
101 1281 n. 1
104 504
107 1296, 1296 n. 3
113 1410

Infancy Story of Thomas

2 261 n. 7
19.2 267

Protevangelium of James

1–5 919 n. 4
4–10 206 n. 18
7.3 794 n. 15
8 76
10.1 107
17.3–18.1 206
18 208
19–20 130, 206 n. 18
24.3–4 238

Pseudo-Clement

Homilies

2.6.1 697 n. 11
3.11.2 697 n. 11
3.13.1–2 697 n. 11
3.47 972
3.63 1517

Recognitions

10.71 63

Mishnah

ʿAboda Zara

2.3 1033 n. 21
2.5 1024 n. 6

ʾAbot

1.3 1266, 1383, 1394
1.4 1040
1.5 711, 1266, 1266 n. 13
1.6 606
1.13 999 n. 26
2.4–5 1461
2.5 606
2.7 1023
2.8 1042, 1094 n. 7, 1383, 1394

2.15 995 n. 18
3.2 1042, 1705
3.7 1335 n. 27
3.8 984
3.11 895
3.17 1239 n. 19
4.2 1536
4.5 999 n. 26
4.15 998
4.16 1023
4.20 521
5.1–5 1533
5.19 1023, 1522
5.21 264, 1480 n. 9
6.3 1478 n. 5
6.5–6 268 n. 17

Baba› Batra›

1.6 1274
2.11 1391 n. 14
3.1 1594 n. 5
8–9 1149, 1310
8.7 1310

Baba› Meși‹a›

1.8 660

3.10–11 1538
5.1 1331

Baba› Qamma›

5.6 1258 n. 9
7.7 213, 1744 n. 25
10.1–2 1521
10.2 311 n. 29

Berakot

1.5 1427
2 403
3.1 651, 979 n. 6
3.1–2 649 n. 7
3.3 1215 n. 4
5.5 542, 896 n. 6, 1005 n. 37
6–8 1262
6.1 833, 1724 n. 16
6.6 694 n. 4
8.2 1262
8.8 1723
9.5 816 n. 14

Dema›i

2.1 1116
2.2–3 495 n. 13

2.3 1117 n. 20, 1299

ʿEduyyot

2.5 528
5.6 1112
8.4 1030
8.7 660

ʿErubin

2.1–4 1218, 1258

Giṭṭin

9.10 1356

Ḥagiga

1.1 264
1.8 523
2.7 1299

Ketubot

3.9 1520
4.4 651 n. 10
4.4–5 107 n. 10
7.6 695 n. 6

Kil›ayim

3.2 1225 n. 8

4–6 1594 n. 5

Maʿaśerot

4.5 1116

Maʿaśer Šeni

5.2 264 n. 12

Megilla

2.4 403 n. 18
3–4 403
3.4 403 n. 18
4.1–2 403, 403 n. 18
4.1–5 403
4.3 403 n. 19, 651 n. 10
4.4 403 n. 18
4.6 264, 403 n. 18, 1480 n. 9
4.10 403, 403 n. 18

Middot

5.4 1793

Moʿed Qaṭan

1.6 651
3.5 651
3.7–9 651

Nazir

6.5 1030
7.1 1030

Nedarim

3.4 311 n. 29, 1521
5.5 1594

Negaʿim

3.1 474
11.1 474
12.1 474
13.6–12 474
14 476

Nidda

1.3–5 236
2.5 236
5.1 236
5.2 1225 n. 7
5.6 264, 1480 n. 9

ʾOholot

2.2 1875
7.6 86 n. 47
18.7 640

Pe›a

1.1 979 n. 6, 1166 n. 8
4.1–2 1300 n. 12
8.7 523, 1228 n. 11

Pesaḥim

4.5 1959
5.1 79 n. 26
5.10 1952
7.12–13 1952
8.6 1953
9.5 1955 n. 3
10 1722
10.1 1718, 1952
10.1–3 1952
10.2 1953
10.5 1952
10.7 1953
10.9 1954

Ro›š Haššana

1.1 912
1.3 542
4.9 542

Šabbat

1.2 1718
4.1–2 1256
5 1218, 1258
6.3 528
6.4 1749
6.10 1831
7.1 1185 n. 26
7.2 523, 723, 724 n. 12, 1217
8.1 1877
12.1 528
14.4 1033
15.2 1218, 1258
16.2 1111 n. 10
18.2 1258 n. 9
18.3 528, 1253
19.2 528, 1033
19.5 166 n. 5, 528
23.4–5 651
23.5 651, 1877

Sanhedrin

1.1 1447
1.5–6 1015
1.6 1794 n. 18
3.1 1447

4.1 1792, 1794
4.2 1792
5.2 1792
6.4 1798
6.5 651, 1122
7.2 1808 n. 3
7.5 483, 1792, 1798
9.6 1573 n. 3
10 1302
10.1 1234
10.3 1002 n. 32, 1431 n. 15
11.1 1248 n. 10
11.2 1792, 1793

Šebi‘it

8.10 1031
9.1 1116, 1116 n. 19

Šeqalim

1.3 1572
2.1 1572, 1645
2.4 1572
2.5 660
3.1 1576
6.1 1645
6.5 1645

7.4 213, 227

Soṭa

1.7 606, 608
2.6 1357 n. 23
3.4 711, 1037 n. 2
5.1 1357 n. 23
8.1–6 1273 n. 7
9.9 1196 n. 18
9.15 474 n. 17, 1195

Sukka

1 871
2.9 871
3.9 678, 871 n. 17, 1250 n. 15, 1549
4.5 871 n. 17, 1549, 1908
4.8 871 n. 17
5.5 1958

Tamid

1.2 79 n. 24
3.1 79 n. 24
5.1 1462
5.2 79 n. 24
5.2–6.3 79
5.4–6.3 94 n. 57

6–7 79
6.1 95
6.2 95
6.3 80, 95
7.2 94 n. 57, 94 n. 58

Ṭoharot

7.6 311 n. 29, 1521

Yadayim

1 1111
3.5 1015
4.2 1015

Yebamot

16.7 679

Yoma›

1.1 1793–94
1.5 542
2.1 1705
2.2–4 79 n. 24
2.9 1705
5.1 94
8.6 528, 529

Zabim

2.4 793
4.1 793
5.7 793

Zebaḥim

1.3 1015
5.8 1954

Tosepta

Baba› Qamma›

6.20 1300

Berakot

1.12 1164
5.9 1723
5.26 1112 n. 12
6.18 711, 1461

Dema›i

2.11–12 1112 n. 11
3.4–9 495 n. 13

Ḥullin

2.20–21 579

Megilla

3.5 638
3.16 598 n. 48

Menaḥot

13.22 1349 n. 8

Negaʿim

6.2 651

Peʾa

4.17–21 1166 n. 8
4.18 1166 n. 8

Pesaḥim

2.22 1952

Sanhedrin

3 1137 n. 7
11.7 1793
13.3–4 1137
13.8 1002 n. 32
14.10 1302

Soṭa

5.9 696 n. 10
13.8 1164

Babylonian Talmud

‹Aboda Zara

15a 1274

‹Arakin

16b 615

Baba› Batra›

8a 694 n. 5
10a 1413
10b 1645
60b 1185 n. 26
174a 1033

Baba› Meṣi‹a›

38b 1486 n. 13
42a 1538
59b 606, 757
75b 1310

Baba› Qamma›

79b–80a 226
82b 651, 1311 n. 14
94b 1521

Bekorot

8b 1291 n. 25

Berakot

5a 1478 n. 5, 1862
7b 1480
17a 1463 n. 7
18a 979 n. 6
24b 1462
25a 1256
28b 1023, 1461, 1463 n. 7, 1623 n. 6
31a 1225 n. 7, 1462
31b 694, 694 n. 5
35a 1597, 1724 n. 16
40b 1053
41b 694 n. 5
51a 1623 n. 6
55b 1486 n. 13
60b 1056
61b 1480
63b 854 n. 3

Beṣa

32b 1367
40a 226

Giṭṭin

52a 1091 n. 4
52a–b 1643
56a 1463 n. 9
57b 1368 n. 16
68b 1480
90a 1356

Ḥagiga

14a 924 n. 3
15a 339 n. 16

Ḥullin

105a 1112 n. 11
105b 1091 n. 4

Ketubot

17a 649 n. 7
50a 264, 1482, 1520
63a 1468 n. 3
67b 1538

Megilla

14a 251
31a–b 403

Menaḥot

95b 524 n. 27

Nazir

43b 1030
48b 1030

Nedarim

32b 1639
41a 484, 484 n. 34, 929 n. 11

Nidda

70b 1620 n. 4

Pesaḥim

68a 647
93b 483
99b 1713
107b 1718

Qiddušin

18b 122
70a 110
72a 1368 n. 16

Roš Haššana

3a–b 912
8a 912

Šabbat

13b 1033 n. 21
17b 1033 n. 21
31a 596, 1036
33a 1256
88b 1015
118b 1413 n. 5
127a 896 n. 7
127b 606
128a–b 523
128b 1253, 1258 n. 9
152a 997

Sanhedrin

4b 1447
25a–b 311 n. 29
25b 213
38b 1685, 1686 n. 39, 1798
43a 1701, 1703, 1843, 1844
57a 1030, 1031
88b 267
89a 1793
90b 1619
91b 1619
96b 924 n. 3

97a 1413
98a 924 n. 3, 1685
99b 1413
101a 1461, 1480
106b 352

Šeqalim

3–4 1645

Soṭa

7b 1023
22b 1109
48b 1164

Sukka

45b 1461, 1463 n. 7

Ta‹anit

2a 647
7b 1284 n. 6
12a 1463 n. 9
16a 1003
20a 670 n. 13
24b 1476, 1478 n. 5

Tamid

32a 854 n. 3

Yoma›

86a 1302

Jerusalem (Palestinian) Talmud

Berakot

4b (2.1) 1117, 1642
5a (2.4) 238
7d (4.2) 1463 n. 7
11d (7.6) 1623 n. 6
12a (8.2–3) 1112 n. 11
13b (9.1) 757, 1450

Beṣa

63b (5.8) 226

Giṭṭin

50d (9.11) 696 n. 10

Ḥagiga

77d (2.2) 919 n. 4, 1362, 1371

Sanhedrin

23c (6.6) 919 n. 4, 1275 n. 12

Šebiʿit

38d (9.1) 1138

Soṭa

20c (5.4) 135 n. 5

Taʿanit

65b (2.1) 924 n. 3

Terumot

40b (1.1) 766, 771

Targumim

Fragmentary Targum

Genesis

27:40 1194
49:25 1094 n. 7

Exodus

12:42 1413 n. 7
15:2 270

Targum Neofiti 1

Genesis

4:14 926 n. 7

49:25 1094 n. 7

Leviticus

23:43 873

Targum Onqelos

Genesis

13:13 495 n. 13

Targum Pseudo-Jonathan

Genesis

3:6 1007 n. 40
6:4 1007 n. 40
35:21 226
49:25 1094 n. 7

Leviticus

19:18 597
22:28 604

Numbers

25:12 407 n. 27

Targumim on the Writings and Prophets

2 Samuel

3:21 1313 n. 20

1 Chronicles

3:24 1685

Job

4:12 1413 n. 6

Psalms

2:7 342
68:27 135 n. 5
102:27 1692
118:24 1603 n. 10
121:6 881

Ecclesiastes

10:7–8 1121

Song of Solomon

2:12 339 n. 14
4:12 1368 n. 15
4:16 80

Isaiah

28:16 1603 n. 10
31:4–5 1531
51:1 305 n. 15
61:1 406 n. 22

Jeremiah

27:6–8 1685

Lamentations

2:20 1121, 1124 n. 28

Micah

4:8 226

Habakkuk

2:11 1560 n. 16

Zechariah

12:12 920

Midrashim

Aggadat Bereshit

4.3 924 n. 3
23.1 924 n. 3
69.1 669 n. 11

Leqaḥ Tob

Numbers

24:17 (2.129b, 130a) 290 n. 15

Mekilta de Rabbi Ishmael

Amalek

3.55–57 on Exod. 18:1 1299
4.5 on Exod. 18:13 1718

Baḥodesh

3 on Exod. 19:17 516 n. 15
5.1–11 on Exod. 20:2 1335 n. 27
9 on Exod. 20:21 1350 n. 11

Nezikin

1 on Exod. 21:2 321
11 on Exod. 21:35 1035–36

Pisḥa

8 on Exod. 12:15 1710
14 on Exod. 12:42 1413 n. 7

Shabbata

1 on Exod. 31:13 526, 528

Shirata

3 on Exod. 15:2 516 n. 15, 604

Midrash ha-Gadol

Genesis

49:10 924 n. 3

Deuteronomy

29:10 1215 n. 4

Midrash Psalms

1.2 on 1:1 1799
4.3 on 4:1 1450
18.29 on 18:35 1799
23.2 on 23:1 213
55.2 on 55:17 1450
73.4 on 73:10 1560 n. 16
91.8 on 91:13 1007 n. 42, 1008 n. 44
108.1 on 108:1 1799
110.1 on 110:1 1799
110.1–4 on 110:1 1639
118.19–20 on 118:21–22 1250 n. 15

Midrash Rabbah

Genesis Rabbah

2.4 on 1:2 339
23.4 on 4:23 416 n. 38
27 on 6:5–6 1431 n. 15
38.14 on 11:29–30 78 n. 20
56.3 on 22:6 853
65.22 on 27:27 1848 n. 10
81.3 on 35:2 969 n. 7

86.4 on 39:2 1301 n. 14
96.2 on 47:30 802
98.12 on 49:15 649

Exodus Rabbah

2.2 on 3:1 1335 n. 27
14.2 on 10:22 1238 n. 14
15.30 on 12:2 1011 n. 53
19.5 on 12:43–44 1204 n. 5
25.7 on 16:4 1272 n. 3
26.2 on 17:8 590
32.9 on 23:20–21 674 n. 18
38.8 on 29:1 1365 n. 9

Leviticus Rabbah

1.5 on 1:1 1262 n. 3, 1265 n. 9, 1265 n. 10
1.14 on 1:1 292
3.5 on 1:7 1647
10.4 on 8:2 647
15.2 on 13:2 1256 n. 6
16.2 on 14:2 1023
21.8 on 16:3 697 n. 11
25.6 on 19:23 1639
27.1 on 22:27 1238 n. 14
29.3 on 23:24 608
31 on 24:2 1225 n. 7

35.6 on 26:3 1311 n. 15

Numbers Rabbah

13.14 on 7:12–13 924 n. 3
16.21 on 14:2 1539

Deuteronomy Rabbah

3.12 on 10:1 516 n. 15
3.17 on 10:1 869 n. 12

Ruth Rabbah

6.1 on 3:8 1933

Esther Rabbah

7.10 on 3:6 1604, 1605

Ecclesiastes Rabbah

1.15.1 on 1:15 1371
7.2.5 on 7:2 1464 n. 11

Song of Songs Rabbah

1.1.9 on 1:1 1303 n. 24
2.15.1 on 2:15 1247
7.3.3 on 7:3 325, 726 n. 15

Lamentations Rabbah

1.23 on 1:2 290 n. 15

1.34 on 1:7 1312 n. 17
1.51 on 1:16 226 n. 29
3.9 on 3:49–50 407 n. 27
4.2 on 4:2 1272

Midrash Samuel

5 §9 (31a) 1030 n. 16

Pesikta Rabbati

15.22 669 n. 11
23.4 166 n. 5
29/30A 292
29/30B 292
29/30B.4 290 n. 15
30 292
33 292
36.2 379 n. 26
37.2 1094 n. 7
43.4 1368 n. 16
44.9 1302

Sipra

200 on Lev. 19:18 1036
227 on Lev. 22:29–33 367 n. 7, 1008 n. 44

Sipre Deuteronomy

49 on 11:22 604
306.1 on 32:1 1160
307.3 on 32:4 1857
308.2 on 32:4 1844
357 on 34:5 972

Sipre Numbers

103 on 12:8 1238
112 on 15:31 483
117 on 18:8 1302

Tanḥuma (Buber) Toledot

70b (6.20) 924 n. 3

Tanḥuma (Vilnius-Grodno) Toledot

5 996

Yalqut ha-Makhiri

Isaiah

61:1 407 n. 27

Other Rabbinic Writings

ʿAbot de Rabbi Nathan

A.2 579
A.16 1210 n. 17

A.24 622
A.25 1265 n. 9
A.35 651
B.39 651

Alphabet of Rabbi Akiva

in toto 1015

Derek ›ereṣ Rabbah

11.13 1413 n. 5

Derek ›ereṣ Zuṭṭa

5 1076 n. 15

Pirqe de Rabbi Eliezer

14 1007 n. 40
22 1007 n. 40
32 647
41 516 n. 15
48 166 n. 4

Ṣemaḥot

1 651
1.4 651
8–11 649 n. 7
12.5 651 n. 10

Shemoneh Esreh (Eighteen Benedictions)

1 1629
3 1052 n. 16
4–6 1051 n. 13
7 182, 1053
9 1054
10 182, 1084 n. 35
11 1053
12 182
14 1634
17 220 n. 19
18 1054

Qumran / Dead Sea Scrolls

1Q14 (Pesher on Micah; 1QpMic)

20–21 1196 n. 18

1Q28a (Rule of the Congregation; Rule Annex; 1QSa)

1.14–15 831
2.1 831
2.3–10 1266, 1276
2.11 124
2.11–22 1239 n. 19

1Q28b (Benedictions; Book/Collection of Blessings; 1QSb)

4.22 1465 n. 13
4.24–28 1623

1QapGen (Genesis Apocryphon)

2.3 359
2.19 359
2.20 359
5.4 359
5.10 359
5.25–26 359
6 359
6.6 1431 n. 15
12.17 113
20.6–7 137
20.10–11 1719
20.11–22.11 1433
20.12 113
20.16 113
20.17 1215 n. 5
20.21–29 1215 n. 5
20.28–29 433 n. 18, 438
20.29 1077 n. 18
20.31 1365 n. 9

22.16 1009
22.21 1009

1QH (Thanksgiving Hymns/Psalms; Hôdāyôt)

1.21 257
1.35 1010
1.36 574
2.8–10 246
2.9 1010
2.11–14 1193 n. 11
2.15 1133
2.20 1009, 1462 n. 5
2.31 1009, 1462 n. 5
2.32 1133
2.32–33 1193 n. 11
2.34 574, 1133
3.12–17 303
3.19 1009, 1462 n. 5
3.21–23 1623
3.28–31 323 n. 8
3.37 1009, 1462 n. 5
4.5 1462 n. 5
4.11 1853
4.21–22 1695
4.32–33 220 n. 19

5.12 243
5.13–14 574
5.16 323 n. 9
5.20 178
6.13 1623
6.18–19 323 n. 8
6.33 122 n. 41
7.6–7 122 n. 41
7.26–27 1010
7.34 1461
8.4–11 995 n. 16
8.20 1192 n. 6
9.28–29 180
9.32–36 191
9.34–36 752
10.14 178
11.9 220 n. 19
11.15–22 1464 n. 12
13.14 675 n. 19
18.12–13 675 n. 19
18.14–15 407 n. 26, 669 n. 11
18.16 675 n. 19
18.23–24 675 n. 19

1QM (War Scroll; Milḥāmâ)

1.11 1797 n. 23
1.14 1797 n. 23
2.5–6 1573 n. 3
3.9 730 n. 29
4.4 1797 n. 23
4.12 1797 n. 23
6.2 1797 n. 23
6.6 1797 n. 23
7.4 1266
7.10 1573 n. 3
10.5 1797 n. 23
11.5–6 182
11.6 192 n. 42
11.7 407 n. 26
12.2 1008 n. 47
13.4 1074 n. 11
14.4 178
14.4–10 182
14.10 433 n. 18
14.10–11 157, 246
16.9 730 n. 29
16.14 730 n. 29
17.9 730 n. 29
17.17 730 n. 29
18.6–11 182

1QpHab (Pesher on Habakkuk)

2.7 1691 n. 46
7.2 1691 n. 46
7.8 730 n. 29
9.5–7 1550, 1562
12.4 1010

1QS (Manual of Discipline; Rule/Order of the Community)

1.3 1375 n. 33, 1917
1.9 1332
1.10 588 n. 37, 1035
1.10–11 1183 n. 24
1.18 1074 n. 11, 1704 n. 5
1.22 191 n. 38
1.24 1074 n. 11, 1704 n. 5
2.1 191 n. 38
2.1–26 333
2.4–9 588 n. 37
2.8 323 n. 8
2.15 323 n. 8
2.16 1183 n. 24, 1332
2.19 1704 n. 5
2.21–22 831
3.1–9 297 n. 18

3.13–4.25 1704 n. 5
3.16–4.26 1093
3.19–25 1101
3.23 730 n. 29, 1074 n. 11
4.2 1100 n. 15
4.7 1476
4.13 323 n. 8
4.18–19 1680 n. 33
4.20–21 322
4.21–22 239 n. 18
5.8–23 333
5.12 1184
5.13 297 n. 19
5.13–14 297 n. 18
5.17 290
6.2 1333
6.24–25 1183 n. 24
7.1–2 1183 n. 24
7.16 1183 n. 24
8.5–6 995 n. 16
8.12–15 297 n. 18
8.13–14 188
8.14 290
8.14–15 292
8.15–16 1375 n. 33

8.21–23 1183 n. 24
9.11 665, 1634 n. 4, 1638 n. 13
9.19–20 188, 290, 292
9.19–21 297, 297 n. 18
9.21–22 1035
9.21–23 588 n. 37
10.17–18 590
10.19 1334 n. 21
11.1–2 1461
11.3–5 1464 n. 12
11.10–12 1464 n. 12
11.21 675 n. 19

4Q161 (Commentary on Isaiah (A); 4QpIsa[a])

in toto 192 n. 42
2.5–6 1010

4Q169 (Pesher on Nahum; 4QpNah)

3–4 3.5 1010

4Q174 (Florilegium; 4QFlor)

in toto 343
1.1–12 1576 n. 6
1.8 1056 n. 25
1.10–11 114
1.11 117, 1508, 1595

1.11–13 1634
1.15 290

4Q175 (Testimonia; 4QTestim)

12 192 n. 42
15–16 1285 n. 7

4Q181

1.4 1476

4Q246 (4QpsDan ar[a]; formerly 4QpsDan A[a] or 4Q243)

in toto 924 n. 3
2.1 113–14

4Q372

in toto 1052 n. 14

4Q504 (Dibre Hammĕʾôrôt; “Paroles des Luminaires”; 4QDibHam[a])

3.12 1917

4QEnGiants[a] (Book of the Giants)

8.4 359

4QMess ar (Aramaic messianic text)

2.17 1047

4QMMT (Miqsāt Maʿăśê Tôrâ)

epilogue, line 10 1936

4QPBless (Patriarchal Blessings; formerly 4QpGen 49)

1.3–4 1508
3 665
4 1634

4QpPs^{a} (Pesher on Psalm 37; 4QpPs 37)

in toto 1573 n. 3

4QPrNab (Prayer of Nabonidus)

in toto 706 n. 26
1.4 928

11QMelch (Melchizedek text)

in toto 401, 407 n. 26, 839

11QPs^{a} (Psalms Scroll)

18 1121
18.2 1010
18.4 1010
27.2–11 1635

11QTemple^{a} (Temple Scroll)

3.8–13.7 1660
18.10–19.9 535
29.8–10 1573 n. 3
30.1–45.7 1660
48.17–49.4 476 n. 20
57.11–19 1357
61.12–14 567
64.6–13 1777 n. 5
64.10–13 853

11QtgJob (Targum to Job)

21.5 1207
24.8 1292 n. 27
29.3 1292 n. 27
34.4 1207

CD (Damascus Document)

1.7 178, 995 n. 16
1.18 1133
2.12 407 n. 26
2.13 608
3.20 1476
4.13 1704 n. 5
4.15–5.10 737
4.20–5.1 1357
4.20–5.10 1358

5.21–6.1 1375 n. 33
6.10–11 823
6.15 1334 n. 21
7.18–19 192 n. 42
8.8 1184
8.18 184
10.3 1184
10.10–13 297 n. 18
10.14–17 1876
11.5–6 1218
11.13–14 1217 n. 14
11.13–17 1258
12.15–18 1117 n. 20
13.4–7 1276
14.20 1333

Murabbaʿat Scrolls (Mur)

19.10 1520
24b–e 1594 n. 5
25 i 1 258

Papyri

Egerton

2 469, 1607

Fayûm

14.2 136

London

1245, line 9 1852

Oxyrhynchus

#1, logion 6 416 n. 38
#284, line 5 313
#285, line 13 313
#472, line 33 313 n. 32
#523, line 3 270
#654, lines 9–16 1410
#715, lines 13–15 1309 n. 7
#1021, line 5 202 n. 12
#1088, line 21 794
#1631 1594
#1679, line 16 1163 n. 4
#1689 1594
#1968 1594

Paris Magic Papyrus

3007–85 427 n. 10

Tebtunis

#43, line 26 313, 313 n. 32

#43, line 36 313, 313 n. 32
#315, line 19 1538 n. 16

Josephus

Against Apion

1.1 §1 12
1.1 §§1–5 52, 64
1.7 §§30–36 348 n. 1
1.10 §53 59 n. 21, 60 n. 22, 60 n. 24, 61 n. 29
1.10 §55 58 n. 14
1.18 §118 270
1.18 §119 1611
1.22 §179 256
1.23 §218 60 n. 22, 60 n. 24
2.4–5 §§41–54 1842
2.4 §43 638
2.8 §108 76 n. 9
2.17 §175 403 n. 18
2.21 §§185–87 848
2.24 §201 1037 n. 2
2.29 §211 1874
2.30 §216 1538 n. 17, 1616 n. 1

Antiquities

1 proem §§1–4 52

1.1.3 §37 1857
1.10.5 §193 1723
1.11.2 §196 1918 n. 17
1.18.5 §267 1215 n. 6
2.5.2 §64 795
2.5.3 §72 223
2.5.4 §77 1830 n. 10
2.9.6 §230 261 n. 6, 274
2.10.2 §250 622 n. 69
2.13.3 §286 1077 n. 18
2.15.1 §317 1959 n. 8
3.5.3 §§87–88 305
3.6.6 §143 1953
3.7.1 §151 1642
3.8.2 §195 1303
3.8.6 §205 696 n. 9
3.10.5 §249 1702, 1959 n. 8
3.11.3 §264 1215 n. 6, 1216 n. 8
3.12.1 §274 1215 n. 6
3.12.5 §290 872
3.14.4 §310 872
3.15.3 §321 1331 n. 15
4.4.4 §§69–75 1116 n. 18
4.6.9 §140 1580 n. 9
4.7.5 §174 1580 n. 9

4.8.1–48 §§176–322 1719 n. 7
4.8.15 §219 1896 n. 14
4.8.23 §§254–56 1620 n. 3
4.8.48 §326 972
5.3.2 §181 1611
5.9.3 §328 1604 n. 11
5.10.4 §348 261 n. 6
6.2.3 §30 1215 n. 6
6.5.4 §84 1286 n. 8
6.5.6 §92 190 n. 37, 706
6.7.4 §144 699
6.7.4 §148 1647
6.12.1 §§242–43 524 n. 27
6.12.2 §245 882
6.13.7 §303 1448
6.13.9 §311 540
6.14.8 §377 1844
7.3.2 §67 256
7.5.5 §114 1309 n. 7
7.8.2 §175 1274
7.10.5 §252 1464, 1865
7.11.6 §280 848 n. 7
7.13.3 §325 1215 n. 6
7.14.7 §§363–67 76 n. 9
8.2.5 §§42–45 767

8.2.5 §§42–49 1508 n. 11
8.2.5 §§45–49 427 n. 10, 434 n. 19, 1077 n. 18
8.2.5 §§46–49 767
8.2.9 §57 1331 n. 13
8.3.7 §90 1953
8.3.9 §96 1412
8.4.1 §100 871 n. 17
8.6.5–6 §§165–75 1098
8.8.1–2 §214 848 n. 7
8.8.1–2 §218 848 n. 7
8.13.2 §320 418 n. 41
8.13.7 §354 1286 n. 8
9.2.2 §28 972
9.4.4 §71 1228 n. 10
9.4.5 §85 1228 n. 10
9.6.2 §111 1557
9.10.2 §§208–14 1096 n. 9
10.3.1 §38 1248 n. 9
10.4.5 §71 1580 n. 9
10.5.2 §83 1448 n. 8
10.10.5 §213 1580 n. 9
11.4.2 §80 1642
11.4.7 §104 168
11.4.9 §§114–19 969
11.6.11 §261 1830 n. 10

11.6.11 §§266–67 1830 n. 10
11.8.6 §341 969
12.2.3 §28 1539 n. 18
12.3.3 §138 1794 n. 18
12.3.3 §142 1794
12.3.3 §143 311 n. 28
12.4.2–9 §§160–220 311 n. 25
12.4.3 §169 311 n. 28
12.4.5 §182 1611
12.4.7 §197 1274
12.5.5 §257 969
12.9.1 §357 1863
12.10.6 §413 823
13.1.3 §§12–13 1770
13.1.3 §15 1908
13.4.9 §127 1874
13.5.9 §171 478 n. 23
13.6.3 §194 1909
13.10.3 §282 81
13.10.3 §§282–83 95
13.10.6 §§293–98 478 n. 23
13.10.6 §294 1792
13.10.6 §§297–98 1616
13.10.6 §298 1349
13.13.5 §372 1205

13.14.2 §380 853, 1830 n. 10
13.16.1 §407 1739 n. 13
13.16.6 §§430–31 1037 n. 2
14.1.3 §10 167 n. 6
14.2.1 §21 1702, 1955 n. 3
14.3.1 §36 1811 n. 7
14.4.2 §63 1770
14.4.3 §65 79 n. 26
14.7.2 §114 1842
14.9 §§156–84 75 n. 7
14.9.3–5 §§167–84 1794
14.10.5–6 §§200–209 311, 311 n. 28
14.10.6 §§202–10 905 n. 9
14.10.6 §203 1611
14.10.20 §§241–43 905 n. 9
14.10.22 §255 1371 n. 23
14.12.3 §309 1859 n. 27
14.13.3 §330 283
14.14.1–4 §§370–85 1532
14.14.4–5 §§383–86 75
14.15.2 §403 1818 n. 3
14.15.10 §450 1609
14.16.1 §469 75
15.2.4 §21 1262 n. 3
15.4.1 §92 283

15.4.2–4 §§96–107 1505 n. 4
15.5.1 §110 1385
15.7.5 §235 1820 n. 7
15.8.1 §272 1853 n. 19
15.9.2 §314 1331 n. 15
15.10.5 §373 1811 n. 7, 1811 n. 8
15.11 §§380–425 1660
15.11.3 §392 1661
15.11.5 §§411–12 379
15.11.5 §417 1405
16.4.6 §135 1163 n. 4
16.6.1 §160 1842
16.6.2 §§162–65 638
16.6.2 §163 772 n. 11, 1876
16.6.5 §169 1842
16.10.1 §302 270
16.10.2 §311 1811 n. 7
17.2.2 §§27–28 283 n. 5
17.2.4 §§41–44 710
17.2.4–3.1 §§41–51 478 n. 23
17.4.2–3 §§78–80 283 n. 5
17.5.7 §136 310
17.6.4 §167 904
17.6.5 §§168–70 1256 n. 5
17.8.1 §188 283 n. 5, 1526

17.8.1 §189 283 n. 5
17.8.1–3 §§191–99 75
17.8.3 §§198–99 313, 635
17.8.3 §199 1875
17.8.4 §205 311 n. 27
17.9.3 §213 263 n. 10, 904, 1702, 1955 n. 3
17.9.3 §§213–14 263 n. 8
17.9.3 §§213–18 1205, 1534
17.9.3 §222 1526
17.10.7 §282 1908
17.10.9 §291 1908
17.10.10 §295 853, 1830 n. 10
17.11.1 §300 542, 1534
17.11.4 §317 1526
17.11.4 §318 283 n. 5
17.11.4 §319 283 n. 5, 906 n. 13
17.13.1 §339 1535
17.13.2 §§342–44 903
17.13.5 §355 903, 904
18.1.1 §§1–2 904
18.1.1 §§1–10 545, 903, 1607
18.1.1 §§2–4 908
18.1.1 §§3–4 906 n. 14
18.1.1 §4 828 n. 6
18.1.2 §11 478 n. 23

18.1.3 §14 1267, 1370, 1616 n. 1
18.1.4 §16 1616
18.1.5 §18 1616 n. 1
18.1.6 §23 828 n. 6
18.1.6 §§23–25 545
18.2.1 §26 284 n. 7
18.2.1 §28 454
18.2.2 §32 911 n. 2
18.2.2 §§33–35 284 n. 7
18.2.2 §35 493 n. 8
18.2.3 §§36–38 1117 n. 20
18.3.1 §§55–59 283, 1205, 1809, 1827 n. 5
18.3.1 §§57–59 1810
18.3.2 §60 1207 n. 9
18.3.2 §§60–62 1205, 1809
18.3.3 §§63–64 487
18.3.3 §64 1843
18.4.1 §§85–87 1205, 1573 n. 3, 1665
18.4.1–2 §§85–89 1809
18.4.2 §88 203
18.4.3 §90 311 n. 27
18.5.2 §§116–19 285, 283 n. 5, 300, 328
18.5.2 §119 277, 654, 664
18.5.3 §122 1818 n. 3
18.6.6 §194 713 n. 13

18.6.7 §204 1557
18.6.10 §224 911 n. 2
18.7.2 §245 1246
18.9.2 §§320–24 1770
18.9.6 §356 1175 n. 9
19.4.5 §270 1850
19.5.1 §275 283
19.6.1 §294 1645
19.6.3 §§300–311 638
19.8.2 §349 515
19.9.1 §358 696 n. 9, 1877
20.5.1 §§97–98 381 n. 31
20.5.1 §§97–99 1665
20.5.2 §102 1810
20.5.4 §117 1810
20.6.1 §§118–23 970
20.6.2 §§127–32 1810
20.6.2 §131 1705
20.6.3 §136 1850
20.7.1 §138 283
20.8.6 §§169–72 1665
20.9.1 §§197–200 284
20.9.1 §199 1792
20.9.1 §§200–201 1794
20.9.3 §§208–10 1833

20.9.5 §215 1833
20.9.6 §§216–17 1794
20.10.4–5 §§244–51 284

Jewish War

1 proem 6 §17 54, 61 n. 29
1.4.5–6 §§93–98 1830 n. 10
1.5.2 §110 1461, 1461 n. 3
1.7.6 §154 1611
1.10.2 §198 700 n. 16
1.16.6 §319 1609
1.20.3 §393 202
1.21.1 §401 1660
1.24.6 §487 713 n. 13
1.32.3 §629 1366
1.33.8 §§668–69 283 n. 5
1.33.9 §673 1875
2.1.3 §§8–13 1205, 1534
2.1.3 §10 904, 1702, 1955 n. 3
2.1.3 §§10–12 263 n. 8
2.1.3 §§10–13 1952
2.6.1 §80 1526
2.6.3 §93 1526
2.6.3 §96 906 n. 13
2.8.1 §117 1808

2.8.1 §§117–18 545, 1607
2.8.1 §118 1607 n. 1, 1611
2.8.2–13 §§119–61 297 n. 19
2.8.4 §§124–27 816 n. 14, 997
2.8.4 §125 1029 n. 15, 1770
2.8.5 §129 1111
2.8.5 §§131–32 1718
2.8.11 §154 1616 n. 1
2.8.14 §§162–63 478 n. 23
2.8.14 §163 1370
2.8.14 §§164–65 1616
2.9.1 §§167–68 283 n. 5
2.9.1 §168 911 n. 2
2.9.2–3 §§169–74 1205, 1827
2.9.2–4 §§169–77 283 n. 5
2.9.4 §175 1207 n. 9
2.9.4 §§175–77 1205
2.9.5 §180 911 n. 2
2.10.1 §§184–85 1652
2.10.5 §§199–203 1827
2.12.2 §228 1029 n. 15
2.12.3 §232 969 n. 7
2.12.3 §§232–33 970
2.12.7 §246 1850
2.13.2–3 §§253–54 1772

2.14.3 §280 263 n. 8
2.14.4 §287 312 n. 31
2.14.9 §§306–8 1497, 1828
2.15.6 §331 1794 n. 18
2.16.2 §336 1794 n. 18
2.16.3 §344 1819
2.20.5 §571 1818
3.3.5 §55 1908
3.5.5 §95 835
3.8.5 §374 1616
3.8.5 §375 1370 n. 1
3.8.9 §405 1898
3.9.5 §§435–36 1844
3.9.8 §459 1737
3.10.7–8 §§506–21 454
3.10.7 §515 286
3.10.8 §519 428
4 545 n. 8
4.1.5 §33 1480 n. 9
4.1.6 §43 1909
4.5.3 §§334–44 1123
4.6.3 §§381–88 545 n. 8
4.8.2 §451 134 n. 3
4.8.3 §459 1505 n. 4
4.8.3 §474 1029 n. 14, 1505 n. 4, 1531

4.9.4–5 §§509–20 648
5–7 1676 n. 28
5.3.1 §99 1710
5.4.2 §144 1793
5.4.2 §146 1809
5.5.1–6 §§184–227 1660
5.5.1 §189 1661
5.5.2 §194 1405
5.5.2 §200 1645
5.5.4–5 §§207–18 1661
5.5.4–5 §§207–21 1860
5.5.4 §212 1860
5.5.5 §217 1953
5.5.5 §219 1860
5.5.6 §223 1661
5.5.6 §224 1661
5.5.8 §§238–46 1809
5.6.2 §259 1876
5.7.3 §304 1876
5.11.1 §449 1497
5.11.1 §§449–51 1830 n. 10
5.11.4 §466 1562
5.12.2 §508 1562
5.12.2 §510 1175 n. 9
5.13.2 §534 167 n. 6

5.13.6 §565 702
5.13.7 §567 649
6.2.4 §§124–26 1405
6.3.4 §§201–13 1676
6.3.4 §203 1462
6.4.5 §250 1662 n. 14
6.5.1 §§271–73 1676 n. 28
6.5.1–3 §§274–89 1667 n. 22
6.5.2 §282 1645
6.5.2 §§283–85 1573 n. 3
6.5.2–3 §§285–88 1665
6.5.3 §§288–89 1667 n. 22
6.5.3 §§288–300 1859 n. 27
6.5.3–4 §§288–315 1662 n. 14
6.5.3 §§293–96 1860 n. 29
6.5.3 §294 1705
6.5.3 §§300–309 1665
6.5.3 §302 1790
6.5.3 §303 1809 n. 4
6.5.3 §304 1828
6.5.4 §§310–15 1428 n. 10
6.6.3 §354 1793
6.9.3 §420 1676 n. 28
7.1.1 §§1–4 1563, 1662 n. 14
7.4.1 §63 896 n. 7

7.5.3 §118 1676 n. 28
7.5.5 §138 1676 n. 28
7.5.6 §154 1676 n. 28
7.6.3 §185 427 n. 10, 430 n. 12
7.6.4 §203 1830 n. 10
7.6.6 §217 1908
7.8.1 §§253–58 1607
7.8.7 §§375–77 1563

Life

1 §2 76 n. 9
1 §§3–6 348 n. 1
1 §5 167 n. 6
2 §§8–9 261 n. 6, 268
2 §9 678
5 §21 1255 n. 4
9 §42 782 n. 31
12 §62 1794
17 §92 1202 n. 1
46 §239 1516
47 §244 314
48 §248 1519
52 §269 264 n. 12
54 §279 1111, 1256 n. 10
65 §354 263 n. 8

65 §357 59 n. 21
72 §403 428

Philo

Cherubim

12–15 §§40–52 104 n. 6

Contemplative Life

8 §68 119 n. 36

Embassy to Gaius

24 §§160–61 1821 n. 10
25 §164 54
38 §299 283
38 §§299–305 1205, 1809, 1821

Flaccus

1 §1 1821 n. 10
2 §7 1850 n. 14
10 §75 1828

Hypothetica

7.6 597, 1538 n. 17
11.14–17 119 n. 36

Life of Moses

1.5 §21 261 n. 6
1.40 §§220–26 539 n. 5
1.49 §274 1144
2.10–12 §§52–65 1431 n. 15
2.10 §56 1433 n. 17
2.14–15 §§70–71 539 n. 5
2.28 §§141–42 539 n. 5
2.29 §147 190 n. 37
2.30 §153 539 n. 5
2.31 §§159–60 539 n. 5
2.51 §291 972

On Abraham

21 §105 1289 n. 17
22 §§107–13 1918 n. 17

On the Confusion of Tongues

14 §§60–63 192

On the Creation

17 §53 1101
25 §78 1272

On the Decalogue

12 §51 1479 n. 7

On the Special Laws

1.35 §190 190 n. 37
1.56 §307 320
2.15 §62 411 n. 31. 1036
2.15 §63 1026
2.27 §145 1958 n. 6
2.32 §197 516
3.16 §91 1204 n. 5
4.38 §197 168 n. 7
4.38 §§197–98 95 n. 62

On the Unchangeableness of God

1.3 122

On the Virtues

23 §117 590
37 §§204–5 360 n. 9

Who Is the Heir?

6 §22 238 n. 15

Classical Writers

Appian

Civil Wars

2.149 911 n. 2
3.7 §§43–45 1533

Apuleius

Apology

85 1846

Florida

19 647

Metamorphoses (Golden Ass)

3.12 1273 n. 5

Aristides

Hymn to Serapis

33 757 n. 6

Aristophanes

Birds

1432 1328

Parliament of Women

117 1670

Aristotle

Nicomachean Ethics

4.1.19 (1120B) 1647 n. 21

Rhetoric

3.18.2 701 n. 17

Rhetoric to Alexander

1446 598 n. 48

Artemidorus Daldianus

Oneirokritika

2.53 1850
2.56 1842

Cicero

Against Verres

2.5.63–66 §§163–70 1830 n. 10

Letters to His Friends

4.5.5 416 n. 38

On Behalf of Quintus Ligarius

30 1312 n. 19
33 898

On Divination

2.28 772

Republic

6.22 §24 1858

Democritus

frag. 60 615 n. 59

Digest of Justinian

1.15.4.2 905 n. 10
48.8.3–4 1811
48.19.28 1830 n. 10
48.24 1875

Dio Cassius

37.16.5 1400
53.30.2 904 n. 6
55.30.2 202
57.10.5 312 n. 30
58.4–11 1821

Diodorus Siculus

1.1.1–3 55 n. 5
1.2.7 55 n. 5
1.4.4–5 55 n. 5

Diogenes Laertius

1.36 615 n. 59, 895 n. 4
3.11 1161
3.19 1820 n. 7
6.6 498

6.104 1168 n. 11
8.23 590
9.115 1820 n. 7

Dionysius of Halicarnassus

Roman Antiquities

4.6 352 n. 5
7.69.2 1850
10.10.7 1448 n. 8

Epictetus

1.3.7–8 1247
1.19.8 1850 n. 15
2.14.12–13 604 n. 52
2.14.18 598 n. 48
2.22.19 1168
3.3.5 1284 n. 5
3.15.10–13 1288
3.22.54 590
3.24.100 1856

Euripides

frag. 1071 416 n. 38
frag. 1086 416 n. 38

Alcestis

788–89 1152 n. 11
882 1846

Andromache

395 1846

Danaë

frag. 319 1647

Helen

605–6 1920 n. 23

Orestes

1496 1920 n. 23

Galen

De Differentiis Febrium

1.1 436 n. 23

Herodotus

1.21 542
1.30 671
1.34 214
1.36 1275
1.114–15 261 n. 6
1.128 1830 n. 10
1.193 726 n. 16

2.139 1182 n. 23
2.173 772
3.132 1830 n. 10
3.142 597
3.159 1830 n. 10
6.84 772
7.14 214

Hesiod

Works and Days

352 598 n. 48
442–43 983

Homer

Hymns

33.12 757 n. 6

Iliad

10.496 214

Odyssey

5.188–89 596 n. 44
6.235–36 794 n. 15
18.339 1182 n. 23

Isocrates

Nicocles (Cyprians)

49 597
61 597

Livy

22.3.4 1448 n. 8
39.49 1934

Lucan

Civil War

6.547 1831

Lucian

Demonax

43 1374 n. 30

Dialogues of the Dead

14 377

How to Write History

4 58 n. 14
39–40 52
47–48 53 n. 2, 56 n. 11
53–55 52

Lover of Lies

13 381 n. 31
16 427 n. 10
30–31 427 n. 10

Passing of Peregrinus

34 1844

Lysias

9. “For the Soldier”

20 (115–16) 590

12. “Against Eratosthenes”

9 (121) 1706

26. “On the Scrutiny of Evandros”

24 (177) 313 n. 32

Menander

frag. 301 1152 n. 11
frag. 710 615 n. 59

Ovid

Fasti

2.493 1858

Persius

Satires

3.77–85 636
4.23–24 615 n. 59
5.189–91 636

Petronius

Satyricon

57 615 n. 59

Philostratus

Life of Apollonius

1.7 261 n. 6
4.20 427 n. 10
4.45 647, 652

Phrynichus

Eclogues

389 793 n. 14

Pindar

Pythian Odes

2.83–84 590

Plato

Apology

39C 1850 n. 15

Crito

53A 1275

Laws

913C (11) 1538 n. 17

Phaedrus

233D–34A 1266 n. 13
246A 53
276B–77A 723 n. 11

Republic

392D 53
614D (10.13) 1374 n. 30

Statesman

311B 238 n. 15

Plautus

Bacchides

823 1497 n. 5

Braggart Warrior

2.4 §§359–60 1843

Carbonaria

frag. 2 1843

Pliny

Natural History

2.30 §98 1858
5.15 §70 1400
7.37 §124 647
12.32 §§63–65 312 n. 30
13.3 §19 696
17.35 §200 1208 n. 13
18.179 984
28.11 §46 1831

Plutarch

Life of Alexander

5 (666–67) 261 n. 6, 268

Life of Caesar

62–67 (737–40) 911 n. 2
69.4 1858

Life of Cato Minor

6.4 (742) 1310

Life of Solon

20.1 (89) 898

30.2 (95) 1247

Lives of Tiberius and Gaius Gracchus

9.5 (828) 978

Moralia

336C (“On the Fortune of Alexander” 2.3) 1152 n. 10
554B (“On the Delays of the Divine Vengeance” 9) 1842

Romulus

27.6 1858

Pollux

Onomasticon

9.113 1789 n. 13
9.123 1789 n. 13
9.129 1789 n. 13

Polybius

1.3 282
2.10.5 457
3.32.2 59 n. 21
5.31.4 56 n. 10
29.21 1562 n. 21

Porphyry

Life of Pythagoras

29 757

Pseudo-Plutarch

Liberal Education

4 (2B) 723 n. 11

Pseudo-Quintilian

Declamationes Minores

274 1843

Ptolemy

Geography

5.16.4 828 n. 6

Seneca the Elder

Controversiae

2.3.2 1846

Seneca

Agamemnon

659–63 1846

On Benefits

2.1.1 597
4.26.1 590

To Marcia on Consolation

20.3 1830 n. 10

Sextus Empiricus

Sentences

1.136 1168

Sophocles

Antigone

1268 241 n. 20
1314 241 n. 20

Strabo

12.6.5 (C569) 203 n. 13
16.2.21 (C756) 1400
16.2.40–41 1029 n. 14

Suetonius

Augustus

94 261 n. 6

Caligula

32.2 1853 n. 19

Claudius

34 1497 n. 5

Domitian

11 1497 n. 5, 1828

Julius Caesar

75 898
81.2 911 n. 2

Tiberius

21 910
32 312 n. 30
58 1811

Tacitus

Annals

1.11 202, 904 n. 6
1.17 698
1.31 202
1.33 202
2.30 203 n. 13
2.42 312 n. 30, 905 n. 12
2.50 1811
2.75 1846

3.22–23 203 n. 13
3.38 1811
3.48 203 n. 13, 903
3.54 1821
3.64–65 1821
6.27 1821
6.41 905 n. 12
12.54 140, 1400
12.60 283 n. 6
15.25 282 n. 3
15.44 16, 1808 n. 3, 1843

Histories

2.72 1830 n. 10
5.8 1661
5.9 75
5.13 1428 n. 10, 1667 n. 22

Terence

Self-Tormentor

169–70 1273 n. 5

Theophrastus

Characters

5 63 n. 33

21.2 1262 n. 3

De Causis Plantarum

3.10.6 1208 n. 13

Thucydides

1.22.2 58 n. 14
2.2 282
2.28 1870 n. 37
4.19.1–4 590
6.46.5 477

Valerius Maximus

Facta

1.7.4 1850

Velleius Paterculus

2.121 910

Virgil

Aeneid

4.79 1581 n. 12
4.554–60 757 n. 6
9.656–58 1920 n. 23

Xenophon

Anabasis

1.4.7 477
4.7.12 1609

Church Fathers

Ambrose

De Fide

2.1 1477

Expositio Evangelii Secundam Lucam

2 (CSEL 32:99) 130 n. 53
2.61 (CCSL 14:4:57) 249

Apostolic Constitutions

7.46 1517

Athanasius

In Lucam

in toto 145 n. 9

Augustine

Contra Gaudentium Donatistarum Episcopum Libri II

1.25 §28 (CSEL 53:226–27) 1277 n. 14

De Sancta Virginitate

4 (CSEL 41:327) 130 n. 53

Four Gospels

2.48 1502

On the Trinity

4.5 227

Our Lord's Sermon on the Mount

in toto 931

Sermones ad Populum

66.3–4 657

Barnabas

6.13 1240 n. 20
7.11 616 n. 63
14.5–7 1913 n. 10
15.8–9 1907
15.9 1880 n. 4, 1929
19.2 1913 n. 10

Chrysostom

Homilies on Matthew

11.6–7 322
15 931
36 657

41 1077 n. 19

1 Clement

2.1 16
5.6–7 16
13.2 5, 606
18.1 16
23.3 1444 n. 1
24.1 1444 n. 1
30.2 1261
39.5 431
44.5 1329
48.4 5
50.3 1563 n. 26
52.2 1315
59.3 602

2 Clement

2.1–3 1837
10.4 1370 n. 22
11 1444 n. 1
13.4 5, 599
17.7 1370 n. 22

Clement of Alexandria

Stromata

1.21.145–46 227
3.4.522 979 n. 4
4.6.35 1517
4.9 493
6.15.132 972

Didache

1.3 599
1.3–5 554 n. 7
1.4 592, 593
8.1 508, 516, 1463
9 1722
11–12 817
13.1–2 811
13.2 999
16.1 1174

Didascalia Apostolorum

21 §5.19 1817

Ephraem the Syrian

On Our Lord

47 713 n. 12

On the Sinful Woman

in toto 713 n. 12

Epiphanius

Panarion (Heresies)

23.6 1911 n. 7
30.13.7–8 337 n. 11
78 752
78.11 248

Epistula Apostolorum

15 (26) 1954

Eusebius

Chronicon

2 911 n. 3

Ecclesiastical History

1.7 920
1.12 991 n. 10
2.23 752
2.23.11 379
2.23.16 1868
2.23.20 1679
3.4.2 5
3.5 1930
3.5.3 1678
3.11 1911

3.19 752
3.20 §§1–2 1274
3.30.1 436
3.32 752
4.22 752
5.1.44 1853 n. 19
7.18 799

Gospel Questions and Solutions Addressed to Stephanus

3.2 355

Gregory of Nyssa

Homily on Our Father

in toto 1064

Gregory the Great

Homily on Ezekiel

2.2.9 1039

Hippolytus

Commentary on Daniel

4.23.3 227

Ignatius

To the Ephesians

5.3 1261
10.2–3 1850 n. 14
15.1 1820 n. 7
18.2 107, 335 n. 6

To the Magnesians

8.2 1820 n. 7

To the Philadelphians

11.1 1913 n. 10

To Polycarp

2.1 599

To the Smyrneans

1.1 335 n. 6
1.2 1817
2.1 1891
3.2 1933 n. 9
7.1 1891

To the Trallians

9.1 1949

Irenaeus

Against Heresies

1.21.4 1913 n. 10

2.24.4 1830 n. 10, 1842
3.1.1 5
3.9.3 335 n. 6
3.10 60
3.10.2 145 n. 9
3.13.3 16
3.14.1 5
3.15.1 16
3.17.1 335 n. 6
4.7.1 145 n. 9
4.10.1 1698 n. 1

Jerome

Adversus Helvidium

in toto 752

Against the Pelagians

3.2 336, 338 n. 11

Commentary on Isaiah

§4 337 n. 11

Commentary on Matthew

6:11 1053 n. 18
12:13 528

Homily on Amos

9.6 972

Letters

52.8 534 n. 42
120.8.2 1868

Justin Martyr

Apology

1.13 1830 n. 10
1.14 1850 n. 14
1.14.3 554 n. 7
1.15.9–10 554 n. 7
1.16.1 554 n. 7, 593
1.17.2 1607
1.33.6 122 n. 42
1.40 1817
1.53 1837
1.55 1842
1.65–67 1723 n. 14

Dialogue with Trypho

8 869 n. 13
34 1604
45.4 107
51.2 335 n. 6
78.4 208

85 434 n. 19
88 347
88.2 346
88.2–8 335 n. 6
91 1842
91.2 1830 n. 10
97.1 1874
100.4 192
103 60, 347, 1817, 1819
103.6 335 n. 6
103.8 1764
103.19 5
106.4 192
121.2 192
126.1 192, 1507
131.3 1913 n. 10
138 1907
138.1 579

Martyrdom of Polycarp

12.1 794 n. 15

Niceta of Remesiana

De Psalmodiae Bono

76 (9.11) 145 n. 9

Origen

Against Celsus

1.51 208
1.62 493
2.62 1911
2.68 1911
6.10 1830 n. 10

Commentary on John

2:10 1141
6:24 782

Commentary on Matthew

2 931

Homilies on Luke

17 248
24 322

Polycarp

To the Philippians

2.3 606

Shepherd of Hermas

Parable

5.3.7 §56 1463

Vision

4.1.6 §22 481 n. 28

Tertullian

Against Marcion

1.15 911, 911 n. 3
4.2.2 5
4.5.3 5
4.18.4–6 657
4.18.8 675
4.19 752
4.26 1064
4.35.12 1416 n. 12
4.42.2–3 1817

Against the Jews

10 1842
13.23 1929–30

Apology

21 1859

Concerning Idolatry

15.3 1614

On Modesty

11 713 n. 12

On the Soul

26 145 n. 9

Prescription against Heretics

36 1008 n. 45

Theodoret

On the Incarnation of the Lord

24 269 n. 20

Miscellanea

Agapius

Book of the Title

in toto 1843

Apocryphon of John

47.30 337 n. 10

Confucius

Analects

15.23 597

Counsels of Wisdom (Babylonian)

41–45 590

Gospel of Truth

31.35–32.9 1296 n. 3

Mara Bar Serapion

in toto 1843

Poimandres

32 1011 n. 51

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

LSJ A Greek-English Lexicon, by H. G. Liddell, R. Scott, and H. S. Jones (Oxford: Clarendon, 1968)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

Locations implied in the text are in square brackets

Locations implied in the text are in square brackets

Locations implied in the text are in square brackets

Locations implied in the text are in square brackets

Locations implied in the text are in square brackets

Locations implied in the text are in square brackets

[1] If one counts lines, as Egelkraut 1976: 2 n. 1 does (using the twenty-fifth edition of Nestle-Aland), then the figure is closer to 44 percent. Since both verse length and line length vary, such counts are only approximations.

[2] “Central section” is the least descriptive and the least debatable title. The term journey is better, provided one does not think of a straight-line trip.

[3] For the debate about its ending, see Egelkraut 1976: 3–11 and Resseguie 1975: 3 (a good survey of the history of interpretation).

[4] The amount of material in these groups can be variously measured, depending on the division of the pericopes and one's judgment about the presence of parallels. Egelkraut 1976: 27 bases the percentages in Luke's central section (for him 9:51–19:48) on the pericope delineation in two common synopses:

	Lucan Parallels to Matthew (i.e., Q)	Unique Lucan Material	Lucan Parallels to Mark
Aland 1985	26 of 75 pericopes (35%)	27 of 75 pericopes (36%)	22 of 75 pericopes (29%)
Huck and Lietzmann 1936	25 of 60 pericopes (42%)	24 of 60 pericopes (40%)	11 of 60 pericopes (18%)

Resseguie 1975: 4 calculates the same section this way: of 60 Lucan pericopes, 31 (52%) parallel Matthew/Q and 29 (48%) are uniquely Lucan. Resseguie argues that only one-tenth of the material in 9:51–18:14 has even a possible Marcan connection. Teaching material that is capable of being repeated might slightly alter the exact count. Nonetheless, the numbers of Huck-Lietzmann and Resseguie are closer to the real percentages, since Luke 9:51–18:14 lacks any significant Marcan parallels. In addition, most of the Q pericopes and unique Lucan material are long units. Conceptual overlap with Matthew and unique Lucan material abound (see the introduction in vol. 1, pp. 10–12). Goulder (1989: 455) notes that in 9:51–13:21 one of every three words comes from Q or L, while in 13:22–18:14 (where Goulder ends the unit) one in six words comes from this material.

[5] Twelve narratives (depending on how one counts) focus on individuals: 9:52–56; 9:57–62; 10:29–37; 10:38–42; 11:14–23; 11:27–28; 13:31–35; 18:15–17; 18:18–30; 19:1–10; 19:29–40; 19:41–44 (note the gap from 14:1 to 18:14). Egelkraut 1976: 28 has a slightly different list.

[6] Blomberg 1982b concentrates on the fifteen uniquely Lucan parables: 10:25–37; 11:5–8; 12:13–21; 13:6–9; 14:7–14; 14:15–24; 14:28–33; 15:8–10; 15:11–32; 16:1–9; 16:19–31; 17:7–10; 18:1–8; 18:9–14; 19:11–27. Only 13:18–21 and 15:3–7 have parallels.

[7] Resseguie 1975 puts five of fourteen possible interpretations in this category. C. F. Evans 1990: 433 points out the lack of chronological notes, especially at the end of the section. Vague indications of time and place are provided only in the beginning of the section: 9:52, 56–57; 10:1, 21, 38; 11:14, 27; 13:10, 31; 14:1, 25. Schürmann 1994: 1 speaks of a metaphorical journey account in which Jesus goes his way to Jerusalem as an itinerant prophetic teacher who divides Israel. On Luke’s use of journey and way terminology, see Schneider 1977a: 227.

[8] Fitzmyer 1981: 825–26 mentions the tension between matter and form in the travel account, citing K. Schmidt’s remark that “though Jesus is always traveling to Jerusalem, he never makes any real progress on this journey."

[9] Talbert 1982: 111–12 sees chiasmus in 9:51–19:44, but has to omit Luke 15 and place 14:1–6 out of its Lucan order! Goulder 1964: 196 argues for the following chiastic links:

10:25	eternal life
11:1	prayer
11:14	healing
11:37	pharisaic hypocrisy
12:1	money
12:35	repentance
13:10	rejection of Israel and invitation to outcasts
14:1	rejection of Israel and invitation to outcasts
15:1	repentance
16:1	money
16:14	pharisaic hypocrisy
17:11	healing
17:5	prayer
18:18	eternal life

The most plausible case for chiasmus is made by Farrell 1986. Blomberg also deals with and rejects theories that make the central section a Christian Deuteronomy; see C. F. Evans 1955. My main criticism of Blomberg's article is that it regards the section's end as falling at 18:34, ignoring later literary clues that Jesus has not arrived in Jerusalem (19:28, 41). This may be the Achilles' heel against his theory that the section's parable source was laid out chiastically, especially if 19:11–27 is taken into consideration. Still, aspects of Blomberg's case and the general outline of a possible Lucan source may surface in my discussion; see also Nolland 1993a: 530–31.

10 Fitzmyer 1981: 825 uses this division, but says it is one of "convenience, since the division at these points is otherwise insignificant and somewhat arbitrary." Plummer 1896: 261 also speaks of "convenience." Such markers do not really note a shift of themes, and so are less than adequate.

Bultmann 1963: 25–26, 64, 68 opts for a pronouncement story, but also notes the absence of any pronouncement. Jesus' response comes in his simply turning away. This makes a pronouncement account unlikely and explains why the Jesus Seminar makes no comment on the text in The Five Gospels (Funk and Hoover 1993: 316).

LXX Septuagint

2 Danker 1988: 207–8; Fitzmyer 1981: 828. BAGD 57 and BAA 112 note that ἀναλήμψεως, a NT hapax legomenon, alludes to the ascension. The LXX uses it of Elijah's departure (2 Kings 2:9, 11; 1 Macc. 2:58; Sir. 48:9; 49:14). For more discussion, see the additional note on 9:51.

3 In the NT, the verb is a technical term for resurrection: Mark 16:19 (longer version); 1 Tim. 3:16.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[4] Marshall 1978: 405 notes that the Hebrew idiom may suggest a source behind Luke's remarks. Appealing to Ezek. 6:2; 13:17; 15:7; 20:46 [21:2 MT], C. A. Evans 1987a argues that the force is "to dispatch," a view possible for the term but awkward for this context. In a reworking of this article in Evans and Sanders 1993: 93–105, Evans makes less of the lexical argument and argues for an allusion to Ezek. 21:2–6 [21:7–11 MT], with the implication that with the journey comes not only destined suffering for Jesus but also judgment for Israel (he also adds Ezek. 25:2; 28:21; 29:2; and 38:2, while emphasizing the parallel in 20:46 [21:2 MT]; p. 100). If so, then Jesus' act is like that of the prophet and has a place in the divine drama of Israel's history. This view is possible, but not certain. For a denial of judgment here, see Giblin 1985: 31–32.

[5] Ἑτοιμάσαι is an infinitive of purpose tied to εἰσῆλθον: "they came to prepare." On the use of ὡς (untranslated) with the infinitive to express purpose, see BAGD 898 §IV.3.b and BAA 1793 §IV.3.b. Some support the distinction between preaching and lodging because ἑτοιμάζω can mean "preparing a place"; BAGD 316 §1; BAA 640 §1; Matt. 22:4; John 14:2–3.

[6] Three of the four previous uses of ἑτοιμάζω in Luke (1:17, 76; 3:4) refer to John the Baptist. Such Lucan usage and the lack of welcome in 9:53 suggest that "prepare" entails more than lodging. If the preaching mission of 9:1–6 is a precedent, then preaching could be implied as well.

MT Masoretic Text

7 Josephus, Jewish War 2.12.3 §232; Jeremias 1969: 352–58; Jeremias, TDNT 7:88–94. On Jewish attitudes, see Sir. 50:25–26; T. Levi 7.2; Gen. Rab. 81.3 on 35:2; Jub. 30.5–6, 23; C. A. Evans 1990: 164. On the relationship between Jews and Samaritans, see Brindle 1984.

OT Old Testament

8 2 Chron. 7:1, 3 (concerning Solomon's offering at the temple's dedication); 2 Kings 1:10, 12, 14 (the fire sent by Elijah that consumed two companies of fifty men from Ahaziah in Samaria!); Miyoshi 1974: 13. 2 Kings 1:16–17 condemns some Samaritans' lack of faith in Yahweh and their turning to Baal-Zebub. The image of fire conceptually recalls the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah (Gen. 19:24–28).

9 Plummer 1896: 264 notes that Luke makes nothing of this nickname. Marshall 1978: 406 rejects the suggestion of the nickname's connection with this incident, noting that the name is absent and that it is not likely that Jesus would give them a derogatory nickname. In addition, Mark 3:17 does not say that the name came from Jesus. Nolland 1993a: 536 notes that the concern of James and John in Mark 10:35–45 also revolves around power. But disciples are to serve. The nickname may allude to their character, which is undergoing reformation.

10 The aorist participle στραφείς and the aorist verb ἐπετίμησεν suggest either a simultaneous action or a turning followed by the rebuke. Jesus responds similarly in Luke 22:47–51; Nolland 1993a: 537.

[11] Acts 8 narrates a return to this region; 2 Pet. 3:9 speaks of God's patience with Israel.

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

T. Moses Testament of Moses

T. Moses Testament of Moses

2 Bar. 2 (Syriac) Baruch

T. Abr. Testament of Abraham

T. Job Testament of Job

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

[1] Dibelius 1934: 160–61, esp. 160 n. 1, says that the general nature of the remark shows that it comes from the evangelist, but how "general principles" can come from the evangelist is not clear. It is the unique attestation of this saying in Luke that appears to be the only reason for this conclusion, along with its possible use of OT imagery from Gen. 19:26. The Jesus Seminar sees these verses as going back to Luke, claiming that the saying assumes too much self-identity for disciples (Funk and Hoover 1993: 316 prints it in black type). But the distinctive behavior and identity are already indicated in the first two sayings, which the seminar accepts. On the rejection of other attempts to argue that the early church is responsible for the sayings, see Marshall 1978: 409, in particular his evaluation of Schulz 1972: 435 n. 239, who relies on Dibelius. Glombitza 1971 also makes a case for Lucan creation.

[2] Colpe, TDNT 8:432–33, argues that the reference is to "a man such as Jesus." But in 12:22–34, Jesus teaches that God cares for the birds. Jesus also argues, however, that God cares for people, who are "greater" than the birds. The remark is not generic.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NRSV New Revised Standard Version

[3] The Gospel of Thomas 86 also has a parallel, but with Gnostic overtones, since it speaks of laying one's head down and of rest; Fitzmyer 1981: 835.

[4] Plummer 1896: 266 argues correctly that efforts to identify this man as Philip or Thomas are speculative and cannot be confirmed, though the identification dates back to Clement of Alexandria, Stromata 3.4.522.

[5] On Jewish "works of love" and for the key ancient texts, see Egelkraut 1976: 139 nn. 3, 5; SB 1:487–88; 4:578–92; Hengel 1981: 8–10 and n. 21. Quick burials are mentioned in Acts 5:5–6, 10; John 11:1, 14, 17. On Jewish burial customs, see the exegesis of Luke 7:12. The OT notes periods that might demand that burial not take place, e.g., the time of exile (Jer. 16:5–7; Ernst 1977: 321).

[6] Lev. 21:1–3 shows that even the priests had such obligations if a close relative was involved, but the high priest was exempt in all cases (Lev. 21:11). As acts of mercy or works of love, such action was considered to have priority over normally important religious activity; see also Mic. 6:8; Tob. 1:17–18; 2:3–9; 4:3–4; 6:15; 12:12–14; 14:11–13; m. Pe‘a 1.1; m. Ber. 3.1; b. Ber. 18a (some of these texts even prohibit study of the Torah during mourning!). Only Nazirites were excepted from this requirement (Num. 6:6–8). In the Mishnah, m. Ber. 3.1 reads, “He who is confronted by a dead relative is free from reciting the Shema‘, from the Eighteen Benedictions [Shemoneh Esreh, the prayer of Israel], and from all the commandments stated in Torah.”

OT Old Testament

[7] Fitzmyer notes that there is no evidence for this third view, which goes back to Perles 1919–20; see also Black 1967: 207–8. SB 1:489 rejects the suggestion.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[8] The term διάγγελλε is a present imperative. On its meaning “to proclaim far and wide,” see BAGD 182; BAA 364; elsewhere only in Acts 21:26 and Rom. 9:17. Schniewind, TDNT 1:68, speaks of proclaiming God’s eschatological lordship, that is, his sovereignty over humans in rule and in time.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

m. Mishnah

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

Old Testament

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

The Acts parallels include the messengers shaking dust from their feet (13:51) and healings (3:6; 4:10).

[2] Egelkraut 1976: 142, esp. n. 3, mentions the options. Schweizer 1984: 174 argues that Luke likes to split accounts from Q and Mark into distinct events (e.g., the Olivet Discourse in 17:22–37 ≈ 21:6–36 and Jesus' condemnation of the religious leadership in 11:37–54 ≈ 20:45–47). Fitzmyer 1985: 843, citing 22:35, argues that Luke created the mission in the split. For detailed discussion of texts where Mark and Q overlap, see Laufen 1980.

[3] Bultmann 1963: 145 sees much of this material as church formulated and as regulations for the church. Beare 1970 rejects the mission and the discourse's historicity, as does the Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 317–23, esp. 320).

[4] Morosco 1979 sees a discourse tradition but does not make clear whether it was tied to a formal commission or whether this material belongs to such a setting.

NT New Testament

[5] Luke's wording is similar to Matt. 10:40 and John 13:20 conceptually, but not verbally; Aland 1985: §179.

[6] Egelkraut 1976: 143 sees this as possible, especially for the unparalleled 10:17–20, as well as for 10:21–24.

[7] Fitzmyer 1985: 859 sees the material as a Lucan creation, but coming from an authentic saying reflected in a variant form in 10:18. Such a distinction is not necessary. Marshall 1978: 427–28 notes the options: a Lucan creation, the Q source, or a special Lucan source. He opts for Q and notes that the subunit's historicity is tied to how one views the mission's historicity as a whole.

OT Old Testament

[8] Fitzmyer 1985: 865 sees Luke joining this material together in a new context, as does Marshall 1978: 431–32, who notes the various options and argues that both sayings go back to Jesus.

[9] This passage is the first of several in Luke 9–19 where sayings material that is split up in Matthew has a single location in Luke, a situation that has led to either/or thinking about these sayings. Most see Luke bringing such sayings together in one setting, while Matthew has the original, simpler form of Q. But such judgments are hasty for three reasons: (1) Q may well have existed in multiple forms (even holders of the Q hypothesis recognize this as a real possibility); (2) Luke had access to special source material with sayings in it, which increases the combinations; and (3) an itinerant ministry has repetition, which could lead to the use of similar material in distinct settings. These factors raise the probability that additional material is the reason for such differences. One need not choose between Luke and Matthew in such cases. In addition, the argument for this material being a unit is usually that Luke is closer to Q; if this is correct, it runs counter to the normal situation noted above, which is a possible argument against Lucan compilation.

10 Plummer 1896: 271 notes that early church historians attempted to name some of the seventy-two. Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History 1.12, mentions Barnabas, Sosthenes, Matthias, Joseph Barsabbas, and Thaddaeus. But the tradition is problematic, since it also includes the Cephas of Gal. 2:11—as distinct from the apostle Peter! Even though some later fathers (beginning with Clement of Alexandria) argue that a different Cephas was in view in Galatians, the Cephas of Galatians must be Peter, since he is called a “pillar.” It may be that the fathers wanted to spare Peter the criticism that he received from Paul, since they found it hard to believe that he erred so publicly.

Berger 1984: 68, 167, sees both a speech and a mission. Bultmann 1963: 145 places it among legal sayings and church rules, arguing that it was a missionary tract for the church (see the discussion of sources and historicity for rejection of this view).

Bultmann 1963: 112 also rejects its historicity since it views Jesus' work as past and speaks of the possible exaltation of Capernaum to heaven. Neither of these reasons has merit. Mission failure certainly did occur in Jesus' ministry—why else did he meet with crucifixion? On the possibility of cities being exalted before God, one need think only of the imagery of the OT prophets, where Israel is exalted above its foes. Berger 1984: 200, 205, speaks of woes of warning. For the woe oracle form, see Amos 6:1–7; Mic. 2:1; Hab. 2:6–7; Zeph. 2:5. Witherington 1990: 166 defends their authenticity, along with Matthew's mention of Chorazin, which is not mentioned outside of these parallel passages.

Bultmann 1963: 153 rejects the historicity of "I-sayings" because of their connection to the larger unit. This saying is authentic on the basis of the criterion of dissimilarity.

14 On the use of ἕτερος (another), see the additional note on Luke 7:19. If 22:35 indicates a connection to this mission, then the seventy-two disciples appointed for this mission served alongside the Twelve, who had already been commissioned (also Nolland 1993a: 550).

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

15 Egelkraut 1976: 143, esp. n. 1; Miyoshi 1974: 59–61. For example, μετὰ ταῦτα occurs nine times in Luke–Acts, but not at all in Matthew and Mark (unless one counts the textually uncertain Mark 16:12). The use of ὁ κύριος (the Lord) in narrative introductions is Lucan; see the exegesis of

Luke 2:11. The verb ἀναδείκνυμι (to appoint) appears only here and in Acts 1:24; Schlier, TDNT 2:30.

16 Note that Luke 10:10–16; John 4:31–38; Rom. 11:16–24; 1 Cor. 3:6–7 use the same image, although the last three texts lack judgment overtones. A similar usage is found at Qumran (1QS 8.5–6; CD 1.7; 1QH 8.4–11) and in Judaism (Odes Sol. 38.17–21; SB 1:720–21). Hauck, TDNT 3:133, and Wiefel 1988: 197 note Joel 3:13 [4:13 MT]; Hos. 6:11; Isa. 27:11–12, as OT texts where Israel is seen as wheat among Gentile chaff. For an eschatological use of the imagery that looks at consummation, see Matt. 13:36–43; Rev. 14:15. Nolland 1993a: 550–51 argues for a slightly distinct use from the OT, since the call is to enter the kingdom with less concern about judgment. But the options are clear in Luke 10:8–11.

17 On the term ἐκβάλλω (to thrust out), see BAGD 237 §2 and BAA 478 §2. Against Hendriksen 1978: 572, the term does not mean “force out” here. It is, however, a strong, graphic term that shows that God calls and equips; so Arndt 1956: 281.

18 The passages match except for the reversal of two words, ἐργάτας ἐκβάλῃ (thrust out workers), in Matthew. Gospel of Thomas 73 also has an exact parallel; in Judaism, see m. ›Abot 2.15.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

19 Grundmann 1963: 209; Ernst 1977: 332; also 1 Enoch 89.14, 18–20, 55; 90.6–17; Sir. 13:17 (“how can wolf and lamb agree? / just so with sinner and devout” [NJB]); 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 5:18.

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Šab. Šabbat

20 Windisch, TDNT 1:496–99, gives a description of how involved these greetings could be: hugs, kisses, and news were often exchanged.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[21] Gen. 43:23; Judg. 6:23; 19:20; 1 Sam. 25:6; Isa. 52:7; Luke 2:14; 24:36; Acts 10:36; 16:36. Ellis 1974: 156 calls it a benediction more than a greeting.

m. Mishnah

[22] See Matthew's synonymous phrase child of the kingdom (Matt. 13:38). Child of peace focuses on what one has, while child of the kingdom describes where one resides. Danker 1960–61; Klassen 1980–81. SB 2:166 notes parallel Semitic phrases like child of power, child of knowledge, child of Haggadah, and child of the future world.

[23] So child of Gehenna (Matt. 23:15), child of destruction (John 17:12), children of disobedience (Eph. 5:6), child of death (2 Sam. 12:5 LXX), children of wrath (Eph. 2:3). Schweizer, TDNT 8:365, calls this use of υἱός a term "of relationship," noting positively children of light (Luke 16:8) and children of resurrection (20:36).

[24] Γέ (indeed) is emphatic, stressing rejection's consequences; see the exegesis of 10:12 for details.

[25] Windisch, TDNT 1:499 n. 23, argues that the Spirit is meant here, citing Num. 11:25–26; Isa. 11:2; and 1 Pet. 4:14. Although the Spirit is related to the provision of blessing, at this point in Luke–Acts it is too early to see a direct reference, since the abiding Spirit is not bestowed until Acts 2.

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

NRSV New Revised Standard Version

26 Through tracing the saying's later tradition history, Harvey 1982b: 211 n. 8 argues that its original context is not certain, but the Matthean and Lucan settings are a natural starting point. There is good cultural precedent in the Essene and other communities for such hospitable reception for traveling religious messengers. Rabbis were forbidden to receive direct wages for their teaching, though such provision was allowed; m. ›Abot 1.13; 4.5; Daube 1956: 395–96.

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

27 Creed 1930: 145 argues that Matt. 10:10 is different from Luke, since it mentions food. This view ignores Matt. 10:11, which speaks of finding a worthy house and staying there.

28 For the variety of ways the kingdom is said to come, see K. Schmidt, TDNT 1:584.

29 Perrin 1963: 64–66; Acts 21:33; Luke 12:33; 22:47; 24:15, 28. Luke 15:1 and 18:40 show that Luke often uses ἐγγίζω to mean "arrive." Fitzmyer 1985: 848–49 argues that when the verb is tied to a time reference it speaks of the approach of an event in the near future.

30 Schweizer 1984: 176 notes that the force is spatial. Marshall 1978: 422 notes that in 11:20, which uses a different term, φθάνω, Luke clearly means "arrived." On the relationship between ἐγγίζω and φθάνω, see Fitzer, TDNT 9:89, esp. n. 10. Does 10:9 say the same thing as 11:20? It most likely does. Marshall does not think the spatial argument is as key as the argument of 11:20. For a full defense of the kingdom declared as arrived in this verse, see Bock 1992c. For the debate over the Aramaic behind the sayings and the difficulty of determining it, see Meier 1994: 432–34, 486–87. Luke's ἐφ' ὑμᾶς (upon you) is missing in the Matthean parallel and may represent his explanation of the sayings' force. The present effects of the kingdom are clearly in view (10:23–24; Nolland 1993a: 554). Schürmann 1994: 74 cites 7:28; 16:16; and 17:20–21 as conceptually parallel.

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

31 Here ὑμῖν is a good example of a dative of disadvantage: "against you." Marshall 1978: 423 and Grundmann 1963: 210 note that this is true—unless the town repents. The declaration is not decisive, but it indicates where the town is headed. The danger of refusal now is that there will be refusal later. For more on “shaking dust,” see Cadbury 1933: 269–71.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

32 Gen. 19; Deut. 29:23 [29:22 MT]; Isa. 1:9 (cited in Rom. 9:29); 3:9; 13:19; Lam. 4:6; Ezek. 16:48–50; Amos 4:11; and Zeph. 2:9 show that Sodom was a symbol of the worst possible judgment; the NT texts are 2 Pet. 2:6–7 and Jude 7. Conceptually this Lucan passage is like the Lam. 4 text. So severely were Sodom and Gomorrah viewed in Judaism that some thought they would not even be raised to face final judgment (m. Sanh. 10.3; t. Sanh. 13.8 [= Neusner 1977–86: 4.240]).

33 On degrees of judgment, see 12:47–48. “That day” is the day of judgment; Matt. 7:22; 2 Tim. 1:12, 18; 4:8; Zech. 12:3–4; Jer. 30:8; Isa. 10:20; Delling, TDNT 2:952. It looks to the fearful day-of-the-Lord judgment.

34 BAGD 883, BAA 1762, and esp. Fitzmyer 1985: 853 discusses the uncertainty about Chorazin’s exact location: either two to three miles north of Capernaum at Khirbet Karazeh (R. W. Smith in ABD 1:912) or a site on Lake Gennesaret. Wiefel 1988: 198–99 prefers the location near Capernaum, as does Manson 1949: 77. Manson also notes that Bethsaida is on the east side of the Jordan near its entry into the Sea of Galilee, about five miles from Capernaum.

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

b. Babylonian Talmud

*Ta*ʿ*an. Ta*ʿ*anit*

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

35 Matthew has ἐγένοντο, Luke ἐγενήθησαν. Stählin, TDNT 7:61–62, makes too much of this difference.

36 On the external evidence favoring reading a question here, see Metzger 1975: 30–31. The meaning is not affected by the choice.

LXX Septuagint

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

MT Masoretic Text

LXX Septuagint

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

37 The "representative" concept is common, reflecting the Jewish institution of the שָׁלִיחַ (šālıâḥ, the sent one). M. Ber. 5.5 says, "The one sent by the man is as the man himself."

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

38 Satan's access to heaven is assumed in Job 1:6–12; 2:1–7. Fitzmyer 1985: 862 and Nolland 1993a: 563 are against the Isaianic allusion, but

Luke's language suggests that passage. As an allusion it does not identify Isaiah's referent, since Isaiah probably refers to an earthly king who arrogantly takes on the role of a god and is cast down by God. In later Jewish thinking, the king correctly becomes typological of what Satan also does. The phrase overlapping with Isa. 14:12 is ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ (from heaven). For Jewish handling of Isa. 14, see Miyoshi 1974: 100; see especially T. Sol. 20.16–17, which pictures demons falling like lightning to earth.

OT Old Testament

39 Foerster, TDNT 2:80, speaks of this as the end of Satan's right to accuse humans; but the fall means much more than this.

NT New Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

40 In Judaism, 1 Enoch 55.4; Jub. 23.29; T. Sim. 6.6; T. Judah 25.3; Sibylline Oracles 3.796–807; T. Moses 10.1–3. Leaney 1958: 179 notes that the specific picture of a fall from heaven (for the wicked angels, not Satan specifically) comes later in Judaism (e.g., the eighth-century Pirqe de Rabbi Eliezer 22 [= Friedlander 1916: 160]). In Tg. Ps.-J. on Gen. 6:4 (= Bowker 1969: 151), the angels that fell are named Shamhazi and Azael. In Pirqe de Rabbi Eliezer 14 [= Friedlander 1916: 99]), the angel Sammael is cast down from heaven for deceiving Eve. For Judaism, Sammael in all likelihood equals the devil (Wis. 2:24; Tg. Ps.-J. on Gen. 3:6 [= Bowker 1969: 121]).

41 Manson 1949: 258 notes that Jesus' passive role argues for authenticity, since God is still the major actor.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

42 In the Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha, Satan is commonly viewed as the defeated enemy or associated with serpents: T. Dan 6.3–4; T. Moses 10.1; and possibly Sir. 25:15, 24. Grundmann, TDNT 3:400, adds T. Levi 18.12; T. Zeb. 9.8; and Jub. 10.8. In later Judaism, see Midr. Ps. 91.8 on 91:13 (= Braude 1959: 2.107). Seesemann, TDNT 5:943, sees a figure of speech referring to protection, but it is better to speak of a miracle picturing victory and protection, since miraculous authority is present. Other Jewish texts on Satan include T. Asher 7.3 and T. Dan 5.10–11.

43 The latter idea is explicit in the textually uncertain Mark 16:18; Hendriksen 1978: 581.

OT Old Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

44 Num. 21:6–9; Ps. 58:4 [58:5 MT]; 140:3 [140:4 MT]; 1 Kings 12:11, 14 = 2 Chron. 10:11, 14; Sir. 21:2; 39:30. Meanwhile, Midr. Ps. 91.8 on 91:13 (= Braude 1959: 2.107) gives such power to Noah; Sipra 227 on Lev. 22:29–33 (= Neusner 1988b: 3.231) attributes a power to judge to the "Omnipresent"; while T. Levi 18 gives such power to the messianic high priest. Miyoshi 1974: 102–5 has a full survey of the Jewish texts and regards Deut. 8:15 as key.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

45 Plummer 1896: 279 notes two later traditions about John's being preserved from boiling oil and his failing to succumb to hemlock, but the origin of these accounts is uncertain. Tertullian, Prescription against Heretics 36, records the first incident.

46 Marshall 1978: 430 notes that the rhetorical remark is not a denial or a rebuke about their joy over their authority; it is a comparative idea. Knowing God, or better, being known by him, is a more important source of joy; Zerwick 1963: §445.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NT New Testament

47 Exod. 32:32; Ps. 69:28 [69:29 MT]; Isa. 4:3; Dan. 7:10; 12:1; Mal. 3:16–17; 1 Enoch 47.3; 104.1; 108.7; Jub. 5.13–14; 23.32; 30.19–23; 1QM 12.2; Phil. 4:3; Heb. 12:23; Rev. 3:5; 20:12, 15; 21:27; Ellis 1974: 157; Fitzmyer 1985: 863–64; SB 2:173–76; Schrenk, TDNT 1:619–20; Traub, TDNT 5:532 n. 295. Manson 1949: 258–59 lists the various "books" mentioned in the Bible and Judaism: (1) book of life, (2) book of human deeds, (3) book of the earthly destiny of people, and (4) book of the divine plan. Only the first two are in the Bible.

48 See Manson 1949: 79 for a defense of the authenticity of this saying.

49 Ellis 1974: 158 notes that ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ (in this hour) refers not so much to chronology as to "this key eschatological time"; cf. Luke 12:56; 19:44; 21:24; 22:53; 23:43; John 4:23; 5:25; 2 Cor. 6:2; Heb. 3:7–4:10.

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

1QH Thanksgiving Hymns/Psalms (Hôdāyôt)

50 A reference to the Spirit in 10:21 is clear, regardless of the passage's exact wording. For the difficult textual problem, see the additional note.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

NRSV New Revised Standard Version

1QapGen Genesis Apocryphon

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

1QpHab Pesher on Habakkuk

1QH Thanksgiving Hymns/Psalms (Hôdāyôt)

4Q169 Pesher on Nahum (4QpNah)

11QPs Psalms Scroll

[a] Psalms Scroll

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

MT Masoretic Text

1QH Thanksgiving Hymns/Psalms (Hôdāyôt)

1QH Thanksgiving Hymns/Psalms (Hôdāyôt)

[51] Fitzmyer 1985: 865–68, though going a different way, recognizes that it is unlikely that the text was a unit in a source shared with Matthew because, had Luke possessed Matthew's version, he would have used it.

Fitzmyer is against the position of E. Norden, who argues that the original form is in Q and is reflected in Matthew. Norden cites not only Sir. 51 but also the Hermetic text Poimandres 32. Fitzmyer notes problems of artificial addition in Norden's citation of the Hermetic text.

52 Υἱός as an absolute term in the Synoptics occurs only here and in Mark 13:32.

53 On the idea of total authority in παραδίδωμι (to give over), see Büchsel, TDNT 2:171; Matt. 11:27; 28:18 (δίδωμι); 1 Cor. 15:24; Exod. Rab. 15.30 on 12:2. Stauffer, TDNT 2:348, calls this passage the "cry of jubilation."

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

54 Such efforts, beginning with Harnack, regard this verse as too harsh a literary transition. This view appeals to the church fathers, who often cite the phrase and reverse the position of the Son and Father. Creed 1930: 147–48 rightly rejects such attempts because they are without strong external textual support; see also Schweizer, TDNT 8:372 n. 276. Marshall 1978: 435 notes that Marcion and codex N reverse the expression in Luke, while Justin Martyr and codex N reverse it in Matthew; for more reversal passages in the fathers, see Grundmann 1963: 218 n. 16.

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

55 Klostermann 1929: 118 notes six differences between Matt. 13:16–17 and Luke 10:23–24, but this one is the most crucial.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

56 For the options, see Meier 1994: 489–90, who opts for a Matthean change to “righteous” because of Matt. 10:41 and 23:29 and because “kings and prophets” is a more natural combination. If a change is made from one tradition, this direction makes more sense than Luke’s making the change.

Old Testament

OT Old Testament

57 Metzger 1958–59: 303–4 notes other examples from the Targums and Pseudepigrapha that develop the number seventy.

LXX Septuagint

b. Babylonian Talmud

Šab. Šabbat

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

m. Mishnah

Zebaḥ. Zebaḥim

m. Mishnah

Yad. Yadayim

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

58 Tannehill 1986: 233 prefers seventy-two, but does not know which symbolic idea is present, other than a stress on universal mission; so also Talbert 1982: 115.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

59 This is why K. Aland (in Metzger 1975: 151) is certain that seventy-two was original. Wiefel 1988: 195 asks if seventy is not an attempt to get a round number.

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

LXX Septuagint

60 Marshall sees an allusion to the nations in the wolves of 10:3, but if so the allusion is negative, which does not reinforce the universal element alleged as present here; Jellicoe 1959–60.

61 Egelkraut 1976: 145–48 emphatically and correctly shows that Israel is in view in this mission, since the woes of 10:13–15 are only to Israelite cities. At most, the inclusion of Samaria could be implied by 9:51–56, but it looks as if the failure of that effort led to a return to Galilee.

OT Old Testament

62 The RSV and NRSV read seventy; see also Schweizer 1984: 174; Danker 1988: 212 (who attributes the number seventy-two to Moses' addition of two elders when he appointed his seventy [Num. 11:26] and sees Gentile symbolism in the choice); Tiede 1988: 200–201; Ellis 1974: 155–56; C. F. Evans 1990: 444–45; Schürmann 1994: 54. The NIV reads seventy-two; also Manson 1949: 74; Liefeld 1984: 940; Hendriksen 1978: 570–71 ("leans" this way); Creed 1930: 144; Arndt 1956: 280; Ernst 1977: 331; Marshall 1978: 414–15 (who has a good summary of the issue); Fitzmyer 1985: 845–46; Wiefel 1988: 195; C. A. Evans 1990: 172; Nolland 1993a: 546. Those who are undecided include Luce 1933: 198–99; Plummer 1896: 272; and Schneider 1977a: 235 (who argues that a decision is less than certain).

Tannehill 1986: 179 argues that the first subunit shows where Jesus and the lawyer are similar, while the parable shows where Jesus' emphasis is unique.

OT Old Testament

2 Creed misses the point when he says that Jesus' goal is to say that anyone is your neighbor. The answer includes this and more. Klostermann 1929: 118–19 makes the same error in seeing the point as only that the compassionate Samaritan is closer to the kingdom than is the representative of Judaism.

[3] Many explain the difference in the Lucan form of the question (eternal life) versus that in the other Synoptics (greatest commandment) as a Lucan rewording that highlighted the real issue; Marshall 1978: 440–41.

OT Old Testament

[4] Klostermann 1929: 118 and Egelkraut 1976: 85–90 favor a Lucan reworking of Mark. Schneider 1977a: 247 and Wiefel 1988: 207 see an independent source for the parable and Luke 10:25–28 using Mark. Bultmann 1963: 51; Luce 1933: 204 (citing Q); and Daube 1956: 247–50 see a version like that in Matthew. Zahn 1920: 427; Manson 1949: 259–61; and Jeremias 1963a: 202 see independent incidents or sources. Plummer 1896: 283 calls the possibility of one incident precarious, but not impossible. Fitzmyer 1985: 877–78 clearly ascribes the material to a special Lucan source, but sees only one incident, a distinction that seems hard to insist upon. Marshall 1978: 441 also leans toward two incidents, as do Hendriksen 1978: 591; Liefeld 1984: 942; and Blomberg 1990: 230–31, who speaks of “proem midrash” here. Ellis 1974: 159, though noting that two incidents are probable, regards the exchange as set in Jerusalem, which is possible, since the next account is in Bethany. Grundmann 1963: 221–22 speaks only of an independent source with the parable coming from L, while Ernst 1977: 344–46 leans this way, clearly noting that the parable is from special Lucan material. Nolland 1993a: 580 argues for an original link of neighbor and the parable, but that Luke is responsible for placing the great-commandment discussion here, drawing on Mark 12:28–34. Schürmann 1994: 136–40, 149–50 sees the parable emerging from L material and rooted in Jesus' intention, but 10:25–28 is probably rooted in Mark's account and does not testify to a separate event.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ber. Berakot

m. Mishnah

b. Babylonian Talmud

[5] Jeremias 1971a: 187 argues that the verb ἀναγινώσκω renders Semitic קרא (qr,) and means "to recite," so that Jesus is calling for a specific text.

Derrett 1970: 224 n. 1 notes that this view goes back to J. B. Lightfoot.

6 Daube 1956: 433 believes that the verse asks simply for a biblical exposition of how the scribe sees the issue; so also Derrett 1970: 224. Daube cites as support m. ʿ*Abod. Zar.* 2.5, where the question "how do you read (קרא)?" seeks a specific scriptural response (though in fact what is asked for in the mishnaic example is a defense of a certain vocalization of the text).

7 Luke cites the Jewish form of the question and the phrase ἐν τῷ νόμῳ (in the law), which is paralleled in Matt. 22:36, though Matthew places it on the lawyer's lips.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

8 There can be no rabbinic-style distinction between legal duty and voluntary acts of love after Jesus expounds these texts; correctly, Gutbrod, TDNT 4:1064.

OT Old Testament

9 Five Greek terms are found in Deut. 6:5 LXX and its quotation in the Synoptics: καρδία (heart), ψυχή (soul), δύναμις (power), διάνοια (mind), and ἰσχύς (strength). Deut. 6:5 has καρδία–ψυχή–δύναμις; Matt. 22:37 has καρδία–ψυχή–διάνοια; Mark 12:30 has καρδία–ψυχή–διάνοια–ἰσχύς; and Luke 10:27 has καρδία–ψυχή–ἰσχύς–διάνοια. See Egelkraut 1976: 86, esp. n. 1. In addition, Luke uses both ἐκ (ek, from, with) and ἐν (en, with), while Deut. 6:5 and Mark 12:30 use only ἐκ and Matt. 22:37 only ἐν.

[10] The lawyer provides this answer in Luke. In contrast, Jesus replies in these terms in Mark 12:29–31 = Matt. 22:37–39, which reflect a different, later setting.

NT New Testament

[11] There is debate about the age of these sections of the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs and, as a result, whether they reflect the Judaism of Jesus' period. Fitzmyer 1985: 879 questions their value, while Derrett 1970: 225 n. 5 holds that this uncertainty is insufficient to reject the presence of these ideas in this time. Nolland 1993a: 580–82 argues that the theme has Jewish roots, but that Jesus gives more focus to these two laws being the center of godliness. In Luke, the lawyer has such insight as well. Would the early church put such a reply in the lips of a Jewish lawyer? Nolland rightly rejects insistence on a Hellenistic background (against Schürmann 1994: 135, who speaks of piety toward God and righteousness toward others), but it must be noted that nowhere in Judaism do Deut. 6 and Lev. 19 appear explicitly side by side. See also the additional note.

T. Iss. Testament of Issachar

T. Dan Testament of Dan

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

T. Ben. Testament of Benjamin

Jub. Jubilees

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

12 But Talbert's imposition (1982: 122–25) of an exclusive post-Easter transformation of the story from a challenge to an exemplary account misses the force of the pre-Easter legal arguments. What is true for pleasing God is always true—whether one is entering into relationship with him or responding to being in relationship with him. In addition, there is no limitation to such love. The parable does not speak about how God's people are treated in an ecclesiastical or religious setting. When it comes to fundamental human needs and rights, all people deserve such consideration and basic care (Gal. 6:10). There is no more open, public context than the highway that this parable (and moral) travels.

13 Whether it is a midrash on Hos. 6:6, as Derrett suggests, rather than Deut. 6 and Lev. 19, is less clear. The passage speaks against a view like Sir. 12:1–4: one does good to a person one knows, and definitely not to sinners.

[14] Manson 1949: 262 notes both Josephus, Jewish War 4.8.3 §474, who describes the region's barren character, and Jerome, who observes that Arab robbers were frequent on this route in his day some four centuries after Jesus. Nolland 1993a: 593 adds to the list Strabo 16.2.40–41 (c763), who mentions Pompey's problem with robbers and then describes the city.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[15] BAGD 473; BAA 960; Josephus, Jewish War 2.8.4 §125 (which speaks about how Essene travelers took arms to protect themselves from such robbers) and 2.12.2 §228 (where robbers caused major social unrest). Luke refers to a robber, not a terrorist.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament: Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources, by J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan (repr. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980)

LSJ A Greek-English Lexicon, by H. G. Liddell, R. Scott, and H. S. Jones (Oxford: Clarendon, 1968)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

NT New Testament

16 On priestly uncleanness, see Lev. 21:1; on priests' being excused from helping sinners, see Sir. 12:4–6 and Midr. Sam. 5 §9 (31a). Nolland 1993a: 593 adds Num. 5:2; 19:2–13; Ezek. 44:25–27 to the list of texts on uncleanness, but rightly refuses to name these as a motive in the parable.

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

m. Mishnah

b. Babylonian Talmud

m. Mishnah

ʿEd. ʿEduyyot

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

m. Mishnah

Šeb. Šebi‘it

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

17 B. Scott’s treatment (1989: 190–202) underplays the twist and argues that the Jewish hearer could not identify with the Samaritan because of cultural prejudice. But this is exactly what Jesus challenges the lawyer (and the hearer of the parable) to do and see: be a neighbor and do so without prejudice. Scott’s effort to see 10:37 as Lucan on the basis of parallels and because of a shift of meaning for “neighbor” ignores Jesus’ penchant for redirecting thinking and playing with meaning (e.g., 5:24; 20:41–44; see the discussion of sources and historicity above).

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

18 Crossan 1971–72: 293 argues that Jesus’ original parable was altered into an example story in the tradition and redaction, a theory that makes too much of a distinction between the actions that set up the story and the point made from it. For Crossan, the original parable by Jesus was only about seeing the possibility that a Samaritan could be good. According to Crossan, the lesson that others could enter the kingdom was the key parabolic insight. The point is correct, though overstated, but Crossan's tradition history is not on target.

19 This distinction shows the problem with Crossan's view (see previous note), as he minimizes the presence of this focus by saying that the element of goodness in the story is obvious and taken for granted. But two ideas are present: (1) an enemy like a Samaritan can be good and (2) a note about what good neighborliness is.

20 Manson 1949: 262 notes this objection and rejects it, as does Luce 1933: 206–7. Luce notes that those who take the position see the original third man as an Israelite layman, a view mentioned earlier.

m. Mishnah

Šab. Šabbat

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[21] Derrett 1970: 220–21; b. Šab. 13b; 17b; m. ʿAbod. Zar. 2.3. Derrett overinterprets the imagery here when he makes allusions to the temple setting.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LSJ A Greek-English Lexicon, by H. G. Liddell, R. Scott, and H. S. Jones (Oxford: Clarendon, 1968)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[22] Derrett 1970: 217–18 gives details of the transaction that show how the innkeeper was bound to offer aid. The exchange of money is part of a deal noted in b. B. Bat. 174a.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[23] Jeremias 1969: 122–23 argues for twenty-four days, while Heutger 1983: 98 prefers fourteen. But Heutger does not consider the “poor man’s” rate, speaking rather of a pensioner’s rate of a denarius a week.

[24] The term occurs in Luke at 7:13; 10:33; and 15:20. The exceptions to Egelkraut’s claim, Matt. 18:27 and Luke 15:20, undercut his argument.

[25] Fitzmyer 1985: 888 sees a possible allusion to Mic. 6:8. The expression recalls God’s action in Luke 1:72.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

1QS Manual of Discipline (Rule/Order of the Community)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Šab. Šabbat

T. Naph. Testament of Naphtali

T. Zeb. Testament of Zebulun

T. Iss. Testament of Issachar

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

Wall 1989 argues that this story is a call to hear the word similar to Deut. 8:3. He also argues that Luke 10:25–37 is an example story expounding Deut. 7:12. This connection with Deuteronomy is stronger in Luke 10:38–42 than in 10:25–37.

Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

M. Soṭa 3.4 shows that some rabbis were against any instruction for women, while others thought it advisable. Josephus expresses a negative attitude toward women when he argues that the law says they are inferior to men in all things (Against Apion 2.24 §201). The connection of this text to Josephus is debated, since he does occasionally praise women, such as Alexandra (Antiquities 13.16.6 §§430–31). However, that she is regarded as an exception shows Josephus's general attitude.

Fitzmyer 1985: 891 sees no connection between the accounts, regarding such an association as stretching the point (so also Ernst 1977: 354). But literary sequence and theme make it seem likely; see esp. Talbert 1982: 125.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[4] The initial καί probably means “also” and introduces the second figure in the house, Mary. On the use of ὅδε (this person), here τῇδε, see BDF §289, §290.1.

m. Mishnah

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[5] Διακονεῖν (to serve) is an infinitive of result: Martha is left with the result that she serves alone; BDF §392.1f.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[6] This emphatic figure of repetition is called “epanadiplosis”; BDF §493.1.

[7] The verb θορυβέω (to be troubled), is related to the verb used here (θορυβάζω, a hapax legomenon). Both verbs look at a situation of disorder, not in terms of illness but stress; BAGD 362–63; BAA 737; Acts 17:5; 20:10; Matt. 9:23 = Mark 5:39; 13:7 (variant reading in Codex D).

m. Mishnah

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

[8] On ὑποδέχομαι as “receiving into a home,” see Luke 19:6; Acts 17:7; James 2:25; BAGD 844; BAA 1682.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

[1] Ellis 1974: 163–64 attributes the original context to Luke, a view that is possible only if the Sermon on the Mount is a Matthean topical sermon (which, though possible, is not likely). In favor of one occasion or point of origin are Manson 1949: 265; Godet 1875: 2.47; Zahn 1920: 448–49 (favoring a view like Ellis's); Schneider 1977a: 256; and Wiefel 1988: 215. A good summary of recent discussion may be found in Meier 1994: 291–93, 353–57. Meier sees Luke as reflecting the original size and structure of the prayer, with Matthew expanding the petitions and Luke altering some wording. But unlike many, he sees two versions in circulation. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 325–27) sees Q as the source, with Matthew making additions and Luke introducing some changes in vocabulary. The seminar's view of these details parallels many critics.

[2] Fitzmyer 1985: 897–98 is skeptical about the Lucan setting, though he does regard it as likely that the prayer goes back to Jesus. See also Egelkraut 1976: 153, esp. n. 1.

[3] Other variations will be noted in the verses. In fact, everything about Luke's version is difficult—if the premise is that Luke had Matthew and that the two events are one.

[4] Plummer 1896: 293 argues that if the prayer was delivered only once, then Luke has the original setting, which came earlier in Jesus' ministry. I agree that this is the next best option, given the possibility that the Sermon on the Mount is an anthology or a preaching summary.

[5] Marshall 1978: 455 sees either two versions or Matthew's adding to an original short edition like that in Luke. These reflect distinct recensions of Q; but he does not discuss the number of events. Jeremias 1971a: 193–96 argues for the originality of the Lucan form and posits an Aramaic form behind it. He regards its structure as memorable in an oral context, carrying rhyme and a two-four rhythm (so also Meier 1994: 293). Beasley-Murray 1986: 147 argues that Luke's version is original in extent, but that Matthew's is closer to the original wording, a view close to Nolland's (noted above). For him Luke's prayer circulated in Gentile Christian circles, while Matthew's was the Jewish-Christian version. Nevertheless, for him the prayer's roots go back to Jesus. Wiefel 1988: 215 is less certain of this attempt to distinguish communities.

[6] To regard such a repetition as unbelievable underestimates the role of "liturgical-style" community prayers in the ancient world. Such repetition is not unusual.

[7] Also, the Jewish prayer Kaddish is often cited as relevant, but it is uncertain that its roots go back this far (for discussion, see Petuchowski and Brocke 1978).

4QMess ar Aramaic messianic text

NT New Testament

[8] Without discussing the settings, Marshall 1978: 466 speaks only of different versions of the teaching having reached Matthew and Luke.

Bultmann 1963: 324 is similar. Berger 1984: 46, 239–40 argues that two parables conclude the passage, but it is hard to know if 11:11–13 is a parable or a wisdom saying that makes a simple comparison.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[10] Egelkraut 1976: 154 n. 5 notes that none of SB's examples are about prayer. Although 17:5 is similar, it is not a direct request for teaching but encouragement.

[11] Fitzmyer 1985: 902 mentions the Qumran community prayers, such as the Hôdāyôt or Thanksgiving Psalms. On comparison with the Shemoneh Esreh, see Beasley-Murray 1986: 148–57; K. Kuhn 1950: 30–33, 40–46.

[12] So καὶ ἐγένετο (and it came to pass), ὡς (when), παύω (to cease), and καθώς (even as). Schweizer 1984: 190–91 sees the verse as Lucan, because Luke typically poses a question or notes an attitude at the beginning of a teaching of Jesus: 11:27, 45; 12:13, 41; 13:1–2, 23, 31; 14:15; 15:2; 16:14; 17:5, 20; 18:9; 19:11, 39; 22:24, 49; 23:27. Of these, only 17:5 is not uniquely Lucan, though the request to increase faith is unique. Luke 15:2 and 16:14 reflect complaints, while 11:27, 45; 12:13; 13:31; 14:15; 15:2; 16:14; 17:20; 18:9; 19:11, 39; 22:24; and 23:27 reflect statements, attitudes, or actions. Only four other verses are questions (12:41; 13:1–2, 23; 22:49). Nowhere is Jesus asked to instruct, only to explain or call to act. So the type of request is unusual. In addition, the presence of other features are less likely to be Lucan. For example, the reference to John is not necessary to set the scene. These unique features reduce the chance that Luke created the setting.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

13 In Sir. 23:1, 4; 51:10 πατήρ often occurs alongside κύριος (Lord) or δεσπότης (master) (Schrenk, TDNT 5:979 n. 209, 981, 984–85). Elsewhere in Judaism at Shemoneh Esreh [Eighteen Benedictions] nos. 4–6 (= Schürer 1973–87: 2.456–57, 460); Wis. 14:3; 3 Macc. 6:3, 8. In the OT at Deut. 32:6; Isa. 63:16; 64:8 [64:7 MT]; Jer. 3:4; Ps. 68:5 [68:6 MT]; 89:26 [89:27 MT] (of God's relationship to the king, as also 2 Sam. 7:14); Mal. 1:6; 2:10; 1 Chron. 29:10. As a NT term of intimacy, see Rom. 8:14–16; Gal. 4:6; Mark 14:36.

14 Jeremias 1971a: 63–68 notes no example of "my Father" in the literature. In fact, in Judaism such intimacy was avoided. Jeremias 1967b: 16–29 lists the potential Jewish parallels. Dunn 1975: 21–26 notes that Jeremias overstates the case in allowing no exceptions, but suggests that Jeremias's general portrait is correct. Plummer 1896: 296 remarks that God as the Father of Israel is an OT image; the concept of God as Father to individual people begins to appear only in intertestamental Judaism (see the texts in the previous note). Jesus' reference to "my Father" is highly unusual, though not unprecedented: 4Q372; 3 Macc. 6:3; Wis. 14:3; and Sir. 23:1 use "my Father" or "Father." In the NT, see Luke 2:49; 10:22 = Matt.

11:27; Luke 22:29; 24:49; Matt. 7:21; 10:32–33; 12:50; 15:13; 16:17; 18:10, 35; 20:23; 25:34; 26:29, 39, 53. The contrast is striking and significant.

15 This view has been qualified recently by Barr 1988; see Witherington 1990: 217–18 for an evaluation of Barr's critique. On relating to God as a child does to a parent, see Luke 18:15–17; Dunn 1975: 23. R. Brown 1994: 172–75 has a full discussion of ›abbā‹.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

16 Translation from Jeremias 1971a: 198. See also Shemoneh Esreh [Eighteen Benedictions] no. 3 (= Schürer 1973–87: 2.456, 460). However, Jesus' prayer is more like Jewish "short" prayers than this long Jewish liturgical prayer; C. A. Evans 1990: 182. As such, the prayer's form and function come as no surprise in a Jewish context.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ber. Berakot

[17] A similar metonymic meaning for ἄρτος as food, not just bread, is found in Luke 7:33; John 13:18; 2 Thess. 3:8, 12; Marshall 1978: 458; Behm, TDNT 1:477–78.

[18] Jeremias 1971a: 199–201 cites Jerome's Commentary on Matthew on Matt. 6:11 and Marcion. On ancient interpretation, see Fitzmyer 1985: 900, 904–5.

[19] BAGD 296–97 and BAA 601–2. Creed 1930: 157 notes objections to saying that the evangelists coined the term, citing a disputed papyrus reading of a fragmentary text (Preisigke #5224). Fitzmyer 1985: 905–6 lists three possible etymologies: ἐπί + οὐσία = "necessary"; ἐπί + οὖσα = "for today" (supplying ἡμέρα [day] to make a complete idea); ἐπί + present participle of εἶμι (to come) = "for the coming day" (with ἡμέρα again supplied to complete the thought). Determining the etymology is not crucial, since a word's meaning is not determined by etymology.

[20] Seeberg 1914: 11–12. In an exhaustive study of the problem, Carmignac 1969: 122–28 notes that "necessary" and "for the future day" were the most popular ancient options.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[21] Danker 1988: 229 suggests that Luke 12:16–21 and 21:1–4 elaborate on the petition. Since disciples recognize that God gives, they are generous with what they receive.

NT New Testament

NRSV New Revised Standard Version

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

22 Fitzmyer 1985: 906 notes similar usage at Qumran and suggests that Luke refers to sins to prevent confusion for his Greek audience. The use of ἁμαρτίας looks like the LXX, esp. Ps. 24:18 [25:18 Eng.]; also Gen. 50:17; Exod. 32:32; Num. 14:19; Plummer 1896: 297.

23 Marshall 1978: 461 notes that the asking of forgiveness is conditional, meaning that the request for forgiveness assumes that the disciple is ready to be forgiving, while God's granting of forgiveness is a work of his grace (cf. Matt. 18:21–35).

24 1 Macc. 2:49–64. Sir. 2:1–2 (NRSV) says: "My child, when you come to serve the Lord, / prepare yourself for testing. / Set your heart right and be steadfast, / and do not be impetuous in time of calamity."

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ber. Berakot

25 Marshall argues for a causative force here ("cause us not to succumb to temptation") citing 4Q174 [= 4QFlor] 1.8 as reflecting the Hebrew idiom. So also Talbert 1982: 130, citing Luke 4:13; 22:28; Acts 14:22; 20:19 as illustrations of this kind of request.

[26] James 1:14–15 looks at the issue from the perspective of our response to such temptation and with the awareness that we are responsible for our own sin. Fitzmyer 1985: 906 notes OT parallels to the thought: Exod. 16:4; 20:20; Deut. 8:2, 16; 13:3 [13:4 MT]; 33:8; Judg. 2:22.

[27] Plummer 1896: 298 notes the shift from the awkward future indicative to a deliberative subjunctive in reporting the call to the friend. See also n. 30.

[28] The φίλος (friend) in 11:5 is the neighbor, while the traveling friend (also φίλος) is not introduced until 11:6. The parable is told from the perspective of the midnight petitioner. The neb/reb reverses the syntax with the "friend" being the petitioner.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[29] On this style of introduction to a parable, compare Luke 11:11; 12:25; 14:28; 15:4; 17:7. In the OT, see Isa. 42:23; 50:10; Hag. 2:3; Fitzmyer 1985: 911.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[30] On the syntactical debate of 11:5–7, see Hendriksen 1978: 610. The basic issue is this: does Jesus' question end with 11:6 or 11:7? That Jesus' answer starts with 11:8 speaks in favor of the question extending through 11:7.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

31 Manson 1949: 267 accurately uses the descriptive and emotive term nuisance to describe how the neighbor saw the request.

32 Λέγω ὑμῖν (I say to you) elsewhere introduces applications in Luke: 14:24; 15:7, 10; 16:9; 18:8, 14; 19:26; Fitzmyer 1985: 912.

33 The viewpoint is that of the neighbor concerning the friend who makes the request. It is their mutual friendship that is in view; Marshall 1978: 465.

NT New Testament

34 BAGD 54; BAA 107; Sir. 40:30. Luke 18:4 is a conceptual parallel. For the lexical and interpretive debate on the term, see Blomberg 1990: 276, esp. nn. 51–53. For a careful study of ἀναίδεια, see A. Johnson 1979. He argues, however, citing Bailey 1976: 124–33 in support, that the line is about the neighbor, not the host, and that the antecedent of the second αὐτοῦ (his) in 11:8 is the neighbor because the neighbor is the constant subject in the verse. But this ignores αὐτῷ (to him) earlier in the verse, which refers to the host. Johnson sees the point as God's responding because his honor is at stake. But this meaning dishonors the gracious God that Jesus seeks to describe. Johnson is aware of this issue (p. 131 n. 39) and argues that Westerners do not appreciate Eastern cultural values. I hold that it contradicts the tone of 11:11–13.

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

35 The last verb is probably future tense but as a passive adds the note that God will open the door; see the additional note. The present tense suggests immediacy, since the reply is not put in the future.

36 A water snake is probably referred to by ὄφις, since this snake was used as bait for fishing; see Grundmann 1963: 235; Fitzmyer 1985: 915; Foerster, TDNT 5:566–68.

37 Marshall 1978: 496 notes five explanations offered for the Matthean-Lucan difference and opts for each Gospel representing different strands of oral tradition; see also Foerster, TDNT 5:579–80.

38 Matt. 7:11 refers more broadly in another setting to good things, so there is no need to discuss which wording is original; but see Marshall

1978: 470 for options. James 1:5–8, 17 is conceptually parallel. For δόμα (gift), see Eph. 4:8 (where the Spirit is referred to as gift) and Phil. 4:17; Büchsel, TDNT 2:166.

[39] The prayer's broad setting makes a baptismal reference unlikely, contra Ernst 1977: 367. This is basic exhortation about the life of faith.

[40] For example, some manuscripts ($\aleph^2$, A, C, D, P, W, Δ, Θ) omit the feminine article before γῆς and some manuscripts of the Itala, Vulgate, and Coptic lack reference to heaven and earth.

[41] Manson 1949: 265–66 is uncertain about its originality in Luke. Streeter 1924: 277 thinks it original. Ernst 1977: 362 and Fitzmyer 1985: 904 believe it was added later as a baptism formula to be prayed over the individual being baptized. On the use of the prayer in the history of the church, see Manson 1955–56. Besides Marcion and Gregory of Nyssa, the text is found only in manuscripts 162 and 700 and in a shorter form in Maximus the Confessor.

[42] On the first and second future, see BAGD 71; BAA 140.

[1] In this view, a tighter connection is seen between Matthew and Luke than between Luke and Mark, and proponents tend to speak of Q tradition. If Q is the source, this is the only exorcism in Q, a point that, by its uniqueness, argues for authenticity. Marshall 1978: 471–72 sees the account reflecting several controversies and that reconstructing the tradition history must be speculative. Fitzmyer 1985: 918 discusses only 11:19 as possibly reflecting an early church setting. Detailed evidence for Matthew's and Luke's being closer to each other than to Mark comes from Easton 1913.

[2] Bultmann 1963: 13–14 argues that Matthew and Luke have the story's original core (Luke 11:14–15, 17–18), to which various sayings have been added.

[3] Twelftree 1993 gives a detailed survey of the texts involving Jesus as exorcist. After a careful study, he concludes: "The first result we can record from our study is that we are able unhesitatingly to support the view that Jesus was an exorcist" (p. 225). This theme is too widely attested in the sources to be denied. Meier 1994: 646–77 is more circumspect in his approach to the seven NT exorcisms, rating some as having historical roots: the possessed boy (Mark 9:14–29 = Matt. 17:14–21 = Luke 9:37–43a), Mary Magdalene (Luke 8:2), and the Gerasene demoniac (Mark 5:1–20 = Matt. 8:28–34 = Luke 8:26–39). Luke 4:33–37 = Mark 1:21–28 (man in the synagogue) probably reflects "the sort of thing" that Jesus did in ministry. Meier is uncertain about the account of the mute/blind demoniac (in part, because of its brevity), though leaning toward historicity (Luke 11:14–15 = Matt. 12:22–23). Meier doubts Matt. 9:32–33 (mute demoniac) and Mark 7:24–30 = Matt. 15:21–28 (Syrophoenician woman). With typical circumspection, Meier concludes: "A decision that in any of these exorcisms a true miracle has taken place—in other words, that God has directly acted beyond all human potentiality to heal a particular individual—goes beyond what any scholar can say on purely historical grounds" (p. 661). Ironically enough, to decide for miracle is the very conclusion that Jesus' remarks desire.

[4] Egelkraut 1976: 91–92, esp. 91 n. 2, argues for six Marcan connections in Luke, but only three are clear. The phrase that you say in Luke 11:18 and Mark 3:30 and the use of ἐπί (against) in Luke 11:17 are a part of these connections, so that separate points about them are really the same point. It is doubtful that Luke 11:21–23 is just Mark 3:27 expanded, since Luke is not any closer to Mark than to Matt. 12:29–30.

3 Twelftree 1993 gives a detailed survey of the texts involving Jesus as exorcist. After a careful study, he concludes: “The first result we can record from our study is that we are able unhesitatingly to support the view that Jesus was an exorcist” (p. 225). This theme is too widely attested in the sources to be denied. Meier 1994: 646–77 is more circumspect in his approach to the seven NT exorcisms, rating some as having historical roots: the possessed boy (Mark 9:14–29 = Matt. 17:14–21 = Luke 9:37–43a), Mary Magdalene (Luke 8:2), and the Gerasene demoniac (Mark 5:1–20 = Matt. 8:28–34 = Luke 8:26–39). Luke 4:33–37 = Mark 1:21–28 (man in the synagogue) probably reflects “the sort of thing” that Jesus did in ministry. Meier is uncertain about the account of the mute/blind demoniac (in part, because of its brevity), though leaning toward historicity (Luke 11:14–15 = Matt. 12:22–23). Meier doubts Matt. 9:32–33 (mute demoniac) and Mark 7:24–30 = Matt. 15:21–28 (Syrophoenician woman). With typical circumspection, Meier concludes: “A decision that in any of these exorcisms a true miracle has taken place—in other words, that God has directly acted beyond all human potentiality to heal a particular individual—goes beyond what any scholar can say on purely historical grounds” (p. 661). Ironically enough, to decide for miracle is the very conclusion that Jesus’ remarks desire.

[5] Creed 1930: 159 speaks of Q here, as does Manson 1949: 83. The amount of Matthean-Lucan agreement makes this source connection likely, though whether it is Q or another shared tradition is debatable (Matthean prioritists see Matthew as the likely source). Grundmann 1963: 236–37 correctly notes that Matthew is closer to Luke than to Mark (see also Easton 1913, as discussed in n. 1 above). Fitzmyer 1985: 918 argues for Lucan additions in 11:16, but is uncertain about it in 11:14, 21–22. Additional source material cannot be ruled out. Tiede 1988: 216 notes that Matt. 12:23 and Mark 3:11 stress Christology, while Luke emphasizes controversy with the leadership; but Luke also has strong Christology in light of the parable in 11:21–23. Of the three accounts, Mark has less confrontation than the other two.

[6] For detailed defense of authenticity, see Meier 1994: 408–9 (on 11:17–18), 409–10 (11:19), 414–17 (11:20), 417 (11:21–22). Meier prefers to separate 11:20 from 11:17–18 in the earlier tradition, as well as from 11:21–22. He does think it likely that 11:20 was tied to 11:19. For agnosticism about this entire process of sorting out the relationship of 11:20 to 11:19, see Dunn 1988: 40–41 and n. 31. As noted above, I too am agnostic, if not outright skeptical, of sorting out clearly the question of the original unity of this tradition. However, I see no compelling reason to reject its unity, especially in light of the connection between 11:19 and 11:21–22 that I shall argue for below (see the exegesis of these verses).

[7] In Luke 1:20 the impediment is said to be from God; in Mark 7:32 no cause is stated, but Mark 9:17 links demonic activity with the lack of speech. On Jewish thinking about the association of disease or disability and demons, see SB 4:501–35; Van Der Loos 1965: 351–53; Ernst 1977: 373.

[8] The phrase ἐν Βεελζεβούλ (by Beelzebul) is in the emphatic position and is to be read as expressing the agent by whom Jesus supposedly heals: “by means of Beelzebub.” This title appears in Luke only here and 11:18–19.

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

[9] Though in this case the normal Greek form would be Βεελζεβούβ (Beelzebub); Marshall 1978: 473; BAGD 139; BAA 277–78.

[10] Other unlikely options are “Master of the complaint,” “Lord of dung,” or “Baal, the Flame”; Fitzmyer 1985: 920; Godet 1875: 2.60; Marshall 1978: 473; and Ernst 1977: 374.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[11] Fitzmyer 1985: 921 notes other names used for Satan in Judaism: Belial (2 Cor. 6:15; 1QS 1.18, 24), Mast\;emah (1QS 3.23; 1QM 13.4; Jub. 10.8), and Asmodeus (Tob. 3:8, 17).

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

12 Nolland 1993a: 637 adds other signs like turning back the sun (2 Kings 20:8–11) or providing manna like Moses (cf. Luke 9:12–17). SB 1:726–27 discusses this category in later rabbinic writings.

13 Manson 1949: 83–84. Friedrich, TDNT 6:847, argues that the office of eschatological prophet was the issue. Matthew's discussion of David seems to envision something more; for a discussion of the test, Rengstorf, TDNT 7:234.

14 So Arndt 1956: 300, though Luke's usual use of this tense makes this conclusion less than certain.

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

15 SB 1:635 cites Derek› ereṣ Zuṭṭa 5 (see Strack and Stemberger 1991: 251): "A house in which there is disunity will assuredly be destroyed at the last."

16 Fitzmyer 1981: 186–87 rightly notes that this verse destroys Conzelmann's claim (1960: 156–57) that the period of Jesus' ministry is "Satan free." Jesus is engaged in victorious battle against Satan here, as 11:21–22 also stresses.

[17] The phrase οἱ υἱοὶ ὑμῶν refers to “your own people” (Arndt 1956: 300), although most see it as referring to the “sons of the Pharisees” (Rengstorf, TDNT 4:443) or more broadly to “countrymen” (Godet 1875: 2.64) (see BAGD 833 §1cα; BAA 1663 §1cα; Heb. 12:5; 1 Pet. 5:13). Nolland 1993a: 639 states the question this way: “What will other Jewish exorcists, in light of their own exorcizing activity, make of such a view?” For a different (and I think more preferable) view, see n. 19 below.

[18] Josephus ties the origin of Jewish exorcism to the days of Solomon; Antiquities 8.2.5 §§45–49; 2.13.3 §286; Tob. 6:1–7; 8:1–3; 1QapGen 20.29; SB 4:533–35; Grundmann 1963: 238; Talbert 1982: 137.

[19] Godet 1875: 2.64 notes that W. M. L. de Wette and H. A. W. Meyer held this view in the nineteenth century. Shirock 1992 now ably defends this view, noting that it was the view of Chrysostom, Homilies on Matthew 41 (on Matt. 12:25–26). He gives six reasons for the view, the most compelling of which I note on p. 1078. If this view is correct, a major reason for separating 11:19 from 11:20 in the original tradition—namely, the difference in meaning of “you” in each verse—disappears. Evidence of the presence God’s kingdom is seen in Jesus and his followers. If this is the argument, Jesus is noting evidence of God’s grace in Israel!

[20] Matthew introduces the verse with καὶ εἰ (and if), while Luke has εἰ δέ (but if). In addition, Matthew’s word order on the judgment passage differs slightly from Luke, but uses the same terms.

[21] The difference may suggest a distinct form of the tradition for Luke, since the Spirit’s work is a Lucan emphasis. Schulz 1972: 205 and Manson 1949: 86 argue that Matthew probably changed the reference to the Spirit, possibly in light of Matt. 12:18. But the reason for such a change is not entirely compelling, since Matthew also loves OT allusions. However, if there is a change here, Matthew is more likely to have made it, since it is hard to see Luke's removing a reference to the Spirit for explanatory reasons (but so argue Wall 1987 and Goulder 1989: 504, noting that Luke does not use the phrase Spirit of God). For a Lucan change are Hamerton-Kelly 1964–65; Yates 1964; and Nolland 1993a: 639–40. Nolland notes that Luke alone uses anthropomorphisms like "hand of God" (1:66) and "arm of God" (1:51).

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

22 Wall 1987 sees an allusion to Deut. 9:10 and not to the Exodus text. He argues that, just as Moses reminded the rebellious people that God's finger had written the law, so Jesus reveals his messianic mission and covenant connection, since Satan is cast out. Though possible, this approach seems overly subtle and understates the force of the war imagery in 11:21–22, which explains this remark through parable.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

[23] For the debate, see Ladd 1974a; Ladd 1974b: 57–69; Kümmel 1957 (a full presentation of the NT kingdom passages, dividing them into present and/or future aspects); Lundströ;m 1963; Chilton 1984; and Beasley-Murray 1986. For the term in Judaism, see Lattke 1984.

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[24] So E. Scott 1911; J. Campbell 1936–37; Clark 1940. Ἐγγίζω means "arrives soon" in Mark 14:42.

[25] See BAGD 856 §2 and BAA 1708 §2. With ἐπί, φθάνω means "to overtake." Appeals to the ability of ἐπί to mean "near" (as in John 21:1) are not good enough to refute the force of the verb-preposition combination. In the LXX, φθάνω normally means "to reach, arrive, happen to." When combined with ἐπί in the LXX, it means for something to reach someone; Dan. 4:24, 28 [Theodotion]. Caragounis's appeal (1989: 20–23) to the proleptic aorist here fails (even though he sees a fulfillment with resurrection); see also Nolland 1993a: 640.

[26] On the meaning of φθάνω, see above and Kümmel 1957: 107 n. 8; Ladd 1974b: 65–68; Dodd 1936–37; Marshall 1978: 476. On the verb in NT as "arrival," see Rom. 9:31; Phil. 3:16; and esp. 1 Thess. 2:16, which has a similar present-future tension with its reference to the wrath of God having arrived and residing until the end.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

27 There is a sense in which God is always said to rule over his kingdom in the OT. But in the NT, God's kingdom is a technical eschatological term that refers only to the fulfilled manifestation of God's rule as promised in the OT. This kingdom is the "promise" of the OT, so it does not equal the providential kingdom rule of God expressed as present in the OT. Rather, kingdom expectation is tied specifically to his promise and future program. God's providential kingdom applies to him as Creator, but the promised kingdom represents his work as Redeemer and Restorer of creation.

28 Ladd 1962 notes four kinds of kingdom sayings: (1) kingdom strictly as rule (Luke 19:12, 15; 23:42; and John 18:36, to which one could add 1 Cor. 15:25); (2) the future apocalyptic order that the righteous will enter at the end of the age (Mark 10:23–30); (3) the kingdom as something present among humans (Matt. 12:28 = Luke 11:20; 17:20); and (4) kingdom as a present realm in which people enter (Col. 1:13, to which could be added 1 Cor. 4:20 and Rom. 14:17).

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

29 For a full presentation of this theme in Luke–Acts and a critique of aspects of Ladd's description of the kingdom, see Bock 1992c. As a result, the NT does not redefine or resignify OT promise; it expands it with complementary revelation. Promises to Israel remain, even as blessing and promise come now in and through the church.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

T. Levi Testament of Levi

30 Battle imagery with evil angels in the OT includes Isa. 24:22–23; in Judaism, T. Sim. 6.6 and T. Zeb. 9.8. Plummer 1896: 303; Danker 1988: 233; and Schürmann 1994: 243 see an allusion to Isa. 49:25–26. The battle imagery is similar, but the application to spiritual forces does not fit Isaiah's language in 49:26a, which clearly pictures humans. At best, Isaiah shows the principle involved. Such a move with imagery, however, is not surprising; see Luke 1:67–79 and Bock 1993. The point in the language for Luke is how Jesus, as God's representative, is God's victorious warrior.

31 "House" is probably the meaning of αὐλή here (BAGD 121 §2, §4 and BAA 243 §2, §4), but the different term suggests once again the possibility of a distinct source. Nolland 1993a: 641 argues against a distinct source for Luke because of the presence of Lucan vocabulary (Luke's version has more intense imagery for a battle scene). Αὐλή has the meaning "palace" in 1 Macc. 11:46; 3 Macc. 2:27; 5:46; Matt. 26:3; Mark 15:16.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

32 Ἐπάν (when) is a temporal conjunction used with the subjunctive; BAGD 282; BAA 572. Matt. 2:8 and Luke 11:34 are the only other NT uses.

33 The word πανοπλία refers to “full armor”; BAGD 607–8; BAA 1229. The image is one of victory; 2 Sam. 2:21. The term is also found in Eph. 6:11.

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

34 Marshall 1978: 478 notes that the Lucan image is one of messianic war; Isa. 59:16–18; O. Betz 1957–58.

35 On gathering as a figure of bringing together God’s people, see Michel, TDNT 7:419–20, who also interprets the imagery as picturing a harvest. Shemoneh Esreh [Eighteen Benedictions] no. 10 (= Schürer 1973–87: 2.457) reads: “Blessed are you, Lord, who gathers the dispersed of your people Israel.”

36 Plummer 1896: 303 and Hendriksen 1978: 622 cite Matt. 9:36; Isa. 40:11; and John 10:16 in support of a figure about sheep. To these could be added Ezek. 34 (where God is the Great Shepherd) and Zech. 13:7–9 (with its image of scattered sheep).

NT New Testament

37 See the intermingled metaphors in Matt. 9:35–38. On the image in general, see Michel, TDNT 7:418–20.

1 This is one of the few units in the journey narrative with material that might be parallel with Mark. That the first three subunits in this pericope have a variety of traditional contacts (Q, L, triple tradition) shows that this material's tradition as a whole existed in some variety. Tiede 1988: 218 speaks of Q material for all of 11:29–36. Luke may be pulling material together here to stress the importance of response as rejection grows.

2 One could easily divide the units into 11:14–28 and 11:29–36, since a break comes after 11:29. To do so, however, prioritizes form over conceptual unity in 11:24–36. If Luke pulled in material for thematic reasons, 11:24–28 is the best candidate.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

3 Some see the starting point as Isa. 13:21 and 34:14, with the suggestion that the wilderness or deserted cities are the abode of demons.

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

4 In b. Giṭ. 52a, Satan says of Rabbi Meir's work of reconciling two men, "Woe is me; he has driven me out of my house"; cited in SB 1:217. See b. Ḥul. 105b on the "demon of the poor."

[5] Liefeld 1984: 952 and Plummer 1896: 304 argue that spiritual renewal is the issue, not exorcism. For Liefeld, exorcism would lead to Spirit indwelling. But demons formerly at home now looking for a home suggests exorcism, and there is no guarantee that exorcism automatically produces Spirit indwelling.

[6] Matthew's description of the house's condition is "empty, swept, and put in order," rather than just "swept and put in order." Otherwise, Luke and Matt. 12:44 match verbally. See the additional note.

T. Reub. Testament of Reuben

T. Judah Testament of Judah

1QS Manual of Discipline (Rule/Order of the Community)

T. Reub. Testament of Reuben

[7] Gen. 49:25; Prov. 23:24–25; Fitzmyer 1985: 928; Grundmann 1963: 222 (who notes the contrast to Gospel of Thomas 79); Hauck, TDNT 4:369; SB 2:187–88; m. ›Abot 2.8; 2 Bar. 54.10; and later targumim on Gen. 49:25 (i.e., Ps.-J., Neof. 1, and Frg. Tg.). Manson 1949: 88 notes that Pesikta Rabbati 37.2 (= Braude 1968: 2.689) says this of Messiah's mother (cited as §149a by Manson according to an older numbering scheme; see SB 1:161).

[8] Plummer 1896: 306 argues that resurrection is implied at the end of the verse by the giving of a sign, but the Lucan context alone does not make such a reference clear. Hendriksen 1978: 627 and Arndt 1956: 302 make resurrection the only point, though Arndt admits that only Matthew makes this connection clear.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

9 Grundmann 1963: 242 argues that Jonah was seen as a sign in Judaism because of his miraculous deliverance from the whale; see SB 1:642–49. But these Jewish references are late, as Fitzmyer 1985: 935–36 notes, adding that Josephus's account of Jonah (Antiquities 9.10.2 §§208–14) makes nothing of the fish episode.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

10 An older solution regards the reference to Jonah as a textual corruption that originally referred to John the Baptist, but there is no manuscript evidence for this understanding. Creed 1930: 163 seems attracted to this view. Fitzmyer 1985: 931–39 presents the various options on source and tradition history.

11 Outside of this pericope and its parallels, τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης occurs in Luke 7:31 = Matt. 11:16; Luke 11:50–51 = Matt. 23:36; Luke 17:25; 21:32 = Mark 13:30 = Matt. 23:34; Büchsel, TDNT 1:663. Note that the concept is multiply attested in Q and Mark.

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

12 Arndt 1956: 303 equates person and time. In contrast, Ellis 1974: 168 and Talbert 1982: 139 suggest that the Spirit is referred to, but this is too specific, since there is no clear contextual indication to him. He is only an implication of what Jesus brings.

13 On Jesus as bearer of God's wisdom, see Luke 7:35; 10:21–22; 1 Cor. 1:24, 30. On the Son of Man as bringer of wisdom, see 1 Enoch 49.1–3; Grundmann 1963: 242.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

14 Note also the Gospel of Thomas 33. This repetition shows that Luke is not averse to repeating sayings and also suggests that he is aware that certain sayings were said by Jesus in different settings with slightly differing force. The possibility of the tradition having several such duplications cannot be excluded. Not every parallel is a genuine overlap, but might be what has been called "alibi analogies," where the saying looks like a parallel, but really is not (see Reicke 1968: 26–30 for a detailed discussion).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

15 At Qumran, the Spirit of truth is the light that illumines human hearts; 1QS 4.2; Grundmann 1963: 243. The OT image is found in Job 29:3; Ps. 112:4; Isa. 42:6–7; 45:7; 59:9–10; Mic. 7:8; Fitzmyer 1985: 940. The body is a metonymy of container for contents and refers to the person.

16 On ἁπλοῦς as "clear, pure, healthy," see BAGD 86 and BAA 171. When the eye is clear, it is healthy and takes in light. The eye is a figure for spiritual condition in Matt. 6:22; Prov. 4:18–19; 11:25 (ἁπλοῦς with a different sense); T. Iss. 3.4; 4.6; Bauernfeind, TDNT 1:386; Michaelis, TDNT 5:377; Harder, TDNT 6:556; SB 1:302, 431–32, 722, 833.

17 Πονηρός is used in 11:29 to describe the evil generation; Danker 1988: 237. The term's repeated use and the internal contrast make the meaning "generous" for ἁπλοῦς impossible; against Fitzmyer 1985: 940. The point is not the eye's "generosity" but its reception of good or evil.

18 Σκόπει (take care) is a present imperative and stresses the constancy of the care. The singular ἐν σοί (in you) makes clear the individual character of the examination.

T. Naph. Testament of Naphtali

19 The nature and age of the so-called Hebrew version of the Testament of Naphtali is disputed; see H. Kee in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 1.775–76.

1QS Manual of Discipline (Rule/Order of the Community)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

1 Marshall 1978: 491–93 sees different recensions of Q. Manson 1949: 96 sees most of Matt. 23 coming from a special Matthean source. Ellis 1974: 170 and Schlatter 1960: 303–5 see a combination of Q and special Lucan material. But Wiefel 1988: 227 objects to this because of the material's similarity to Matt. 23.

2 Egelkraut 1976: 93 n. 1 argues that the question of 11:38 does not match the answer of 11:39 and thus Luke created the introduction (but see the exegesis of 11:38). Taking 11:39 as indicating the original setting, Marshall 1978: 492 argues that it is Matthew who shifted to a Mark 12 setting. He argues that Luke does not conflate sources, while Matthew has many topical rearrangements; so also Godet 1875: 2.87.

[3] Godet does not note the Marcan connection, but does cite Luke 20:45–47 as showing awareness of a critique at the temple. The situation is little different for Matthean prioritists, since the question is why does Luke have here what Matthew and Mark have much later in Jesus' ministry? Any attempt to argue that Luke reflects the original tradition suffers from the Matthean and Marcan agreement in timing, if all are working with the same source material. Why would both Matthew and Mark diverge from an alleged earlier placement? Distinct traditions are more likely, since it is also hard to explain Luke's placement if all he had was Mark or Matthew. Even if Luke supplied the meal setting, the question remains, why did the event occur so early outside of Jerusalem?

[4] Zahn 1920: 477–78 n. 73 sees an independent tradition from Matthew, but Zahn is less clear if the material of the various passages is essentially the same discourse.

[5] In this list, "remark" means a conceptual parallel not laid out as a woe. Fitzmyer notes the order in terms of Lucan verses as follows: 43, 46, 52, 42, [39], 44, 47. Manson has a similar listing (with a dash representing unparalleled material): 46, 52, 42, -, 44, 47–48, -. Interestingly, these two lists do not agree, suggesting that it is hard to know where the matches lie! Apparently Fitzmyer sees a parallel in 11:43 that Manson rejects.

[6] Interestingly, Schürmann 1994: 334 divides the sayings into two categories: the voice of Jesus (11:39, 42a–b, 46a) and the voice of the early church (11:39b–41, 42c, 43, 44, 47–48, 49–51, 52). What the Jesus Seminar accepts (11:43), Schürmann rejects; while two of the verses that Schürmann accepts (11:42a, 46), the seminar rejects. The differences reflect just how much judgment and speculation goes into these assessments.

7 Stein 1992: 339 n. 83 notes five cases of likely Lucan omission.

b. Babylonian Talmud

Bultmann 1963: 131–32 and esp. 113–14 speaks of a combination of legal (11:39, 41–42) and minatory (i.e., warning) sayings (11:43–44, 46–51). He sees Matthew taking Q material and adding it to the scene in Mark 12, along with other available material. Luke created his setting, and Bultmann doubts that the woes fit Jesus' teaching. Why Jesus would not have engaged in prophetic condemnation is not clear. Without it, it is hard to explain why the leadership ever sought to remove him. If he was just a pleasant messianic pretender or a mere sage, they could have waited him out. Berger 1984: 81 speaks of an apophthegm and a woe speech and sees special Lucan material.

9 It is unclear whether the introductory phrase means "as he was speaking" or "after he had spoken." Lucan use of ἐν τῷ with the aorist infinitive favors "after" (2:27; 3:21; Fitzmyer 1985: 946). Regardless, this event and the previous discourse on responding to God are closely linked by Luke.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

10 Marshall 1978: 493–94 notes the custom to eat two meals daily: a mid-morning meal called ἄριστον (BAGD 106; BAA 214) and a mid-afternoon meal called δεῖπνον (BAGD 173; BAA 346; m. Šab. 16.2). On the Sabbath, three meals were served, but a Sabbath meal is not indicated here. John 21:12, 15 refers to an early meal with a verb related to ἄριστον, so it is clear that this is not an evening setting. Josephus, Life 54 §279, notes a Sabbath meal at the sixth hour, or midday.

m. Mishnah

Yad. Yadayim

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

m. Mishnah

ʿ*Ed.* ʿ*Eduyyot*

11 Washings took place before and after the meal. According to later tradition in the Talmud, only the washing after the meal was commanded by the Torah, the other was commanded by the rabbis; b. Ḥul. 105a. What is unclear is whether such rules applied to all meals or just to Sabbath and festival meals (y. Ber. 12a [8.2–3] [= Neusner et al. 1982–93: 1.284–91]);

the real issue here is meals on the eve of Sabbath or at festival. E. Sanders 1990: 31 argues that there is no evidence of washing before every meal. Evidently the Pharisees' concern for contracting impurity from a dead swarming thing in liquid (Lev. 11:31–38) caused them to expand the biblical injunctions. But such a danger was not limited to the Sabbath or festal meals. As such, it is likely that such care was present at every meal. Booth 1986: 119–50, 194–203 cites t. Dem. 2.11–12 (= Neusner 1977–86: 1.84) as key evidence.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

12 The issue for some Jews was to avoid "fly-impurity," contact with a dead swarming thing from water, which if present, made the hands unclean. Just to be sure, the cup's outside and inside was washed; E. Sanders 1990: 29–42; t. Ber. 5.26 (= Neusner 1977–86: 1.31). On Jewish cup tradition, see Maccoby 1982.

13 Given its position ὑμῶν (your) modifies ἔσωθεν (inside) and refers to the inside of the person, moving from figure to application: "your inside." It does not refer to the later reference to extortion and wickedness as some suggest. In addition, there is no need to regard this wording as secondary and insist that Jesus kept to the figure throughout; against Manson 1949: 269. Such a view emerges when one ties the account in Luke 11 too closely to Matt. 23 and then tries to decide which wording is original.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

OT Old Testament

T. Moses Testament of Moses

OT Old Testament

[14] Ps. 14:1; 53:1 [53:2 MT]; 92:6 [92:7 MT]; 94:8; Prov. 6:12; Luke 12:20; Rom. 2:20; 1 Cor. 15:36; 2 Cor. 11:16, 19; 12:6, 11; SB 1:280; 2:102 (discusses Jewish warnings about having an arrogant heart, with Deut. 8:11–14 being the key text); Schweizer 1984: 199; Plummer 1896: 310; Bertram, TDNT 9:230–31; Fitzmyer 1985: 947. On the OT background, see Donald 1963.

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

15 The NIV reads “give what is inside [the dish] to the poor,” perhaps by analogy to the parallel rebuke of 11:39: you need to fix what is wrong in terms of greed by giving alms to the poor (so also Schürmann 1994: 312). This reading is probably wrong, since 11:39 looks at the need to clean the inside, not to give things from it. The main issue is not giving alms, which the Pharisees did, but how alms reflect spirituality. At best, the NIV sense is an implication of how greed is put aside. Alms should come from a pure heart. Regardless, the point is a commitment to a pure heart. In a sense, the Pharisees’ complaint against Jesus reflects a failure to give such alms from the heart. They are quick to react against him.

16 Jesus’ message is like Rom. 2–3, where Judaism (and anyone else) stands in need of the gospel. The gospel is not discriminatory; all need it (also Eph. 2:1–3).

17 Manson 1949: 269 favors the suggestion. Grundmann 1963: 248 n. 8 argues the possibility for the original saying, but notes that it cannot be Luke’s meaning. Fitzmyer 1985: 947 rejects the option.

18 Three main OT texts deal with the tithe (E. Sanders 1990: 43–45). (1) According to Deut. 14:22–27, ten percent of farm produce, oil, and wine was to be tithed, except in the seventh year (Lev. 25:2–7). It was to be spent and enjoyed in Jerusalem or another appropriate locale. Every third year, this tithe was given to the Levites and the needy (Deut. 14:28–29). Whether “third year” meant only the third of the seven-year cycle or years three and six was debated, but the latter view was more popular. (2) Lev. 27:30–33 required that ten percent of crops and animals be tithed to the priesthood (Josephus, Antiquities 4.4.4 §§69–75). (3) Num. 18:21–32 declared that food be set aside for the Levites and their families. Other OT passages that give the background of tithes are Deut. 12:6–9; 26:12–15; Num. 18:12; Neh. 10:37–38 [10:38–39 MT]; 12:44; 13:5, 12; 2 Chron. 31:5–12; Fitzmyer 1985: 948.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

19 M. Šeb. 9.1 is important, since it says that rue is not tithed; the presence of this statement in the Mishnah may suggest dispute. The Lucan reference may be to wild rue, not all varieties of rue; Liefeld 1984: 957. The terms are ἡδύοσμον (mint) (BAGD 344; BAA 698; elsewhere only at Matt. 23:23), the hapax legomenon πήγανον (rue) (BAGD 655; BAA 1320), and λάχανον (herb) (BAGD 467; BAA 950; elsewhere only at Matt. 13:32 = Mark 4:32; Rom. 14:2).

OT Old Testament

m. Mishnah

Šeb. Šebi‘it

m. Mishnah

Ma‹as. Ma‹asaerot

m. Mishnah

Dem. Dema›i

m. Mishnah

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

y. Jerusalem (Palestinian) Talmud

Ber. Berakot

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

T. Moses Testament of Moses

[20] In fact, in many traditions “overshadowing” such a corpse rendered one unclean; E. Sanders 1990: 33–35. Pharisees were particularly sensitive to this issue (Num. 19:11–22; Lev. 21:1–3; m. Dem. 2.3), as were the Essenes at Qumran (CD 12.15–18). This was a common Jewish concept; Josephus, Antiquities 18.2.3 §§36–38.

[21] The association with death imagery has a variation in Eph. 2:1–3, although there no one holds the blame except the person who walks in the death of trespasses and sins. In Ephesians the person is led by evil spiritual forces and their own passions.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NT New Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[22] On the expression the fathers in Judaism, see Schrenk, TDNT 5:976–77; 1 Esdr. 1:11 [1:12 LXX]; 4:60; 1 Macc. 2:19; 2 Enoch 33.12; 35.2. On the theme of holy graves, see Jeremias 1958a and 1961.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[23] Matt. 23:29–32 is a more comprehensive statement of this theme. Marshall 1978: 501 notes that the vast differences in wording look at two distinct recensions of Q, a statement I take to refer to two events.

[24] The various terms supplied in the manuscripts as objects betray scribal efforts to fill out the idea of the phrase. Contextually, it is clear that "their tombs" is meant.

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

[25] Plummer 1896: 313 speaks of divine providence. Marshall 1978: 502–4 distinguishes between the view that sees God speaking in his wisdom and one that sees "divine wisdom" like that found in Prov. 8. But the views are very close, since Prov. 8 is a figurative reference.

OT Old Testament

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

OT Old Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

NIV New International Version

[26] For a comparison of conceptual parallels between 11:14–54 and 7:18–50, see Moessner 1989: 102–10, 115, who notes that Jesus' critique reflects teaching with roots in Deuteronomy.

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

T. Moses Testament of Moses

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

27 Jesus' allusion to the beginning of the world (Foerster, TDNT 3:1029; Hauck, TDNT 3:620; Matt. 13:35; Heb. 4:3; 9:26) makes the expression a merism: "the whole line of prophets."

OT Old Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

LXX Septuagint

OT Old Testament

28 Tg. Lam. 2:20 reads, "Zechariah son of Iddo, the high priest"; Gundry 1967: 86 n. 1. The Chronicles priest likely functioned as a prophet in 2 Chron. 24:19–22, but his priestly function was paramount in his identification as the son of a great priest. It should be noted that within three verses we have two potential points of contact with Tg. Lam. 2:20, though this second contact is not certain (see the exegesis of 11:49).

29 Beckwith 1985: 217–21 argues that the Targum on Lamentations (cited above as an example of confusion) is in fact an illustration of this very conscious technique.

30 Note that ἐκζητηθήσεται (shall be required) repeats the verb of 11:50. A key article discussing the options is Chapman 1911–12, with a summary in Manson 1949: 103–5.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[31] Grundmann 1963: 250 suggests that γνώσεως (knowledge) is an objective genitive, thus "the key for knowledge." Another option, a genitive of apposition ("the key that is knowledge," by which is meant "obedient knowledge") is less likely. This latter reading would be an odd way to say "you have taken away knowledge," but so Jeremias, TDNT 3:747–48, who acknowledges that this image, though different from the other option, is similar.

[32] Matt. 16:19 speaks of the kingdom's keys; Matt. 23:13 speaks of shutting up the kingdom of heaven. Manson 1949: 103 notes that the spirit of Jesus' charge against their lists of requirements might be found in the question, "Where is God the King, the Father, the one who rules with love and mercy in these rules?"

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[33] Ἐνέχω is a difficult term to translate (BAGD 265; BAA 536; Mark 6:19): "to press against someone," "to hold a grudge," or "to have it in for someone." With δεινῶς (terribly), the idea is "to be very hostile" to someone (BAGD 173; BAA 346; Matt. 8:6). Hanse, TDNT 2:828, argues for "to press against him," where the idea is that of being surrounded by hostile opponents.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[1] Most argue for Q: Fitzmyer 1985: 953 (12:1 from L), 956 (12:2–9 from Q), 962–63 (12:10 from Q or Mark; 12:11–12 from Q); Ernst 1977: 392 (for 12:2–9); and Schneider 1977a: 277. Grundmann 1963: 252 says it is “probably” Q. Marshall 1978: 510 speaks of Q material conflated with Marcan elements and also argues that Q has various recensions and that Luke’s version is slightly different from that of Matthew. Nolland 1993a: 675–76 sees Q for 12:2–9 and a mixture of Q and Mark for 12:10–12.

[2] Only five words from Luke’s twenty-seven are shared in all three texts (Matthew and Luke share an additional term): ἀπὸ τῆς ζύμης (of the leaven) and τῶν Φαρισαίων (of the Pharisees). These are basic elements where an overlap is not surprising.

Fitzmyer 1985: 954, 957, 958, 963; Bultmann 1963: 83, 131–32; Berger 1984: 81, 144.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

[4] On leaven as an evil disposition in Judaism, see SB 1:728–29; Windisch, TDNT 2:905–6; Manson 1949: 270.

1QH Thanksgiving Hymns/Psalms (Hôdāyôt)

CD Damascus Document

[5] Luke often uses πρῶτον as a temporal marker. Most of his thirty-six uses of πρῶτος in Luke–Acts fall in this category.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NRSV New Revised Standard Version

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

6 Fitzmyer 1985: 959 correctly notes that the contrast is to humans, not to Satan, evil, or the Son of Man.

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

t. Tosepta

Sanh. Sanhedrin

7 Earlier Jewish texts on the theme include Jdt. 16:17; 1 Enoch 10.13; 18.11–16; 27.1–3; 90.26; Jub. 9.15; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 7:36; Fitzmyer 1985: 959–60. Apparently a debate in Judaism discussed whether hell involved eternal torment or limited suffering with extinction, a view called “annihilationism” today. The Tosepta text noted argues that there are three groups of people: one destined for eternal life, another destined for shame and everlasting contempt, and a third group that visits Gehenna but is healed as through a refiner's fire, citing Zech. 13:9 and 1 Sam. 2:6. As the portion of t. Sanh. 3 quoted above shows, some Jews believed that Gehenna burns the body and the soul perishes after twelve months of judgment.

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[8] On the coin, see BAGD 117; BAA 235; Matt. 10:29 (the only other NT use). Wiefel 1988: 233 puts its worth at five pfennigs, one of the smallest German coins. A denarius was a day's wage, so this is very little money. The most basic worker would earn this in roughly a half hour. The term for sparrow (στρουθίον) may also indicate simply a "little bird"; Plummer 1896: 319–20; Ps. 11:1 [10:1 LXX]; 84:3 [83:4 LXX]; MM 594; Bauernfeind, TDNT 7:730, 732 n. 19; Fitzmyer 1985: 960.

OT Old Testament

y. Jerusalem (Palestinian) Talmud

Šeb. Šebi‹it

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

9 There is no need to suggest that Luke corrected Matthew's pricing, as Nolland 1993a: 678 intimates.

10 Only the verbal forms differ: Matthew has ἠριθμημέναι εἰσίν and Luke ἠρίθμηνται (both meaning "are numbered"). 1 Sam. 14:45; 2 Sam. 14:11; 1 Kings 1:52; and Dan. 3:27 use the idiom for the total protection indicated by not one hair being lost; Plummer 1896: 320; Fitzmyer 1985: 960; Luke 21:18; Acts 27:34. Luke's idiom is a variation on the OT idiom and means "God knows exactly where you stand."

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

11 Many distinguish the saying's earliest form about a Son of Man other than Jesus from the later linkage of the Son of Man to Jesus, which appears throughout the NT. The original advocate of this distinction was Bultmann 1951–55: 1.29. The Son-of-Man sayings elsewhere refer exclusively to Jesus, making it unlikely that there are any "other than Jesus" Son-of-Man sayings. For more on the Son of Man, see Bock 1991c and excursus 6 in vol. 1.

12 Fitzmyer 1985: 960 notes that elsewhere Luke does not avoid the expression before God in 1:19; 12:6; 16:15.

13 On the debate (among those who regard both sayings as reflecting a single tradition) as to which saying is original, see Marshall 1978: 514–16, who opts for two forms of Q.

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

14 Manson 1949: 109–10 solves the problem by arguing that “Son of Man” refers to someone other than Jesus, which is linguistically possible but very difficult in Luke, since the title clearly refers to Jesus in 12:8–9. Arguments about what an “original form” of the saying said are purely speculative and do not show why the current sense is really problematic.

15 The synagogue is seen negatively in Matt. 23:34; 10:17 = Mark 13:9 = Luke 21:12; Schrage, TDNT 7:834. The political leaders in view are largely Gentile: Luke 20:20; 21:12; Acts 4:26–30.

16 Fitzmyer 1985: 966. 1 Cor. 2:7 has a different verb (λαλέω, to speak), while John 14:26 and 1 John 2:27 use διδάσκω (to teach). Marshall 1978: 520–21 defends the authenticity of the concept, citing Beasley-Murray 1970: 473–74.

Blomberg 1990: 267 states the points of the unit: (1) purely selfish accumulation of possessions is incompatible with true discipleship, and (2) this incompatibility stems from the transience of earthly riches and the coming reckoning that all will face before God. B. Scott 1989: 128 notes the parallelism between Luke 12 and 16, with their common themes of threats from hell, riches, and the issue of stewardship.

[2] Manson 1949: 270 (who argues that the connection to 12:1–12 is literary and that 12:13–21 is a self-contained unit inserted between two Q passages) and Schweizer 1984: 207. There is little evidence that Matthew knew of the parable and omitted it, despite what Marshall 1978: 522 suggests, citing Matt. 6:19–20, 25. Fitzmyer 1985: 968 correctly notes that Luke alone gives evidence of this account.

[3] The Gospel of Thomas 63, 72 has parallel material, but §63 is not primary, as B. Scott 1989: 130–31 correctly argues. However, Scott wrongly asserts that the separation of the question and the parable in the Gospel of Thomas shows that Luke put these two elements together (with Scott, Funk and Hoover 1993: 338 argue that 12:15 was written by Luke, printing it in black type). The Gospel of Thomas lacks any warning, and so is only conceptually parallel. In addition, the general nature of the Gospel of Thomas is to work with only one short saying at a time.

[3] The Gospel of Thomas 63, 72 has parallel material, but §63 is not primary, as B. Scott 1989: 130–31 correctly argues. However, Scott wrongly asserts that the separation of the question and the parable in the Gospel of Thomas shows that Luke put these two elements together (with Scott, Funk and Hoover 1993: 338 argue that 12:15 was written by Luke, printing it in black type). The Gospel of Thomas lacks any warning, and so is only conceptually parallel. In addition, the general nature of the Gospel of Thomas is to work with only one short saying at a time.

[4] For potential wisdom tradition in the parable's background and how the parable fits Jesus' teaching, see Seng 1978: 154–55, who is more circumspect on proving authenticity. The term in 12:15 for greed, πλεονεξία, is rare in the Gospels (only here and Mark 7:22), so it is unlikely to be an early church term put into Jesus' mouth. In fact, the word group is basically Pauline (fifteen of nineteen uses).

Bultmann 1963: 54–55. Berger 1984: 81, 207 speaks of an apophthegm and a warning. Fitzmyer 1985: 971 prefers to call the parable an example (on the genre of example story or exemplum, see excursus 8 in vol. 1 of this commentary).

m. Mishnah

B. Bat. Baba Batra

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

6 Paul responds similarly when he allows the Corinthian church to appoint a believer to arbitrate a lawsuit (1 Cor. 6:4–6; Danker 1988: 247). In fact, he regards the church to have failed if the matter goes to an outside arbitrator. Note also that, in Acts 6:1–4, a church's social problem is solved internally.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[7] Tiede 1988: 233; Ernst 1977: 398; Fitzmyer 1985: 970; Lev. 19:18. Manson 1949: 271 notes the similar OT perspective: Job 31:24–25; Ps. 49; Eccles. 2:1–11. Note also T. Judah 18–19; Sir. 11:18–19; 1 Enoch 97.8–10; Mark 7:22; Rom. 1:29; 2 Cor. 9:5; 1 Tim. 6:10; 2 Pet. 2:3, 14; B. Scott 1989: 131–32.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[8] This stands in contrast to Prov. 11:26; Jer. 17:11; 1 Enoch 97.8–10. Sir. 11:18–19 is especially close to Jesus' picture, except that wealth comes through self-denial and diligence (lit., "from afflicting himself"), not simply fortune as in Luke. The LXX renders the key phrase "by his wariness and pinching," referring to frugality; Schweizer 1984: 207. Note also Ps. 49:16–20 [49:17–21 MT]; Plummer 1896: 323; Fitzmyer 1985: 972 (noting 1 Enoch 97.8–10, which rebukes unrighteous wealth); Nickelsburg 1978–79: 334–37. See n. 11 below for the Sirach and 1 Enoch texts.

[9] B. Scott 1989: 135 notes that the rich man takes over the narration from the narrator, showing the theme of autonomy.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[10] B. Scott 1989: 135–36, esp. n. 26, compares this attitude to the Epicurean philosophy reflected in the inscription on Sardanapalus's tomb (recorded by Plutarch, Moralia 336c ["On the Fortune of Alexander" 2.3]): "Eat, drink, and sport with love; all else is nothing."

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[11] Fitzmyer 1985: 973; Marshall 1978: 524; Klostermann 1929: 136; Wiefel 1988: 237. Parallels for this concept are common; see 1 Cor. 15:32; Eccles. 8:15; Isa. 22:13; Tob. 7:10. Two other Jewish texts are especially relevant: Sir. 11:18–19 (NRSV) reads: "One becomes rich through diligence and self-denial, / and the reward allotted to him is this: / when he says, ‘I have found rest, / and now I shall feast on my goods!’ he does not know how long it will be/ until he leaves them to others and dies.” 1 Enoch 97.8–10 reads: “Woe unto you who gain silver and gold by unjust means; / you will then say, ‘We have grown rich and accumulated goods, / we have acquired everything that we have desired. / So now let us do whatever we like; / for we have gathered silver, / we have filled our treasuries [with money] like water. / And many are the laborers in our houses.’ / Your lies flow like water. / For your wealth shall not endure / but it shall take off from you quickly / for you have acquired it all unjustly, / and you shall be given over to a great curse” (translation by E. Isaac in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 1.78). For Hellenistic parallels, see Euripides, Alcestis 788–89; Menander, Fragment 301.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

12 Johnson notes that the desire for possessions may cloud one's willingness to suffer rejection on account of Christ, which is certainly part of Luke's point in having the parable in this setting (see 12:24–34).

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[1] The dative is to be read as “for yourself” not “in yourself,” as the repetition of ψυχή in 12:23 shows; Plummer 1896: 326.

NT New Testament

LXX Septuagint

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

OT Old Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

OT Old Testament

[2] Marshall 1978: 527 notes that no clear reason for the difference can be given. But Fitzmyer 1985: 978 observes that Luke often uses the verb κατανοέω: Luke 6:41; 12:24, 27; 20:23; Acts 7:31–32; 11:6; 27:39.

3 The first reason was that life consists of more than food and clothing. The second was that God cares for people in his creation.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[4] Ps. 130:1 LXX [131:1 Engl.]; Josephus, Antiquities 16.4.6 §135; Marshall 1978: 529; Deissner, TDNT 4:630–31; Fitzmyer 1985: 980; BAGD 514; BAA 1041; P. Oxy. vol. 14 #1679 line 16 (where it is a term for “wrong”).

[5] Thus, it is useless to speak of the “original form” of this saying, which many regard as Matthew; Manson 1949: 113.

b. Babylonian Talmud

[6] Manson 1949: 113 notes that many pagan religions had rituals to coerce the gods to provide material provision.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

t. Tosepta

t. Tosepta

Ber. Berakot

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

[7] With reference to seeking the kingdom, Tiede 1988: 238 says, “This reign may well seem foolish and vulnerable by the standards of those who have wealth and power, but it is the very strength of God for living in uncertain times with the security of God’s reign.”

NT New Testament

[8] Tob. 2:14; 4:7–11; 12:9; 14:8–11; Sir. 3:30; 29:12; 2 Enoch 50.5; Ps. Sol. 9.5; m. Pe‹a 1.1; t. Pe>a 4.17–21 (= Neusner 1977–86: 1.45, 72–75); SB 1:430; Grundmann 1963: 262–63; Talbert 1982: 142; Wiefel 1988: 241; Matt. 19:21 = Mark 10:21 = Luke 18:22; 12:21. On the custom of alms, see BAGD 249–50; BAA 504. Ἐλεημοσύνη refers literally to “acts of mercy”; Bultmann, TDNT 2:486; Dan. 4:27 [4:24 MT]. Interestingly, the refrain of t. Pe>a 4.18 is, “My ancestors stored up treasures of money, but I have stored up treasures.” The object of the last clause is not clear (“for heaven,” “of benefits,” “of souls,” or “for myself in the world to come”), but the point about the value of alms is clear.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

9 Pilgrim 1981: 94 says that it is selling all “in the service of the kingdom and the discipleship of Jesus” and that the remark is for all disciples.

10 Manson 1949: 114 regards the material as coming from distinct sources, as does Grundmann 1963: 262, though they differ as to which sources and give no reasons. Marshall 1978: 531 argues for the same source, but the distinct wording is a difficulty for that view. Fitzmyer 1985: 981 argues that 12:33a is Lucan and cites 11:41 for support, but that verse is figurative for one’s life and is not similar enough to argue that Luke created this saying. In addition, Fitzmyer argues that Luke abridged Matthew’s saying, but this cannot explain entirely the distinct terminology. Wiefel

1988: 241 sees Q and special L material here that Luke combined to answer the point made in 12:21.

11 Grundmann 1963: 263 notes the contrast of Jesus' position to the Stoics, who tried to live without possessions and who tried to have no need of other people, so they could be "like the gods"; Diogenes Laertius 6.104. Danker 1988: 253 notes that monastic withdrawal is not the answer either, since Jesus assumes compassionate engagement with people.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

This exhortation is similar to other Lucan texts: Acts 20:18–35, dealing with the responsibility of church leaders, and Luke 19:12–27.

2 Mark 13:32–37 is at best a conceptual parallel to this Lucan unit.

[3] Luce 1933: 233; Manson 1949: 117–18; and Schneider 1977a: 288 say that the basic source is Q, while 12:47–48 is L. Tiede 1988: 238–42 and Marshall 1978: 533 see all but 12:41, 47–48 as coming from Q. Ellis 1974: 180 is undecided. Godet 1875: 2.106, 110–11 sees Luke and Matthew using different portions of the same tradition. Grundmann 1963: 264; Fitzmyer 1985: 984–85; and Wiefel 1988: 242, 244 regard the unique material as coming from Luke's special source, while the parable is a mix of Q (12:39–40, 42b–46) and L (12:35–38 for Grundmann and Fitzmyer; 12:36, 37a, 38 for Wiefel). These three treat 12:41–42a and 12:47–48 as Lucan additions. Grundmann defends the remark's authenticity as involving an original warning that included the Pharisees. A Matthean prioritist sees Matthew where others have Q, though the issue of Luke's placement of this pericope is more of a problem for the Two-Gospel hypothesis, than for a sayings source such as Q. Why did Luke change the location if he had Matthew? The possibility of other sources cannot be ruled out. The views on sources for this pericope are complex, but most see Luke bringing two sets of images together (12:35–38 and 12:42–46). For full discussions, see Weiser 1971: 161–225; Schneider 1975: 20–27; and D. Wenham 1984: 15–100. Wenham's work is part of a larger hypothesis on a pre-Synoptic form of Jesus' eschatological teaching, a view that traces substantial portions of this material back to Jesus, including 12:41, 44, 47–48, which others deny have such roots.

[4] Fitzmyer 1985: 987 speaks of elements going back to Jesus that focus on God's final vindicating judgment. This approach may be too broad in ignoring the Son of Man–Jesus linkage, about whose secondary character

Fitzmyer is uncertain. Nolland 1993a: 700 accepts all the material as authentic except 12:42, 46c, 47–48. Though some Lucan summary touches exist (e.g., 12:41–42a), all of the material, including Peter's question, coheres with Jesus' teaching. For a defense of the traditional roots of 12:41, see D. Wenham 1984: 57–62.

[5] See Exod. 12:11 (of Israelites eating Passover); 1 Kings 18:46; 2 Kings 4:29; 9:1; Isa. 59:17; Eph. 6:14; 1 Pet. 1:13; Danker 1988: 253. Plummer 1896: 330 notes the emphatic position of ὑμῶν (your) to indicate a condition: "your loins are to be girded."

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[6] The distinct terminology of Matt. 25 and Luke 12 allows no connection in terms of source.

[7] Ἀναλύσῃ is unusual since in Classical Greek ἀναλύω normally means "to loose." This is the only NT occurrence with the meaning "return," although it has this meaning in the LXX: Tob. 2:9; 2 Macc. 8:25; 12:7; 15:28; Wis. 2:1 (BAGD 57 §2; BAA 113 §2). The subjunctive mood with the adverb πότε (when) refers to the unspecified hour of his return: "whenever he 'might break loose' from the wedding"; BAGD 695; BAA 1393.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[8] On watchfulness, see Mark 13:33–36; 1 Cor. 16:13; Col. 4:2; 1 Thess. 5:6, 10; 1 Pet. 5:8; Rev. 3:2–3; 16:15; Marshall 1978: 536.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[9] For options, see BAGD 868 §4; BAA 1730; Fitzmyer 1895: 988; and Plummer 1896: 331. Josephus uses both approaches: three watches in Jewish War 5.12.2 §510 and four in Antiquities 18.9.6 §356.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[10] Διορύσσω is used elsewhere at Matt. 6:19, 20; 24:43; BAGD 199; BAA 400; cf. Exod. 22:2 [22:1 MT]; Job 24:16; Jer. 2:34. The image of Jesus returning as a thief is common in the NT: 1 Thess. 5:2, 4; 2 Pet. 3:10; Rev. 3:3; 16:15; Grundmann 1963: 265; Plummer 1896: 331.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York:

United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

11 Grundmann, TDNT 2:706, says that the Bible uses ἕτοιμος to speak of three kinds of readiness: (1) ready to do good works (Titus 3:1); (2) ready to preach the gospel (1 Pet. 3:15); and (3) ready for the Lord's return (here and Matt. 24:44).

12 The thought that someone is associated with the kingdom is key in light of the whole parable. Some who think they are in, in fact, are not, as 12:46 will make clear. Jesus' authority over the kingdom is comprehensive, and he will evaluate all who claim to be related to the kingdom, most especially those who have a leadership role in it.

13 Tiede 1988: 241 sees "all" people in the parable, for some are placed with the unfaithful, while others suffer some punishment without being banished.

14 Marshall 1978: 539–40 lists the options. He holds to Matthean omission, as does Manson 1949: 117–18. Klostermann 1929: 139 and Ellis 1974: 181 regard it as Lucan. On the assumption that one tradition is present, the influence of additional source material for Luke cannot be ruled out since there is additional material elsewhere in the unit. For defense of its authenticity, see the discussion of sources and historicity above.

15 On the syntax, see Marshall 1978: 540 and Black 1967: 118–19, who argue that the Greek structure reflects a Semitic idiom: “If there is a steward, … he will be blessed when.… ”

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

16 Θεραπεία refers to a body of servants only here in the NT; cf. Esth. 5:2b [= 15:16 NRSV]; BAGD 359 §2; BAA 729 §2; Creed 1930: 177.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

17 So Schweizer 1984: 213 explains the reference to a steward and the use of the future tense in Luke. But a steward was a slave, as 12:43 makes clear, and the tense difference is not necessary to the point. If a stylistic preference exists, which is possible for the verb's tense, it has come in along with other differences that are more difficult to explain. For example, of the uses of καθίστημι (to appoint, put in charge) in Matt. 24:45, 47; 25:21, 23, only the first is aorist, and all are in an eschatological setting.

18 This three-to-one ratio is also found in the parable of the soils (8:4–15).

19 See Stählin, TDNT 8:263 and n. 26, for ancient examples of the poor treatment of servants. Stählin calls the beating a "base abuse of power," but it was common.

20 On drunkenness as a negative picture of irresponsibility, see Isa. 28:1–4; Joel 1:5; Matt. 24:38; Luke 21:34; 1 Cor. 11:21; 1 Thess. 5:7; 1 Pet. 1:13; 5:8.

OT Old Testament

21 Grässer 1960 contains a full treatment of this issue from this perspective. For a different, better approach to the same issue, see A. Moore 1966.

OT Old Testament

22 The stereotyped pairing day and hour is common: Job 38:23; Dan. 12:13; Mark 13:32 = Matt. 24:36; 25:13; Rev. 9:15; Marshall 1978: 543. The NT references allude to the parousia.

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

RSV Revised Standard Version

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

23 This and Matt. 24:51 are the only two NT uses; in the LXX the word is used in Exod. 29:17. Similar imagery is found in 1 Sam. 15:33; Amos 1:3; and Sus. 55, 59. In the ancient world, see Homer, Odyssey 18.339; Herodotus 2.139. Kistemaker 1980: 125 notes that the contemporary expression “to skin alive” is parallel. 2 Sam. 12:31 and 1 Chron. 20:3 show other ways that slaves were made to labor as a result of being captured in war. This treatment is as severe as it gets.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

24 Manson’s suggestion (1949: 118) of an Aramaic mistranslation is unlikely, even though it is a common position (see Jeremias 1963a: 57 nn. 30–31). One can argue for a purposely emotive figure without having to resort to mistranslation. Marshall 1978: 543 lays out a full set of options: figurative, mistranslation, literal, and overliteral translation of the Aramaic. The last is Marshall’s choice, following O. Betz 1964–66, who notes a parallel idiom at Qumran. In 1QS 2.16, the term means “to cut off from the midst of” and refers to those who were accursed eternally (so 1QS 1.10–11; 6.24–25; 7.1–2, 16; 8.21–23). The idiom refers to those who suffer eschatological judgment, not excommunication. See also Weiser 1971: 199–200 and Ellingworth 1980. Those rejected like this often have treated others poorly or have taken advantage of them (Ps. 37:12, 14, 16, 32). The idiomatic background denotes complete separation.

27 Paul elaborates on this image in 1 Cor. 3:10–4:5, which also has a three-part grouping in three conditional clauses: the faithful are rewarded (3:14), those who build inadequately on the house lose their reward (3:15), and those who desecrate the house are destroyed (3:16–17). The first two groups are in, the latter is out, because the argument is built literarily around a descending success rate, with the middle group barely making it.

[25] Note the possible views mentioned in the exegesis of 12:41. The Matthean parallel of the hypocrite is enlightening, since a “play-actor” is addressed by ὑποκριτής; BAGD 845; BAA 1684. The term may well be Matthew’s rendering, since he uses it seven times uniquely (Schneider 1975: 26 n. 14; Nolland 1993a: 704). Marshall 1978: 544 notes that Aramaic הנפא (hnp,) can be translated with the sense that appears in each version of the account. On false teachers, see esp. 2 Pet. 2:1–2, 13–14, 17–22.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

1QS Manual of Discipline (Rule/Order of the Community)

CD Damascus Document

NT New Testament

26 For the various degrees of breaking Sabbath, see m. Šab. 7.1; b. B. Bat. 60b; Manson 1949: 119; Schweizer 1984: 214; Talbert 1982: 144; Fitzmyer 1985: 992; SB 2:192.

OT Old Testament

27 Paul elaborates on this image in 1 Cor. 3:10–4:5, which also has a three-part grouping in three conditional clauses: the faithful are rewarded (3:14), those who build inadequately on the house lose their reward (3:15), and those who desecrate the house are destroyed (3:16–17). The first two groups are in, the latter is out, because the argument is built literarily around a descending success rate, with the middle group barely making it.

28 On the general nature of the remarks, see Seesemann, TDNT 5:173. Others have suggested specific groups: (1) church leaders and laity, (2) scribes and Jewish people, (3) Jews and Gentiles, and (4) believers and unbelievers. See Marshall 1978: 544 for a discussion of the first three options and Kistemaker 1980: 127 for the final option. It is too early for a direct reference to the church; so view 1 is unlikely (though the church is the audience to whom Luke applies the parable). There are no Gentiles in the audience, so view 3 is unlikely. A reference to scribes and Jewish people leaves out the most obvious group to be alluded to, that is, the disciples, so view 2 is not adequate either. Against a simple division into believers and unbelievers is the difference in tone between 12:46 and 12:47–48. Probably in view in 12:46 are those like Judas and those like the Jewish leadership who wait for the kingdom but ignore the master and beat his servants. The parable is relevant to Israelites because they perceive themselves as heirs of the kingdom. In addition, though they reject the idea, Jesus came as their king. His remarks show that they defaulted on their role by failing to serve.

29 On αἰτέω meaning much is "asked" ethically of someone, see Stählin, TDNT 1:191. In the financial realm, the term can indicate the "payment asked" by someone (on the similar use of ζητέω [to seek], see Greeven, TDNT 2:892 §1). A similar commercial term is παρατίθημι (to commit or deposit) (Maurer, TDNT 8:163). The verse emphasizes ethical responsibility and uses imagery that compares such responsibility to fiscal responsibility.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

1 Fitzmyer 1985: 994, 999, 1001 holds that 12:49–50 is from L; 12:51, 53 is from Q; while 12:52 is a Lucan modification of Q material. In addition, 12:54–56 also comes from L and 12:57 is transitional, with 12:58–59 being from Q.

[2] Luke 12:49 also has a parallel in the Gospel of Thomas 10, and Luke 12:51–53 in the Gospel of Thomas 16.

[3] Witherington 1990: 121 gives two reasons why 12:49–53 is unlikely to be a church creation: the baptism mentioned here is not water baptism and the saying suggests a historical limitation on Jesus.

3 Witherington 1990: 121 gives two reasons why 12:49–53 is unlikely to be a church creation: the baptism mentioned here is not water baptism and the saying suggests a historical limitation on Jesus.

Berger 1984: 264, 57 agrees with the “I-sayings” classification, but argues that 12:57–59 is a parable.

[5] This form of mission statement appears at Qumran; Marshall 1978: 546. 1QH has numerous claims by the Teacher of Righteousness about what God is doing through him. Jeremias 1971a: 293 and n. 6 defends the age of the key tradition in Mark 10:45, another example where multiple traditions are possible with Luke 22:27. As a controversial figure, such statements of purpose from Jesus were inevitable (see Grundmann 1963: 269 for a critique of Bultmann).

[6] The judging or separating function of the Holy Spirit is in view in 3:16. On πῦρ, see BAGD 730 §2; BAA 1461 §2, and the exegesis of 3:16. In the OT, fire is a common way to refer to judgment of both Israel and its enemies: Jer. 43:12; Ezek. 15:7; Hos. 8:14; Amos 1:4, 7, 10, 12, 14; 2:2, 5; Nah. 3:13; Zech. 13:9; Mal. 3:2–3. It is also a major judgment image in Jewish apocalyptic literature: 1 Enoch 18.15; 102.1; 2 Bar. 37.1; 48.39; 2

Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 13:10–11; Ps. Sol. 15.4–5; Jub. 9.15; 36.10; 1QH 8.20; Wiefel 1988: 247; Lang, TDNT 6:936–37; Nolland 1993a: 708.

MT Masoretic Text

7 So Danker 1988: 256 argues, though he minimizes the fire as an image of judgment and emphasizes purification. This point can work only if the purification is seen as coming in judgment.

8 The grammar of the last phrase is difficult, but the idea is clear. For the options, see BDF §299.4, §360.4; BDR §299.4, §360.4; Moule 1959: 137, 187; Moulton and Howard 1929: 472. It is either a wish or an interjection that has Semitic roots.

9 A similar image is found in sayings in the Gospel of Thomas 10, 16, 82. In Thomas 10 and 82 fire alludes to the kingdom's closeness and focuses on purification, a meaning that is also possible from the OT (Lev. 13:52; Num. 31:23); but that is too positive for the division imagery here.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

10 Kö;ster, TDNT 7:884–85, argues that Luke formulated this remark because this usage of συνέχω is unattested; but see Neh. 6:10. Only Kö;ster's improper insistence that a Greek base be present limits the options. It is also unlike Luke to note Jesus' emotions, since he lacks such remarks, unlike the Marcan parallels.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

11 Fitzmyer 1985: 995–96 notes that awareness of rejection by a religious leader is not unparalleled and cites 1QH 2.11–14, 32–33 as examples. Jesus was capable of anticipating his vindication in death; so correctly Bayer 1986: 77–85.

12 Τελέω suggests the completion of a destined course; Luke 2:39; 13:32; 22:37; Marshall 1978: 547.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

13 Liefeld 1984: 968 notes that even in Isa. 11:1–9, where peace is associated with the coming of Messiah, the theme of judgment is present.

NT New Testament

Jub. Jubilees

m. Mishnah

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

14 Acts 14:22 may be written with the realization of such divisions in mind; Arndt 1956: 324.

15 Marshall 1978: 548, though favorably disposed toward Q, admits the possibility of distinct sources. Matthew may well be speaking about an initial arrival of messianic woe; Isa. 34:5; 66:16; Ezek. 21; 1 Enoch 63.11; 91.12; 100.1–2; 2 Bar. 70.6; Ps. Sol. 17; Witherington 1990: 122–23.

16 The verbal complex ἔσονται … διαμεμερισμένοι (it shall be … divided) recalls the noun of 12:51; Fitzmyer 1985: 997; Marshall 1978: 548; N. Turner 1963: 89. This periphrastic construction is a future perfect that focuses on a state of division.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

17 Νύμφη (lit., bride; BAGD 545 §2; BAA 1103 §2) in this context means “bride” to the mother-in-law (πενθερά; BAGD 642; BAA 1295), thus, daughter-in-law (Marshall 1978: 549; Jeremias, TDNT 4:1099).

18 Ellis 1974: 183 notes that the image from Micah was applied to messianic times in Judaism: 1 Enoch 99.5; 100.1–2; Jub. 23.19; 2 Bar. 70.6; 1Q14 [= 1QpMic.] 20–21. M. Soṭa 9.9 applied the remark to the martyrdom of a rabbi, so the text was used as a common description of opposition. Division is also found in Luke 14:26; 17:34–35; Mark 10:29–30.

19 Δυσμή (only here and 13:29 in Luke) refers to the sun’s setting, thus to the west; BAGD 209; BAA 422. These western rains were crucial for the well-being of Palestinian farmers.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

20 The Matthean reading has Western and Byzantine support, including strong versional presence in the Itala, but lacks major Alexandrian witnesses.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

21 Wilckens, TDNT 8:566–67, notes that ὑποκριτής is always a negative address in the NT: in Matthew fourteen times (seven of which are in Matt. 23); elsewhere only four times (Luke 6:42; here; 13:15; Mark 7:6).

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

22 Fitzmyer 1985: 1002 rejects the spiritual interpretation of 12:57–59, calling it allegorizing. Such a description says more about his seeing the material as derived from Q and reading it accordingly than it does about his literary sensitivity. There is no reason to regard this as a displaced saying about brotherly reconciliation (so Bultmann 1963: 172), since the contextual force is clear. Klostermann 1929: 141 errs in calling the accuser Satan (correctly refuted by Marshall 1978: 551).

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

23 Πράκτωρ does not imply a Hellenistic setting, since such prisons were widespread. Those who see a Roman figure in view and thus a Hellenistic setting distinguish this term from ὑπηρέτης (servant) in Matt. 5:25. Nolland 1993a: 714 speaks of Luke's careful choice of terms here.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

24 Ἐργασία is largely a Lucan term in the NT: Acts 16:16, 19; 19:24, 25; Eph. 4:19; Fitzmyer 1985: 1002. Δίδωμι (to give) with ἐργασία is a Latinism; BDF §5.3b.

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

[25] LSJ 915 notes a basic definition of “to pull down” for κατασύρω, a NT hapax legomenon (the simple σύρω occurs in John 21:8; Acts 8:3; 14:19; 17:6; Rev. 12:4); Fitzmyer 1985: 1003; BAGD 419; BAA 852–53.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[26] On sin as debt, see Matt. 18:23–25; Luke 7:41–43; 11:2–3; Manson 1949: 122. The image is rhetorical, so there is no need to argue that God cannot be meant, since final judgment is referred to and since no one can “pay” their way out of such a judgment. The rhetoric that “someone will pay” means that “the person will be judged and held accountable for all the sin.”

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

Ellis 1974: 184; Danker 1988: 259; Tiede 1988: 247; Creed 1930: 180. In addition to the Josephean references in the list in the exegesis of 13:1, see also Life 17 §92.

Marcion, who normally likes Luke's material, omits this section for reasons that are unknown; Klostermann 1929: 141. Luke may lack a parallel at this later point because of the parable here.

Bultmann 1963: 23, 54–55 is undecided whether the pronouncement is controversy or scholastic dialogue, but there is no controversy raised for Jesus, so a scholastic dialogue is present. The people are asking his religious opinion.

4 Παρῆσαν (arrived), from πάρειμι (to arrive; BAGD 624 §1a; BAA 1261 §1), refers to the crowd's arrival, not only its presence as many translations suggest; so correctly Plummer 1896: 337; Acts 10:21; 12:20; 17:6; 24:19, Marshall 1978: 553. In addition, ἀπαγγέλλω (to announce) usually refers to recent news; Marshall 1978: 553; Matt. 2:8; 28:8, 11; Mark 5:14 = Luke 8:34; Mark 16:10, 13; Luke 7:18; BAGD 79; BAA 157.

5 Ἔμιξεν (he mixed) comes from either μείγνυμι (BAGD 499) or μίγνυμι (BAA 1055), both meaning "to mix." The expression is an idiom for two events occurring together; so Ellis 1974: 185, who cites Exod. Rab. 19.5 on 12:43–44, SB 2:193, and Blinzler 1957–58: 28–29. The midrash refers to a mixture of circumcision blood and Paschal blood to indicate the need of a person who eats Passover to be circumcised. Philo, Special Laws 3.16 §91, discusses the inappropriateness of mixing the blood of murderers and sacrifices at the temple (Nolland 1993a: 717–18). Wiefel 1988: 252 n. 11 calls the expression "Palestinian."

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

6 Comparative παρά may be a Semitism; Jeremias 1963a: 141; Luke 13:4; 18:14; BDF §236.3; BAGD 611 §III.3; BAA 1236 §III.3. The term πάντας must mean all other Galileans; Marshall 1978: 553; Fitzmyer 1985: 1007.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

7 For example, Job's friends wrongly but naturally assumed that his initial travail was the consequence of some past sin: Job 4:7; 8:4, 20; 22:5; also Exod. 20:5; Prov. 10:24–25; John 9:1–3; Plummer 1896: 338; Danker 1988: 259; Manson 1949: 273.

8 Indirect discourse (marked by ὅτι, that) follows δοκεῖτε (you think) and gives the crowd's possible thoughts. Ὅτι at the end of the verse is causal and thus translates as "because."

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

MT Masoretic Text

9 On the building of aqueducts to improve the city's water supply, see Josephus, Antiquities 18.3.2 §60; Jewish War 2.9.4 §175; SB 2:197;

Klostermann 1929: 143.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

11QtgJob Targum to Job

[10] Marshall 1978: 554 argues that this detail shows the Semitic conceptual origins of the story.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

11 Luke lacks the withering of the fig tree incident that Matthew and Mark have in the last week of Jesus' life. Many see this parable as replacing that one in Luke's mind.

ISBE The International Standard Bible Encyclopedia, edited by G. W. Bromiley et al. (4 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1979–88)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

12 In the OT, see 1 Kings 4:25 [5:5 MT]; Ps. 80:8–19 [80:9–20 MT]; Isa. 5:1–7; 34:4; Jer. 5:17; 8:13; 24:1–8; Hos. 2:12 [2:14 MT]; 9:10; Joel 1:7; Mic. 4:4; 7:1; Hab. 3:17; Matt. 20:1–8; 21:28, 33–41 = Mark 12:1–9 = Luke 20:9–16. In Judaism, see Syriac Ahiqar 8.35 (Charles 1913: 2.775). The picture of caring for the vine makes the figure refer to God's blessings. Manson 1949: 274 notes that in rabbinic literature the fig-tree image often alluded to the law, but that is not its referent in this parable.

13 Deut. 22:9; Judg. 9:7–15; 1 Kings 4:25 [5:5 MT]; 2 Kings 18:31; SB 1:872–73 §g; Marshall 1978: 555. On fig trees and vineyards, see Pliny, Natural History 17.35 §200 and Nolland 1993a: 718. Theophrastus, De Causis Plantarum 3.10.6, advises against mixing figs and vines.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand

Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

14 A cut tree is a common image for judgment: Matt. 7:19; Luke 3:9. Manson 1949: 274–75 portrays the fruitless tree as nothing more than a "glorified weed."

15 The image here is not used in the same way as the vine image in Rom. 11, since there the national groupings are pictured as the branches, not as the entire vine. In addition, Romans indicates a hope of future engrafting for Israel (esp. Rom. 11:12, 15, 25–26). In Rom. 11:26, to "turn godlessness away from Jacob" is to graft in the natural branches again—a clear reference to Israel. Rom. 11 surveys the whole future, while Luke is looking at the short term. On Rom. 11, see Burns 1992.

16 The conversation is shared in vivid terms through the use of the historical present, λέγει (he says).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

17 Marshall 1978: 555 cites the refusal in Syriac Ahiqar 8.35 and the small yield in ›Abot de Rabbi Nathan A.16 (= Goldin 1955: 86).

NT New Testament

18 The omission of the apodosis is common in Semitic style; BDF §454.4; Acts 23:9; Rom. 9:22–24; Plummer 1896: 340. The apodosis in this case reads “well and good”; Manson 1949: 275.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

1 This skeptical approach to Jesus' discourse on miracles was analyzed and rejected in the discussion of sources and historicity for 5:17–26 and 6:6–11 (see also p. 427 n. 10 in vol. 1 of this commentary).

Fitzmyer 1985: 1010–11 speaks of a miracle story, while Bultmann 1963: 12 speaks of a pronouncement. Elements of both are present, with the key being the pronouncement in 13:15 and the miracle itself being the dominating element. Berger 1984: 312 calls it epideixis, which is his term for a miracle. Such accounts are designed to show who Jesus is and to elicit a response of respect.

3 Note the periphrastic imperfect (as in 4:31). The term for Sabbath is plural, as in 4:16. In both cases a single Sabbath is meant. For Sabbath synagogue customs, see the exegesis of 4:16; for the meaning of the Greek term, see the exegesis of 4:31 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1012.

4 On women and the synagogue, see Safrai 1976c: 919–20; m. Ber. 3.3. Midr. ha-Gadol on Deut. 29:10 [29:11 MT] pictures women and children receiving teaching by hearing the readings of the Targums. Safrai notes that these late rabbinic texts are confirmed by Acts 16:13 and 17:4. Schweizer 1984: 222 is thus wrong to suggest that the woman is outside the synagogue.

[5] Luke 5:15; 8:2; 11:14; 13:12; Matt. 8:17. Demonic influence may be a better description than demonic possession, because it is not behavior but a diseased condition that is the point; Luke 4:33, 38–39; 2 Cor. 12:7. Weakness is produced by the evil spirit; 1QapGen 20.17, 21–29; Stählin, TDNT 1:493; Marshall 1978: 557. Fitzmyer 1985: 1012 calls the genitival ἀσθενείας (weakness) an Aramaism; see Creed 1930: 183. Nolland 1993a: 724 suggests that the number eighteen may be conventional (2 x 9 = "a long time"); Judg. 3:13–14; 10:8; 20:25, 44; 2 Sam. 8:13. This is possible, but not certain.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[6] BAGD 608 and BAA 1230–31 list the options. Klostermann 1929: 144–45 cites Heb. 7:25 as a grammatical parallel. Plummer 1896: 342 notes that παντελής always appears next to the term it modifies in Josephus: Antiquities 1.18.5 §267; 3.11.3 §264; 3.12.1 §274; 6.2.3 §30; 7.13.3 §325.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[7] Danker 1988: 261 notes that the woman might be unclean, in which case Jesus' action would be bold on two counts: one cultural, the other cultic. But the text is not clear on this point.

[8] On the rare use of ἀπολύω as a description of being freed from the effects of disease, see BAGD 96; BAA 193; Josephus, Antiquities 3.11.3 §264. The term is generally used of freeing prisoners or releasing from debt. This common usage may inform the use of the term here. Contextually, the perfect tense announces entry into a state of healing; Arndt 1956: 329.

[9] Elsewhere in the Synoptics at Matt. 9:18 = Mark 5:23; 6:5; 8:23, 25. The same action in different terms is found in Luke 5:13; 8:44, 54; 14:4; 22:51; Busse 1979: 295.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[10] Ἀνορθόω is limited to OT quotations in its other NT uses: Acts 15:16; Heb. 12:12; Creed 1930: 183; Klostermann 1929: 145. It was used commonly in medical situations; LSJ 147.

[11] Luke uses παραχρῆμα in 1:64; 4:39; 5:25; 8:44, 47, 55; 18:43; 19:11; 22:60. Fitzmyer 1985: 1013 remarks, “The instantaneous cure on the Sabbath stands in contrast to the eighteen years of infirmity.”

[12] On the synagogue leader (ἀρχισυνάγωγος), see Schrage, TDNT 7:847. This person was responsible for the order and progress of worship, so he is the right one to speak. The most learned member presents the official view on Jesus’ act. There is no need to argue for a redactional seam at the shift of address to the audience. The leader is responsible for the assembly's worship (Nolland 1993a: 724). Nolland argues that "the directive fits only imperfectly in the flow of the story." I disagree: practice and custom is the issue here. The issue cannot arise until Jesus heals.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

13 Ὅτι is either causal, giving the reason for the anger, or an indicator of indirect discourse, giving the leader's thinking about Jesus: that he "healed on the Sabbath," an act that in turn makes him angry.

m. Mishnah

Šab. Šabbat

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

14 Ellis 1974: 186 notes that the Qumranians in general were even stricter than the Pharisees; K. Schubert 1957: 127–28. CD 11.13–14 reads, "No one shall help an animal in its delivery on the Sabbath day. And if it falls into a pit or a ditch, one shall not raise it on the Sabbath." For details of Jewish practice, see the exegesis of the next verse.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

15 A wordplay around the idea of “loosing” or “untying” reappears in 13:16.

m. Mishnah

Šab. Šabbat

m. Mishnah

Šab. Šabbat

m. Mishnah

ʿ*Erub.* ʿ*Erubin*

CD Damascus Document

16 On the figurative use of “bound” and “loosed,” see Fitzmyer 1985: 1013; MM 142, 144. The length of the woman’s condition is underlined by the use of the interjection ἰδού (behold). On Satan’s activity, see Job 2:1–7; Acts 10:38; 1 Cor. 5:5; 2 Cor. 12:7; 1 Tim. 1:20; Plummer 1896: 343. Fitzmyer notes that the verse argues against Conzelmann’s view (1960: 27–28, 80) of a “Satan-free” period during Jesus’ ministry.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

17 Exod. 34:10; Deut. 10:21; Job 5:9; 9:10; Luke 7:16; 19:37 are conceptually similar.

On the Jewish expectations of either a political kingdom or a kingdom coming directly and apocalyptically from God, see Goppelt 1981–82: 1.45–51 and Ladd 1974b: 60–63. Matt. 13:11 calls this gradual growth part of the "mystery" of the kingdom. Matt. 13:52 shows that the kingdom promise contains both new and old things side by side, indicating that NT kingdom revelation supplements and complements OT revelation. Beasley-Murray 1986: 194–201 lists the parables of growth in the Synoptics: mustard seed and leaven (Luke 13:18–21 = Matt. 13:31–33 = Mark 4:30–32), seed growing secretly (Mark 4:26–29), sower (Luke 8:4–8 = Matt. 13:1–9 = Mark 4:1–9), wheat and tares (Matt. 13:24–30), and the dragnet (Matt. 13:47–50).

Note Ellis 1974: 187. In its initial phase, the kingdom as manifested in the church is a community of people who all look to the same hope in Christ. Thus, the kingdom's presence primarily is manifested in believers who all serve and are accountable to the sovereign head, Jesus Christ (Eph. 1:19–22; Col. 1:12–14). The church universal is related to the kingdom, being its present expression, but the church is not all there is to the kingdom, since there is a kingdom to come. In addition, the church is not an institution seeking to seize power on earth or exercise coercive sovereignty, but is to serve and love humankind, reflecting the love of God, his standards of righteousness, and the message of his forgiveness and love in Jesus Christ (Rom. 12:9–13:7). These elements make up the mission of the church as light in the world (Matt. 5:14–16).

[3] So Kistemaker 1980: 45 speaks of the same occasion. On Q, see Grundmann 1963: 281; Egelkraut 1976: 108; Marshall 1978: 559–60; Wiefel 1988: 257; Fitzmyer 1985: 1015. The same linkage of parables occurs in Matthew and, as noted above, the wording in the leaven parable is very similar. The Gospel of Thomas 96–97 links the leaven parable to a different parable, the jar full of meal, which has no canonical parallel. A parable of the mustard seed is found in the Gospel of Thomas 20; Hunzinger, TDNT 7:290 n. 32.

[4] Since none of the four terms shared by Mark and Luke have the same position, a connection is unlikely.

[5] But so Schulz 1972: 301–9; rightly refuted by Marshall 1978: 559–60. Multiple levels of the parable tradition (see n. 1 above) teach the kingdom's gradual growth and contrastive transformation. In addition, even the parables of this section appear in various wings of the tradition (Mark and Q [or Matthew]), so that multiple attestation speaks for authenticity.

Jeremias 1963a: 146 n. 68 notes the Palestinian coloring in the parables, a point in favor of authenticity. Even the Jesus Seminar accepts the essential authenticity of these parables, printing 13:18–19 in pink type and 13:20–21 in red (Funk and Hoover 1993: 346–47).

6 Jesus' introduction of the parable compares with rabbinic introductions of similar material; SB 2:7–9; note also Isa. 40:18; Marshall 1978: 561; Hauck, TDNT 5:753–54.

7 On the mustard seed as proverbial for a small quantity in Judaism, see m. Nid. 5.2; b. Ber. 31a; Manson 1949: 123; Michel, TDNT 3:810–12, esp. 810 n. 1; SB 1:669. Citing Lev. Rab. 31 on 24:2, Lachs 1987: 225 notes that the mustard seed is proverbial in Judaism for the smallest size, a stark contrast to the strong image of the cedar. Lachs's citation of Lev. Rab. 31, which deals with the production of olive oil, is not clear. Is the mustard seed implied in the oil excluded as worthy in Lev. Rab. 31.10?

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

8 Scott makes much of the issue that a mustard tree is a shrub and yet yields cedar tree–like qualities in the parable. This "twist" may add a miraculous note to the image, though Scott believes (based on m. Kil. 3.2) its resultant force is an allusion to uncleanness (reflected in the sowing of mustard seed in a garden). If this idea is present, it is subtle. Only Luke's form, with its garden reference, could sustain the point. The point more likely addresses only the unusual nature of the growth, not ritual uncleanness, a theme that Jesus tended not to address in reference to the kingdom.

[9] Paul's image of the olive tree in Rom. 11 is a variation on Jesus' picture. There the key point is not growth, but one's presence in the plant; Egelkraut 1976: 109; Jeremias 1963a: 147–49; Joseph and Asenath 15. On the verb κατασκηνόω (to live or nest), see BAGD 418 §2; BAA 851. Elsewhere in the NT at Matt. 13:32 = Mark 4:32; Acts 2:26.

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

[10] Σάτον occurs elsewhere in the NT only at Matt. 13:33; BAGD 745; BAA 1490; also in Josephus, Antiquities 9.4.4 §71; 9.4.5 §85; Gen. 18:6; Judg. 6:19; 1 Sam. 1:24. Nolland 1993a: 730 questions this connection, since the LXX does not connect σάτον to סְאָה. If he is right, the amount is unclear. But a Semitic context for the parable makes a specific connection likely.

[11] Jeremias 1963a: 147, who cites m. Pe῾a 8.7. One is tempted to say that this woman was baking for an army, since this amount could feed over one hundred people.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

12 Ladd 1974b: 105–19 shows that the church is not identical to the kingdom, though his view is too abstract in minimizing the reference to a realm. On this latter issue, see Bock 1992c.

Old Testament

1 Schweizer 1984: 225–26, though noting links to Matthew, suggests that the tradition may have come together before Luke, because of non-Lucan language in 13:25–27. Luce 1933: 240 sees too little correspondence to attribute the material to Q, as does Grundmann 1963: 284, who speaks of a special Lucan source. Michaelis, TDNT 5:71, argues for distinct traditions of the image of the open door.

2 Marshall 1978: 563 also leans toward independence for the door imagery, though he sees elements of connection with the tradition in the rest of the passage and sees Luke bringing some elements of this material together. Fitzmyer 1985: 1021–22 sees a Lucan hand in most of the material and sees only 13:24–29 as Q material, though he acknowledges that the case is not certain. Nolland 1993a: 732 attributes 13:22–23 to Luke and the rest mainly to traditional roots, most shared with Matthew. Most argue that the theme of presence or entry of blessing brought the texts together (Meier 1994: 310) and that Luke rearranged 13:28–29 by placing what was at the end at the start of the saying. Meier 1994: 311 lists the Lucan order of Matthean elements as 9, 10, 4, 5, 6, 7, 2, 3, 5, with four Lucan redactional stichs. It is more credible, however, to see a fresh tradition, given all the restructuring required of the alternative.

[3] I disagree with Meier 1994: 315 that Jesus' teaching did not suggest a Gentile mission soon, but solely held out for an eschatological inclusion in the distant future. The previous parable in 13:18–19 suggests such an inclusion. The eschatological hope implies the possibility of current mission.

Berger 1984: 57–59, 81. Fitzmyer 1985: 1022 prefers to speak of a collection of minatory sayings, while Bultmann 1963: 93, 117 speaks of wisdom sayings in 13:23–24, 26–27. The passage is a warning and a wisdom background is not clear, except in 13:24. Bultmann also regards 13:26–27 as a church reflection that presents Jesus as judge of the world, but this saying is like OT prophetic utterances that warn about salvation and judgment. The parable portrays Jesus as the judge, with an identity between his message and the authority it carries. The crowd must respond to him. However, it was this very emphasis on response that caused the leadership to do away with him. It is not a post-Easter development. Jesus' view of himself was dangerous to the leadership. Luke 22:69 makes the same point conceptually.

[5] BDF §310.1 and BDR §310.1.2 note that even the noun has the force of a verbal term in the middle voice, thus: "He went on his way through towns and villages, teaching, and taking a journey himself, making his way to Jerusalem."

6 The present participle οἱ σῳζόμενοι refers to those who are being delivered, but it looks to the future; Marshall 1978: 564; Isa. 37:32; 1 Enoch 102.7 [variant reading]; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 7:66; Mark 10:26; 1 Cor. 1:18; 2 Cor. 2:15.

7 On the use of εἰ to introduce questions, see N. Turner 1963: 333; BDF §440.3; BDR §440.3.5; Gen. 17:17; Matt. 12:10; 19:3; Luke 22:49; Acts 1:6; 22:25. Luke uses this construction for an "indirect question" nineteen times.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

8 Some Jews believed that only a few of the truly righteous would experience immediate blessing, while the rest would wait in Gehenna for resurrection. Two verses in 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] (NRSV) are close to the tone of this question: "Many have been created, but only a few shall be saved" (8:3) and "The Most High made this world for the sake of many, but the world to come for the sake of only a few" (8:1). See also 2 Bar. 21.11; 44.15; 48.23, 45–50; 51.1–6.

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

9 Ἀγωνίζομαι suggests intense effort or straining labor; BAGD 15; BAA 27. With the present tense it contextually denotes continual striving. This is the only use of the word in the Synoptics; elsewhere at John 18:36; 1 Cor. 9:25; Col. 1:29; 4:12; 1 Tim. 4:10; 6:12; 2 Tim. 4:7. It is a term of Hellenistic, Jewish, and early Christian exhortation; Nolland 1993a: 733; Hoffmann 1967: 196.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

10 Jeremias notes that the closed door means the irrevocable loss of opportunity; Isa. 22:22; Matt. 25:10; Rev. 3:7.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

2 Marshall 1978: 563 also leans toward independence for the door imagery, though he sees elements of connection with the tradition in the rest of the passage and sees Luke bringing some elements of this material together. Fitzmyer 1985: 1021–22 sees a Lucan hand in most of the material and sees only 13:24–29 as Q material, though he acknowledges that the case is not certain. Nolland 1993a: 732 attributes 13:22–23 to Luke and the rest mainly to traditional roots, most shared with Matthew. Most argue that the theme of presence or entry of blessing brought the texts together (Meier 1994: 310) and that Luke rearranged 13:28–29 by placing what was at the end at the start of the saying. Meier 1994: 311 lists the Lucan order of Matthean elements as 9, 10, 4, 5, 6, 7, 2, 3, 5, with four Lucan redactional stichs. It is more credible, however, to see a fresh tradition, given all the restructuring required of the alternative.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

11 Matt. 25:10–13 is conceptually parallel. The image of not knowing "where one is from" comes from the OT: Ps. 138:6; Isa. 63:16; Jer. 1:5; Hos. 5:3; 13:5; Amos 3:2; cf. 2 Tim. 2:19. Seesemann, TDNT 5:117, notes that in later Judaism the expression meant excommunication or total rejection.

[12] Marshall 1978: 566 is right to suggest independence of Matthew and Luke at this point.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[13] Ps. 6:9 LXX [6:8 Engl.] supplies much of the wording for the rejection, from which Luke differs slightly in the final phrase with his πάντες ἐργάται ἀδικίας (all you workers of unrighteousness) rather than the psalm's πάντες οἱ ἐργαζόμενοι τὴν ἀνομίαν (all those who work unrighteousness). Luke's rebuke is more direct. Matt. 7:23 virtually matches the LXX. Some suggest the presence of something similar to the rabbinic ban formula, which pictured excommunication or exclusion from the community. For the texts, see the exegesis of 13:25 and n. 11.

[14] On βρυγμός (gnashing), see BAGD 147–48; BAA 294–95; Rengstorf, TDNT 1:642; Prov. 19:12; Sir. 51:3; Plummer 1896: 347. On κλαυθμός (weeping), see BAGD 433; BAA 882; Rengstorf, TDNT 3:726; Job 30:31; Jer. 3:21. The verb βρύχω (to gnash) is used as an expression of anger in Job 16:9; Ps. 35:16 [34:16 LXX]; 37:12 [36:12 LXX]; 112:10 [111:10 LXX]; Marshall 1978: 567. On darkness and judgment in Judaism, see 1 Enoch 103.7–8; 108.5–14; Ps. Sol. 14.9; 15.10; Lev. Rab. 27.1 on 22:27; and Exod. Rab. 14.2 on 10:22. Leviticus Rabbah cites Ps. 35:6; Gen. 1:2; Isa. 29:15; and Eccles. 6:4 in describing Gehenna's darkness. Exodus Rabbah cites Job 10:22; Ezek. 31:15; Isa. 29:15; and Gen. 1:2. The partial overlap of OT texts is interesting.

15 Ἐκβάλλω is a term for judgment in Matt. 8:12; 22:13; 25:30; John 12:31; Bertram, TDNT 4:839 n. 56.

16 The combination of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob occurs frequently in the OT: Deut. 1:8; 6:10; 9:5, 27; 1 Kings 18:36; 2 Kings 13:23; Acts 3:13; 7:32; Matt. 8:11; Fitzmyer 1985: 1026. Luke, on the other hand, likes to mention all the prophets; Luke 1:70; 24:44.

2 Marshall 1978: 563 also leans toward independence for the door imagery, though he sees elements of connection with the tradition in the rest of the passage and sees Luke bringing some elements of this material together. Fitzmyer 1985: 1021–22 sees a Lucan hand in most of the material and sees only 13:24–29 as Q material, though he acknowledges that the case is not certain. Nolland 1993a: 732 attributes 13:22–23 to Luke and the rest mainly to traditional roots, most shared with Matthew. Most argue that the theme of presence or entry of blessing brought the texts together (Meier 1994: 310) and that Luke rearranged 13:28–29 by placing what was at the end at the start of the saying. Meier 1994: 311 lists the Lucan order of Matthean elements as 9, 10, 4, 5, 6, 7, 2, 3, 5, with four Lucan redactional stichs. It is more credible, however, to see a fresh tradition, given all the restructuring required of the alternative.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

17 The compass dimensions provide a merism referring to the whole world. People will come from everywhere.

OT Old Testament

18 Beasley-Murray 1986: 171–72; 1 Chron. 9:24; Ps. 96:3; 107:3 (the gathered are dispersed Jews); Isa. 2:2; 25:6–9; 40:5; 43:5–6; 45:6, 14; 49:12; 51:4; 52:10; 55:5; 56:7; 59:19; 66:19–20; Mic. 4:1–2; Zech. 2:13 [2:17 MT]; Mal. 1:11; Luke 14:15; 22:16, 29–30; Rev. 19:9; Plummer 1896: 348.

19 Ellis 1974: 189 notes that Qumran had a similar banquet expectation, but with a very different and exclusive audience, namely Messiah, the high priest, the priests, the chief of the tribes, and the congregation of Israel's righteous; 1Q28a [= 1QSa = Rule Annex] 2.11–22. Fitzmyer 1985: 1026 and Marshall 1978: 568 add other Jewish references: 1 Enoch 62.14; 2 Enoch 42.5; 2 Bar. 29.4; m. ›Abot 3.17; SB 4:1148, 1154–59.

20 Matt. 19:30 = Mark 10:31 applies the phrase to the powerful and wealthy, while Matt. 20:16 deals with the taking of the kingdom from the vineyard keepers in order to give it to another, a point similar to Luke's. Similar conceptual references are found in Barn. 6.13 and the Gospel of Thomas 4.

21 Fitzmyer 1985: 1020 translates: "Some of those who are now last will be first, and some of those first will be last"; see also p. 1027. The line literally reads, "And behold are last ones, they shall be first, and are first ones, they shall be last."

22 Manson 1949: 125–26 notes that this saying rules out the idea of automatic blessing as a result of Abrahamic ancestry. The opposite idea is expressed in Ps. Sol. 9.9–10. Paul's attitude, as expressed in Rom. 9:4–6, is similar to Jesus' remark. Marshall 1978: 568 adds Mark 9:35; Luke 14:9–

10; and 1 Cor. 4:9 as being similar in concept, as well as the remarks in Luke 1:51–53 and 3:8. One could also add Eph. 2:14–18, though here the idea of Jews being excluded is not prevalent. Rather Gentiles and Jews form a new community, where those who were far off and those who were near are equal. Paul, however, appears to believe that at some point in the future, Israelites will believe again en masse (Rom. 11:11–27, esp. 11:12, 15, 25–27), which may explain why only "some" are mentioned here as moving from first to last.

Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

RSV Revised Standard Version

NRSV New Revised Standard Version

NIV New International Version

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

Old Testament

If this report is true, Herod has moved from anxious curiosity (9:7–9) to full-fledged fear about Jesus. The event as it relates to Herod is seen as historical; Fitzmyer 1985: 1028.

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

[2] See Borg 1987: 162–63, 170, who notes Jer. 12:7 and Ezek. 11:22–23. So also Horsley 1987: 300–302, who calls Luke 13:32–33 part of a "fairly solid tradition" (p. 190). For the debate on 13:31–33, see Nolland 1993a: 738–39, who accepts 13:31–32, but regards 13:33 as a Lucan redaction that makes the transition from 13:32 to 13:34. However, the use of δεῖ is too widespread in the Gospel tradition to make this conclusion solid (see the exegesis of 13:33). In addition, as Marshall 1978: 570 suggests, 13:33 is an integral link to 13:32.

[3] Interestingly, Nolland 1993a: 739 argues that both Matthew and Luke selected the location for this tradition in their respective Gospels.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[4] Tyson 1960: 245 supports the account's historicity because of the positive or at least neutral portrayal of the Pharisees here.

[5] Τελειόω (to complete) is a key NT term for the completion of God's plan: Luke 12:50; 22:37; John 19:30; and Heb. 2:10; 5:8–9; 7:28 (though in Hebrews it has the additional nuance of perfecting).

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

LXX Septuagint

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

[6] Tannehill 1986: 153–56 objects, stressing that the goal in this context is only Jerusalem, not death. The point, however, is what Jerusalem represents and what it will do to this prophet. To separate Jerusalem from a reference to Jesus' death is artificial.

[7] Marshall 1978: 572 and Thrall 1962: 20–21 interpret πλήν as "moreover." BAGD 669 §1b and BAA 1346 §1b see it as contrastive, but in this context it is more of an emphatic explanation (§1c in the lexicons).

[8] Although more complex and rhetorical, the Greek expression σήμερον καὶ αὔριον καὶ τῇ ἐχομένῃ resembles Semitic references to three days as a short period of time; Marshall 1978: 572; Ezra 8:32; Jdt. 12:7.

[9] For OT prophetic suffering, see 1 Kings 18:4, 13; 19:10, 14; 2 Chron. 24:21; Jer. 2:30; 26:20–23; 38:4–6; Amos 7:10–17; Josephus, Antiquities 10.3.1 §38; Martyrdom and Ascension of Isaiah 5.1–14; Acts 7:52.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[10] Jeremias, TDNT 5:714, notes that a false prophet ran the risk of being killed (m. Sanh. 11.1). Friedrich, TDNT 6:834–35, points to Matt. 23:37. See also Fischel 1946.

[11] Δεῖ is not necessarily a Lucan term, though he prefers it more than the other Synoptic writers. Matthew uses it eight times, Mark six times, and Luke eighteen times (plus an additional twenty-two times in Acts). Such data raise the question of whether this verse is purely redactional.

MT Masoretic Text

OT Old Testament

12 Bultmann 1963: 114 sees wisdom here. Leaney 1958: 210 cites Matt. 23:34; Luke 2:40, 52; 7:35; 11:31, 49 as parallels. See also 1 Enoch 42. Luke 11:49–51 uses the wisdom motif openly. For more reasons not to see wisdom here, see Bock 1987: 120. Marshall 1978: 573–74 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1034 opt for wisdom terminology, but without Jesus alluding to himself as wisdom, since Jesus sees himself as wisdom's messenger. Sir. 24:7–12 provides a plausible background. If wisdom is in the background, this is the best way to argue for it. Nolland 1993a: 739 questions the presence of wisdom here, as do I.

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

2 Bar. 2 (Syriac) Baruch

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

13 The inhabitants of Jerusalem are often called τέκνα (children): Joel 2:23; Zech. 9:13; Bar. 4:19, 21, 25; 1 Macc. 1:38; Matt. 23:37; Luke 19:44; Oepke, TDNT 5:639.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

MT Masoretic Text

OT Old Testament

14 For this reason Manson 1949: 127 rejects this view, which Ellis 1974: 191 accepts, citing Luke 11:51; 19:46; Acts 7:47. Marshall 1978: 576 notes that when a pronoun is attached to “house” in the sense of “temple,” the pronoun refers to God, which is not the case here, since the desolate house is Israel.

LXX Septuagint

15 In ancient Judaism, Ps. 118 was seen as messianic; SB 1:849–50, 876; m. Suk. 3.9; Midr. Ps. 118.19–20 on 118:21–22 (= Braude 1959: 2.243–44); Jeremias 1966: 256–57.

16 I have already rejected the idea that Jesus sees himself as hidden wisdom here; see the exegesis of 13:34.

17 Tannehill 1986: 155–56 argues that Luke holds out hope for Israel’s future, citing Allison 1983: 75 as support. Allison argues that Jesus uses the standard Jewish form for giving a conditional prophecy; see also Allison 1985: 157. Marshall 1978: 577 leans this way.

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

Mishnah

Šabbat

Babylonian Talmud

Šabbat

1 Plummer 1896: 353 notes that Luke has five of the seven Sabbath healings in Scripture: 4:31–37, 4:38–39, and 6:6–11 have Synoptics parallels, while 13:10–17 and 14:1–6 are unique to Luke (the other two are John 5:10 and 9:14).

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1039 remarks that, even though Matt. 12:11 has a similar saying, the rest of the detail is too different to be attributed to Q. In fact, it is too difficult for any other shared tradition. Fitzmyer also correctly denies that Luke 6:9 is a doublet to this verse. Marshall 1978: 578 sees a Q connection as possible. Bultmann 1963: 12 and Lohse, TDNT 7:26, argue that the text was a variant tradition created from Mark 3:1–6, but Ernst 1977: 435 correctly notes that the distinct terminology and motives suggest too much distance for this connection; so also Meier 1994: 710.

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

Bultmann 1963: 12 opts for pronouncement; Berger 1984: 81 speaks of apophthegm. These are the same classification, since controversy accounts are a specific kind of pronouncement. On such classifications, see Bock 1991b.

[4] Josephus, Life 5 §21, mentions the position of chief priests. Marshall 1978: 578 notes this reference, but is undecided on what it means.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

m. Mishnah

Šab. Šabbat

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[5] Herod the Great was said to have suffered from dropsy; Josephus, Antiquities 17.6.5 §§168–70. In the apocryphal Acts of Paul 4, Paul heals a man of this condition; Schneemelcher 1991–92: 2.247.

OT Old Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[6] Lev. Rab. 15.2 on 13:2 comments on Job 28:25: “Man is evenly balanced, half of him is water, and the other half is blood. When he is deserving, the water does not exceed the blood, nor does the blood exceed the water; but when he sins, it sometimes happens that the water gains over the blood and then he becomes a sufferer from dropsy; at other times the blood gains over the water and he then becomes leprous”; Van Der Loos 1965: 505.

b. Babylonian Talmud

Šab. Šabbat

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ber. Berakot

[7] If this is the case, then the man being healed probably would not have been in on the trap. He would have been invited on the pretext of having an opportunity to meet Jesus. Though one cannot be sure that it was an intended trap, such a conclusion fits Luke’s literary characterization of the Pharisees up to this point, indicating the mounting tension between Jesus and these officials.

[8] On silence, see Luke 6:9 = Mark 3:4, but contrast Luke 13:14–16. Objectors could stop the proceedings, similar to the opportunity given at modern weddings for anyone to object to a couple’s getting married. If no one speaks, the ceremony proceeds.

m. Mishnah

Šab. Šabbat

m. Mishnah

ʿ*Erub.* ʿ*Erubin*

CD Damascus Document

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

9 M. B. Qam. 5.6 is not parallel, since that passage deals with legal damages, not the Sabbath; so correctly Creed 1930: 189. B. Šab. 128b gives both rulings: one that allows and one that forbids help (also m. Šab. 18.2). This was a debated point among Jews, even in the fifth century.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

Tannehill 1986: 183 sees two points of concern for Jesus: (1) humility and (2) no attitude of social exclusion or pride in wealth. Tiede 1988: 263 has a revealing title for this unit: “Seating Charts and Guest Lists in the Kingdom.”

As Marshall 1978: 584 notes, the reference to resurrection at the end adds an eschatological umbrella to the passage alluding to the resurrection of the just (cf. 2 Macc. 7:9; Luke 20:35; John 5:29).

Manson 1949: 278 notes a passage in Theophrastus, Characters 21.2, where the sign of a proud man is that he seeks the seat beside the host. Lev. Rab. 1.5 on 1:1 (commenting on Prov. 25:7) has a similar exhortation for people to stay two or three seats down; see also Josephus, Antiquities 15.2.4 §21.

OT Old Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[3] Manson 1949: 278 notes a passage in Theophrastus, Characters 21.2, where the sign of a proud man is that he seeks the seat beside the host. Lev. Rab. 1.5 on 1:1 (commenting on Prov. 25:7) has a similar exhortation for people to stay two or three seats down; see also Josephus, Antiquities 15.2.4 §21.

m. Mishnah

Ber. Berakot

[4] Plummer 1896: 356 notes that two to four people could recline on a couch. SB 4:617–20 cites the variety of customs and notes another configuration with the host at the head of the table.

[5] Fitzmyer 1985: 1046 suggests that γάμος is broad enough to describe any feast, not just a wedding; cf. Esth. 2:18; 9:22. It can simply be a celebration. The difference in sense is not significant, since a representative picture is present.

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[6] On shame in ancient culture, see Malina and Neyrey 1991; on seating priority, see Neyrey 1991: 366.

[7] Δόξα sometimes means “honor”; see Kittel, TDNT 2:237; 1 Cor. 11:15; Eph. 3:13; 1 Thess. 2:6.

[8] Whether ἵνα denotes purpose or result is debatable.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[9] Prov. 25:6–7 (NRSV) says, “Do not put yourself forward in the king’s presence / or stand in the place of the great; / for it is better to be told, ‘Come up here,’ / than to be put lower in the presence of a noble.” For Jewish parallels, see Sir. 3:17–20; 4:8; 12:11; 29:5; Lev. Rab. 1.5 on 1:1 (fifth century); ʾ*Abot de Rabbi Nathan* A.25 (= Goldin 1955: 110); Bultmann 1963: 104; Fitzmyer 1985: 1047; SB 1:916.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

[10] Lev. Rab. 1.5 on 1:1 attributes a noneschatological statement to Hillel: “My humiliation is my exaltation and my exaltation is my humiliation.” For more on this midrash, see n. 3 above.

11 The Semitic rhetorical idiom “not x … but y” means “not so much x … but y” (also 10:20). On this use of φωνέω (to call), see O. Betz, TDNT 9:303. On ἀντικαλέω (to invite back), a NT hapax legomenon, see K. Schmidt, TDNT 3:496.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

12 Ἀνάπειρος probably describes the severely maimed or mutilated (BAGD 59; BAA 117; LSJ 116; elsewhere in the NT only at Luke 14:21), as opposed to χωλός, which refers to all the lame (BAGD 889; BAA 1772; Plummer 1896: 359).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

1Q28a Rule of the Congregation (1QSa or Rule Annex)

1QM War Scroll (Milḥāmā)

m. Mishnah

m. Mishnah

OT Old Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

13 Stählin, TDNT 9:160, also n. 117, exaggerates the ancient debate: some ancients (Plato, Phaerdus 233d–34a) said to invite only family and friends, while m. ›Abot 1.5 said to leave the door wide open (but for reasons of exclusion noted above). B. Scott 1989: 164 calls Jesus' instruction the "law of no return."

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

14 On general resurrection and judgment of all, see Luke 10:12; 11:31–32; John 5:29; Acts 17:30–31; 23:6; 24:15; Rom. 2:5–11; 2 Cor. 5:10; 2 Tim. 4:1; Rev. 20:12; Ellis 1974: 194.

1 Also Schulz 1972: 391–98; Crossan 1973: 72; Fitzmyer 1985: 1052. Jeremias 1963a: 63–64, 176 argues that the Gospel of Thomas may be more original than Matthew, except for its expansion of excuses. The Thomas parable is closer to Luke than to Matthew and so is often discussed with Luke's version, but it introduces a fourth figure who cannot come to the banquet. Thomas gives no setting, since the document is just a list of teachings. But the excuses in Thomas use more urban imagery; Luke's use of agrarian imagery fits Jesus' tendency to use agrarian illustrations. Horsley 1987: 180 sees Luke as the more original of the versions, noting that the economically prosperous are the excluded; so also the Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 352), though it regards the symposium-table setting as Lucan.

[2] So Blomberg 1990: 237–39; Kistemaker 1980: 193–201; Plummer 1896: 359–60; Liefeld 1984: 979. Those accepting one parable but distinct sources are Luce 1933: 248; Grundmann 1963: 296 (L); Ernst 1977: 442 (L); Marshall 1978: 584; Tiede 1988: 266 (apparently). Ellis 1974: 194 is uncertain. Blomberg 1990: 233–36 has a good discussion of this parable.

MT Masoretic Text

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[3] Similar settings are found in Luke 10:25–30; 12:13–15; 15:1–3. The idea is to share in eternal reward or eternal life. On the eschatological banquet in Judaism, see Exod. Rab. 25.7 on 16:4; 2 Bar. 29.8; 1 Enoch 25.5; Behm, TDNT 2:691.

[4] Such introductions to teaching are common in Luke: 11:27, 45; 12:13, 41; 13:1, 23; 15:2; 16:14; 17:5, 20; 18:9; 19:11, 39; 22:24, 49; 23:27; Schweizer 1984: 191. Almost all of the examples are in the journey-to-Jerusalem section, so that the style is not uniform throughout the Gospel.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[5] See C. Kim 1975 for an ancient invitation. Fitzmyer 1985: 1055 correctly notes that Jeremias's appeal to this as a custom of Jerusalem has only a fifth-century text as support, but Esther and Philo suggest that the custom is possibly older. Nolland 1993a: 755 adds Terence, Self-Tormentor 169–70, and Apuleius, Metamorphoses (Golden Ass) 3.12, which may suggest that more than Jewish custom is in view here.

[6] See the introduction to this unit. Klostermann 1929: 151 sees Luke reducing the servants to one, while Marshall 1978: 588 prefers to see Matthew expanding the image.

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[7] Jewish excuses in other contexts include Deut. 20:5–7; 24:5; m. Soṭa 8.1–6. Marshall 1978: 588–89 correctly argues that Luke's concern about excessive attachment to possessions or family is present. Unfortunately, material concerns are dominant.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

b. Babylonian Talmud

ʿ*Abod. Zar.* ʿ*Aboda Zara*

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament: Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources, by J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan (repr. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980)

[8] R. J. H. Shutt's translation of Aristeas (in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 2.20) says that each settler had 100 acres, based on 600,000 settlers on 60,000,000 acres or arourae. But this figure is too high, since one aroura is 0.275 hectare or about two-thirds of an acre. One hundred arourae is thus around 70 acres.

m. Mishnah

B. Bat. *Baba*ʿ *Batra*ʿ

[9] Lesser figures for the average size of land ownership are presented by Applebaum 1976: 656–58, who argues that seven hectares may be optimistic. Even on these numbers, five yoke of oxen points to a large landowner.

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

OT Old Testament

10 Hendriksen's remark (1978: 730) about taking the wife along is unlikely for the first century. An insult is likely, because the man had accepted the original invitation without mentioning his marriage and now he refuses to attend.

11 Ῥύμη is a side street (BAGD 737; BAA 1476; Isa. 15:3; Tob. 13:17–18; elsewhere in the NT at Matt. 6:2; Acts 9:11; 12:10) versus πλατεῖα, a wide street (BAGD 666; BAA 1340; in the Gospels and Acts at Matt. 6:5; 12:19; Luke 10:10; 13:26; Acts 5:15).

12 Jeremias 1963a: 177 calls them "the ipso facto beggars in the East." On this theme, see the later Jewish story of Bar Maʿjan; y. Sanh. 23c (6.6) (= Neusner et al. 1982–93: 31.181–82).

OT Old Testament

1Q28a Rule of the Congregation (1QSa or Rule Annex)

CD Damascus Document

[13] But so Schweizer 1984: 238, who regards this as Jew-Gentile distinction; but that distinction is not in this group. The Gentiles may be in the set of invitations in 14:23.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[14] Many commentators note that Augustine's interpretation (Contra Gaudentium Donatistarum Episcopum Libri II 1.25 §28 [Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latinorum 53.226–27]), which sought to compel pagans to enter the faith, badly misreads the imagery. Fitzmyer

1985: 1057 notes that this interpretation made Augustine the spiritual father of the Inquisition.

15 Manson 1949: 130 suggests that Isa. 49:6 is alluded to in the parable. Blomberg 1990: 235–36 says that the second invitation merely reflects Middle Eastern custom, but with all the representation present in the parable, surely the arrival of “outsiders” suggests a correspondence in real terms. See R. Martin 1976.

16 For the view that this is still a part of the parable, see Plummer 1896: 363, who incorrectly argues that the final remark here is not like others where Jesus is clearly marked out as speaking. Marshall 1978: 590–91 argues that the host is speaking but is pictured as the Lord. Another “hidden” parabolic application appears in 16:8b–13.

17 So Jeremias 1963a: 177, who nonetheless argues that the saying originally ended the parable and was the host’s remark. This view, though possible, is not necessary. The application that Jesus makes comes more powerfully and directly by looking back to the parabolic imagery. The shift to the first person indicates the shift of perspective.

18 Blomberg 1990: 235 compares this custom to the British custom of sending wedding cake to the invited who could not attend.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

[1] Marshall 1978: 591 sees the presence of other sources. Wiefel 1988: 277 mentions Q, but also suggests that the passage may be independent (he sees 14:28–33 coming from special Lucan material). Grundmann 1963: 301 says that it is uncertain whether the material is from Q or from a source in Luke's special material. Ernst 1977: 447 is also uncertain. The double tradition in the Gospel of Thomas 55 (family and cross) and 101 (family) raises the possibility of the existence of multiple traditions in the church and, thus, whether they were said on multiple occasions. (The Gospel of Thomas 98 has a third picture of an assassin who practices by thrusting his sword into a wall.)

[2] Manson 1949: 132 sees the Matthean and Lucan sayings as related. Luce 1933: 251, along with most, calls this a Q passage.

Fitzmyer 1985: 1061 speaks of "prophetic words" as well. Bultmann 1963: 328 speaks of a discourse on discipleship composed by Luke; but how one can argue that Luke is responsible for the discourse is not clear. Berger 1984: 51, 97 speaks of parables and a warning. The text is a combination of "I-sayings" (14:26–27) and parabolic comparisons (14:28–35). Blomberg 1990: 281 calls the comparisons "which one of you?" parables, showing Jesus' desire to cause the audience to reflect: "If people must carefully calculate their chances of success in major human endeavors, how much more so must they take seriously the results of spiritual commitments."

[4] Συμπορεύομαι (to accompany) is Lucan, since he has three of its four NT occurrences: Luke 7:11; 14:25; 24:15; Mark 10:1; Gen. 13:5; 14:24; 18:16; Plummer 1896: 364; BAGD 780 §1; BAA 1556 §1.

NT New Testament

[5] Epictetus 3.3.5 speaks of choosing good over one's father and, as a result, having nothing to do with the father. Jesus' image is similar. If what God requires is greater than what the family desires, God comes first.

[6] Ernst 1977: 448 is hesitant about this connection. Manson 1949: 131 shows the idiom by citing a late Jewish text, b. Taʿan. 7b, where it is said of certain rabbis, "If they hated their beauty, they would be more learned." The opposite attitude where other things are loved more is found in Luke 14:20 and 18:20–24.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[7] Marshall notes that Levi's devotion to Torah is expressed in terms of a similar commitment in Deut. 33:9 and 4Q175 [= 4QTestim] 15–16. Schrenk, TDNT 5:983, defines μισέω as "to set aside for."

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

LXX Septuagint

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[8] Josephus refers to Joshua as Moses' disciple and to Elisha as Elijah's disciple; Antiquities 6.5.4 §84; 8.13.7 §354.

[9] Ῥαββί is used in Matt. 26:25; Mark 9:5; 11:21; Matt. 26:49 = Mark 14:45; John 1:38 (plus seven more times in John's Gospel); διδάσκαλος in Luke 7:40; 8:49; 9:38; 10:25; 11:45; 12:13; 18:18; 19:39; 20:21, 28, 39; 21:7; 22:11 (Matthew and Mark use this term twelve times each). See Goppelt 1981–82: 1.163–64, esp. n. 2.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

10 Derrett 1977a and Jarvis 1965–66 argue that the subject of the parable is Jesus, who has counted the cost. However, the previous remarks make an exhortation to the multitudes about discipleship far more likely.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament: Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources, by J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan (repr. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[11] Jesus uses two monetary terms: the hapax legomenon δαπάνη (BAGD 171; BAA 341; MM 137), which refers to the expenses of a given enterprise, and ψηφίζω (to count) (BAGD 892; BAA 1780; elsewhere in the NT only at Rev. 13:18). This last term often means to count with pebbles and can also mean to vote or make a calculated choice; MM 698.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[12] In Prov. 24:3–6, wisdom builds a house and wages war; Schweizer 1984: 241; Tiede 1988: 270–71.

[13] One might compare the picture to the phrase used at modern weddings: “It is not to be entered into lightly or unadvisedly.”

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[14] So οὗτος in Luke 5:21; 7:39; 13:32 and especially in the numerous remarks about Jesus in the passion account: 23:4, 14, 22, 35.

[15] Ἐκτελέω (to finish) basically means to perform a task completely; BAGD 245; BAA 495; MM 198. It appears only here and in Luke 14:29 in the NT.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[16] Συμβάλλω means “to meet,” thus “to meet in battle”; BAGD 777 §1b; BAA 1551 §1b; 1 Macc. 4:34; 2 Macc. 8:23; 14:17. Μάχη (battle) is usually the object of this verb.

[17] Philo, On Abraham 21 §105: “Virtue’s nature is most peaceable; she is careful, so they say, to test her own strength before the conflict, so if she is able to contend to the end she will take the field; but if she finds her strength too weak, she may shrink from entering the contest at all.”

[18] So εἰ δὲ μή γε (otherwise) gives the alternative to battle. The phrase always occurs without a verb; Luke 5:36; 10:6.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament: Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources, by J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan (repr. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980)

19 Thackeray 1912–13 discusses an idiom (“surrender unconditionally”) possibly found in the greetings in Judg. 18:15; 1 Sam. 10:4; 17:22; 25:5; 30:21; T. Judah 9.7. But this force is less clearly documented; see Nolland 1993a: 764.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

20 Tannehill 1986: 157 n. 27 suggests that, in light of the journey imagery, the force is “say farewell.” Disciples know that life is not in possessions, so they can part with them and avoid pursuing them as the world does.

21 Schweizer’s point is that not everyone is forced to give away their possessions or be rejected by family as a result of coming to Jesus, but they need to be prepared to do so.

22 The force of these remarks is that the claim of discipleship and the reality of discipleship do not match in such cases. One is not being a true disciple.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[23] Jeremias 1963a: 168–69 mentions the option and rightly rejects it, since the issue in Matt. 5:13 = Mark 9:50 and here is taste, not cooking.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[24] The verb μωρανθῇ literally means for salt "to become foolish," a personification that shows its total lack of value because it is no longer salty; BAGD 531 §2; BAA 1075 §2. There may be a wordplay on the Semitic תפל (tpl), which can mean "to be foolish" or "to be unsavory"; Job 1:22; Jer. 23:13; Marshall 1978: 595; Black 1967: 166; Schwarz 1978. Nolland 1993a: 765 notes that the figure is based on the result of salt losing its saltiness, regardless of whether it actually happens.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[25] In later Judaism, the picture of salt was applied nationally in a passage that is seen as a polemic against Jesus' teaching: b. Bek. 8b, which argues that salt cannot lose its saltiness.

26 Plummer 1896: 366 notes that three distinct settings of the salt image "may be right" in terms of its historical background. He includes Mark 9:50 in his remark. This warns us not to assume that multiple sayings on a topic must have one point of origin.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

27 Gressmann 1911 notes the nature of the customs. Perles's attempt (1919–20) to suggest an Aramaic element תבל (tbl) behind the tradition that should be translated "seasoning" instead of "soil" fails on lexical grounds. The תבל/γῆ interchange is found in Isa. 14:21; 26:9, 18; 1 Chron. 16:30; cf. 11QtgJob 24.8; 29.3 with Job 34:13; 37:12. Correctly Fitzmyer 1985: 1069–70 and Black 1967: 166–67.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

T. Judah Testament of Judah

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

Fitzmyer is right to reject other attempts to understand the unit as only a polemic against the Pharisees, though allusions to them are present. Neither is the passage an exposition of Jer. 31:10–20 (so Kossen 1956), a view also rejected by Ellis 1974: 196.

2 So Fitzmyer 1985: 1073 argues that 15:4–6 is from Q and that originally the two parables were not told together. He sees Matthew's setting as more original. But why Jesus could not tell back-to-back parables that make the same point is not clear. Nor is it clear that 15:4–6 is from Q. Tiede 1988: 273 sees independent oral tradition here.

3 For the presence of these verses in Q are Schneider 1977a: 324–25 and Wiefel 1988: 282. Fitzmyer 1985: 1073 sees 15:4–6 in Q and 15:8–9 in L. Other parallels are found in the Gospel of Thomas 107 and the Gnostic Gospel of Truth 31.35–32.9.

4 Luke's indisputably unique parables are 10:25–37; 11:5–8; 12:13–21; 13:3–9; 14:7–14; 16:1–9; 16:19–31; 17:7–10; 18:1–8; 18:9–14. Synoptic parallels to other parables in the journey narrative are debated: 14:15–24; 14:25–33; 19:11–27.

Bultmann 1963: 171, 334 sees the discourse composed by Luke. But it is not clear why it cannot go back to Jesus. If he pursued sinners and was criticized for it, surely he produced an explanation for his actions. Bultmann calls the two parables similitudes, his name for detailed comparisons where a common event is described (see excursus 8).

[6] Rengstorf, TDNT 1:327, speaks of ἁμαρτωλοί as murderers, robbers, deceivers, and those of dishonorable vocation, which would include tax collectors; also Herrenbrück 1981.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[7] Διαγογγύζω (to grumble) appears in the NT only here and in 19:7. This idea is a significant one in the OT and is often negative in force: Num. 11:1; 14:27, 29 (using the simple γογγύζω); Danker 1988: 274. The word order, with Pharisees first, is unusual; so 5:30, but not 5:21; 6:7; 11:53.

OT Old Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

m. Mishnah

Dem. Demaʾi

m. Mishnah

Ḥag. Ḥagiga

[8] Παραβολήν (parable) is singular, as in 5:36, where it also referred to more than one parable. Marshall 1978: 600 suggests that it means “a parabolic discourse.”

[9] This style of rhetorical opening is frequent in Luke: 11:5, 11; 14:28, 31; 17:7; Ernst 1977: 453. The answer to the “which of you?” question is that all would, if they react with their heart, given the risk to the animal.

MT Masoretic Text

t. Tosepta

B. Qam. Baba‹ Qamma‹

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

10 Wool, mutton, and cloaks were the three basic products from sheep. Bailey 1976: 148 suggests that the number of sheep indicates that the shepherd is not the owner but represents a larger group. As Bailey appeals to contemporary custom to make this point, which is not clearly linked to ancient practice, the observation is possible, but not demonstrable.

11 It is disputable whether everyday shepherds were seen as negative in the culture, so that Jesus' choice of a shepherd would be shocking; but so Bailey 1976: 147. See the exegesis of 2:8.

12 Some see a problem in the shepherd's leaving behind the ninety-nine, but this is probably a detail omitted in the abbreviated telling of the story. ῎Ερημος is an open field, a heath, where the animals grazed; Manson 1949: 283; 1 Sam. 17:28. On the use of the numbers ninety-nine and one, see SB 1:784–85; m. Pe‹a 4.1–2; Fitzmyer 1985: 1076.

13 Only the reference to the ninety-nine appears in the same place; a few other terms appear in a different order. The conscious difference between the use of “lost sinners” in Luke and “wayward believers” in Matthew is significant.

14 Marshall 1978: 600–601 has details and notes the views. Bultmann 1963: 171 and Linnemann 1966: 67–70 opt for Matthean originality, while Jeremias 1963a: 40 and Ellis 1974: 197 are convinced that Luke has the original form. Marshall is undecided, as is Nolland 1993a: 769. All of this assumes that only one tradition of the story originally existed, which may not be true, as Marshall notes. Bultmann 1963: 202 also notes a similar parable in the later Gen. Rab. 86.4 on 39:2, where one of twelve cows is lost; also SB 1:785.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

15 On the regal image of the shepherd, see Jer. 31:10–14; Ezek. 34:11–16; Mic. 5:2–5 [5:1–4 MT]; John 10:11–12. On people as sheep, see Ps. 23; 119:176; Oepke, TDNT 1:395.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

16 The image of the sheep on the shoulder is common in the ancient world; Fitzmyer 1985: 1077; G. Wright 1939; V. Muller 1944.

17 Only Luke has the detail about the γείτων (neighbor); see BAGD 153; BAA 307; elsewhere in the NT only at Luke 14:12; 15:9; John 9:8.

18 Συγκαλέω is frequently used by Luke: Luke 9:1; 23:13; Acts 5:21; 10:24; 28:17; Fitzmyer 1985: 1077.

19 The future tense may have eschatological overtones or it may be a customary future alluding to God's habitual response. The wording may have Aramaic roots and betray a pre-Lucan form; Fitzmyer 1985: 1077–78; Black 1967: 184; Jeremias 1980: 247.

20 The phrase in heaven parallels the idiom before the angels in 15:10 (SB 2:209). Both expressions are used to avoid direct mention of God.

b. Babylonian Talmud

21 This Pesikta Rabbati text treats Hos. 14:1 [14:2 MT] and says that repentance raises a heart to the seventh firmament (i.e., into God's presence) before the throne of glory itself. Other portions of this text read: " 'Come back as far as you can according to your strength, and I will go the rest of the way to meet you.' So the Holy One, blessed be he, says to Israel: 'Return unto me, and I will return unto you' (Mal. 3:7). . . . For the Holy One, blessed be he, is merciful and gracious and desires a turning to him before he sits as your judge on the dais whence he must release the full force of his judgment upon you" (Braude 1968: 2.779).

t. Tosepta

Sanh. Sanhedrin

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

22 This parable contains the only uses of δραχμή in the NT, though the double drachma is found in Matt. 17:24. In LXX, see Gen. 24:22; Exod. 39:3 [38:26 Engl.]; Josh. 7:21; Jeremias 1969: 111.

23 Kistemaker 1980: 212 assumes this background and argues that the equivalent today would be losing a diamond from a wedding ring. If the woman has a dowry, it is not a significant amount. Against this understanding, which must remain only an implication of the text, are Klostermann 1929: 157 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1051.

24 SB 2:212 narrates a similar Jewish parable from a later period in Song Rab. 1.1.9 on 1:1, where the subject is seeking wisdom like silver, a reference to the Torah.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

Geldenhuys 1951: 403: “Because the Saviour has paid with His precious blood for the redemption of man, every soul has an infinite value in God’s sight and the way to the throne of grace lies open to everyone who desires to enter.”

Manson 1949: 284 calls it “The Two Sons,” but the father is too crucial to the picture to be left out. Jeremias 1963a: 128 calls it “The Parable of the Father’s Love,” a title that Fitzmyer 1985: 1084 likes. Jesus likes to use the two-son imagery (Matt. 21:28–31).

2 Danker 1988: 275 cites F. Preisigke’s edition of an ancient letter in which an impecunious son pleads with his mother to be received back into the family: “I am writing to tell you I am naked. I plead with you, forgive me. I know well enough what I have done to myself. I have learned my lesson.”

[3] For effective refutation, see O’Rourke 1971–72 and Jeremias 1971b. Marshall 1978: 605 rejects attempts to posit a Lucan origin for the parable, such as Schottroff 1971 defends. Goulder 1989: 614–16 argues for Lucan authorship of the parable, attempting to refute the various cases made for authenticity on linguistic grounds by Jeremias, O’Rourke, or Hofius 1977–78. Goulder (pp. 611–12) argues that Luke is relying consciously or unconsciously on the story of Joseph in Genesis, but the cause of the “lostness” of the son in the Joseph cycle of Gen. 39–50 and of the prodigal could not be more different. Nolland 1993a: 780–81 correctly rejects attempts to split the parable in two.

[4] Bultmann 1963: 196 accepts the parable’s historicity. Other contrastive parables involving two figures or groups are Matt. 21:28–31; 25:1–13; Luke 7:41–42; 18:9–14.

[5] Efforts to argue that Lucan repentance concerns only changing one’s mind about Jesus are too narrow. This picture and that of the Great Physician (5:32) show that sin is an issue, since that is why Jesus is necessary. One comes to Jesus for healing and righteousness, which he graciously offers and supplies.

For the structure, see Bailey 1976: 159–61; Blomberg 1990: 173–74; and Tolbert 1979: 98–100. Blomberg argues for a plausible threefold division: younger son’s departure (15:11–20a), father’s welcome (15:20b–24), and older son’s reaction (15:25–32).

[7] Τὸ ἐπιβάλλον means “that which falls to me”; Tob. 3:17; 6:12; P. Oxy. vol. 4 #715 lines 13–15; Creed 1930: 198; Hauck, TDNT 1:529; MM 235; Fitzmyer 1985: 1087. As a noun, οὐσίας refers to property; Tob. 14:13; 3 Macc. 3:28; Josephus, Antiquities 7.5.5 §114. On διεῖλεν (he divided), see Schlier, TDNT 1:184.

[8] Sir. 33:20 (NRSV) reads: “To son or wife, to brother or friend, / do not give power over yourself, as long as you live; / and do not give your property to another, / in case you change your mind and must ask for it.” A more positive attitude and example appears in Tob. 8:21 (Nolland 1993a: 782).

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

m. Mishnah

B. Bat. Baba‹ Batra‹

b. Babylonian Talmud

B. Meṣ. Baba‹ Meṣi‹a‹

[9] Though exceptions do exist; see Jeremias 1963a: 129 and Daube 1955: 334, though his explanation that the father gave property to the younger son but not to the older is not correct, given the end of this verse. On this custom, see Horowitz 1953: 402–21 and Pö;hlmann 1979.

[10] Rengstorf 1967 suggests as allusion to the Jewish custom of qēṣ;āṣ;â (קְצָצָה), which cut off from society a member who sold a family heirloom to an outsider or who married beneath their social rank (Jastrow 1903: 1407–

8). There is no indication that such a custom applies here, though Rengstorf's study does show the parable's social context and background in terms of the familial symbolism of the ring and robe in 15:22. For refutation, see Marshall 1978: 606 and Bailey 1976: 167–68.

11 So Manson 1949: 287, who argues that there is no need to see inconsistency in the parable because the older son is still subject to the father; 15:22–23, 29–30 show that the father is still in control.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

12 The phrase οὐ πολλὰς ἡμέρας (not many days) is a figure of speech called litotes, an understatement that affirms something by using the negative. This figure is frequent in Luke: Luke 21:9; Acts 1:5; 12:18; 14:28; 15:2; plus twelve more times; Fitzmyer 1985: 1087.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament: Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources, by J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan (repr. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

13 The hapax legomenon ἀσώτως speaks of a debauched, profligate life (BAGD 119; BAA 239; Prov. 7:11; 28:7), and so Luke 15:30 speaks of the son's time with prostitutes. Conceptual parallels are found in Eph. 5:18; Titus 1:6; 1 Pet. 4:4; Creed 1930: 199; Foerster, TDNT 1:507, esp. n. 4.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

14 Ἀγρός refers to fields associated with a farm where animals graze; BAGD 14 §3; BAA 24 §3. Βόσκω means “to tend animals”; Matt. 8:33 = Mark 5:14 = Luke 8:34; BAGD 145; BAA 289. SB 1:492–93 cites several Jewish texts that condemn or forbid Jews to raise swine, including b. B. Qam. 82b: “Cursed is the man who raises swine, and cursed is the man who teaches his son Greek philosophy.”

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

15 Κεράτιον (little horn) was eaten only by the poorest humans; BAGD 429; BAA 873; a NT hapax legomenon. Marshall 1978: 609 cites a saying from Lev. Rab. 35.6 on 26:3: “When the Israelites are reduced to carob pods, then they repent.” This food was nicknamed “John the Baptist’s bread,” on the erroneous idea that John ate carobs. John’s carob was sweet, while this carob was bitter; Nolland 1993a: 783; Bailey 1976: 171–73.

[16] Sir. 12:6–7 (NRSV) reads: “For the Most High also hates sinners / and will inflict punishment on the ungodly. / Give to the one who is good, but do not help the sinner.” Though this attitude is harsh, the prevalent Jewish view would be that the boy got what he deserved—something the boy himself comes to realize.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

T. Jos. Testament of Joseph

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

17 Lam. Rab. 1.34 on 1:7 reads, "When a son abroad goes barefoot [through poverty], then he remembers the comfort of his father's house."

18 To speak of sinning before heaven is to acknowledge that one has sinned against God; SB 2:217. OT conceptual or idiomatic parallels are found in Exod. 10:16; 1 Sam. 7:6; 20:1; Tob. 3:3; Jdt. 5:17; Sus. 23; Plummer 1896: 374; Manson 1949: 288; Lohfink 1975. Jer. 31:18–20 shows the proper attitude of repentance. In Hos. 2:7 [2:9 MT], Israel returns to her first husband.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

19 Danker 1988: 276 notes a similar appeal to Caesar for clemency in Cicero, On Behalf of Quintus Ligarius 30.

20 Jeremias 1963a: 130 calls the phrase an Aramaism and cites Tg. 2 Sam. 3:21 (cf. Acts 5:17; 9:6, 18). Fitzmyer 1985: 1089 calls it a Septuagintalism and cites Gen. 22:3, 19; 24:10; 43:8; Tob. 8:10 [8:9 NRSV]. All that this really shows is that the idiom is cross-cultural.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

21 Holding the emphatic position in the clause is the reference to the son being distant when spotted. Danker 1988: 277 sees a picture of Jer. 31:18–20 here. Tobit 11:5–6 has a similar observation from a distance.

22 Blomberg 1990: 176 makes clear that this action is the "twist" in the story. No Middle Eastern father would greet or respond to his wayward son this way.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

23 So also Plummer 1896: 375 argues that the father's warm reception prevents the son from finishing, since it is clear that he is accepted.

24 Bailey argues that this omission of his resolve to be a worker is key: the son backs off from his confession and is disappointed that his effort to earn back his relationship, a picture of his "rabbinic-like repentance," has failed. Bailey is right that the son understands that the father "gifted" him with a new relationship, but his characterization of the son is too negative, as Nolland 1993a: 784 correctly notes. The parable describes a returned prodigal, a sinner found, which for Jesus is a positive, not a conniving, category.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

LXX Septuagint

MT Masoretic Text

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

25 So the passive εὐφραίνω (to rejoice); BAGD 327 §2; BAA 663 §2; Luke 12:19; 16:19; Acts 2:26; 7:41; Rom. 15:10; Gal. 4:27. Used in other passages for eschatological joy, here its meaning is more mundane. The participle φαγόντες (eating) functions like a second verb (BDF §420.3; Marshall 1978: 611): “Let us eat and rejoice.”

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LXX Septuagint

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

26 The optative εἴη introduces an indirect question; BDF §299.1, §386.1. In effect, he is asking, “What is going on?”

27 Ὅτι is used twice, first in indirect discourse (“that”) and then causal (“because”); Plummer 1896: 377. Ὑγιαίνω refers to physical well-being: the younger son returned “safe and sound”; BAGD 832; BAA 1660.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

28 Οὗτος (this one) represents contempt in Matt. 20:12; Luke 18:11; Acts 17:18; Jeremias 1963a: 131; BDF §290.6. It will reappear in Luke 23 as the characters discuss and rebuke Jesus (23:2, 35).

29 Fitzmyer 1985: 1091 notes this idiom in wider Greek usage as well.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

Marshall 1978: 614–17 has an excellent overview of the difficult issues in this parable. For a historical survey of the parable's interpretation, see Krämer 1972; Ireland 1992: 5–47; and Ireland 1989.

[2] Luke 16:13 is exactly parallel to Matt. 6:24, except Luke has an additional word: οἰκέτης (servant). A different version is found in the Gospel of Thomas 47.

[3] So, e.g., Jeremias 1963a: 45–48. Marshall 1978: 622–23 notes that even if, as he believes, this is a compilation, the teaching still comes from traditional material. Since he defends the authenticity of 16:13, this seems to imply the authenticity of the whole of 16:9–13. Pilgrim 1981: 127, however, alludes to the work of a Christian preacher or teacher. Talbert 1982: 153 is probably incorrect to call 16:8b an initial interpretation of the parable, since it is really an observation that produces an application only by implication. The phrase but I say to you in 16:9 is the start of the parable's formal application and is not a Lucan expression (Jeremias 1980: 106).

[4] On the debate in older commentaries, see Creed 1930: 202–3, who holds that 16:9–13 was added later. Blomberg 1990: 245–47 builds a case for unity.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[5] The second parable of this chapter also centers around a rich man (16:19). In Rome, the steward was called a dispensator, vilicus, or procurator, though the latter title usually was reserved for a more comprehensive role; Derrett 1970: 52–55.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[6] Such charges tied to this verb can be false (e.g., 4 Macc. 4:1) or true (2 Macc. 3:11; Dan. 3:8), but the point in raising them is to discredit the one described. Ὡς (how or that) introduces the content of the complaint.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

7 Ἔγνων is a dramatic use of the aorist: “I have determined what I will do,” which might be idiomatically rendered, “I’ve got it!” (Kistemaker 1980: 230–31; Burton 1900: §45; Zerwick 1963: §258). The asyndeton in the verse suggests that the idea came to him suddenly; Plummer 1896: 383.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

8 A wordplay is set up with 16:9 by the mention of reception into homes here, since the same form (δέξωνται) there refers to reception into heavenly habitations.

9 Fitzmyer 1985: 1100 says that the question serves to advance the story, but it does more than that because of the question’s psychological value. Marshall 1978: 618 notes that the typical procedure was for the debtor to write a promissory note that the steward would keep until the debt was paid; cf. Philem. 18.

10 Luce 1933: 260 suggests that rent is unlikely since that would be a fixed rate; but if a fraction of anticipated yield was the payment, this figure could also vary. Jeremias 1963a: 181 notes that either situation is possible.

11 This was the most popular position until recently, though it is making something of a comeback (e.g., Blomberg 1990: 244–45; Blomberg 1994; Ireland 1992: 73–82). Plummer 1896: 383 holds a quite plausible variation of this view, arguing that the steward simply lessened the excess cut he took from the debtors, a view close to the “righteous” cut option (no. 3 below), except it suggests that the steward did take something additional. The inflationary trend may suggest that the debtors knew that not all of the money was getting to the owner. Jeremias 1963a: 181 speaks of the steward covering up his previous embezzlements by the new accounting, a view that requires that the master does not have proof for his firing the steward in 16:1–2. Such an internal inconsistency in the parable is unlikely.

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

12 Fitzmyer 1985: 1101 argues that no debt cancellation occurred, only a rewriting of the old debt that removed the steward’s commission—something he had the right to do.

11 This was the most popular position until recently, though it is making something of a comeback (e.g., Blomberg 1990: 244–45; Blomberg 1994; Ireland 1992: 73–82). Plummer 1896: 383 holds a quite plausible variation of this view, arguing that the steward simply lessened the excess cut he took from the debtors, a view close to the “righteous” cut option (no. 3 below), except it suggests that the steward did take something additional. The inflationary trend may suggest that the debtors knew that not all of the money was getting to the owner. Jeremias 1963a: 181 speaks of the steward covering up his previous embezzlements by the new accounting, a view that requires that the master does not have proof for his firing the steward in 16:1–2. Such an internal inconsistency in the parable is unlikely.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

13 Jeremias 1963a: 181 notes that the average olive tree yields 120 kilos of olives or 25 liters of oil. Kistemaker 1980: 231 and Manson 1949: 291–92 put the number more precisely at 868 gallons or 3,946 liters, using the scale provided by Josephus, Antiquities 8.2.9 §57. Marshall 1978: 618–19 notes that ancient measuring jars found in archeological digs vary from 5 gallons to 10 gallons. Given this variation, precise numbers are difficult to determine, but the number is not as important as recognizing that this is a large debt.

14 Similarly high interest for items is found in ancient Egyptian documents; Derrett 1972b. The term τὰ γράμματα describes the promissory note; BAGD 165 §2a; BAA 330 §2b; Schrenk, TDNT 1:764–65; Fitzmyer 1985: 1100.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

15 Measures in the ancient world varied somewhat, so an exact figure is uncertain; see Plummer 1896: 383 and Marshall 1978: 619. BAGD 445 places the measure of a cor at 393 liters or 10–12 bushels. Fitzmyer 1985: 1101 points out that Josephus defines κόρος variously: Antiquities 15.9.2 §314 says that it equals 10 medimnoi, while Antiquities 3.15.3 §321 says four-sevenths of a medimnos—a significant difference (a medimnos was an Attic measure that equaled about 1.5 bushels, a figure that seems very high and is thus questioned). Fitzmyer figures the amount on Josephus's smaller standard, which produces a debt of slightly more than 100 bushels, but he notes that the variation makes certainty difficult.

m. Mishnah

B. Meṣ. Baba‹ Meṣi‹a›

16 Twenty-five percent fits the ancient rate for grain; Derrett 1970: 66–68.

17 Ernst 1977: 464; Klostermann 1929: 163; and Creed 1930: 204 argue that the variation is only for literary value; but ancient parables were based on daily life, so the point may not be an either/or proposition. Derrett 1970: 66, 69 also defends a much higher charge for oil.

NT New Testament

18 Εἰς (toward) looks to the treatment of the people of this generation; Plummer 1896: 384. The phrase οἱ υἱοὶ τοῦ αἰῶνος is found in the NT only here and in 20:34.

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

1QS Manual of Discipline (Rule/Order of the Community)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NT New Testament

1QS Manual of Discipline (Rule/Order of the Community)

CD Damascus Document

19 The preposition ἐκ here means “by means of”; Fitzmyer 1985: 1109; Rüger 1973.

20 Σκηνή is the OT term used for “booths” and alludes to the picture of blessing that was tied to celebrating the exodus; Lev. 23:34. See also Mark 9:5; Rev. 7:15; 21:3; 1 Enoch 39.4; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 2:11. On the eschatological use of σκηνή (booths or habitations), see Michaelis, TDNT 7:378–79. T. Schmidt 1987: 154–55 argues that the passage refers neither to alms nor to the generous use of money, but to a prudent person acting in a “critical impermanent situation with that which has been entrusted to him in order to gain lasting benefits.” This may be the broad application if one had just this one verse, but the Lucan context suggests that using money generously is a central concern.

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

21 The exact phrase is unattested elsewhere, but at Qumran the phrases wealth of evil (CD 6.15) and wealth of violence (1QS 10.19) occur.

22 Leaney 1958: 223 prefers to see the verse as ironic and addressed to the Pharisees, but nothing in the context indicates irony or suggests that Pharisees are the most direct audience (though they are the negative, contrastive example). Leaney’s view accepts the ironic interpretation of the parable discussed in the additional note on 16:1–13 (view 5).

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

[23] Other texts on money are Matt. 6:19–21 = Luke 12:33–34; Mark 10:21; Luke 11:41; 19:8; and James 1:9–11. Another key text on the transience of wealth and the importance of generosity is 1 Tim. 6:6–10, 17–19. On the improper use of wealth, see James 5:1–6.

[24] Ἐκλείπω (to fail) speaks of money failing in the sense of becoming useless; BAGD 242; BAA 488.

[25] For a defense of the verse's appropriateness to this setting, see Marshall 1978: 622.

[26] Ἄδικος normally means "unjust" (BAGD 18; BAA 33); when opposite the term πιστός (faithful), it means "unfaithful." Ἐλάχιστος indicates faithfulness in the "smallest" thing. But the comparison is general; so the sense is "small," since the term is in parallelism to πολύς (much).

[27] In Exod. Rab. 2.2 on 3:1, David and Moses are faithful in tending sheep, so God lets them rule the people. Mekilta de Rabbi Ishmael, tractate Baḥodesh 5.1–11 on Exod. 20:2 [= Lauterbach 1933–35: 2.229–30] makes a comparison between overt and secret acts. See also m. ʾ*Abot* 3.7; Manson 1949: 293.

[28] Luke 16:10–11 makes clear that dishonesty is not the only point, but also faithfulness at every level of stewardship (see also 16:12). Creed 1930: 205 may unduly limit the application to wealth only, a point that is explicit only in 16:11.

[29] Either ἀδίκῳ μαμωνᾷ means "worldly wealth" or it is an exhortation to be a good steward of money gained dishonestly—an impossible sense. There is a pattern in these applications: stewardship (16:8b), money (16:9), stewardship (16:10), money (16:11), and stewardship and money (16:12–13).

30 Fitzmyer 1985: 1110 correctly notes that “true” (ἀληθινός) wealth has the force “what is really good”; BAGD 37 §3; BAA 72 §3b.

31 Recent affirmation of this approach is found in Porter 1990 and noted by Blomberg 1994: 90 n. 81.

32 Blomberg 1990: 244–45 opts for this, seeing him as a “son of this world.” Bailey 1976: 86–110 sees the servant enhancing the master’s reputation by forcing him to absorb the loss graciously in order to save face.

33 Ireland 1992: 36, 41 reports that this view goes back to D. Schulz in 1821 and was tied to ancient practice by J. J. Van Oosterzee in 1859. It has recently been defended through appeal to Jewish practice by Derrett 1970: 48–77. Fitzmyer 1964 adds an additional twist to this view: this interest was the steward’s commission, making his action of canceling the interest only a clever pretense of personal sacrifice.

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

34 Codex D makes clear the break midway through 16:8, reading διὸ λέγω ὑμῖν (therefore I say to you) instead of ὅτι (for). This reading is too poorly attested to be original, but does provide a fifth-century example of how the text was understood (i.e., that 16:8b begins Jesus’ explanation and application of the parable).

35 Bultmann 1963: 175–76, 199–200; so also Grundmann 1963: 318–20, esp. 320, who also argues that Luke changes an original parabolic reference to the master to refer to Jesus. Luce 1933: 260 regards ὅτι (for) in 16:8b as difficult for any other view.

36 Talbert 1982: 153 calls 16:8b the first interpretation of the parable, though this is true only by implication; also Marshall 1978: 619–20 (opting for an end at 16:8a).

37 Matt. 24:45 = Luke 12:42 uses φρόνιμος to describe a steward in another parable who thought ahead and lived in light of his master's return; so also Matt. 7:24; 25:2, 4, 8, 9; BAGD 866; BAA 1728.

38 Jeremias 1963a: 182 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1096–99, 1105 regard 16:9–13 as later additions and 16:8 as originally describing Jesus. Fitzmyer includes 16:8b in the applicational expansions and ties it to 16:9, which is problematic given the introductory "and I say to you" in 16:9. I agree that 16:8b is an application of the parable, but it must be seen as the original end to Jesus' remarks, given the break in 16:9a.

39 Jeremias 1963a: 45 gives the details on the absolute use of κύριος to refer to Jesus, which occurs seventeen other times in Luke.

40 Fitzmyer 1985: 1096 places Manson 1949: 292 here, though Manson really regards 16:9 as a separate application and so belongs to the 16:8b view. Luke 18:6 is regarded as a parallel example for the use of κύριος.

41 This key term links 16:9 and 16:11. In this context, ἀδικία is a Hebraistic "genitive of quality," describing the steward's character; Zerwick 1963: §40; Büchsel, TDNT 3:943 n. 2 (for κριτής). Schrenk, TDNT 1:157, calls it a "genitive of definition."

42 Schwarz 1974 sees these commendatory remarks as ironic; they are really condemnatory. This interpretation is forced and is not a possible rendering of ἐπαινέω (to praise); BAGD 281; BAA 569 (elsewhere in the NT at Rom. 15:11; 1 Cor. 11:2, 17, 22 [twice]). Also failing is Bailey's attempt (1976: 107) to argue that ἐπαινέω has eschatological force in picturing approval at the judgment. Other than the use of praise in Matt. 25:21, 34, the Gospels do not have this eschatological force, and in this Matthean context the eschatological force is clear, not inferred as it would have to be here. Porter 1990: 146–47 recognizes that the term must be positive, for the steward is commended for choosing to associate with the sons of this age, a comment dripping with bitter irony from the master. If one is to argue the irony position, this is the best way to do it. Against it, however, is the comparison in 16:8–9, which makes the steward look like a positive example through the commendation, not a negative one.

Tiede sees this unit starting in 16:10. But the theme of money is tied to the parable of the crafty steward and thus 16:8–13 needs to be kept with 16:1–7. Luke 16:14–15 is a bridge moving from money to the morality of the new era.

Given what Jesus does and says in relationship to the law in other texts and given the context of epochs here, this is the best way to tie the law and the kingdom together.

[3] For Luke having Q's original order and not Matthew, see Manson 1949: 134; Fitzmyer 1985: 1114; Schneider 1977a: 337 (perhaps); Meier 1994: 157; and Marshall 1978: 627. Ernst 1977: 469 speaks of Q material, special Lucan material, and Lucan redaction. Wiefel 1988: 294 speaks of Q in 16:16–17 and of Mark in 16:18. Godet 1875: 2.173 prefers Luke's positioning of material to Matthew's. However, the warnings are so general that parallel traditions may exist, reflecting a variety of settings.

[4] Mark also lacks the exception; Wiefel 1988: 294 therefore speaks of Mark as Luke's source. The variation in the tradition is what causes the Jesus Seminar's uncertainty about the saying. But only the exception should be a topic for such a discussion. Against a Matthean redaction is the probable Semitic background to the exception as stated in Matt. 5:32 (noted in Nolland 1993a: 816, although curiously he sees the detail as a redactional addition).

[5] However, it does look like Mark 10:11–12 and Matt. 19:9 go together, since almost every word of Mark is paralleled in Matthew.

Fitzmyer sees polemical sayings in 16:14–15 (1985: 1112), a saying in 16:16–17 (p. 1115), and a legal saying in 16:18 (p. 1120). Bultmann sees a wisdom saying in 16:15b (1963: 73), an "I-saying" in 16:16 (p. 164), and a legal saying in 16:18 (p. 132). Berger agrees that 16:18 is a legal saying (1984: 199) and argues that the passage is a warning made up of pronouncements, since he has the remarks in the apophthegm category (pp. 81, 89, 186).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[7] 1 Enoch 102.9–10 shows the Jewish contempt for the selfish rich. T. Moses 7.3 may apply to the Sadducees or Pharisees. Lachs 1987: 311–12 revives Manson's thesis and rejects the idea that this is a description of the Pharisees. On the Pharisees' relatively modesty means (not every lover of money succeeds in being rich), see Jeremias 1969: 259; Bammel, TDNT 6:901–2.

[8] In t. Menaḥ. 13.22 (= Neusner 1977–86: 5.162), the leadership's love of money and hatred of one another is why the temple came to be destroyed; also SB 1:937; 2:222; 4:336–39; Jeremias 1969: 49, 114. Luce 1933: 264 objects to this description, but fails to interact with the ancient sources. C. A. Evans 1990: 245 is right that a story about the afterlife would hardly be a meaningful rebuke to the Sadducees.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

LXX Septuagint

9 Klostermann 1929: 166 argues that the Pharisees claimed that their wealth showed God's blessing, but this approach fits the wealthy Sadducees more than the Pharisees.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

10 God knows the heart: 1 Sam. 16:7; 1 Chron. 28:9; Ps. 7:9 [7:10 MT]; Prov. 17:3; 21:2; 24:12; Jer. 11:20; Acts 1:24; 15:8; Rom. 8:27; 2 Cor. 11:11. Jesus will also examine the heart and exercise judgment: Luke 2:35; Acts 17:30–31.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[11] Mekilta de Rabbi Ishmael, tractate Baḥodesh 9 on Exod. 20:21 [= 20:18 in NJPSV] (= Lauterbach 1933–35: 2.274): “All who are lofty of heart are called an abomination, as it is said, ‘Everyone who is lofty of heart is an abomination to the Lord.’” Manson 1949: 295–96 notes that the OT describes idolatry in similar terms (e.g., 1 Kings 11:5). Because it is the ultimate worship of the creature over the Creator, pride may be the most common form of idolatry.

[12] Conzelmann 1960: 16 presents a threefold division: Israel, Jesus, the church. Fitzmyer 1981: 182–87 and 1985: 1115 defends a modified threefold division: the law and the prophets, Jesus, and the early church. But the Lucan passages cited know of only a law-and-prophets period (promise) and a kingdom-Jesus-church period (fulfillment).

[13] Friedrich, TDNT 6:840, argues that the meaning is that they prophesied about John, but the passage’s temporal markers are against this view.

[14] On “the law and the prophets,” see Luke 16:29, 31; Acts 13:15; 28:23; Schrenk, TDNT 1:756 n. 28; Friedrich, TDNT 6:832.

[15] So Schrenk, TDNT 1:612, argues, while opting for Matthew’s version as the more original form in Q. But Chilton 1979: 205–23 argues that Luke’s saying is from Lucan Q, a version distinct from but parallel to Matthew’s Q. Chilton also defends the originality of Luke’s form of the saying. Given all the other anomalies in the text, it is more satisfactory to argue for distinct sources and settings.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

16 On Matthew, see Hill 1972: 200–201. Perrin 1963: 172–74 does not discuss Luke 16:16b because, in his view, it is a later addition to the tradition, a view that grows out of his identifying the two texts as the same tradition. Marshall 1978: 630 argues almost single-handedly for a positive sense in Matthew: “Men of violence seize at the opportunity of entering the kingdom.” This is not likely.

17 I distinguish political critique from social or ethical critique that have political and social ramifications.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

18 So also Godet in the third French edition of his commentary, but not in the English translations of his earlier French editions (see Cortés and Gatti 1987: 255 n. 27). Lexical support for this sense comes from the LXX (Gen. 33:11; Judg. 13:15–16; 19:7; 2 Sam. 13:25, 27; 2 Kings 5:23 [variant reading]), the related verb παραβιάζομαι (to urge insistently; Luke 24:29; Acts 16:15), and Koine sources (MM 109–10 and Spicq 1995: 1.290–91).

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

19 Fitzmyer 1985: 1118 is against a decorative reference because such usage is found only in later rabbinic materials, not early Jewish documents. He also rejects the suggestion of Schwarz 1975 that κεραία refers to the Hebrew letter waw (ו). Regardless, the emphasis is on the whole of the law down to its smallest point. The law as a synthetic whole is in view here.

20 On the idiom of heaven and earth passing away, see Matt. 5:18; 24:35 = Mark 13:31 = Luke 21:33; J. Schneider, TDNT 2:682.

21 Creed 1930: 207 adopts this meaning, but regards it as unlikely that Jesus said it. On the endurance of the law in Judaism, see Bar. 4:1; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 9.37; 2 Bar. 77.15.

22 Berger 1972: 209–26 argues that the law refers to the "will of God." Schweizer 1984: 258 says the law is newly interpreted by Jesus' kingdom preaching and is valid as a moral norm (at least in some of its elements). Plummer 1896: 389 and Arndt 1956: 361 see a distinction between moral law and defunct ceremonial law.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

m. Mishnah

Giṭ. Giṭṭin

b. Babylonian Talmud

Giṭ. Giṭṭin

NJPSV New Jewish Publication Society Version

MT Masoretic Text

23 The penalty was apparently never carried out in Jesus' time since Jews did not have the right to execute capital punishment under Roman rule; Creed 1930: 208. The idea of such punishment still remains, as Jub. 30.8–9 shows. The standard was to pursue holiness. Such an act of adultery rendered a woman defiled (Jub. 33.9; m. Sot\;a 2.6; 5.1). In fact, these Mishnah texts almost require divorce for the adulterous wife since she becomes unclean to the husband. Thus, adultery was seen as extremely serious in Judaism (on the Greco-Roman view of adultery tied to shame, see Nolland 1993a: 818).

11QTemple Temple Scroll

[a] Temple Scroll

CD Damascus Document

[24] Marshall notes that Jesus' reference to not marrying a divorced person goes beyond what Judaism allowed; SB 1:320–21.

[25] For an excellent discussion of the history of interpretation of these passages, see Heth and Wenham 1984. For the debate, see House 1990.

[26] In ancient Judaism, a woman could not divorce her husband, although (as Manson 1949: 136–37 notes) if a man were immoral she could compel him to divorce her. Manson also notes the exceptional practice of the Jewish community at Elephantine in the fifth century b.c., where women could initiate divorce.

CD Damascus Document

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[27] For a defense of this position, see Murray 1953 and Hoehner 1987. For a defense of these grounds for divorce, but with no right to remarry, see Heth and Wenham 1984. Against a no-divorce-no-remarriage position stands Paul's reading of Jesus' command in 1 Cor. 7:12–16, which allows for divorce in the case of an unbeliever's desertion. Surely if Jesus' remarks were to be taken in the most strict sense, Paul would not have allowed this possibility, since an absolute view of a text such as Luke 16:18 apparently would have prohibited this option.

This silence recalls the woman who anointed Jesus' feet in 7:36–50. Her actions spoke for her, as did those of Mary in 10:38–42.

Old Testament

L. Johnson 1977: 141–43 notes the link between this text and 16:14–18 concerning the dispute over generosity and the law's value. So also T. Schmidt 1987: 155–57 speaks of 16:14–31 as a unit to make the point about this connection. He calls this warning to the godless rich a "polemical blow to opponents [and an] ethical sting to" Luke's readers. The parable is eventually a parable of rejection, and thus a parable of warning.

[3] For unity are Marshall 1978: 633–34 and Grobel 1963–64. Bultmann 1963: 178 denies unity (although he says that Luke received a unified story), wrongly assuming that a parable can only have one point. Crossan 1973: 66–67 and B. Scott 1989: 142–46 argue that 16:19–26 go back to Jesus and 16:27–31 to the early church, citing conceptual ties to Luke 24. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 360–62) makes a similar break, printing 16:19–26 in gray type (arguing that its roots may go back to Jesus) and 16:27–31 in black type (arguing that these verses were added later and are inauthentic). For refutation, see Pilgrim 1981: 114–15 and Hock 1987: 454–55.

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

[4] The Egyptian account is dated before 331 b.c. by Jeremias 1963a: 183 n. 47 (the earliest manuscript is from a.d. 100), but Hock 1987: 452 shows that the Egyptian folk tale is not the likely background, since Luke lacks key elements of it. Hock's appeal, however, to Micyllus in Lucian of Samosata's Gallus and Cataplus likewise errs. These parallels merely show that the theme is a general one in the ancient culture. Hock calls the parable's criterion of judgment unique, but it is not. The standards of care for the needy come from the Torah and should be followed, a common theme for Jesus.

y. Jerusalem (Palestinian) Talmud

Ḥag. Ḥagiga

[5] On the parallelism between Luke 16 and 1 Enoch, see Nickelsburg 1978–79. These conceptual contacts show how Jesus' remarks fit a Jewish milieu.

Blomberg 1990: 205 argues for a parable since the phrase a certain man is often used in Jesus' parables as well as rabbinic parables. Blomberg also notes that the story shares the three-point structure of other parables (e.g., 14:16). Against a parable is Gooding 1987: 277, who argues that parables deal with actual things and activities in the world, not things such as the afterlife directly.

Parallel literary phenomena to Lazarus and Abraham are the Levite and the Samaritan in the story of the good Samaritan, which is also an example story.

Bultmann 1963: 178 calls the account a similitude, which is where he puts parables and such. Berger 1984: 51 sees it as a parable. Ernst 1977: 472 rightly compares it to 15:11–32 and 16:1–8. Hauck, TDNT 5:752, calls it an illustrative story and compares it to 10:30–37; 12:16–21; and 18:9–14. For the structure, see B. Scott 1989: 146–48.

New Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

9 For πορφύρα, see BAGD 694; BAA 1391; 1 Macc. 8:14; 10:62; Esth. 8:15; Mark 15:17, 20. For βύσσος, see BAGD 148; BAA 296–97; Ezek. 16:10; 27:7. The terms occur together in Rev. 18:12; Prov. 31:22; 1QapGen 20.31. On the use of purple to indicate power and regal dress, the late Exod. Rab. 38.8 on 29:1 is illustrative.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

10 Εὐφραίνω in the passive means “to make merry, to cheer oneself”; BAGD 327; BAA 663 §2; elsewhere in Luke’s Gospel at 12:19; 15:23, 24, 29, 32. MM 267 notes a papyri that describes such a feast.

11 For discussion of the name Lazarus, see Dunkerley 1958–59; Derrett 1970: 78–99; Cave 1968–69; B. Scott 1989: 149 n. 28; SB 2:223; Meier 1994: 825, 868 n. 158.

12 This view sees the name as introduced into the story later, but it is hard to substantiate such interpolations. SB 2:223 traces the name’s usage and popularity. Fitzmyer 1985: 1131 notes that the name exists on numerous ossuaries, so it is clearly very common.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

b. Babylonian Talmud

13 A κύων is a wild, undomesticated dog; BAGD 461; BAA 936; Phil. 3:2; Rev. 22:15; Klostermann 1929: 168.

14 On the negative portrayal of dogs in Judaism, see 1 Enoch 89.42–43, 47, 49; B. Scott 1989: 151; Michel, TDNT 3:1103. For the view that this is a positive act, see Zahn 1920: 585.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

15 T. Job 47.11; 52.2, 5; T. Abr. (A) 20.11–12. For the reprobate, a satanic escort to hell is also a possibility; T. Asher 6.4–6 (Marshall 1978: 636 notes that this text is textually disputed); SB 2:223–27; Tg. Song 4.12.

16 Because it is a first-century work, 4 Macc. 13:17 provides key evidence: a martyr for the law is welcomed and praised by Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. See also b. Qid. 72a; b. Giṭ. 57b; Pesikta Rabbati 43.4 (= Braude 1968: 2.761); R. Meyer, TDNT 3:825–26. In Pesikta Rabbati, if a person bows down to an idol, he or she will have a place at Esau's bosom, not Abraham's.

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament: Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources, by J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan (repr. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980)

[17] Plummer 1896: 393 notes correctly that Abraham's bosom is not a synonym for paradise, but that Abraham is there shows that Lazarus is among the righteous. The image indicates the story's Jewish flavor; so also Jeremias, TDNT 5:769 n. 37, citing T. Abr. (A) 20.13–14.

[18] 1 Enoch 22.10–11 speaks of a place for the dead who have sinned and yet have received a proper interment; SB 2:227. Not unlike Jesus' warning, 1 Enoch 103.5–8 delivers a stinging indictment of wealthy Sadducees who live extravagantly only to descend to Sheol.

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

[19] See the unit introduction for a discussion about afterlife symbolism. Klostermann 1929: 168–69 notes the tension and cites 23:43 as another example of instant awareness of blessing after death. Arndt 1956: 365 notes that Acts 7:59; 2 Cor. 5:8; and Phil. 1:23 express a similar hope of instant awareness by the righteous. It may be that instant consciousness occurs in what has been called the "intermediate state," with confirming judgment and glorified resurrection coming later.

NT New Testament

[20] Maddox 1982: 103 notes that the modern pearly-gate picture is not intended to be a conflation of Rev. 21:10–15 and Matt. 16:19 (which is designed to picture reality in detail). The absence of Jesus or God in such eschatology shows it to be only graphic.

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

2 Bar. 2 (Syriac) Baruch

OT Old Testament

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

[21] For an attempt to distinguish Hades, Gehenna, and paradise, see Jeremias, TDNT 5:769 n. 37.

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament: Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources, by J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan (repr. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

22 Torment in both the intermediate state and the resurrection is found in Jewish (1 Enoch 22) and early Christian texts (2 Clem. 10.4; 17.7). In the 2 Clement texts the torture of hell is presented quite vividly as physical suffering.

23 On Abraham as father and the Jews as his children, see Luke 1:73; 13:16; 19:9. Josephus called Abraham “the father of all Hebrews”; Antiquities 14.10.22 §255.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

y. Jerusalem (Palestinian) Talmud

Ḥag. Ḥagiga

OT Old Testament

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

24 Luke 2:48 and Acts 20:38 show that it is mental pain that is often described by ὀδυνάομαι.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

25 So ἀπέλαβες means “you have received.” BAGD 94 and BAA 189 note that ἀπολαμβάνω has a commercial sense here: the rich man is “paid up.” The sense equals that of ἀπέχω (to receive) in 6:24.

26 So E. Scott 1924: 91 (cf. Luce 1933: 272): “[Luke] was plainly a man of tender and generous sentiment, who in his warm sympathy for the poor had come to idealize poverty. It need not be doubted that the sayings which he attributes to Jesus are genuine; but he is at pains to put this side of the teaching into the forefront.… The original meaning of the parable may have been little more than that earthly positions will be reversed in the coming age. But the rich man’s fate is so presented that he seems to be punished simply because he is rich, while Lazarus is rewarded for his poverty. This false and puerile lesson cannot be that which Jesus intended." Scott reads the parable too much in isolation from Jesus' other teachings and fails to see that material possessions are not the point; the use of them is.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

27 Bishop 1973 suggests that the chasm pictures the deep wadis of the Judean desert, which are high and deep but not so wide that one is prevented from seeing what is on the other side.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

[28] So, e.g., Luce 1933: 270 objects to the teaching of an eternal punishment where one cannot be forgiven in the afterlife. This objection, however, is philosophical, not biblical.

[29] Jeremias 1963a: 186 argues that purgatory is excluded, but technically this is not correct, since the doctrine of purgatory teaches that the elect go to Hades to be purified. Purgatory must be evaluated on grounds other than this passage. Purgatory is not in view here, but the permanent rejection of the unrighteous is.

[30] Fitzmyer 1985: 1134 notes Greek parallels of the dead returning to speak to those on earth: Lucian, Demonax 43; Plato, Republic 614d (10.13).

[31] Some see in the reference to five brothers a possible allusion to Herod's brothers, but this connection is unlikely (Leaney 1958: 226 notes the view). It is a rich man, not a ruler, who is addressed. Others suggest that five plus one makes six and as such represents the nation's unbelieving half (Jülicher 1899: 2.639). This suggestion also seems unlikely, since "half" the nation did not come to Jesus. Such a detail would suggest allegory, which is not the story's genre.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

32 The present tense λέγει (he says) is a historical present: "he [Abraham] said." This is one of five historical presents in Luke's parables (13:8; 16:7, 23; 19:22). Since Luke normally avoids this tense, it probably indicates pre-Lucan material; Jeremias 1963a: 182–83.

OT Old Testament

33 On the phrase "Moses and the prophets," see Luke 16:16, 31; 24:27, 44; 1QS 1.3; 8.15–16; CD 5.21–6.1. The combination is not found in formal Judaism; SB 4:415–17; Marshall 1978: 639. On the theme that God has so revealed himself in the OT that neglect makes one culpable, see Lorenzen 1975–76.

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

34 Grammatically this is a third-class condition that means the premise is presented as possible but not yet occurring: "If someone should go to them from the dead, then.… "

35 For example, many psalms testify to the great work of the exodus and the accompanying unbelief (e.g., Ps. 78). Schweizer 1984: 261 notes that the raising of Lazarus in John 11:43–53 failed to stop opposition to Jesus.

OT Old Testament

36 Danker 1988: 285–86 notes that Jesus appears only to his disciples after his resurrection, a point that confirms this emphasis. Even in the Book of Acts, the resurrection is not preached as a bare fact, but as a fulfillment of Scripture, so that the call is always to believe God's promise.

OT Old Testament

37 The issue of authenticity raised by this allusion is discussed in the sources and historicity section above.

38 Luke 18:33; 24:7, 46; Acts 10:41; 17:3; BAGD 70; BAA 138–39. The related noun ἀνάστασις (resurrection) is used of Jesus in Acts 1:22; 2:31; 4:2, 33; 17:18, 32; 26:23; BAGD 60; BAA 119–20.

Old Testament

Old Testament

Old Testament

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

Hendriksen argues that seeing the passage as disconnected goes against the declaration of an orderly account in 1:3. This view interprets Luke's remark too narrowly. For Hendriksen, the connection is that disciples are not to commit the sin of harming others, which Jesus warned against in Luke 16. However, this connection ties only the first part to the previous unit and does not relate the pieces of this unit to each other.

[2] Fitzmyer 1985: 1136–37 argues that all of the material is from Q, but that 17:2 has been influenced by Mark 9:42. Marshall 1978: 640 agrees that Q and Mark overlap in 17:1–2 and also sees (pp. 642, 643–44) the rest of 17:3–6 as coming from Q, though he entertains the possibility that Q has various forms from which Matthew and Luke drew. Creed 1930: 215 sees Q and Mark 11:23 exercising influence in 17:5–6. Ernst 1977: 477–80 sees 17:1–3a as coming from either Q or a form of oral tradition that circulated in a variety of forms, 17:3b–4 as rooted in Jesus' teaching, and triple tradition (i.e., Mark and Q) influencing 17:5–6. Ellis 1974: 207 speaks of Mark and Q in 17:1–4 and regards Luke's special source as responsible for 17:5–10. Egelkraut 1976: 120–21 speaks of Q/Mark overlap in 17:1–2 and multiple tradition in 17:5–6. Grundmann 1963: 331 suggests that it is hard to know if Q or Luke's special material is responsible for the unit, except for 17:7–10, which is L. Grundmann sees its roots in material earlier than the versions of Matthew and Mark. All of this assumes that only one form of these sayings existed in the tradition and that it emerged from a single saying. If this was a theme repeated by Jesus, multiple renderings could well exist.

[3] If one sees multiple versions of Q and recognizes how much teaching and parabolic material is in special Luke, then the possibility of overlaps with Matthean teaching (or Q) becomes very likely. The presence of a teaching in one strand of tradition does not mean it is banned elsewhere. Proverbial statements may exist in this tradition outside of Q because the Lucan tradition also would have preserved different settings. Of course, Matthean prioritists see Matthew's influence instead of Q, but the issues of the shift in setting and variation of wording are problems for all approaches that see Luke using Gospel material or sources. Any theory of alternate Q can just as well be evidence of special Lucan material. The possibility of "alibi parallels" is real, but this means that we have conceptual parallels, rather than source parallels. For the view that Luke uses Matthew, see Goulder 1989: 639–43.

[4] Although Luke loves to introduce teaching through questions (e.g., 10:29, 40; 18:18), this is an example where he apparently ignores this approach.

m. Mishnah

Fitzmyer 1985: 1137 and Bultmann 1963: 144 call 17:1–3a a legal saying, while Berger 1984: 65 calls it a "sentence." Luke 17:3b–4 is like a wisdom saying according to Ernst 1977: 479 and a warning according to Berger 1984: 119, 165. Fitzmyer 1985: 1142 calls 17:5–6 a wisdom saying, while Berger 1984: 81 calls it a pronouncement ("apophthegm"). All agree that 17:7–10 is a parable.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[6] The grammatical construction τοῦ μή plus the infinitive here means the inability to do something or to hinder something from happening; BDF §400.4; BDR §400.4.6; Plummer 1896: 398. Conceptually similar expressions are found in Luke 4:42; 24:16; Acts 10:47; 14:18; 20:20, 27.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[7] Σκάνδαλον is used of the wicked in Josh. 23:13; Judg. 2:3; 1 Sam. 18:21; Ps. 68:23 LXX [69:22 Engl.]; of idols in Ps. 105:36 LXX [106:36 Engl.]; of the arrogant in Ps. 139:6 LXX [140:5 Engl.]; and of evildoers in Ps. 140:9 LXX [141:9 Engl.]. See also Wis. 14:11; Ps. Sol. 16.7. In the NT, σκάνδαλον is used of false teaching (Rom. 16:17) and of action that causes others to sin (Rom. 14:13). Stählin, TDNT 7:351, sees the σκάνδαλον causing the loss of faith; that is, it is a serious sin that leads to defection. Matt. 11:6 declares the blessing of the one who is not “scandalized,” who is able to confess Jesus. The term refers to placing an obstacle in someone's way and thus, in this context, of enticing them to proceed in a wrong direction.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament: Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources, by J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan (repr. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LSJ A Greek-English Lexicon, by H. G. Liddell, R. Scott, and H. S. Jones (Oxford: Clarendon, 1968)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

8 Elsewhere in Luke, Jesus instructs about obedience (8:18), hypocrisy (12:1), covetousness (12:15), false piety (20:46), and readiness (21:8, 34).

9 Marshall 1978: 642 ties it to 17:3b–4 by arguing that it is anticlimactic if it looks back. In fact, the reminder can be seen as emphatic.

10 This type of conditional clause uses ἐάν (if). The aorist imperatives probably denote something generally done; Arndt 1956: 368. For ἐπιτιμάω (to rebuke), see the exegesis of 4:35a.

NT New Testament

T. Gad Testament of Gad

11 The command to forgive appears in the future tense and is somewhat more emphatic than using an imperative; Fitzmyer 1985: 1141.

[12] Ps. 119:164 uses the number seven as a figure to mean “frequently” or “constantly.”

T. Gad Testament of Gad

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[13] Προστίθημι (to add) is also Lucan, appearing thirteen times in Luke–Acts and only three times in the other Gospels; Schneider 1977a: 347; Isa. 26:15. As Fitzmyer 1985: 1143 notes, the apostles would already have had some faith, so the idea is to add faith (against BAGD 719 §2; BAA 1440 §2).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

14 Grundmann 1963: 333 and Luce 1933: 273, 292 are clear on the sycomore/sycamore distinction. Plummer 1896: 400–401 is uncertain about the difference and argues that the hyperbole is more natural for a sycomore tree. Manson 1949: 141 sees an original sycamore tree, appealing to an Aramaic mistranslation and to the use of the term in the LXX as a rendering of Hebrew שִׁקְמָה (šiqmâ) for the sycamore, not to mention rabbinic discussions like m. B. Bat. 2.11. Schneider 1977a: 347 agrees with Manson and cites SB 2:234 for rabbinic images. Nonetheless, many use sycamore when they mean sycomore (Fitzmyer 1985: 1143–44 is uncertain).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

15 The image is neither strange nor derived; but so Fitzmyer 1985: 1144 (apparently) and C. A. Evans 1990: 256.

16 The use of εἰ (if) plus ἄν (untranslated particle) yields a mixed condition; Arndt 1956: 369; BDF §372.1a. On the idiom πίστιν ἔχειν (to have faith), see 4 Macc. 16:22; Matt. 17:20; 21:21 = Mark 11:22; Acts 14:9; Rom. 14:2 (conceptually); 1 Cor. 13:2; 1 Tim. 1:19; 3:9; Philem. 5; James 2:1, 14, 18; Hanse, TDNT 2:826 n. 58.

17 Against Creed 1930: 215, who argues that Luke's saying is like Matt. 21:21 and that Luke has turned the fig tree into a sycamine tree. This saying does come with some variety, but this is only a problem if we assume that the saying had only one original form. If the tradition has complex roots, then we may only be seeing a rich conceptual field for the imagery.

18 Danker 1972: 179 notes that the disciples would have considered the reversal in the question humorous. The image is similar to the president of a company opening the door to the presidential office for the janitor and giving the janitor the presidential chair.

19 The verb διακονέω (to serve) has religious significance later in the NT: Matt. 20:28 (twice) = Mark 10:45 (twice); 2 Cor. 8:19; 1 Pet. 4:10; esp. 1 Tim. 3:10, 13 (of the diaconate office). Here we have an everyday meaning: “to wait on tables”; Luke 12:37; 22:26–27 (three times); Acts 6:2; BAGD 184; BAA 368.

20 On δεῖπνον, a full, formal meal in the evening, see Luke 14:12; John 13:4, 21; BAGD 173; BAA 346 (cf. δειπνέω, to dine, in Luke 22:20; 1 Cor. 11:25; Rev. 3:20). For Jesus’ reversal of the image, see Luke 12:37 and John 13:4.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

21 Οὕτως (so) is the link between parable and application in Matt. 5:16; 13:49; 18:14; 20:16; Luke 12:21; 14:33; 15:7, 10 and between parable and teaching in Matt. 12:45; Luke 21:31; and John 3:8; BAGD 597 §1b; BAA 1209 §1b.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

22 Wellhausen 1904: 550 notes that the Syriac version omitted the term. Fitzmyer 1985: 1147 notes the etymological suggestion of Kilgallen 1982 that the term means “those to whom something is not owed.” Usage is against this sense, though Blomberg 1990: 262 takes it as possible.

m. Mishnah

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

m. Mishnah

23 “Going on strike” before God is not an option for a believer; Schweizer 1984: 264.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

Bultmann 1963: 33 calls it a “biographical apophthegm” and sees the account as a variant of Mark 1:40–45 (on the Marcan connection, see the discussion of sources and historicity). Berger 1984: 314, 317 speaks of “deesis” or “petitio” because of the appeal for help. Tannehill 1986: 118–20 calls it a “quest story.”

So Wiefel 1988: 305 and Bruners 1977. Bruners also argues that the account is Lucan. Fitzmyer 1985: 1150–51 and H. Betz 1981 question the connection. At most, it is a form parallel. Betz’s main thesis (1971) that the account is a polemic against healing miracles is incorrect; see Marshall 1978: 649. Meier 1994: 750–51 shows how an appeal to Lucan creation from 2 Kings cannot explain four differences in the account: (1) no mention of Elijah, (2) no mention of Jesus as prophet, (3) no delay in the miracle’s occurrence, and (4) the different kind of miracle in the account (punitive versus healing).

The parable of the good Samaritan (10:25–37) also portrays these so-called half-breeds in a good light, a Lucan theme repeated in Luke 4:25–27; Acts 10–11; 26:16–18; 28:26–27. It is too much to see Samaritans as part of Israel; so Jervell 1972: 113–32. That the Samaritans are the target of the church’s expansion in Acts 8 also shows that they are not part of Israel.

NT New Testament

[4] Greek tutors also held this title: Aristaeus (tutor of Dionysus), Olympus (tutor of Zeus), and Pherecydes (tutor of Pythagoras); BAGD 300; BAA 608.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

5 On the use of φωνή (voice), see Luke 11:27; Acts 4:24; Gen. 39:15, 18; Judg. 21:2; 1 Sam. 11:4; Van Der Loos 1965: 496 n. 4; Klostermann 1929: 173. The call for mercy is also used in the Psalter (e.g., 109:21; Glö;ckner 1983: 139–40), but not much can be made of this general expression, as Nolland 1993a: 846 indicates.

6 Καθαρίζω (to cleanse) is often used of leprosy: Matt. 8:2 = Mark 1:40 = Luke 5:12; Matt. 10:8; Luke 4:27; 7:22 = Matt. 11:2; Luke 17:17; Lev. 14:7; 2 Kings 5:13; BAGD 387; BAA 785.

7 Thirty-two of thirty-five NT uses of ὑποστρέφω occur in Luke–Acts (none occur in the other Synoptics), including Luke 1:56; 2:45; 4:1, 14; 8:39; 17:18; 24:9; Acts 8:25; 12:25; 13:13; BAGD 847; BAA 1688–89. Δοξάζω occurs in Luke 2:20; 4:15; 5:25, 26; 7:16; 13:13; 18:43; 23:47; Acts 3:13; 4:21; 11:18; 13:48; 21:20; BAGD 204; BAA 411 (in the other Synoptics it is limited to Matt. 5:16; 6:2; 15:31; Mark 2:12 = Matt. 9:8). Other words for praise occur in Luke 1:64; 2:13, 20; 9:43; 19:37; 24:53; Acts 2:47; 3:8, 9. This verse reflects Lucan description of the reaction.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand

Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

8 The woman who anointed Jesus' feet demonstrated a similar sign of respect and recognition that Jesus is sent from God (7:38). Other such acts are found in 5:12 and 8:41.

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

9 The two questions are laid out chiastically: the first has the particle in the initial position, while the second has the particle at the end.

LXX Septuagint

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

10 Luke uses σῴζω (to save) thirty times, including 7:50; 8:12, 48, 50; 9:24 (twice); 13:23; 19:10. Ironic uses occur in Luke 23:35 (twice), 37, 39. The term also occurs in Acts 2:21; 4:9, 12; 14:9; 15:11.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

[1] Jeremias 1980: 266 argues that ἐντὸς ὑμῶν (in your midst) in 17:21 is not Lucan. Whether Luke worded the introduction is an open question. After a detailed presentation of the options, Zmijewski 1972: 387–90 decides for a special Lucan source.

[2] I do not follow Aland 1985: §114 and §194 in positing Synoptic parallels for 7:39 and 11:38. See the discussions of sources and historicity for 7:36–50 and 11:37–54.

[3] On the possibility of the futuristic present and the likelihood that it is not in force, see the discussion below on whether the kingdom's coming is present or future. Semantically, there is little difference in the choice at this point of the verse, since the process of the kingdom's approach is the point; but the difference is crucial for the passage's theological point, since the contrast of the present tense here and the future tense in 17:22–37 is important.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[4] The noun is a hapax legomenon, while the verb occurs in a few, mostly Lucan, texts: Mark 3:2; Luke 6:7; 14:1; 20:20; Acts 9:24. In Gal. 4:10, it has the meaning "legal, ritual observation"; Geiger 1976: 38.

[5] Though not accepting this view, Schweizer 1984: 272 notes a rabbinic tradition that if two Sabbaths were perfectly observed the kingdom would come, citing Isa. 56:4–7; b. Šab. 118b; SB 1:600 §B. Against this view is the late tractate Derek ʾereṣ Rabbah 11.13 (= A. Cohen 1965: 2.565), which cites Rabbi Jose as saying, “Whoever calculates the end has no portion in the future world.” This fits the later rabbis’ tendency to discourage apocalyptic speculation.

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

b. Babylonian Talmud

B. Bat. Baba ʾ Batra ʾ

[6] Dalman 1909: 143–44 notes this suggestion by A. Meyer, who appeals to Aramaic נְטִיר (nēṭîr, observation) and בְּנָטִיר (binṭîr, secretly) in Tg. Job 4:12.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[7] While Frg. Tg. Exod. 12:42 provides an example of the rabbis’ eschatological reading of this event, appeal is made to Aquila’s translation of this verse, which uses παρατήρησις (see also Mekilta de Rabbi Ishmael, tractate Pisḥa 14 on Exod. 12:42 [= Lauterbach 1933–35: 1.115–16]). The variety in the ancient tradition shows the age of this association.

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

2 Bar. 2 (Syriac) Baruch

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

8 In everyday Greek, παρατήρησις was used of the symptoms or signs of disease. To make such calculations, Judaism played off chronological imagery in Ps. 90:4 (seven thousand years); Jer. 25:11; 29:10 (seventy exile weeks); Dan. 9:2 (seventy year-weeks), although Ernst 1977: 486 notes that not all rabbinic Jews accepted such speculation (for which, see SB 4:977–1015 and n. 5 above).

9 Most, like Talbert 1982: 166, see Jesus attacking apocalyptic calendar-setting, but this needs careful definition in view of NT exhortations to watch carefully for the Son of Man’s return. Granted, a specific date cannot and should not be sought, but sensitivity to general eschatological sequence or to watchfulness is never condemned (Matt. 24–25 = Mark 13; Luke 21:5–36; Acts 3:11–26). The view is right to deny date-setting, but is wrong to see the only sign as “Spirit-empowered ministry.” New Testament eschatological hope is more specific and futurist than this denial suggests. In a more balanced approach, Beasley-Murray 1986: 100 notes that there are “signs” to see—if one has the eyes to see them. Meier 1994: 425 mentions texts where Jesus urges the community of faith to be prepared for a long ministry (Luke 21:7–24; 19:11; Acts 1:6–7; Mark 13:10). But disciples are still to keep looking for Jesus (Matt. 24–25 = Mark 13 = Luke 21:5–36).

NT New Testament

[10] The only other NT use of ἐντός is Matt. 23:26, where it refers to the inside of a cup.

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

[11] Creed 1930: 218–19; Sneed 1962; Dalman 1909: 145–47; Dodd 1961: 62–63 (who later switched to view 2). See Mattill 1979: 193 and Beasley-Murray 1986: 101 for details on the Gospel of Thomas, Origen, Chrysostom, Athanasius, Ambrose, Jerome, and Luther.

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

[12] So Leaney 1958: 230; Fitzmyer 1985: 1161–62; Mattill 1979: 201; Roberts 1948; Rüstow 1960; Cadbury 1950; Tertullian, Against Marcion 4.35.12. Beasley-Murray 1986: 102–3 takes this view, though he fails to evaluate this option when it is taken with a present force. Riesenfeld 1949 does not mention the evidence from Aquila noted in n. 13 below—a grave omission—in arguing that “in your midst” is not possible. Schlosser 1980: 1.202–4 argues that “in one’s power” is a possible first-century meaning, but he opts for “in the midst of.” His discussion is the latest careful examination of the evidence.

13 Jeremias 1980: 266 attributes this digression from Luke’s common expression to the presence of a traditional source. Also, Mattill 1979: 197 notes that, since the Greek versions variously translate Exod. 34:9 with ἐν μέσῳ (Theodotion, Symmachus) and ἐντός (Aquila), the phrases can be synonymous (Field 1875: 1.144). Beasley-Murray 1986: 101–2 adds a similar example from Exod. 17:7 (Field 1875: 1.111). Note also Symmachus in Lam. 1:3 and Ps. 87:6 LXX [88:6 Engl.] (Field 1875: 747, 239). Meier 1994: 479 notes that this translation appears in the literal Aquila and the more idiomatic Symmachus, making the meaning of ἐντός clear. These ancient texts show that “in the midst” is a well-attested sense for the term.

14 Mattill 1979: 198–201 lays out the reasoning and opts for a sense of “the kingdom will be among you and be in your power to grasp”—an example of the semantic error of totality transfer, since he gives two meanings to one term.

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

15 On the various expressions used to say that the kingdom is near or present, see K. Schmidt, TDNT 1:584. Fitzer, TDNT 9:89 n. 10, sees the expression here as synonymous to that of 10:9. Note especially how the preaching of the kingdom and the gospel are linked in 9:1–6, while the kingdom and Jesus' activity are associated in 11:20. Luke 7:18–23 (esp. 7:22); 7:28; 11:20; and 16:16 seem to place the initial phase of fulfillment in the present.

16 To speak of the kingdom's plan in two stages (arrival and consummation) means that in consummation God will complete promises made to Israel (Acts 3:18–21). Fulfillment of OT kingdom hope is now–not yet, so some applies to the current era and some to the future; Bock 1992a.

Old Testament

1 I confine my discussion here to 17:22–37. The larger issue of Jesus' apocalyptic discourse teaching is discussed in detail in the sources and historicity section of 21:5–38. For an overview of the larger discussion, Beasley-Murray's survey (1993) has a full discussion of points that I can only touch on here and in 21:5–38.

2 Luke 17:23 with Mark 13:21, and Luke 17:31 with Mark 13:15–16. In addition, Marshall 1978: 656 notes that Luke 17:25 is often tied to Marcan passion predictions and Luke 17:33 to Mark 8:35.

3 Since Q is a list of sayings, the settings would be the responsibility of the evangelists. Even if Q exists, I am less certain of this assumption about settings than most, since the roots of the tradition reach back to participants (Luke 1:2).

[4] This may also explain the thematic tie to 18:1–8, since the Lucan special material majors in parabolic material. This distinct discourse and this parable were in this source.

[5] I suggest that 12:35–48 may reflect this distinct tradition, which might also explain its placement. The same choices that apply in Luke 17 apply also in Luke 12 and 21. If this was really all one source, why divide material that already had thematic unity into three units?

[6] Manson 1949: 144 never really explains how the Lot material in Luke 17 entered Q or why Matthew left it out. To his credit, Wenham notes his three major problems (1984: 149, 157–65), but seems hard-pressed to defend the form of 17:25, 29–30, 31–32. His discussion posits many reasons for the presence of some items. The argument is plausible, even possible, but is it the most likely?

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

[7] Note the similar ἡμέραις ἐκείναις (those days) in Joel 3:2 LXX [2:29 Engl.] and Acts 2:18 to refer to the last days.

[8] Conzelmann 1960: 105 n. 3, 123 suggests that this speech is the "insider" explanation for Jesus' remarks. So also Zmijewski 1972: 417–19, although he acknowledges the possibility of a special Lucan source. Against a Lucan redaction are Kümmel 1957: 29; Colpe, TDNT 8:450–51; and Marshall 1978: 659, who notes that Luke does not create Son-of-Man sayings and that the text has a good claim to authenticity. In addition, the criterion of multiple attestation favors authenticity.

m. Mishnah

Ber. Berakot

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

9 Fitzmyer 1985: 1168–69 defends the ordinal μίαν as meaning “one,” not “first” (against Plummer 1896: 407) or “very much” (against Torrey 1933: 312; Manson 1949: 142) or “just one” (against Rigaux 1970: 410).

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

10 Fitzmyer 1985: 1169 notes how Jewish historian Josephus reacted to eschatological claims; Jewish War 6.5.4 §§310–15 (also Tacitus, Histories 5.13).

OT Old Testament

2 Bar. 2 (Syriac) Baruch

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

T. Levi Testament of Levi

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

11 Matt. 24:36, 44, 50; 25:13; Mark 13:24–32 (ties to these events Isa. 13:10 and 34:4, passages that allude to the day of the Lord); Luke 12:40, 46; Rom. 13:11; Rev. 3:3; 4:5; 8:5; 11:19; 16:18. Most of the passages in Revelation also refer to lightning and describe a variety of events associated with the return.

12 This is the only Lucan use of λάμπω in his Gospel (Matthew uses it three times); Matthew likes φαίνω (thirteen of seventeen Synoptic uses are his). This variation may simply reflect synonyms, like the similar Theodotion-LXX variation in Dan. 12:3.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

13 While Acts 14:22 uses δεῖ to say that the disciples' suffering is also inevitable (Fitzmyer 1985: 1170), it does not speak of Jesus' suffering. For the view that the disciples' suffering in Luke–Acts mirrors Jesus', see Moessner 1990.

14 The saying here is broader than the Marcan parallels on which it is supposed to be based. Q, which Manson thinks is the source of Luke 17:25, contains the idea of an inevitable period of suffering before the final vindication (Luke 11:47–51; 12:4–12, 49–53; 13:34–35). See excursus 10.

15 T. Naph. 3.4–5; 3 Macc. 2:4–5; Wis. 10:4–6; Philo, Life of Moses 2.10–12 §§52–65; Gen. Rab. 27 on 6:5–6; m. Sanh. 10.3; SB 1:574; Marshall 1978: 662; Lührmann 1969: 75–83. In the NT see 1 Pet. 3:20; 2 Pet. 2:5–7; at Qumran see 1QapGen 6.6.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

16 One could argue that Noah is taken, but Matthew's swept-away image must look at the judged, not Noah, since the flood did not touch the patriarch. The force of the two distinct images is the same, however, since the people in Matthew are taken away in judgment, while in Luke they are left to be judged.

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

1QapGen Genesis Apocryphon

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

17 The phrase πῦρ καὶ θεῖον (fire and sulfur) occurs elsewhere in the NT only in Rev. 9:17, 18; 14:10; 19:20; 20:10; 21:8; BAGD 353; BAA 718; Philo, Life of Moses 2.10 §56. It is apocalyptic-judgment language whose concepts reflect the apocalyptic-prophetic teaching of Jesus.

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

18 Fire alone is used of judgment in Jer. 4:4; 5:14; 43:12; Ezek. 21:31 [21:36 MT]; Amos 1:4, 7, 10, 12, 14; 2:2, 5; 2 Thess. 1:7–8; 2 Pet. 3:7; Jude 7; BAGD 730 §1b; BAA 1460 §1b.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

19 Κατὰ τὰ αὐτά (according to the same things) has the same force as καθώς; 6:23, 26; Geiger 1976: 91. Singular ἡμέρᾳ (day) matches 17:22 (but plural) and 17:24 and may be influenced by the comparison with the "day" of Lot. In all three cases, the reference is to the return and its accompanying judgment-vindication. See the additional note for the textual issue.

20 Some regard ἀποκαλύπτω as conceptually equal to Matthew's παρουσία (parousia). The noun ἀποκάλυψις (revelation) does have an eschatological force; 1 Cor. 1:7; 2 Thess. 1:7–8; 1 Pet. 1:7, 13; 4:13; Zmijewski 1972: 442 n. 50.

21 Marshall 1978: 664 and Plummer 1896: 409 deny the idea of escape, arguing that the point is a prohibition against coming down to collect possessions; but are the two points mutually exclusive? The comparison with Lot's wife in 17:32 suggests an escape. Nolland 1993a: 861 argues that part of the point is a willingness to flee and leave one's possessions behind, which reinforces earlier teaching about how riches can ensnare their possessor.

22 For δῶμα, see BAGD 210; BAA 423; Luke 5:19; 12:3; Josh. 2:6, 8; 2 Sam. 16:22; Isa. 22:1. The flat roof was probably used as living space (Acts 10:9; Nolland 1993a: 861).

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

23 On περιποιέω (to gain), see BAGD 650; BAA 1310; Gen. 12:12; Exod. 1:16; elsewhere in the NT only at Acts 20:28; 1 Tim. 3:13. On ζῳογονέω (to preserve alive), see BAGD 341; BAA 690; Exod. 1:17; Judg. 8:19; 1 Sam. 2:6; elsewhere in the NT only at Acts 7:19; 1 Tim. 6:13; Bultmann, TDNT 2:873–74.

24 Cf. εὑρίσκω (to find) in Matt. 10:39 and 16:25 and σῴζω (to save) in Luke 9:24 = Mark 8:35. Geiger 1972: 121 speaks of the influence of Ezek. 13:18–19 (which uses περιποιέω), and Zmijewski 1976: 479 n. 56 sees a connection to Exod. 1:17 (which uses ζῳογονέω). Neither LXX reference satisfies, however, since each has only one element of Luke 17:33, and one can hardly argue for a double LXX allusion. In addition, if the LXX alteration is based on an earlier, existing traditional saying, what does it add? Περιποιέω appears only three times in the NT (Acts 20:28; 1 Tim. 3:13) and the noun περιποίησις is never used in the Gospels (five times elsewhere). Since the conscious shift of terminology appears to have no point, the rare terminology is probably from a source.

[25] Marshall 1978: 666 speaks of the possibility of different recensions of Q. Manson 1949: 145 argues that the Lucan saying reflects Q and that Matthew moved it. But is this any better, given the double use of this saying in Matt. 10:39 and 16:25, with neither being in an eschatological context? Plummer 1896: 409 suggests that the idea was often repeated. If he is right, a special Lucan source is just as likely. The theme gives evidence of going back to Jesus through such a source.

[26] Fitzmyer 1985: 1172 doubts that the idea of an eschatological Passover existed this early in Judaism.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[27] The source question here is answered by how one sees sources before getting to this point in the text, though a case could be made that Matthew shortened his tradition.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

28 For description of the millstone, see the exegesis of 17:2 (cf. Exod. 11:5; Isa. 47:2; Zmijewski 1972: 496).

29 On ἀετός, see Lev. 11:13; Deut. 14:12; Job 39:27; Matt. 24:28; BAGD 19; BAA 36; Marshall 1978: 669. Ἀετός can refer to an eagle, but not here, since eagles do not seek out dead meat; Rev. 12:14; 4:7; 8:13; Arndt 1956: 376. Attempts to interpret ἀετός as eagle, recalling the Roman emblem that accompanied the invasion of Jerusalem, assume a post–a.d. 70 date for Luke, as well as suggest an image contextually distant from the metaphor here; but so Danker 1988: 294; Leaney 1958: 232; and Fitzmyer 1985: 1173 (with less certainty).

OT Old Testament

30 Σῶμα (normally “body”) means “corpse” in Luke 23:52, 55; 24:3, 23; Acts 9:40; BAGD 799 §1a; BAA 1593 §1a.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

LXX Septuagint

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

The delay of the return is mentioned in Luke 12:45–46; 2 Pet. 3:4–9; 1 Clem. 23.3; 24.1; 2 Clem. 11. Jews also had this problem in longing for Messiah's coming; Blomberg 1990: 272.

Tiede 1988: 304 adds three other themes: (1) being faithful in prayer (18:1), (2) knowing that the delay does not mean that God is indifferent (18:2–7), and (3) keeping the faith (18:8).

[3] Grundmann 1963: 345 sees a saying about persistence in prayer appended to a parable like 11:5–13; esp. B. Scott 1989: 177–78. The Jesus Seminar argues that the themes of prayer and the returning Son of Man are Lucan. But a connection to the parable sources shows that prayer has traditional roots and the concept of the "elect" is only in Luke here. It is not a Lucan expression.

[4] For a detailed argument against authenticity, see Linnemann 1966: 187 n. 14, who argues that the application in 18:8 is too stylistically distinct and that the term ἐκλεκτός (elect) 18:7 is not appropriate in the ministry of Jesus. Linnemann has since renounced this view.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[5] This is Luke's only use of πρὸς τό with a purpose infinitive in his Gospel; BDF §402.5; BDR §402.4.5; cf. Acts 3:19.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[6] Ἐγκακέω almost has the force "do not give up faith." The term can mean "to become weary" (2 Thess. 3:13; Gal. 6:9) or the more eschatological "to lose heart" (2 Cor. 4:1, 16; Eph. 3:13); BAGD 215; BAA 434; Grundmann, TDNT 3:486. Symmachus uses the verb in Gen. 27:46; Num. 21:5; Prov. 3:11; Isa. 7:16 (Delling 1962: 6 n. 23).

[7] This point makes it unlikely that the judge was a Gentile, but so Plummer 1896: 411 and C. A. Evans 1990: 269. On the historical background, see B. Scott 1989: 184, citing Chajes 1892, who notes that most cases were heard by one judge (though he uses late texts).

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

8 Josephus, Antiquities 10.5.2 §83 (of Jehoiakim); Dionysius of Halicarnassus, Roman Antiquities 10.10.7; Livy 22.3.4. Ἐντρέπω is used in Luke 20:13 = Matt. 21:37 = Mark 12:6 to describe the respect that the master's son should get; elsewhere in the NT at 1 Cor. 4:14; 2 Thess. 3:14; Titus 2:8; Heb. 12:9; BAGD 269 §2b; BAA 544 §2b. On not fearing God, see Deut. 25:18 (of the Amalekites).

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

OT Old Testament

9 Besides the texts noted in the exegesis of 18:2, see Deut. 27:19 (God curses those who withhold judgment from widows); Ruth 1:20–21; Job 32:9; Isa. 1:17, 23; 54:4; Jer. 7:6; 22:3; Lam. 1:1; Ezek. 22:7; Mal. 3:5; James 1:27; Luke 20:47.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

T. Levi Testament of Levi

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

10 In 1 Pet. 5:8 Satan is described as an ἀντίδικος in a context that clearly has adversarial, legal overtones. Elsewhere in the NT, ἀντίδικος is found only at Luke 12:58 and twice in Matt. 5:25.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

11 Another Lucan parable (11:8) with this construction and theme also uses διά γε (yet because) in the second portion of the statement; Creed 1930: 223.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

12 1 Cor. 9:27 uses ὑπωπιάζω positively to refer to spiritual discipline, but here the judge intends it negatively.

13 Marshall discusses the options for the syntax of εἰς τέλος, which can be translated “finally,” “completely,” or “unceasingly.” This term can describe either when the coming occurs or how it occurs. Does the woman finally come? Does she completely wear out the judge? Does she unceasingly come? The middle option is more likely.

14 Ἀκούσατε is an aorist imperative: “listen now” to what the judge says. Linnemann 1966: 121 n. a says that it is equivalent to “he who has ears, let him hear” in 8:8 and 14:35.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

15 Luke 18:3 shows how widows ought to be treated. The steward in 16:8 was called ἀδικία for acting in a way that undermined his master.

y. Jerusalem (Palestinian) Talmud

Ber. Berakot

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

16 Jeremias discusses the syntax of the questions by noting that the change of mood—from subjunctive to indicative—points to two questions, but one should be careful not to separate them too greatly, given the nature of the reply in 18:8.

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

T. Sol. Testament of Solomon

17 Delling 1962: 16 n. 68 cites numerous LXX uses of ἐκδικέω: Ps. 149:7 (of the punishment of the wicked); 1 Macc. 3:15; 7:9, 24, 38; Exod. 12:12 and Num. 33:4 (of what God did to the Egyptians in the plagues); Mic. 5:14 [5:15 Engl.] (of judgment on the nations); Ezek. 16:41 and 23:10 (of what the nations did to Israel).

18 Delling 1962: 15 gives Qumranian usage and OT background (n. 63) for ἐκλεκτός: 1 Chron. 16:13; Isa. 42:1; 43:20; 65:9; Ps. 105:6, 43 [104:6, 43 LXX]; Sir. 47:22. He also covers NT usage (n. 64).

OT Old Testament

[19] For βοάω (to cry out), see BAGD 144; BAA 288 §1d; Stauffer, TDNT 1:625–26; elsewhere in the NT at Matt. 3:3 = Mark 1:3 = Luke 3:4 = John 1:23; Mark 15:34 (= Matt. 27:46 [ἀναβοάω]); Luke 9:38; 18:7, 38; Acts 8:7; 17:6; 25:24; Gal. 4:27. In the LXX at Gen. 4:10; Judg. 10:10 (B); Num. 20:16 (ἀναβοάω). Rev. 6:9–11 is conceptually similar.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NT New Testament

[20] Cranfield 1963 has a variation of this view that sees concessive καί: “God will vindicate even though (καί) he suffers long with the wicked.”

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

[21] 1 Thess. 1:5–10 also seems to have this twofold sense: salvation and faith now are tied to what happens later. 1 Thess. 1:10 marks the faithful out as those who are spared this vengeance.

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

22 Cranfield 1963: 299 n. 1 and Linnemann 1966: 188–89 n. 16 object that the term cannot have this force and challenge the passages where it is said to have this meaning.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

23 For defense of this linkage, along with a defense of 18:8's original unity with 18:7 and 18:2–5, see Catchpole 1977.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

Fitzmyer 1985: 1185 discusses the relationship of this pericope to Paul's message, though with less emphasis on the unity of the perspectives. See also F. F. Bruce 1952: 66–69 and the exegesis of 18:14a.

Old Testament

Old Testament

[2] Πρός plus the accusative could mean that Jesus spoke “against” this group (BAGD 710 §III.4 and BAA 1422 §III.4), but normal Lucan usage calls for “to.” A pericope or a dialogue begins with πρός in 4:21, 43; 5:10; 6:3; 7:24; 9:3, 13, 14; 11:1; 12:1; 14:3; 15:3; 16:1; 17:1.

NT New Testament

m. Mishnah

1QS Manual of Discipline (Rule/Order of the Community)

1QH Thanksgiving Hymns/Psalms (Hôdāyôt)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ber. Berakot

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

b. Babylonian Talmud

Suk. Sukka

T. Tosepta

Ber. Berakot

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[3] Josephus, Jewish War 1.5.2 §110, says that the Pharisees were "known for surpassing the others in the observances of piety and exact interpretation of the laws." Tax collectors were discussed earlier in Luke 3:12; 5:27, 30. The construction ὁ εἷς … ὁ ἕτερος (the one … the other) occurred earlier in 7:41.

m. Mishnah

[4] So the aorist passive participle σταθείς (as he stood); BAGD 382 §II.1b; BAA 775 §II.1b. The circumstantial aorist passive participle of ἵστημι is found in the NT only in Luke's writings: Luke 18:40; 19:8; Acts 2:14; 5:20; 11:13; 17:22; 25:18; 27:21; Fitzmyer 1985: 1186. In the Jewish world, it was not unusual to stand and pray (1 Sam. 1:26; 1 Kings 8:14, 22; Plummer 1896: 416; SB 1:401–2; 2:240; Marshall 1978: 679).

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ber. Berakot

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[5] Εὐχαριστέω (to thank) is common, but not in the first person. The verb is used six times by Luke, including Luke 17:16; Acts 27:35; 28:15; also 1QH 2.20, 31; 3.19, 37; 4.5; 2 Macc. 1:11. Luke 10:21 is similar in tone, but decidedly different in content.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

T. Asher Testament of Asher

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

6 Containing five uses of the first person, this prayer is simple self-praise. This complaint about the Pharisees surfaces elsewhere in Luke 5:30–32; 15:2; 16:15; John 9:40–41.

7 B. Ber. 28b matches the Pharisee's prayer, while b. Ber. 17a is more gracious in valuing the contribution that each person makes when attention is directed to God. In b. Suk. 45b a man states that if only one hundred are to be saved, he and his son will be among them; but if only two are saved, they will be he and his son; Ellis 1974: 214. In y. Ber. 7d (4.2) (= Neusner et al. 1982–93: 1.168) a rabbi give thanks that he is in the synagogue and not in the theater or circus.

OT Old Testament

[8] Δὶς τοῦ σαββάτου (lit., twice per Sabbath) is a distributive genitive meaning “per week”; Mark 16:9: 1 Cor. 16:2; Plummer 1896: 417.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[9] On fasting (νηστεύω), see the exegesis of Luke 5:33; BAGD 538; BAA 1089–90; Lev. 16:29–31 and Num. 29:7 (the Day of Atonement); 2 Sam. 12:21–22 (for mourning); 1 Kings 21:27 (for penance); Neh. 1:4 (for prayer). B. Giṭ.. 56a and b. Taʿan. 12a give the Jewish custom. The cultural assumption is that the pious fast more often than once a year.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

OT Old Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[10] Πάντα (all) is an accusative of reference: “I gave a tenth with respect to all I get.”

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

11 On lifting the eyes in prayer, see Mark 6:41; 7:34; John 11:41; 17:1; Ps. 123:1; 1 Esdr. 4:58 (in 1 Enoch 13.5 evil angels are too ashamed to look up); Jeremias, TDNT 1:185–86; Michaelis, TDNT 5:377 n. 11. Lifting the hands is a symbol of supplication in the NT; 1 Tim. 2:8. Στῆθος (breast) stands for the person; BAGD 767 and BAA 1532 (“the seat of the inner life”); elsewhere in the NT only at Luke 23:48; John 13:25; 21:20; Rev. 15:6. Jeremias 1963a: 141 at n. 46 says that in Judaism the heart is seen as the seat of sin, but cites as evidence only the late Eccles. Rab. 7.2.5 on 7:2.

NRSV New Revised Standard Version

LXX Septuagint

OT Old Testament

12 BAGD 375; BAA 762; cf. Ps. 51:1, 3 [51:3, 5 MT]; 25:11; 34:6, 18 [34:7, 19 MT]; 78:38; 79:9; 2 Kings 5:18; 1QS 11.3–5, 10–12; 1QH 11.15–

22. Ἱλάσκομαι appears in the NT only here and in Heb. 2:17.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

13 Jeremias 1963a: 141 overstates the parallelism with Pauline usage, as do Fitzmyer 1985: 1185 and Arndt 1956: 380. Linnemann 1966: 62–63, 144–46 n. 11; Ernst 1977: 497–98; and Marshall 1978: 680–81 are clearer. Cf. Ps. 51:19 [51:21 MT]; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 12:7; 1Q28b [= 1QSb] 4.22.

14 So the comparative παρ’ (than); Klostermann 1929: 181; Schrenk, TDNT 2:215 n. 16. Cf. παρά in Ps. 44:8 [45:7 Engl.]; Luke 13:2; BDF §185.3; BDR §185.3 n. 5 and §246.5.

15 The saying in 18:14 virtually matches 14:11, the only difference being the καί-δέ variation in the last clause. Matt. 18:4 and 23:12 are similar. The remark recalls Ezek. 21:26 [21:31 MT].

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

[1] The Gospel of Thomas 22 expands on the theme here by including the Gnostic doctrine of the "primordial unit" (Fitzmyer 1985: 1192).

[2] Ernst 1977: 498 notes that other Lucan pericopes with ties to Mark 10–11 appear mostly outside of Luke 9:50–18:14. In this larger section, only Luke 16:18 has a potential parallel with Mark 10:11–12.

[3] There is no need to regard the story as a creation based on 2 Kings 4:27, but so Bultmann 1963: 32, who also cites a rabbinic story from the later b. Ketub. 63a, where disciples try to dissuade Akiva from seeing his mother. This approach is rightly rejected by Fitzmyer 1985: 1192 and Marshall 1978: 681–82.

[4] On the impersonal use of the third-person plural, see Fitzmyer 1985: 1193 and Zerwick 1963: §1. The imperfect in this context vividly portrays ongoing action by many: "They were bringing."

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

5 Ἐπιτιμάω here means to verbally censure; BAGD 303; BAA 614; also Luke 4:39; 8:24; 9:21, 42, 55; 17:3; 19:39; 23:40. Given Jesus' response, the effort to rebuke fails and the verb could be conative in force: "They tried to rebuke." Luke has an imperfect where Mark and Matthew have aorists.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

6 Καί (and) suggests that both commands are given to the disciples, not that the first is to the parents and the second to the disciples. Jesus removes the obstacles to the children's approach.

7 This pericope contains no allusion to infant baptism (Marshall 1978: 682; Schweizer 1984: 285; Tiede 1988: 309–10; and Fitzmyer 1985: 1193 correctly challenge Jeremias 1960: 54; Cullmann 1950: 76–78; and Grundmann 1963: 353), though by implication a child's spiritual responses should be encouraged and accepted. Jeremias notes the use of κωλύω in baptismal settings (Matt. 3:14; Acts 8:36; 10:47; 11:17), but in Luke 18, the point is blessing, not baptism (against the Jesus Seminar [Funk and Hoover 1993: 370], who import a baptismal sense here; see the discussion of sources and historicity above).

8 Lachs 1987: 328 argues that the alternation of βρέφος and παιδίον may have behind it a Semitic term that includes both age groups.

9 Matthew has the aorist active ἐλθεῖν (to come), while Luke and Mark have the present middle ἔρχεσθαι (to come). Perhaps Matthew intends the phrase to relate to both commands, as the use of καί could suggest, and so places it after the second command.

10 So δέχομαι (BAGD 177 §1, §3b; BAA 355 §3b) indicates receiving the word of God by Moses (Acts 7:38), the gospel (2 Cor. 11:4), financial gifts (Phil. 4:18), a guest in the home (Matt. 10:14 = Luke 9:5; 16:4), teaching (Luke 8:13; Acts 8:14; 11:1), the kingdom (Mark 10:15), and grace (2 Cor. 6:1). One can speak of receiving Jesus by appealing to John 1:12; the other biblical metaphor is to receive the kingdom. To accept the king is to enter the kingdom and its promises.

11 Luke 17:20–37 (esp. 17:20–21) has both senses. Note the ambiguity in 18:24–25. Luke 23:42 looks at immediate entry, though it is in the context of death as opposed to entering the kingdom in life. Acts 14:22 speaks of future entry. Another immediate instance is John 3:5. Fitzmyer notes that though the expression in 18:17 is rare, it fits with the invitation of 17:21.

OT Old Testament

Tannehill notes seven quest stories in Luke, this being the only one with a negative result: 5:17–26; 7:1–10; 7:36–50; 17:11–19; 19:1–10; 23:39–43 (I question the presence of a quest story in 7:36–50).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[2] Ἄρχων can apply to leaders of the spirit world (11:15), leaders of the synagogue (8:41), leaders of the Pharisees (14:1), or secular magistrates (12:58). In 8:41 the ruler is not in opposition to Jesus (but see 14:1; 23:13, 35; 24:20). Other negative uses of ἄρχων are found in the collective references to rulers in the speeches of Acts 3:17; 4:5, 8, 26; 13:27; 14:5. Acts 16:19 and 23:5 are more neutral.

[3] Tiede 1988: 310 notes the options: a synagogue official, leader of the Pharisees, magistrate, or official of the high priest. The last two options are more likely here. If he had been a religious leader, Luke likely would have been more specific.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

T. Sim. Testament of Simeon

T. Dan Testament of Dan

T. Asher Testament of Asher

b. Babylonian Talmud

Taʿan. Taʿanit

LXX Septuagint

1QS Manual of Discipline (Rule/Order of the Community)

CD Damascus Document

4Q181 (unnamed)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

4 Matthean prioritists hold that this detail indicates that Mark is following Luke, not the other way around.

OT Old Testament

5 1 Chron. 16:34; 2 Chron. 5:13; Ps. 34:8 [34:9 MT]; 106:1; 118:1, 29; 136:1; Nah. 1:7; m. ›Abot 6.3 (God and his teaching). Plummer 1896: 422 argues that a rabbi is never called good in Judaism, but this is wrong; see b. Ber. 5a; b. Ta‹an. 24b; Lachs 1987: 331 nn. 2–3.

NJPSV New Jewish Publication Society Version

MT Masoretic Text

6 Lev. 19:3 supplies a third OT reference to honoring mother and father. For prophetic reaction to violation of the commandments, see Hos. 4:2–6.

NT New Testament

7 The order of commandments in Matthew and Mark follows the MT and manuscript A of the LXX. Luke's order finds ancient precedent in Philo, On the Decalogue 12 §51; manuscript B of Deut. 5 LXX; as well as NT parallels in Rom. 13:9 and James 2:11; Nolland 1993a: 886.

LXX Septuagint

8 Normally meaning "to guard" (BAGD 868 §1f; BAA 1731 §1f), φυλάσσω here means to keep or obey the law; Lev. 20:22; 26:3; Ps. 119:5

[118:5 LXX]; Wis. 6:4; Sir. 21:11; 4 Macc. 5:29; T. Judah 26.1; T. Iss. 5.1; Luke 11:28.

[9] BAGD 536; BAA 1085; m. Nid. 5.6; m. Meg. 4.6; m. ʾAbot 5.21; Luke 2:42 (a conceptual example of Jesus at twelve); Acts 26:4; 1 Tim. 4:2; also Gen. 48:15; Num. 22:30; Isa. 47:15; 54:6; Jer. 3:25; Josephus, Jewish War 4.1.5 §33. See the exegesis of Luke 2:42.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ber. Berakot

b. Babylonian Talmud

Giṭ. Giṭṭin

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ketub. Ketubot

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

10 Bultmann 1963: 75, 81, 110–11, who on form-critical grounds distinguishes wisdom sayings in 18:24b, 25, 27 from a prophetic saying in 18:29–30 and regards eternal life, the kingdom, and salvation as loosely related concepts.

11 Except for Mark 10:23, χρῆμα (BAGD 885; BAA 1765) is used in the NT only in Luke–Acts: Acts 4:37 (of Barnabas's exemplary use of wealth); 8:18, 20; 24:26.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

12 The expression is used only here in the NT. Matt. 19:24 = Mark 10:25 has ῥαφίς, which always refers to a sewing needle; BAGD 734; BAA 1470 (in the NT only in these parallels). For other exaggerations by Jesus, see Luke 6:41; 17:2; Ernst 1977: 504.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

13 Later Judaism used a similar saying about an elephant passing through the eye of a needle to refer to an impossible dream or an illogical argument; Lachs 1987: 331–32; b. Ber. 55b; b. B. Mes\;. 38b; SB 1:828; Marshall 1978: 687.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

14 The kingdom is as comprehensive in terms of its temporal scope as "being saved" is. These ideas are also equated in 13:23, 29.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[15] Ἀκολουθέω is the standard verb for following in discipleship; BAGD 31 §3; BAA 60 §3; Luke 5:11 (of Peter, James, and John's leaving all); Mark 1:18; 8:34; 2:14 = Luke 5:27–28.

[16] Michel, TDNT 5:131, suggests that to abandon one's home means "to leave family," since all the other examples are personal. It may, however, reflect Lucan abbreviation; see the next paragraph.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[17] Other minor stylistic differences are (1) the saying is introduced by Matthew and Luke with εἶπεν (he said), while Mark has ἔφη (he said), and (2) Matthew starts the saying with πᾶς ὅστις ἀφῆκεν (all who leave) in contrast to Mark's and Luke's οὐδείς ἐστιν ὃς ἀφῆκεν (there is no one who has left).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

T. Zeb. Testament of Zebulun

18 Ἀπολαμβάνω (to receive back) occurs elsewhere in Luke at 6:34; 15:27; 16:25; 23:41; BAGD 94; BAA 189. The idea of “receiving back” is often associated with divine retribution or reward: 2 John 8; Rom. 1:27; Col. 3:24.

19 BAGD 394; BAA 802 §4; Rom. 3:26; 8:18; 11:5; Heb. 9:9; 1 Cor. 4:5. Καιρός is a Lucan term for the present era in Luke 21:24.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

Luke 5:35 alludes to Jesus’ death. The death of the Son of Man appears in three of the Lucan passion predictions (9:22; 9:44–45; 17:25; Danker 1988: 302). Three of Luke's passion predictions (9:22; 9:44–45; 18:31–34) have Marcan parallels and are grouped together because they are quite specific.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

2 The idea of fulfilling Scripture occurs throughout Luke's writings, frequently with τελέω (BAGD 811 §1, esp. §2; BAA 1617 §2; Luke 2:39; 12:50; 18:31; 22:37; Acts 13:29) or δεῖ (Luke 9:22; 17:25); also Luke 13:22, 32; 24:44–49; Acts 2:23. Delling, TDNT 8:60 n. 16, says that this emphasis is part of special Lucan material.

OT Old Testament

3 Tiede 1988: 315 mentions Isa. 50:6; 53; and Ps. 2 as key texts. On the uncertainty of Isa. 50:6, see the exegesis of Luke 18:33.

4 Luke often mentions written Scripture: Luke 4:17; 7:27; 10:26; 20:17; 21:22; 22:37; 24:44, 46; Acts 13:29; 24:14 (Schrenk, TDNT 1:748; Marshall 1978: 690).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

OT Old Testament

LXX Septuagint

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand

Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[5] On crucifixion and the activity associated with it, see Hengel 1977. The Roman practice of scourging (verberatio) preceded the execution of capital criminals, who were lashed until blood was drawn; Plautus, Bacchides 823; Suetonius, Claudius 34; and Suetonius, Domitian 11.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

6 Another stylistic difference may reflect Matthean–Lucan agreement but is tied to a textual issue in Mark: Matthew has τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ (on the third day) and Luke has τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ τρίτῃ (on the third day) where many key Marcan manuscripts read μετὰ τρεῖς ἡμέρας (after three days). It is possible, however, that all three accounts agree, since the textual evidence for μετὰ τρεῖς ἡμέρας in Mark is largely Alexandrian plus D (the other reading in Mark is τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ; A, W, Θ, family 1, family 13, Byz). But μετὰ τρεῖς ἡμέρας is more difficult, which speaks in its favor; Marshall 1978: 690. The variant makes the reference slightly clearer, though for Mark "after three days" is to be read inclusively.

[7] Luke 8:10, 16–17 promises this unveiling to the disciples; Danker 1988: 302. John 2:22 and 12:16 repeat the picture of the disciples' incomprehension, while Luke 2:50 says a similar thing about Jesus' parents.

[8] The more intensive ἀποκρύπτω (to conceal) is used in contrast to unveiling (ἀποκαλύπτω) revelation and the mystery of God's plan (Luke 10:21; 1 Cor. 2:7; Eph. 3:9; Col. 1:26). Luke uses the synonymous παρακαλύπτω (to conceal) in Luke 9:45 and κρύπτω (to hide) in 19:42 (Marshall 1978: 691).

[1] At the start of his account, however, Mark notes both the entry into and the exit from Jericho, and so Luke may merely telescope the reference.

[2] This account again reflects a Mark–Luke alliance, as has been common in the last part of the journey narrative, another factor that makes it difficult to see Matthew's account as first chronologically. This pattern will continue in the latter events of the Jerusalem section.

[3] The case for this approach is enhanced syntactically if ἐγγίζω can mean "to be in the vicinity of" rather than "to draw near," as Porter 1992 argues.

[4] Matt. 20:29 = Mark 10:46; Heb. 11:30; BAGD 372; BAA 756. The new Jericho was given to Cleopatra by Mark Antony and later came under Herod the Great's authority; Josephus, Jewish War 4.8.3 §459, §474; Antiquities 15.4.2–4 §§96–107.

5 Ἐγγίζω (to come near) is often used to denote approach, especially in conjunction with the preposition εἰς (to); Luke 19:29 = Matt. 21:1 = Mark 11:1; Luke 24:28; Tob. 11:1; Plummer 1896: 430. See the introduction to this unit for the possibility that this remark is a condensation of Mark 10:46 and for the linkage of Luke 18:35–43 and 19:1–10.

6 The word for begging, ἐπαιτέω, is rare in the NT: elsewhere only Luke 16:3 and Mark 10:46 variant; also Ps. 109:10 [108:10 LXX]; Sir. 40:28; BAGD 282; BAA 571. Mark 10:46 uses προσαίτης (beggar), which appears elsewhere only in John 9:8; BAGD 711; BAA 1425.

7 Creed 1930: 229 says that the use of the optative in an indirect question and the use of πυνθάνομαι (to inquire) are Lucan (only three NT uses of πυνθάνομαι are non-Lucan: Luke 15:26; Acts 4:7; 10:18, 29; 21:33; 23:19, 20, 34; Matt. 2:4; John 4:52; 13:24); BAGD 729; BAA 1459.

8 Παρέρχομαι usually has a figurative sense of passing by in the sense of neglecting or passing from the scene (11:42; 15:29; 16:17; 21:33). Here it means to physically pass by (also Matt. 8:28; Mark 6:48); BAGD 625; BAA 1264; also Exod. 12:23. The parallel Matt. 20:30 has παράγει (is passing by).

9 Luke has almost two-thirds of the NT uses of ἀπαγγέλλω: eleven times in his Gospel (7:18, 22; 8:20, 34, 36, 47; 9:36; 13:1; 14:21; 18:37; 24:9), fifteen times in Acts, and nineteen times in the rest of the NT; BAGD 79; BAA 157. On the grammar, see Zerwick 1963: §1.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDB A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament, by F. Brown, S. R. Driver, and C. A. Briggs (Oxford: Clarendon, 1907)

BDB A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament, by F. Brown, S. R. Driver, and C. A. Briggs (Oxford: Clarendon, 1907)

10 Βοάω is used elsewhere in the Synoptics at Matt. 3:3 = Mark 1:3 = Luke 3:4 (of John the Baptist); 9:38; 18:7; Mark 15:34; BAGD 144; BAA 287 §1b.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

4Q174 Florilegium (4QFlor)

4QPBless Patriarchal Blessings (formerly 4QpGen 49)

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

NT New Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

11 Josephus, Antiquities 8.2.5 §§42–49, mentions the healing skill of Solomon, thus providing a base for this description of David's son. This view is contrary to Nolland 1993b: 900, who argues against a Jewish expectation of a Davidic healer. His point is correct, but these traditions raise the question of what connections Jesus' acts of healing might surface. With all the eschatological ferment in Palestine in this period, why deny the possibility of such reflection on such events? Meier 1994: 689 is certainly correct to see the connection as not surprising in this setting.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

12 Σιωπάω, a favorite term for Mark (3:4; 4:39; 9:34; 10:48; 14:61), occurs elsewhere in the NT only at Matt. 20:31; 26:63; Luke 1:20; Acts 18:9; BAGD 752; BAA 1504. See the additional note for a textual issue that influences this point.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

13 Κελεύω (to order) is frequent in Acts (e.g., 4:15; 8:38; 12:19; 21:34; 22:24, 30; 23:3, 10, 35; 25:6, 17, 21, 23; 27:43), though this is its only use in Luke. Matthew uses it seven times; BAGD 427; BAA 869.

14 Matthew uses κύριε, while Mark uses the Semitic ῥαββουνί (rabbi). Luke never uses ῥαββουνί (only Mark 10:51 and John 20:16) or the related ῥαββί (fifteen times in Matthew, Mark, and John); BAGD 733; BAA 1467.

15 Some translations treat ἵνα as an imperative of request: "Please heal me."

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

16 Matthew has εὐθέως, which is used once in Mark (7:35) but thirteen times in Matthew, six times in Luke, and nine times in Acts. Mark has εὐθύς, which he uses forty-one times, while Matthew uses it five times and Luke twice (Luke 6:49; Acts 10:16). Luke has παραχρῆμα, a term never used by Mark, only twice by Matthew (Matt. 21:19, 20), but ten times in Luke's Gospel (e.g., 5:25; 8:44, 55; 22:60) and six times in Acts (BAGD 623; BAA 1260). The Gospels often note how quickly people are healed by Jesus.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

Tannehill 1986: 122 calls this account a “quest story,” but this label is not precise. Zacchaeus just wanted to see Jesus, he was not seeking something from him. Tannehill recognizes this and therefore speaks of Jesus going beyond Zacchaeus’s expectations. The story really shows Jesus’ initiative to seek and save the lost (19:10). If there is a quest, it is Jesus’ quest for the lost.

Every Lucan mention of tax collectors portrays them favorably: 3:12; 5:27; 7:29; 15:1; 18:10.

Masoretic Text

[3] Bultmann 1963: 33–34 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1219 take 19:8 as a Lucan addition, breaking the flow of the story. Marshall 1978: 695 agrees with Bultmann that 19:10 may be a later comment, but Fitzmyer sees it as part of the account. Schweizer 1984: 290 regards 19:8 as a non-Lucan addition to the story, while Luke is responsible for 19:10. Those who see Luke adding 19:10 often suggest that it is his version of the famous ransom saying of Mark 10:45.

[4] Διέρχομαι is common in Luke's writings: Luke 2:15, 35; 4:30; 5:15; 8:22; 9:6; 11:24; 17:11; 19:4; Acts 12:10; 13:6; 14:24; plus eighteen more times in Acts; BAGD 194; BAA 391; Fitzmyer 1985: 1223–24; Plummer 1896: 432.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

5 The first obstacle (the crowd) is indicated by ἀπό (BAGD 87 §V.1; BAA 175 §V.1; also Luke 21:26; 22:45; 24:41; Acts 11:19; 12:14; 22:11; John 21:6; Heb. 5:7) and the second obstacle (Zacchaeus's size) by ὅτι. While ἡλικία (BAGD 345 §2; BAA 700 §2) can refer to age, here it refers to Zacchaeus's height (as in Luke 2:52; see the exegesis of 12:25). The crowd produced a barrier of a different kind in 18:39.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

6 Fitzmyer 1985: 1224 sees this as the wrong question to ask, since the text does not address the issue. Klostermann 1929: 185 simply says that supernatural knowledge is not expressed by Luke. Luce 1933: 292 takes a rationalistic approach: Jesus inquired about his name, but Luke portrays his knowledge as supernatural. Nolland 1993b: 905 speaks of Jesus' "uncanny knowledge."

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[7] The spiritual parallel that someone who responds to Jesus gets more than imagined is not, of course, explicitly made here (Col. 1:26–28).

NT New Testament

NRSV New Revised Standard Version

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ketub. Ketubot

MT Masoretic Text

LXX Septuagint

m. Mishnah

Ketub. Ketubot

Mur scrolls from Murabba‘at

DJD Discoveries in the Judaean Desert of Jordan (Oxford: Clarendon, 1955–)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[8] On the debate about 19:8, see Mitchell 1990, who argues for the view that Zacchaeus is defending his past behavior. On the other side, Hamm 1981 makes the case for repentance and conversion.

m. Mishnah

Ned. Nedarim

b. Babylonian Talmud

B. Qam. Baba‹ Qamma‹

m. Mishnah

Ṭohar. Ṭoharot

m. Mishnah

B. Qam. Baba Qamma

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

9 This Jewish connection reflects the presence of the tradition (so Leaney 1958: 241–42, against Marshall 1978: 698, who sees a Lucan or edited comment).

m. Mishnah

10 In Rom. 3:21–31, Paul argues the same point, going the opposite direction: because all are sinners, all must come to God for his mercy.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

1 Many of the expressions in the following list exhibit slight differences in vocabulary, word order, or position between Matthew and Luke. See the exegesis for details.

2 Fitzmyer wrongly says that Manson 1949: 313 agrees with this position. Manson does hold that Luke's traditional source is responsible for the addition.

3 This view goes back to D. F. Strauss (1972: 352–53 [orignally 1840]), as Plummer 1896: 437 notes. Ellis 1974: 221–22 holds out the possibility of two parables. Marshall 1978: 702 holds that this text supports his two-versions-of-Q theory.

4 F. E. D. Schleiermacher also held this view. On the history of interpretation, see Thiessen 1934; Weinert 1977: 505; and Zerwick 1959.

5 Even though I hold that this parable is distinct from Matt. 25, comparisons to it will be made throughout the exegesis because the two accounts are conceptually close.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

[6] Jeremias 1963a: 99 n. 40 notes eight points of Lucan style: (1) ἀκουόντων δὲ αὐτῶν ταῦτα (cf. Luke 20:45); (2) προστίθημι (Luke seven times, Acts six times, elsewhere in the NT five times); (3) εἶπεν παραβολήν (Luke 6:39; 12:16; 15:3; 18:9; 19:11; 20:19; 21:29); (4) διὰ τό plus the infinitive (Matthew two times, Mark three times, John once, Luke and Acts seven times each); (5) εἶναι after a preposition and article (Matthew and Mark never, Luke seven times, Acts three times); (6) Ἰερουσαλήμ (Luke–Acts sixty-four times, Matthew twice, Mark never); (7) παραχρῆμα (sixteen times in Luke–Acts, elsewhere only Matt. 21:19–20); and (8) ἀναφαίνω (only here and Acts 21:3). Of these points, the middle six are significant, the other two are less clear since they occur too rarely to establish stylistic tendencies.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[7] Twenty-seven times in Luke 9:51–19:44 (e.g., 9:57; 10:25, 30; 14:2, 16; 15:11; 16:1, 19), twelve times in the rest of Luke's Gospel and twenty-eight times in Acts.

[8] Luke records activities in Jesus' ministry that show the presence of the kingdom, but the Spirit's arrival—the decisive sign of its inauguration—comes after the resurrection: Luke 24:49 with Acts 2:30–36. John the Baptist treats Spirit baptism as the mark of Messiah's presence; see Luke 3:15–17 with 24:49; Acts 1:5–8; 11:15–18; 13:23–25.

[9] Manson also notes a wordplay with Aramaic אָזַל (ʾāzal), which can mean both "going away" and "departing life."

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

m. Mishnah

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

10 BAGD 524 puts the value of one mina at eighteen to twenty dollars, while Fitzmyer 1985: 1235 estimates twenty-five dollars. Since the value of ancient currency constantly changes in relation to modern monetary units, it is clearer to compute the value according to daily wages. The figure of four months is calculated on the basis of a six-day workweek (the NIV's marginal note that "a mina was about three months' wages" probably includes the Sabbath in its calculation).

LXX Septuagint

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

11 Οὗτος is derogatory in 18:11 and throughout the Lucan passion narrative: 23:4, 14, 22, 35 (except for 23:41).

12 The aorist may be ingressive ("we do not want him to be enthroned to rule over us"; Arndt 1956: 392), though a summary aorist is also possible.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LXX Septuagint

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

m. Mishnah

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

13 A present imperative (γίνου) is again used in the command to give the servant authority over cities. The adverb ἐπάνω is here used as a preposition meaning “over”; BAGD 283 §2b; BAA 573 §2b; elsewhere in Luke at 4:39; 10:19; 11:44; 19:17 but not in Acts; fourteen times elsewhere in the NT.

14 Luke 19:25 shows that the other servants are still around and have not yet received their evaluation. On the textual problem with the article, see the additional note.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

b. Babylonian Talmud

B. Meṣ. Baba‹ Meṣi‹a›

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ketub. Ketubot

m. Mishnah

B. Meṣ. Baba‹ Meṣi‹a›

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

15 On the difference between burying and wrapping, see Jeremias 1963a: 61 n. 51. Fitzmyer 1985: 1236 is skeptical of what value this difference has for the meaning of this parable, but gives no reason for his doubt (perhaps the late date of the talmudic material?). Either way, the detail reflects a failure to respond to the king.

16 Αὐστηρός (severe, strict, exacting) is used in the NT only in this pericope (twice); also 2 Macc. 14:30. In P. Tebt. vol. 2 #315 line 19, the term is used of a demanding financial inspector; MM 93; Fitzmyer 1985: 1237.

17 This view of the king's sternness is conceptually like Josephus's description of a law that punishes slaves more harshly; Against Apion 2.30 §216; C. Taylor 1901; Plato, Laws 913c (11); Brightman 1927–28; Philo, Hypothetica 7.6; Fitzmyer 1985: 1237.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

18 The verse is loaded with business terms: ἀργύριον (money; BAGD 104 §2b; BAA 211 §2b; elsewhere in the NT at Matt. 25:18, 27; 26:15 = Mark 14:11 = Luke 22:5; Matt. 27:3, 5, 6, 9; 28:12, 15; Luke 9:3; 19:15; Acts 3:6; 7:16; 8:20; 19:19; 20:33; 1 Pet. 1:18), τράπεζα (bank [lit., table]; BAGD 824; BAA 1643 §4; MM 639–40; Goppelt, TDNT 8:211 §A3; fifteen times in the NT, e.g., Matt. 21:12 = Mark 11:15 = John 2:15; cf. Josephus, Antiquities 12.2.3 §28; the term looks to the financial table where deals are done), τόκος (interest; BAGD 821; BAA 1637; elsewhere in the NT only at Matt. 25:27; cf. Exod. 22:25 [22:24 LXX]; Lev. 25:36–37; Deut. 23:19 [23:20 LXX]), and πράσσω (to collect; BAGD 698 §1b; BAA 1400 §1b; earlier in Luke at 3:13).

19 This suggestion is expressed in a contrary-to-fact condition since the interest was not in fact earned: ἄν … ἔπραξα (I would have collected, but did not); BDF §360.2; BDR §360.2.3.

20 Marshall 1978: 708 sees this verse as proof of the secondary character of the earlier references to cities (19:17, 19), since cities are not mentioned here; but this is merely literary condensing.

21 Jeremias 1963a: 62 holds that Jesus' audience interrupted him; so also Plummer 1896: 442, who argues that the crowd thinks Jesus is spoiling the parable; so also Nolland 1993b: 916–17. Klostermann 1929: 189; Marshall 1978: 708; and Danker 1988: 309 hold that the interruption comes from attendants in the parable. If 19:26–27 maintains the parabolic perspective, and 19:27 looks as if it does, then those who react here come from within the parable and comment as a crowd to the king. Of course, since the king represents Jesus, there is no real difference in sense in the choice. If Jesus speaks, he simply gives the parable's lesson.

22 B. Scott 1989: 232–35 (interacting with McGaughy 1975) appears to see a contrast between Jews and Pharisees, who "freeze" under fear of God by too narrowly preserving the law. There are several problems with this interpretation: (1) it reads the parable too existentially, (2) law is nowhere found in the context, and (3) the leadership is in view in 19:27.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

23 Not accepting that the parable deals with final judgment, Fitzmyer 1985: 1238 and Grundmann 1963: 365 argue that it refers instead to Jerusalem's destruction. This contradicts 19:11, which states that the parable deals explicitly with the consummated kingdom's coming and judgment at that time. Nonetheless, the observation is helpful, because Jerusalem's judgment (19:41–44; 21:5–38) pictures a greater judgment to come. Though not in this parable, that judgment pictures for Luke what the final judgment is like.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

24 Two other minor variants (δεδώκει–ἔδωκεν and γνοῖ–γνῷ) follow a similar pattern in terms of external evidence: the first of each pair is read by UBS–NA, the second is supported by Byz, A, W, Γ, Δ, Θ. On γνοῖ–γνῷ, see BDF §95.2; Mark 5:43; 9:30; BAGD 160; BAA 322.

Old Testament

Old Testament

Talbert 1982: 182 is skeptical that Luke sees a future for Israel, but Luke's terminology about "the times of the Gentiles" and OT fulfillment suggest otherwise, especially given the continued discussion of restoration of the kingdom to Israel in Acts 1:6 and Peter's remarks in Acts 3:20–21.

[2] Catchpole 1984 argues against historicity on form-critical grounds. For a response, see Witherington 1990: 104–7 and Nolland 1993b: 922–23. Holding to historicity, Kinman 1993 argues for a contrast between this event and Greco-Roman entries of dignitaries. Kinman also argues that Luke tries to show Jesus as a “king like Solomon” who is not a political threat and thus seeks to blunt the charge that Christians are a political threat to Rome. As such, Luke declares the significance to the event by how he tells the whole story of Jesus.

m. Mishnah

Suk. Sukka

[3] Most of the passages from the Talmud and Genesis Rabbah listed in SB 1:842–44 are late (from the fourth century a.d. at the earliest). No messianic use of Zech. 9:9 is found in the Pseudepigrapha.

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

[4] For defense of the symbolism of Ps. 118 and the role of Zech. 9:9, see Bock 1987: 122–24, 326–28.

[5] Despite the current consensus, the case for a.d. 33 is strong (Reicke 1968: 183–84). For the connection to other chronological issues in Jesus’ life, see excursus 3.

[6] The introduction to the anointing in Matt. 26:6 = Mark 14:3 simply says that it took place while Jesus was in Bethany. Luke has no anointing account in his passion narrative.

OT Old Testament

1QpHab Pesher on Habakkuk

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

LXX Septuagint

OT Old Testament

[7] Nolland 1993b: 925 rejects the influence of this custom, preferring to read the authority as a uniquely christological portrayal versus a cultural one. Are such issues either/or choices?

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[8] Matthew emphasizes the fulfillment of Zech. 9:9. Cf. the similar phrase in Luke 23:53 about the tomb “in which no one had yet been laid.”

Fitzmyer 1985: 1248–49 denies any allusion to the “messianically associated” Gen. 49:11 (see also the exegesis of Luke 19:31).

[9] Mark has οὔπω (never), while Luke has οὐδεὶς πώποτε (no one ever), a NT term limited to Luke’s use here and John 1:18; 5:37; 6:35; 8:33; 1 John 4:12; BAGD 732; BAA 1464.

[10] Luke uses ἄγω (to bring) thirteen times (Luke 4:1, 9, 29, 40; 10:34; 18:40; 19:27, 30, 35; 22:54; 23:1, 32; 24:21), while Mark uses it only three times (Mark 1:38; 13:11; 14:42) and Matthew four times (Matt. 10:18; 21:2, 7; 26:46). Mark uses φέρω (to bring along) fifteen times compared to Matthew’s and Luke’s four times each. This difference is one of Marcan style. Fitzmyer 1985: 1249 argues that Matthew and Luke chose the more precise verb. Luke’s reading leaves a chiasmus in the verse: “finding the bound donkey … loosing it and bring it” (Nolland 1993b: 924).

[11] The accent is the only distinguishing mark between τί (why?) and τι (anything); BAGD 819 §3; BAA 1633 §3.

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

[12] Ἐπιρίπτω appears in the NT only here and at 1 Pet. 5:7; BAGD 298; BAA 603. In the LXX it is used of Elijah throwing his cloak over Elisha (1 Kings 19:19) and of Joab’s henchman covering Amasa’s corpse with a garment (2 Sam. 20:12). The declaration of Jehu as king (2 Kings 9:13) provides verbal contact only with ἱμάτιον (garment).

[13] On the unusual and emphatic placement of the attributive genitive αὐτῶν (their), see Plummer 1896: 447 and BDR §271.1c n. 5.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

14 Danker 1988: 312 suggests an additional tie to Isa. 1:3 where, ironically, the ox knows its master but Israel does not. Such an allusion is probably too subtle.

15 That Luke is the only Synoptist to note this praise leads Marshall 1978: 714 to raise the possibility that Luke uses another source because of the unusual combinations of ἐγγίζω with πρός (to draw near to) and πρός with the dative. The latter construction occurs only here in Luke, six times elsewhere in the NT (Mark 5:11; John 18:16; 20:11, 12 [twice]; Rev. 1:13; BDR §240.2), and 104 times in the LXX.

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

16 In Gen. 4:10 Abel's spilled blood cries out, and esp. in Hab. 2:11 Jerusalem's stones cry out against Israel's injustice and sin. Marshall 1978: 716 notes the possibility that creation will speak out against the sin of the Pharisees (Jeremias, TDNT 4:270), an option that is less satisfying contextually than the standard OT use of the image; so correctly SB 2:253, which notes the use of this figure in Judaism: Tg. Hab. 2:11; Midr. Ps. 73.4 on 73:10 (= Braude 1959: 2.4).

MT Masoretic Text

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

MT Masoretic Text

17 On εἰ (if) with the aorist, see BDF §454.4; BDR §360.5. On aposiopesis, the breaking off of the remark because of emotion, see BDF §482; Luke 22:42; John 6:62; 12:27; Plummer 1896: 450.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

LXX Septuagint

18 The first three of these terms are NT hapax legomena, but they occur frequently in the LXX: παρεμβάλλω (BAGD 625; BAA 1263; Acts 21:34 [a related noun referring to a fortified military camp or barracks]), χάραξ (BAGD 876; BAA 1749 §2; Isa. 29:3; 37:33; Jer. 6:6; Ezek. 4:2; 26:8), περικυκλόω (BAGD 648; BAA 1307; Josh. 6:13; 2 Kings 6:14; Ps. 16:11 LXX [17:11 Engl.]; Jer. 38:39 LXX [31:39 Engl.]), and συνέχω (BAGD 789 §3; BAA 1573 §3; 2 Macc 9:2; Jer. 52:5 [a related noun]).

OT Old Testament

1QpHab Pesher on Habakkuk

19 Dodd 1947: 49 argues that all the language is from the OT, as does Gaston 1970: 359, citing a catena of verses: Jer. 8:18; 9:1; 6:14, 6, 15, 8. Manson 1949: 319–20 cites Jer. 8:18–22, although the whole of Jer. 8:13–22, along with Jer. 6:6–21 and Isa. 29:1–4, might also be relevant. See also Plummer 1896: 451–52. Tiede 1980: 68–86 challenges Gaston's view that Luke has four stages here: salvation to part of Israel, fulfillment of threat, salvation to Gentiles, and the end. He sees a theodicy in Luke–Acts, where Luke explains how Jerusalem crumbled and yet Luke argues that God still will be faithful by restoring Israel. This is quite possible, though Tiede argues for a post–a.d. 70 date for the book, which is less likely.

20 Giblin 1985: 56 sees Ps. 137:9; Ezek. 4:1–2; and Isa. 3:26 as relevant. He notes that Jerusalem falls as any worldly city would because they missed the "moment of truth." See also Flückiger 1972: 387–88. Nolland 1993b: 931–32 notes the numerous examples of non-Lucan language in Luke 19:43–44.

OT Old Testament

21 Danker 1988: 314 notes a "prophecy" by Demetrius of Phalerum, who predicted the Macedonian victory with similar political sensitivity (Polybius 29.21).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

22 The place to which the bodies are thrown is understood in this elliptical verb: “to the ground as dead bodies”; BDR §478.2.

23 Manson 1949: 320–21 defends the repetitive sense, appealing to poetic parallelism to refute the charge of tautology. However, the pattern of 19:43–44, where each element is distinct, is too clear to accept the objection or Manson’s rendering.

24 On ἀφίημι (to leave), see BAGD 126 §3a; BAA 253 §3a; Matt. 24:2 = Mark 13:2 = Luke 21:6 (of the temple); cf. 2 Sam. 17:13; Dan. 4:26 LXX [not in MT]; Mic. 3:12. Ἀφίημι is also used in Luke 13:35, a key parallel.

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

25 Another failure to read the times is found in 12:54–56. Danker 1988: 315 cites 14:15–24 with the note "God had kept his appointment with the city, but Jerusalem's power structure did not show up at the banquet."

26 As in Gen. 50:24–25; Exod. 3:7, 16; Job 10:12; 29:4; Wis. 2:20; 3:13; 1 Pet. 2:12; and 1 Clem. 50.3; correctly Marshall 1978: 719. Fitzmyer 1985: 1259 does not specify which view he holds.

27 Tiede 1980: 82 mentions Jer. 22:8 and 23:38. This is a national indictment like that of the exile. As Tiede says (p. 68), "Love for Israel, conflicting with wrath, characterizes this oracle of judgment." Weatherly 1994 attempts to limit the responsibility for Jesus' death to Jerusalem and its leaders. He is right that Luke presents a "divided nation" and limits responsibility for the death here, but these indictments become national as a result. Covenant judgment tends to be national.

Moessner 1989: 127, 131, 176, 211 details this view. J. A. Sanders 1974 and C. A. Evans 1990: 166–69 tie the portrait to the themes of election and the true people of God. C. F. Evans 1955 is responsible for raising the connection to Deuteronomy and argues for it throughout his commentary (1990: 34–37, 435).

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

LXX Septuagint

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York:

United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

Locations implied in the text are in square brackets

Locations implied in the text are in square brackets
Locations implied in the text are in square brackets
Locations implied in the text are in square brackets
Locations implied in the text are in square brackets
Locations implied in the text are in square brackets
Locations implied in the text are in square brackets
Locations implied in the text are in square brackets
Locations implied in the text are in square brackets

Mishnah

Šeqalim

Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

Eppstein 1964: 55–56 holds that some aspects of this trade were recent and controversial (but I disagree with his dating the temple cleansing to a.d. 30).

Old Testament

Sanders correctly calls this action blasphemous from a Jewish point of view. He is right not to decry the presence of money changers per se, since sacrifices and payment of the temple tax were required at the temple (i.e., sacrifices had to be unblemished, and a long trip might injure the sacrificial animal). Sanders, however, too quickly dismisses Jesus' Son-of-Man reply at his trial (22:69), for this remark was also blasphemous to Jews (Sanders is guilty of either/or thinking, when both/and applies). Luke ignores the temple issue at the trial and focuses on Jesus' person. Rejecting that Jesus purifies the temple, E. Sanders 1985: 61–71 holds that Jesus simply pictures its approaching destruction. But to put forth this view, Sanders must deny the authenticity of the OT sayings and argue that the "house of prayer for Gentiles" is impossible for this early historical context. Isaiah 56:6 refers, however, to worshiping foreigners who are also the subjects in 56:7. The saying is authentic, looking to the day when all nations will gather to worship God in Jerusalem, a key OT prophetic hope (Isa. 2:2–4; 19:23–25).

For other acts of offense against the temple, see m. Sanh. 9.6. On the association of the eschaton, a redeeming figure, and the final renewed temple in Judaism, see Josephus, Antiquities 18.4.1 §§85–87; Jewish War 6.5.2 §§283–85 (1 Enoch 90.28–40 is often cited in this regard, but this passage refers to Yahweh's activity, not Messiah's; Juel 1977: 199–200). E. Sanders 1985: 77–90 traces the new-temple hope in Judaism: Tob. 14:5; 2 Macc. 2:7; 1 Enoch 24–25; 89–90; Jub. 1.15–17; 1QM 2.5–6; 7.10; 4QsPs^{a} [= 4QpPs 37]; 11QTemple^{a} 29.8–10. This hope was widespread, though it was held with a variety of detail.

Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

For the options on how to take this act in light of the Synoptics and John's Gospel, see Witherington 1990: 113–15, who appeals to John 2:16;

Zech. 14:21; and Neh. 13:4–9, 12–13 to see both a prophetic and messianic (but not revolutionary) cleansing. He argues that it was the act of an individual and was seen as symbolic of a need for national repentance, not the rejection of the nation. Witherington also argues that Jesus does not have a Davidic expectation (like that expressed in Ps. Sol. 17). True, Jesus does not yet function like the warrior in the Psalms of Solomon, but he will, as his remarks at his trial show. This is one reason why, when some speak of the Christ, Jesus replies in terms of the judging Son of Man, just as he did at his trial. For the cleansing as messianic act, see Hamilton 1964.

OT Old Testament

5 The temple area was large (over 100 yards by 150 yards), so if Jesus acted quickly, there may have been little time to react. In addition, he may have intended only a prophetic sign, not a comprehensive cleansing. A brief symbolic action may have sufficed to express his intent, as even E. Sanders 1985: 70 acknowledges. Witherington 1990: 109–10 notes six historical questions that influence this passage and argue for its plausibility. One of the most basic is, Why invent such an event? Nolland 1993b: 935–36 notes nine views on this issue and opts for a modest, symbolic action against long-standing temple practice (pace Eppstein 1964) that thwarted true worship and called for purification, if not temple replacement.

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

MT Masoretic Text

[6] For a methodological assessment of this debate, see R. Miller 1991. Sanders is unaware of Eppstein's 1964 article (see n. 1). Some in Judaism saw the temple as corrupt; 1 Enoch 89.73–90.29; 4Q174 [= 4QFlor] 1.1–12. Meier 1994: 886 rightly calls the cleansing "prophetic action," but opts for a rejection of the temple rather than a cleansing. This ignores the connection to Isa. 56.

m. Mishnah

Šeqal. Šeqalim

MT Masoretic Text

[7] The most obvious example is Ps. 22:1 [22:2 MT] in Mark 15:34 = Matt. 27:46 and Ps. 31:5 [31:6 MT] in Luke 23:46. But this example may not qualify, since Mark 15:37 notes a second cry, for which Luke may have supplied the contents.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LXX Septuagint

MT Masoretic Text

8 Plummer 1896: 454 notes other examples of the periphrastic ἦν διδάσκων (was teaching) are 4:31; 5:17; 13:10. Temple teaching is mentioned elsewhere in Luke 21:37; 22:53 = Mark 14:49; Marshall 1978: 722.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

9 “Leaders of the people” resisted Paul and Barnabas; Acts 13:50; cf. 17:4; 25:2; 28:7, 17; Josephus, Antiquities 4.6.9 §140; 4.7.5 §174; 10.4.5 §71; 10.10.5 §213. See Michaelis, TDNT 6:866, for extrabiblical examples. Nolland 1993b: 940 notes the various combinations with which Luke refers to the leadership in Luke 20–24. They are a major narrative group for Luke’s account, almost having a corporate personality that acts in concert against Jesus. Key verses are 20:1, 19; 22:2, 52, 66; 23:10, 13, 35; 24:20.

10 Imperfect εὕρισκον with deliberative subjunctive ποιήσωσιν portrays in this context a contemplative and continuous effort: “They were not finding what they might do”; Arndt 1956: 401. The original question was, “What can we do?”

11 Luke commonly introduces indirect questions with τό (functioning as a particle); Luke 1:62; 9:46; 22:2, 4, 23, 24; Acts 4:21; 22:30; BDR §267.2–3.

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

12 The unprefixed form of the verb is used in Acts 28:4 and Gal. 3:13; BDR §93.3.5. Virgil uses the idiom for Dido’s hanging on Aeneas’s lips; Aeneid 4.79.

Luke does not include the fig tree incident that Matt. 21:18–22 = Mark 11:12–13, 20–25 has at this point.

If Jesus' triumphal entry into Jerusalem occurred on Sunday, then this sequence of events took place on Tuesday. I suggest, however, that the entry could have been on Monday (see the exegesis of 19:28–40), which places these events on Wednesday.

[3] Εὐαγγελιζομένου (preaching) has no object, so "the gospel," "the kingdom," or a similar idea must be supplied.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[4] BAGD 684 §2aγ and BAA 1373 §2aγ say that ποῖος is equal to τίς and means "by whose power?" but this makes it too much like the second question. It is best to distinguish the questions this way: the first asks the sphere of authority and the second asks its source. On authority, see the exegesis of 4:32 and 5:24.

[5] The redundant participle λέγοντες with εἶπαν is common; BDR §420.1.1.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[6] Fitzmyer 1985: 1275 says that the question has no implied messianic claim for Jesus, but only an affirmation that he is from God. But given

John's teaching on the Coming One, an indirect allusion is implied. There is much at stake in answering the question.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[7] So καταλιθάζω (to stone to death), a NT hapax legomenon; BAGD 413–14; BAA 841; cf. Exod. 17:4; Num. 14:10. Luke mentions stoning elsewhere in Luke 13:34; Acts 5:26; 7:58; 14:19.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

On allegorical parables, see Derrett 1974; Blomberg 1982a: 6–8; Carlston 1981; and Klauck 1978. On the parable's interpretive history, see Snodgrass 1983: 3–11, who defends authenticity (pp. 2, 87, 103–4, 108, 112). Giblin 1985: 65–66 does not see allegory as a distinct genre of parables, but speaks of the parable's allegorical bent. See also excursus 8, where parable and allegory are seen as part of a literary continuum.

Old Testament

Masoretic Text

1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

Jubilees

Abraham is the root in 1 Enoch 93.5. The parable is not unlike Paul's vine image in Rom. 11. Though related to Israel as "natural branches," this promise is tied to God's commitment to Abraham and encompasses, but is not limited to, Israel (Luke 1:54–55). See Burns 1992 on Rom. 11.

Old Testament

Old Testament

[3] B. Scott 1989: 245–48 is unique in arguing that all the versions, even Thomas, are derived. His quest for the original form assumes that the shortest form is the more original, but to get there he strips the parable of its fundamental salvation-historical sense, which ignores the OT imagery too much.

[4] Luce 1933: 308 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1279 present the case for nonauthenticity without endorsing it. Snodgrass 1983: 106–10 has a detailed defense of the authenticity of this parable. He concludes: "If one rejects the dominical origin of this parable, he or she does so because of presuppositions about the nature of the Gospels . . . and not because of any element in the parable itself."

m. Mishnah

Ned. Nedarim

[5] Hengel 1968 and Derrett 1970: 286–312 discuss the ancient customs that provide the historical background for this parable. Such tenants would work for a commission (m. Kil. 4–6 describes laws governing vineyards; Mur 24b–e [DJD 2:124–32] gives details of a tenant arrangement; Derrett 1970: 293–94). Derrett argues that if the vineyard could be shown to have been "abandoned" by the owner, it would revert to the tenants if they had worked the land for three years (m. B. Bat. 3.1; Jeremias 1963a: 74–75; Dodd 1961: 97). Such a cultural background gives context to the parable, though it is comprehensible without it (correctly Fitzmyer 1985: 1283).

4Q174 Florilegium (4QFlor)

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament: Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources, by J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan (repr. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

6 Ἵνα (so that) with the future indicative δώσουσιν (they shall give) indicates purpose and is not like classical style; BDF §396.2; Plummer 1896: 459. A minor textual variant uses the more common construction and is the result of the unusual style.

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ber. Berakot

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[7] The Coptic equivalent of Luke's ἴσως is used twice in the Gospel of Thomas 65 and may be evidence of Thomas's expansion on Luke.

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

8 All other uses of μὴ γένοιτο are made by Paul, who uses it fourteen times, ten times in Romans alone (e.g., 3:4, 6, 31; 6:2, 15; BDF §384; BDR §384.2). Fitzmyer 1985: 1285 notes that the Hebrew equivalent translates, "It is an abomination to me/us" (Gen. 44:17; Josh. 22:29).

LXX Septuagint

MT Masoretic Text

9 Λίθον (stone) undergoes reverse attraction to ὅν (which) and is picked up by οὗτος (this one) later in the verse; Marshall 1978: 732; BDR §295.2.

OT Old Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

10 The stone as a messianic image in Judaism draws esp. on Isa. 28:16 and Dan. 2:44–45; but see also Gen. 28:17–19; Zech. 4:8–10; 3:8–9; Tg. Ps. 118:24 (printed in Walton 1657: 3.274; see Ellis 1974: 233). For Tg. Isa. 28:16 and other Jewish parallels, see Jeremias, TDNT 4:272–73. Tg. Isa. 28:16(CALTGO) reads: “Behold I set in Zion a king, a mighty king, mighty and terrible, whom I will uphold and strengthen; the prophet says: ‘And the righteous in whom is confidence shall not tremble when affliction comes.’”

OT Old Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[11] Both verbs appear only here and in the parallel at Matt. 21:44. On συνθλάω, see BAGD 790; BAA 1575; Ps. 57:7 LXX [58:6 Engl.]; Mic. 3:3. On λικμάω, see BAGD 474–75; BAA 963; Dan. 2:44 [Theodotion]; Ruth 3:2; Job 27:21; Isa. 17:13; Jer. 38:10 LXX [31:10 Engl.]; Amos 9:9; Josephus, Antiquities 5.9.3 §328.

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[12] Luke does not use his normal imperfect (“they were seeking”).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

Old Testament

In fact, a Galilean named Judas revolted in a.d. 6 because he did not want to pay such taxes; Josephus, Jewish War 2.8.1 §118; Tiede 1988: 344.

Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

Tiede 1988: 343 correctly remarks that this text does not endorse the "two-kingdoms" doctrine or the separation of church and state. It sets forth no political religious theory. It simply acknowledges the presence of civil government and its right to sustain itself through the contributions of its citizens.

[3] Nolland 1993b: 957 notes that all the nonbiblical parallels are secondary.

[4] Nolland 1993b: 957 notes one exception: Petzke 1975.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

MT Masoretic Text

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

5 On Tiberius's rule, see the exegesis of 3:1. The origin of Caesar as the title for the reigning emperor goes back to Julius Caesar; Fitzmyer 1985: 1296.

6 On the syntax of ἔξεστιν with an infinitive and an accusative, see BDF §409.3 and BDR §409.3.4.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

7 Luke's use of these terms provides a good example of the role of the omniscient narrator who indicates the participants' thoughts and thus colors how the characters are viewed.

8 Luke used the related ὑποκρίνομαι (to pretend) in 20:20.

NJPSV New Jewish Publication Society Version

9 For an Augustan denarius (about the size of a dime and weighing 3.8 grams), see Zondervan Pictorial Encyclopedia of the Bible 1:909. For a Tiberian denarius, see photographs 44–45 in the same work (between pp. 896 and 897), and Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible 1:824. For a full discussion, see Hart 1984.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

10 The phrase τὰ τοῦ θεοῦ (the things of God) occurs elsewhere in Mark 8:33; 1 Cor. 2:11, 14; 7:32–34; Fitzmyer 1985: 1296–97.

[11] Note the disciples' reply in Acts 4:19–20 in a religious context; cf. Isa. 10:5–7; Jer. 27:6; Acts 5:29; Leaney 1958: 252. John 19:11 shows that the state's sovereignty is subject to God's authority.

OT Old Testament

[12] Many follow Ranke 1901: 1.1–9 in seeing this saying as Jesus' most significant political statement. Fitzmyer 1985: 1292 objects to the two-kingdoms view (which appeals to Prov. 8:15–16; Dan. 2:21, 37–38; Wis. 6:1–11 for support), arguing that it makes Caesar and God equals.

[13] That the saying about rendering to God is not ironic stands against viewing the first saying as ironic (Fitzmyer 1985: 1292). The use of the conjunction καί (and) instead of ἀλλά (but) shows that the whole saying is to be taken together.

[14] Arguing that the point revolves around both the image and the inscription, Giblin 1971 attempts to ground the reply in an allusion to Isa. 44:5. According to this verse, God's inscription on people is that they "belong to him," a concept that leads Jesus to speak of rendering to God what is his. Marshall 1978: 736 is right that this is a correct theological deduction but not explicit in the text.

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

For the Pharisee view of resurrection, see Josephus, Jewish War 3.8.5 §374; Against Apion 2.30 §218; Antiquities 18.1.3 §14. For the Essene view, see Jewish War 2.8.11 §154; Antiquities 18.1.5 §18. Cf. SB 1:885–86; 1 Enoch 15.6–9.

Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

Old Testament

[2] Fitzmyer 1985: 1299 notes seven differences between Mark and Luke, mostly stylistic; see the exegesis for details. In addition, he notes how Luke 20:38b–39 is a Lucan summary, while 20:40 is like Mark 12:34 (which is in a section that Luke lacks). Luke 20:34–36 has Jesus teach the Sadducees directly and lacks any rebuke about how they read Scripture. Fitzmyer also notes a possible conceptual parallel to 4 Macc. 7:19.

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

[3] The term levirate comes from Latin levir (husband's brother); M. Burrows 1940. The practice was still used in the first century; Josephus, Antiquities 4.8.23 §§254–56.

[4] B. Nid. 70b raises another issue about resurrection: Will resurrected people need to be ritually cleansed after resurrection since they had contact with death and the grave?

[5] Several minor textual variants in this verse reflect harmonization and are secondary.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[6] On being worthy of a place in the future world, see b. Ber. 28b, 51a; y. Ber. 11d (7.6) (= Neusner et al. 1982–93: 1.276).

NT New Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

2 Bar. 2 (Syriac) Baruch

1QH Thanksgiving Hymns/Psalms (Hôdāyôt)

1Q28b Benedictions; Book of Blessings; Collection of Blessings (1QSb)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[7] On the sons of God as angels, see Job 1:6; 38:7; Ps. 29:1; 89:6 [89:7 MT].

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[8] For this type of generalized reference to a section of Scripture, see 2 Sam. 1:18; Mark 12:26; Rom. 11:2.

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

[9] Some in Judaism expressed the view that the patriarchs lived with God and the pious (2 Macc. 6–7; 4 Macc. 7:8–19), which is similar to the image of Abraham's bosom in Luke 16:22–23.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York:

United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

NT New Testament

Jub. Jubilees

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

OT Old Testament

Jesus' question is formed like a rabbinic paradox, where two things are opposed to one another and yet both are true; Daube 1956: 158–63.

2 On the relationship of Luke 10:25–28 to Matt. 22:34–40 and Mark 12:28–34, see the introduction to Luke 10:25–37.

3 On the relationship of Luke 11:37–54 to Matt. 23:1–36, see the introduction to Luke 11:37–54.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

4Q174 Florilegium (4QFlor)

4QPBless Patriarchal Blessings (formerly 4QpGen 49)

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[4] Judaism also had hopes of priestly messianic figures; see 1QS 9.11 and Neusner, Green, and Frerichs 1987.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

DJD Discoveries in the Judaean Desert of Jordan (Oxford: Clarendon, 1955–)

NT New Testament

[5] Seeing a rhetorical argument, Plummer 1896: 472–73 holds that Jesus condescended to current opinions—a view that has changed little since Plummer wrote.

MT Masoretic Text

[6] I am not sure that such a distinction is necessary, but it is a possible way to take the remark. For Jesus' argument to work, David must be regarded as the one who utters Ps. 110:1 or is the ultimate source of its report.

[7] For example, Luce 1933: 317 favors the Maccabean date. Leaney 1958: 254–55 discusses it, but his position is less clear, though he does cite 1 Macc. 14:41 as conceptually parallel (i.e., its reference to the “governor and high priest forever”). See also Hardy 1945.

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

MT Masoretic Text

[8] The king of Israel is God’s vice-regent on earth; 1 Chron. 29:23 (also Acts 2:30–36).

[9] This detail causes many to see a preexilic origin for the psalm. Heb. 5–7 makes much of this point in the psalm.

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

10 For the hermeneutics involved in the use of the psalm, see the additional note on 20:42. For more on the use of the OT in the NT, see Bock 1985 and 1994d.

OT Old Testament

11 This last point is important, though Luke does not develop it here. This ruler is not idle as he sits at God's side. He reigns as God's vice-regent and engages in battle for him. The imagery is of an active rule. In denying the force of the NT application of this psalm, some argue that Jesus sits in heaven awaiting the time of his future rule. But Acts 2:30–36 appeals to Ps. 110:1 to show Jesus actively distributing benefits from the Father's side and ruling alongside of him from heaven. This is one point of application that Luke and the NT develop later. The defeat of enemies also shows that, in the consummation, foes will be totally vanquished. Jesus awaits this total victory. The psalm's imagery is rich, and so is its NT application to Jesus.

12 Additional points from this psalm are made in Luke 22:69 (and parallels); Acts 2:30–36; 7:55–56; 13:33–39; 1 Cor. 15:22–28; Eph. 1:19–23; Heb. 1:3–14; 5–7.

T. Job Testament of Job

T. Levi Testament of Levi

13 T. Levi 18 has a messianic flavor to it, but this is an Aaronic Messiah, a priestly Messiah; cf. 1QS 9.11.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ned. Nedarim

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

14 More on this discussion appears in the exegesis of 20:44. For David as the speaker in the psalm, see the exegesis of 20:42a.

OT Old Testament

15 Grundmann 1963: 376 argues that the question's force is "why does one say. . . ?" But this could be taken erroneously as a denial of Davidic sonship, a view that goes back to D. F. Strauss (see Plummer 1896: 473). The interrogative πῶς is better understood to press for "in what manner?"

1 Jesus' question is formed like a rabbinic paradox, where two things are opposed to one another and yet both are true; Daube 1956: 158–63.

16 The usage here is typological-prophetic, since the psalm applies uniquely to Jesus on this point and there was awareness that the psalm applied to another figure. For an explanation of this classification, see the additional note on 20:42 and Bock 1994d: 110–12.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

y. Jerusalem (Palestinian) Talmud

Ber. Berakot

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

17 An opposite approach to widows is found in Acts 6:1–6; 1 Tim. 5; James 1:27.

T. Moses Testament of Moses

b. Babylonian Talmud

Giṭ. Giṭṭin

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

18 The conclusion that Matthew lacks a parallel assumes the outcome of a textual problem. Most key uncials (א, B, D, L, Θ, family 1, 33, most Itala) omit Matt. 23:14, which means that Matthew lacks a parallel. Manuscripts that do include the verse do not agree on its placement, which is a sign that it was a copyist's addition (if it had originally been present, its location would not be in doubt). Codexes W and Δ, Byz, and Lect place it before 23:13, while family 13, some Itala, and other versions place it after 23:13.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

m. Mishnah

Šeqal. Šeqalim

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Šeqal. Šeqalim

19 This is Luke's fourth "silent" example (the woman who anoints Jesus, Mary, and Lazarus). She says nothing, but her actions speak volumes. On widows, see the exegesis of 18:3. Luke has much to say about widows and the poor (Luke 2:37; 4:25–26; 7:12; 21:1–4; Acts 6:1–7; 9:39).

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LXX Septuagint

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

b. Babylonian Talmud

B. Bat. Baba‹ Batra‹

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[20] A similar use of βίος occurs in 8:43. The term has a slightly different force in 15:12, 30, where it means “inheritance”; Marshall 1978: 752.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[21] Danker 1988: 328 cites a similar remark by Aristotle, Nicomachean Ethics 4.1.19 (1120b): “One’s generosity is to be evaluated in terms of one’s resources.”

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

[1] How Luke handled this material in relation to the parallels in Matt. 24:1–35 = Mark 13:1–37 will be treated in detail in the exegesis, though a summary of the Lucan emphases concludes this introduction.

[2] This issue is particularly acute if Matthew was the first Gospel, for Matthew's eschatological discourse not only has the Olivet remarks but also a series of graphic and theologically significant eschatological parables unique to his treatment. If Matthew is first and Luke knew him, why would Luke leave them out, since he loves parables, including eschatological parables (12:35–48; 18:1–8; 19:11–27)? Matthean prioritists have difficulty explaining this situation, which is a strong argument that Mark was written before Matthew. For how the various Synoptic theories approach this material, see the essays by C. M. Tuckett, F. Neirynck, and A. J. McNicol in Dungan 1990: 63–80, 108–24, 157–200.

[3] The history of interpretation of this discourse can be found in Beasley-Murray's several works: 1952–53a, 1952–53b, 1954, and 1957: 1–18 (updated in 1993: 1–349), while his own views about the discourse are summarized in 1986: 322–24. Beasley-Murray 1993: 367–70 sees two purposes for the discourse: (1) to inspire faith, endurance, and hope and (2) to warn Christians against false teaching about the end. See also the exegesis of 17:22–37.

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

[4] A detailed demonstration of the solution to this problem is beyond the scope of a commentary on Luke. Marshall 1978: 758 notes that no good solution to the transmission question can be clearly demonstrated and that the general teaching coheres with Jesus' teaching elsewhere—which means that the material's core goes back to Jesus. Each of the monographs behind views 1–4 engages in detailed analyses of the text and its OT roots—something more conservative studies frequently lack. Wenham's work (view 5) is an exception to this pattern, as is that of Beasley-Murray.

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

LXX Septuagint

NT New Testament

[5] Mahoney argues that Luke's form is drawn from an independent Semitic tradition. If so, in many spots this source is much like Mark.

[6] Fitzmyer 1985: 1324, 1326, 1329 speaks of Mark plus L and argues that L did not contain the whole speech. To achieve this position, he notes parallels to Q material in the Luke 17 discourse and the few portions of Luke 21 that do not parallel Mark 13.

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

LXX Septuagint

[7] Even before analyzing this approach, it seems unlikely that such a slim core as the Jesus Seminar argues for here could have been remembered in such isolation, nor could it have provided any rationale for the building up of a discourse around it. The Jesus Seminar's criticism of historicity is so severe that what does get through the sieve could hardly be seen as credible.

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

8 It may also be that the portrait's depth and mirroring emerged slowly for those who heard this discourse. There was great interest in the end-time, but Luke reminds his audience that Jesus also had concerns for the nation's short-term future. While the other Synoptists also note these short-term interests, Luke makes these points with more punch. In fact, a careful reading of the Synoptics reveals that Matthew is the most oriented toward the future, while Mark's account reflects the most temporal ambiguity. But it is a mistake to pit these readings against one another or to make them say exactly the same thing. Typology in judgment texts is not an either/or but a both/and choice.

For form-critical discussions of the individual subunits, see Fitzmyer 1985: 1329, 1334, 1338, 1342, 1348, 1351, 1355, 1357; Bultmann 1963: 36, 122–23, 125, 119; Berger 1984: 81, 296–97, 304–5, 48, 142, 352.

11QTemple Temple Scroll

a Temple Scroll

m. Mishnah

10 Solomon's Temple was destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon in 586 b.c. and reconstructed by Zerubbabel in about 516 b.c. (Hag. 1:4–15). Those who had seen the original temple felt that Zerubbabel's was not as great (Fitzmyer 1985: 1330).

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

11 Leaney 1958: 259 notes that the Mount of Olives is the locale in 21:37–38, but this later generalized summary tells nothing about the discourse's setting.

12 On the grammar of ταῦτα ἅ (these things which), see Marshall 1978: 759. The construction is an anacoluthon; BDF §466.1.

13 For example, the Western Wall of the temple still stands today, though Arndt 1956: 418 argues that this is not included in Jesus' remarks.

14 Noting that the fall was fated by God, Josephus, Jewish War 6.4.5 §250, describes the destruction of Jerusalem on the tenth day of Loüs (= 29 August a.d. 70). The temple was first burned (Jewish War 6.4.5 §250) and then razed (Jewish War 7.1.1 §§1–4). Josephus also describes portents of the end; Jewish War 6.5.3–4 §§288–315. The OT describes the first destruction of Jerusalem: Jer. 52:12–13; 7:1–14; 22:5; 27:6; Fitzmyer 1985: 1331.

15 Other NT texts noting a threat to the temple are John 2:19 and Acts 6:14, although Jesus' remark in John is misunderstood.

16 Even Marshall 1978: 762 suggests that διδάσκαλος shows Luke to have a public setting in mind, as opposed to a private discussion with the disciples (though he notes that 21:12–19 suggests an audience of disciples). Nevertheless, the parallel in Mark may well imply that Luke is following tradition here rather than using his technical sense for διδάσκαλος. In simplifying his introduction, the specific audience was lost.

17 The plural reference is obscured in the RSV and NRSV; the NIV and NASB are clearer. The remark in 21:7 looks back to the description in 21:6, but does not ignore larger concerns. See the next note.

18 Fitzmyer follows Conzelmann 1960: 126; but correctly Marshall 1978: 762. Danker 1988: 329 notes that the issues of Jerusalem's destruction and the end-time were linked in most people's minds; one suggests the other. Jesus' answer goes beyond the temple. Zmijewski 1972: 93–95 suggests that the reference to the "coming days" in 21:6 suggests an eschatological setting, since ἡμέρα (day) alludes to the day of the Lord. It must be remembered that any judgment that consumed Jerusalem would be seen as catastrophic, so either event—Jerusalem's fall or the temple's removal—would suggest severe judgment. The disciples are asking, "When will that judgment come?"

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NT New Testament

19 Tension between the coming of salvific blessing and the coming of consummation is also expressed in Acts 1:8–11.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LXX Septuagint

MT Masoretic Text

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

20 The language in Matthew and Mark suggests that everything in the period is part of a gradual movement to eschatological consummation.

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

21 Fitzmyer 1985: 1337 is against a source. Creed 1930: 255 and Leaney 1958: 260 say Luke inserted the phrase because he was detailing what was sketched in previous verses. Marshall 1978: 764–65 speaks of the great puzzlement that this addition has caused and mentions the possible influence of another source (also Schramm 1971: 174–75). Perhaps this one source had the two eschatological discourses that Luke reflects. But what caused the difference? Did Luke or his source supply a clarifying stylistic break? Either option is possible.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

T. Judah Testament of Judah

22 Josephus records that when the temple burned, a bright star resembling a sword stood over the city and that comets were visible for a year; Jewish War 6.5.1–3 §§274–89, esp. §§288–89; Manson 1949: 326; Fitzmyer 1985: 1337; Plummer 1896: 479. Note also Tacitus, History 5.13; 2 Macc. 5:2–3; Nolland 1993b: 992.

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

23 The phrase ἐπιβαλοῦσιν ἐφ’ ὑμᾶς τὰς χεῖρας (laying hands on you) occurs in 1 Kings 20:6 [21:6 LXX]; Luke 20:19; 22:53; Acts 4:3; 5:18; 12:1; 21:27; Mark 14:46; John 7:30, 44. On διώκω (lit., to pursue) as persecution, see Luke 11:49 and Acts 7:52.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

24 In Acts 4:24–31 believers rejoice that they are found worthy of suffering as they boldly declare Jesus' name. The church leaders are witnesses (μάρτυς) in the midst of rejection: Luke 24:48; Acts 1:8; 2:32; 3:15; 5:32; 10:39, 41; 13:31; 22:15; 26:16 (Isa. 43–44 alludes to this concept in the OT).

LXX Septuagint

MT Masoretic Text

LXX Septuagint

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

25 Against Ellis 1974: 244, a "Christian prophet" is not likely in view (see Marshall 1978: 769). If it is, it is only in the broadest sense of forth-telling, as opposed to a special group of gifted saints.

26 On the proverb about hair on the head, see Acts 27:34; 1 Sam. 14:45; 2 Sam. 14:11; 1 Kings 1:52; Dan. 3:27—though all these texts speak of physical well-being.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[27] Ellis 1974: 244 calls this a form of "pesher-ing" like that of Christian prophets, though he is clear that the texts go back to Jesus. If additional sources are in view (as noted below), this appeal to Christian prophets is not a necessary conclusion. The sources may reflect Jesus' own emphases, which were not one-dimensional, but complex. Later reflection on this speech may have seen more clearly the distinction between near and the end-time.

LXX Septuagint

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LXX Septuagint

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

LXX Septuagint

28 Josephus, Jewish War 5–7, esp. 6.5.1 §§271–73; 6.9.3 §420; 7.5.3 §118; 7.5.5 §138; 7.5.6 §154. Plummer 1896: 482 thinks that Josephus's numbers are too high. Arndt 1956: 421–22 accepts them, arguing that many people had fled to the city, thus inflating its population. Regardless, it is clear that the city was leveled and much of its population slain. On the suggested population of Jerusalem during feast time, see excursus 11. Current scholarly estimates for feast-day population are 110,000–150,000.

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

T. Moses Testament of Moses

29 Codex D adds a negative here—clearly a copyist's error—that commands those in Jerusalem not to depart.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

OT Old Testament

30 Lucan woes are found elsewhere in 6:24–26; 10:13; 11:42–44, 46–47, 52; 17:1; 22:22. On the term οὐαί (woe), see the exegesis of 6:24.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[31] In 1 Cor. 7:26 ἀνάγκη (distress) has a generalized eschatological force of drawing close to the end (BAGD 52 §2; BAA 102 §2), which equals the generalized description of desolation in Luke 21:20 (in 2 Cor. 6:4 and 12:10, ἀνάγκη lacks any eschatological force). The other term, ὀργή, often refers to divine wrath (BAGD 579 §2b; BAA 1173 §2b) and conceptually recalls Deut. 28:58–68, a covenantal curse passage (the phrase all the nations in Deut. 28:64 may recall the phrase to all the nations in Luke 21:24). See also Isa. 9:12 [9:11 MT]; Jer. 4:4; Ezek. 5:13; 30:3; 32:9; Rom. 2:8; 12:19; Eph. 2:3; 5:6; Col. 3:6; 1 Thess. 1:10; 5:9; Rev. 6:16, 17; 11:18; 14:10; 16:19; 19:15.

[32] Danker 1988: 334 describes a coin of Vespasian and an inscription on the Arch of Titus where a Roman officer, with one foot on his helmet, stands guard by a palm tree under whose branches crouches a woman, the daughter of Zion, weeping over her defeat.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

[33] Cf. “times of the age” in Tob. 14:4–5 and “season of visitation” in 1QS 4.18–19. C. A. Evans 1990: 313 notes that this hope is a decisive argument against J. T. Sanders’s claim (1987: 216–19) that Luke is anti-Semitic (he does see a future time when Israel will have a key role).

[34] So Tiede 1980: 87–96 correctly shows that Luke teaches vengeance on Israel followed by vindication. Acts 3:19–21 suggests this most clearly, but so does Luke 13:35b by pointing to a day when Israel will respond to Messiah; see also C. A. Evans 1990: 313–14.

[35] Amillennialism, the other major approach, does not distinguish between a thousand-year earthly kingdom and the eternal state. Much of Protestantism and Catholicism adopted amillennialism by holding to eschatology expressed by Augustine in his theological classic The City of God. Though the early church was chiliastic, this hope waned under Augustine’s influence and excessive speculation about the millennium’s material quality.

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

T. Moses Testament of Moses

2 Bar. 2 (Syriac) Baruch

T. Levi Testament of Levi

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

36 Marshall 1978: 775 notes that, in Greek astrological texts, συνοχή signifies the dismay caused by unfavorable omens, while Manson 1949: 332 says that it denotes “bewildered despair.” Conzelmann, TDNT 7:440, says that the apocalyptic coloring is stronger in Luke.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

LXX Septuagint

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

37 Recent treatments taking this approach are Dunn 1980: 67–69; Casey 1979: 7–50; and Black 1976: 60–63, who argues that this text is unique, since it is the only place in the OT where Israel is “deified” (see Bock 1987: 335 n. 179 for refutation).

MT Masoretic Text

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

38 Emerton 1958: 232 holds to the angelic view in the original tradition, but notes that if it is not a reference to a divine figure, then it is unique among OT passages.

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

39 B. Sanh. 38b contains Rabbi Jose's famous condemnation of Rabbi Akiva for profaning the Shekinah by arguing that David could sit beside God on a heavenly throne.

40 For refutation of France's attempt (1971: 227–39) to tie this remark to a.d. 70, see Marshall 1978: 776–77, who notes that the presence of cosmic signs, the force of Dan. 7:13, and the context all argue against such a view. Marshall also defends the saying's authenticity and rightly questions attempts to reject the saying because of the Synoptic mixture of OT text (Ps. 110 and Dan. 7) or by holding that other sayings such as Mark 8:38 or 14:62 are earlier. Colpe, TDNT 8:450, and Perrin 1967: 173–85 deny authenticity; Hooker 1967: 148–59 and Borsch 1967: 361–64 defend it.

41 Marshall 1978: 777 notes that the antecedent of τούτων (these things) is unclear and opts for a reference to the signs, but it is more likely since the term is plural that the ambiguity is intentional and refers to the whole package (i.e., signs plus the Son of Man). Regardless of the choice, the decision represents only a slight difference, with the reference to the whole package being slightly broader than a reference just to cosmic signs.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

42 The phrase is usually applied to the “already” kingdom. For rejection of the idea that the kingdom is “delayed,” see Bock 1992c. See the exegesis of 10:9 and 11:20.

LXX Septuagint

[43] BAGD 153–54 and BAA 308 have such a category for γενεά but note its rarity—only "clan, race" in Luke 16:8, which is debated. Their other categories of meaning are "generation," "age," "period of time," and "family," while Büchsel, TDNT 1:662–65, speaks of "birth/descent," "progeny," "race," and "generation." When γενεά is qualified by the adjective wicked, the racial sense becomes possible, at least in the broad sense of "humanity," but this really results in an ethical force, not a racial one. The adjective makes clear the force of γενεά. The phrase ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη (this generation) is seen by some as a shortened "ethical" reference equal to "this type of generation." If one takes an ethical view and argues that γενεά has no temporal force, then the wicked-generation idea is the best suboption.

[44] Why did Luke not make this point explicit anywhere else in Luke–Acts, or why did he not state it more clearly here, since elsewhere he speaks of the nation when he means such (e.g., Acts 1:6; 28:20)?

[45] Mattill 1979: 97–100 surveys each NT use of ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη and opts for the usual sense of view 1. He does not, however, give any indication of the debate over 16:8; see also Jeremias 1971a: 135. Jesus' speech most likely would have been in Aramaic, which makes the Semitic point relevant, but only if one assumes a term-for-term rendering. A sense-rendering of Jesus' discourse would escape this objection.

[46] Ellis appeals to Qumran usage for support (1QpHab 2.7; 7.2) and equates it to the "last hour" in 1 John 2:18. Maddox 1982: 114 rightly asks if Qumran can deliver this extended force.

[47] Maddox 1982: 114 suggests that the passage is meaningless without "any identifiable chronological significance."

OT Old Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

MT Masoretic Text

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

LXX Septuagint

48 The NT hapax legomenon κραιπάλη refers to the dizziness or carousing associated with drunkenness; BAGD 448; BAA 910; Ps. 78:65 [77:65 LXX]; Isa. 24:20; 29:9. Μέθη (drunkenness) and μέριμνα (worries) are often mentioned in the NT as obstacles to spirituality: μέθη in Rom. 13:13 and Gal. 5:21, and μέριμνα in Matt. 13:22 = Mark 4:19 = Luke 8:14 (cf. Luke 12:22). On being morally sober, see 1 Thess. 5:7; on being spiritually directed, see Eph. 5:18.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

[49] Ἀγρυπνέω occurs elsewhere in the NT at Mark 13:33; Eph. 6:18; Heb. 13:17; BAGD 14; BAA 24. The usual NT term for this concept is γρηγορέω (to watch); BAGD 167; BAA 334; e.g., Matt. 26:41; 1 Thess. 5:6; cf. 1 Pet. 4:7; 1 Esdr. 8:58 LXX [= 8:59 NRSV]; Luke 8:13; 22:40, 46.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

50 Luke often emphasizes prayer for the disciple: δέομαι in Luke 5:12; 8:38; 9:38, 40; 22:32; Acts 4:31; 8:22, 24; and προσεύχομαι in Luke 1:10; 3:21; 5:16; 6:12; 11:1 [twice]; 18:1; Acts 1:24; 8:15; Zmijewski 1972: 289. Constant prayer is called for at Luke 18:1, 7–8; Rom. 12:12; and 1 Thess. 5:17.

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

1QH Thanksgiving Hymns/Psalms (Hôdāyôt)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LXX Septuagint

I have not dealt with the issue of the tribulation's timing or the debate over when Jesus will come again for the church because the discourse does not raise these issues in this precise form (they can only be determined from other passages). But one point needs emphasis: the discourse covers persecution and cosmic disturbance in the interim and at the end. This dual perspective makes it clear that the discourse applies at various points to all believers and that the warnings and exhortations belong to the entire period between Jesus' departure and his return to earth. As such, the disciples are an appropriate audience for what is said here, since they experienced this rejection and the late first-century tumult that, in Luke's view, also pictures the end. The applications extend from the present into the future, until Jesus comes.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

52 For another view, see Cadbury 1917. H. J. Holtzmann sees the pericope as contained in Luke's sources (noted by Klostermann 1929: 205).

1 The term passion is a wordplay on Hebrew פֶּסַח (Pesaḥ., Passover) and Greek πάσχω (paschō, to suffer); Fitzmyer 1985: 1369; Irenaeus, Against Heresies 4.10.1.

OT Old Testament

[2] For excellent overviews of the variety of positions on Lucan redaction, see Soards 1987: 13–16 and V. Taylor 1972: 3–27. Nolland 1993b: 1023 is convinced that Luke had a second source, which he thinks may be a continuous account.

[3] Soards 1987: 13–16 notes a third position: that Luke composed the material, by which he means that Luke is responsible for some additional material.

[1] Fitzmyer 1985: 1368, 1373 strongly objects to Bultmann's questioning (1963: 262) of this material.

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

From here until Luke 24, I pay less attention to form since all the accounts are narrative descriptions of Jesus' death and resurrection, composed mostly of stories about Jesus and discourse material from him. For a summary of resurrection forms, see the introduction to 24:13–35.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

[3] Ἀναιρέω (to put to death, destroy) is a favorite Lucan word, used twenty-one times by him, including Acts 2:23; 5:33; 7:28 [twice]; 9:23, 24, 29; 22:20; 23:15; 25:3; BAGD 54–55; BAA 107–8. The only non-Lucan uses are Matt. 2:16; 2 Thess. 2:8; Heb. 10:9.

[4] Τὸ πῶς (how) reflects an indirect question; also 22:4. Luke likes to use πῶς in questions: 1:34; 6:42; 10:26; 11:18; 20:41, 44.

[5] BDB 966; BAGD 744; BAA 1490; 1 Chron. 21:1; Job 1:9–11. At Qumran and in other Jewish writings, Satan was frequently called Beliar or Belial; CD 4.13; 1QS 1.18, 24; 2.19; Jub. 10.11; T. Dan 5.1, 6; T. Ben. 6.1; Life of Adam and Eve 13.1. See also the "two spirits" of good and evil in 1QS 3.13–4.25; Nolland 1993b: 1030. J. Green 1988: 232–33 notes a conceptual parallel in the Martyrdom and Ascension of Isaiah 3.11 and 5.1, where Satan prompts Manasseh to seize Isaiah and saw him in two (an action that may be alluded to in Heb. 11:37). On the background to the figure Satan, see the exegesis of Luke 4:2.

[6] Arndt 1956: 430 argues that demonic possession is not meant, but this conclusion is not clear from the text. Resolving such details is probably beyond our ability, given the brevity of the text.

[7] The name Iscariot occurs here in its Grecized form (Ἰσκαριώτην), not its Semitic form (Ἰσκαριώθ), as in 6:16 (Fitzmyer 1985: 1374). Matthew here uses the Greek form, Mark the Semitic. On the Semitic form of the name, see the exegesis of 6:16.

[8] Soards 1987: 49 and J. Green 1988: 231–33 argue that Luke used traditional material to which John also had access.

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

m. Mishnah

m. Mishnah

[9] Στρατηγός is used ten times in the NT, all by Luke: Luke 22:52; Acts 4:1; 5:24, 26; 16:20, 22, 35, 36, 38. A related verb appears seven times in the writings of Paul, James, Peter, and Luke.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

Jubilees

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

Jub. Jubilees

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

MT Masoretic Text

LXX Septuagint

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[1] Fitzmyer 1985: 1383 overstates the passage by arguing that Matthew and Luke are different. Marshall 1978: 791–92 suggests that the Lucan details point to arrangement.

NT New Testament

[2] Κατάλυμα is a private house, but in Luke 2:7 it refers to the inn where Jesus was born; elsewhere in the NT only at the parallel Mark 14:14; also 1 Sam. 1:18 [no MT equivalent]; 9:22; Sir. 14:25; BAGD 414; BAA 841; Büchsel, TDNT 4:338; Stählin, TDNT 5:19 n. 136.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Pesaḥ. Pesaḥim

1 Marshall 1978: 793 speaks of two traditions, one a eucharistic tradition (Mark 14:22–24 = Luke 22:19–20; 1 Cor. 11:23–26), the other a farewell-meal tradition (Luke 22:15–18, 24–30, 35–38; Mark 14:25).

2 Fitzmyer and Marshall are undecided about the tradition-historical issue. For more on this topic, see Schürmann's three studies (1952, 1955, 1957), Soards 1987, and J. Green 1988. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 387–88) reflects excessive skepticism, printing the dialogue of 22:15–22 in black type because of the differences in wording and the presence of two cups. The seminar believes that there was a meal with symbolic acts, but the exact words are "beyond recovery." This contrastive approach amazingly excludes the likely possibility of an accurate summary of such an emotive event.

3 Danker 1988: 344 notes that this is the last key meal in Luke (others in 5:27–39; 7:36–50; 11:37–54; 14:1–24), but he overlooks the postresurrection meals in 24:30, 41–43.

m. Mishnah

Pesaḥ. Pesaḥim

[4] Ὥρα (hour) occurs many times in the passion narrative, including Mark 14:35, 41; John 12:23; 13:1; 17:1; Luke 22:53. Because ὥρα carries no qualifiers (as in 22:53), it conveys no special sense of God's hour (against Grundmann 1963: 392 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1384; as noted by Marshall 1978: 794 and especially Soards 1987: 33).

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

m. Mishnah

Šab. Šabbat

b. Babylonian Talmud

Pesaḥ. Pesaḥim

[5] The Lucan textual variants reading "the Twelve" probably reflect harmonization.

[6] The presence of ἀπόστολος (apostle) may indicate a mixture of special source and editing, since Luke likes to use this term for the Twelve (see the exegesis of 6:13).

[7] The farewell discourse in John 14–17 is another distinct account involving this setting. For biblical and Greco-Roman parallels, see Kurz 1985 and Neyrey 1985: 5–48. Biblical and Jewish precedent for the discourse is found in Gen. 49 (Jacob's final address); Deut. 33 (Moses); Josh. 23 (Joshua); 1 Macc. 2:49–70 (Mattathias); Tob. 4:3–21 (Tobit); the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs; and Josephus, Antiquities 4.8.1–48 §§176–322 (Moses).

LXX Septuagint

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

1QapGen Genesis Apocryphon

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

8 Note γάρ (for) and the solemn and emphatic λέγω ὑμῖν (I say to you; also 22:18; 13:35; 9:27). Ἕως ὅτου (until; also 12:50; 13:8) is equivalent to ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν (from now on) in 22:18 (Fitzmyer 1985: 1396).

9 The Easter fast in some church circles has roots in this view; Ernst 1977: 581.

10 The use of οὐ μή (not) is emphatic: esp. Matt. 26:29 = Mark 14:25; Luke 22:18; also Matt. 5:18, 26; 10:23; 18:3; 24:2; Mark 9:1, 41; 13:30; 14:25; 10:15 = Luke 18:17; John 8:51; 13:8.

11 Note the parallelism to 22:18 and the kingdom's final coming. Behm, TDNT 2:695, correctly speaks of the "fulfilled Passover" in the kingdom, the messianic meal of the last time—imagery that the Jewish Passover also anticipated, since the Hallel Psalms sung at the culmination looked to God's deliverance.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NRSV New Revised Standard Version

RSV Revised Standard Version

NASB New American Standard Bible

NIV New International Version

RSV Revised Standard Version

[12] For a strongly reasoned defense of the shorter reading, refuting Schürmann, see B. Ehrman 1991. Ehrman underestimates, however, the significance of 1 Cor. 11:25–26 and underplays the substitution language in Acts 20:28—points that undermine his position. The 1 Corinthian parallel is telling because it raises the issue of where this detail came from if not from a tradition like that in Luke. It is unlikely that a scribe adding material would go outside the Gospels to do so, especially if the result produced harmonization problems.

[13] Jeremias 1966: 156–59 argues that the short text attempted to preserve a shortened reference to the initial cup without removing it altogether. The short text's goal was to keep the liturgy secret, an explanation that Marshall 1980: 38 rejects. More likely it is a scribal reduction for liturgical reasons.

m. Mishnah

Pesaḥ. Pesaḥim

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

t. Tosepta

Ber. Berakot

m. Mishnah

Ber. Berakot

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

14 The practice of multiple cups for the Lord's Supper is a later development. Justin Martyr's description in Apology 1.65–67, where the wine was prayed over in one cup and then distributed by deacons to those present and also taken to some not present, suggests multiple cups.

15 Danker 1988: 345 and Jeremias 1966: 208–9 argue that in preparation for his coming suffering Jesus did not drink the wine. Schürmann 1952: 63–65, Plummer 1896: 495–96, and Marshall 1978: 798 argue that he did drink the wine.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

16 On the reference to the vine, see Deut. 22:9; Isa. 32:12; m. Ber. 6.1; b. Ber. 35a. The wording parallels the cup blessing in the Passover meal;

Büchsel, TDNT 1:685. On abstinence, cf. Lev. 10:9; Num. 6:3; Ezek. 44:21; Leaney 1958: 268.

17 The term for bread lacks an article, suggesting that Jesus took “some” bread, not all of it; Arndt 1956: 438.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

18 The debate over the original wording of the tradition is complex and ultimately irresolvable, since it rests on so much speculation about what is likely. Marshall 1978: 804 and Schürmann 1955: 30–34, 123–28 argue for originality, Patsch 1972: 142–50 against it. Nolland 1993b: 1047 sees it as a later but quite accurate gloss, since Jesus looks to affirm his ongoing relationship to them despite his coming suffering.

19 On interpreting the action, see Fitzmyer 1985: 1401–2. Plummer 1896: 498 argues that the instruction to observe the supper came from the risen Lord later, but there is no record of such a later instruction.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

20 On the various views, see the summary in Marshall 1978: 805–6, who argues that in general Luke's form is the most primitive, but notes the difficulty of the decision. Fitzmyer 1985: 1402 prefers Mark's originality, as does Nolland 1993b: 1047, who mostly follows Ruckstuhl 1980.

5 The Lucan textual variants reading "the Twelve" probably reflect harmonization.

1 There is some contact between Luke's version of the final discourse and John's (John 13–16), but the two accounts complement each other more than they overlap. For discussion of these subunits and the source debate surrounding them, see Nolland 1993b: 1058–59, 1062–64, 1070–72, 1075. The basic debate turns on whether Luke is responsible for the differences from Mark and Matthew or whether they reflect his sources. The connection of Luke 22:21–23 to John 13:21–22, Luke 22:24–30 to John 13:1–20, and Luke 22:31–34 to John 13:37–38 suggests a traditional background to several Lucan differences.

MT Masoretic Text

[2] Marshall 1978: 808 notes the use of “hand” to portray kind intent (Gen. 21:18; Ps. 80:17 [80:18 MT]; 89:21 [89:22 MT]) or hostile intent (1 Sam. 18:21; 22:17; 24:12–13 [24:13–14 MT]; 2 Sam. 14:19). Lohse, TDNT 9:430, argues that “hand” refers to the sharing of the meal; it seems, however, that the allusion is negative, since “hand” is a metonymy for an action performed by someone.

[3] Marshall 1978: 808 assumes at least two sources. Fitzmyer 1985: 1408–9 mentions the transposition, but acknowledges the possibility of another source.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[4] Κατά gives the standard “according to which” these events occur: “As it has been determined.”

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[5] Μείζων (greatest) is comparative in form but probably superlative in context; BDF §244. But note that in 22:26–27 the same term is comparative again.

[6] While recognizing that the two accounts share some similarities, V. Taylor 1972: 61–64; Schürmann 1957: 63–99; Marshall 1978: 811; and Grundmann 1963: 400 note that Luke does not delay Marcan texts like this elsewhere.

[7] Fitzmyer 1985: 1407 sees “independent traditions” about such a discourse at the supper, though he also notes the conceptual parallelism with John. Plummer 1896: 500 speaks of the confusion about its location within the tradition, though he argues that such contention at the meal may have occurred when the disciples chose seats at the meal. But, he argues, such contention after the footwashing is unlikely. Of course, it may be that Jesus was addressing a contention from a previous occasion. Perhaps the tradition had it in this latter location as part of the summary of what was actually said at the meal, even though Jesus said it during the meal.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[8] Luke's use of a different verb provides clear evidence that he did not use the Zebedee incident.

[9] Marshall 1978: 812 wonders if ποιήσετε (you shall [not] do) is to be supplied; cf. BDF §480.5.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

10 Similar imagery is found in Matt. 20:1–16, but there the emphasis is on not despising the lateness of the younger's arrival. See also 1 Pet. 5:3, 5 and Phil. 2:5–11.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

11 Note contrastive δέ (but). Fitzmyer 1985: 1418 points out that Peter and John served by preparing the meal.

12 This verse is unique to Luke and reflects an independent source, which Fitzmyer 1985: 1412 calls L. Conceptual parallels are found in Mark 10:45 and Matt. 23:8–10; Marshall 1978: 813–14; Danker 1988: 349–50.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[13] Διατίθημι has the meaning “to assign” in Josephus, Antiquities 13.16.1 §407; BAGD 189–90 §3; BAA 381 §2; Behm, TDNT 2:104–6.

[14] This Father-Son motif occurs elsewhere in Luke 12:32; John 15:9; 17:18, 21–22; 20:21; Fitzmyer 1985: 1419. Jesus exercises executive authority here.

[15] Neyrey 1985: 24 sees Luke altering Matthew’s more futuristic emphasis, a conclusion that depends on the questionable assumption that only one event is in view.

[16] Marshall defends authenticity because the saying is dissimilar to teaching from the early church in its emphasis on the kingdom and Israel.

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

[17] For defense of the statement’s authenticity, see Witherington 1990: 140–41. It is hard to imagine the church’s inventing a saying like this where Judas is present.

[18] But so Fitzmyer 1985: 1419, who speaks of “reconstituted Israel,” and Marshall 1978: 817, who suggests an allusion to the Lord’s Supper, along with many others (those who see a tie to Israel include Ellis 1974: 256 and Danker 1988: 350–51). Dupont 1964: 388 correctly argues against this view. This expectation is continued in the question of Acts 1:6–8 and the remarks of Peter in Acts 3:18–21. Even later Petrine expectation of a new heaven and earth in 2 Pet. 3:10–14, which looks to the ultimate end of history, does not remove this intervening stage when God deals with Israel in bringing it again into the blessing reserved for God’s people.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

T. Ben. Testament of Benjamin

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

19 Luke uses δέομαι fifteen times, Matthew once (Matt. 9:38), and Mark and John not at all; Fitzmyer 1985: 1425; Marshall 1978: 821.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

20 Marshall 1978: 821 argues that ἐκλείπω (elsewhere in the NT at Luke 16:9; 23:45; Heb. 1:12) here means "to disappear," so the idea is that Peter's faith does not disappear. He avoids ultimate failure (cf. Col. 1:21–23). Nolland's paraphrase (1993b: 1072) of faith "drained away to nothing" gives the sense.

21 Against Bultmann 1963: 267 n. 2, who argues that the original tradition did not know of Peter's denial; but so correctly Fitzmyer 1985: 1425 and esp. Marshall 1978: 821.

22 Arndt 1956: 444 speaks of Peter's "again bec[oming] a believer," a most unfortunate way to express the force of the verb. Peter had this position all along. On turning, see Luke 17:4; Acts 3:19; 9:35; 11:21; 14:15; 15:19; 26:18, 20. On faith as faithfulness, see Luke 18:8; Acts 14:22; 16:5. Marshall 1978: 822 sees a possible allusion to 2 Sam. 15:20.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

23 Church tradition holds that Peter was crucified upside down (Acts of Peter 37–38 [Schneemelcher 1991–92: 2.315]), though this probably had not happened at the time of Luke's writing.

24 Marshall 1978: 823 notes that the vocabulary is Lucan, but that a redaction of Mark is not evident. Soards 1987: 39 overstates a detail here and argues that the Lucan Peter states his readiness before the prediction of his threefold denial, while the Marcan Peter says it is after the prediction. But the initial prediction in Mark and Matthew is of sheep scattered, not of the threefold denial. In addition, Peter has two refutations of Jesus' predictions, which serve as a bracket (Matt. 26:33, 35 = Mark 14:29, 31). Luke has only one remark (22:33), which comes first. A summary in Luke is evident, but a source cannot be excluded, since Luke 22:33 does not match the vocabulary of Matthew or Mark.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

25 Plummer 1896: 505 and Luce 1933: 335 make this connection, while Fitzmyer 1985: 1426 says that there is no need to do so. Nolland 1993b: 1073 suggests 2:30 a.m. for the initial crowing and notes that the reference in m. B. Qam. 7.7 forbidding chickens in Jerusalem is probably a later idealization and thus not a historical challenge to this detail.

26 Arndt 1956: 444 suggests that Jesus communicated that the denial would come before morning and before a rooster crowed twice that evening. Marshall 1978: 823 argues that this is a summary of Mark. Since most assume that Luke did not know Matthew, the question is raised whether a summary is present or whether Luke had another source. Matthean prioritists simply see Luke following Matthew here.

27 Soards argues that the passage creates a setting for understanding what happens in 22:49–51 and 23:32. But why not then see these elements as part of a source that referred to these unique details rather than see it as Luke's creation, especially given the numerous points in this section that hint at another source?

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NIV New International Version

RSV Revised Standard Version

28 The perfect passive participle γεγραμμένον (is written) refers to Scripture in Luke 18:31; 20:17; 2 Cor. 4:13. The reference is often plural, but here it is singular because it focuses on a specific passage; Plummer 1896: 506.

MT Masoretic Text

LXX Septuagint

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

29 Holtz 1968: 42 argues that λογίζομαι (to reckon) is a sign of LXX influence, claiming that it is not the normal rendering of Hebrew מָנָה (mānâ, to count, measure). The LXX rendering of מנה Niphal is, however, fairly evenly split: twice each by λογίζομαι and ἀριθμέω (to count) and once each by ἐξαριθμέω (to count) and ἀναρίθμητος (innumerable). The presence of λογίζομαι in Luke thus does not indicate his use of the LXX.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

30 Isa. 40:3–5 (cited in Luke 3:4–6) introduces a unit where the Servant idea refers to the coming of God's salvation. Isa. 61:1–2 (cited in Luke 4:16–19) speaks of an anointed Servant-like figure who brings salvation.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

31 Schwarz 1979: 22 suggests a misreading of the Aramaic term for "end," but Fitzmyer 1985: 1433–34 rejects this view.

m. Mishnah

Šab. Šabbat

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

32 Chrysostom's effort to interpret the sword as a reference to a slaughter knife fails; Michaelis, TDNT 4:524–27.

33 Plummer 1896: 507 and Marshall 1978: 827 see the idiom here (based on Gen. 45:28; Exod. 9:28; Deut. 3:26; 1 Kings 19:4; 1 Chron. 21:15; 1 Macc. 2:33). Doubt about its presence is expressed by Fitzmyer 1985: 1434 and Rengstorf, TDNT 3:295–96.

34 Plummer 1896: 507 and Arndt 1956: 445 note that this passage helped create the two-realms theory of papal power, one secular, the other spiritual. This doctrine was formalized by Boniface VIII in his 1302 Unam Sanctam, though it was discussed much earlier. This theory parallels the disciples' misunderstanding, but in a different direction. The disciples would use the sword to defend and gain power, but the papacy was trying to hold on to complete power.

OT Old Testament

Fitzmyer 1985: 1436, 1440 speaks of the "inner" Jesus, but is careful to warn that this passage should not be overly psychologized.

2 Most who take this latter approach speak of dependence on Mark, while Matthean prioritists favor dependence on Matthew. Fitzmyer 1985: 1437–39 vigorously defends Lucan reworking of Mark, citing numerous touches of Lucan vocabulary. See the exegesis for details. For defense of an additional source, see Nolland 1993b: 1081–82. Connections with John 16:6, 20–22; 18:2, 11 suggest traditional background.

[3] R. Brown 1994: 157 makes much of this omission, arguing that Luke omitted it to make Jesus less troubled in his inner psyche, a view that fits a heroic portrayal before a Greco-Roman audience. But Jesus' troubled soul is sufficiently communicated by the prayer itself (the point is enhanced if 22:43–44 is original; see the additional note). The contrast may not be as great as Brown suggests.

[4] Soards 1987: 96 mentions 22:39a–b, 40b, 42 as the minimum (he excludes 22:43–44 on textual grounds). Ernst 1977: 607 and Goulder 1989: 741–42 make the best case for additional sources. C. A. Evans 1990: 329 rejects the originality of 22:43–44. For discussion of how the prayer's contents could be known when the disciples are some distance away and asleep, see R. Brown 1994: 174. The Jesus Seminar rejects the historicity of the material on the premise that no one heard the prayer (Funk and Hoover 1993: 391). Brown calls such an objection to historicity a "low level" approach and suggests that the disciples need not have been asleep at this point, although later he suggests that they did not need to hear the prayer because they knew how Jesus prayed. Either explanation is possible. Brown regards the prayer and the event as certain (p. 234), but is less confident of knowledge of the exact words (p. 225). I prefer the view that the event drove the meaning and form of the tradition.

[5] See the exegesis of 19:29 for detail on the Mount of Olives. Luke 21:37 mentions Jesus' custom of lodging at the Mount of Olives; Preisker, TDNT 2:373.

[6] In Luke's Gospel such omissions are common: he does not mention Golgotha in 23:33, the Aramaic cry of Jesus in 23:45 (from Ps. 22:1), or the Aramaic instruction to Jairus's daughter in 8:54. An exception is Acts 1:19, which names and then translates Akeldama. In fact, Luke is consistently more concise throughout the passion narrative, so that a basic editorial choice may be present here beyond Aramaic concerns.

[7] Γίνομαι (to be, come to pass) plus ἐπί (to, upon) is limited to Luke among the Synoptics: Luke 3:2; 23:44; 24:22; Acts 21:35.

[8] The phrase enter into temptation occurred earlier in 8:13; 11:4; Ellis 1974: 257. On the conceptual similarity to 1 Pet. 5:8, see Seesemann, TDNT 6:31–32. On the temptation as entry into serious eschatological battle with Satan, see R. Brown 1994: 159–61, who ties the remark to Luke 11:4. Jesus must prepare for his great face-off with Satan.

[9] Jeremias, TDNT 2:935, likens the account to Elijah's withdrawal in 1 Kings 19:1, 5, 7, but this association is unlikely. Jesus is seeking God's will, while Elijah was depressed.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

10 On standing in prayer, see 1 Sam. 1:26; Matt. 6:5; Mark 11:25; Luke 18:11. On kneeling in prayer, see Mark 15:19 (the soldiers' mock homage to Jesus); Acts 7:60; 9:40; 20:36; 21:5; Eph. 3:14 (Nolland 1993b: 1083 suggests that people kneel for prayer in Acts when prayer is particularly intense). On separating from others for prayer or to go into God's presence, see Gen. 22:5; Exod. 19:7; 24:2, 14; and Lev. 16:17.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

LXX Septuagint

MT Masoretic Text

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

OT Old Testament

LXX Septuagint

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

LXX Septuagint

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

11 Martyrdom can include references to blood and sweat in Judaism (4 Macc. 6:6, 11; 7:8). R. Brown 1994: 189–90 compares it to emotion or tension before the start of an athletic event (1 Cor. 9:25; 1 Thess. 2:2; 4 Macc. 9:8; 11:20), but rejects the idea that Jesus feared death. But can death be separated from his sense of conflict here?

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

12 Fitzmyer 1985: 1444–45 rightly stresses the comparative force of ὡσεί (like), elsewhere used by Luke at Luke 3:23; 9:14 (twice), 28; 22:41, 59; 23:44; 24:11; Acts 1:15; 2:3, 41; 6:15; 10:3; 19:7, 34 (variant reading). On the medical possibilities, see R. Brown 1994: 185; Holzmeister 1938; Keen 1892; and Keen 1897.

13 On ἀπό as cause, see 19:3; 21:26; 24:41; Plummer 1896: 511.

NT New Testament

The last full miracle account was in 18:35–43 concerning the blind beggar of Jericho.

The authenticity of the healing, the kiss, and Jesus' short remark in Matt. 26:52 are frequently questioned (e.g., Bultmann 1963: 268–69 doubts the healing, but is uncertain about the kiss). But none of these elements need be doubted: the healing is bound up in how one sees Jesus' miracles in general; the kiss is a standard greeting of respect or acceptance (Gen. 33:4; 2 Sam. 20:9 [deceitfully]; Luke 7:45; 15:20; Rom. 16:16; R. Brown 1994: 255); and it is not unnatural for Jesus to make short comments.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

3 Stählin, TDNT 9:138, 140–41, notes that the kiss was probably seen as a disciple's greeting for his teacher. A simple custom has been transformed into a sign of betrayal. Marshall 1978: 835 notes "misused kisses" in Scripture (Gen. 27:26–27; 2 Sam. 15:5; Prov. 7:13; 27:6; esp. 2 Sam. 20:9) and Judaism (Sir. 29:5).

[4] This is Mark's only use of παραγίνομαι, which Luke uses eight times elsewhere, perhaps indicating his use of a source here.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[5] The style (ἰδόντες [seeing] at the start of a sentence) is frequent in Luke: 8:34, 47; 23:47; Marshall 1978: 836. The direct question with εἰ (if) is often used by Luke: e.g., Luke 13:23; Acts 1:6; 7:1; 19:2; 21:37; 22:25 (Fitzmyer 1985: 1448). But as Luke 22:67 shows, such a question can reflect parallels in the tradition. Luke is summarizing here.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

OT Old Testament

[6] On cutting off the ear, see Horst, TDNT 5:558, and Marshall 1978: 837. Daube 1960: 59–62 argues that such an act is an indirect insult to the master; cf. 2 Sam. 10:4–5.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[7] For the use of κατά meaning “after” in a distributive sense, see Luke 11:3; Fitzmyer 1985: 1451. Luke’s audience of chief priests fits these remarks. While it is not necessary to see the priests themselves carrying weapons, they are responsible for the tone of the arrest by whom they bring (against the implications of R. Brown 1994: 282, who thinks the detail raises a historical problem).

[8] The phrase to stretch out the hands looks like Jer. 6:12 but is merely idiomatic; Marshall 1978: 838; cf. John 7:30.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[1] Those arguing for an additional source are Fitzmyer 1985: 1456–58 (but not in 22:54–62); Creed 1930: 276 (maybe); Marshall 1978: 839–40, 845, 848; Grundmann 1963: 416, 418–19; Ernst 1977: 612–13, 616, 618; Nolland 1993b: 1092–93, 1098–99, 1104–5; and J. Green 1988: 276. Soards 1987: 100–120 argues for a mixture of tradition, Marcan rewriting, and Lucan rewriting. The classic study on this issue is V. Taylor 1972. Dissent about an extra source outside of some oral material comes from R. Brown 1994: 581–83. Most of Luke's changes (e.g., 22:63–65) reflect his style and vocabulary. But all that this shows is Luke's hand on his sources, not whether additional information existed. Brown sees the “game” in 22:64 as evidence of the presence of oral tradition (see the exegesis). But why limit it here, given evidence of sources throughout this material?

[2] Luke may know of the charge, however, since Acts 6:13–14 seems to suggest that Stephen’s remarks are like Jesus’.

[3] Luke is aware of this: Luke 9:22; 23:51; 24:20; Acts 7:52; 13:27–28.

[4] J. Green 1988: 282 calls Luke the most primitive form of the tradition. Fitzmyer 1985: 1456–59 is agnostic on historicity, saying that it is impossible to prove. The most detailed English study, Catchpole 1971: 153–220, gives the nod to Luke. For a more skeptical appraisal, giving seven reasons not to accept these accounts as authentic, see E. Sanders 1985: 296–99. For a detailed response to most of his objections, see Bock 1994b. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 392–93) rejects Jesus’ prediction (22:61) and the trial dialogue (22:67–69, 70) as inauthentic because 22:61 recalls 22:34 and the absence of disciples at the trial means that no witnesses were present. Jesus’ anticipation of Peter’s failure, however, reflects his knowledge of how pressure would cause Peter to wilt (the disciples’ past record of inconsistency might also contribute to Jesus’ expectation). The presence of people like Joseph of Arimathea at the trial makes an internal witness possible.

[5] Carefully surveying the historical background to the trial scenes and crucifixion in a Jewish setting, O. Betz 1982 argues for the historical coherence and integrity of the Marcan account as well as for its chronological priority (against Catchpole and Green in n. 4 above). He suggests that the temple charge, which Luke lacks, raised the issue of Jesus’ authority and, in the view of the Jews, made him a risk to begin a chain of events that ultimately would lead Rome to take the temple and Jerusalem (John 11:47–52). The messianic confession only highlighted the danger in their view. This could be called blasphemous in the sense that someone causing God's people to be handed over to the nations would be guilty of his name being blasphemed (11QTemple[a] 64.6–13). Betz's study raises one potential element that could have set up the decisive Jewish negative reaction to Jesus (for another, more direct cause, see the exegesis of 22:69). I am not certain, however, that it is as important to choose between the Lucan and Marcan accounts as other scholars seem prone to believe. Gospel writers could incorporate older source materials despite the age of their composition.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[6] Καί (also) probably alludes to John's being with Peter, as John 18:15 appears to suggest. Οὗτος (this one) is probably derogatory; Fitzmyer 1985: 1464. In Acts 4:13, Peter is again associated with Jesus, but his response is quite different!

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[7] That this remark is not gender neutral is seen by the use of γύναι (woman) in 22:57.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

8 Marshall 1978: 844 notes that elsewhere in his Gospel Luke does not add the title κύριος to Marcan material. Catchpole 1971: 168–69 argues against Lucan creation of this detail (pace Bultmann 1963: 168) and notes that στραφείς (turning) is common in Luke's special source (7:44; 9:55; 14:25; 23:28), although 7:9 and 10:23 may be Lucan or from a source shared with Matthew.

9 Matthean prioritists argue that Luke makes use of Matthew here.

10 It is difficult to know if Luke's σήμερον (today) refers to morning or late evening. On the time of the cock crowings, see Kosmala 1963–68. If an evening crowing is meant, it is about 3:00 a.m.; if morning, then it is sunrise.

11 J. Wenham 1978–79 questions the originality of all the Marcan references to two crowings (Mark 14:30, 68, 72). The external evidence, however, for omitting the two crowings is not strong: of the three Marcan mentions of the double cock-crowing, codex א omits all three (Mark 14:30, 68, 72), B omits one (14:68), and C* omits two (14:30, 72).

12 My translation makes the referent clear but obscures the problem of the pronoun.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[13] Stählin (TDNT 8:264–65) speaks of a game like “blind man’s bluff.” R. Brown 1994: 575 discusses three games involving covered or blindfolded eyes listed by Pollux, Onomasticon 9.113, 123, 129 (second century b.c.).

OT Old Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[14] This Matthean–Lucan agreement causes some commentators (e.g., Creed 1930: 277–78) so much trouble that they go to great lengths to explain away the agreement for fear it challenges Marcan priority.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

[15] Plummer 1896: 517 plausibly notes that the evening testimony would be repeated in the morning. The detail may reflect an additional Lucan source.

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

t. Tosepta

Sanh. Sanhedrin

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

16 Besides those already cited, other major works on Jesus' trial are Bammel 1970, Blinzler 1969, Sherwin-White 1963: 24–47, and Winter 1974. Catchpole, Blinzler, and Sherwin-White defend the historicity of much of the Lucan account. Fitzmyer 1985: 1466 also thinks a morning trial is most likely.

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

m. Mishnah

Mid. Middot

m. Mishnah

17 The terms for chief priests and scribes are in apposition to elders; BDF §444.4; Klostermann 1929: 220. Matt. 27:1 refers to the chief priests and elders of the people, while Mark 15:1 speaks of chief priests with elders and scribes.

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

18 The earliest extant literary reference to the Sanhedrin is 198 b.c., the date of a letter that Antiochus III the Great wrote after the Battle of Panion; Josephus, Antiquities 12.3.3 §138; Lohse, TDNT 7:862–66; Schürer 1973–87: 2.199–217. Josephus also uses the term βουλή (council) to describe the Sanhedrin (Jewish War 2.15.6 §331; 2.16.2 §336). R. Brown 1994: 340–57 stresses that there is only one such group at this time, the number of members usually being put at seventy-one (m. Sanh. 1.6, drawing on Num. 11:16).

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

19 The plural participle λέγοντες alludes to "their" council in 22:66 and views the question as an inquiry from the entire body.

20 Catchpole 1971: 193–94 argues that this difference reflects a non-Marcan source.

LXX Septuagint

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

21 It is important to note that only initial fulfillment is proclaimed here. There is more to come from this Davidic ruler (Acts 3:19–26). Luke shares the "already–not yet" scheme so prevalent in the NT. The verbal link of "set/sit" in Acts 2:30, 34 ties Ps. 132 to Ps. 110, while Peter's speech argues that Jesus is exercising the regal, executive authority inherent in the promise. The Spirit's distribution proves that Jesus is thus Lord and Christ (Acts 2:36). Jesus sits but is active from the side of God, initially fulfilling what he predicted at this trial.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

22 In the NT this figure is usually found in allusions to Ps. 110: Eph. 1:19–23; Col. 3:1; Heb. 1:3; 8:1; 10:12; 12:2; C. Schneider, TDNT 3:442.

23 On God's power, see Josh. 4:24; 1 Chron. 12:23; Wis. 7:25; 2 Macc. 3:24, 38; 9:8; 1QM 1.11, 14; 4.4, 12; 6.2, 6; 10.5; Eph. 1:20–22; 1 Pet. 3:22; Fitzmyer 1985: 1467; Grundmann, TDNT 4:540.

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

m. Mishnah

Sanh. Sanhedrin

[24] It is important to recall that the Jewish leadership simply wanted an excuse to take Jesus before Rome, so Rome could convict and execute him. Jesus' claim to be Messiah was all they needed to accomplish this (23:1–5). That charge became key later (23:2, 38). They got more than they bargained for in what Jesus said here.

LXX Septuagint

[25] The dispute caused by Rabbi Akiva's pronouncement indicates the nature of the debate and the view that no one sits or goes directly into God's presence.

[26] 1 Chron. 17:16 is not an exception to this belief. David's sitting before (not by) the Lord alludes to a worshipful dialogue involving submission, and the nonheavenly scene does not contrast Jesus' claims. The language is less direct than Jesus' explicit claim. Only Moses (Ezekiel the Tragedian) and the Son of Man (1 Enoch 51.3; 61.8) might be exceptions.

MT Masoretic Text

OT Old Testament

[27] Hooker's efforts (1967: 167–71) to argue that riding on the clouds refers to Jesus' exaltation fail on many counts. Seven objections are noted in Bock 1987: 141–42, the most obvious being that (1) an image of Jesus simultaneously sitting by God and riding the clouds seems absurd (unless this is "throne chariot" imagery like Ezek. 1, in which case heavenly rule or return language is present, not the resurrection); (2) Dan. 7 was never used as an ascension proof-text in the NT; and (3) the ascension image is the reverse of Dan. 7 and the apocalyptic discourse, which describe a coming to earth.

28 This background to the blasphemy charge and the real possibility of ancient sources show that E. Sanders's basic objections (1985: 296–99) do not merit acceptance. His remaining key objections related to the timing of the trials were dealt with in the exegesis of 22:54, 66. For a full response, see Bock 1994b.

29 E. Sanders 1990: 65 argues that this distinction renders suspect that Jesus was charged because of this reply. On the Son-of-Man title, see excursus 6 and Bock 1991c.

30 Marshall 1965–66: 347 and A. Moore 1966: 184–87 answer other objections to authenticity. Fitzmyer 1985: 1459 refuses to make a judgment on historicity, calling it impossible to reach a verdict. R. Brown 1994: 514–15 says that the conceptually parallel Mark 14:62 "may be close to the mindset and style of Jesus himself." Though he believes there is no way to determine this for certain (pp. 506–7), the remarks fit with authenticity. Brown even adds the argument that Mark's "you will see" statement is so ambiguous that it is unlikely to be created by the church.

31 Πάντες is again peculiar to Luke: 7:35; 19:37; 20:18; Plummer 1896: 518.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

32 On garment rending, see R. Brown 1994: 517–18, esp. n. 2. On blasphemy, see R. Brown 1994: 521–23 and Bock 1994b, both of whom argue that first-century blasphemy need not involve uttering the divine name.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

[1] Bultmann 1963: 282 calls Pilate's declaration of Jesus' innocence an "apologetic" motif designed to acquit Rome. But the execution of an admittedly innocent person is no acquittal. Rome does not come out well here. The apologetic motif is lacking. The remark is historical. Pilate wished to placate the masses.

[2] This motive is questionable, since such abruptness did not stop Luke from launching right into a question in 22:67. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1994: 394) takes a similar position, with a more skeptical twist, arguing that the charges are simply created from Scripture in anticipation of 23:38. But a sociopolitical cause for Jesus' crucifixion is a historical certainty. Enough people were present at such a hearing that summaries of its content could become available.

[3] On Pilate, see the exegesis of 3:1. Tacitus, Annals 15.44, mentions Pilate's eventual decision; Fitzmyer 1985: 1474. Kinman 1991 considers the setting to be the assize of the Roman governor; Pilate's presence fits this custom. R. Brown 1994: 363–72 has a detailed discussion of the issue of capital punishment, noting that Jews had no authority to execute, except perhaps those who entered prohibited sections of the temple or committed adultery (John 7:53–8:11; m. Sanh. 7.2). John 18:13 thus fits the legal situation of Jesus' time. On Pilate's career in current literature, see R. Brown 1994: 694–705.

[4] Fitzmyer 1985: 1474 and Delling, TDNT 6:279, note that twenty-four uses of πλῆθος (company) are in Luke–Acts, with only one in Mark and none in Matthew. The combination ἅπαν (or πᾶν) τὸ πλῆθος (the whole company) is found in Luke 1:10; 8:37; 19:37; Acts 15:12; 25:24; Marshall 1978: 852. The idea of leading Jesus to Pilate shows the use of ἄγω for taking a criminal somewhere (Matt. 10:18; Josephus, Jewish War 6.5.3 §303; BAGD 14 §2; BAA 25 §2).

[5] This filling out of detail is common in Luke; e.g., in 23:46 he will supply the content of the second cry from the cross (using Ps. 31:5 [31:6 MT]), an event that Mark 15:37 = Matt. 27:50 only alludes to. For the view that Matthew and Mark present the conclusion of the evening trial or merely recapitulate here, see R. Brown 1994: 631–32. Regardless of whether one sees a separate morning trial, the final decision came in the early morning.

[6] On the syntax of ἤρξαντο (they began), which Luke often uses to speak of a fresh reaction, see 4:21; 5:21; 7:15; 12:45; 13:25; 19:37; Plummer 1896: 520; Grundmann 1963: 422. Κατηγορέω (to accuse) is used elsewhere by Luke at Luke 6:7; 23:10, 14; Acts 22:30; 24:2, 8, 13, 19; 25:5, 11, 16; 28:19; Büchsel, TDNT 3:637.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[7] The title βασιλεύς dominates the passion accounts: Matt. 27:11, 29, 37, 42; Mark 15:2, 9, 12, 18, 26, 32; Luke 23:2, 3, 37, 38; John 18:33, 37 (twice), 39; 19:3, 12, 14, 15 (twice), 19, 21 (twice). In Josephus, Antiquities 14.3.1 §36; 15.10.5 §373; 16.10.2 §311, it refers to various Hasmoneans or Herod the Great. Such an independent kingship could be seen as a threat to Rome.

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[8] Fitzmyer 1985: 1475 notes that the title King of the Jews was bestowed on Herod by an Essene named Manaēmos; Josephus, Antiquities 15.10.5 §373.

[9] Danker 1988: 364 notes the crowd's fickleness in Luke, citing 8:4–15; 9:41; 11:24–30; 12:13–15, 54–59.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

10 Luke uses Ἰουδαία for either the smaller specific region (Luke 2:4; Acts 1:8; 8:1) or the broad area (Luke 1:5; 7:17; Acts 2:9; 10:37; 11:1, 29); Plummer 1896: 521.

1 Ἐπιγινώσκω is frequently used by Luke with the sense "to thoroughly ascertain"; Luke 7:37; Acts 19:34; 22:29; 24:11; 28:1; Plummer 1896: 521. Here it almost has the force of "to discover."

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament: Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources, by J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan (repr. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980)

[2] Fitzmyer 1985: 1479 calls ἀναπέμπω Lucan, but since three of its five NT uses are in this one pericope (elsewhere Acts 25:21 and Philem. 12), the usage is too concentrated and too rare to attribute to Luke. On the Roman legalities, see R. Brown 1994: 764–65.

[3] "In those days" is a frequent Lucan expression: Luke 1:39; 6:12; 24:18; Acts 1:15; 11:27; Fitzmyer 1985: 1481. On the racial origins of the Herodians as half-Jewish, see Josephus, Antiquities 14.15.2 §403. On Herod's presence in Jerusalem during a feast, see Josephus, Antiquities 18.5.3 §122.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[4] Several terms in this verse are used frequently by Luke (Neyrey 1985: 78; Marshall 1978: 855–56): ἱκανὸς χρόνος (a long time; Luke 8:27; 20:9; Acts 8:11; 14:3; 27:9) and γίνεται σημεῖον (a sign occurs; Acts 2:43; 4:16, 22, 30; 5:12; 8:13; 14:3).

[5] Calling the trial a literary "nonevent," Tyson 1986: 133–35 says that Luke's description of Herod is "pale." Herod is not an opponent here, but a curious bystander, maybe even a frustrated one. Ἐπηρώτα in 23:9 is a conative imperfect: "he tried to question"; BDF §326.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1479 calls ἀναπέμπω Lucan, but since three of its five NT uses are in this one pericope (elsewhere Acts 25:21 and Philem. 12), the usage is too concentrated and too rare to attribute to Luke. On the Roman legalities, see R. Brown 1994: 764–65.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

6 Marshall 1978: 856 notes Hooker's view (1967: 87–89) that this is not a Lucan creation of a literary detail to make the point about Isaiah.

7 Danker 1988: 355–56 cites Diogenes Laertius 3.19 and 9.115 for occasions where the accused is silent. See also Wis. 8:12; Ignatius, Ephesians 15.1 and Magnesians 8.2; and Josephus, Antiquities 15.7.5 §235 (R. Brown 1994: 772).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

8 This is the only NT use of ἐξουθενέω with the meaning “to treat with contempt” (BAGD 277 §3; BAA 562 §3). The citation of Ps. 118:22 in Acts 4:11 also shows Jesus as the righteous, rejected sufferer. The other verb, ἐμπαίζω (to mock, make fun of; BAGD 255; BAA 516), is used in the passion prediction of Luke 18:32 (= Matt. 20:19 = Mark 10:34) and often in the passion narrative: Matt. 27:29, 31= Mark 15:20; Matt. 27:41 = Mark 15:31; Luke 22:63; 23:36.

9 The terms used to describe the clothing are infrequent in the NT: ἐσθής (clothes; BAGD 312; BAA 632; elsewhere in the NT only at Luke 24:4; Acts 1:10; 10:30; 12:21; James 2:2–3 [three times]; cf. Mark 15:17), λαμπρός (bright; BAGD 465 §3; BAA 946 §3; elsewhere in the NT only at Acts 10:30; James 2:2–3 [twice]; Rev. 15:6; 18:14; 19:8; 22:1, 16), and περιβάλλω (to clothe; BAGD 646 §1bδ; BAA 1302 §1bδ; twenty-three times in the NT; e.g., John 19:2). The syntax is also disputed: does mockery occur by clothing him or is he clothed and sent back to Pilate? Either way, the fine clothes are placed on Jesus in jest. The latter option is more likely grammatically since participles are not normally subordinated to other participles (R. Brown 1994: 773–75). Brown also notes numerous Lucan touches in 23:11–12, indicating that Luke summarized here.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

NT New Testament

LXX Septuagint

MT Masoretic Text

NT New Testament

10 On Sejanus, see R. Brown 1994: 693–94, 1376. His anti-Semitism is recorded by Philo, Embassy to Gaius 24 §§160–61 and Flaccus 1 §1. Brown doubts Philo's account, arguing that he transferred blame from Tiberius to Sejanus for political reasons. But Sejanus carried too much power in a.d. 26–31 to pass responsibility to a largely absentee Tiberius (who was sensitive to Jews, as noted above).

OT Old Testament

1 On this custom, both generally and during Passover, see Nolland 1993b: 1129–30; the exegesis of 23:25; and excursus 11, objection 6.

For example, Büchele must omit certain verses to achieve symmetry (e.g., 23:33–34, 44–46). In addition, both thieves did not mock Jesus (this unit is positive, not negative).

NT New Testament

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LXX Septuagint

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[3] Examples of Lucan style and vocabulary in the verse include πρός with a verb of speaking, καὶ ἰδού, ἐνώπιον, and probably the forensic use of ἀνακρίνω; R. Brown 1994: 791 and Nolland 1993b: 1127.

[4] Αὐτῷ (by him) is the only NT example of the dative of agent, which is good Attic Greek; BDF §191.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[5] Παιδεύω here refers to flogging; BAGD 604 §2bγ; BAA 1222 §2bγ; elsewhere in the NT with this meaning only at Luke 23:22; cf. 1 Kings 12:11, 14; 2 Chron. 10:11, 14. Mark 15:15 uses φραγελλώσας for the whipping before the crucifixion. Sherwin-White 1963: 27–28 distinguishes three types of flogging: fustes, flagella, and verbera. He may be right that Luke refers to fustigatio in terms of Pilate's initial intention, but when he gave Jesus over, the verberatio would be administered for crucifixion. R. Brown 1994: 851 questions the value of these distinctions and whether Luke's audience would know them. Regardless, the punishment came with the crucifixion.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

[6] Στάσις means "rebellion or uprising" elsewhere at Mark 15:7; Luke 23:25; Acts 19:40 (elsewhere in the NT at Acts 15:2; 23:7, 10; 24:5; Heb.

9:8; BAGD 764 §2; BAA 1526 §2). This is the only NT expression of periphrasis with ἦν (was) and an aorist participle; BDR §355.1; BDF §355.1; Plummer 1896: 526 (although א* in John 18:30 also has this construction).

[7] Θέλων with an infinitive means "wishing to …"; 10:29; 23:8; Marshall 1978: 860.

[8] Σταυρόω literally means "to fix a stake"; BAGD 765; BAA 1528; elsewhere used by Luke in Luke 23:23, 33; 24:7; 20; Acts 2:36; 4:10. Luke uses σταυρός (cross) as a figure for rejection in Luke 9:23; 14:27.

[9] Fitzmyer 1985: 1491 notes Luke's similar though distinct use of double vocatives in 10:41; 13:34; 22:31.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[10] Josephus calls crucifixion the worst of deaths; Jewish War 7.6.4 §203; see also Antiquities 2.5.4 §77; 11.6.11 §§261, 266–67; 13.14.2 §380; 17.10.10 §295; Jewish War 1.4.5–6 §§93–98; 5.11.1 §§449–51. For ancient non-Jewish sources, see J. Schneider, TDNT 7:573 n. 15. Among the key texts are Herodotus 1.128; 3.132, 159 (who ties the punishment to the Medes and the Persians); Tacitus, History 2.72; Cicero, Against Verres 2.5.63–66 §§163–70 (who calls it "a cruel and disgusting penalty"); The Digest of Justinian 48.19.28 (who sees it as the harshest punishment); Justin Martyr, Dialogue with Trypho 91.2 and Apology 1.13; Irenaeus, Against Heresies 2.24.4; and Origen, Against Celsus 6.10; Seneca, To Marcia on Consolation 20.3; R. Brown 1994: 948.

LXX Septuagint

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

m. Mishnah

Šab. Šabbat

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

11 Ἐπικρίνω can have the technical meaning “to issue a sentence” (2 Macc. 4:47; 3Macc. 4:2; Fitzmyer 1985: 1492; Plummer 1896: 527), although it was also used of determining whether a person was fit for military service or exempt from a poll tax (MM 240).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[1] This passage may have been modified by later Christian writers.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[2] Stählin, TDNT 3:152–53, thinks that θρηνέω indicates “freewill” wailing, not professional mourners. Determining this force for the term is not, of course, merely a matter of the words used but of the historical, literary context.

b. Babylonian Talmud

Sanh. Sanhedrin

[3] The phrase θυγατέρες Ἰερουσαλήμ appears several times in the LXX: Song 1:5; 2:7; 3:5, 10; 5:8, 16; 8:4; Ps. Sol. 2.13; BAGD 365 §2d; BAA 741 §2d; cf. Jer. 9:20 [9:19 MT] and 2 Sam. 1:24.

[4] Marshall 1978: 864 argues that this Semitic idiom means “do not weep so much for me as for yourselves,” which is similar in force to 10:20.

[5] Πλήν (but [rather]) signals a strong contrast like ἀλλά (but); BDF §449.1; BDR §449.1.3; Matt. 26:39 = Luke 22:42.

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[6] Luce 1933: 349 sees an allusion to Isa. 54:1, but since the images are so different (i.e., in Isaiah the barren will bear a child), this is probably not correct; correctly Marshall 1978: 864 (cf. Luke 1:7, 25; Gal. 4:27) and R. Brown 1994: 923, who cites parallels from Lam. 4:4; Wis. 3:13; Eccles. 4:2–3; 2 Bar. 10.6–10 and argues that Luke received the saying from a sayings source.

[7] Βουνός (hill) is rare in the NT, both times being tied to an OT text: Luke 3:5 (Isa. 40:4) and Luke 23:30 (Hos. 10:8); BAGD 146; BAA 292; BDR §126.1b.5. In contrast, the synonymous ὄρος (mountain) appears sixty-three times in the NT.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[8] Marshall 1978: 865 argues that this motif could be parallel to a desire to hide from catastrophe (as in Rev. 6:15–16). The Lucan context, however, is not one of relief, and it is not clear that the request in Revelation is any different. What those in Revelation wish to avoid is the wrath of the one on the throne. They would rather die than face his judgment; Rev. 9:6.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

[9] Tiede 1988: 415 is close to view 2, arguing that if the nation does this atrocity now, surely they will pay for it later.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

MT Masoretic Text

10 For the contrast between judgment of the righteous and the sinner, see Prov. 11:31; 1 Pet. 4:17–18; SB 2:263; Gen. Rab. 65.22 on 27:27.

NT New Testament

11 Filling in details of this story became popular in some circles. In the Old Latin, these two bandits are variously named Ioathas and Maggatras (Luke 23:32), Zoathan and Chammatha (Mark 15:27), or Zoathan and Camma (Matt. 27:38) (Plummer 1896: 530), while the Acts of Pilate 9 records their names as Dysmas and Gestas (Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.512). Still other traditions speak of Jesus falling, meeting Mary, and speaking with a women named Veronica (called Bernice in Acts of Pilate 8), who testified before Pilate because Jesus had healed her issue of blood (cf. Luke 8:43–48). See also the Arabic Infancy Gospel 23 (R. Brown 1994: 969; Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.460).

12 Marshall 1978: 867 suggests that Luke's lack of this detail argues for the presence of another source. On the details of the practice of crucifixion, see the exegesis of 23:21. A Jewish victim of crucifixion was recently found at Giv‹at ha-Mivtar (Nolland 1993b: 1145; bibliography on pp. 1140–41).

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

13 The name Calvary comes from calvaria, the Latin translation of κρανίον; Plummer 1896: 531; Geldenhuys 1951: 613. R. Brown 1994: 938–

40 discusses the location of Golgotha and decides for the traditional location associated now with the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in what is called the Christian quarter of Jerusalem. Nolland 1993b: 1145 expresses less certainty about the locale.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

14 Jesus' tone differs from the "martyr" parallels in 2 Macc. 5–6 (where the intercession is a declaration of the sufferer's righteousness and faithfulness) and 7:14, 17, 19 (where the condemned promise God's vengeance on the executioner). On the other hand, some Jewish texts appeal to mercy for all, even sinners (Jon. 4:11; T. Ben. 4.2; Philo, Flaccus 2 §7; R. Brown 1994: 974), a merciful attitude that also appears in the church fathers (Ignatius, Ephesians 10.2–3; Justin Martyr, Apology 1.14).

15 In Martyrdom and Ascension of Isaiah 5.14, Isaiah quietly endures being sawed in two. Other ancients quietly accepting death are Socrates (Plato, Apology 39c) and Stoic philosophers (Epictetus 1.19.8); see Daube 1961: 61–65.

MT Masoretic Text

Jub. Jubilees

16 Plummer 1896: 532 notes that in the entire account four groups engage in different activities: the people watch, the leaders sneer, the soldiers mock, and the robber blasphemes. Two people from a later subunit could be added to this list: a robber exercises faith and a centurion observes injustice.

LXX Septuagint

LXX Septuagint

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

17 Luke's silence about the temple here is similar to his previous silence about the same charge in 22:54–71.

LXX Septuagint

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

18 Ἐμπαίζω is used elsewhere by Luke at 14:29; 18:32; 22:63; 23:11; BAGD 255 §1; BAA 516. Mark 15:31 = Matt. 27:41 uses ἐμπαίζω of the rulers' ridicule, which Luke describes in 23:35 with ἐκμυκτηρίζω.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament: Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources, by J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan (repr. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

MT Masoretic Text

MT Masoretic Text

1QH Thanksgiving Hymns/Psalms (Hôdāyôt)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

19 Such notations by the state are common: Josephus, Antiquities 15.8.1 §272 (inscriptions that commemorate Caesar and present trophies of war); Suetonius, Caligula 32.2; Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History 5.1.44. In these other texts, the inscription is borne by the criminal or by someone in front of the cross (Nolland 1993b: 1148). Pilate's inscription stands behind the initials INRI seen in many famous paintings of this scene. INRI is an acronym for Iesus Nazarenus Rex Iudaeorum (Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews), wording that parallels John's Gospel.

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

20 Noting overlaps of Lucan style, R. Brown 1994: 1001 rejects the presence of a source, though he acknowledges that perhaps the paradise saying goes back to Jesus. This view fits Brown's consistent tendency to minimize sources in the material, often limiting himself to Mark. But given the nature of this event and its importance, as well as the orality of the culture, it is unlikely that Luke's sources were limited to Mark.

21 In some church tradition, the confessing criminal's name is given as Dismas or Dysmas; Acts of Pilate 10.2 (Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.512); Fitzmyer 1985: 1509. See n. 11.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

22 This is the only place where Jesus addresses a single person with ἀμὴν λέγω, though he likes the expression: 4:24; 12:37; 18:17, 29; 21:32; Plummer 1896: 535.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

1 Enoch 1 (Ethiopic) Enoch

2 Enoch 2 (Slavonic) Enoch

T. Levi Testament of Levi

T. Dan Testament of Dan

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

23 On the related idea of the third heaven (οὐρανός), see BAGD 594 §1e and BAA 1202–3 §1e.

NT New Testament

RSV Revised Standard Version

24 Luke uses ὡσεί (about) frequently to show approximate time; Luke 3:23; 9:14 (twice), 28; 22:41, 59; 24:11; cf. Acts 2:15; 3:1; 10:3, 9; 23:23). Ἤδη (already) is also frequent: Matthew uses it seven times, Mark eight times, Luke ten times, elsewhere in the NT thirty-six times; Plummer 1896: 536; Untergassmair 1980: 85 n. 372.

25 There is no conflict with John 19:14, which refers to Jesus' standing before Pilate at the sixth hour, since John likely reckons the day as starting at midnight.

MT Masoretic Text

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

26 R. Brown 1994: 1040–42 discusses the eclipse options and finds none persuasive. He sees Luke creatively tying these details together, but in other cases where the Synoptics overlap Brown is less skeptical, so it is uncertain why he is hesitant here. Whether we have an eclipse or, more likely, some other form of darkening like a thick cloud, it is the timing of this event with Jesus' death that creates the sign.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[27] For example, the sun turned away from Mark Antony's enemies (Josephus, Antiquities 14.12.3 §309), and many heavenly portents came with the temple's destruction (Josephus, Jewish War 6.5.3 §§288–300).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[28] Schneider argues that the ripping of the outer curtain would have had no significance, but the ripping of any temple curtain would surely be important. Regardless of the location, it suggests an opening up of access to God.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

29 Josephus, Jewish War 6.5.3 §§293–96, notes the mysterious opening of the temple doors at midnight on a Passover (but he doesn't give the year). T. Ben. 9.3 and T. Levi 10.3 refer to a rending of the temple curtain, but these references may be Christian interpolations; see M. De Jonge 1960: 222–26 (repr. pp. 233–37).

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

30 Φωνὴ μεγάλη (great cry) occurs frequently in the NT (e.g., Acts 16:28; Mark 1:26; Rev. 14:18). Luke often has cognate constructions (2:8, 9; 7:29; 12:50; 17:24; 22:15).

MT Masoretic Text

31 John records four fulfillments of Scripture in Jesus' final hours: John 19:24 (Ps. 22:18 [22:19 MT]), John 19:28 (Ps. 22:15 [22:16 MT]), John 19:36 (Exod. 12:46), and John 19:37 (Zech. 12:10); Neyrey 1985: 147.

MT Masoretic Text

32 Παρατίθημι (to give over) occurs elsewhere of divine protection at Luke 12:48; Acts 14:23; 20:32; 1 Pet. 4:19; Ps. 31:5 [30:6 LXX]; cf. 1 Tim. 1:18; 2 Tim. 2:2; Tob. 1:14; 4:1, 20; 1 Macc. 9:35; BAGD 623 §2bβ; BAA 1258–59 §2bβ. The reference to Jesus' πνεῦμα (spirit) indicates his person; BAGD 674 §2; BAA 1355–56 §2; Matt. 27:50 = John 19:30; Luke 8:55; Acts 7:59; Rom. 1:4; 1 Tim. 3:16; Heb. 12:23; 1 Pet. 3:18–19; Rev. 11:11.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

b. Babylonian Talmud

Ber. Berakot

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

33 Matthew uses δοξάζω (to praise) four times, Mark once, and John twenty-three times. Of Luke's fourteen uses, five are in Acts, five are in unique Lucan material (2:20; 4:15; 7:16; 13:13; 17:15), one in agreement with Mark (5:26), and three in pericopes parallel to Mark but Mark lacks the term (5:25; 18:43; 23:47); Untergassmair 1980: 91 n. 408; Plummer 1896: 539.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

LXX Septuagint

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

34 Γνωστός (acquaintance, friend; BAGD 164 §1b; BAA 328 §1b) occurs elsewhere with this sense at Luke 2:44 and John 18:15–16 and in the LXX at 2 Kings 10:11; Ps. 30:12 [31:11 Engl.]; 54:14 [55:13 Engl.]; 87:9, 19 [88:8, 18 Engl.]; cf. 38:12.

35 The present participle συνακολουθοῦσαι (those who are following), given this context, suggests that they are still following him. Galilee is again mentioned as an important reference point in Jesus' ministry; Luke 4:14, 44 (variant reading); 17:11; 23:5; 24:6; Acts 10:37; 13:31; Untergassmair 1980: 103.

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

36 Codex D contains an expansive reading: “Turning to the Lord he said to him, ‘Remember me in the day of your coming.’ Jesus replied to the one [criminal] who rebuked [his fellow], ‘Be of good cheer.’”

NRSV New Revised Standard Version

NIV New International Version

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

37 Fitzmyer 1985: 1518 notes, however, that Thucydides 2.28 records an eclipse at new moon.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

[1] Luce 1933: 354 speaks of Mark plus L. Marshall 1978: 878 and V. Taylor 1972: 99–103 say that special Lucan material may appear in 23:55–56. Ernst 1977: 640–41 holds that it is 23:50c, 51a, 53b, 54b. Nolland 1993b: 1162–63 holds to 23:53c and perhaps 23:52–54. Grundmann 1963: 436 holds to 23:50, 51a, 53b, 54–56. Fitzmyer 1985: 1523 holds to 23:53c, 56a. Though it could be debated whether certain verses derive from another source, Luke seems to have had access to additional material, against R. Brown 1994: 1226.

[2] Even Bultmann 1963: 274 accepts the general tenor of the account, except for the women witnesses, which he suspects has an apologetic flavor. In a culture that did not regard women's testimony as significant, there is no motive to create such a detail—in fact, the temptation would be to suppress it! Bultmann also sees Matthew's guards as an apologetic addition, but guarding the tomb of a controversial figure is not unusual.

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[3] Similar parenthetical syntax is found in Luke 2:25; 7:29–30; 8:41; Acts 17:24; 18:25.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

[4] A figure like Joseph shows the complexity of Luke's view of the people of God and of the Jews. Many in the nation reject Jesus and the leadership is especially responsible, so that the nation is judged (Luke 19:41–44; 21:20–22; 23:28–30), yet many believe and become part of God's continuing work (Acts 2:40–44; 15:8). This latter group eventually develops into its own institution (e.g., the church with leaders like the Ephesian elders) and is the true people of God (e.g., the use of Amos 9 in Acts 15). The message always goes to the temple and synagogue in hopes that more Jews will respond. Luke never gives up hope of finding a remnant in and a future for Israel.

[5] The church tradition about the Jewish burial could be read as causative: the Jews caused the death that required Jesus' burial.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[6] On general burial customs and for a good bibliography, see Nolland 1993b: 1165.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[7] While much speculation centers around the Shroud of Turin, recent tests date it to the fourteenth century (when it first surfaced), thus making it inauthentic. See Fitzmyer 1985: 1527–29 for the history of the shroud.

m. Mishnah

›Ohol. ›Oholot

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

CD Damascus Document

8 In the Gospel of Peter (Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.223, 224), ἐπιφώσκω (to break, shine forth) indicates the approach of Sabbath (2.5) or the dawn of day (9.34–35); BAGD 304; BAA 617; elsewhere in the NT only at Matt. 28:1; Marshall 1978: 881. Lohse, TDNT 7:20 n. 159, sees an allusion to the dawning of the evening star, a view that Plummer 1896: 543 rejects.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

9 John 19:39 also mentions Nicodemus, but Luke notes only Joseph.

10 The main argument for Creed's view is the mention of "other women with them" (24:10), which may refer to those who reported the women's story or to the larger group of women who followed Jesus as disciples (8:1–3).

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

m. Mishnah

Šab. Šabbat

m. Mishnah

Šab. Šabbat

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

[1] Nolland 1993b: 1177–78 assesses Meynet's 1978 proposal that a substantial portion of the chapter (i.e., 24:4–47) is chiastically structured around two themes: (1) Jesus is alive and (2) resurrection is announced by Jesus and the Scriptures. Nolland also has a full survey of the tradition-historical discussion and the history of the religious analogies (pp. 1177–88).

[2] Fitzmyer 1985: 1533–34 sees apologetic accretions in Matthew's reference to the guards and the chief priest's bribes. These pericopes do not, however, indicate ahistoricity; they simply clarify why one should not doubt the claims of Jesus' resurrection. Just because they are apologetic does not mean that they are fabricated.

[3] C. F. Evans 1990: 886 notes that an immediate postresurrection appearance in bodily form had no precedent in Hellenistic thought or Judaism—not even for Messiah.

NT New Testament

[4] The Gospel of Peter 9.35–10.42 (Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.224–25) gives details about the resurrection, an expansion that demonstrates the differences between canonical and noncanonical accounts and indicates what happened to the tradition in the postapostolic period; cf. also Barn. 15.9. The glorified body is not a mere return to the former earthly existence (i.e., like the resurrection of Lazarus), but represents a transcendent form of real existence (1 Cor. 15:35–49, esp. 15:42–44). On the resurrection as event, see Stein 1977 and Craig 1980.

OT Old Testament

[5] On these differences, see the exegesis of 24:1, 5–6. Though my approach to correlation differs from Westcott's proposed order (1908: 2.335–36) of resurrection events, his list shows that the accounts need not be contradictory.

[1] This point is valid only if Mark's longer ending is not original.

[2] Plummer 1896: 547 points out that Mark has only one figure in all three cases of numerical variation in the Gospels: the Gerasene demoniac(s), the blind man (men) at Jericho, and the angel(s) at the tomb. In Acts 1:10, two "men" are present.

[3] The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 397–98) illustrates a more detached approach, arguing that "words ascribed to Jesus after his death are not subject to historical verification" and that claims that Jesus spoke after his death are "beyond the limits of historical assessment." The variation in location and wording thus lead the seminar to print Jesus' reported promise (24:7) in black type. This total skepticism seems to emerge from the seminar's definitional stance and an unwillingness to allow for any degree of summary reporting in the Gospel accounts. For a good attempt to explain both the Galilean and the Jerusalem appearances, see Nolland 1993b: 1181.

[4] Note the μὲν … δέ contrast: on the one hand the women rested (23:56), but on the other, first thing on Sunday, they went to care for Jesus (24:1).

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

[5] On ὄρθρος (dawn), see BAGD 580; BAA 1176; elsewhere in the NT at John 8:2 and Acts 5:21; cf. Gospel of Peter 12.50 (= Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.225); T. Jos. 8.1; 1 Enoch 100.2. On βαθύς (deep), see BAGD 130 §2; BAA 263 §2; elsewhere in the NT at John 4:11; Acts 20:9; Rev. 2:24.

MT Masoretic Text

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

[6] The only evidence that the early church tried to harmonize these accounts is the longer ending of Mark, which also mentions an initial appearance to Mary. But this Marcan text succeeds only in making the relationship of the Synoptics to John more complicated, since it is not clear how John 20:11–18 fits. Why would Mary need a later appearance by Jesus (John 20:11–18) if he had appeared to her earlier (Mark 16:9)? Since the longer ending of Mark is textually suspect, not much weight can be given to it (if it is an addition, it provides evidence of a later witness in the church that confirms the key initial role of Mary).

[7] The issue surrounding the seal in Matt. 27:66 is whether it was designed to prevent anyone from ever entering the tomb or if it was a way to assure that no one got in without approval. The women might not have known that the tomb was sealed and that they might be stopped. As it was, Matthew notes that supernatural events prevented the guards from halting their visit. Of course, none of the accounts puts all these details together as I have just described them. But the scenario is not improbable, especially if the women were unaware of the guards' presence.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

8 Dillon 1978: 21–22, who sees Lucan editorial work throughout the resurrection narrative, accepts an outside source here. Luce 1933: 358 says, "Very little in these verses (3–5) … suggests that Luke is using Mark." Marshall 1978: 885 argues that the Johannine parallel shows the traditional point of contact.

9 Kittel, TDNT 1:84 n. 67, sees the white robes as not descriptive of clothing but characterizing the angel's transcendent glory.

10 Plummer 1896: 548 notes that most NT uses of ἔμφοβος (BAGD 257; BAA 520) are Lucan: Luke 24:37; Acts 10:4; 24:25; Rev. 11:13; cf. Luke 1:12, 29–30; 2:9. On the genitive absolute with an accusative object, see BDR §423.2.8.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

11 Ζάω (to live) is an important NT term. The key Lucan uses are Luke 24:23; Acts 1:3; 25:19; cf. Mark 16:11; Luke 10:28; 15:32; 20:38; Acts 9:41; Gal. 2:20; Heb. 7:25; 1 Pet. 3:18 (ζῳοποιέω, to make alive); Rev. 1:18; Marshall 1978: 885; Bode 1970: 62.

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

12 Dillon 1978: 38–40 argues that Son of Man is a title of concealment of the passion secret (i.e., the Son of Man is hidden in his present activity as he executes God's plan), but this is unlikely given the term's public reuse by Stephen in Acts 7:56. Osborne 1984: 110 n. 13 correctly critiques this view.

[13] Bode 1970: 63 comments that the detail betrays a "rather complicated literary background" (probably alluding to the Mark 14:41 connection noted above). Luke uses ἁμαρτωλός eighteen times, Matthew five times, Mark six times, and John four times.

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

MT Masoretic Text

[14] It looks as if Dillon is trying to protect a "disclosure" theme in this chapter, a view that has problems before this point in the narrative (see n. 12 above). Dillon argues for Lucan creation here, which is unlikely given the traditional themes already noted in the passion predictions and the additional materials that Luke apparently uses in his resurrection account. There is no doubt that the disciples' understanding deepens through these events and Jesus' visit with them, but faith seems to be present here in these women. It took some nerve to report what they had seen, given that women were not allowed to testify in this culture (Josephus, Antiquities 4.8.15 §219).

[15] Ἀπαγγέλλω (to report) occurs elsewhere in Luke at 7:18, 22; 8:20, 34, 36, 47; 9:36; 13:1; 14:21; 18:37 (plus fifteen times in Acts); Matt. 28:8

(plus seven more times in Matthew); twice in Mark 16:9–20 (plus three more times in Mark); BAGD 79; BAA 157.

16 Dillon's argument (1978: 56) for a composite list created from Mark 15:40; 16:1; and Luke 8:2–3 to yield a list of three members is negated by the reference "to the rest of the women." For the syntactical issues, see the exegesis of 24:10.

NT New Testament

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

17 Cf. Matt. 28:17; Mark 16:11, 14; Luke 24:41; John 20:25, 27. John does not believe until he sees the empty tomb (John 20:8); his trip to the tomb does, however, show interest in the possibility of resurrection.

18 See the additional note concerning the originality of 24:12.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

MM The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament: Illustrated from the Papyri and Other Non-literary Sources, by J. H. Moulton and G. Milligan (repr. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980)

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

19 Westcott and Hort 1881: 2.175–77 (“Introduction”) call this phrase a “Western noninterpolation” because of this shorter-reading rule. Other such noninterpolations are Luke 22:19b–20; 24:6, 12, 36, 40, 51, 52; Matt. 27:49. A Western noninterpolation is a shorter Western reading, in contrast to the normally expansive pattern of the Western family. Those who call these passages “noninterpolations” are arguing that the Gospel originally omitted them since they are the shorter reading.

20 Luke uses κύριος as a title for Jesus fifteen times in the narrative comments of his Gospel, almost always in non-Marcan settings (7:13, 19; 10:1, 39, 41; 11:39; 12:42a; 13:15; 17:5, 6; 18:6; 19:8a; 22:61 [twice]; 24:3); Osborne 1984: 104, esp. n. 5.

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

RSV Revised Standard Version

NIV New International Version

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

Fitzmyer 1985: 1557–59 notes four Lucan emphases: (1) the geographic journey, (2) Jesus' gradual revelation of himself, (3) Christology and fulfillment of OT prophecy, and (4) the meal scenes. (Fitzmyer describes the meal as "eucharistic"; although there is breaking of bread and thanksgiving, it is not a Eucharist, especially given the absence of wine.)

OT Old Testament

[2] Fitzmyer 1985: 1556–57 notes four other types of appearance narratives: (1) lists of witnesses (1 Cor. 15:5–8), (2) statements of appearance (Luke 24:34), (3) concise narratives that briefly report the appearance and usually involve situation, appearance, greeting, recognition, and word of command (Matt. 28:8–10), and (4) mixed narratives or developed reports (Luke 24:36–49). This is a variation of Dodd's 1955 delineation of three categories of narrative: concise, circumstantial, and mixed.

[3] H. Betz 1969 also strongly argues for "cult legend." According to Betz the account teaches the resurrection's importance for Christian faith. Similar in tone is the Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 398–99), which prints 24:17, 19, 25 in black type and says that all the dialogue is "provided by the storyteller" and involves instances of the evangelists "inventing words for Jesus that express their own perspectives."

Old Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[4] Ernst 1977: 659 says that Luke's knowledge of the location is imprecise. Dillon 1978: 87–88 sees Luke's distance as an error.

m. Mishnah

Suk. Sukka

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

[5] Mark 16:12 says Jesus was present in a different form to emphasize that his resurrection body was distinct. It is not the time of day that conceals his identity, but rather a lack of perception about the new form of his body.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

6 Dillon's effort (1978: 113) to argue that the men are stopped "under the pall of the passion-mystery" misses the point, despite his appeal to 22:25 and 24:25. They do not think there is any divine mystery in the events—only curious disappointment (24:19–24). Granted, they are in an emotional stew, but they stop in total shock that their companion does not know what has happened. This is not a Lucan motif, the vocabulary is too rare.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

NT New Testament

[7] A marginal note in codex V takes this identification from Epiphanius, Panarion 23.6, and says that Cleopas was Jesus' cousin and the second bishop of Jerusalem.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

NT New Testament

8 Dillon 1978: 122–28 correctly speaks of a miracle-passion pattern that shows Jesus is rejected like the prophets of old (Luke 11:47–51; 13:34–35; Acts 7:51–53). The travelers do not yet understand the significance of these connections (Osborne 1984: 121 n. 24). This detail also shows clearly how Jesus' death is seen as a part of a Jewish squabble. The account takes a decidedly Jewish perspective on the events (e.g., the silence about Pilate's and Rome's roles; Nolland 1993b: 1202).

9 On the use of ὅπως with the meaning of πῶς (how?) in an indirect question, see BDF §300.1; BDR §300.1; §436.2. Codex D has the more common ὡς, but the attestation is too slight to be original.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

10 The word group is rare in the NT: λυτρόω (to redeem; Luke 24:21; Titus 2:14; 1 Pet. 1:18), λύτρον (ransom; Matt. 20:28 = Mark 10:45), λύτρωσις (redemption; Luke 1:68; 2:38; Heb. 9:12), and λυτρωτής (redeemer; Acts 7:35); cf. BAGD 482–83; BAA 979–80; Deut. 13:5 [13:6 LXX]; 2 Sam. 7:23; Hos. 13:14; Barn. 14.5–7; 19.2; Ignatius, Philadelphians 11.1; Justin Martyr, Dialogue with Trypho 131.3; Irenaeus, Against Heresies 1.21.4.

NT New Testament

11 This last clause is expressed impersonally without a clear subject and is usually translated as “he is already spending the third day” (BDF §129; BDR §129.2.3; BAGD 14 §4), although Arndt 1943 translates it as “it is three days.” On the use of σύν with the force of “besides all this,” see BDF §221; BDR §221.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

12 This last event in the sequence is treated almost as a “news flash” would be today. It was still too early to know what this latest development meant.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

13 Luce 1933: 361 thinks the difference shows that 24:12 was not originally in Luke, but the text-critical external evidence is too strong to ignore (see the additional note on 24:12). This does seem to indicate that this account originally circulated independently of 24:1–12.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[14] On the syntax of τοῦ πιστεύειν ἐπί (to believe), see BAGD 287 §II.1bγ; BAA 582 §II.1bγ; BDR §187.2.2; §400.8.10; Acts 5:14; 9:42; 18:8; 16:31; 22:19; Rom. 9:33; 10:11; 1 Tim. 1:16; 1 Pet. 2:6. Wilcox 1965: 85–86 argues that this is possibly a Semitic construction.

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

[15] Levey 1974 lists the Jewish passages. Rowley 1950 has a full discussion of the historical issues. Jeremias, TDNT 5:677–700, is more optimistic in his appraisal of this theme in Judaism, but most note that his sources are later than the first century; see Rese 1963. See the discussion of Isa. 53 in the exegesis of Luke 22:37.

OT Old Testament

[16] Dillon 1978: 143 suggests that the motif is of Jesus leading the way for others, as Acts 3:15 and 7:35 seem to suggest, but this is not clear from Luke 24.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

OT Old Testament

1QS Manual of Discipline (Rule/Order of the Community)

4Q504 Dibre Hammĕ‹ôrôt (= “Paroles des Luminaires”) (4QDibHam^{a})

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and

B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

OT Old Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

17 Παραβιάζομαι usually means “to use force” on someone, but here “quiet persuasion” is meant, which is similar to the use of the unprefixed form in the difficult 16:16. On the importance of hospitality in Judaism, see Philo, On Abraham 22 §§107–13; Josephus, Antiquities 1.11.2 §196.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

18 Meals are frequent in Luke: simple meals (7:36; 11:37; 14:1), feasts (5:29), miraculous provisions (9:16), cultic meals (22:14), wedding feasts (14:8–9), and the eschatological banquet (12:37; 13:29); Osborne 1984: 123 n. 26; Plummer 1896: 556. That Jesus ate such meals with the "wrong people" is noted in 15:1 and 19:1.

19 On breaking bread, see Matt. 14:19 = Mark 6:41 = Luke 9:16 = John 6:11; Matt. 15:36 = Mark 8:6; Matt. 26:26 = Mark 14:22 = Luke 22:19; Mark 8:19; Acts 2:42, 46; 20:7, 11; 27:35; John 6:11; 1 Cor. 10:16; 11:24.

20 Dillon's effort (1978: 149–51) to find a connection with John 21:9–13 seems forced. The catch of fish outdoors in the Sea of Galilee does not equal a meal indoors near Jerusalem. Only the motif of a shared meal is the same (Behm, TDNT 1:477; Marshall 1978: 898). Another post-resurrection meal occurs in Luke 24:41–43 and Mark 16:14 (if it is original).

21 That the participants do not even know that they were sitting with Jesus speaks against seeing the messianic banquet here; but so argues Danker 1988: 394.

22 The first occurrence of the personal pronoun αὐτῶν (their) is slightly emphatic since it is separated from its modifier; BDR §277.4.

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

23 Ἄφαντος is used in 2 Macc. 3:34 of angels and in Greco-Roman literature of disappearing gods: Euripides, Orestes 1496; Euripides, Helen 605–6; Virgil, Aeneid 9.656–58; Creed 1930: 297; Marshall 1978: 898; Danker 1988: 394; Klostermann 1929: 238; Grundmann 1963: 447. On departures of transcendent or transported figures, see Luke 1:38; 2:15; 9:33; Acts 10:7; 12:10; and esp. 8:39; Nolland 1993b: 1206.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

24 The distributive singular καρδία indicates that the heart burned in each of them; Marshall 1978: 898; Col. 3:16; BDF §140. The periphrastic idiom pictures a running emotion; Plummer 1896: 557–58. On the sense of καρδία in Luke, see 1:51, 66; 2:19, 35, 51; 3:15; 5:22; 9:47; 24:25; Tiede 1988: 437.

NT New Testament

25 For other figurative uses, see Ps. 39:3 [39:4 MT]; 73:21; T. Naph. 7.4; K. Schmidt, TDNT 3:464. For literal uses of καίω, see Matt. 5:15; 13:40; Luke 12:35; John 5:35; 15:6; Heb. 12:18; Rev. 4:5; 8:8, 10; 19:20; 21:8.

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

OT Old Testament

[26] Cf. 2:38; 7:21; 10:21; 12:12; 13:31; 20:19; 22:53 (the whole "hour" of the crucifixion period, which was a full day long, since it includes arrest, trials, and execution).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

[27] Plummer 1896: 558 rhetorically suggests that Thomas left in the middle of Peter's and other disciples' earlier reports, while expressing his doubt, thus missing the meal that starts in 24:36. Saying that only ten were present, Arndt 1956: 491 identifies this meeting with John 20:19–24. He takes "Eleven" to be a general way to refer to the group of apostles without Judas, without insisting that all those who remained were present. If Thomas left or if the term is general, then the connection is possible. The latter is likely.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W.

Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

NIV New International Version

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

New Testament

LXX Septuagint

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

It is no accident that after Acts 13 almost all OT citations in Acts discuss (a) judgment on Israel for failing to respond to Jesus or (b) the right of Gentiles to be included in God's blessing. Luke–Acts is fundamentally a defense of Gentile inclusion in the mission and a presentation of Jesus' new way. Luke's major goal is to show that events and Scripture indicate that this was always God's plan. See Bock 1990.

[2] Traces of Lucan expression are (1) the genitive absolute in 24:36, (2) the double participle phrase πτοηθέντες … καὶ ἔμφοβοι γενόμενοι (became terrified … and startled) in 24:37 (cf. 21:9; 24:5), (3) the verb ἐπιδίδωμι (to offer) in 24:42 (five times in Luke; twice in Matthew; none in Mark), and (4) the phrase ἐνώπιον αὐτῶν (in front of them) in 24:43 (in the Synoptics only here; 5:25; and 24:11). Nolland 1993b: 1210–11 notes that many apparently Lucan points also show up in John (perhaps pointing to a shared common source), but John's use does not seem to be driven by Luke's unique development of the passage (against Neirynck 1985). Nolland sees 24:41b–43 as Lucan expansion, but possibly based in tradition. His attempt to argue that "fish" in 24:42–43 corresponds to "bread" in 24:30 to make the larger unit is parallel to 9:13, 16 seems subtle and forced. If Luke created the detail, it is more likely that he would have combined bread and fish in a single scene.

OT Old Testament

[3] Those who look for a point of contact in the Synoptic tradition note Mark 16:15–16, but this connection depends on whether Mark's longer ending is original and, as a result, where that detail from Mark's Gospel would fall in the Synoptic order.

[4] Lucan creation is also the view of the Jesus Seminar, which prints 24:44, 46–49 in black type (Funk and Hoover 1993: 400). In the seminar's view, these verses represent a third commission (Matt. 28:18–20; John 20:22–23). Nolland 1993b: 1225–26 also sees a Lucan development here, though (unlike the Jesus Seminar) he argues that it is a natural development of the tradition that Jesus appeared for a limited time. Nolland says that connection to tradition is possible, but not demonstrable. I prefer to see roots in a tradition and a real event, since Luke does not discuss new scenes elsewhere in his Gospel without the prompting of tradition.

2 Esdr. 2 Esdras (4 Ezra)

[5] The only temporal indicator is the general particle δέ (and or then). The ascension could well be a later event that Luke repeated with different detail in Acts 1.

NT New Testament

Old Testament

[6] BDR §423.2.7 and §423.1.2 notes that Luke uses the temporal genitive absolute fifty-seven times, while Acts has it one hundred times. The construction occurs in Matthew fifty-one times and in Mark thirty-four times. This is too common to attribute its presence to any one evangelist or to rule out its presence in the tradition (against Fitzmyer 1985: 1574 and Nolland 1993b: 1212).

[7] The term ἔστη (he stood) appears in John 20:19, 26; 21:4. Luke likes the phrase ἐν μέσῳ (in the midst): Luke 2:46; 8:7; 10:3; 21:21; 22:27, 55; Acts 1:15; 2:22; 4:7; 17:22; 27:21 (Fitzmyer 1985: 1575).

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[8] Καρδία (BAGD 403 §1bβ; BAA 819 §1bβ) occurs with διαλογισμός (thoughts) in 2:35 and 9:47 (cf. 3:15 and 5:22) and with the verb ἀναβαίνω

(to arise), which may be rendered idiomatically as “thoughts arise within the person,” in Acts 7:23; 1 Cor. 2:9; Jer. 3:16–17. BDR §4.3.8 calls the expression of thoughts arising in the heart a Semitism. Διαλογισμός (BAGD 186 §2; BAA 372 §2) carries the sense of “doubt” or “dispute” in Luke 9:46; 24:38; Phil. 2:14; 1 Tim. 2:8 and the sense of “thoughts” in Matt. 15:19 = Mark 7:21; Luke 2:35; 5:22; 6:8; 9:47; Rom. 1:21; 14:1; 1 Cor. 3:20; James 2:4.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

9 Ψηλαφάω occurs elsewhere in the NT only at Acts 17:27; Heb. 12:18; 1 John 1:1 (BAGD 892; BAA 1779–80); cf. Gen. 27:12; Judg. 16:26; Ignatius, Smyrneans 3.2. Plummer 1896: 560 wonders if 1 John 1:1 knows of this event, given its use of this rare term. See also C. F. Evans 1970: 108–9.

NT New Testament

10 Fitzmyer 1985: 1576 refuses to make a connection to 1 Cor. 15, probably to emphasize that Luke is not concerned with Paul’s detailed explanation, a point that is correct but need not mean the accounts are theologically unrelated.

11 Luke refers to resurrection in Luke 20:27–45; Acts 23:6–9; 24:15–21 and to the preaching of the resurrection hope in Acts 2:36; 3:26; 9:22; 17:18. Dan. 12:2 expresses the OT roots of this hope.

12 Dillon 1978: 192 argues that the reference to joy is Luke's, but why Luke should be responsible for such an insertion is not clear. On the syntax of ἀπό (from) with the force of ὑπό or παρά, see BDR §210.1.1; cf. Matt. 13:44; 14:26; Luke 21:26; 22:45; Acts 12:14; Plummer 1896: 560.

13 Ἐνθάδε is a Lucan term (Acts 10:18; 16:28; 17:6; 25:17, 24); the only use outside Luke's writings is twice in John 4:15–16; Plummer 1896: 560; Marshall 1978: 903.

14 In Jdt. 13:16 and Tob. 12:19, a meal is refused by angelic spirits, but in Gen. 18:8; 19:3; and Tob. 6:6, it is given to angelic figures.

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

15 On δεῖ (it is necessary), see the exegesis of 24:26.

16 Ὅτι is epexegetical to οὗτοι οἱ λόγοι (these words) and is not the object of ἐλάλησα (I spoke). The verse reports what "these words" were.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

17 For a study of the hermeneutic of Luke's OT use, see Bock 1987, in which I build on P. Schubert's 1957 thesis that Luke's theme is "proof from prophecy" (but the apologetic motif is not so strong in Luke as the declarative function of these texts, thus my modification to "proclamation from prophecy and pattern"). My work contrasts with that of Rese 1969, who underestimates the appeal to pattern and therefore understates a prophetic approach to Luke's OT. Soards 1994: 201 misconstrues the proof-from-prophecy position by describing it as linear, which does not reflect my view of the interaction between text and event in the proclamation-from-prophecy-and-pattern theme; see Bock 1987: 273.

OT Old Testament

4QMMT Miqsāt Maʿăsê Tôrâ

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

MT Masoretic Text

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

18 The meaning of οὕτως is not clear (Marshall 1978: 905). Fitzmyer 1985: 1583 argues that it means "so" the Scripture speaks, referring to the manner of the message and thus focusing on its content. It could also be causative (Klostermann 1929: 242, pointing to 24:26), thus meaning "because" the Scripture must be fulfilled. Either possibility makes good sense; the second emphasizes design a little more.

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

19 Ἀνίστημι (BAGD 70; BAA 138–39) can mean "to erect, to bring on the scene"; here it means "to raise from the dead" (Luke 16:31; 18:33; 24:7; Acts 2:24, 32; 3:22; 10:41; 13:34; 17:3, 31).

NT New Testament

20 Jesus and the kingdom are the primary topics of preaching in Luke's writings: Luke 4:18–19, 44; 8:1, 39; 9:2; Acts 8:5; 9:20; 10:42; 19:13; 20:25; 28:31. Κηρύσσω (BAGD 431 §2bβ; BAA 877–78 §2bβ) is used elsewhere by Luke in Luke 3:3 (John's baptism); 12:3 (activities in the eschaton); Acts 10:37 (John's baptism); 15:21 (Moses).

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

OT Old Testament

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

BDF A Greek Grammar of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and R. W. Funk (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

[21] Strathmann, TDNT 4:492, notes that such testimony treats the resurrection no less objectively than it treats Jesus' passion.

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

OT Old Testament

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

MT Masoretic Text

NT New Testament

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, edited by G. Kittel and G. Friedrich; translated and edited by G. W. Bromiley (10 vols.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964–76)

22 Ἕως is a general reference to “the area of,” especially when combined with ἔξω (outside); BDR §239.3.3; Acts 17:14; 21:5; 26:11; Gen. 38:1; Ezek. 48:1; Marshall 1978: 908. But ἔξω is textually disputed; see the additional note.

NT New Testament

23 Parsons 1987: 193–94, 196 posits that Bethany is named in order to provide literary closure to the triumphal entry by being a triumphal departure. But this link could occur with either Bethany or the Mount of Olives. It is not clear that Acts 1:2 and 1:6–11 are distinct events (Parsons gives strong arguments for one event, though the chronology is a tension for this option). Nonetheless, the popular idea of Lucan literary telescoping is possible given the lack of explicit temporal markers in Luke 24:44, 50 and Luke’s love of retelling major events (e.g., Saul’s conversion and the offer of the gospel to Cornelius; C. A. Evans 1990: 360–62). Seeing the ascension as an event that is telescoped here allows one to see how the different Galilean appearances suggested by Matthew and John fit into the timing of events more easily. See also Osborne 1984: 137–38, 266–70.

[24] Priests like Aaron (Lev. 9:22) gave such blessings, but they were not the only ones to do so (e.g., Moses; Deut. 33).

NT New Testament

BAGD A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, by W. Bauer, W. F. Arndt, F. W. Gingrich, and F. W. Danker (2d ed.; Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979)

BAA Griechisch-Deutsches Wörterbuch zu den Schriften des Neuen Testaments und der frühchristlichen Literatur, by W. Bauer, K. Aland, and B. Aland (6th ed.; Berlin: de Gruyter, 1988)

[25] Codex D has the second aorist form of ἀφίστημι (to withdraw), but the reading is too poorly attested to be original.

[26] Bertram, TDNT 8:611, suggests that awakening, resurrection, reception, ascent, being taken up, enthronement in heaven, and dominion are the elements of Jesus' exaltation mentioned in the NT. Hebrews adds a priestly emphasis to this work of Jesus, thus making him a king-priest (Heb. 1; 7–10).

[27] Joy (χαρά) is a Lucan theme: Luke 1:14; 2:10; 8:13; 10:17; 15:7, 10; 24:41; Acts 8:8; 12:14; 13:52; 15:3. Osborne 1984: 140 notes that in Luke's writings joy is a present experience shared to the degree of one's participation in events.

BDR Grammatik des neutestamentlichen Griechisch, by F. Blass, A. Debrunner, and F. Rehkopf (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1984)

NT New Testament

Old Testament

UBS The Greek New Testament, edited by B. Aland, K. Aland, J. Karavidopoulos, C. M. Martini, and B. M. Metzger (4th ed.; New York: United Bible Societies, 1993)

NA Novum Testamentum Graece, edited by [E. Nestle], K. Aland, and B. Aland (26th ed.; Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelstiftung, 1979)

NT New Testament

28 Parsons 1987: 29–52 has a long, thoughtful discussion of the Western noninterpolations and accepts them all on the premise that P^{75} has a doctrinal reason for including them. He sees codex D as adding to the Christology of the chapter, especially the physical reality of the resurrection. But he fails to see that the omission of καὶ ἀνεφέρετο εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν (and he was carried up into heaven) in 24:51 means that the ascension is no longer explicit in Luke (though it is alluded to in Acts 1:2). Parsons also assumes that P^{75} or a text like it is responsible for these additions, but this conclusion seems to put too much weight on P^{75}—reversing the way this manuscript is generally treated. The widespread lack of witnesses for the Western noninterpolations in Luke 24, however, stands against their originality. It is the presence of א* that makes this example so debatable.

1 The Bible does not use the term Last Supper, a description that arises from Jesus' arrest and crucifixion immediately after this meal.

NT New Testament

[2] Jeremias 1966: 15–84 deals with various aspects of this issue. Other key studies include Hoehner 1977: 74–90; Marshall 1980: 30–75 (which has the advantage of assessing Jeremias's claims); Jaubert 1965; Blinzler 1958; and R. Brown 1962b. For bibliography, see Nolland 1993b: 1035–40.

m. Mishnah

Pesaḥ. Pesaḥim

Jub. Jubilees

t. Tosepta

Pesaḥ. Pesaḥim

m. Mishnah

Pesaḥ. Pesaḥim

m. Mishnah

Pesaḥ. Pesaḥim

m. Mishnah

Pesaḥ. Pesaḥim

m. Mishnah

Pesaḥ. Pesaḥim

m. Mishnah

m. Mishnah

Pesaḥ. Pesaḥim

m. Mishnah

[3] Carson cites texts where πάσχα can mean Passover week: Josephus, Antiquities 14.2.1 §21; 17.9.3 §213; Jewish War 2.1.3 §10; m. Pesaḥ. 9.5.

[4] Marshall 1980: 65–66 regards this series of events as the most problematic reference, but he also notes that it is equally problematic for the day before Passover. On the historicity of the Roman setting and trial customs as tied to the governor's assize, see Kinman 1991.

[5] For example, Chwolson's 1908 work (view six below) was first published in 1892, three decades before the start of form criticism, so that Fitzmyer's appeal to form-critical analysis is challenged. Some of the arguments in this debate are lexical and so are unrelated to any solid results emerging from form criticism. Apparently, Fitzmyer has Luke's additional cup in mind when he discusses form criticism. Some see Luke's mention of the additional cup as evidence of liturgical expansion by the later church.

[6] Jeremias objects that, if this theory is correct, the time advance is not one day but only four to six hours. He appeals to Jub. 49.10, 19, and Philo, Special Laws 2.27 §145, to argue against an evening sacrifice.

m. Mishnah

SB Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, by H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck (6 vols.; Munich: Beck, 1922–61)

[7] This is the best option to Marshall, though it is not without problems—mainly that it requires slaughtering on two consecutive days, when no direct evidence suggests such was the case.

m. Mishnah

Pesaḥ. Pesaḥim

8 Pickl argues for this distinction by comparing Josephus, Antiquities 3.10.5 §249 and 2.15.1 §317. Jeremias argues that the second text addresses Diaspora practice about all festivals and as such does not apply.

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

OT Old Testament

NT New Testament

NT New Testament

9 Luke 4:14 (of guidance); 4:36 (over spirits); 5:17, 6:19, and 8:46 (for healing); 9:1 and 10:13 (over demons and miracles); 19:37 (praise for the miracles done by God through Jesus); Ernst 1977: 285; BAGD 207–8; BAA 417–19. Achtemeier 1978 has a good discussion of miracles as a major Lucan theme; he also shows that these miracles are not tied to ancient views of magic nor based on the OT.

1 The verse count is from Aland and Aland 1987: 29.

8 In the main, my classification follows Holmes 1989. Manuscript dates are given according to Aland and Aland 1987. Rather than giving priority to any one family of manuscripts, I prefer Holmes's "eclectic" approach to textual criticism.

1 The verse count is from Aland and Aland 1987: 29.

8 In the main, my classification follows Holmes 1989. Manuscript dates are given according to Aland and Aland 1987. Rather than giving priority to any one family of manuscripts, I prefer Holmes's "eclectic" approach to textual criticism.

1 Aland 1985: §14. After the introduction to the pericope, there are only three differences: Luke 3:8 has the plural fruits, while Matt. 3:8 has the singular fruit; Luke 3:8 has do not begin to say, while Matt. 3:8 has do not think to say; and Luke 3:9 has an extra conjunction and.

1 Schürmann 1969: 171 n. 64 notes that most of the terms from 3:15–18 (which is §16 in Aland 1985) show up elsewhere in Luke predominately where he has parallels. Ernst 1977: 145 calls the introduction Lucan, but with less rationale.

1 See the discussion of sources in 5:1–11, where this latter option is slightly preferred. Those who hold to Matthean priority have a similar view of Luke's placement, since Matthew's order is temptations (Matt. 4:1–11), summary of Galilean ministry using a citation from Isa. 9 unique to Matthew (Matt. 4:12–17), and then the disciples' call (Matt. 4:18–22), which parallels Mark 1:16–20. Aland 1985: §§20, 30, 32, 34.

2 Aland 1985: §35. Note especially Mark 1:22a and Luke 4:32a. The latter part of Luke 4:32 is a condensed version of Mark 1:22b. Those who see Mark coming from Luke speak of expansion. One difference is that Luke repeats the point that Capernaum is in Galilee, while Mark lacks such a note.

4 Aland 1985: §36. For the list of differences, see Fitzmyer 1981: 542; Schramm 1971: 85–88.

35 Matthew has no parallel to this summary; Aland 1985: §39. Matthean prioritists who see Mark as the last Gospel argue that Mark followed Luke.

4 Such would be the view of anyone who thinks that Mark is later than Luke. They would also mention Matt. 4:18–22 in this discussion. See Aland 1985: §41.

1 Aland 1985: §78. Extrabiblical parallels are the Gospel of Thomas 54, 68–69 and the Acts of Paul 5–6 (Bovon 1989: 295). Thomas's order is poor, persecuted, and hungry.we

5 This type of pronouncement account is common in Luke: 5:17–26; here; 7:36–50; 17:12–19; 18:18–23 (the only one with a negative outcome); 19:1–10; 23:39–43. Four of these seven accounts (7:36–50; 17:12–19; 19:1–10; 23:39–43) are unique to Luke. (For the view that 7:36–50 is uniquely Lucan, contra Aland 1985: §114, see the discussion of sources for that unit.)

4 The amount of material in these groups can be variously measured, depending on the division of the pericopes and one's judgment about the presence of parallels. Egelkraut 1976: 27 bases the percentages in Luke's central section (for him 9:51–19:48) on the pericope delineation in two common synopses:

	Lucan Parallels to Matthew (i.e., Q)	Unique Lucan Material	Lucan Parallels to Mark
Aland 1985	26 of 75 pericopes (35%)	27 of 75 pericopes (36%)	22 of 75 pericopes (29%)

Huck and Lietzmann 1936	25 of 60 pericopes (42%)	24 of 60 pericopes (40%)	11 of 60 pericopes (18%)

Resseguie 1975: 4 calculates the same section this way: of 60 Lucan pericopes, 31 (52%) parallel Matthew/Q and 29 (48%) are uniquely Lucan. Resseguie argues that only one-tenth of the material in 9:51–18:14 has even a possible Marcan connection. Teaching material that is capable of being repeated might slightly alter the exact count. Nonetheless, the numbers of Huck-Lietzmann and Resseguie are closer to the real percentages, since Luke 9:51–18:14 lacks any significant Marcan parallels. In addition, most of the Q pericopes and unique Lucan material are long units. Conceptual overlap with Matthew and unique Lucan material abound (see the introduction in vol. 1, pp. 10–12). Goulder (1989: 455) notes that in 9:51–13:21 one of every three words comes from Q or L, while in 13:22–18:14 (where Goulder ends the unit) one in six words comes from this material.

5 Luke's wording is similar to Matt. 10:40 and John 13:20 conceptually, but not verbally; Aland 1985: §179.

59 This is why K. Aland (in Metzger 1975: 151) is certain that seventy-two was original. Wiefel 1988: 195 asks if seventy is not an attempt to get a round number.

2 I do not follow Aland 1985: §114 and §194 in positing Synoptic parallels for 7:39 and 11:38. See the discussions of sources and historicity for 7:36–50 and 11:37–54.

70 So Winter 1955; also mentioned by older commentators such as Luce 1933: 86 and Alford 1874: 446.

12 This is a better way to look at the account than to argue that Simon is rude, insensitive, or uninterested (e.g., Morgan 1931: 103 calls Simon supercilious; Alford 1874: 510 speaks of Simon's disgust).

15 Fitzmyer 1981: 468. Jeremias, TDNT 4:269–71, notes that in later Judaism the imagery describes the creation of the nation, as Tg. Isa. 51:1 shows. Bovon 1989: 172 does not consider the allusion likely, since he sees Luke alluding to the Gentiles here. Bovon also distinguishes between a stone (here) and a rock (the OT image). Bovon is right that Luke has an implication here about Gentiles, but that still need not deny the background of the OT, especially since the Greek wording is translated out of the original setting. The OT allusion is possible, though not certain. This remark is also against a view of "covenantal nomism"; see Allison 1987. Placement into blessing is not a matter of election through mere biology.

16 Keck 1970–71. B. Ḥag. 15a, a talmudic reference of later origin, makes this connection. More recently, Allison 1992 argues vigorously for a connection to Gen. 1:2. The Messianic Vision fragment from Qumran (see photograph and R. H. Eisenman's translation in Biblical Archaeology Review 17.6 [Nov.–Dec. 1991]: 65) might contain an allusion to Messiah and Gen. 1:2. If so, the objection to the lateness of the other Jewish parallels is removed. The image would suggest a "new" beginning in God's work, though I disagree with Allison that the remark is only symbolic, as if one must choose between history and symbol.

12 Fitzmyer 1981: 623 is skeptical of the new Moses emphasis in Luke, but underplays the Mosaic allusions in Acts. If the motif is present, it is clearer in Matthew than in Luke, though even in Matthew it is not certain. For the motif in Matthew, see Davies and Allison 1988: 423–24; against its presence in Matthew is Carson 1984: 129.

14 Hendriksen 1978: 334 argues for this locale; Marshall 1978: 241–42 calls it possible. Davies and Allison 1988: 422 mention Karn Hattin (Horns of Hattin) as another suggestion, but they prefer not to adopt a specific location, since for them the Matthean sermon is a collected representative sermon, as opposed to a sermon in a single place (see excursus 7 for details). Edersheim 1889: 1.524 argues against Karn Hattin.

17 Tannehill 1986: 155–56 argues that Luke holds out hope for Israel's future, citing Allison 1983: 75 as support. Allison argues that Jesus uses the standard Jewish form for giving a conditional prophecy; see also Allison 1985: 157. Marshall 1978: 577 leans this way.

46 The English translations by H. T. Andrews (in Charles 1913: 2.113) and Hadas 1951: 180–81 correctly look like the Golden Rule, while that by R. J. H. Shutt (in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 2.26) does not.

9 Lesser figures for the average size of land ownership are presented by Applebaum 1976: 656–58, who argues that seven hectares may be optimistic. Even on these numbers, five yoke of oxen points to a large landowner.

12 Carson 1984: 239 (undecided between this and view 1); A. Ehrman 1978; Arbeitman 1980. Fitzmyer 1981: 620 calls this view highly unlikely but gives no reason.

12 For a figurative force are Fitzmyer 1981: 671, 673–74; Hendriksen 1978: 395–96; Arndt 1956: 212; Marshall 1978: 294; Ernst 1977: 250; Schürmann 1969: 416 n. 53 (who mentions that such a reed, Phragmites communis, could grow to a height of sixteen feet).

14 Arndt 1956: 219; Luke 7:21 (of a blind person graced with sight); Rom. 8:32; 1 Cor. 2:12; Phil. 1:29; Eph. 4:32 (twice). The verb used in this soteriological sense is largely a Pauline term, while the noun χάρις is more widespread; Acts 15:11; Heb. 4:16 (twice); 1 Pet. 1:10; 2 Pet. 3:18.

24 Arndt discusses this sense for ὅτι, which is also found in Luke 1:22; 6:21; 13:2; Gal. 4:6; John 9:16; and 1 John 3:14. This might be called an "evidentiary" use of ὅτι; what is seen is evidence of another spiritual reality, not the cause of it. Love is the product (result) rather than the cause (basis). The rain results in the windows' being wet, so forgiveness results in love.

7 The phrase κατὰ πόλιν καὶ κώμην (from city to village) has a distributive force and is grammatically linked to the reference to traveling; Fitzmyer 1981: 697; Arndt 1956: 223; Schürmann 1969: 445 n. 5.

11 Seed as a metaphor for the word is common in the ancient world; Bovon 1989: 407 n. 25; Pseudo-Plutarch, Liberal Education 4 (2B); Plato, Phaedrus 276B–77A; Klauck 1978: 192–96. Ὁ σπείρων is generic in force and should be translated "a sower"; Arndt 1956: 229. Σπεῖραι is an infinitive of purpose: he went out "to sow his seed." On the generic article, see BDF §252 and BDR §252b.

23 Arndt 1956: 230 notes that no decretal theology is explicit in the reference to one's being given the mysteries, since that would require an aorist tense. But despite Arndt's note, the implication of God's sovereign direction, though not a formal decree, is present. A grammatical parallel to this use of ὑμῖν is found in 1 Cor. 1:18, where ἡμῖν is thrown forward in its clause.

39 So Ernst 1977: 269. Some see a Paulinist touch here. Plummer 1896: 220 suggests that the Lucan conclusion in 8:12 may go back to Paul; Arndt 1956: 230. Others suggest that Luke is using church terminology to make clear what Jesus means, a point that seems likely; Marshall 1978: 325; Fitzmyer 1981: 713.

13 Λαῖλαψ may be onomatopoetic; so Arndt 1956: 327; Job 21:18; 38:1. The other NT uses are Mark 4:37 and 2 Pet. 2:17; BAGD 462–63; BAA 940. Matt. 8:24 uses σεισμός (earthquake or storm), a term that may make apocalyptic associations with the event; BAGD 746; BAA 1493.

5 Arndt 1956: 238 puts all of these events on the same day, while Marshall 1978: 335 suggests an allusion to Ps. 65:7 [65:8 MT] and the "tumult of the people," though the verbal connection is vague. C. F. Evans 1990: 383 notes Ps. 65:5–8 [65:6–9 MT]; 46:2–6 [46:3–7 MT]; Isa. 17:12–13, which are less than evident. Matt. 8–9 is topically arranged.

10 Arndt 1956: 240 suggests something like the latter question; also 1 Kings 17:18.

26 Arndt 1956: 243 argues that their consciences feared more distress from God's presence. Hendriksen 1978: 449 calls such fear sinful, because they showed no interest in the exorcised man. Danker 1988: 183 notes that a reference to possessions is unstated in Luke.

32 So Cranfield 1959: 176. Plummer 1896: 227 speaks of Kersa, a locale near the lake, but he rejects Origen's association of it with Gergesa. Arndt

1956: 239–40 and Bovon 1989: 434 accept Gergesa as original in Luke. Liefeld 1984: 914–15 is rightly cautious about a solution, as is Nolland 1989: 407. No clearly superior option exists between reading a regional reference or concluding that Gergesa is intended.

33 Arndt 1956: 240–41 speaks of many commands; Danker 1988: 182 of an ingressive imperfect (“he began to command” or “was about to command”), which is probably better; so also Fitzmyer 1981: 738; BDF §328, §329, §331. Bovon 1989: 435 n. 44 calls the choice very difficult, a judgment with which I concur.

11 Num. 32:41; Judg. 10:3; Arndt 1956: 246. Fitzmyer 1981: 745 notes other uses of the name in the first century. Nolland 1989: 419 notes that if the name has Aramaic roots (יָעִיר, Jair), then it means “he [God] will awaken” (1 Chron. 20:5).

25 According to Arndt 1956: 247, this is the only place where Jesus makes such an address. However, he has missed 13:16, where a woman is addressed as a daughter of Abraham (noted by Tiede 1988: 176). Cf. the description of Zacchaeus as “son of Abraham” in 19:9. Bovon 1989: 450 and n. 50 notes that the term suggests Jesus’ authority. See also Ps. 45:10 [44:11 LXX]; Zeph. 3:14; and Lam. 4:21–22. The length of the woman’s problem suggests that she is older than Jesus.

33 Plummer 1896: 235; Marshall 1978: 344; Fitzmyer 1981: 746; Bovon 1989: 445–46 (who argues that Luke may be responsible for it); Creed 1930: 123; and Hendriksen 1978: 466 appear undecided. Arndt 1956: 246 and A. B. Bruce 1897: 525 are for inclusion. Schürmann 1969: 490 n. 137; Ellis 1974: 130; and Luce 1933: 173 omit it.

5 On the discussion of the exact locale of the city, whether it is on or just north of the sea, see Arndt 1956: 253–54. John 6:1 calls this sea the “Sea of Tiberias.”

6 So Arndt 1956: 254 argues for two Bethsaidas; otherwise Fitzmyer 1981: 765–66; Godet 1875: 1.404–5 (who sees many places with this name along the lake, since the name is a generic description); Ptolemy, Geography 5.16.4. Cf. Josephus’s use of “Gaulanite” in Antiquities 18.1.1 §4 and “Galilean” in 18.1.6 §23. A region is addressed, not just a populated locale, as the dilemma about food makes clear. Bethsaida may be nothing more than temporary “headquarters” for mission in the region. Arndt and Godet may be right about the Marcan reference being a distinct locale using a generic name. John 12:21 may confirm the distinction.

7 Arndt 1956: 255 notes that εἰς can mean “toward” as well as “into,” though whether Luke is being this precise is uncertain. He may simply be noting the center of activity.

13 Arndt 1956: 256 mentions 1 Kings 17:15 and 2 Kings 4:5–6, though he rejects the view that this account was created to parallel the OT.

16 So διαγρηγορήσαντες (a NT hapax legomenon) is an ingressive aorist: “began to awaken fully” (Arndt 1956: 263). BAGD 182 and BAA 365 argue for this ingressive sense, rather than suggesting that drowsiness is the point of the description.

17 On the term ἐκβάλλω (to thrust out), see BAGD 237 §2 and BAA 478 §2. Against Hendriksen 1978: 572, the term does not mean “force out” here. It is, however, a strong, graphic term that shows that God calls and equips; so Arndt 1956: 281.

62 The RSV and NRSV read seventy; see also Schweizer 1984: 174; Danker 1988: 212 (who attributes the number seventy-two to Moses' addition of two elders when he appointed his seventy [Num. 11:26] and sees Gentile symbolism in the choice); Tiede 1988: 200–201; Ellis 1974: 155–56; C. F. Evans 1990: 444–45; Schürmann 1994: 54. The NIV reads seventy-two; also Manson 1949: 74; Liefeld 1984: 940; Hendriksen 1978: 570–71 ("leans" this way); Creed 1930: 144; Arndt 1956: 280; Ernst 1977: 331; Marshall 1978: 414–15 (who has a good summary of the issue); Fitzmyer 1985: 845–46; Wiefel 1988: 195; C. A. Evans 1990: 172; Nolland 1993a: 546. Those who are undecided include Luce 1933: 198–99; Plummer 1896: 272; and Schneider 1977a: 235 (who argues that a decision is less than certain).

14 So Arndt 1956: 300, though Luke's usual use of this tense makes this conclusion less than certain.

17 The phrase οἱ υἱοὶ ὑμῶν refers to "your own people" (Arndt 1956: 300), although most see it as referring to the "sons of the Pharisees" (Rengstorf, TDNT 4:443) or more broadly to "countrymen" (Godet 1875: 2.64) (see BAGD 833 §1cα; BAA 1663 §1cα; Heb. 12:5; 1 Pet. 5:13). Nolland 1993a: 639 states the question this way: "What will other Jewish exorcists, in light of their own exorcizing activity, make of such a view?" For a different (and I think more preferable) view, see n. 19 below.

8 Plummer 1896: 306 argues that resurrection is implied at the end of the verse by the giving of a sign, but the Lucan context alone does not make such a reference clear. Hendriksen 1978: 627 and Arndt 1956: 302 make resurrection the only point, though Arndt admits that only Matthew makes this connection clear.

12 Arndt 1956: 303 equates person and time. In contrast, Ellis 1974: 168 and Talbert 1982: 139 suggest that the Spirit is referred to, but this is too specific, since there is no clear contextual indication to him. He is only an implication of what Jesus brings.

14 Acts 14:22 may be written with the realization of such divisions in mind; Arndt 1956: 324.

8 On the rare use of ἀπολύω as a description of being freed from the effects of disease, see BAGD 96; BAA 193; Josephus, Antiquities 3.11.3 §264. The term is generally used of freeing prisoners or releasing from debt. This common usage may inform the use of the term here. Contextually, the perfect tense announces entry into a state of healing; Arndt 1956: 329.

22 Berger 1972: 209–26 argues that the law refers to the "will of God." Schweizer 1984: 258 says the law is newly interpreted by Jesus' kingdom preaching and is valid as a moral norm (at least in some of its elements). Plummer 1896: 389 and Arndt 1956: 361 see a distinction between moral law and defunct ceremonial law.

19 See the unit introduction for a discussion about afterlife symbolism. Klostermann 1929: 168–69 notes the tension and cites 23:43 as another example of instant awareness of blessing after death. Arndt 1956: 365 notes that Acts 7:59; 2 Cor. 5:8; and Phil. 1:23 express a similar hope of instant awareness by the righteous. It may be that instant consciousness occurs in what has been called the "intermediate state," with confirming judgment and glorified resurrection coming later.

10 This type of conditional clause uses ἐάν (if). The aorist imperatives probably denote something generally done; Arndt 1956: 368. For ἐπιτιμάω (to rebuke), see the exegesis of 4:35a.

16 The use of εἰ (if) plus ἄν (untranslated particle) yields a mixed condition; Arndt 1956: 369; BDF §372.1a. On the idiom πίστιν ἔχειν (to have faith), see 4 Macc. 16:22; Matt. 17:20; 21:21 = Mark 11:22; Acts 14:9; Rom. 14:2 (conceptually); 1 Cor. 13:2; 1 Tim. 1:19; 3:9; Philem. 5; James 2:1, 14, 18; Hanse, TDNT 2:826 n. 58.

29 On ἀετός, see Lev. 11:13; Deut. 14:12; Job 39:27; Matt. 24:28; BAGD 19; BAA 36; Marshall 1978: 669. Ἀετός can refer to an eagle, but not here, since eagles do not seek out dead meat; Rev. 12:14; 4:7; 8:13; Arndt 1956: 376. Attempts to interpret ἀετός as eagle, recalling the Roman emblem that accompanied the invasion of Jerusalem, assume a post–a.d. 70 date for Luke, as well as suggest an image contextually distant from the metaphor here; but so Danker 1988: 294; Leaney 1958: 232; and Fitzmyer 1985: 1173 (with less certainty).

13 Jeremias 1963a: 141 overstates the parallelism with Pauline usage, as do Fitzmyer 1985: 1185 and Arndt 1956: 380. Linnemann 1966: 62–63, 144–46 n. 11; Ernst 1977: 497–98; and Marshall 1978: 680–81 are clearer. Cf. Ps. 51:19 [51:21 MT]; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 12:7; 1Q28b [= 1QSb] 4.22.

12 The aorist may be ingressive (“we do not want him to be enthroned to rule over us”; Arndt 1956: 392), though a summary aorist is also possible.

10 Imperfect εὕρισκον with deliberative subjunctive ποιήσωσιν portrays in this context a contemplative and continuous effort: “They were not finding what they might do"; Arndt 1956: 401. The original question was, "What can we do?"

13 For example, the Western Wall of the temple still stands today, though Arndt 1956: 418 argues that this is not included in Jesus' remarks.

28 Josephus, Jewish War 5–7, esp. 6.5.1 §§271–73; 6.9.3 §420; 7.5.3 §118; 7.5.5 §138; 7.5.6 §154. Plummer 1896: 482 thinks that Josephus's numbers are too high. Arndt 1956: 421–22 accepts them, arguing that many people had fled to the city, thus inflating its population. Regardless, it is clear that the city was leveled and much of its population slain. On the suggested population of Jerusalem during feast time, see excursus 11. Current scholarly estimates for feast-day population are 110,000–150,000.

6 Arndt 1956: 430 argues that demonic possession is not meant, but this conclusion is not clear from the text. Resolving such details is probably beyond our ability, given the brevity of the text.

17 The term for bread lacks an article, suggesting that Jesus took "some" bread, not all of it; Arndt 1956: 438.

22 Arndt 1956: 444 speaks of Peter's "again bec[oming] a believer," a most unfortunate way to express the force of the verb. Peter had this position all along. On turning, see Luke 17:4; Acts 3:19; 9:35; 11:21; 14:15; 15:19; 26:18, 20. On faith as faithfulness, see Luke 18:8; Acts 14:22; 16:5. Marshall 1978: 822 sees a possible allusion to 2 Sam. 15:20.

26 Arndt 1956: 444 suggests that Jesus communicated that the denial would come before morning and before a rooster crowed twice that evening. Marshall 1978: 823 argues that this is a summary of Mark. Since most assume that Luke did not know Matthew, the question is raised whether a summary is present or whether Luke had another source. Matthean prioritists simply see Luke following Matthew here.

34 Plummer 1896: 507 and Arndt 1956: 445 note that this passage helped create the two-realms theory of papal power, one secular, the other spiritual. This doctrine was formalized by Boniface VIII in his 1302 Unam Sanctam, though it was discussed much earlier. This theory parallels the disciples' misunderstanding, but in a different direction. The disciples would use the sword to defend and gain power, but the papacy was trying to hold on to complete power.

11 This last clause is expressed impersonally without a clear subject and is usually translated as "he is already spending the third day" (BDF §129; BDR §129.2.3; BAGD 14 §4), although Arndt 1943 translates it as "it is three days." On the use of σύν with the force of "besides all this," see BDF §221; BDR §221.

27 Plummer 1896: 558 rhetorically suggests that Thomas left in the middle of Peter's and other disciples' earlier reports, while expressing his doubt, thus missing the meal that starts in 24:36. Saying that only ten were present, Arndt 1956: 491 identifies this meeting with John 20:19–24. He takes "Eleven" to be a general way to refer to the group of apostles without Judas, without insisting that all those who remained were present. If Thomas left or if the term is general, then the connection is possible. The latter is likely.

4 Creed 1930: 37–38 mentions these associations and rejects them, as do Bultmann 1963: 299–300 and Schürmann 1969: 131 n. 244. The comparison was described by Aufhauser 1926 and defended by Garbe 1959: 47–49, but there are just too many differences between these accounts.

24 Michel, TDNT 8:94–105; M. Stern 1974: 330–34; Donahue 1971; Fitzmyer 1981: 469–70; Badian 1972. E. Sanders 1992: 146–69 notes that the tax system in Palestine was not more oppressive than in other regions. He estimates that taxes consumed somewhere between 20 percent and 30 percent of one's income. For a more skeptical view that sees toll collectors as a symbolic representation of Jesus' outreach to archetypal sinners, see Neale 1991: 110–15. I regard Neale's dichotomy between symbolic representation and history as false for reasons made clear below. In this approach Neale follows Horsley 1987, and both underestimate the connections between John and Jesus in terms of audience. See also 5:29–32.

34 BAGD 54; BAA 107; Sir. 40:30. Luke 18:4 is a conceptual parallel. For the lexical and interpretive debate on the term, see Blomberg 1990: 276, esp. nn. 51–53. For a careful study of ἀναίδεια, see A. Johnson 1979. He argues, however, citing Bailey 1976: 124–33 in support, that the line is about the neighbor, not the host, and that the antecedent of the second αὐτοῦ (his) in 11:8 is the neighbor because the neighbor is the constant subject in the verse. But this ignores αὐτῷ (to him) earlier in the verse, which refers to the host. Johnson sees the point as God's responding because his honor is at stake. But this meaning dishonors the gracious God that Jesus seeks to describe. Johnson is aware of this issue (p. 131 n. 39) and argues that Westerners do not appreciate Eastern cultural values. I hold that it contradicts the tone of 11:11–13.

10 Wool, mutton, and cloaks were the three basic products from sheep. Bailey 1976: 148 suggests that the number of sheep indicates that the shepherd is not the owner but represents a larger group. As Bailey appeals to contemporary custom to make this point, which is not clearly linked to ancient practice, the observation is possible, but not demonstrable.

11 It is disputable whether everyday shepherds were seen as negative in the culture, so that Jesus' choice of a shepherd would be shocking; but so Bailey 1976: 147. See the exegesis of 2:8.

6 For the structure, see Bailey 1976: 159–61; Blomberg 1990: 173–74; and Tolbert 1979: 98–100. Blomberg argues for a plausible threefold division: younger son's departure (15:11–20a), father's welcome (15:20b–24), and older son's reaction (15:25–32).

10 Rengstorf 1967 suggests as allusion to the Jewish custom of qēṣ;āṣ;â (קְצָצָה), which cut off from society a member who sold a family heirloom to an outsider or who married beneath their social rank (Jastrow 1903: 1407–8). There is no indication that such a custom applies here, though Rengstorf's study does show the parable's social context and background in terms of the familial symbolism of the ring and robe in 15:22. For refutation, see Marshall 1978: 606 and Bailey 1976: 167–68.

15 Κεράτιον (little horn) was eaten only by the poorest humans; BAGD 429; BAA 873; a NT hapax legomenon. Marshall 1978: 609 cites a saying from Lev. Rab. 35.6 on 26:3: "When the Israelites are reduced to carob pods, then they repent." This food was nicknamed "John the Baptist's bread," on the erroneous idea that John ate carobs. John's carob was sweet, while this carob was bitter; Nolland 1993a: 783; Bailey 1976: 171–73.

24 Bailey argues that this omission of his resolve to be a worker is key: the son backs off from his confession and is disappointed that his effort to earn back his relationship, a picture of his “rabbinic-like repentance,” has failed. Bailey is right that the son understands that the father “gifted” him with a new relationship, but his characterization of the son is too negative, as Nolland 1993a: 784 correctly notes. The parable describes a returned prodigal, a sinner found, which for Jesus is a positive, not a conniving, category.

32 Blomberg 1990: 244–45 opts for this, seeing him as a “son of this world.” Bailey 1976: 86–110 sees the servant enhancing the master’s reputation by forcing him to absorb the loss graciously in order to save face.

42 Schwarz 1974 sees these commendatory remarks as ironic; they are really condemnatory. This interpretation is forced and is not a possible rendering of ἐπαινέω (to praise); BAGD 281; BAA 569 (elsewhere in the NT at Rom. 15:11; 1 Cor. 11:2, 17, 22 [twice]). Also failing is Bailey’s attempt (1976: 107) to argue that ἐπαινέω has eschatological force in picturing approval at the judgment. Other than the use of praise in Matt. 25:21, 34, the Gospels do not have this eschatological force, and in this Matthean context the eschatological force is clear, not inferred as it would have to be here. Porter 1990: 146–47 recognizes that the term must be positive, for the steward is commended for choosing to associate with the sons of this age, a comment dripping with bitter irony from the master. If one is to argue the irony position, this is the best way to do it. Against it, however, is the comparison in 16:8–9, which makes the steward look like a positive example through the commendation, not a negative one.

5 For the history of interpretation of this passage, see Boobyer 1942: 1–47; Liefeld 1974: 162–65; Baltensweiler 1959. Since no sayings of Jesus appear in this passage, the Jesus Seminar does not discuss it.

35 In Luke's writings: Luke 1:30; 2:10; Acts 18:9; 27:24; elsewhere in the NT: Matt. 1:20; 28:5, 10; Mark 6:50; Rev. 1:17; in the OT: Gen. 15:1; 26:24; Josh. 8:1; Isa. 43:1, 5; 44:2; Jer. 46:27–28; Dan. 10:12. See Balz, TDNT 9:212 §D2c; Marshall 1978: 56; Plummer 1896: 12; Creed 1930: 10.

20 Luke 12:5; 18:2, 4; 23:40. In Acts, the God-fearer is a person who respects God but does not know Jesus, often a non-proselyte Gentile favorable to God (10:2, 22, 35; 13:16, 26, 50 [probably]), or a Jew (16:14); Balz, TDNT 9:212–13.

15 To indicate sleep, Luke uses ὕπνος (BAGD 843; BAA 1679; elsewhere in Luke's writings twice in Acts 20:9) and βαρέω (to be heavy; BAGD 133; BAA 267; elsewhere in Luke's writings only in Luke 21:34). In 22:45–46, Luke uses the synonymous κοιμάω and καθεύδω. It is clear that the disciples are in deep sleep, for the phrase βεβαρημένοι ὕπνῳ translates literally as "weighed down with sleep." Balz, TDNT 8:554, speaks of disciples "drunk with sleep." Bovon's term "second consciousness" (1989: 498) is too visionary in force. He cites Gen. 15:12; Dan. 8:18; 10:9.

10 Bammel, TDNT 6:907 n. 203, notes that those who fail to leave all behind fail to be in the inner circle.

7 1 Enoch 102.9–10 shows the Jewish contempt for the selfish rich. T. Moses 7.3 may apply to the Sadducees or Pharisees. Lachs 1987: 311–12 revives Manson's thesis and rejects the idea that this is a description of the Pharisees. On the Pharisees' relatively modesty means (not every lover of money succeeds in being rich), see Jeremias 1969: 259; Bammel, TDNT 6:901–2.

16 Besides those already cited, other major works on Jesus' trial are Bammel 1970, Blinzler 1969, Sherwin-White 1963: 24–47, and Winter 1974. Catchpole, Blinzler, and Sherwin-White defend the historicity of much of the Lucan account. Fitzmyer 1985: 1466 also thinks a morning trial is most likely.

15 This view has been qualified recently by Barr 1988; see Witherington 1990: 217–18 for an evaluation of Barr's critique. On relating to God as a child does to a parent, see Luke 18:15–17; Dunn 1975: 23. R. Brown 1994: 172–75 has a full discussion of ›abbā‹.

61 See also the Gospel of Thomas 45a. On σαπρός as "rotten," "useless," or "of no value," see Bauernfeind, TDNT 7:97; Wiefel 1988: 139; Eph. 4:29.

16 On ἁπλοῦς as "clear, pure, healthy," see BAGD 86 and BAA 171. When the eye is clear, it is healthy and takes in light. The eye is a figure for spiritual condition in Matt. 6:22; Prov. 4:18–19; 11:25 (ἁπλοῦς with a different sense); T. Iss. 3.4; 4.6; Bauernfeind, TDNT 1:386; Michaelis, TDNT 5:377; Harder, TDNT 6:556; SB 1:302, 431–32, 722, 833.

8 On the coin, see BAGD 117; BAA 235; Matt. 10:29 (the only other NT use). Wiefel 1988: 233 puts its worth at five pfennigs, one of the smallest German coins. A denarius was a day's wage, so this is very little money. The most basic worker would earn this in roughly a half hour. The term for sparrow (στρουθίον) may also indicate simply a "little bird"; Plummer

1896: 319–20; Ps. 11:1 [10:1 LXX]; 84:3 [83:4 LXX]; MM 594; Bauernfeind, TDNT 7:730, 732 n. 19; Fitzmyer 1985: 960.

9 See McArthur 1960: 105–27; Carson 1984: 126–27; Jeremias 1963b: 1–12, 19–23; Hunter 1965: 107–11; Toussaint 1980: 86–94; Bauman 1985; and J. Martin 1986.

1 So correctly Luce 1933: 193–94, who is not averse to claiming that sayings are nonhistorical, yet defends historicity here. Marshall 1978: 398 notes the OT conceptual parallel in Num. 11:24–30. To be rejected is Goulder's view (1989: 450) that Luke 9:49–50 is really a subtle defense of Paul before the apostles, a view that looks like F. C. Baur reborn. Goulder is right to reject the view that Jesus endorses non-Christian exorcists here. They cannot act in Jesus' name. Luke has in mind those who have responded to Jesus and have sought to minister for him. He encourages such involvement.

4 Bayer 1986: 163–64. Silence does not mean that Jesus rejects a political messiahship. Jesus is a political Messiah in Luke (Acts 3:14–26). He will exercise such authority one day, but the point is that he will not do so at this time. The misunderstanding that is so dangerous is one of timing, not substance.

3 Bayer 1986: 193–94. Appealing to possible oral tradition, Marshall 1978: 394 more cautiously notes that μέλλει reflects an Aramaic participle and thus perhaps the saying's ancient form. Colpe, TDNT 8:444, speaks of a possible "unabbreviated special tradition," though he also sees the church developing this tradition. Fitzmyer 1981: 812 sees Luke's dependence only on Mark, though he has trouble explaining Luke's abbreviated prediction.

Bayer 1986: 197 makes a good case against the Lucan short form as the original form, arguing that Luke has abbreviated the tradition. Against a second source is Nolland 1993a: 512.

3 For vindication texts, see Ps. 3, 8, 9, 18, 27, 32, 56, and others where the righteous have hope of vindication. For resurrection texts, see Wis. 2:12–20; 5:1–7; Bayer 1986: 239 and n. 99.

11 Fitzmyer 1985: 995–96 notes that awareness of rejection by a religious leader is not unparalleled and cites 1QH 2.11–14, 32–33 as examples. Jesus was capable of anticipating his vindication in death; so correctly Bayer 1986: 77–85.

17 1 Cor. 11:2, 23; 15:3; Mark 7:13; Jude 3; Fitzmyer 1981: 296. On the verb's aorist form, cf. BDF §95.1.

33 This is the polite form of address; see BDF §60.2. However, that Theophilus is of high rank is not guaranteed; see Bovon 1989: 39 n. 64. See Theophrastus, Characters 5, who says that the address is "simple flattering speech." Nonetheless, Luke's usage does strongly lean toward a greeting of respect.

19 Stylistically this is like some OT phrases, e.g., "advanced in days" (Gen. 18:11; 24:1; Josh. 13:1; 23:1; 1 Kings 1:1); BDF §197; N. Turner 1963: 220 (dative of respect using ἐν); Luke 1:18; 2:36; Delling, TDNT 2:947–50, and esp. n. 42.

22 On the structure of this verse and Luke's use of ἐγένετο, see Creed 1930: 9; Klostermann 1929: 6–7; Marshall 1978: 54; BDF §472.3.

33 Fear is slightly emphatic in the sentence; BDF §472.2.

37 Gen. 16:11; 17:19; 1 Kings 13:2; Isa. 7:14; 49:1; also Luke 1:31; Matt. 1:21; Marshall 1978: 56. On the grammar, see BDF §157.2; Matt. 1:21, 23, 25; Luke 1:31; 2:21.

43 On the grammar of this emphatic command, see N. Turner 1963: 96; BDF §365.3; the LXX of Num. 6:3 and 1 Sam. 1:11 lacks μή.

48 On ἐν substituting for εἰς and meaning "into," see BDF §218; N. Turner 1963: 257.

64 Examples include Luke 5:1, 12, 17; 8:1, 22; 9:28, 51; see Fitzmyer 1981: 119. It is classical style; BDF §472.3.

29 BDF §177, §233.2; BDR §177.1–2; Marshall 1978: 68; Klostermann 1929: 14. Luke 1:33 is the only use of the verb in the Gospels with reference to Jesus; K. Schmidt, TDNT 1:590. References to his "kingdom" are found in 22:30 and 23:42. Despite the absence of this term, regal reign imagery is found in several other terms and concepts, especially in Luke's use of Ps. 110:1 in Luke–Acts, as well as in the picture of Jesus' victory over Satan. In the OT, 2 Sam. 2:4 comes closest to this wording; Nolland 1989: 52.

48 Creed 1930: 21; R. Brown 1977: 292; Klostermann 1929: 15; BDF §302.1; BDR §302.1.2. The force is that "nothing at all is impossible" for God.

56 Not, "I wish it would be to me according to your word," but, "let it be according to your word"; BDF §384; BDR §384.3; Fitzmyer 1981: 352.

4 Κ αὶ ἐγένετο (or ἐγένετο δέ) with a verb is a common Lucan expression: 1:5, 8, 23, 41, 59; 2:1, 6; 6:1; 8:22; Fitzmyer 1981: 363; Klostermann 1929: 16–17. On the grammar with ἀκούω, where the genitive indicates the speaker and the accusative the thing heard, see BDF §173 and BDR §173.1–2. Luke 11:31 and 15:25 are grammatically parallel to 1:41.

15 Plummer 1896: 29; Marshall 1978: 81. BDF §189.3 speaks of an ellipsis in the verse.

16 Plummer 1896: 29. Luke 10:11 and 12:39 are syntactically parallel but use ὅτι, not ἵνα; BDF §394; BDR §394.3.3. Ἵνα is epexegetical.

16 BDF §333.2; BDR §333.1b.6, §331.1. The frequency of such tense shifts in Hebrew poetry is demonstrated by Buth 1984, who argues, on the basis of this feature, that the hymn was originally in Hebrew.

19 R. Brown 1977: 337; BDF §493.2; BDR §493.2–3; Büchsel, TDNT 1:663. This is called “distributive doubling.” Schürmann 1969: 75 n. 231 prefers the translation “for many generations” with BDF.

22 BDF §333; Hendriksen 1978: 108, 112 defends this sense and cites Robertson 1923: 836–37, though Robertson says “maybe” to this view. For Grigsby 1984: 167 n. 29, this force is impossible, and he notes that the BDF discussion of the gnomic aorist does not mention the Magnificat. He apparently failed to read the fine-print portion of §333.2, where the hymn is mentioned. His omission undercuts the key reason he offers for rejecting a pre-Christian setting for the hymn.

27 Fitzmyer 1981: 368 sees a purpose infinitive here; BDF §391.4 argues for result; Marshall 1978: 85 and Michel, TDNT 4:676, opt for a causal reference.

2 The reference to Elizabeth is in the emphatic position; BDF §472.2; BDR §472.2.6.

11 BDF §472.2 and BDR §472.2.6 note that this word order is emphatic, since the reference to fear is delayed and the reference to all is moved forward. Literally the word order translates “there came upon all, fear.”

13 On the grammar of the predicate use of τί see BDF §299.2 and BDR §299.2.2.

11 In this chapter, both Elizabeth (1:41–44) and Zechariah give Spirit-directed remarks. The name Zechariah is in the emphatic position in the verse; BDF §472.2 and BDR §472.2.

24 For μετά meaning “to,” see BDF §206.3 and BDR §206.3.5; “with” cannot be meant here because the fathers do not cooperate with God in this action.

34 Schürmann 1969: 91 n. 67; Hendriksen 1978: 131; Wiefel 1988: 65; BDF §400.6. Bovon 1989: 108 correctly states that John has a foot in each era, since as the last of the prophets of promise he sets the table for the new era (Luke 7:26; 16:16).

48 The phraseology is Semitic in style, both in using the term ἡμέρα as meaning “time” (BDF §165; Delling, TDNT 2:950) and in using the genitive ἀναδείξεως (R. Brown 1977: 374). The use of ἀναδείξεως to describe his manifesting himself to Israel is the only NT use of the term (Sir. 43:6).

11 Hoehner 1977: 14–15; K. Weiss, TDNT 9:81 n. 12. For the force of ἀπογράφεσθαι as a middle verb, “to register oneself,” see BDF §317; in favor of the middle voice are 2:3, 5.

19 For the grammar of the temporal phrase πρὶν ἤ ἄν ἴδῃ, see BDF §383.3, §395.

25 On the grammar of κατὰ πρόσωπον, see BAGD 406 §II.1b; BAA 825 §II.1b; BDF §140; Plummer 1896: 69.

26 See Plummer 1896: 69 for four grammatical options for the genitive; Farris 1985: 149. R. Brown 1977: 440 notes that the peculiarity of the syntax here is a reflection of Semitic style; BDF §259.3.

9 Danker 1988: 74; Plummer 1896: 74. BDF §305 discusses the distributive use of κατά that is present here.

21 See BAGD 552 §II.7; BAA 1120 §II.7; BDF §162.8; Fitzmyer 1981: 443. Literally, the phrase translates as “in the things of my Father,” with the things referred to being determined by the given context.

10 Though this is its only use in Luke, the construction occurs twenty-seven times in Acts; BDF §451.1; BDR §451.1.3; Marshall 1978: 149.

2 See BAGD 691 §2c; BAA 1386 §2c; Gen. 6:5; Matt. 9:4; Mark 7:23. Grammatically the plural ὦν is attracted to πονηρῶν, while it refers back to πάντων; BDF §294.5; Marshall 1978: 149.

42 For εἰ μή (in this context: adversative “but”), see Klostermann 1929: 65; Marshall 1978: 189; BDF §448.8.

45 Luke 9:52 and 20:20 are grammatically parallel; BDF §390.3, §391.3.

41 Luke uses the optative in indirect questions; BDF §385.1, §386.1; BDR §385.1, §386.1.

20 It is likely that μικρότερος is to be taken as a superlative. BDF (§60, §244) discusses the construction, but does not mention this verse. Fitzmyer 1981: 675 erroneously attributes this form of the remark to the early church; see the introduction to 7:18–35. The blessedness of the μικρότερος is frequent in the NT: Matt. 10:42; 18:10, 14; Mark 9:42; Luke 9:48; Nolland 1989: 337.

39 Luke 3:18 and 6:6 seem to ignore any clean distinction. In favor of the distinction are Godet 1875: 1.345 and Plummer 1896: 202; against it are Elliott 1969 and BDF §306.

11 Seed as a metaphor for the word is common in the ancient world; Bovon 1989: 407 n. 25; Pseudo-Plutarch, Liberal Education 4 (2B); Plato, Phaedrus 276B–77A; Klauck 1978: 192–96. Ὁ σπείρων is generic in force and should be translated "a sower"; Arndt 1956: 229. Σπεῖραι is an infinitive of purpose: he went out "to sow his seed." On the generic article, see BDF §252 and BDR §252b.

3 Παραγίνομαι is probably Lucan: twenty-eight times in Luke–Acts, nine times in rest of NT, with three of these being in Matthew and one in Mark. The singular form of the verb reflects occasional Greek style in agreeing with the first subject; BDF §135.1a; BDR §135.1a; Marshall 1978: 331; Luke 8:22; Acts 11:14.

33 Arndt 1956: 240–41 speaks of many commands; Danker 1988: 182 of an ingressive imperfect ("he began to command" or "was about to command"), which is probably better; so also Fitzmyer 1981: 738; BDF §328, §329, §331. Bovon 1989: 435 n. 44 calls the choice very difficult, a judgment with which I concur.

10 The latter option is expressed as the protasis of a conditional sentence, as is seen by the use of the subjunctive ἀγοράσωμεν with εἰ μήτι: "unless we should go buy"; Marshall 1978: 360; BDF §376.

6 BDR §442.4b n. 11; BDF §442.5. Grammatically, the temporal note is a parenthetical nominative; BDF §144.

4 Note the passive progressive construction: ἦν παρακεκαλυμμένον (was being hidden). Marshall 1978: 394 notes that this construction with ἀπό (from) is a Hebraism; Ezek. 22:26; BDF §155.3. Citing Exod. 7:13–14 ("Pharaoh's heart was hardened"), Tiede 1988: 193 argues that the passive is ambiguous about the concealer's identity. Such remarks are usually tied to God's sovereignty (1 Cor. 1:30; 2:6–9). Regardless, the implication is that such concealment can be overturned only by attention to God's message. Nolland 1993a: 514 holds out the possibility of Satanic binding, noting that by 24:25 the disciples are seen as responsible for failing to understand. Nolland may be right.

3 Μείζων is superlative, not comparative, since there are more than two disciples (cf. the use of μικρότερος, the least, in 9:48; BDF §244). Luke's characteristic optative εἴη (might be) expresses a question whose answer is uncertain; BDR §267.2.3, §385.2.2; Luke 1:62; 3:15; 6:11.

4 The initial καί probably means "also" and introduces the second figure in the house, Mary. On the use of ὅδε (this person), here τῇδε, see BDF §289, §290.1.

5 Διακονεῖν (to serve) is an infinitive of result: Martha is left with the result that she serves alone; BDF §392.1f.

6 This emphatic figure of repetition is called "epanadiplosis"; BDF §493.1.

8 The grammar of the last phrase is difficult, but the idea is clear. For the options, see BDF §299.4, §360.4; BDR §299.4, §360.4; Moule 1959: 137, 187; Moulton and Howard 1929: 472. It is either a wish or an interjection that has Semitic roots.

24 Ἐργασία is largely a Lucan term in the NT: Acts 16:16, 19; 19:24, 25; Eph. 4:19; Fitzmyer 1985: 1002. Δίδωμι (to give) with ἐργασία is a Latinism; BDF §5.3b.

6 Comparative παρά may be a Semitism; Jeremias 1963a: 141; Luke 13:4; 18:14; BDF §236.3; BAGD 611 §III.3; BAA 1236 §III.3. The term πάντας must mean all other Galileans; Marshall 1978: 553; Fitzmyer 1985: 1007.

18 The omission of the apodosis is common in Semitic style; BDF §454.4; Acts 23:9; Rom. 9:22–24; Plummer 1896: 340. The apodosis in this case reads "well and good"; Manson 1949: 275.

5 BDF §310.1 and BDR §310.1.2 note that even the noun has the force of a verbal term in the middle voice, thus: "He went on his way through towns and villages, teaching, and taking a journey himself, making his way to Jerusalem."

7 On the use of εἰ to introduce questions, see N. Turner 1963: 333; BDF §440.3; BDR §440.3.5; Gen. 17:17; Matt. 12:10; 19:3; Luke 22:49; Acts 1:6; 22:25. Luke uses this construction for an "indirect question" nineteen times.

25 So the passive εὐφραίνω (to rejoice); BAGD 327 §2; BAA 663 §2; Luke 12:19; 16:19; Acts 2:26; 7:41; Rom. 15:10; Gal. 4:27. Used in other passages for eschatological joy, here its meaning is more mundane. The participle φαγόντες (eating) functions like a second verb (BDF §420.3; Marshall 1978: 611): "Let us eat and rejoice."

26 The optative εἴη introduces an indirect question; BDF §299.1, §386.1. In effect, he is asking, “What is going on?”

28 Οὗτος (this one) represents contempt in Matt. 20:12; Luke 18:11; Acts 17:18; Jeremias 1963a: 131; BDF §290.6. It will reappear in Luke 23 as the characters discuss and rebuke Jesus (23:2, 35).

6 The grammatical construction τοῦ μή plus the infinitive here means the inability to do something or to hinder something from happening; BDF §400.4; BDR §400.4.6; Plummer 1896: 398. Conceptually similar expressions are found in Luke 4:42; 24:16; Acts 10:47; 14:18; 20:20, 27.

16 The use of εἰ (if) plus ἄν (untranslated particle) yields a mixed condition; Arndt 1956: 369; BDF §372.1a. On the idiom πίστιν ἔχειν (to have faith), see 4 Macc. 16:22; Matt. 17:20; 21:21 = Mark 11:22; Acts 14:9; Rom. 14:2 (conceptually); 1 Cor. 13:2; 1 Tim. 1:19; 3:9; Philem. 5; James 2:1, 14, 18; Hanse, TDNT 2:826 n. 58.

5 This is Luke’s only use of πρὸς τό with a purpose infinitive in his Gospel; BDF §402.5; BDR §402.4.5; cf. Acts 3:19.

14 So the comparative παρ’ (than); Klostermann 1929: 181; Schrenk, TDNT 2:215 n. 16. Cf. παρά in Ps. 44:8 [45:7 Engl.]; Luke 13:2; BDF §185.3; BDR §185.3 n. 5 and §246.5.

19 This suggestion is expressed in a contrary-to-fact condition since the interest was not in fact earned: ἄν … ἔπραξα (I would have collected, but did not); BDF §360.2; BDR §360.2.3.

24 Two other minor variants (δεδώκει–ἔδωκεν and γνοῖ–γνῷ) follow a similar pattern in terms of external evidence: the first of each pair is read by

UBS–NA, the second is supported by Byz, A, W, Γ, Δ, Θ. On γνοῖ–γνῷ, see BDF §95.2; Mark 5:43; 9:30; BAGD 160; BAA 322.

17 On εἰ (if) with the aorist, see BDF §454.4; BDR §360.5. On aposiopesis, the breaking off of the remark because of emotion, see BDF §482; Luke 22:42; John 6:62; 12:27; Plummer 1896: 450.

6 Ἵνα (so that) with the future indicative δώσουσιν (they shall give) indicates purpose and is not like classical style; BDF §396.2; Plummer 1896: 459. A minor textual variant uses the more common construction and is the result of the unusual style.

8 All other uses of μὴ γένοιτο are made by Paul, who uses it fourteen times, ten times in Romans alone (e.g., 3:4, 6, 31; 6:2, 15; BDF §384; BDR §384.2). Fitzmyer 1985: 1285 notes that the Hebrew equivalent translates, “It is an abomination to me/us” (Gen. 44:17; Josh. 22:29).

6 On the syntax of ἔξεστιν with an infinitive and an accusative, see BDF §409.3 and BDR §409.3.4.

12 On the grammar of ταῦτα ἅ (these things which), see Marshall 1978: 759. The construction is an anacoluthon; BDF §466.1.

5 Μείζων (greatest) is comparative in form but probably superlative in context; BDF §244. But note that in 22:26–27 the same term is comparative again.

9 Marshall 1978: 812 wonders if ποιήσετε (you shall [not] do) is to be supplied; cf. BDF §480.5.

17 The terms for chief priests and scribes are in apposition to elders; BDF §444.4; Klostermann 1929: 220. Matt. 27:1 refers to the chief priests and elders of the people, while Mark 15:1 speaks of chief priests with elders and scribes.

5 Calling the trial a literary “nonevent,” Tyson 1986: 133–35 says that Luke’s description of Herod is “pale.” Herod is not an opponent here, but a curious bystander, maybe even a frustrated one. Ἐπηρώτα in 23:9 is a conative imperfect: “he tried to question”; BDF §326.

4 Αὐτῷ (by him) is the only NT example of the dative of agent, which is good Attic Greek; BDF §191.

6 Στάσις means “rebellion or uprising” elsewhere at Mark 15:7; Luke 23:25; Acts 19:40 (elsewhere in the NT at Acts 15:2; 23:7, 10; 24:5; Heb. 9:8; BAGD 764 §2; BAA 1526 §2). This is the only NT expression of periphrasis with ἦν (was) and an aorist participle; BDR §355.1; BDF §355.1; Plummer 1896: 526 (although א* in John 18:30 also has this construction).

5 Πλήν (but [rather]) signals a strong contrast like ἀλλά (but); BDF §449.1; BDR §449.1.3; Matt. 26:39 = Luke 22:42.

9 On the use of ὅπως with the meaning of πῶς (how?) in an indirect question, see BDF §300.1; BDR §300.1; §436.2. Codex D has the more common ὡς, but the attestation is too slight to be original.

11 This last clause is expressed impersonally without a clear subject and is usually translated as “he is already spending the third day” (BDF §129; BDR §129.2.3; BAGD 14 §4), although Arndt 1943 translates it as “it is three days.” On the use of σύν with the force of “besides all this,” see BDF §221; BDR §221.

24 The distributive singular καρδία indicates that the heart burned in each of them; Marshall 1978: 898; Col. 3:16; BDF §140. The periphrastic idiom pictures a running emotion; Plummer 1896: 557–58. On the sense of καρδία in Luke, see 1:51, 66; 2:19, 35, 51; 3:15; 5:22; 9:47; 24:25; Tiede 1988: 437.

21 The use of the article as a pronoun is rare, but usually involves the singular “he” or “she”; Plummer 1896: 22; BDR §3.6.

29 BDF §177, §233.2; BDR §177.1–2; Marshall 1978: 68; Klostermann 1929: 14. Luke 1:33 is the only use of the verb in the Gospels with reference to Jesus; K. Schmidt, TDNT 1:590. References to his “kingdom” are found in 22:30 and 23:42. Despite the absence of this term, regal reign imagery is found in several other terms and concepts, especially in Luke’s use of Ps. 110:1 in Luke–Acts, as well as in the picture of Jesus’ victory over Satan. In the OT, 2 Sam. 2:4 comes closest to this wording; Nolland 1989: 52.

32 On εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας as a plural expression that stresses eternality, see Sasse, TDNT 1:199. For the grammar of the phrase, see BDR §141.1.3.

48 Creed 1930: 21; R. Brown 1977: 292; Klostermann 1929: 15; BDF §302.1; BDR §302.1.2. The force is that “nothing at all is impossible” for God.

56 Not, “I wish it would be to me according to your word,” but, “let it be according to your word”; BDF §384; BDR §384.3; Fitzmyer 1981: 352.

4 Κ αὶ ἐγένετο (or ἐγένετο δέ) with a verb is a common Lucan expression: 1:5, 8, 23, 41, 59; 2:1, 6; 6:1; 8:22; Fitzmyer 1981: 363; Klostermann 1929: 16–17. On the grammar with ἀκούω, where the genitive indicates the speaker and the accusative the thing heard, see BDF §173 and BDR §173.1–2. Luke 11:31 and 15:25 are grammatically parallel to 1:41.

14 Rom. 8:15; John 1:15; Mark 9:24; Marshall 1978: 81. The dative here is a dative of means; BDR §198.4–5.

16 Plummer 1896: 29. Luke 10:11 and 12:39 are syntactically parallel but use ὅτι, not ἵνα; BDF §394; BDR §394.3.3. Ἵνα is epexegetical.

16 BDF §333.2; BDR §333.1b.6, §331.1. The frequency of such tense shifts in Hebrew poetry is demonstrated by Buth 1984, who argues, on the basis of this feature, that the hymn was originally in Hebrew.

19 R. Brown 1977: 337; BDF §493.2; BDR §493.2–3; Büchsel, TDNT 1:663. This is called “distributive doubling.” Schürmann 1969: 75 n. 231 prefers the translation “for many generations” with BDF.

2 The reference to Elizabeth is in the emphatic position; BDF §472.2; BDR §472.2.6.

11 BDF §472.2 and BDR §472.2.6 note that this word order is emphatic, since the reference to fear is delayed and the reference to all is moved forward. Literally the word order translates “there came upon all, fear.”

13 On the grammar of the predicate use of τί see BDF §299.2 and BDR §299.2.2.

11 In this chapter, both Elizabeth (1:41–44) and Zechariah give Spirit-directed remarks. The name Zechariah is in the emphatic position in the verse; BDF §472.2 and BDR §472.2.

13 Εἴη (not ἐστίν) should be supplied, yielding “blessed be the God of Israel”; BDR §128.5.8.

24 For μετά meaning “to,” see BDF §206.3 and BDR §206.3.5; “with” cannot be meant here because the fathers do not cooperate with God in this action.

27 For χειρός as a figure for power, see the exegesis of 1:71. On the grammar, see BDR §217.5.

16 Plummer 1896: 57. Traub, TDNT 5:537–38, discusses the “heavenly host.” A singular noun joined to a plural participle is an ad sensum construction; BDR §134.1b.

20 The term ἐν could be rendered as a simple dative: “to men of his good pleasure”; BDR §220.1.1.

22 On the unusual spelling of Mary’s name, see BDR §53.4.12.

10 Though this is its only use in Luke, the construction occurs twenty-seven times in Acts; BDF §451.1; BDR §451.1.3; Marshall 1978: 149.

41 Luke uses the optative in indirect questions; BDF §385.1, §386.1; BDR §385.1, §386.1.

65 Fitzmyer 1981: 644; BDR §466.3. On this construction, see also Matt. 10:32 and Luke 12:48. In other words, the subject of the start of the sentence (the participles) and that of the subsequent clause (“I [Jesus] will show you”) are not the same.

11 Seed as a metaphor for the word is common in the ancient world; Bovon 1989: 407 n. 25; Pseudo-Plutarch, Liberal Education 4 (2B); Plato, Phaedrus 276B–77A; Klauck 1978: 192–96. Ὁ σπείρων is generic in force and should be translated “a sower”; Arndt 1956: 229. Σπεῖραι is an infinitive of purpose: he went out “to sow his seed.” On the generic article, see BDF §252 and BDR §252b.

3 Παραγίνομαι is probably Lucan: twenty-eight times in Luke–Acts, nine times in rest of NT, with three of these being in Matthew and one in Mark. The singular form of the verb reflects occasional Greek style in agreeing with the first subject; BDF §135.1a; BDR §135.1a; Marshall 1978: 331; Luke 8:22; Acts 11:14.

6 BDR §442.4b n. 11; BDF §442.5. Grammatically, the temporal note is a parenthetical nominative; BDF §144.

3 Μείζων is superlative, not comparative, since there are more than two disciples (cf. the use of μικρότερος, the least, in 9:48; BDF §244). Luke’s characteristic optative εἴη (might be) expresses a question whose answer is uncertain; BDR §267.2.3, §385.2.2; Luke 1:62; 3:15; 6:11.

8 The grammar of the last phrase is difficult, but the idea is clear. For the options, see BDF §299.4, §360.4; BDR §299.4, §360.4; Moule 1959: 137, 187; Moulton and Howard 1929: 472. It is either a wish or an interjection that has Semitic roots.

5 BDF §310.1 and BDR §310.1.2 note that even the noun has the force of a verbal term in the middle voice, thus: “He went on his way through towns and villages, teaching, and taking a journey himself, making his way to Jerusalem.”

7 On the use of εἰ to introduce questions, see N. Turner 1963: 333; BDF §440.3; BDR §440.3.5; Gen. 17:17; Matt. 12:10; 19:3; Luke 22:49; Acts 1:6; 22:25. Luke uses this construction for an “indirect question” nineteen times.

6 The grammatical construction τοῦ μή plus the infinitive here means the inability to do something or to hinder something from happening; BDF §400.4; BDR §400.4.6; Plummer 1896: 398. Conceptually similar expressions are found in Luke 4:42; 24:16; Acts 10:47; 14:18; 20:20, 27.

5 This is Luke’s only use of πρὸς τό with a purpose infinitive in his Gospel; BDF §402.5; BDR §402.4.5; cf. Acts 3:19.

14 So the comparative παρ’ (than); Klostermann 1929: 181; Schrenk, TDNT 2:215 n. 16. Cf. παρά in Ps. 44:8 [45:7 Engl.]; Luke 13:2; BDF §185.3; BDR §185.3 n. 5 and §246.5.

19 This suggestion is expressed in a contrary-to-fact condition since the interest was not in fact earned: ἄν … ἔπραξα (I would have collected, but did not); BDF §360.2; BDR §360.2.3.

13 On the unusual and emphatic placement of the attributive genitive αὐτῶν (their), see Plummer 1896: 447 and BDR §271.1c n. 5.

15 That Luke is the only Synoptist to note this praise leads Marshall 1978: 714 to raise the possibility that Luke uses another source because of the unusual combinations of ἐγγίζω with πρός (to draw near to) and πρός with the dative. The latter construction occurs only here in Luke, six times elsewhere in the NT (Mark 5:11; John 18:16; 20:11, 12 [twice]; Rev. 1:13; BDR §240.2), and 104 times in the LXX.

17 On εἰ (if) with the aorist, see BDF §454.4; BDR §360.5. On aposiopesis, the breaking off of the remark because of emotion, see BDF §482; Luke 22:42; John 6:62; 12:27; Plummer 1896: 450.

22 The place to which the bodies are thrown is understood in this elliptical verb: “to the ground as dead bodies”; BDR §478.2.

11 Luke commonly introduces indirect questions with τό (functioning as a particle); Luke 1:62; 9:46; 22:2, 4, 23, 24; Acts 4:21; 22:30; BDR §267.2–3.

12 The unprefixed form of the verb is used in Acts 28:4 and Gal. 3:13; BDR §93.3.5. Virgil uses the idiom for Dido’s hanging on Aeneas’s lips; Aeneid 4.79.

5 The redundant participle λέγοντες with εἶπαν is common; BDR §420.1.1.

8 All other uses of μὴ γένοιτο are made by Paul, who uses it fourteen times, ten times in Romans alone (e.g., 3:4, 6, 31; 6:2, 15; BDF §384; BDR §384.2). Fitzmyer 1985: 1285 notes that the Hebrew equivalent translates, “It is an abomination to me/us” (Gen. 44:17; Josh. 22:29).

9 Λίθον (stone) undergoes reverse attraction to ὅν (which) and is picked up by οὗτος (this one) later in the verse; Marshall 1978: 732; BDR §295.2.

6 On the syntax of ἔξεστιν with an infinitive and an accusative, see BDF §409.3 and BDR §409.3.4.

6 Στάσις means “rebellion or uprising” elsewhere at Mark 15:7; Luke 23:25; Acts 19:40 (elsewhere in the NT at Acts 15:2; 23:7, 10; 24:5; Heb. 9:8; BAGD 764 §2; BAA 1526 §2). This is the only NT expression of periphrasis with ἦν (was) and an aorist participle; BDR §355.1; BDF §355.1; Plummer 1896: 526 (although א* in John 18:30 also has this construction).

5 Πλήν (but [rather]) signals a strong contrast like ἀλλά (but); BDF §449.1; BDR §449.1.3; Matt. 26:39 = Luke 22:42.

7 Βουνός (hill) is rare in the NT, both times being tied to an OT text: Luke 3:5 (Isa. 40:4) and Luke 23:30 (Hos. 10:8); BAGD 146; BAA 292; BDR §126.1b.5. In contrast, the synonymous ὄρος (mountain) appears sixty-three times in the NT.

10 Plummer 1896: 548 notes that most NT uses of ἔμφοβος (BAGD 257; BAA 520) are Lucan: Luke 24:37; Acts 10:4; 24:25; Rev. 11:13; cf. Luke 1:12, 29–30; 2:9. On the genitive absolute with an accusative object, see BDR §423.2.8.

9 On the use of ὅπως with the meaning of πῶς (how?) in an indirect question, see BDF §300.1; BDR §300.1; §436.2. Codex D has the more common ὡς, but the attestation is too slight to be original.

11 This last clause is expressed impersonally without a clear subject and is usually translated as “he is already spending the third day” (BDF §129; BDR §129.2.3; BAGD 14 §4), although Arndt 1943 translates it as “it is three days.” On the use of σύν with the force of “besides all this,” see BDF §221; BDR §221.

14 On the syntax of τοῦ πιστεύειν ἐπί (to believe), see BAGD 287 §II.1bγ; BAA 582 §II.1bγ; BDR §187.2.2; §400.8.10; Acts 5:14; 9:42; 18:8; 16:31; 22:19; Rom. 9:33; 10:11; 1 Tim. 1:16; 1 Pet. 2:6. Wilcox 1965: 85–86 argues that this is possibly a Semitic construction.

22 The first occurrence of the personal pronoun αὐτῶν (their) is slightly emphatic since it is separated from its modifier; BDR §277.4.

6 BDR §423.2.7 and §423.1.2 notes that Luke uses the temporal genitive absolute fifty-seven times, while Acts has it one hundred times. The construction occurs in Matthew fifty-one times and in Mark thirty-four times. This is too common to attribute its presence to any one evangelist or to rule out its presence in the tradition (against Fitzmyer 1985: 1574 and Nolland 1993b: 1212).

8 Καρδία (BAGD 403 §1bβ; BAA 819 §1bβ) occurs with διαλογισμός (thoughts) in 2:35 and 9:47 (cf. 3:15 and 5:22) and with the verb ἀναβαίνω (to arise), which may be rendered idiomatically as “thoughts arise within the person,” in Acts 7:23; 1 Cor. 2:9; Jer. 3:16–17. BDR §4.3.8 calls the expression of thoughts arising in the heart a Semitism. Διαλογισμός (BAGD 186 §2; BAA 372 §2) carries the sense of “doubt” or “dispute” in Luke 9:46; 24:38; Phil. 2:14; 1 Tim. 2:8 and the sense of “thoughts” in Matt. 15:19 = Mark 7:21; Luke 2:35; 5:22; 6:8; 9:47; Rom. 1:21; 14:1; 1 Cor. 3:20; James 2:4.

12 Dillon 1978: 192 argues that the reference to joy is Luke’s, but why Luke should be responsible for such an insertion is not clear. On the syntax of ἀπό (from) with the force of ὑπό or παρά, see BDR §210.1.1; cf. Matt. 13:44; 14:26; Luke 21:26; 22:45; Acts 12:14; Plummer 1896: 560.

22 Ἕως is a general reference to “the area of,” especially when combined with ἔξω (outside); BDR §239.3.3; Acts 17:14; 21:5; 26:11; Gen. 38:1; Ezek. 48:1; Marshall 1978: 908. But ἔξω is textually disputed; see the additional note.

3 Bultmann 1963: 145 sees much of this material as church formulated and as regulations for the church. Beare 1970 rejects the mission and the discourse’s historicity, as does the Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 317–23, esp. 320).

5 Marshall 1978: 455 sees either two versions or Matthew’s adding to an original short edition like that in Luke. These reflect distinct recensions of Q; but he does not discuss the number of events. Jeremias 1971a: 193–96 argues for the originality of the Lucan form and posits an Aramaic form behind it. He regards its structure as memorable in an oral context, carrying rhyme and a two-four rhythm (so also Meier 1994: 293). Beasley-Murray 1986: 147 argues that Luke’s version is original in extent, but that Matthew’s is closer to the original wording, a view close to Nolland’s (noted above). For him Luke’s prayer circulated in Gentile Christian circles, while Matthew’s was the Jewish-Christian version. Nevertheless, for him the prayer’s roots go back to Jesus. Wiefel 1988: 215 is less certain of this attempt to distinguish communities.

11 Fitzmyer 1985: 902 mentions the Qumran community prayers, such as the Hôdāyôt or Thanksgiving Psalms. On comparison with the Shemoneh Esreh, see Beasley-Murray 1986: 148–57; K. Kuhn 1950: 30–33, 40–46.

23 For the debate, see Ladd 1974a; Ladd 1974b: 57–69; Kümmel 1957 (a full presentation of the NT kingdom passages, dividing them into present and/or future aspects); Lundströ;m 1963; Chilton 1984; and Beasley-Murray 1986. For the term in Judaism, see Lattke 1984.

16 Fitzmyer 1985: 966. 1 Cor. 2:7 has a different verb (λαλέω, to speak), while John 14:26 and 1 John 2:27 use διδάσκω (to teach). Marshall 1978: 520–21 defends the authenticity of the concept, citing Beasley-Murray 1970: 473–74.

1 On the Jewish expectations of either a political kingdom or a kingdom coming directly and apocalyptically from God, see Goppelt 1981–82: 1.45–51 and Ladd 1974b: 60–63. Matt. 13:11 calls this gradual growth part of the "mystery" of the kingdom. Matt. 13:52 shows that the kingdom promise contains both new and old things side by side, indicating that NT kingdom revelation supplements and complements OT revelation. Beasley-Murray 1986: 194–201 lists the parables of growth in the Synoptics: mustard seed and leaven (Luke 13:18–21 = Matt. 13:31–33 = Mark 4:30–32), seed growing secretly (Mark 4:26–29), sower (Luke 8:4–8 = Matt. 13:1–9 = Mark 4:1–9), wheat and tares (Matt. 13:24–30), and the dragnet (Matt. 13:47–50).

18 Beasley-Murray 1986: 171–72; 1 Chron. 9:24; Ps. 96:3; 107:3 (the gathered are dispersed Jews); Isa. 2:2; 25:6–9; 40:5; 43:5–6; 45:6, 14; 49:12; 51:4; 52:10; 55:5; 56:7; 59:19; 66:19–20; Mic. 4:1–2; Zech. 2:13 [2:17 MT]; Mal. 1:11; Luke 14:15; 22:16, 29–30; Rev. 19:9; Plummer 1896: 348.

9 Most, like Talbert 1982: 166, see Jesus attacking apocalyptic calendar-setting, but this needs careful definition in view of NT exhortations to watch carefully for the Son of Man's return. Granted, a specific date cannot and should not be sought, but sensitivity to general eschatological sequence or to watchfulness is never condemned (Matt. 24–25 = Mark 13; Luke 21:5–36; Acts 3:11–26). The view is right to deny date-setting, but is wrong to see the only sign as “Spirit-empowered ministry.” New Testament eschatological hope is more specific and futurist than this denial suggests. In a more balanced approach, Beasley-Murray 1986: 100 notes that there are “signs” to see—if one has the eyes to see them. Meier 1994: 425 mentions texts where Jesus urges the community of faith to be prepared for a long ministry (Luke 21:7–24; 19:11; Acts 1:6–7; Mark 13:10). But disciples are still to keep looking for Jesus (Matt. 24–25 = Mark 13 = Luke 21:5–36).

11 Creed 1930: 218–19; Sneed 1962; Dalman 1909: 145–47; Dodd 1961: 62–63 (who later switched to view 2). See Mattill 1979: 193 and Beasley-Murray 1986: 101 for details on the Gospel of Thomas, Origen, Chrysostom, Athanasius, Ambrose, Jerome, and Luther.

12 So Leaney 1958: 230; Fitzmyer 1985: 1161–62; Mattill 1979: 201; Roberts 1948; Rüstow 1960; Cadbury 1950; Tertullian, Against Marcion 4.35.12. Beasley-Murray 1986: 102–3 takes this view, though he fails to evaluate this option when it is taken with a present force. Riesenfeld 1949 does not mention the evidence from Aquila noted in n. 13 below—a grave omission—in arguing that “in your midst” is not possible. Schlosser 1980: 1.202–4 argues that “in one’s power” is a possible first-century meaning, but he opts for “in the midst of.” His discussion is the latest careful examination of the evidence.

13 Jeremias 1980: 266 attributes this digression from Luke's common expression to the presence of a traditional source. Also, Mattill 1979: 197 notes that, since the Greek versions variously translate Exod. 34:9 with ἐν μέσῳ (Theodotion, Symmachus) and ἐντός (Aquila), the phrases can be synonymous (Field 1875: 1.144). Beasley-Murray 1986: 101–2 adds a similar example from Exod. 17:7 (Field 1875: 1.111). Note also Symmachus in Lam. 1:3 and Ps. 87:6 LXX [88:6 Engl.] (Field 1875: 747, 239). Meier 1994: 479 notes that this translation appears in the literal Aquila and the more idiomatic Symmachus, making the meaning of ἐντός clear. These ancient texts show that "in the midst" is a well-attested sense for the term.

1 I confine my discussion here to 17:22–37. The larger issue of Jesus' apocalyptic discourse teaching is discussed in detail in the sources and historicity section of 21:5–38. For an overview of the larger discussion, Beasley-Murray's survey (1993) has a full discussion of points that I can only touch on here and in 21:5–38.

3 The history of interpretation of this discourse can be found in Beasley-Murray's several works: 1952–53a, 1952–53b, 1954, and 1957: 1–18 (updated in 1993: 1–349), while his own views about the discourse are summarized in 1986: 322–24. Beasley-Murray 1993: 367–70 sees two purposes for the discourse: (1) to inspire faith, endurance, and hope and (2) to warn Christians against false teaching about the end. See also the exegesis of 17:22–37.

4 A detailed demonstration of the solution to this problem is beyond the scope of a commentary on Luke. Marshall 1978: 758 notes that no good solution to the transmission question can be clearly demonstrated and that the general teaching coheres with Jesus' teaching elsewhere—which means that the material's core goes back to Jesus. Each of the monographs behind views 1–4 engages in detailed analyses of the text and its OT roots—something more conservative studies frequently lack. Wenham's work (view 5) is an exception to this pattern, as is that of Beasley-Murray.

29 Beckwith 1985: 217–21 argues that the Targum on Lamentations (cited above as an example of confusion) is in fact an illustration of this very conscious technique.

11 On κοιλία as womb, see Behm, TDNT 3:787. The only NT uses of the term σκιρτάω are in 1:41, 44; 6:23. The context of joy for each of the uses is consistent with Lucan usage; Fitzer, TDNT 7:402.

24 The term καρδία describes the place of reflection; Luke 1:51; 9:47; 24:38; Acts 8:22; Mark 11:23; Behm, TDNT 3:612.

20 Grundmann, TDNT 3:545, though he overemphasizes baptism here. The fruit is submission to God through repentance, which in turn is productive; also Behm, TDNT 4:1001. The presence of more than one tree argues against seeing trees as a corporate image equal to Israel, as Maurer, TDNT 6:988 §4a, holds. What John says about the day of judgment applies to any unproductive person, though it is clear that John's audience is a Jewish one.

20 Only Luke explicitly mentions repentance. Mark 2:17 and Matt. 9:13 are very similar otherwise. On repentance, see Behm, TDNT 4:1001–2 §E.II.2.

20 Luke alone refers explicitly to the cloth as καινός, which here means “unused.” He uses the term three times in the verse, so it has a touch of emphasis. I translated it “new” to keep the parallelism and linkage clear. It usually refers to a qualitative newness; Bovon 1989: 263. So here it means a new and better teaching. Luke returns to the use of νέος in 5:37–38 in agreement with the Synoptic parallels; Behm, TDNT 3:448; Matt. 9:17; Luke 22:20. On this metaphor, see Maurer, TDNT 7:961 §4a.

31 Fitzmyer 1981: 680 raises the possibility that ἄρτον (bread) is a generic reference to food, as in 2 Thess. 3:8, 12; Behm, TDNT 1:477 §2.

10 Bock 1987: 115–16, 323–24 nn. 96–97. On the apocalyptic imagery, see Behm, TDNT 4:758; on God’s glory, see Ps. 104:2; Hab. 3:4.

17 A similar metonymic meaning for ἄρτος as food, not just bread, is found in Luke 7:33; John 13:18; 2 Thess. 3:8, 12; Marshall 1978: 458; Behm, TDNT 1:477–78.

3 Similar settings are found in Luke 10:25–30; 12:13–15; 15:1–3. The idea is to share in eternal reward or eternal life. On the eschatological banquet in Judaism, see Exod. Rab. 25.7 on 16:4; 2 Bar. 29.8; 1 Enoch 25.5; Behm, TDNT 2:691.

11 Note the parallelism to 22:18 and the kingdom’s final coming. Behm, TDNT 2:695, correctly speaks of the “fulfilled Passover” in the kingdom, the messianic meal of the last time—imagery that the Jewish Passover also anticipated, since the Hallel Psalms sung at the culmination looked to God’s deliverance.

13 Διατίθημι has the meaning “to assign” in Josephus, Antiquities 13.16.1 §407; BAGD 189–90 §3; BAA 381 §2; Behm, TDNT 2:104–6.

20 Dillon's effort (1978: 149–51) to find a connection with John 21:9–13 seems forced. The catch of fish outdoors in the Sea of Galilee does not equal a meal indoors near Jerusalem. Only the motif of a shared meal is the same (Behm, TDNT 1:477; Marshall 1978: 898). Another post-resurrection meal occurs in Luke 24:41–43 and Mark 16:14 (if it is original).

1 For solid overviews of this area, see McKnight 1991b and Stein 1987. McKnight is slightly more confident than I am of Marcan priority, though I still regard it likely that Mark was the first Gospel written. Still, his and Stein's overviews show why many think Mark's Gospel is first. For a comparative study of the two major options in the debate, see Bellinzoni, Tyson, and Walker 1985 and Dungan 1990. A study making significant points about Q and the complex interrelationship of the Gospel writers is Reicke 1986. For the case for Matthean priority, see Farmer 1964.

3 R. Brown 1977: 346–55; Wiefel 1988: 57; Farris 1985: 86–98; Fitzmyer 1981: 359–62; Jones 1968; Bemile 1986: 36. Fitzmyer, agreeing with Winter and Schneider, notes that the hymn is parallel to the psalms in 1 Maccabees, the Qumran Thanksgiving hymns, and the Qumran War Scroll. The hymn also resembles the OT hymns of praise (Ps. 33, 47, 48, 113, 135, 136; one could add to the list 1 Sam. 2:1–10; Jon. 2:2–9 [2:3–10 MT]; Isa. 38:9–20; Tob. 8:15–17; and Sir. 51:1–12). Fitzmyer (p. 359) regards 1:48 as a Lucan insert. In fact, he seems favorable to R. Brown's position that the hymn emerged out of the Jewish-Christian community. Schneider 1977a: 56 sees a Hellenistic Jewish-Christian rewrite of Jewish material or a reworking by Luke himself; so also C. F. Evans 1990: 171–73.

9 Three Old Latin manuscripts (a, b, and l*) attest to Elizabeth, as does the Latin version of Irenaeus, Against Heresies 4.7.1. Jerome refers to this view as contained in Origen's seventh homily on Luke. About A.D.. 400 Niceta of Remesiana (in the area of the former Yugoslavia) knows of this reading (De Psalmodiae Bono 76 or 9.11). Wiefel 1988: 56 and Fitzmyer 1981: 365–66 note the texts. Farris 1985: 108–13 has a detailed look at the issue, as does Bemile 1986: 5–19. Bemile correctly notes that the testimony of the fathers is for Mary (pp. 12 and 266–68 nn. 54–61), including Irenaeus, Against Heresies 3.10.2; Tertullian, On the Soul 26; and Athanasius, In Lucam (PG 3:26:1393).

12 I lay out the hymn in thought units so the parallelisms are visible. Note the chiasmus in 1:52–53: powers–humble–hungry–rich. This declaration of eschatological reversal in very rhetorical style also opens the hymn (1:46–48). With the refrain about the generations, the hymn broadens its worldview to include all who trust God. God's commitment to Israel and to his promise closes the passage. The parallelism in the passage is both synonymous (as in the opening line) and antithetical (as in the opposition of the hungry and the rich). The best discussion of structure is Bemile 1986: 37–62, esp. 47.

13 Charts detailing the various OT parallels in the hymn can be found in Plummer 1896: 30–31; Klostermann 1929: 18–19; and R. Brown 1977: 358–60. The fullest chart including Qumran parallels is Bemile 1986: 116–33. For the connection to 1 Sam. 2, see Goulder 1989: 225–29, who also notes parallels to Ps. 88 and 102.

25 So err many liberation movements that appeal to Jesus' teaching about the poor. For a balanced discussion that applies the text to South America and Africa without succumbing to political ideology, see Bemile 1986: 237–53.

6 R. Brown 1977: 377–78; Fitzmyer 1981: 377–78; Farris 1985: 27–28. The formative articulation of the view is Benoit 1956–57: 182–83. His work not only formulated the basic position, but is regarded as having challenged the unity of the hymn as well.

7 Among the hypotheses are the following:

	Added to	Adherents
1:76–79	Jewish or Jewish-Christian hymn	Winter 1956: 239 n. 41
1:76 or 1:76–77	early Christian hymn	Benoit 1956–57: 182–91
1:68–75	Christian hymn	Schürmann 1969: 88–90
1:76–77, 79b	Baptist hymn	Hahn 1969: 242–43, 365–66
1:76–77	Jewish-Christian hymn of the Anawim	R. Brown 1977: 377–78; Farris 1985: 27–28

1:70, 76–77	Jewish-Christian hymn probably from the Anawim	Fitzmyer 1981: 378

10 Farris 1985: 67–85 surveys the parallel examples in the OT and Judaism; Berger 1984: 242–43; Fitzmyer 1981: 359; Schneider 1977a: 56–58. Bovon 1989: 82–83 notes that the Magnificat focuses on the victory of the righteous; it does not praise God as Creator, as do the Qumranic hymns, and has less harsh criticism of enemies than do the Psalms of Solomon. Bovon notes many verbal parallels to the Psalms of Solomon:

Motif	Magnificat	Psalms of Solomon
fearing God	1:50	2.33; 3.12; 4.23; 15.13
Israel or the nation as servant	1:54	12.6; 17.21
Abraham and his descendants	1:55	9.9; 18.3
the proud	1:51	2.1–31; 17.13, 23
contrast of rich and	1:53	5.11

poor
reversal	1:52	11.4
refrain	1:50	13.12
power of God	1:51	17.3
arm of God	1:51	13.2
God’s seeing	1:48	18.2
God’s help	1:54	16.3, 5
God’s remembering	1:54	10.1, 4
God’s speaking	1:55	11.7

2 Marshall 1978: 86 speaks of the Jewish berākâ. Berger 1984: 243 calls the Benedictus a psalm of thanksgiving, as does Bovon 1989: 96–97.

3 Marshall 1978: 86; Berger 1984: 243. Bovon 1989: 99 notes that the expressions here have similarities to the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs: compassion (Luke 1:78; T. Zeb. 7.2–3; 8.2) and to visit (Luke 1:68, 78; T. Levi 4.4; T. Judah 23.5; T. Asher 7.3).

9 Berger 1984: 349 calls this passage biography—a child history that places the baby in the framework of larger world history.

8 Berger 1984: 243, 350. Bovon 1989: 137 speaks of a God-directed meeting (other examples are Luke 1:39–45; Acts 9:10–18; 10:17–29). He observes that meetings before a death have parallels in the OT (Gen. 46:30 [Jacob with Joseph]; Deut. 32:49–50; 34:1–5 [Moses and the land]) and in Judaism (Tob. 11:10–15). Bovon also notes Greek parallels.

8 Berger 1984: 337 §7, who also notes a parallel to T. Job 27.3–5. There is one distinction here: Job never talks with his adversary, so the parallel is not exact.

10 Berger 1984: 272, 281, 316 speaks of Peter's realization of sin here as a religious self-witness. He sees the account as related to commission. It is one of many miracles on the sea (John 21:1–14; Mark 4:35–41 = Luke 8:22–25; Mark 6:45–52 = Matt. 14:22–23); Berger 1984: 309–10. Interestingly, all the sea miracles involve only disciples.

12 Bultmann 1963: 212, 240; Fitzmyer 1981: 572; Berger 1984: 314; Theissen 1983: 321. Fitzmyer notes that M. Dibelius's classification of this account as a tale is certainly wrong. Dibelius classifies many miracle stories as tale, reflecting perhaps other presuppositions.

14 Theissen notes that such accounts combine healing and exposition but that exposition dominates. Similarly, Berger 1984: 85 speaks of the binding together of Chrie (his term for "sayings") and miracle.

3 Mark 1:16–20 and Luke 5:1–11 are two form parallels; Bovon 1989: 252; Berger 1984: 316 (discusses the parallel in Mark 2:14); V. Taylor 1935: 75. Schürmann 1969: 287 speaks of an apophthegm for the whole account, which combines a call with a controversy account.

4 Bultmann 1963: 18. Berger 1984: 80–81 speaks of a “Chrie,” which is his category for apophthegm.

7 Bultmann 1963: 18–19; Fitzmyer 1981: 595; Berger 1984: 80. Bultmann believes that even the first saying was added to this setting, which was created by the church, arguing that the situation in the saying is “indefinite.” But all metaphors (which Mark 2:19a is) are allusions and indirect statements. The objection does not have force.

10 Bultmann 1963: 16–17, who argues that the passage is the work of the church to justify its “Sabbath customs” (or, rather, its lack of them). This view was rejected in the discussion of authenticity. Bovon 1989: 269 sees the church drawing on an authentic saying in the tradition. Berger 1984: 80, 309 calls the passage apophthegm, Chrie, and Sabbath conflict.

10 Berger 1984: 37, 46–47, 51, 57–58 mentions 6:41–42, 45 as admonishment, while regarding 6:39–40, 43–45, 47–49 as parabolic. Bovon 1989: 330 calls 6:46 a warning.

3 Fitzmyer 1981: 656 notes that Luke 8:40–42, 49–56; Acts 9:36–43; and perhaps Acts 20:7–12 also are in this form. That it ends with a confession causes Berger 1984: 312 to classify it as epideixis, so the text’s goal is the admiration of Jesus.

3 Bultmann 1963: 20–21 places the discussion in the section on apophthegms and controversy dialogues. He sees 7:48–50 as added later, so that the original key to the passage was 7:47. He also sees the account as a doublet for Mark 14:3–9. Fitzmyer 1981: 686–87 sees the parable inserted into the pronouncement story. The dubious assumption here is that an account cannot mix forms. The argument fails, since without the parable the Pharisee's concerns in 7:39 remain unanswered; Nolland 1989: 351–52. Nolland prefers to call the passage "legend" since it is an example account, but he notes that doing so does not prejudice the account's historicity. Berger 1984: 51–56, 256, 361 speaks of parable and dialogue side by side, and calls the account an apologetic defense of Jesus' attitude toward sinners.

5 Other Lucan catalogues may be found in Luke 6:12–16 and Acts 1:13; Berger 1984: 224.

3 Bovon 1989: 415 speaks of an antithetical word of wisdom. Bultmann 1963: 81–82, 98 calls the sayings "double-stranded" mĕšāllîm, like secular proverbs; also Fitzmyer 1981: 716. Berger 1984: 118 speaks of a warning word for 8:18. Wiefel 1988: 161 also speaks of a māšāl (parable), as does Jeremias 1963a: 41, but this is unlikely. Luke seems aware of the proverbial character by his reuse of the material.

8 Berger 1984: 312 places the passage in his "epideixis/demonstratio" category. It is a revelatory account designed to create admiration.

7 Bultmann 1963: 210 classifies it as a miracle of healing. Bovon 1989: 432 and Theissen 1983: 321 call it an exorcism. Theissen also speaks of the liberation of an enslaved personality (pp. 89–90). Berger 1984: 311 puts it in his "epideixis/demonstratio" category (where he puts many miracles). He also speaks of the account as a "mandatio" that highlights Jesus' authority and power. Pesch 1971: 354 notes the form elements in Mark: encounter (5:1–2), demon's defensive reaction (5:6–7), exorcist's command (5:8), exit of demon (5:13), crowd amazement and spread of exorcist's fame (5:14a, 18–20).

1 Berger 1984: 117 thinks that the reason for the silence is that Jesus wants this resurrection to be legitimized only as God's act and not through human witness. However, this is hard to see in light of Acts. Perhaps the point here is that this limitation applies to the preresurrection setting, but 7:11–17 is a problem for this perspective. It is simpler to see the silence as protection against a potential misemphasis about Jesus and his ministry.

9 Bultmann 1963: 214–15 (who argues that they were originally separate); Bovon 1989: 444–45 (who speaks of a "crescendo" in this pairing, especially since it includes two women); Fitzmyer 1981: 743; Theissen 1983: 321. Berger 1984: 314, 317 speaks of a "supplication account" by putting it in his "deesis/petitio" category. It also teaches Jesus' authority, as Berger's placement in the "mandatio" form shows.

7 Doubting the account's historicity, Bultmann 1963: 145, 331–32 sees the sayings of Mark 6:8–11 (= Luke 9:3–5) as a church product. He seems to assume incorrectly that a passage cannot have a mixture of narrative and saying material. Berger 1984: 333, 68 speaks of a commission speech and a summary account.

5 V. Taylor 1935: 147; Fitzmyer 1981: 757. Bultmann 1963: 301–2 does not discuss Luke 9, but the longer parallel of Mark 6:14–29. Berger 1984: 233 speaks of an "uncertain acclamation" present within the account.

11 Berger 1984: 68, 167, sees both a speech and a mission. Bultmann 1963: 145 places it among legal sayings and church rules, arguing that it was a missionary tract for the church (see the discussion of sources and historicity for rejection of this view).

12 Bultmann 1963: 112 also rejects its historicity since it views Jesus' work as past and speaks of the possible exaltation of Capernaum to heaven. Neither of these reasons has merit. Mission failure certainly did occur in Jesus' ministry—why else did he meet with crucifixion? On the possibility of cities being exalted before God, one need think only of the imagery of the OT prophets, where Israel is exalted above its foes. Berger 1984: 200, 205, speaks of woes of warning. For the woe oracle form, see Amos 6:1–7; Mic. 2:1; Hab. 2:6–7; Zeph. 2:5. Witherington 1990: 166 defends their authenticity, along with Matthew's mention of Chorazin, which is not mentioned outside of these parallel passages.

9 Bultmann 1963: 324 is similar. Berger 1984: 46, 239–40 argues that two parables conclude the passage, but it is hard to know if 11:11–13 is a parable or a wisdom saying that makes a simple comparison.

8 Bultmann 1963: 131–32 and esp. 113–14 speaks of a combination of legal (11:39, 41–42) and minatory (i.e., warning) sayings (11:43–44, 46–51). He sees Matthew taking Q material and adding it to the scene in Mark 12, along with other available material. Luke created his setting, and Bultmann doubts that the woes fit Jesus' teaching. Why Jesus would not have engaged in prophetic condemnation is not clear. Without it, it is hard to explain why the leadership ever sought to remove him. If he was just a pleasant messianic pretender or a mere sage, they could have waited him out. Berger 1984: 81 speaks of an apophthegm and a woe speech and sees special Lucan material.

3 Fitzmyer 1985: 954, 957, 958, 963; Bultmann 1963: 83, 131–32; Berger 1984: 81, 144.

5 Bultmann 1963: 54–55. Berger 1984: 81, 207 speaks of an apophthegm and a warning. Fitzmyer 1985: 971 prefers to call the parable an example (on the genre of example story or exemplum, see excursus 8 in vol. 1 of this commentary).

4 Berger 1984: 264, 57 agrees with the "I-sayings" classification, but argues that 12:57–59 is a parable.

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1010–11 speaks of a miracle story, while Bultmann 1963: 12 speaks of a pronouncement. Elements of both are present, with the key being the pronouncement in 13:15 and the miracle itself being the dominating element. Berger 1984: 312 calls it epideixis, which is his term for a miracle. Such accounts are designed to show who Jesus is and to elicit a response of respect.

4 Berger 1984: 57–59, 81. Fitzmyer 1985: 1022 prefers to speak of a collection of minatory sayings, while Bultmann 1963: 93, 117 speaks of wisdom sayings in 13:23–24, 26–27. The passage is a warning and a wisdom background is not clear, except in 13:24. Bultmann also regards 13:26–27 as a church reflection that presents Jesus as judge of the world, but this saying is like OT prophetic utterances that warn about salvation and judgment. The parable portrays Jesus as the judge, with an identity between his message and the authority it carries. The crowd must respond to him. However, it was this very emphasis on response that caused the leadership to do away with him. It is not a post-Easter development. Jesus' view of himself was dangerous to the leadership. Luke 22:69 makes the same point conceptually.

3 Bultmann 1963: 12 opts for pronouncement; Berger 1984: 81 speaks of apophthegm. These are the same classification, since controversy accounts are a specific kind of pronouncement. On such classifications, see Bock 1991b.

3 Fitzmyer 1985: 1061 speaks of “prophetic words” as well. Bultmann 1963: 328 speaks of a discourse on discipleship composed by Luke; but how one can argue that Luke is responsible for the discourse is not clear. Berger 1984: 51, 97 speaks of parables and a warning. The text is a combination of “I-sayings” (14:26–27) and parabolic comparisons (14:28–35). Blomberg 1990: 281 calls the comparisons “which one of you?” parables, showing Jesus’ desire to cause the audience to reflect: “If people must carefully calculate their chances of success in major human endeavors, how much more so must they take seriously the results of spiritual commitments.”

6 Fitzmyer sees polemical sayings in 16:14–15 (1985: 1112), a saying in 16:16–17 (p. 1115), and a legal saying in 16:18 (p. 1120). Bultmann sees a wisdom saying in 16:15b (1963: 73), an “I-saying” in 16:16 (p. 164), and a legal saying in 16:18 (p. 132). Berger agrees that 16:18 is a legal saying (1984: 199) and argues that the passage is a warning made up of pronouncements, since he has the remarks in the apophthegm category (pp. 81, 89, 186).

22 Berger 1972: 209–26 argues that the law refers to the “will of God.” Schweizer 1984: 258 says the law is newly interpreted by Jesus’ kingdom preaching and is valid as a moral norm (at least in some of its elements). Plummer 1896: 389 and Arndt 1956: 361 see a distinction between moral law and defunct ceremonial law.

8 Bultmann 1963: 178 calls the account a similitude, which is where he puts parables and such. Berger 1984: 51 sees it as a parable. Ernst 1977: 472 rightly compares it to 15:11–32 and 16:1–8. Hauck, TDNT 5:752, calls it an illustrative story and compares it to 10:30–37; 12:16–21; and 18:9–14. For the structure, see B. Scott 1989: 146–48.

5 Fitzmyer 1985: 1137 and Bultmann 1963: 144 call 17:1–3a a legal saying, while Berger 1984: 65 calls it a "sentence." Luke 17:3b–4 is like a wisdom saying according to Ernst 1977: 479 and a warning according to Berger 1984: 119, 165. Fitzmyer 1985: 1142 calls 17:5–6 a wisdom saying, while Berger 1984: 81 calls it a pronouncement ("apophthegm"). All agree that 17:7–10 is a parable.

1 Bultmann 1963: 33 calls it a "biographical apophthegm" and sees the account as a variant of Mark 1:40–45 (on the Marcan connection, see the discussion of sources and historicity). Berger 1984: 314, 317 speaks of "deesis" or "petitio" because of the appeal for help. Tannehill 1986: 118–20 calls it a "quest story."

9 For form-critical discussions of the individual subunits, see Fitzmyer 1985: 1329, 1334, 1338, 1342, 1348, 1351, 1355, 1357; Bultmann 1963: 36, 122–23, 125, 119; Berger 1984: 81, 296–97, 304–5, 48, 142, 352.

41 Bertram, TDNT 8:619 n. 48, cites 1QH 7.6–7 (where God's power as Most High and the Spirit are linked; see 1QH 6.33) and T. Levi 16.3 (where a man who brings renewal to the Law is said to work by "the power of the Most High”). Some think that T. Levi 16 has been reworked by a Christian editor to allude to Jesus; H. Kee in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 1.794 n. 16a. Grundmann, TDNT 2:300, 311 n. 91, notes the tie between power and the Spirit. Procksch, TDNT 1:101, speaks of a “supranatural origin.”

8 Bertram, TDNT 4:366 n. 36 and 367; Luke 1:28; Matt. 21:9; 25:34; Ps. 1:1; Deut. 33:29; Isa. 56:2. Bovon 1989: 86 notes that the Gospel starts with blessing on Mary and Jesus, while it ends with blessing on the disciples ().

22 Bertram, TDNT 3:6, notes that the crowd’s reaction is a typical ending to a miracle story; Mark 1:27; Luke 5:9. C. F. Evans 1990: 281 notes that the reaction is like the comment of a chorus in similar accounts.

23 Ὥρμησεν in Matt. 8:32 = Mark 5:13 = Luke 8:33 means to rush irrationally or with some emotion; Fitzmyer 1981: 739; Bertram, TDNT 5:470; BAGD 581; BAA 1178; elsewhere only at Acts 7:57; 19:29. On ἀποπνίγω (to drown), see BAGD 97; BAA 195; elsewhere only Luke 8:7 (of thorns and thistles that choke); a related verb, συμπνίγω, occurs in 8:14, 42.

14 Ps. 14:1; 53:1 [53:2 MT]; 92:6 [92:7 MT]; 94:8; Prov. 6:12; Luke 12:20; Rom. 2:20; 1 Cor. 15:36; 2 Cor. 11:16, 19; 12:6, 11; SB 1:280; 2:102 (discusses Jewish warnings about having an arrogant heart, with Deut. 8:11–14 being the key text); Schweizer 1984: 199; Plummer 1896: 310; Bertram, TDNT 9:230–31; Fitzmyer 1985: 947. On the OT background, see Donald 1963.

15 Ἐκβάλλω is a term for judgment in Matt. 8:12; 22:13; 25:30; John 12:31; Bertram, TDNT 4:839 n. 56.

26 Bertram, TDNT 8:611, suggests that awakening, resurrection, reception, ascent, being taken up, enthronement in heaven, and dominion are the elements of Jesus' exaltation mentioned in the NT. Hebrews adds a priestly emphasis to this work of Jesus, thus making him a king-priest (Heb. 1; 7–10).

6 This is a supernatural revelation, but it is not a glance into heaven or into the future. Neither does the opening up of the heaven serve to bring comfort in the midst of persecution. Rather the Spirit is revealing himself to some on earth. For this reason the use of "vision" for Luke is less precise. For some texts from the second-century church fathers that briefly mention the event, see Ignatius, Ephesians 18.2 and Smyrneans 1.1; Justin Martyr, Dialogue with Trypho 88.2–8; 51.2; 103.6; and Irenaeus, Against Heresies 3.9.3; 3.17.1. See also Bertrand 1973 and Bovon 1989: 183–84.

2 So Wiefel 1988: 305 and Bruners 1977. Bruners also argues that the account is Lucan. Fitzmyer 1985: 1150–51 and H. Betz 1981 question the connection. At most, it is a form parallel. Betz's main thesis (1971) that the account is a polemic against healing miracles is incorrect; see Marshall 1978: 649. Meier 1994: 750–51 shows how an appeal to Lucan creation from 2 Kings cannot explain four differences in the account: (1) no mention of Elijah, (2) no mention of Jesus as prophet, (3) no delay in the miracle's occurrence, and (4) the different kind of miracle in the account (punitive versus healing).

3 H. Betz 1969 also strongly argues for "cult legend." According to Betz the account teaches the resurrection's importance for Christian faith. Similar in tone is the Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 398–99), which prints

24:17, 19, 25 in black type and says that all the dialogue is “provided by the storyteller” and involves instances of the evangelists “inventing words for Jesus that express their own perspectives.”

45 Dupont-Sommer 1973: 108; Michel and Betz 1960: 11–13, 15–17; Michel and Betz 1962–63. This usage also shows that a Hellenistic origin for the phrase is not required.

7 1 Chron. 15:28; 16:4, 5, 42; 2 Chron. 5:13; R. Brown 1977: 333. On the verb, also see O. Betz, TDNT 9:303 n. 7, who makes the same association.

14 O. Betz, TDNT 9:288–90, 298. Some cite Tg. Song 2:12; SB 1:123–24, but Sjöberg, TDNT 6:382, notes that the Spirit never appears in the form of a dove in rabbinic writings.

15 O. Betz, TDNT 9:288, makes clear that the Bath Qol is a voice inferior to God and the prophets. In Luke, angels have this intermediary role.

12 On demons crying out to resist exorcism, see Grundmann, TDNT 3:900; O. Betz, TDNT 9:294.

34 Marshall 1978: 478 notes that the Lucan image is one of messianic war; Isa. 59:16–18; O. Betz 1957–58.

11 The Semitic rhetorical idiom “not x … but y” means “not so much x … but y” (also 10:20). On this use of φωνέω (to call), see O. Betz, TDNT 9:303. On ἀντικαλέω (to invite back), a NT hapax legomenon, see K. Schmidt, TDNT 3:496.

5 Carefully surveying the historical background to the trial scenes and crucifixion in a Jewish setting, O. Betz 1982 argues for the historical coherence and integrity of the Marcan account as well as for its chronological priority (against Catchpole and Green in n. 4 above). He suggests that the temple charge, which Luke lacks, raised the issue of Jesus' authority and, in the view of the Jews, made him a risk to begin a chain of events that ultimately would lead Rome to take the temple and Jerusalem (John 11:47–52). The messianic confession only highlighted the danger in their view. This could be called blasphemous in the sense that someone causing God's people to be handed over to the nations would be guilty of his name being blasphemed (11QTemple[a] 64.6–13). Betz's study raises one potential element that could have set up the decisive Jewish negative reaction to Jesus (for another, more direct cause, see the exegesis of 22:69). I am not certain, however, that it is as important to choose between the Lucan and Marcan accounts as other scholars seem prone to believe. Gospel writers could incorporate older source materials despite the age of their composition.

38 For the background of a possible Sabbath violation, see the discussion above following the discussion of sources and historicity. On Sabbath conflicts related to healing, besides the parallel Matt. 12:10 = Mark 3:2, see Luke 13:14 and 14:3; Beyer, TDNT 3:130.

21 Bieder, TDNT 6:992. The other NT uses are Matt. 9:36; 15:30; 27:5; Luke 17:2; Acts 22:23; 27:19, 29.

17 Schrage, TDNT 7:810–26, 828–33; Schürer 1973–87: 2.423–63, esp. 447–54; Safrai 1976c: 927–33; Billerbeck 1964.

15 Δίκτυα is also plural, indicating that there is a crew on this boat. On the use of δίκτυον, see T. Dan 2.4; T. Abr. (A) 8.10 (= J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 1.886) (BAGD 198; BAA 399). Perhaps these negative figurative uses in Judaism help set up Jesus' positive metaphors later? On fishing in Palestine, see Bishop 1951.

27 Bishop 1973 suggests that the chasm pictures the deep wadis of the Judean desert, which are high and deep but not so wide that one is prevented from seeing what is on the other side.

13 Marshall 1978: 140; Luke 7:39, 49; 16:3; 18:4; Black 1967: 302. Manson 1949: 40 notes that the Semitism is reflected in Luke's wording, while Matthew has a more stylized Greek. The verb ἄρχω occurs in the middle voice, ἄρχομαι, meaning "to begin," thirty-one times in Luke and thirteen times in Matthew.

16 Marshall 1978: 141; Black 1967: 144–45 (who notes other traces of Semitisms in Matthew).

19 Black goes on to argue that 3:9 originally followed 3:7, but such an argument is unnecessary since the imagery of 3:8–9 is the same; Schürmann 1969: 166 n. 33.

53 Black 1967: 181 argues that the play is on the Semitic terms in Matt. 5:47–48: šĕlam (peace) and šĕlim (whole).

8 Jeremias 1963a: 126, 132 opts for either a prostitute or a woman in a dishonorable vocation, by which he means either an immoral or a dishonest vocation; Jeremias 1969: 303–12; Fitzmyer 1981: 689; Black 1967: 181–83. Marshall 1978: 308 notes correctly that the sins seem to be hers, so that her reputation is not because of association with someone else; so also Wiefel 1988: 154, who thinks she is a prostitute, as does Schürmann 1969: 431 n. 8.

12 Black 1967: 216–17. This view goes back to J. Wellhausen's 1903 commentary on Mark. Oepke, TDNT 5:311 n. 6, mentions this view but prefers to see a contradiction here. Oepke notes that Wellhausen rejected this solution in the 1911 edition of his Mark commentary.

7 Fitzmyer notes that there is no evidence for this third view, which goes back to Perles 1919–20; see also Black 1967: 207–8. SB 1:489 rejects the suggestion.

15 On the syntax, see Marshall 1978: 540 and Black 1967: 118–19, who argue that the Greek structure reflects a Semitic idiom: "If there is a steward, … he will be blessed when.… "

24 The verb μωρανθῇ literally means for salt "to become foolish," a personification that shows its total lack of value because it is no longer salty; BAGD 531 §2; BAA 1075 §2. There may be a wordplay on the Semitic תפל (tpl), which can mean "to be foolish" or "to be unsavory"; Job 1:22; Jer. 23:13; Marshall 1978: 595; Black 1967: 166; Schwarz 1978. Nolland 1993a: 765 notes that the figure is based on the result of salt losing its saltiness, regardless of whether it actually happens.

27 Gressmann 1911 notes the nature of the customs. Perles's attempt (1919–20) to suggest an Aramaic element תבל (tbl) behind the tradition that should be translated "seasoning" instead of "soil" fails on lexical grounds. The תבל/γῆ interchange is found in Isa. 14:21; 26:9, 18; 1 Chron. 16:30; cf. 11QtgJob 24.8; 29.3 with Job 34:13; 37:12. Correctly Fitzmyer 1985: 1069–70 and Black 1967: 166–67.

19 The future tense may have eschatological overtones or it may be a customary future alluding to God's habitual response. The wording may have Aramaic roots and betray a pre-Lucan form; Fitzmyer 1985: 1077–78; Black 1967: 184; Jeremias 1980: 247.

37 Recent treatments taking this approach are Dunn 1980: 67–69; Casey 1979: 7–50; and Black 1976: 60–63, who argues that this text is unique, since it is the only place in the OT where Israel is “deified” (see Bock 1987: 335 n. 179 for refutation).

19 This used to be the Catholic understanding of the term and is still held by some today; Blinzler 1967 discusses the options and the subject of Jesus’ family. R. Brown 1977: 398 hints at this view, citing Ps. Sol. 13.9 [cited as 13.8 according to an older numbering scheme]; 18.4; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 6:58 as examples of πρωτότοκος meaning “only begotten.” Bovon 1989: 121 speaks of a privileged relationship to God.

6 For passages where the term does not denote a nuclear family member, see Matt. 5:22–24 (neighbor) and Gen. 13:8; 14:14; 24:27; 29:12 (kin). The major study of the options is Blinzler 1967.

5 Ἔμιξεν (he mixed) comes from either μείγνυμι (BAGD 499) or μίγνυμι (BAA 1055), both meaning “to mix.” The expression is an idiom for two events occurring together; so Ellis 1974: 185, who cites Exod. Rab. 19.5 on 12:43–44, SB 2:193, and Blinzler 1957–58: 28–29. The midrash refers to a mixture of circumcision blood and Paschal blood to indicate the need of a person who eats Passover to be circumcised. Philo, Special Laws 3.16 §91, discusses the inappropriateness of mixing the blood of murderers and sacrifices at the temple (Nolland 1993a: 717–18). Wiefel 1988: 252 n. 11 calls the expression “Palestinian.”

16 Besides those already cited, other major works on Jesus' trial are Bammel 1970, Blinzler 1969, Sherwin-White 1963: 24–47, and Winter 1974. Catchpole, Blinzler, and Sherwin-White defend the historicity of much of the Lucan account. Fitzmyer 1985: 1466 also thinks a morning trial is most likely.

2 Jeremias 1966: 15–84 deals with various aspects of this issue. Other key studies include Hoehner 1977: 74–90; Marshall 1980: 30–75 (which has the advantage of assessing Jeremias's claims); Jaubert 1965; Blinzler 1958; and R. Brown 1962b. For bibliography, see Nolland 1993b: 1035–40.

16 Blomberg 1984b, where he also raises the additional question of a purely metaphorical, not historically intended, miracle in Matt. 17:27. Even if Blomberg is right about Matt. 17 as a saying, which is uncertain, his category of "metaphorical miracle" to describe it seems unhelpful by introducing confusion in the classification of genuinely miraculous material that also has metaphorical elements. What this miracle and the saying tied to it show is that the miracles served as "audiovisuals" of deeper realities (see also Luke 5:19–26; 8:26–39; 11:14–23).

2 This is what causes Blomberg 1990: 171–288 to distinguish one-point, two-point, and three-point parables.

5 Kissinger 1979 overviews recent discussion and gives full bibliographies up to 1977. Blomberg 1990 and B. Scott 1989 update the discussion. Scott attempts a more literary reading of the parables and sees them as a development of the OT מָשָׁל (māšāl). His analyses of structure are often helpful, his handling of historical matters less so.

6 Blomberg 1982b concentrates on the fifteen uniquely Lucan parables: 10:25–37; 11:5–8; 12:13–21; 13:6–9; 14:7–14; 14:15–24; 14:28–33; 15:8–10; 15:11–32; 16:1–9; 16:19–31; 17:7–10; 18:1–8; 18:9–14; 19:11–27. Only 13:18–21 and 15:3–7 have parallels.

9 Talbert 1982: 111–12 sees chiasmus in 9:51–19:44, but has to omit Luke 15 and place 14:1–6 out of its Lucan order! Goulder 1964: 196 argues for the following chiastic links:

10:25	eternal life
11:1	prayer
11:14	healing
11:37	pharisaic hypocrisy
12:1	money
12:35	repentance
13:10	rejection of Israel and invitation to outcasts
14:1	rejection of Israel and invitation to outcasts
15:1	repentance
16:1	money
16:14	pharisaic hypocrisy
17:11	healing
17:5	prayer
18:18	eternal life

The most plausible case for chiasmus is made by Farrell 1986. Blomberg also deals with and rejects theories that make the central section a Christian Deuteronomy; see C. F. Evans 1955. My main criticism of Blomberg's

article is that it regards the section's end as falling at 18:34, ignoring later literary clues that Jesus has not arrived in Jerusalem (19:28, 41). This may be the Achilles' heel against his theory that the section's parable source was laid out chiastically, especially if 19:11–27 is taken into consideration. Still, aspects of Blomberg's case and the general outline of a possible Lucan source may surface in my discussion; see also Nolland 1993a: 530–31.

4 Klostermann 1929: 118 and Egelkraut 1976: 85–90 favor a Lucan reworking of Mark. Schneider 1977a: 247 and Wiefel 1988: 207 see an independent source for the parable and Luke 10:25–28 using Mark. Bultmann 1963: 51; Luce 1933: 204 (citing Q); and Daube 1956: 247–50 see a version like that in Matthew. Zahn 1920: 427; Manson 1949: 259–61; and Jeremias 1963a: 202 see independent incidents or sources. Plummer 1896: 283 calls the possibility of one incident precarious, but not impossible. Fitzmyer 1985: 877–78 clearly ascribes the material to a special Lucan source, but sees only one incident, a distinction that seems hard to insist upon. Marshall 1978: 441 also leans toward two incidents, as do Hendriksen 1978: 591; Liefeld 1984: 942; and Blomberg 1990: 230–31, who speaks of "proem midrash" here. Ellis 1974: 159, though noting that two incidents are probable, regards the exchange as set in Jerusalem, which is possible, since the next account is in Bethany. Grundmann 1963: 221–22 speaks only of an independent source with the parable coming from L, while Ernst 1977: 344–46 leans this way, clearly noting that the parable is from special Lucan material. Nolland 1993a: 580 argues for an original link of neighbor and the parable, but that Luke is responsible for placing the great-commandment discussion here, drawing on Mark 12:28–34.

Schürmann 1994: 136–40, 149–50 sees the parable emerging from L material and rooted in Jesus' intention, but 10:25–28 is probably rooted in Mark's account and does not testify to a separate event.

34 BAGD 54; BAA 107; Sir. 40:30. Luke 18:4 is a conceptual parallel. For the lexical and interpretive debate on the term, see Blomberg 1990: 276, esp. nn. 51–53. For a careful study of ἀναίδεια, see A. Johnson 1979. He argues, however, citing Bailey 1976: 124–33 in support, that the line is about the neighbor, not the host, and that the antecedent of the second αὐτοῦ (his) in 11:8 is the neighbor because the neighbor is the constant subject in the verse. But this ignores αὐτῷ (to him) earlier in the verse, which refers to the host. Johnson sees the point as God's responding because his honor is at stake. But this meaning dishonors the gracious God that Jesus seeks to describe. Johnson is aware of this issue (p. 131 n. 39) and argues that Westerners do not appreciate Eastern cultural values. I hold that it contradicts the tone of 11:11–13.

1 Blomberg 1990: 267 states the points of the unit: (1) purely selfish accumulation of possessions is incompatible with true discipleship, and (2) this incompatibility stems from the transience of earthly riches and the coming reckoning that all will face before God. B. Scott 1989: 128 notes the parallelism between Luke 12 and 16, with their common themes of threats from hell, riches, and the issue of stewardship.

2 So Blomberg 1990: 237–39; Kistemaker 1980: 193–201; Plummer 1896: 359–60; Liefeld 1984: 979. Those accepting one parable but distinct sources are Luce 1933: 248; Grundmann 1963: 296 (L); Ernst 1977: 442

(L); Marshall 1978: 584; Tiede 1988: 266 (apparently). Ellis 1974: 194 is uncertain. Blomberg 1990: 233–36 has a good discussion of this parable.

15 Manson 1949: 130 suggests that Isa. 49:6 is alluded to in the parable. Blomberg 1990: 235–36 says that the second invitation merely reflects Middle Eastern custom, but with all the representation present in the parable, surely the arrival of "outsiders" suggests a correspondence in real terms. See R. Martin 1976.

18 Blomberg 1990: 235 compares this custom to the British custom of sending wedding cake to the invited who could not attend.

3 Fitzmyer 1985: 1061 speaks of "prophetic words" as well. Bultmann 1963: 328 speaks of a discourse on discipleship composed by Luke; but how one can argue that Luke is responsible for the discourse is not clear. Berger 1984: 51, 97 speaks of parables and a warning. The text is a combination of "I-sayings" (14:26–27) and parabolic comparisons (14:28–35). Blomberg 1990: 281 calls the comparisons "which one of you?" parables, showing Jesus' desire to cause the audience to reflect: "If people must carefully calculate their chances of success in major human endeavors, how much more so must they take seriously the results of spiritual commitments."

6 For the structure, see Bailey 1976: 159–61; Blomberg 1990: 173–74; and Tolbert 1979: 98–100. Blomberg argues for a plausible threefold division: younger son's departure (15:11–20a), father's welcome (15:20b–24), and older son's reaction (15:25–32).

22 Blomberg 1990: 176 makes clear that this action is the "twist" in the story. No Middle Eastern father would greet or respond to his wayward son this way.

4 On the debate in older commentaries, see Creed 1930: 202–3, who holds that 16:9–13 was added later. Blomberg 1990: 245–47 builds a case for unity.

11 This was the most popular position until recently, though it is making something of a comeback (e.g., Blomberg 1990: 244–45; Blomberg 1994; Ireland 1992: 73–82). Plummer 1896: 383 holds a quite plausible variation of this view, arguing that the steward simply lessened the excess cut he took from the debtors, a view close to the "righteous" cut option (no. 3 below), except it suggests that the steward did take something additional. The inflationary trend may suggest that the debtors knew that not all of the money was getting to the owner. Jeremias 1963a: 181 speaks of the steward covering up his previous embezzlements by the new accounting, a view that requires that the master does not have proof for his firing the steward in 16:1–2. Such an internal inconsistency in the parable is unlikely.

31 Recent affirmation of this approach is found in Porter 1990 and noted by Blomberg 1994: 90 n. 81.

32 Blomberg 1990: 244–45 opts for this, seeing him as a "son of this world." Bailey 1976: 86–110 sees the servant enhancing the master's reputation by forcing him to absorb the loss graciously in order to save face.

6 Blomberg 1990: 205 argues for a parable since the phrase a certain man is often used in Jesus' parables as well as rabbinic parables. Blomberg also notes that the story shares the three-point structure of other parables (e.g., 14:16). Against a parable is Gooding 1987: 277, who argues that parables deal with actual things and activities in the world, not things such as the afterlife directly.

22 Wellhausen 1904: 550 notes that the Syriac version omitted the term. Fitzmyer 1985: 1147 notes the etymological suggestion of Kilgallen 1982 that the term means “those to whom something is not owed.” Usage is against this sense, though Blomberg 1990: 262 takes it as possible.

1 The delay of the return is mentioned in Luke 12:45–46; 2 Pet. 3:4–9; 1 Clem. 23.3; 24.1; 2 Clem. 11. Jews also had this problem in longing for Messiah’s coming; Blomberg 1990: 272.

1 On allegorical parables, see Derrett 1974; Blomberg 1982a: 6–8; Carlston 1981; and Klauck 1978. On the parable’s interpretive history, see Snodgrass 1983: 3–11, who defends authenticity (pp. 2, 87, 103–4, 108, 112). Giblin 1985: 65–66 does not see allegory as a distinct genre of parables, but speaks of the parable’s allegorical bent. See also excursus 8, where parable and allegory are seen as part of a literary continuum.

23 Bock 1987: 61–62. On conceptual ties reaching back at least to the Palestinian church, see Delling, TDNT 5:836 n. 66. On the issue of possible Jewish parallels, see Delling, TDNT 7:760 n. 6.

25 For a brief discussion of the Qumran texts and an evaluation of Fitzmyer’s 1973–74 article, see Bock 1987: 65, 298 n. 51 and Collins 1993 (who challenges Fitzmyer’s claim that Son of God lacks a messianic nuance).

28 Present elements are found in Luke 11:20; 17:21; future in Luke 13:28; Acts 14:22; future and delayed in Luke 19:11; Acts 1:6, 11. In Acts 1, esp. v. 11, the answer to the apostles’ question about total restoration is found in the angelic promise of a return; see also Acts 3:18–21; Marshall 1970: 134; Bock 1992c; and Bock 1994c.

46 Bock 1987: 65–67. The theme of Jesus' sonship in Luke, outside of the use of the title Son of God, does push Luke's imagery toward a higher Christology, but that is not his point yet. See the exegesis of 2:49.

14 The remarks do have application for the church, but this language also includes notes of hope for Israel. On this text's two levels of meaning, see Bock 1993.

33 Luke 1:69 and 2:30 express this idea explicitly; Bock 1987: 73–74.

15 Only one LXX context refers to Bethlehem as David's city: 1 Sam. 20:6 ("his city"). David's connection with Bethlehem is noted in the MT of 1 Sam. 17:12, 58, but these verses are absent from the LXX; 1 Sam. 16:18 LXX connects the city with Jesse, not David. Even Judaism did not have a Bethlehem-Davidic-Messianic connection; SB 1:82–83; Plummer 1896: 52; Bock 1987: 75.

28 BDB 990; Bock 1987: 87, 310 n. 145. This is a clear example of the Jewish hermeneutic gezerah shewah (i.e., comparison of similar things).

17 Such a "pattern" rendering of OT events fits the OT prophetic hope, where the message of a prophet is read in light of a larger context of the book or in light of the whole of the OT. It is biblical typology in the proper sense of the term; Foulkes 1958 and Goppelt 1982. For more on the hermeneutics of the OT use in the NT, see Bock 1985.

22 Bock 1987: 94–95 discusses the details and shows that the plural term τραχεῖαι of 3:5 is closer to the Hebrew plural than to the LXX's singular.

6 The technical name used for such pronouncement accounts is apophthegm. Luke 3:7–9 is more a controversy or polemic saying, since it challenges. The other sayings in 3:10–14 are exhortations. For an examination of form criticism and its terminology, see Bock 1991b.

23 Bock 1987: 99–101. Note also the discussions rejecting this reading in Schürmann 1969: 193–94 and Marshall 1978: 154–55.

1 Tiede 1980: 30–47 develops this theme along with other OT prophetic portraits that influence Luke's perspective. He argues that the Gentile issue and its defense is a major Lucan concern that is a motivation for this critique, a point with which I totally agree; so Bock 1987: 259, 277–78. The people not only reject Jesus, but they also refuse to be sensitive to his expanded, inclusive mission.

22 For details, see Bock 1987: 319 n. 68; J. A. Sanders 1975: 80–81. The idea of anointing, the establishment of justice, and the picture of restoration are shared in Isa. 42:1, 3–4; 49:4, 7; 61:1–2. Tg. Isa. 61:1 clearly reads the text this way: "The spirit of prophecy from before Lord Elohim is upon me." But it is wrong to read the OT passage as only about Isaiah, as C. F. Evans 1990: 269 does. Salvation in Isaiah is depicted in terms of God's exodus pattern and is too comprehensive to refer only to Isaiah. Judaism was right to read the text ultimately in terms of the eschaton. This is another typologically fulfilled text like Luke 3:4–6; see the discussion of typology there.

29 Bock 1987: 109. In Isaiah, the announcement of the prophet coincides with the salvation, but the deliverance is God's, not the prophet's (Isa. 40:9; 41:27; 52:7; esp. 51:16).

8 However, Theissen's conclusion that this description reflects Luke's subordinationism is imprecise; see Bock 1987: 66–69. In Luke, Jesus emerges with authority and a role equal to that of God, but Luke builds his Christology from the "earth up" for the benefit of the reader. See Bock 1994c: 102–17.

37 Though millennium is not a Lucan term, it is used to describe the earthly character of this future rule; Bock 1992a. The kingdom of God in Luke refers to a total program—promised in the OT and detailed in the NT—that is inaugurated and then realized in stages. There are not two different kingdoms offered during Jesus' ministry: one before rejection like the OT earthly kingdom and another more spiritually focused kingdom offered after Israel's rejection. Jesus always offered the same kingdom. It was always coming in two stages, since Jesus' suffering and rejection by his own were in the OT design (Isa. 52:13–53:12). This view is contra Saucy 1994 and his explanation of Matthew. To make his distinction work, Saucy underplays the kingdom of heaven/God language and its implication in Matt. 18:1, 3–4, 23; 19:12, 14, 23–24; 21:31, 43; 23:13; esp. the parable introduced in 20:1—texts that come after Israel's rejection. The kingdom to come is the full kingdom, with Israel possessing a central role. But the present kingdom is grounded in the messianic hope presented in Ps. 110:1 and 132:11, 17 (Acts 2:14–41; Eph. 1:19–23; 4:7–10). The arrival of the Spirit is the sign of the arrival of the Christ and his kingdom with blessing (Luke 3:15–18; 24:49; Acts 2:30–36). One should be careful about stating Matthew's theology without reflecting on how the Book of Acts contributes canonically to the biblical teaching about the church and the kingdom. The change in emphasis within Matthew's kingdom portrait does show the changing role for Israel in that program during the church era.

39 On this theme of Luke, see Bock 1992a and Feinberg 1988. See the exegesis of 10:9, 18; 11:17–20; 17:20–21.

17 For discussion of options, but with a different solution, see France 1971: 91 n. 31, who sees all the allusions in Malachi referring to God. Mal. 4:3 [3:21 MT] may point to Messiah, but a clear reference does not exist; Bock 1987: 322 n. 87.

26 In 4QPrNab, a Jewish exorcist remits sins of the Babylonian King Nabonidus; Dupont-Sommer 1961: 322, esp. n. 3. The problem with this fragmentary Qumran parallel is that the method of expressing forgiveness to the king is not described in the text, but only summarized. Consequently, it can hardly carry the weight of the case for a prophetic understanding in Luke. See the exegesis of 5:24 and Bock 1991c: 117 and n. 26.

29 The Qumran scrolls also refer to the "secrets of God" (רזי אל, rzy ʾl): 1QpHab 7.8; 1QS 3.23; 1QM 3.9; 16.9, 14; 17.9, 17 (Fitzmyer 1981: 708). On μυστήριον in the NT, sometimes referring to "new" revelation and other times to "clarifying" revelation, see Bock 1994a: 80–85. In these parables, μυστήριον refers to "clarifying" revelation, which means that additional truth is connected to old promises, since Matt. 13:51–52 compares the mystery kingdom parables to old and new things.

7 On the Elijah hope in Judaism, see Luke 1:17; 7:26–27; Bock 1987: 59–60, 295; Jeremias, TDNT 2:936.

4 Fitzmyer gives four reasons why this view cannot work: (1) it cannot explain the presence of Moses and Elijah; (2) the verb ὁράω (to see; passive = to appear) is not limited to postresurrection events; (3) Jesus' glory is never mentioned in a resurrection account; and (4) the form does not match resurrection appearances. See also Bock 1987: 324 n. 98; H. Müller 1960: 60; Stein 1976.

10 Bock 1987: 115–16, 323–24 nn. 96–97. On the apocalyptic imagery, see Behm, TDNT 4:758; on God's glory, see Ps. 104:2; Hab. 3:4.

20 Bock 1987: 115. Ὁ ἐκλεκτός is the normal OT form: Isa. 42:1 LXX uses it as a description of Israel. In Luke 23:35, the people use ὁ ἐκλεκτός to scoff at Jesus' messianic claim; thus, the regal force for Luke is indisputable.

1 For more detail about the Son of Man debate and an extended version of this excursus, see Bock 1991c. Key recent studies (with full bibliographies) include Colpe, TDNT 8:400–77; Casey 1979; Caragounis 1986; S. Kim 1985; Tö;dt 1979 (whose work Kim in particular critiques).

2 Bock 1987: 133–35. See the exegesis of 21:27 and 22:69 for details. S. Kim 1985: 17–19 seems to overemphasize the divinity of the figure at the expense of the humanity in the picture. The Dan. 7 imagery suggests deity; it does not declare it.

12 Note the use in Acts 2 of Joel 2, Ps. 16, and Ps. 110, along with the allusion to 2 Sam. 7, the Davidic covenant, through the appeal to Ps. 132:11 in Acts 2:30–31. There is parallel teaching in Luke 24:44–47 and Acts 13:16–39, as well as in Paul's defense speeches (e.g., Acts 26:16–23). Acts 13 also appeals to realized Davidic promises; see Bock 1992c; Bock 1994a; O'Toole 1987a: 153–58.

30 Schweizer 1984: 176 notes that the force is spatial. Marshall 1978: 422 notes that in 11:20, which uses a different term, φθάνω, Luke clearly means "arrived." On the relationship between ἐγγίζω and φθάνω, see Fitzer, TDNT 9:89, esp. n. 10. Does 10:9 say the same thing as 11:20? It most likely does. Marshall does not think the spatial argument is as key as the argument of 11:20. For a full defense of the kingdom declared as arrived in this verse, see Bock 1992c. For the debate over the Aramaic behind the sayings and the difficulty of determining it, see Meier 1994: 432–34, 486–87. Luke's ἐφ' ὑμᾶς (upon you) is missing in the Matthean parallel and may represent his explanation of the sayings' force. The present effects of the kingdom are clearly in view (10:23–24; Nolland 1993a: 554). Schürmann 1994: 74 cites 7:28; 16:16; and 17:20–21 as conceptually parallel.

29 For a full presentation of this theme in Luke–Acts and a critique of aspects of Ladd's description of the kingdom, see Bock 1992c. As a result, the NT does not redefine or resignify OT promise; it expands it with complementary revelation. Promises to Israel remain, even as blessing and promise come now in and through the church.

30 Battle imagery with evil angels in the OT includes Isa. 24:22–23; in Judaism, T. Sim. 6.6 and T. Zeb. 9.8. Plummer 1896: 303; Danker 1988: 233; and Schürmann 1994: 243 see an allusion to Isa. 49:25–26. The battle imagery is similar, but the application to spiritual forces does not fit Isaiah's language in 49:26a, which clearly pictures humans. At best, Isaiah shows the principle involved. Such a move with imagery, however, is not surprising; see Luke 1:67–79 and Bock 1993. The point in the language for Luke is how Jesus, as God's representative, is God's victorious warrior.

11 Many distinguish the saying's earliest form about a Son of Man other than Jesus from the later linkage of the Son of Man to Jesus, which appears throughout the NT. The original advocate of this distinction was Bultmann

1951–55: 1.29. The Son-of-Man sayings elsewhere refer exclusively to Jesus, making it unlikely that there are any “other than Jesus” Son-of-Man sayings. For more on the Son of Man, see Bock 1991c and excursus 6 in vol. 1.

12 Ladd 1974b: 105–19 shows that the church is not identical to the kingdom, though his view is too abstract in minimizing the reference to a realm. On this latter issue, see Bock 1992c.

12 Bultmann 1963: 114 sees wisdom here. Leaney 1958: 210 cites Matt. 23:34; Luke 2:40, 52; 7:35; 11:31, 49 as parallels. See also 1 Enoch 42. Luke 11:49–51 uses the wisdom motif openly. For more reasons not to see wisdom here, see Bock 1987: 120. Marshall 1978: 573–74 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1034 opt for wisdom terminology, but without Jesus alluding to himself as wisdom, since Jesus sees himself as wisdom’s messenger. Sir. 24:7–12 provides a plausible background. If wisdom is in the background, this is the best way to argue for it. Nolland 1993a: 739 questions the presence of wisdom here, as do I.

3 Bultmann 1963: 12 opts for pronouncement; Berger 1984: 81 speaks of apophthegm. These are the same classification, since controversy accounts are a specific kind of pronouncement. On such classifications, see Bock 1991b.

16 To speak of the kingdom’s plan in two stages (arrival and consummation) means that in consummation God will complete promises made to Israel (Acts 3:18–21). Fulfillment of OT kingdom hope is now–not yet, so some applies to the current era and some to the future; Bock 1992a.

4 For defense of the symbolism of Ps. 118 and the role of Zech. 9:9, see Bock 1987: 122–24, 326–28.

10 For the hermeneutics involved in the use of the psalm, see the additional note on 20:42. For more on the use of the OT in the NT, see Bock 1985 and 1994d.

16 The usage here is typological-prophetic, since the psalm applies uniquely to Jesus on this point and there was awareness that the psalm applied to another figure. For an explanation of this classification, see the additional note on 20:42 and Bock 1994d: 110–12.

37 Recent treatments taking this approach are Dunn 1980: 67–69; Casey 1979: 7–50; and Black 1976: 60–63, who argues that this text is unique, since it is the only place in the OT where Israel is "deified" (see Bock 1987: 335 n. 179 for refutation).

42 The phrase is usually applied to the "already" kingdom. For rejection of the idea that the kingdom is "delayed," see Bock 1992c. See the exegesis of 10:9 and 11:20.

4 J. Green 1988: 282 calls Luke the most primitive form of the tradition. Fitzmyer 1985: 1456–59 is agnostic on historicity, saying that it is impossible to prove. The most detailed English study, Catchpole 1971: 153–220, gives the nod to Luke. For a more skeptical appraisal, giving seven reasons not to accept these accounts as authentic, see E. Sanders 1985: 296–99. For a detailed response to most of his objections, see Bock 1994b. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 392–93) rejects Jesus' prediction (22:61) and the trial dialogue (22:67–69, 70) as inauthentic because 22:61 recalls 22:34 and the absence of disciples at the trial means that no witnesses were present. Jesus' anticipation of Peter's failure, however, reflects his knowledge of how pressure would cause Peter to wilt (the disciples' past record of inconsistency might also contribute to Jesus' expectation). The presence of people like Joseph of Arimathea at the trial makes an internal witness possible.

27 Hooker's efforts (1967: 167–71) to argue that riding on the clouds refers to Jesus' exaltation fail on many counts. Seven objections are noted in Bock 1987: 141–42, the most obvious being that (1) an image of Jesus simultaneously sitting by God and riding the clouds seems absurd (unless this is "throne chariot" imagery like Ezek. 1, in which case heavenly rule or return language is present, not the resurrection); (2) Dan. 7 was never used as an ascension proof-text in the NT; and (3) the ascension image is the reverse of Dan. 7 and the apocalyptic discourse, which describe a coming to earth.

28 This background to the blasphemy charge and the real possibility of ancient sources show that E. Sanders's basic objections (1985: 296–99) do not merit acceptance. His remaining key objections related to the timing of the trials were dealt with in the exegesis of 22:54, 66. For a full response, see Bock 1994b.

29 E. Sanders 1990: 65 argues that this distinction renders suspect that Jesus was charged because of this reply. On the Son-of-Man title, see excursus 6 and Bock 1991c.

32 On garment rending, see R. Brown 1994: 517–18, esp. n. 2. On blasphemy, see R. Brown 1994: 521–23 and Bock 1994b, both of whom argue that first-century blasphemy need not involve uttering the divine name.

1 It is no accident that after Acts 13 almost all OT citations in Acts discuss (a) judgment on Israel for failing to respond to Jesus or (b) the right of Gentiles to be included in God's blessing. Luke–Acts is fundamentally a defense of Gentile inclusion in the mission and a presentation of Jesus' new way. Luke's major goal is to show that events and Scripture indicate that this was always God's plan. See Bock 1990.

17 For a study of the hermeneutic of Luke's OT use, see Bock 1987, in which I build on P. Schubert's 1957 thesis that Luke's theme is "proof from prophecy" (but the apologetic motif is not so strong in Luke as the declarative function of these texts, thus my modification to "proclamation from prophecy and pattern"). My work contrasts with that of Rese 1969, who underestimates the appeal to pattern and therefore understates a prophetic approach to Luke's OT. Soards 1994: 201 misconstrues the proof-from-prophecy position by describing it as linear, which does not reflect my view of the interaction between text and event in the proclamation-from-prophecy-and-pattern theme; see Bock 1987: 273.

11 Ζάω (to live) is an important NT term. The key Lucan uses are Luke 24:23; Acts 1:3; 25:19; cf. Mark 16:11; Luke 10:28; 15:32; 20:38; Acts 9:41; Gal. 2:20; Heb. 7:25; 1 Pet. 3:18 (ζῳοποιέω, to make alive); Rev. 1:18; Marshall 1978: 885; Bode 1970: 62.

13 Bode 1970: 63 comments that the detail betrays a "rather complicated literary background" (probably alluding to the Mark 14:41 connection noted above). Luke uses ἁμαρτωλός eighteen times, Matthew five times, Mark six times, and John four times.

34 Plummer 1896: 507 and Arndt 1956: 445 note that this passage helped create the two-realms theory of papal power, one secular, the other spiritual. This doctrine was formalized by Boniface VIII in his 1302 Unam Sanctam, though it was discussed much earlier. This theory parallels the disciples' misunderstanding, but in a different direction. The disciples would use the sword to defend and gain power, but the papacy was trying to hold on to complete power.

5 For the history of interpretation of this passage, see Boobyer 1942: 1–47; Liefeld 1974: 162–65; Baltensweiler 1959. Since no sayings of Jesus appear in this passage, the Jesus Seminar does not discuss it.

18 Michaelis, TDNT 7:379–80, rejects a connection to the Feast of Tabernacles; but see Boobyer 1942: 76–79; Ellis 1974: 143; Daube 1956: 30–32 (though some of his citations involve material that is much later than this period).

11 Washings took place before and after the meal. According to later tradition in the Talmud, only the washing after the meal was commanded by the Torah, the other was commanded by the rabbis; b. Ḥul. 105a. What is unclear is whether such rules applied to all meals or just to Sabbath and festival meals (y. Ber. 12a [8.2–3] [= Neusner et al. 1982–93: 1.284–91]); the real issue here is meals on the eve of Sabbath or at festival. E. Sanders 1990: 31 argues that there is no evidence of washing before every meal. Evidently the Pharisees' concern for contracting impurity from a dead swarming thing in liquid (Lev. 11:31–38) caused them to expand the biblical injunctions. But such a danger was not limited to the Sabbath or festal meals. As such, it is likely that such care was present at every meal. Booth 1986: 119–50, 194–203 cites t. Dem. 2.11–12 (= Neusner 1977–86: 1.84) as key evidence.

2 See Borg 1987: 162–63, 170, who notes Jer. 12:7 and Ezek. 11:22–23. So also Horsley 1987: 300–302, who calls Luke 13:32–33 part of a "fairly solid tradition" (p. 190). For the debate on 13:31–33, see Nolland 1993a: 738–39, who accepts 13:31–32, but regards 13:33 as a Lucan redaction that makes the transition from 13:32 to 13:34. However, the use of δεῖ is too widespread in the Gospel tradition to make this conclusion solid (see the exegesis of 13:33). In addition, as Marshall 1978: 570 suggests, 13:33 is an integral link to 13:32.

28 On μυστήριον as revealing God's plan, see Dan. 2:17–23, 27–30; cf. also Ps. 25:14; Prov. 3:32; Amos 3:7; Bornkamm, TDNT 4:814–15, 817–18.

33 Borsch 1967: 322–23 also argues for this more representative reading, which is grounded in kingship and not necessarily in explicit messianism. As well, he argues for ties to Adam. The latter connection is less certain here, but Borsch also sees Mark 2:28—and thus Luke 6:5—as authentic.

40 For refutation of France's attempt (1971: 227–39) to tie this remark to a.d. 70, see Marshall 1978: 776–77, who notes that the presence of cosmic signs, the force of Dan. 7:13, and the context all argue against such a view. Marshall also defends the saying's authenticity and rightly questions attempts to reject the saying because of the Synoptic mixture of OT text (Ps. 110 and Dan. 7) or by holding that other sayings such as Mark 8:38 or 14:62 are earlier. Colpe, TDNT 8:450, and Perrin 1967: 173–85 deny authenticity; Hooker 1967: 148–59 and Borsch 1967: 361–64 defend it.

51 1 Enoch 40.9 names four angels: Michael, Raphael, Gabriel (the angel of strength), and Phanuel (alternately called Uriel); 1 Enoch 20 names these four as well as Saraqael, Raguel, and Suruel (Gabriel is described as caring for the Garden of Eden and the cherubim). See Tob. 12:15; Fitzmyer 1981: 327–28; Bousset 1926: 325–31; SB 2:89–97.

23 M. Power 1912 mentions this approach, while Cortés and Gatti 1970 and Bover 1951 suppose that the missing saying was that Jesus told his parents he would remain in Jerusalem, but they had not understood him on that point.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 53–57; F. F. Bruce 1988: 6–13 (of Acts); Bovon 1989: 23; Kümmel 1975: 151; Danker 1988: 17–18; Tiede 1980: 1–18, 70; Maddox 1982: 6–9; Esler 1987: 27–29; C. A. Evans 1990: 2; C. F. Evans 1990: 14; L. Johnson 1991: 2–3.

1 Bovon 1989: 30 n. 1 notes that these comparisons with ancient prologues date back to the eighteenth century with G. Raphelius and J. J. Wettstein. C. F. Evans 1990: 116–19 cites several of these “scientific prefaces.”

8 For Bovon 1989: 34, the usage in Acts is decisive for a negative sense, but he calls the criticism “discreet.”

33 This is the polite form of address; see BDF §60.2. However, that Theophilus is of high rank is not guaranteed; see Bovon 1989: 39 n. 64. See Theophrastus, Characters 5, who says that the address is “simple flattering speech.” Nonetheless, Luke’s usage does strongly lean toward a greeting of respect.

37 Bovon 1989: 31 compares this emphasis on the account’s trustworthiness to John 20:30–31; 21:24–25; Rev. 1:1–3; 22:18–19. Note also 2 Pet. 1:16–18.

1 Bovon 1989: 46–47 demonstrates the linking nature of 1:39–45 as follows:

a declaration of the birth of John the Baptist (1:5–25) a´ declaration of the birth of Jesus the Messiah (1:26–38)
b meeting between Mary and Elizabeth (1:39–56)
c birth of John the Baptist (1:57–80)
c´ birth of Jesus the Messiah (2:1–40)

1 So Fitzmyer 1981: 309, who notes that the title goes back to E. Burrows. Bovon 1989: 45–47 belongs here, though he sees the presence of legend (1:57–80; 2:1–40), a declaration scene (1:26–38), a meeting account (1:39–56), and two hymns (1:46–56, 67–79). Bovon also sees parallelism in form to Acts 10, though there is no hymnic material there. In addition, he accepts the description of the material as Midrash, provided Midrash is defined as actualizing existing revelation.

4 Most recently Bovon 1989: 22 tentatively suggests this possibility for some of Luke’s special material, but he disdains (p. 66) a Marian connection for the Luke 1 material because of the Synoptic portrait of family doubt in Mark 3:21, 31–35. However, Mary’s response in Mark may be a reaction to the type of Messiah that Jesus was turning out to be versus what she had assumed he would be.

6 Marshall 1978: 56 points out that the material cannot reflect a church hymn, since it is clearly directed to the situation. Bovon 1989: 51 agrees with Marshall that a nonpoetic approach is best.

11 Bovon 1989: 52 n. 30 notes that a high priest would not be one of those who were chosen by lot to give this offering.

39 There are three allusions to eschatological joy in this verse: χαρήσονται, χαρά, and ἀγαλλίασις; Leaney 1958: 80; Marshall 1978: 57. Or as Bovon 1989: 55 says, the joy is for the birth of a prophet. His office is the source of joy. The joy may well start with Elizabeth (1:39–45).

40 Μέγας is used derisively of Simon Magus in Acts 8:10, but positively of Isaiah in Sir. 48:22; R. Brown 1977: 273 n. 33. It is used of Mordecai (Esth. 10:3), who was not a prophet. Bovon 1989: 56 compares the remarks to the "great" priestly figures in T. Levi 17–18. "Greatness" comes for the first priest of Jubilee in being able to talk to God (17:2), while for the last priest, the eschatological priest, it involves anointing by the Spirit (18:7). It is clear that greatness has to do with being specially endowed to serve God.

56 The premise was that it is dangerous to be too near and too long in God's presence; Bovon 1989: 60.

5 The arguments here are complex, based on a variety of suppositions, and thus come in a variety of forms. Schürmann 1969: 56–57; Bovon 1989: 64–70; and Schneider 1977a: 48–49 have brief discussions of the details, as does Marshall 1978: 63. Most discussions center on 1:34, so more detail awaits treatment of that verse. Other details related to the discussion are treated as they arise in the verses.

6 Bovon 1989: 66–67 (also n. 13) speaks of Isaiah and the development of Jewish speculation like Pseudo-Philo's portrait of Isaac and Moses (Biblical Antiquities 8–9) and Philo's view of Isaac (Cherubim 12–15 §§40–52), though Bovon notes that for Philo this detail was allegorical. One could add Pseudo-Philo's portrait of Samson's birth (Biblical Antiquities 42). None of these accounts are virgin births: they only supply details of the event not in the original accounts. Bovon also argues for Hellenistic influence. C. F. Evans 1990: 156–57 surveys divine paternity in the ancient world, but denies its value for this passage. He prefers to speak of a retrojection, which means he thinks later reflection has produced the tradition.

12 So Schneider 1977a: 49. Against a reference to Isaiah in Luke are R. Brown 1977: 300 and Fitzmyer 1981: 336. The NT sees the virgin state as honorable (Acts 21:9; 1 Cor. 7:25; Rev. 4:14); Bovon 1989: 72.

39 Fitzmyer 1981: 350. Bovon 1989: 76 speaks of a reference to the creative power of God. Isa. 32:15 LXX (A, ℵ) mentions the Spirit's "coming upon" someone. See also 1 Sam. 10:6; 16:13 ("leap upon"); and Ezek. 37:14; C. F. Evans 1990: 163.

40 Bovon 1989: 76 notes that the combination of Spirit and power is frequent in Luke–Acts: Luke 1:17; 4:14; Acts 1:8; 10:38.

55 Moule 1953: 107. Bovon 1989: 77 argues that the predicate position is supported by the OT allusion to Isa. 4:3.

5 Y. Soṭa 20c (5.4) (= Neusner et al. 1982–93: 27.153); Creed 1930: 21; SB 2:101. The idea of singing babies does represent a major expansion of this motif, not paralleled in the OT or NT. On βρέφος as fetus, see Oepke, TDNT 5:637; BAA 293–94; Luke 1:44; Sir. 19:11. In later Judaism, Tg. Ps. 68:27 calls on the fetus in the womb to praise God, while Odes Sol. 28.2 speaks of a child leaping in the womb; Bovon 1989: 85 n. 35.

8 Bertram, TDNT 4:366 n. 36 and 367; Luke 1:28; Matt. 21:9; 25:34; Ps. 1:1; Deut. 33:29; Isa. 56:2. Bovon 1989: 86 notes that the Gospel starts with blessing on Mary and Jesus, while it ends with blessing on the disciples ().

10 Farris 1985: 67–85 surveys the parallel examples in the OT and Judaism; Berger 1984: 242–43; Fitzmyer 1981: 359; Schneider 1977a: 56–58. Bovon 1989: 82–83 notes that the Magnificat focuses on the victory of the righteous; it does not praise God as Creator, as do the Qumranic hymns, and has less harsh criticism of enemies than do the Psalms of Solomon. Bovon notes many verbal parallels to the Psalms of Solomon:

Motif	Magnificat	Psalms of Solomon
fearing God	1:50	2.33; 3.12; 4.23; 15.13
Israel or the nation as servant	1:54	12.6; 17.21
Abraham and his descendants	1:55	9.9; 18.3

the proud	1:51	2.1–31; 17.13, 23
contrast of rich and poor	1:53	5.11
reversal	1:52	11.4
refrain	1:50	13.12
power of God	1:51	17.3
arm of God	1:51	13.2
God’s seeing	1:48	18.2
God’s help	1:54	16.3, 5
God’s remembering	1:54	10.1, 4
God’s speaking	1:55	11.7

2 Marshall 1978: 86 speaks of the Jewish berākâ. Berger 1984: 243 calls the Benedictus a psalm of thanksgiving, as does Bovon 1989: 96–97.

3 Marshall 1978: 86; Berger 1984: 243. Bovon 1989: 99 notes that the expressions here have similarities to the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs: compassion (Luke 1:78; T. Zeb. 7.2–3; 8.2) and to visit (Luke 1:68, 78; T. Levi 4.4; T. Judah 23.5; T. Asher 7.3).

5 R. Brown 1977: 377. Schürmann 1969: 84 n. 26 notes traces of non-Lucan style and argues for a Palestinian setting. Bovon 1989: 98 and n. 8 argues that the terms to make redemption, horn of salvation, and to remember covenant are not Lucan expressions, though the terms to go before, knowledge, and salvation are like Lucan usage.

19 Bovon 1989: 54 prefers the translation “the entire time” or “always,” but the point is the same. The promise through time has been consistent.

20 Hendriksen 1978: 125 includes a chart of various texts about Messiah. For covenant references in the OT, see Exod. 2:24; Lev. 26:42; Ps. 106:45; Ezek. 16:60; Bovon 1989: 106 n. 62.

34 Schürmann 1969: 91 n. 67; Hendriksen 1978: 131; Wiefel 1988: 65; BDF §400.6. Bovon 1989: 108 correctly states that John has a foot in each era, since as the last of the prophets of promise he sets the table for the new era (Luke 7:26; 16:16).

37 Godet 1875: 1.115. Bovon 1989: 108 n. 74 notes that the expression forgiveness of sins is like neither the OT nor the Christian expression. Jewish usage does occur: Philo, Life of Moses 2.29 §147; Special Laws 1.35 §190; Josephus, Antiquities 6.5.6 §92 (which discusses God’s reaction to Israel’s desire to elect a king in 1 Sam. 12 and the nation’s confession of sin after God revealed his displeasure).

44 Fitzmyer 1981: 388. A similar exhortation for the “straight walk” is found in T. Sim. 5.2, but in Luke, God supplies the way; Bovon 1989: 110 n. 89.

49 Bovon 1989: 111 notes that salvation history is narrated and sung. The mood of praise is important.

50 See discussions in Schürmann 1969: 94–95; Schweizer 1984: 44; R. Brown 1977: 376 n. 2; Bovon 1989: 110. Godet 1875: 1.118 refutes the older view that John was an Essene. The similarity between the two groups suggests that if John did not belong to one group, he probably was not a member of the other either.

14 Bovon 1989: 118 argues that the parents’ obedience shows that they are not nationalists, like the later Zealots.

18 Plummer 1896: 53. Bovon 1989: 120 n. 36 notes that expansions on the birth miracle occur in the second-century Protevangelium of James 4–10, 19–20.

19 This used to be the Catholic understanding of the term and is still held by some today; Blinzler 1967 discusses the options and the subject of Jesus’ family. R. Brown 1977: 398 hints at this view, citing Ps. Sol. 13.9 [cited as 13.8 according to an older numbering scheme]; 18.4; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 6:58 as examples of πρωτότοκος meaning “only begotten.” Bovon 1989: 121 speaks of a privileged relationship to God.

21 Exod. 13:2; Num. 3:12; Schürmann 1969: 104 n. 43; Fitzmyer 1981: 407–8; Frey 1930; Michaelis, TDNT 6:876–77 and n. 36; Bovon 1989: 121 n. 38.

6 Klostermann 1929: 37. Ἄγγελος is introduced without the definite article. Bovon 1989: 124 thinks that the angel may be Gabriel, but the text does not say.

8 Berger 1984: 243, 350. Bovon 1989: 137 speaks of a God-directed meeting (other examples are Luke 1:39–45; Acts 9:10–18; 10:17–29). He observes that meetings before a death have parallels in the OT (Gen. 46:30 [Jacob with Joseph]; Deut. 32:49–50; 34:1–5 [Moses and the land]) and in Judaism (Tob. 11:10–15). Bovon also notes Greek parallels.

13 Bovon 1989: 141 n. 22 notes that Simeon is a teacher or rabbi in the Acts of Pilate 16.2, 6.

20 Procksch, TDNT 4:328 n. 3; Creed 1930: 41. Bovon 1989: 143 n. 35 adds Sophocles, Antigone 1268, 1314.

23 Marshall 1978: 120. Bovon 1989: 144 notes conceptual parallels in Ps. 31:19 [31:20 MT; 30:19 LXX] and Isa. 64:4–5 [64:3–4 MT]. Nolland 1989: 120 cites Bar. 4:24 and sees Isa. 52:10 as the key point of connection. Goulder 1989: 257 sees Isa. 40:1–5 as the key text.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 436. Bovon 1989: 154 prefers to speak only of a biographical interest, calling the account an anecdote. He compares it to the Infancy Story of Thomas 2, an account of a five-year-old Jesus fashioning twelve sparrows from clay. Though this account is much more fanciful than the Lucan pericope, its ending (19), stressing Jesus' wisdom, is similar to but less restrained than Luke's emphasis on wisdom (Schmahl 1974; see the exegesis of 2:46). In this case, the Infancy Gospel of Thomas is influenced by Luke (R. Brown 1977: 481).

15 Danker 1988: 75 notes the difference in wording, but still thinks a hint exists about the future; Fitzmyer 1981: 441. Luke 9:22 is an example of the different phrasing. Bovon 1989: 156 also sees no allusion to the resurrection.

16 Rengstorf, TDNT 4:435 n. 152. Bovon 1989: 157 believes that the probable locale is the portico of Solomon (Acts 3:11; 5:12, 21, 25).

18 Wiefel 1988: 84 n. 20. Bovon 1989: 159 notes that the idiom suggests the questioner's belief that an error has been made.

22 This view is really a variation of view 1. It simply focuses on the king. Numerous commentators criticize it, though none mention who holds it. Bovon 1989: 160–61 comes close in mentioning the activity of Messiah in the context and in speaking only of God's love relationship to Jesus.

1 So Marshall 1978: 132; Marshall 1970: 145–46; Bovon 1989: 165 (who sees John as a "bridge" figure); Wink 1968: 42–86. Other Lucan texts on the Baptist are Luke 7:18–35; Acts 1:5, 22; 10:37; 11:16; 13:24–25; 19:3–4.

2 For characteristic approaches to this issue, often appealing to Q, see Klostermann 1929: 50; Creed 1930: 46–48; Schneider 1977a: 82. Bovon 1989: 165–66 speaks of Q, Mark, and other material. Distinctive is Goulder 1989: 271–72, who argues for Luke's use of Matthew.

15 Fitzmyer 1981: 468. Jeremias, TDNT 4:269–71, notes that in later Judaism the imagery describes the creation of the nation, as Tg. Isa. 51:1 shows. Bovon 1989: 172 does not consider the allusion likely, since he sees Luke alluding to the Gentiles here. Bovon also distinguishes between a stone (here) and a rock (the OT image). Bovon is right that Luke has an implication here about Gentiles, but that still need not deny the background of the OT, especially since the Greek wording is translated out of the original setting. The OT allusion is possible, though not certain. This remark is also against a view of “covenantal nomism”; see Allison 1987. Placement into blessing is not a matter of election through mere biology.

21 Bovon 1989: 173 also sees a “past” reference to Jerusalem’s destruction, since he believes that Luke was written after the city’s fall in A.D.. 70.

5 Bovon 1989: 179 n. 65. He notes Isa. 64:1 [63:19 MT]; T. Levi 18.6–7. One could add 3 Macc. 6:18; 2 Bar. 22.1; Traub, TDNT 5:530 n. 263. Also seeing the presence of apocalyptic elements is Witherington 1990: 149, who compares the text to Rev. 1 and defends the event’s authenticity as a vision.

6 This is a supernatural revelation, but it is not a glance into heaven or into the future. Neither does the opening up of the heaven serve to bring comfort in the midst of persecution. Rather the Spirit is revealing himself to some on earth. For this reason the use of “vision” for Luke is less precise. For some texts from the second-century church fathers that briefly mention the event, see Ignatius, Ephesians 18.2 and Smyrneans 1.1; Justin Martyr, Dialogue with Trypho 88.2–8; 51.2; 103.6; and Irenaeus, Against Heresies 3.9.3; 3.17.1. See also Bertrand 1973 and Bovon 1989: 183–84.

10 Ezek. 1:1; Isa. 24:18; 64:1 [63:19 MT]; Gen. 7:11; Mal. 3:10; 3 Macc. 6:18; T. Levi 2.6–8; esp. 18.6–7 (a Christian interpolation?); Apocryphon of John 47.30; Maurer, TDNT 7:962; Schweizer 1984: 78; Bovon 1989: 180 n. 66; Godet 1875: 1.186–87 (who also treats the Synoptics’ relationship to the account in John’s Gospel).

4 For ἀρχή, see Luke 1:2; Acts 11:15; 26:4; for the verbal equivalent, see Acts 1:21–22; 10:37. For the participle ἀρχόμενος, present here, see Luke 24:27; Acts 8:35; 11:4; Bovon 1989: 189.

7 On Fitzmyer's view, see the opening paragraph of the sources and historicity section. Bovon 1989: 202 also argues that the account depicts the victory of faith in the face of opposition. In his view only two texts parallel this account's point about refusing miracles as signs: Dan. 3 and Sipra 227 on Lev. 22:29–33 (= Neusner 1988b: 3.231). But only the latter is really parallel in showing that one does not reveal signs to someone who is unworthy. On Jesus' resisting temptation or persevering in trial, see Luke 22:28; John 6:15, 26–34; 7:1–4; on his refusal to do signs, see Luke 22:39–46; Heb. 2:17–18; 4:15; 5:2. For the history of this text's exegesis, see Kö;ppen 1961.

9 Bovon 1989: 194 notes that the anaphoric use of the article with πνεῦμα in each Gospel argues for the age of the tradition; Bovon cites Jeremias 1980: 115; Deut. 8:2. On ἤγετο, see Wiefel 1988: 100. Paul has this expression: Rom. 8:14; Gal. 5:18.

10 Bovon 1989: 195 speaks of a time of divine revelation, but this is too specific for Luke 4. Jesus is simply "led" by the Spirit. For a study emphasizing the parallels with Israel, see Brawley 1992.

11 Carson 1984: 112. In Bovon's short excursus (1989: 196–97) on the term devil, he notes that Luke uses διάβολος and σατανᾶς seven times each in Luke–Acts. The reference to διάβολος in Luke 4:2 is possibly Luke's choice, though Matt. 4:1, 8 renders this judgment as less than certain. Matt. 4:3 uses ὁ πειράζων and Matt. 4:10 σατανᾶ, which Luke lacks. In 4:1–13, Luke speaks only of the διάβολος, avoiding Matthew's variation of terms and Mark's reference to Satan.

16 Sasse, TDNT 3:888 §C3a; Michel, TDNT 5:158; Bovon 1989: 199 n. 35. Κ όσμος is found in Luke 9:25; 11:50; 12:30; and Acts 17:24.

22 Bovon 1989: 200 n. 36. Προσκυνέω is also found in Acts 7:43; 8:27; 10:25; 24:11. It always has a religious force for Luke. Ἐνώπιον with a genitive is common in Luke (twenty-two times, including 1:15, 17, 19, 75, 76; 5:18, 25; Plummer 1896: 112).

35 Fitzmyer 1981: 515 cites Prov. 9:1–5; Sir. 24:19–27; and Wis. 16:26. These texts reveal the general theme, but they have no teacher-disciple context, so this explanation is problematic. Bovon 1989: 198 also argues for a Matthean lengthening but gives no reason.

3 Bovon 1989: 208 says that the Spirit in Luke is primarily the Spirit of prophecy and filling. Another way to say this is that the Spirit is the enabler.

11 Schramm 1971: 37; Marshall 1978: 179. Ernst 1977: 168–69 sees Luke's hand in many but not all changes. Bovon 1989: 207–8 sees an additional source beyond Mark, either Q or special Lucan material, and despairs of being able to sort out what came from where, beyond the basic elements in 4:18–22 and 4:25–27 originating in the additional source. Crossan 1991 fails to discuss this text, a significant omission in a life-of-Jesus study. This omission may well suggest that Crossan regards none of it as going back to Jesus.

2 Plummer 1896: 147 lists seven points of dissimilarity between these accounts. My parenthetical comments in Brown's list above show some of the questions raised about this connection. Note also the similarities listed by Bovon 1989: 228–29: Jesus face to face with Peter, Peter's prominence, Jesus' instruction, the new attempt to catch fish, the obedience of the fishermen, the miraculous catch, the reaction of Peter, and the promise. He sees an original promise to Peter, which the church expanded in two directions: Luke in terms of discipleship and John in terms of call.

12 Danker 1988: 115 argues that the phrase equals the expression good news of the kingdom in 4:43. This is possible, given the Lucan form of the parable of the seed in 8:4–15. For Bovon 1989: 230–31, it is God's saving message and covenant promise that are in view.

18 Busse 1979: 110–14 argues that the idea of the leprosy "going out" of the man in 5:13 suggests an exorcism (he also notes Luke 4:32, 36; Acts 10:38). Bovon 1989: 240 is uncertain. However, the departure of the fever of Luke 4:39 is described in different but similar terms: ἀφῆκεν.

22 Luke mentions Capernaum in 4:23, 31; 7:1; and 10:15. The reference in 7:1 negates Bovon's inference (1989: 243) from 4:42–44 that in the rest of Luke Jesus does not return to Capernaum. Jesus' itinerant ministry does bring him back to his home base. Luke just chooses not to note that detail.

3 Mark 1:16–20 and Luke 5:1–11 are two form parallels; Bovon 1989: 252; Berger 1984: 316 (discusses the parallel in Mark 2:14); V. Taylor 1935: 75. Schürmann 1969: 287 speaks of an apophthegm for the whole account, which combines a call with a controversy account.

18 Jewish imagery includes Isa. 3:7; Jer. 8:22; 2 Chron. 16:12; Sir. 10:10; and esp. Sir. 38:1–15 (a fascinating text that thanks God for doctors and medicine, while also calling for prayer and sacrifice); Bovon 1989: 259 n. 24. Note Luke 4:23 for another use of physician imagery. In the list above, positive physician imagery occurs in the Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Sir. 38 texts. Isaiah and Jeremiah allude to the image of the physician as a figure for the leader who heals.

9 For a defense of the authenticity of Mark 2:18–20, and thus of its parallels, see V. Taylor 1966: 208–12 (who argues that the Marcan tradition has roots in an eyewitness and was told to reveal Jesus' mind about fasting); Cranfield 1959: 107–11; Marshall 1978: 223 (though he regards it as possible that Luke 5:36–39 may be a separate tradition). Bovon 1989: 256 also sees a distinct tradition, since Luke's saying has a parallel in the Gospel of Thomas 47, though in a different order (Luke: garment [5:36], then wine [5:37–39]; Thomas: the reverse). Teaching through word linkage was popular in Judaism. When done with the Scriptures, it was called gezerah shewah.

10 Bultmann 1963: 16–17, who argues that the passage is the work of the church to justify its "Sabbath customs" (or, rather, its lack of them). This view was rejected in the discussion of authenticity. Bovon 1989: 269 sees the church drawing on an authentic saying in the tradition. Berger 1984: 80, 309 calls the passage apophthegm, Chrie, and Sabbath conflict.

11 Schürmann 1969: 300–301, 306 speaks of a Sabbath conflict for both 6:1–5 and 6:6–11. In addition, a controversy saying is the focus of 6:6–11. It is hard to know whether a conflict pronouncement story or a miracle account is present, since both elements exist. The issue is whether the miracle or the saying is more central, which is a tough call. Bultmann 1963: 12 calls it a controversy account occasioned by a healing of Jesus. Bovon 1989: 273 rightly calls it a mixed form, combining a controversy with a miracle account.

15 SB 1:500–18; Jeremias, TDNT 4:1101–3; Bovon 1989: 260. Jeremias notes that nowhere in Judaism is Messiah the bridegroom. Stauffer, TDNT 1:654 n. 39, cites 2 Esdr. [4 Ezra] 2:15, 38; Deut. Rab. 3.12 on 10:1; Pirqe de Rabbi Eliezer 41 (= Friedlander 1916: 322); Mekilta de Rabbi Ishmael, tractate Baḥodesh 3 on Exod. 19:17 (= Lauterbach 1933–35: 2.219), where God comes forth as a groom to meet Israel his bride. In Mekilta de Rabbi Ishmael, tractate Shirata 3 on Exod. 15:2 (= Lauterbach 1933–35: 2.26–27), Akiva cites several texts from the Song of Songs as applying to Israel as the bride of God, making it clear that this book was read as a marriage between Israel and God.

16 For this view are Schürmann 1969: 296; Hendriksen 1978: 309; Wiefel 1988: 121 (perhaps). Against it is Marshall 1978: 226. Bovon 1989: 261 thinks that any specific allusion to the cross or ascension is unlikely and prefers to refer only to the period of the church. The key terms are ἀπαρθῇ in Luke and two forms of αἴρω in Isa. 53.

20 Luke alone refers explicitly to the cloth as καινός, which here means "unused." He uses the term three times in the verse, so it has a touch of emphasis. I translated it "new" to keep the parallelism and linkage clear. It usually refers to a qualitative newness; Bovon 1989: 263. So here it means a new and better teaching. Luke returns to the use of νέος in 5:37–38 in agreement with the Synoptic parallels; Behm, TDNT 3:448; Matt. 9:17; Luke 22:20. On this metaphor, see Maurer, TDNT 7:961 §4a.

34 BAGD 548 §2; BAA 1112 §2; Van Der Loos 1965: 438–39; Bovon 1989: 274. The term ξηρός means “withered,” so that the hand has suffered atrophy. The term also appears in the parallel Matt. 12:10 = Mark 3:3; and Luke 6:8; John 5:3; Matt. 23:15; Heb. 11:29.

36 Riesenfeld, TDNT 8:147; Schürmann 1969: 306 n. 48; Bovon 1989: 274 n. 24; Ps. 37:12 [36:12 LXX]; Dan. 6:12 (with τηρέω); BAGD 622 §1aβ; BAA 1258 §1aβ. Today, παρατηρέω (to watch lurkingly) makes one think of a spy novel.

42 Accepted by Godet 1875: 1.284–85; rejected by Schürmann 1969: 302; Nolland 1989: 255; Ernst 1977: 202 (discussion but no clear choice). Rejecting the reading but attempting to explain its origin are Vogt 1959; Lohse, TDNT 7:23 n. 183; Marshall 1978: 230; Wiefel 1988: 122; Bovon 1989: 266–67 (following Metzger 1975: 139). See also Buchanan and Wolfe 1978; Isaac 1981; and Skeat 1988. The reading is noted in the fourth century by Jerome, Letter 52.8, who did not know what it meant.

44 For more recent discussion, see Käser 1968; Schürmann 1969: 304 n. 29; Marshall 1978: 233; Fitzmyer 1981: 610 (who ties it to the apocryphal gospel tradition); Wiefel 1988: 123 (who rejects a connection to Jesus); and Bovon 1989: 267.

3 Marshall 1978: 237 notes that Luke may have had an alternate list of the Twelve, but he regards the evidence as weak. Schürmann 1969: 318–19, 323 is confident that Luke had a form of what he calls the “Catalogue of the Apostles” (a name that notes the passage’s form), which differed from Mark and derived from Q. Bovon 1989: 278 also sees additional source material here beyond Mark, since the apostolic list had various forms, as Acts 1:13 shows. Nolland 1989: 265 speaks only of the influences of another tradition. Though he is less certain of another full list used by Luke, he thinks one existed because of the inclusion of Judas son of James and the absence of Thaddaeus. The differences in the lists will be noted in the exegesis.

5 For this connection are Ellis 1974: 11 and Schürmann 1969: 313 (who mentions Exod. 24:1–2, 9, 12–13, 15–18, with the seventy elders worshiping from a distance as Moses goes up the mountain, as well as 19:3 and 34:2–5); against it are Marshall 1978: 236 and Fitzmyer 1981: 616. Bovon 1989: 279–80 calls it questionable, citing Philo, Life of Moses 1.40 §§220–26; 2.14–15 §§70–71; 2.28 §§141–42; 2.30 §153; 2.31 §§159–60; and Pseudo-Philo, Biblical Antiquities 11–12, 15, as lacking such a motif. Bovon prefers to see Jesus praying for the preparation and renewal of his people, as Moses had done and as Pseudo-Philo notes.

6 Bovon 1989: 279 see three elements—summary account, short history of an election, and list—that indicate the formation of a community.

1 Aland 1985: §78. Extrabiblical parallels are the Gospel of Thomas 54, 68–69 and the Acts of Paul 5–6 (Bovon 1989: 295). Thomas's order is poor, persecuted, and hungry.we

7 See Bovon 1989: 310 for a slightly different breakdown and with additional comparisons to Didache 1.3–5 and Justin Martyr's Apology 1.15.9–10; 1.14.3; 1.16.1.

10 Berger 1984: 37, 46–47, 51, 57–58 mentions 6:41–42, 45 as admonishment, while regarding 6:39–40, 43–45, 47–49 as parabolic. Bovon 1989: 330 calls 6:46 a warning.

18 Fitzmyer 1981: 624, Schürmann 1969: 322, and Bovon 1989: 286 are certain about the Gentile allusion (Luke 2:31–32; 3:6; 4:25–29). Ernst 1977: 212, Marshall 1978: 242, and Tiede 1988: 136 are more cautious.

28 Bovon 1989: 297 gives three arguments: the form's normal style is in the third person; the remark "blessed are the poor" anticipates a third person; and the fourth beatitude's wording influenced Luke to speak in the second person here. He notes against the third person Jesus' tendency not to use customary style and Matthew's tendency to do so.

38 The OT has the call to love the neighbor in Lev. 19:18, but Judaism debated who the neighbor was, as Luke 10:25–37 shows. Bovon 1989: 313 n. 21 cites Seitz 1969–70: 47: "Loving is thus a matter of 'doing mercy,' which is to stop at no frontiers, levelling all barriers erected by national and even religious hostility." The call to love has no racial, national, social, and religious barriers. The disciple is to love all people. The implications of this are far-reaching in any culture in which disciples find themselves.

39 This seems similar to a view that Bovon 1989: 318–19 calls the existential view, held by R. Bultmann, P. Ricoeur, and M. Buber. Practically speaking, it leads to a cosmopolitan philanthropy. This kind of activity might be an implication of this passage, but it is hardly the point.

49 One senses that Bovon's view (#4) is an attempt to avoid this syntactical problem. A purpose clause would mean that the purpose of lending is only to transfer money back and forth.

67 Bovon 1989: 341 notes correctly that Luke lacks Matthew's apocalyptic thrust, since the First Gospel has the remark in a context about judgment. He argues that Matthew is more original since he is closer to Palestinian weather patterns. But see the discussion (immediately below) on the issue of weather imagery.

73 Bovon 1989: 298 lists other reasons: Luke's knowledge of the woe form (10:13; 11:42–52; 17:1; 21:23; 22:22); Lucan opposition of rich and poor; Lucan opposition of hungry and filled in 1:53; Lucan vocabulary (πλήν, καλῶς εἴπωσιν, and πάντες οἱ ἄνθρωποι); and the second-person address of the woes (which fits Luke's second-person beatitudes). But Schürmann argues that Luke never creates woes and that the verses evidence non-Lucan vocabulary in using πλούσιος and πεινάω; see 1969: 337–38 nn. 86, 88, 96, and 105.

1 Since the passage is unique to Matthew and Luke, most speak of Q as the source or at least as one of the sources; Bovon 1989: 346–47; Wiefel 1988: 141–42.

2 Bovon 1989: 346 n. 5 notes that among many Protestant scholars this has been the major position for some time and that only recently have Catholic commentaries like those of Schürmann, Schneider, and Fitzmyer come to accept this approach.

1 Bovon 1989: 357–58 notes the OT similarities (returning the son to the parent, the widow, and recognition that God's messenger is present) and differences (Jesus' taking the initiative, instantaneous resuscitation, and the crowd's response). Bovon references the key study of this passage by Harbarth 1978. For the connections to 1 Kings, see Brodie 1986, though he overdraws the case for framing around this OT book. The differences between the OT and the event reveal that the event controls the details (see C. A. Evans 1990: 115 and Evans in Evans and Sanders 1993: 223–24).

4 In this context, ἑξῆς refers to an elided χρόνῳ (time); Bovon 1989: 360 n. 28; BAGD 276 §2; BAA 558 §2.

5 Πόλις is used in its broadest sense of inhabited area here and refers to a village; BAGD 685; BAA 1375 §1; Bovon 1989: 360–61 notes the present size of Nein, as does Schürmann 1969: 399.

8 Matt. 9:36; 14:14; 15:32; 18:27; 20:34; Mark 1:41; 6:34; 8:2; Plummer 1896: 199; Bovon 1989: 362 nn. 43–44. The other Lucan uses of σπλαγχνίζομαι, Luke 10:33 and 15:20, are both in parables.

1 Putting Luke 7 in the larger context of 6:20–8:18, Bovon 1989: 369 notes the mix of speaking (6:20–49; 7:18–35; 8:4–18) and action (7:1–17, 36–50), with a summary in 8:1–3. Word and deed are side by side as Jesus moves through Galilee. The arrangement is Luke's, since there is a mix of material from Mark and Matthew, as well as unique Lucan material.

6 For Q as the basic source, see Schürmann 1969: 413, 418; Marshall 1978: 287; Fitzmyer 1981: 662–63; Tiede 1988: 153; Wiefel 1988: 148; Bovon 1989: 369. Those who prefer Matthean priority argue that Luke used Matthew. Luke 7:20–21, 29–30 does not have a parallel in Matthew.

23 Of twelve NT uses of βουλή, nine are in Luke–Acts: Luke 7:30; 23:51; Acts 2:23; 4:28; 5:38; 13:36; 20:27; 27:12, 42; elsewhere at 1 Cor. 4:5; Eph. 1:11; and Heb. 6:17. In Luke's use, the phrase centers on what God has done in Jesus; Bovon 1989: 379.

29 So Stählin, TDNT 3:154; Wilckens, TDNT 7:516; Liefeld 1984: 901–2; Plummer 1896: 207; Jeremias 1963a: 162; Marshall 1978: 301; Ernst 1977: 353; Tiede 1988: 158; Bovon 1989: 180; Wiefel 1988: 151; and Linton 1975–76. Nolland 1989: 344 also notes the possibility of an allusion to a real game here, regardless of which view is taken, citing work by Légasse 1969: 299–301.

17 Plummer cites Socrates' phrase as πάνυ ὀρθῶς; so also Godet 1875: 1.359 and Bovon 1989: 393 n. 53. However, no reference is given in any of these sources. A check of Thesaurus Linguae Graecae, an electronic database containing most of the extant ancient Greek literature, did not surface the phrase in Socrates. This classical comparison should not be made until the texts are revealed. However, the general rhetorical pattern does fit a type of Socratic interrogation; see Daube 1956: 152; Aristotle, Rhetoric 3.18.2.

4 Bovon 1989: 405 is close to this view, though he thinks that Luke had a written source for the interpretation of the parable, while other alterations reflect either oral tradition or Luke's theological emphases.

11 Seed as a metaphor for the word is common in the ancient world; Bovon 1989: 407 n. 25; Pseudo-Plutarch, Liberal Education 4 (2B); Plato, Phaedrus 276B–77A; Klauck 1978: 192–96. Ὁ σπείρων is generic in force and should be translated "a sower"; Arndt 1956: 229. Σπεῖραι is an infinitive of purpose: he went out "to sow his seed." On the generic article, see BDF §252 and BDR §252b.

18 Since Luke uses καλός ten times in Luke–Acts, including twice in Luke 8:15, the change is hard to explain. Bovon 1989: 412 n. 54 attempts to explain this variation as emphasizing the ground's quality.

22 Matt. 13:11 and Luke have a plural reference to mysteries, while Mark 4:11 has the singular. Bovon 1989: 413 sees the influence of oral tradition here.

35 Marshall 1978: 324 and Fitzmyer 1981: 713 take the pronoun in the phrase ἔστιν … αὕτη as a predicate, yielding, “The parable means this. …” Bovon 1989: 407 n. 21 prefers a reference back to 8:9 and translates, “This parable is. …” There is little difference in the options. Bovon also notes that this use of the verb recalls Jewish usage, where apocalyptic visions are interpreted. He cites Klauck 1978: 88 n. 273 for details.

37 Creed 1930: 116 notes that Luke uses both σατανᾶς and διάβολος. In fact, Luke uses each term seven times in Luke–Acts; Bovon 1989: 408 n. 32. It is hard to explain this difference as a conscious change because of stylistic preference; so correctly Marshall 1978: 325.

44 The verbal form is found in 10:41; 12:11, 22, 25, 26. Μέριμνα is excessive self-concern over one’s welfare; Bovon 1989: 410 speaks of “egocentric worry.”

46 Other NT uses are Titus 3:3; James 4:1, 3; 2 Pet. 2:13. Mark has the synonymous ἐπιθυμία; Stählin, TDNT 2:924–25; Büchsel, TDNT 3:171 n. 36. Bovon 1989: 410–11 suggests that Luke made the change, because Mark’s term can be read positively by a Greek.

49 This combination is particularly appropriate for a Greek audience; Bovon 1989: 412 n. 53. It has an ethical thrust here; this is an ethically good person.

3 Bovon 1989: 415 speaks of an antithetical word of wisdom. Bultmann 1963: 81–82, 98 calls the sayings “double-stranded” mĕšāllîm, like secular proverbs; also Fitzmyer 1981: 716. Berger 1984: 118 speaks of a warning word for 8:18. Wiefel 1988: 161 also speaks of a māšāl (parable), as does Jeremias 1963a: 41, but this is unlikely. Luke seems aware of the proverbial character by his reuse of the material.

7 Bultmann 1963: 215–16; so also Fitzmyer 1981: 727. Bovon 1989: 422 speaks of a "victory of the hero (German Helden) over the elements," a rescue miracle, as does Theissen 1983: 321. Bovon says it is like an exorcism, but is distinct.

6 That Matthew may have accompanied Jesus lends credence to the added detail of the second demoniac. The extent of the agreement between Mark and Luke leads most to see Mark as the source for Luke; so Schürmann 1969: 487; Schramm 1971: 90; Marshall 1978: 335; Fitzmyer 1981: 733; Wiefel 1988: 165–66. Bovon 1989: 432 is so impressed with these agreements that he argues that this account stands against the two-Gospel (or Griesbach) hypothesis. What could have caused Luke to go his own way against Matthew?

7 Bultmann 1963: 210 classifies it as a miracle of healing. Bovon 1989: 432 and Theissen 1983: 321 call it an exorcism. Theissen also speaks of the liberation of an enslaved personality (pp. 89–90). Berger 1984: 311 puts it in his "epideixis/demonstratio" category (where he puts many miracles). He also speaks of the account as a "mandatio" that highlights Jesus' authority and power. Pesch 1971: 354 notes the form elements in Mark: encounter (5:1–2), demon's defensive reaction (5:6–7), exorcist's command (5:8), exit of demon (5:13), crowd amazement and spread of exorcist's fame (5:14a, 18–20).

11 On this title, see Luke 1:32, 35, 76. According to Josephus, Antiquities 16.6.2 §163, this was the Gentile way to refer to the God of the Jews; Luce 1933: 172. So also Plummer 1896: 229–30, citing Dan. 3:26; 4:24 [4:21 MT]; 5:18; 7:18; Bovon 1989: 429 n. 4.

32 So Cranfield 1959: 176. Plummer 1896: 227 speaks of Kersa, a locale near the lake, but he rejects Origen's association of it with Gergesa. Arndt 1956: 239–40 and Bovon 1989: 434 accept Gergesa as original in Luke. Liefeld 1984: 914–15 is rightly cautious about a solution, as is Nolland 1989: 407. No clearly superior option exists between reading a regional reference or concluding that Gergesa is intended.

33 Arndt 1956: 240–41 speaks of many commands; Danker 1988: 182 of an ingressive imperfect ("he began to command" or "was about to command"), which is probably better; so also Fitzmyer 1981: 738; BDF §328, §329, §331. Bovon 1989: 435 n. 44 calls the choice very difficult, a judgment with which I concur.

5 Bovon 1989: 443 and n. 4 acknowledges the possibility of oral sources, especially for 8:44. Schramm 1971: 127 notes that 8:42 with its use of ὑπάγειν (to go) and the direct speech of 8:46 are not Lucan and could be from an oral source.

9 Bultmann 1963: 214–15 (who argues that they were originally separate); Bovon 1989: 444–45 (who speaks of a "crescendo" in this pairing, especially since it includes two women); Fitzmyer 1981: 743; Theissen 1983: 321. Berger 1984: 314, 317 speaks of a "supplication account" by putting it in his "deesis/petitio" category. It also teaches Jesus' authority, as Berger's placement in the "mandatio" form shows.

10 For ὄχλος in Luke, see 4:42; 5:1, 3, 15, 19, 29; 6:17, 19; 7:9, 11, 12, 24; 8:4, 19, 40, 42, 45; 9:11, 12, 16, 18, 37, 38; 11:14, 27, 29; 12:1, 13, 54;

14:25; 18:36; 19:3, 39; 22:6, 47; 23:4, 48. In 8:40–56, ὄχλος is synonymous to λαός (people), as 8:47 shows. Ὄχλος recalls the interested group of 8:4, 19. Pointing to 8:47, Bovon 1989: 446 sees a more expectant crowd and speaks of their eschatological hope as they await Jesus, but the term is more neutral here. Schürmann 1969: 489 rightly speaks of their expectation of miracles, as Mark 6:53–56 indicates. See the exegesis of Luke 8:4.

25 According to Arndt 1956: 247, this is the only place where Jesus makes such an address. However, he has missed 13:16, where a woman is addressed as a daughter of Abraham (noted by Tiede 1988: 176). Cf. the description of Zacchaeus as "son of Abraham" in 19:9. Bovon 1989: 450 and n. 50 notes that the term suggests Jesus' authority. See also Ps. 45:10 [44:11 LXX]; Zeph. 3:14; and Lam. 4:21–22. The length of the woman's problem suggests that she is older than Jesus.

33 Plummer 1896: 235; Marshall 1978: 344; Fitzmyer 1981: 746; Bovon 1989: 445–46 (who argues that Luke may be responsible for it); Creed 1930: 123; and Hendriksen 1978: 466 appear undecided. Arndt 1956: 246 and A. B. Bruce 1897: 525 are for inclusion. Schürmann 1969: 490 n. 137; Ellis 1974: 130; and Luce 1933: 173 omit it.

2 Wiefel 1988: 170 speaks of Jesus' person and his mysterious suffering as the key to the unit. Schürmann 1969: 498 speaks of the mystery of God's reign becoming evident to the disciples. Bovon 1989: 455 notes points of contact shared with Acts: (1) reception of power from the Lord (Acts 26:15–18), (2) the juxtaposition of preaching and healing (3:1–26), and (3) mission that finds acceptance and rejection (13:51; 18:6).

14 Fitzmyer 1981: 753–54; Ellis 1974: 137; m. Ber. 9.5 (a command with roots in Exod. 3:5); Schürmann 1969: 501 n. 20; Josephus, Jewish War 2.8.4 §§124–27 (about the Essenes). On the contrast with the practice of Greek cynics and philosophers, see Schürmann 1969: 502 n. 24 and Bovon 1989: 458 n. 20, who compares the disciples' absence of possessions with the Levites and their being provided for through the tithe (Num. 18:21).

18 Relying on Mark 6:6 and suggesting that Luke 9:5 is influenced by 10:8–11, Bovon 1989: 459 and Schürmann 1969: 504 say that Jesus worked the cities and left the Twelve to train in the towns. But this argument is circular (what is 10:8–11 influenced by?), for the Matthean parallel mentions cities as well (10:5, 11 [probably], 14). It is better to regard the switch as intentional to show ministry in towns and cities. Jesus' woes in Luke 10:13–15 suggest that cities were involved in the mission.

3 Fitzmyer 1981: 757 notes six Lucan modifications of Mark: (1) the Lucan use of the title τετραάρχης (tetrarch) (as in 3:1) versus the title βασιλεύς (king); (2) a reference to τὰ γινόμενα πάντα (all that has happened) instead of just to miracles; (3) a unique reference to Herod's perplexity; (4) the use of threefold ὅτι for the reports of popular speculation about Jesus; (5) the "who is this?" question; and (6) the note about a desire to see Jesus. Most see no sources here outside of Mark; Schürmann 1969: 508; Bovon 1989: 461–62; Schramm 1971: 128.

2 Compare Matt. 14:19–20 = Mark 6:39–42 = Luke 9:14–17 in the first feeding account (the Johannine parallel is John 6:1–15). Bovon 1989: 467 notes that the second Marcan feeding and John's single feeding miracle show little influence on Luke 9:10–17. He does note two points of agreement between John's miracle and Luke: (1) the reference to the crowds following Jesus in Luke 9:11 = John 6:2 and (2) the number of the crowd given as five thousand in Luke 6:14 = John 6:10.

1 Bovon 1989: 482 n. 4 sees evidence of oral tradition in Luke 9:25–26. The Gospel of Thomas 55 has a saying like Luke 9:23, while Thomas 67 is like Luke 9:25. 2 Tim. 2:12 is like Luke 9:26.

2 So Bultmann 1963: 82–83. As evidence of the individuality of the sayings, Bovon 1989: 481 notes similar sayings about cross-bearing in Matt. 10:38 = Luke 14:27, about losing one's life in 17:33, and about denying Jesus in 12:9. Fitzmyer 1981: 782 is certain that the sayings were separate.

3 Luce 1933: 186 is wrong to say that the remark is more literal in Mark than in Luke, for the contexts are identical. Fitzmyer 1981: 788 notes the OT parallels to saving one's ψυχή: Gen. 19:17; 1 Sam. 19:11; and Jer. 31:6 LXX [48:6 MT]; Schürmann 1969: 543 n. 111. Jewish parallels are found in b. Tamid 32a ("What shall a man do to live? They replied: Let him mortify himself. What should a man do to kill himself? They replied: Let him keep himself alive [i.e., indulge in luxuries]") and b. Ber. 63b ("whoever abases himself for the words of the Torah will in the end be exalted"); SB 1:587–88. Bovon 1989: 482 speaks of the OT picture of the two ways (Deut. 30:15–18) and compares Luke's emphasis to the structure of Luke 6:47–49. Note how the Jewish emphasis on the law is replaced with an emphasis on Christ in the NT.

1 On the options, see Luce 1933: 186 and Schneider 1977a: 215. Fitzmyer 1981: 791–92 sees Luke's rewriting Mark, as do Schürmann 1969:

563–64; Wiefel 1988: 179; and Neirynck 1973. Plummer 1896: 250 notes signs of Lucan expression in the account. Schweizer 1984: 159 seems to suggest the presence of an additional source, noting the different dating, the journey idea, and the reference to “the” mountain. So also Schramm 1971: 136–39 argues for an additional source, as does Bovon 1989: 488–89, especially for 9:31–33. Bovon even mentions the possibility of oral tradition. Marshall 1978: 381 notes the Lucan peculiarities: Jesus at prayer, change in his facial appearance, exodus, sleep of the disciples, and fear at the cloud’s coming. Marshall, like Bovon, suggests that Luke reworked Mark in light of oral sources, since some changes are shared with Matthew (i.e., the facial appearance).

7 Bovon 1989: 493–94 discusses symbolic meanings about the new eschaton or the Feast of Tabernacles (he is uncertain which is indicated). However, the vague reference to “about” eight is against any symbolic meaning, especially since the number is not used elsewhere in this way in Luke. If we did not have Mark and Matthew, would one even raise the question of a symbolic sense?

15 To indicate sleep, Luke uses ὕπνος (BAGD 843; BAA 1679; elsewhere in Luke’s writings twice in Acts 20:9) and βαρέω (to be heavy; BAGD 133; BAA 267; elsewhere in Luke’s writings only in Luke 21:34). In 22:45–46, Luke uses the synonymous κοιμάω and καθεύδω. It is clear that the disciples are in deep sleep, for the phrase βεβαρημένοι ὕπνῳ translates literally as “weighed down with sleep.” Balz, TDNT 8:554, speaks of disciples “drunk with sleep.” Bovon’s term “second consciousness” (1989: 498) is too visionary in force. He cites Gen. 15:12; Dan. 8:18; 10:9.

19 Bovon 1989: 501–2, with most, sees prophetic imagery dominating, but he also correctly speaks of Sinai imagery as key. The emphasis is on God’s presence, but the confession is regal and messianic. Luke is not referring only to a “chosen one” like Moses. A synthesis of concepts exists here, not just one image. For Luke, even the “Prophet like Moses” is a regal-like figure, leading a nation to deliverance (Acts 3:17–26; 7:20–43).

5 Ἑξῆς appears five times in the NT, all in Luke–Acts: Luke 7:11; here; Acts 21:1; 25:17; 27:18; Bovon 1989: 508 n. 21.

2 The first account is not a chiasmus, against Bovon 1989: 521, who suggests this structure (his categories are correct, but there is no balance since a´ and b´ do not match their opposites):

a question (9:46)
b nonverbal answer (9:47)
b´ first indirect answer (9:48a)
a´ second direct answer (9:48b)

3 Schürmann 1969: 200; Fitzmyer 1981: 496; Ernst 1977: 155; Lohse, TDNT 8:486 n. 49. Bovon 1989: 189 calls attempts at harmonization excessive rationalization like that in current fundamentalism. C. F. Evans 1990: 252 calls the task “impossible,” which is excessively skeptical.

3 Bovon 1989: 477 says that the cause is unclear. He challenges the doublet theory by noting that only Mark 8:1–10 qualifies as a doublet. The walk on the sea (Mark 6:45–52), the Syrophoenician woman (7:24–30), and the detailed dispute over the law (7:1–23) are not doublets. I would note that one could argue that the last account is omitted because of Luke's avoiding issues of the law, as he did in the Sermon on the Plain; but the others still need to be explained, especially the Syrophoenician woman, who as a Gentile fits a favorite Lucan theme.

40 In Judaism, 1 Enoch 55.4; Jub. 23.29; T. Sim. 6.6; T. Judah 25.3; Sibylline Oracles 3.796–807; T. Moses 10.1–3. Leaney 1958: 179 notes that the specific picture of a fall from heaven (for the wicked angels, not Satan specifically) comes later in Judaism (e.g., the eighth-century Pirqe de Rabbi Eliezer 22 [= Friedlander 1916: 160]). In Tg. Ps.-J. on Gen. 6:4 (= Bowker 1969: 151), the angels that fell are named Shamhazi and Azael. In Pirqe de Rabbi Eliezer 14 [= Friedlander 1916: 99]), the angel Sammael is cast down from heaven for deceiving Eve. For Judaism, Sammael in all likelihood equals the devil (Wis. 2:24; Tg. Ps.-J. on Gen. 3:6 [= Bowker 1969: 121]).

5 R. Brown 1977: 369; SB 4:23–40. M. Šab. 19.5 indicates that circumcision could take place between the eighth and twelfth days. So important was this act that rabbinic texts speculated why it had not been included among the Ten Commandments; Pesikta Rabbati 23.4 (= Braude 1968: 479).

15 SB 1:96–97; 2:154; Lam. Rab. 1.23 on 1:2; Leqaḥ Tob on Num. 24:17 (2.129b, 130a) (see Strack and Stemberger 1991: 389–90); Pesikta Rabbati 29/30B.4 (= Braude 1968: 587–90). On the OT roots of the concept of renewal in the wilderness, see Ezek. 20:33–38; Hos. 2:14–23 [2:16–25 MT]; Nolland 1989: 143; Mauser 1963.

26 Pesikta Rabbati 36.2 (= Braude 1968: 680–83); Kirk 1972: 95–98; Wiefel 1988: 102. However, the Jewish text is late and it speaks only of his standing on the roof of the temple.

11 Later Jewish tradition shows a connection between the eschaton and healing: Pesikta Rabbati 15.22 (= Braude 1968: 336–37), where Isa. 35:5–6 is used; Aggadat Bereshit 69.1 (see Strack and Stemberger 1991: 339); possibly 1QH 18.14–15.

42 In the Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha, Satan is commonly viewed as the defeated enemy or associated with serpents: T. Dan 6.3–4; T. Moses 10.1; and possibly Sir. 25:15, 24. Grundmann, TDNT 3:400, adds T. Levi 18.12; T. Zeb. 9.8; and Jub. 10.8. In later Judaism, see Midr. Ps. 91.8 on 91:13 (= Braude 1959: 2.107). Seesemann, TDNT 5:943, sees a figure of speech referring to protection, but it is better to speak of a miracle picturing victory and protection, since miraculous authority is present. Other Jewish texts on Satan include T. Asher 7.3 and T. Dan 5.10–11.

44 Num. 21:6–9; Ps. 58:4 [58:5 MT]; 140:3 [140:4 MT]; 1 Kings 12:11, 14 = 2 Chron. 10:11, 14; Sir. 21:2; 39:30. Meanwhile, Midr. Ps. 91.8 on 91:13 (= Braude 1959: 2.107) gives such power to Noah; Sipra 227 on Lev. 22:29–33 (= Neusner 1988b: 3.231) attributes a power to judge to the "Omnipresent"; while T. Levi 18 gives such power to the messianic high priest. Miyoshi 1974: 102–5 has a full survey of the Jewish texts and regards Deut. 8:15 as key.

7 Gen. 49:25; Prov. 23:24–25; Fitzmyer 1985: 928; Grundmann 1963: 222 (who notes the contrast to Gospel of Thomas 79); Hauck, TDNT 4:369; SB 2:187–88; m. ›Abot 2.8; 2 Bar. 54.10; and later targumim on Gen. 49:25

(i.e., Ps.-J., Neof. 1, and Frg. Tg.). Manson 1949: 88 notes that Pesikta Rabbati 37.2 (= Braude 1968: 2.689) says this of Messiah's mother (cited as §149a by Manson according to an older numbering scheme; see SB 1:161).

15 In ancient Judaism, Ps. 118 was seen as messianic; SB 1:849–50, 876; m. Suk. 3.9; Midr. Ps. 118.19–20 on 118:21–22 (= Braude 1959: 2.243–44); Jeremias 1966: 256–57.

21 This Pesikta Rabbati text treats Hos. 14:1 [14:2 MT] and says that repentance raises a heart to the seventh firmament (i.e., into God's presence) before the throne of glory itself. Other portions of this text read: " 'Come back as far as you can according to your strength, and I will go the rest of the way to meet you.' So the Holy One, blessed be he, says to Israel: 'Return unto me, and I will return unto you' (Mal. 3:7). . . . For the Holy One, blessed be he, is merciful and gracious and desires a turning to him before he sits as your judge on the dais whence he must release the full force of his judgment upon you" (Braude 1968: 2.779).

16 Because it is a first-century work, 4 Macc. 13:17 provides key evidence: a martyr for the law is welcomed and praised by Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. See also b. Qid. 72a; b. Giṭ. 57b; Pesikta Rabbati 43.4 (= Braude 1968: 2.761); R. Meyer, TDNT 3:825–26. In Pesikta Rabbati, if a person bows down to an idol, he or she will have a place at Esau's bosom, not Abraham's.

16 In Gen. 4:10 Abel's spilled blood cries out, and esp. in Hab. 2:11 Jerusalem's stones cry out against Israel's injustice and sin. Marshall 1978: 716 notes the possibility that creation will speak out against the sin of the Pharisees (Jeremias, TDNT 4:270), an option that is less satisfying contextually than the standard OT use of the image; so correctly SB 2:253, which notes the use of this figure in Judaism: Tg. Hab. 2:11; Midr. Ps. 73.4 on 73:10 (= Braude 1959: 2.4).

40 1 Macc. 11:43; 1 Enoch 5.4; BAGD 126–27; BAA 254; Schlier, TDNT 1:513. Braun, TDNT 6:252, says that ἀφίστημι means apostasy.

6 Hayles 1973: 120; Fitzmyer 1981: 400. On Augustan census activity, see Braunert 1957; Corbishley 1936; Tacitus, Annals 1.11; Dio Cassius 53.30.2.

10 Bovon 1989: 195 speaks of a time of divine revelation, but this is too specific for Luke 4. Jesus is simply "led" by the Spirit. For a study emphasizing the parallels with Israel, see Brawley 1992.

44 Brawley 1987: 6–27 challenges the argument that the passage is a paradigm for the rejection of the nation or for the inclusion of Gentiles. The view that Brawley rejects is probably overstated, but his critique may also go too far. Brawley is right that Israel is not permanently rejected in Luke's view, but an allusion to potential inclusion of outsiders, including Gentiles, cannot be excluded. Such an allusion can exist without insisting that it must also include the idea that Israel is cut off.

17 This view of the king's sternness is conceptually like Josephus's description of a law that punishes slaves more harshly; Against Apion 2.30 §216; C. Taylor 1901; Plato, Laws 913c (11); Brightman 1927–28; Philo, Hypothetica 7.6; Fitzmyer 1985: 1237.

7 Josephus, Jewish War 2.12.3 §232; Jeremias 1969: 352–58; Jeremias, TDNT 7:88–94. On Jewish attitudes, see Sir. 50:25–26; T. Levi 7.2; Gen.

Rab. 81.3 on 35:2; Jub. 30.5–6, 23; C. A. Evans 1990: 164. On the relationship between Jews and Samaritans, see Brindle 1984.

7 Also, the Jewish prayer Kaddish is often cited as relevant, but it is uncertain that its roots go back this far (for discussion, see Petuchowski and Brocke 1978).

1 Bovon 1989: 357–58 notes the OT similarities (returning the son to the parent, the widow, and recognition that God's messenger is present) and differences (Jesus' taking the initiative, instantaneous resuscitation, and the crowd's response). Bovon references the key study of this passage by Harbarth 1978. For the connections to 1 Kings, see Brodie 1986, though he overdraws the case for framing around this OT book. The differences between the OT and the event reveal that the event controls the details (see C. A. Evans 1990: 115 and Evans in Evans and Sanders 1993: 223–24).

2 For a good summary of the critical discussion, see Nolland 1989: 351–53, who relies on the approaches of Legault 1954, Lö;ning 1971, and Dupont 1980. Nolland also rightly rejects Brodie's midrashic reading (1983) of this text as an internalization of 2 Kings 4:1–37. The points of connection between 2 Kings 4 and Luke 7 are too general to be compelling. In addition, the function of oil in the two accounts is too different (2 Kings 4:3–7 versus Luke 7:37–38), and the bowing of the Shunammite in 2 Kings 4:37 is a natural expression of respect, not unlike Luke 5:8. Luke 7:37–38 is filled with emotion, a background that 2 Kings 4 lacks.

11 Two key studies on the Elijah motif in Luke are Brodie 1987 and C. A. Evans 1987b. Evans argues that Elijah reflects the motif of God's election of his true people.

10 Talbert 1982: 92–93; Witherington 1979. On the escalated role of women in the later Jewish synagogue, see Brooten 1982.

5 The repeated use of καί and future verbs suggests this idea. See R. Brown 1977: 261 for options.

40 Μέγας is used derisively of Simon Magus in Acts 8:10, but positively of Isaiah in Sir. 48:22; R. Brown 1977: 273 n. 33. It is used of Mordecai (Esth. 10:3), who was not a prophet. Bovon 1989: 56 compares the remarks to the "great" priestly figures in T. Levi 17–18. "Greatness" comes for the first priest of Jubilee in being able to talk to God (17:2), while for the last priest, the eschatological priest, it involves anointing by the Spirit (18:7). It is clear that greatness has to do with being specially endowed to serve God.

41 1 Sam. 3:20; Acts 3:24. On the OT background, see R. Brown 1977: 273; Fitzmyer 1981: 326; Marshall 1978: 57.

50 See Dan. 7:16 and Job 1:6 for the idea of direct access to God or his angels; R. Brown 1977: 262; Danker 1988: 32.

63 R. Brown 1977: 280–81. The blessing at the end of Luke also does not occur at the temple, another key omission against any claim for literary symmetry with Luke 24.

66 So also within the infancy material: 1:56; 2:20, 39, 51; R. Brown 1977: 263.

68 The view is mentioned and refuted by R. Brown 1977: 282; it is held by Laurentin 1967: 56–64.

1 There are various ways to list the parallels. With only minor variations, I follow Schürmann's list (1969: 59 n. 132). For other arrangements and discussions, see Tiede 1988: 45–47; R. Brown 1977: 293–98; Schneider 1977a: 48; and Creed 1930: 13.

11 The view is mentioned by R. Brown 1977: 287–88, who cites Hippolytus for it; see also the discussion of the genealogy in 3:23–38.

12 So Schneider 1977a: 49. Against a reference to Isaiah in Luke are R. Brown 1977: 300 and Fitzmyer 1981: 336. The NT sees the virgin state as honorable (Acts 21:9; 1 Cor. 7:25; Rev. 4:14); Bovon 1989: 72.

22 For this allusion, see Marshall 1978: 66; Leaney 1958: 83; Schneider 1977a: 50; Schürmann 1969: 46, esp. n. 40; uncertain of it is R. Brown 1977: 299–300; Laurentin 1967: 115.

34 Three times in Matthew, once in Mark, twice in John; R. Brown 1977: 289.

36 R. Brown 1977: 305 rejects this Jewish evidence, noting that the Qumran community did not have a permanent celibacy but a temporary one for priests offering sacrifices. The texts in Philo are Contemplative Life 8 §68 and Hypothetica 11.14–17.

37 Creed 1930: 19; Schneider 1977a: 50; Schürmann 1969: 49–50; Fitzmyer 1981: 348–50; Wiefel 1988: 51–52; Ernst 1977: 72; R. Brown 1977: 309. Gewiess, in an appendix to Laurentin's German 1967 edition, interestingly takes a view opposite of Laurentin in the French original and omits Laurentin's own discussion of the question.

47 The relationship between Mary and Elizabeth is not specified. Wycliffe seems to be responsible for associating the two as cousins; Plummer 1896: 25; R. Brown 1977: 292. On the problem of a supposed contradiction between John and Jesus as relatives and the statements of John 1:31, 33, see the additional note on 1:25.

48 Creed 1930: 21; R. Brown 1977: 292; Klostermann 1929: 15; BDF §302.1; BDR §302.1.2. The force is that “nothing at all is impossible” for God.

51 A, C, D, Byz, and many versions. R. Brown 1977: 288 notes that the phrase’s presence in these manuscripts influenced the Ave Maria and its juxtaposition of the terms Mary, full of grace, and blessed.

53 Laurentin 1957a: 176–88 (this discussion is only in the French edition). The view is first attested in Gregory of Nyssa in A.D.. 386; PG 46:1140D–41A; R. Brown 1977: 304; and Delling, TDNT 5:834–35, esp. n. 55, who prefers to speak of a “virgin conception” as the most accurate way to describe Luke’s portrayal. Wiefel 1988: 53 refers to Ambrose, Expositio Evangelii Secundam Lucam 2 (Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latinorum 32:99), and Augustine, De Sancta Virginitate 4 (Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latinorum 41:327). For the full history of exegesis, see Graystone 1968: 3–36.

7 1 Chron. 15:28; 16:4, 5, 42; 2 Chron. 5:13; R. Brown 1977: 333. On the verb, also see O. Betz, TDNT 9:303 n. 7, who makes the same association.

10 R. Brown 1977: 344 n. 17 notes the allusion to this verse in the Ave Maria.

12 R. Brown 1977: 333; Danker 1988: 41; BAGD 486; BAA 988 §1b; Luke 6:20–22.

3 R. Brown 1977: 346–55; Wiefel 1988: 57; Farris 1985: 86–98; Fitzmyer 1981: 359–62; Jones 1968; Bemile 1986: 36. Fitzmyer, agreeing with Winter and Schneider, notes that the hymn is parallel to the psalms in 1 Maccabees, the Qumran Thanksgiving hymns, and the Qumran War Scroll. The hymn also resembles the OT hymns of praise (Ps. 33, 47, 48, 113, 135, 136; one could add to the list 1 Sam. 2:1–10; Jon. 2:2–9 [2:3–10 MT]; Isa. 38:9–20; Tob. 8:15–17; and Sir. 51:1–12). Fitzmyer (p. 359) regards 1:48 as a Lucan insert. In fact, he seems favorable to R. Brown's position that the hymn emerged out of the Jewish-Christian community. Schneider 1977a: 56 sees a Hellenistic Jewish-Christian rewrite of Jewish material or a reworking by Luke himself; so also C. F. Evans 1990: 171–73.

13 Charts detailing the various OT parallels in the hymn can be found in Plummer 1896: 30–31; Klostermann 1929: 18–19; and R. Brown 1977: 358–60. The fullest chart including Qumran parallels is Bemile 1986: 116–33. For the connection to 1 Sam. 2, see Goulder 1989: 225–29, who also notes parallels to Ps. 88 and 102.

19 R. Brown 1977: 337; BDF §493.2; BDR §493.2–3; Büchsel, TDNT 1:663. This is called "distributive doubling." Schürmann 1969: 75 n. 231 prefers the translation "for many generations" with BDF.

30 R. Brown 1977: 345–46 notes this but makes no effort to answer the historical issues.

1 Schürmann 1969: 96 notes the possibility of a Baptist origin, but thinks the source is more likely to be Jewish Christian. R. Brown 1977: 376 opts for a Jewish-Christian source as well. Marshall 1978: 86 is uncertain where the origin lies.

4 Pirqe de Rabbi Eliezer 48 (= Friedlander 1916: 378), an eighth-century text that is too late to be of real help; R. Brown 1977: 369. Gen. 21:3 may belong here in light of Gen. 21:4–5, but it is hard to be sure; R. Meyer, TDNT 6:82.

5 R. Brown 1977: 369; SB 4:23–40. M. Šab. 19.5 indicates that circumcision could take place between the eighth and twelfth days. So important was this act that rabbinic texts speculated why it had not been included among the Ten Commandments; Pesikta Rabbati 23.4 (= Braude 1968: 479).

4 The most detailed recent survey of the issues is Farris 1985: 26–30. Other treatments include R. Brown 1977: 377–78; Fitzmyer 1981: 376–78; Marshall 1978: 86–87; Ernst 1977: 92–94; Wiefel 1988: 62–64; Nolland 1989: 82–85; and Schürmann 1969: 84–85, 88–89, 93–94.

5 R. Brown 1977: 377. Schürmann 1969: 84 n. 26 notes traces of non-Lucan style and argues for a Palestinian setting. Bovon 1989: 98 and n. 8 argues that the terms to make redemption, horn of salvation, and to remember covenant are not Lucan expressions, though the terms to go before, knowledge, and salvation are like Lucan usage.

6 R. Brown 1977: 377–78; Fitzmyer 1981: 377–78; Farris 1985: 27–28. The formative articulation of the view is Benoit 1956–57: 182–83. His work not only formulated the basic position, but is regarded as having challenged the unity of the hymn as well.

7 Among the hypotheses are the following:

	Added to	Adherents
1:76–79	Jewish or Jewish-Christian hymn	Winter 1956: 239 n. 41
1:76 or 1:76–77	early Christian hymn	Benoit 1956–57: 182–91
1:68–75	Christian hymn	Schürmann 1969: 88–90
1:76–77, 79b	Baptist hymn	Hahn 1969: 242–43, 365–66
1:76–77	Jewish-Christian hymn of the Anawim	R. Brown 1977: 377–78; Farris 1985: 27–28
1:70, 76–77	Jewish-Christian hymn probably from the Anawim	Fitzmyer 1981: 378

48 The phraseology is Semitic in style, both in using the term ἡμέρα as meaning “time” (BDF §165; Delling, TDNT 2:950) and in using the genitive ἀναδείξεως (R. Brown 1977: 374). The use of ἀναδείξεως to describe his manifesting himself to Israel is the only NT use of the term (Sir. 43:6).

50 See discussions in Schürmann 1969: 94–95; Schweizer 1984: 44; R. Brown 1977: 376 n. 2; Bovon 1989: 110. Godet 1875: 1.118 refutes the older view that John was an Essene. The similarity between the two groups suggests that if John did not belong to one group, he probably was not a member of the other either.

2 Major discussions can be found in Fitzmyer 1981: 392–93; R. Brown 1977: 411; Klostermann 1929: 31–32; Creed 1930: 30–32; Schürmann 1969: 103–4, 108–9, 118–19; Marshall 1978: 96–97; Plummer 1896: 46; Nolland 1989: 98–103; and Ernst 1977: 99.

5 R. Brown 1977: 411. Fitzmyer 1981: 393 argues for traditional elements in the material, specifically the names of the key characters, the birth in Bethlehem, the parents’ tie to Nazareth, and a tie between Galilee and the census. Generally, more of these details would be seen as historical than in view 1.

13 References to Quirinius are found in Tacitus, Annals 2.30; 3.22–23, 48; and Strabo 12.6.5 (C 569); Luce 1933: 95–96; Fitzmyer 1981: 402; R. Brown 1977: 395.

17 For such language to express the end of pregnancy, see Gen. 25:24; Luke 1:57; R. Brown 1977: 398. This is yet another Hebraism; Delling, TDNT 2:950 n. 42.

19 This used to be the Catholic understanding of the term and is still held by some today; Blinzler 1967 discusses the options and the subject of Jesus' family. R. Brown 1977: 398 hints at this view, citing Ps. Sol. 13.9 [cited as 13.8 according to an older numbering scheme]; 18.4; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 6:58 as examples of πρωτότοκος meaning "only begotten." Bovon 1989: 121 speaks of a privileged relationship to God.

20 Exod. 13:2; Num. 3:12–13; Deut. 21:15–17; Schürmann 1969: 104 n. 43. Both Fitzmyer 1981: 406 and R. Brown 1977: 398 note that the term shows only that no one preceded Jesus.

5 R. Brown 1977: 420–24. Marshall 1978: 107–8 rejects this approach. Fitzmyer 1981: 395–96 sees OT influence but rejects a midrashic view. So correctly Jeremias, TDNT 6:490–99, also rejects such connections.

32 The KJV reflects a three-part division by reading nominative εὐδοκία; so Godet 1875: 1.132–33. Many recent translations reflect a two-part division by reading genitive εὐδοκίας; so Plummer 1896: 57–58; Fitzmyer 1981: 410–12; and R. Brown 1977: 403–5.

3 There are many suggestions about Lucan redaction at various spots. Klostermann 1929: 40 sees Luke's hand in 2:22b–23, 29–32, 34–35. R. Brown 1977: 445–47, 452–55 argues for an original tradition that contained what is now 2:27–34; Luke, however, added the hymn. For Brown, the hymn is from the Jewish-Christian Anawim, as were the earlier hymns of Luke 1–2.

11 Most commentators note that Mary's association with purification argues against a view that sees her as an "intact virgin" after Jesus' birth; see 1:34; Creed 1930: 39; Plummer 1896: 63; R. Brown 1977: 436; Fitzmyer 1981: 421.

26 See Plummer 1896: 69 for four grammatical options for the genitive; Farris 1985: 149. R. Brown 1977: 440 notes that the peculiarity of the syntax here is a reflection of Semitic style; BDF §259.3.

30 R. Brown 1977: 461; Hendriksen 1978: 170; Danker 1988: 68. Jeremias in his later TDNT article, 6:541–42, revised his view.

37 Fitzmyer 1981: 421 regards such historical questions as beside the point of the narrative. Technically this is correct, since the Gospels do not try explicitly to solve such questions. Each writer tells his own story with his own emphases. But such historical questions do have value in helping us wrestle with the early days of Jesus' life. R. Brown 1977: 448–51 sees Luke creating much of this event.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 436. Bovon 1989: 154 prefers to speak only of a biographical interest, calling the account an anecdote. He compares it to the Infancy Story of Thomas 2, an account of a five-year-old Jesus fashioning twelve sparrows from clay. Though this account is much more fanciful than the Lucan pericope, its ending (19), stressing Jesus' wisdom, is similar to but less restrained than Luke's emphasis on wisdom (Schmahl 1974; see the exegesis of 2:46). In this case, the Infancy Gospel of Thomas is influenced by Luke (R. Brown 1977: 481).

12 Marshall 1978: 127; R. Brown 1977: 474; Jeremias 1969: 58–60; Josephus, Life 52 §269; m. *Ma*ʿ*as. Š.* 5.2.

13 For the latter, see R. Brown 1977: 473, 486, who speaks of the literary character of the account, by which he means one should not spend too much time looking for historical or psychological detail.

20 Theodoret, On the Incarnation of the Lord 24; see PG 75:1461CD. R. Brown 1977: 477 cites J. Dö;derlein as a modern exponent.

2 Plummer 1896: 147 lists seven points of dissimilarity between these accounts. My parenthetical comments in Brown's list above show some of the questions raised about this connection. Note also the similarities listed by Bovon 1989: 228–29: Jesus face to face with Peter, Peter's prominence, Jesus' instruction, the new attempt to catch fish, the obedience of the fishermen, the miraculous catch, the reaction of Peter, and the promise. He sees an original promise to Peter, which the church expanded in two directions: Luke in terms of discipleship and John in terms of call.

8 M. Smith 1971 argues for a late origin, but Hengel 1961 argues for ideological unity between the early group and later Zealots, as does M. Stern 1976: 578–79. Much of Josephus's Jewish War 4 condemns this radical group for their activity in A.D.. 66–70; especially descriptive is 4.6.3 §§381–88. Nolland 1989: 271 also prefers a distinction between the Zealot party and Luke's term. Witherington 1990: 81–88, 96–98 supports Hengel. Against this connection is R. Brown 1994: 689–93.

1 R. Brown 1977: 276 argues that the Elijah-like connection for John the Baptist is a late development in the tradition. If there existed an early association of Malachi with John as the angelic announcement suggests and as its repetition in the various contexts shows, then this judgment is not likely.

1 For a full discussion, see R. Brown 1977: 547–56 (who rejects the historicity of the reference).

9 Schürmann 1969: 100. R. Brown 1977: 549 allows this as a possibility. What he cannot accept is the reference to Quirinius. The Romans allowed the Jews to keep other customs: tax exemption every seventh year (Josephus, Antiquities 14.10.6 §§202–10) and Sabbath observance (Antiquities 14.10.20 §§241–43).

19 It is unfortunate that in both his detailed study (1977: 545–56) and his recent revision (1993), R. Brown, while rejecting Luke's approach, fails to refer to Hoehner or Hayles.

15 This view has been qualified recently by Barr 1988; see Witherington 1990: 217–18 for an evaluation of Barr's critique. On relating to God as a child does to a parent, see Luke 18:15–17; Dunn 1975: 23. R. Brown 1994: 172–75 has a full discussion of ›abbā‹.

3 R. Brown 1994: 157 makes much of this omission, arguing that Luke omitted it to make Jesus less troubled in his inner psyche, a view that fits a heroic portrayal before a Greco-Roman audience. But Jesus' troubled soul is sufficiently communicated by the prayer itself (the point is enhanced if 22:43–44 is original; see the additional note). The contrast may not be as great as Brown suggests.

8 The phrase enter into temptation occurred earlier in 8:13; 11:4; Ellis 1974: 257. On the conceptual similarity to 1 Pet. 5:8, see Seesemann, TDNT 6:31–32. On the temptation as entry into serious eschatological battle with Satan, see R. Brown 1994: 159–61, who ties the remark to Luke 11:4. Jesus must prepare for his great face-off with Satan.

11 Martyrdom can include references to blood and sweat in Judaism (4 Macc. 6:6, 11; 7:8). R. Brown 1994: 189–90 compares it to emotion or tension before the start of an athletic event (1 Cor. 9:25; 1 Thess. 2:2; 4 Macc. 9:8; 11:20), but rejects the idea that Jesus feared death. But can death be separated from his sense of conflict here?

12 Fitzmyer 1985: 1444–45 rightly stresses the comparative force of ὡσεί (like), elsewhere used by Luke at Luke 3:23; 9:14 (twice), 28; 22:41, 59; 23:44; 24:11; Acts 1:15; 2:3, 41; 6:15; 10:3; 19:7, 34 (variant reading). On the medical possibilities, see R. Brown 1994: 185; Holzmeister 1938; Keen 1892; and Keen 1897.

2 The authenticity of the healing, the kiss, and Jesus' short remark in Matt. 26:52 are frequently questioned (e.g., Bultmann 1963: 268–69 doubts the healing, but is uncertain about the kiss). But none of these elements need be doubted: the healing is bound up in how one sees Jesus' miracles in general; the kiss is a standard greeting of respect or acceptance (Gen. 33:4; 2 Sam. 20:9 [deceitfully]; Luke 7:45; 15:20; Rom. 16:16; R. Brown 1994: 255); and it is not unnatural for Jesus to make short comments.

7 For the use of κατά meaning "after" in a distributive sense, see Luke 11:3; Fitzmyer 1985: 1451. Luke's audience of chief priests fits these remarks. While it is not necessary to see the priests themselves carrying weapons, they are responsible for the tone of the arrest by whom they bring (against the implications of R. Brown 1994: 282, who thinks the detail raises a historical problem).

1 Those arguing for an additional source are Fitzmyer 1985: 1456–58 (but not in 22:54–62); Creed 1930: 276 (maybe); Marshall 1978: 839–40, 845, 848; Grundmann 1963: 416, 418–19; Ernst 1977: 612–13, 616, 618; Nolland 1993b: 1092–93, 1098–99, 1104–5; and J. Green 1988: 276. Soards 1987: 100–120 argues for a mixture of tradition, Marcan rewriting, and Lucan rewriting. The classic study on this issue is V. Taylor 1972. Dissent about an extra source outside of some oral material comes from R. Brown 1994: 581–83. Most of Luke's changes (e.g., 22:63–65) reflect his style and vocabulary. But all that this shows is Luke's hand on his sources, not whether additional information existed. Brown sees the "game" in 22:64 as evidence of the presence of oral tradition (see the exegesis). But why limit it here, given evidence of sources throughout this material?

13 Stählin (TDNT 8:264–65) speaks of a game like "blind man's bluff." R. Brown 1994: 575 discusses three games involving covered or blindfolded eyes listed by Pollux, Onomasticon 9.113, 123, 129 (second century b.c.).

18 The earliest extant literary reference to the Sanhedrin is 198 b.c., the date of a letter that Antiochus III the Great wrote after the Battle of Panion; Josephus, Antiquities 12.3.3 §138; Lohse, TDNT 7:862–66; Schürer 1973–87: 2.199–217. Josephus also uses the term βουλή (council) to describe the Sanhedrin (Jewish War 2.15.6 §331; 2.16.2 §336). R. Brown 1994: 340–57 stresses that there is only one such group at this time, the number of members usually being put at seventy-one (m. Sanh. 1.6, drawing on Num. 11:16).

30 Marshall 1965–66: 347 and A. Moore 1966: 184–87 answer other objections to authenticity. Fitzmyer 1985: 1459 refuses to make a judgment on historicity, calling it impossible to reach a verdict. R. Brown 1994: 514–

15 says that the conceptually parallel Mark 14:62 “may be close to the mindset and style of Jesus himself.” Though he believes there is no way to determine this for certain (pp. 506–7), the remarks fit with authenticity. Brown even adds the argument that Mark’s “you will see” statement is so ambiguous that it is unlikely to be created by the church.

32 On garment rending, see R. Brown 1994: 517–18, esp. n. 2. On blasphemy, see R. Brown 1994: 521–23 and Bock 1994b, both of whom argue that first-century blasphemy need not involve uttering the divine name.

5 This filling out of detail is common in Luke; e.g., in 23:46 he will supply the content of the second cry from the cross (using Ps. 31:5 [31:6 MT]), an event that Mark 15:37 = Matt. 27:50 only alludes to. For the view that Matthew and Mark present the conclusion of the evening trial or merely recapitulate here, see R. Brown 1994: 631–32. Regardless of whether one sees a separate morning trial, the final decision came in the early morning.

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1479 calls ἀναπέμπω Lucan, but since three of its five NT uses are in this one pericope (elsewhere Acts 25:21 and Philem. 12), the usage is too concentrated and too rare to attribute to Luke. On the Roman legalities, see R. Brown 1994: 764–65.

7 Danker 1988: 355–56 cites Diogenes Laertius 3.19 and 9.115 for occasions where the accused is silent. See also Wis. 8:12; Ignatius, Ephesians 15.1 and Magnesians 8.2; and Josephus, Antiquities 15.7.5 §235 (R. Brown 1994: 772).

9 The terms used to describe the clothing are infrequent in the NT: ἐσθής (clothes; BAGD 312; BAA 632; elsewhere in the NT only at Luke 24:4; Acts 1:10; 10:30; 12:21; James 2:2–3 [three times]; cf. Mark 15:17), λαμπρός (bright; BAGD 465 §3; BAA 946 §3; elsewhere in the NT only at Acts 10:30; James 2:2–3 [twice]; Rev. 15:6; 18:14; 19:8; 22:1, 16), and περιβάλλω (to clothe; BAGD 646 §1bδ; BAA 1302 §1bδ; twenty-three times in the NT; e.g., John 19:2). The syntax is also disputed: does mockery occur by clothing him or is he clothed and sent back to Pilate? Either way, the fine clothes are placed on Jesus in jest. The latter option is more likely grammatically since participles are not normally subordinated to other participles (R. Brown 1994: 773–75). Brown also notes numerous Lucan touches in 23:11–12, indicating that Luke summarized here.

10 On Sejanus, see R. Brown 1994: 693–94, 1376. His anti-Semitism is recorded by Philo, Embassy to Gaius 24 §§160–61 and Flaccus 1 §1. Brown doubts Philo's account, arguing that he transferred blame from Tiberius to Sejanus for political reasons. But Sejanus carried too much power in a.d. 26–31 to pass responsibility to a largely absentee Tiberius (who was sensitive to Jews, as noted above).

3 Examples of Lucan style and vocabulary in the verse include πρός with a verb of speaking, καὶ ἰδού, ἐνώπιον, and probably the forensic use of ἀνακρίνω; R. Brown 1994: 791 and Nolland 1993b: 1127.

5 Παιδεύω here refers to flogging; BAGD 604 §2bγ; BAA 1222 §2bγ; elsewhere in the NT with this meaning only at Luke 23:22; cf. 1 Kings 12:11, 14; 2 Chron. 10:11, 14. Mark 15:15 uses φραγελλώσας for the whipping before the crucifixion. Sherwin-White 1963: 27–28 distinguishes three types of flogging: fustes, flagella, and verbera. He may be right that Luke refers to fustigatio in terms of Pilate's initial intention, but when he gave Jesus over, the verberatio would be administered for crucifixion. R. Brown 1994: 851 questions the value of these distinctions and whether Luke's audience would know them. Regardless, the punishment came with the crucifixion.

10 Josephus calls crucifixion the worst of deaths; Jewish War 7.6.4 §203; see also Antiquities 2.5.4 §77; 11.6.11 §§261, 266–67; 13.14.2 §380; 17.10.10 §295; Jewish War 1.4.5–6 §§93–98; 5.11.1 §§449–51. For ancient non-Jewish sources, see J. Schneider, TDNT 7:573 n. 15. Among the key texts are Herodotus 1.128; 3.132, 159 (who ties the punishment to the Medes and the Persians); Tacitus, History 2.72; Cicero, Against Verres 2.5.63–66 §§163–70 (who calls it "a cruel and disgusting penalty"); The Digest of Justinian 48.19.28 (who sees it as the harshest punishment); Justin Martyr, Dialogue with Trypho 91.2 and Apology 1.13; Irenaeus, Against Heresies 2.24.4; and Origen, Against Celsus 6.10; Seneca, To Marcia on Consolation 20.3; R. Brown 1994: 948.

6 Luce 1933: 349 sees an allusion to Isa. 54:1, but since the images are so different (i.e., in Isaiah the barren will bear a child), this is probably not correct; correctly Marshall 1978: 864 (cf. Luke 1:7, 25; Gal. 4:27) and R. Brown 1994: 923, who cites parallels from Lam. 4:4; Wis. 3:13; Eccles. 4:2–3; 2 Bar. 10.6–10 and argues that Luke received the saying from a sayings source.

11 Filling in details of this story became popular in some circles. In the Old Latin, these two bandits are variously named Ioathas and Maggatras (Luke 23:32), Zoathan and Chammatha (Mark 15:27), or Zoathan and Camma (Matt. 27:38) (Plummer 1896: 530), while the Acts of Pilate 9 records their names as Dysmas and Gestas (Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.512). Still other traditions speak of Jesus falling, meeting Mary, and speaking with a women named Veronica (called Bernice in Acts of Pilate 8), who testified before Pilate because Jesus had healed her issue of blood (cf. Luke 8:43–48). See also the Arabic Infancy Gospel 23 (R. Brown 1994: 969; Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.460).

13 The name Calvary comes from calvaria, the Latin translation of κρανίον; Plummer 1896: 531; Geldenhuys 1951: 613. R. Brown 1994: 938–40 discusses the location of Golgotha and decides for the traditional location associated now with the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in what is called the Christian quarter of Jerusalem. Nolland 1993b: 1145 expresses less certainty about the locale.

14 Jesus' tone differs from the "martyr" parallels in 2 Macc. 5–6 (where the intercession is a declaration of the sufferer's righteousness and faithfulness) and 7:14, 17, 19 (where the condemned promise God's vengeance on the executioner). On the other hand, some Jewish texts appeal to mercy for all, even sinners (Jon. 4:11; T. Ben. 4.2; Philo, Flaccus 2 §7; R. Brown 1994: 974), a merciful attitude that also appears in the church fathers (Ignatius, Ephesians 10.2–3; Justin Martyr, Apology 1.14).

20 Noting overlaps of Lucan style, R. Brown 1994: 1001 rejects the presence of a source, though he acknowledges that perhaps the paradise saying goes back to Jesus. This view fits Brown's consistent tendency to minimize sources in the material, often limiting himself to Mark. But given the nature of this event and its importance, as well as the orality of the culture, it is unlikely that Luke's sources were limited to Mark.

26 R. Brown 1994: 1040–42 discusses the eclipse options and finds none persuasive. He sees Luke creatively tying these details together, but in other cases where the Synoptics overlap Brown is less skeptical, so it is uncertain why he is hesitant here. Whether we have an eclipse or, more likely, some other form of darkening like a thick cloud, it is the timing of this event with Jesus' death that creates the sign.

1 Luce 1933: 354 speaks of Mark plus L. Marshall 1978: 878 and V. Taylor 1972: 99–103 say that special Lucan material may appear in 23:55–56. Ernst 1977: 640–41 holds that it is 23:50c, 51a, 53b, 54b. Nolland 1993b: 1162–63 holds to 23:53c and perhaps 23:52–54. Grundmann 1963: 436 holds to 23:50, 51a, 53b, 54–56. Fitzmyer 1985: 1523 holds to 23:53c, 56a. Though it could be debated whether certain verses derive from another source, Luke seems to have had access to additional material, against R. Brown 1994: 1226.

2 Jeremias 1966: 15–84 deals with various aspects of this issue. Other key studies include Hoehner 1977: 74–90; Marshall 1980: 30–75 (which has the advantage of assessing Jeremias's claims); Jaubert 1965; Blinzler 1958; and R. Brown 1962b. For bibliography, see Nolland 1993b: 1035–40.

43 Liefeld 1984: 907 cites John 8:31, 44 as examples. If S. Brown 1969: 12–16, 30–31 is correct, then Luke changed the terminology to clarify the text's meaning by leaving out terms capable of being misunderstood.

6 Κ αθεξῆς is clearly temporal, denoting events that follow those of Luke 7; BAGD 388; BAA 788. It means afterward, but not necessarily soon afterward, as A. B. Bruce 1897: 518 correctly notes. It appears only in Luke–Acts (Luke 1:3; here; Acts 3:24; 11:4; 18:23). Acts 3:24 speaks of the sequence of prophets following Samuel—which spanned centuries.

33 Plummer 1896: 235; Marshall 1978: 344; Fitzmyer 1981: 746; Bovon 1989: 445–46 (who argues that Luke may be responsible for it); Creed 1930: 123; and Hendriksen 1978: 466 appear undecided. Arndt 1956: 246 and A. B. Bruce 1897: 525 are for inclusion. Schürmann 1969: 490 n. 137; Ellis 1974: 130; and Luce 1933: 173 omit it.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 53–57; F. F. Bruce 1988: 6–13 (of Acts); Bovon 1989: 23; Kümmel 1975: 151; Danker 1988: 17–18; Tiede 1980: 1–18, 70; Maddox 1982: 6–9; Esler 1987: 27–29; C. A. Evans 1990: 2; C. F. Evans 1990: 14; L. Johnson 1991: 2–3.

4 Reicke 1968: 138, 228–29. F. F. Bruce 1972: 16–17 notes that the term procurator is later than this period, coming into use with the emperor Claudius (41–54).

9 For discussion of Josephus's text, see Creed 1921–22; F. F. Bruce 1974: 34–35.

17 This view dates back to the seventeenth century and is supported by F. F. Bruce 1972: 32 n. 1. Hoehner 1977: 21 discusses it.

1 Fitzmyer 1985: 1185 discusses the relationship of this pericope to Paul's message, though with less emphasis on the unity of the perspectives. See also F. F. Bruce 1952: 66–69 and the exegesis of 18:14a.

2 So Wiefel 1988: 305 and Bruners 1977. Bruners also argues that the account is Lucan. Fitzmyer 1985: 1150–51 and H. Betz 1981 question the connection. At most, it is a form parallel. Betz's main thesis (1971) that the account is a polemic against healing miracles is incorrect; see Marshall

1978: 649. Meier 1994: 750–51 shows how an appeal to Lucan creation from 2 Kings cannot explain four differences in the account: (1) no mention of Elijah, (2) no mention of Jesus as prophet, (3) no delay in the miracle's occurrence, and (4) the different kind of miracle in the account (punitive versus healing).

39 This seems similar to a view that Bovon 1989: 318–19 calls the existential view, held by R. Bultmann, P. Ricoeur, and M. Buber. Practically speaking, it leads to a cosmopolitan philanthropy. This kind of activity might be an implication of this passage, but it is hardly the point.

3 1 Enoch 46–48, 62–71 and 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 13 are too late to be related to this period. S. Kim 1985: 19 and n. 25 mentions that a "heavenly," redemptive figure identified alternatively with Enoch, Abel, or Melchizedek may have existed in the ancient Jewish tradition. But he notes that these claims are disputable, since the clear examples are late. He also notes (pp. 20–22) that 4Q246†, formerly 4Q243 (= 4QpsDan A^a = 4QpsDan ar^a), may prove this limitation incorrect, but it is too early to know what this text means, since all of it has not been published, and it has many gaps. Fitzmyer 1981: 209–10 argues that 1 Enoch may be relevant as a transitional move to an apocalyptic individualized use, but he treats the point as too unclear to base much on it. Kim (p. 19 n. 25) notes that all undisputed examples from 1 Enoch and 2 Esdras are later than the Gospels. The Son of Man references in Judaism are 1 Enoch 46.3–7; 48.4–10; 62.3–9, 14; 63.11; 69.27–29; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 13; b. Sanh. 96b; 98a; Num. Rab. 13.14 on 7:12–13; Midr. ha-Gadol on Gen. 49:10; Aggadat Bereshit 4.3; 23.1 (see Strack and Stemberger 1991: 339); y. Ta‹an. 65b (2.1) (= Neusner et al. 1982–93: 18.183); b. Ḥag. 14a; Tanḥuma (Buber), Toledot 70b (6.20) (= Townsend 1989: 167; see also Caragounis 1986: 134–36).

42 Accepted by Godet 1875: 1.284–85; rejected by Schürmann 1969: 302; Nolland 1989: 255; Ernst 1977: 202 (discussion but no clear choice). Rejecting the reading but attempting to explain its origin are Vogt 1959; Lohse, TDNT 7:23 n. 183; Marshall 1978: 230; Wiefel 1988: 122; Bovon 1989: 266–67 (following Metzger 1975: 139). See also Buchanan and Wolfe 1978; Isaac 1981; and Skeat 1988. The reading is noted in the fourth century by Jerome, Letter 52.8, who did not know what it meant.

43 Among those who support this approach are Schürmann 1969: 302; Vogt 1959; Buchanan and Wolfe 1978; and apparently Danker 1988: 130. Marshall 1978: 230 is uncertain of the origin.

2 For example, Büchele must omit certain verses to achieve symmetry (e.g., 23:33–34, 44–46). In addition, both thieves did not mock Jesus (this unit is positive, not negative).

10 For more on διήγησις as meaning oral and written accounts, see the introduction to §I.A above and TDNT 2:909, where Büchsel provides a nice summary of usage. One parallel to note is Polybius 5.31.4.

26 So most hold, including Büchsel, TDNT 1:378. So read NKJV (“from the very first”), NIV, NASB, Neu Luther, Zürcher Bibel, Einheitsübersetzung.

19 R. Brown 1977: 337; BDF §493.2; BDR §493.2–3; Büchsel, TDNT 1:663. This is called “distributive doubling.” Schürmann 1969: 75 n. 231 prefers the translation “for many generations” with BDF.

1 Wiefel 1988: 68–70 gives some background on Caesar Augustus. For an evaluation of the Lucan notes that place Luke within the sphere of ancient history writing, see Büchsel, TDNT 3:395–96, and Strathmann, TDNT 4:492 n. 53.

10 Fitzmyer 1981: 467; Büchsel, TDNT 1:672; Nolland 1989: 147. The image parallels the expression offspring of asps in the LXX: Isa. 11:8; 14:29; 30:6; 59:5.

19 On γεννητοῖς γυναικῶν, see Job 11:2c [not in MT]; 11:12 [≠ MT's sense]; 14:1; 15:14; 25:4; Büchsel, TDNT 1:672. Fitzmyer 1981: 675 gives Qumran parallels from 1QS 11.21; 1QH 13.14; 18.12–13, 16, 23–24. He also notes Gospel of Thomas 46.1. The parallel in Matt. 11:11 is the only other NT use of the phrase.

46 Other NT uses are Titus 3:3; James 4:1, 3; 2 Pet. 2:13. Mark has the synonymous ἐπιθυμία; Stählin, TDNT 2:924–25; Büchsel, TDNT 3:171 n. 36. Bovon 1989: 410–11 suggests that Luke made the change, because Mark's term can be read positively by a Greek.

53 On the idea of total authority in παραδίδωμι (to give over), see Büchsel, TDNT 2:171; Matt. 11:27; 28:18 (δίδωμι); 1 Cor. 15:24; Exod. Rab. 15.30 on 12:2. Stauffer, TDNT 2:348, calls this passage the "cry of jubilation."

38 Matt. 7:11 refers more broadly in another setting to good things, so there is no need to discuss which wording is original; but see Marshall 1978: 470 for options. James 1:5–8, 17 is conceptually parallel. For δόμα (gift), see Eph. 4:8 (where the Spirit is referred to as gift) and Phil. 4:17; Büchsel, TDNT 2:166.

11 Outside of this pericope and its parallels, τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης occurs in Luke 7:31 = Matt. 11:16; Luke 11:50–51 = Matt. 23:36; Luke 17:25; 21:32 = Mark 13:30 = Matt. 23:34; Büchsel, TDNT 1:663. Note that the concept is multiply attested in Q and Mark.

41 This key term links 16:9 and 16:11. In this context, ἀδικία is a Hebraistic "genitive of quality," describing the steward's character; Zerwick 1963: §40; Büchsel, TDNT 3:943 n. 2 (for κριτής). Schrenk, TDNT 1:157, calls it a "genitive of definition."

43 BAGD 153–54 and BAA 308 have such a category for γενεά but note its rarity—only "clan, race" in Luke 16:8, which is debated. Their other categories of meaning are "generation," "age," "period of time," and "family," while Büchsel, TDNT 1:662–65, speaks of "birth/descent," "progeny," "race," and "generation." When γενεά is qualified by the adjective wicked, the racial sense becomes possible, at least in the broad sense of "humanity," but this really results in an ethical force, not a racial one. The adjective makes clear the force of γενεά. The phrase ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη (this generation) is seen by some as a shortened "ethical" reference equal to "this type of generation." If one takes an ethical view and argues that γενεά has no temporal force, then the wicked-generation idea is the best suboption.

2 Κατάλυμα is a private house, but in Luke 2:7 it refers to the inn where Jesus was born; elsewhere in the NT only at the parallel Mark 14:14; also 1 Sam. 1:18 [no MT equivalent]; 9:22; Sir. 14:25; BAGD 414; BAA 841; Büchsel, TDNT 4:338; Stählin, TDNT 5:19 n. 136.

16 On the reference to the vine, see Deut. 22:9; Isa. 32:12; m. Ber. 6.1; b. Ber. 35a. The wording parallels the cup blessing in the Passover meal; Büchsel, TDNT 1:685. On abstinence, cf. Lev. 10:9; Num. 6:3; Ezek. 44:21; Leaney 1958: 268.

6 On the syntax of ἤρξαντο (they began), which Luke often uses to speak of a fresh reaction, see 4:21; 5:21; 7:15; 12:45; 13:25; 19:37; Plummer 1896: 520; Grundmann 1963: 422. Κατηγορέω (to accuse) is used elsewhere by Luke at Luke 6:7; 23:10, 14; Acts 22:30; 24:2, 8, 13, 19; 25:5, 11, 16; 28:19; Büchsel, TDNT 3:637.

34 So one should understand ἐπιγνῷς. Bultmann, TDNT 1:704, argues that it means "to confirm," but this comes more from the context than from the term itself; see Acts 22:24; 23:28.

8 But so argues Creed 1930: 22–23, who draws on the position of Harnack. Also in favor of this view are Danker 1988: 41; Klostermann 1929: 17–18; Bultmann 1963: 296–97; and Luce 1933: 91–92.

35 Plummer 1896: 42. The NT refers to this concept in alternative ways: Mark 1:4; Matt. 26:28; Luke 1:77; 24:47; Acts 2:38; 5:31; 10:43; 13:38; 26:18; Col. 1:14; Heb. 10:11 ("take away sin"); Eph. 2:17 ("peace"); Bultmann, TDNT 1:511.

3 Among the candidates for comparison are Cyrus, Romulus and Remus, Mithras, Osiris, Aion, Virgil, Semiramis, and Moses. For discussions see Creed 1930: 30–32; Klostermann 1929: 31–32; Bultmann 1963: 298; Gressmann 1914; and Machen 1930: 348–58 (who has a detailed critique). Virtually no one argues for any direct connection, though most speak of the account's legendary features, because of its supernatural elements.

4 Bultmann 1963: 299; Grundmann 1963: 76. Luke is given credit for 2:1–5 because of the note that alludes to history. Such notes are unique to his Gospel and recall the historical notes common in the OT historical books, esp. Kings and Chronicles.

21 So γνωρίζω often in the NT (Rom. 9:22–23; Acts 2:28), and often tied to the idea of making known a mystery (Col. 1:27; Eph. 1:9; 3:5, 10; 6:19); Bultmann, TDNT 1:718.

2 Bultmann 1963: 299, 304 regards this setting as artificial and erroneous, since the firstborn child is presented at the temple, which was not required by the law. Schürmann 1969: 119–20, 131 speaks of editorial work from Hellenistic Christianity, though he still insists that the bulk of the tradition is Jewish-Christian because of its heavy emphasis on Israel and its traces of a Palestinian setting (the only other verse he questions is 2:27). He places the origin in a setting similar to 1:5–25 and 1:57–79. Nolland 1989: 115 argues for Luke's hand in 2:22–24, 39; but the non-LXX form of the OT citation is against 2:22–24 being from Luke's hand. In Nolland's view (p. 116), the rest is substantially from a source, with 2:25, 38 serving as Lucan editorial links. He also sees possible Lucan elements in 2:33–35.

4 Creed 1930: 37–38 mentions these associations and rejects them, as do Bultmann 1963: 299–300 and Schürmann 1969: 131 n. 244. The comparison was described by Aufhauser 1926 and defended by Garbe 1959: 47–49, but there are just too many differences between these accounts.

15 Bultmann, TDNT 2:753; Plato, Statesman 311B; Luce 1933: 101; Plummer 1896: 66, who notes that Philo used the term to describe Abraham in Who Is the Heir? 6 §22.

1 The view is old. Those who hold it include Bultmann 1963: 300; Creed 1930: 44; Klostermann 1929: 45; Schürmann 1969: 139; Schneider 1977a: 76; Wiefel 1988: 82; and Fitzmyer 1981: 435–36. About the only one who raises doubts is Marshall 1978: 126. Despite the remarks about sources, Coleridge 1993: 187–213 is certainly correct that from a narrative viewpoint this pericope could not be dropped without substantial loss to the infancy narrative. Jesus' remarks about himself are a fitting climax to the prologue. In Coleridge's words (p. 189), this unit is "the most important" of the infancy narrative.

3 Bultmann 1963: 145 argues that the account is a product of the late Hellenistic church. See the first additional note on 3:10.

6 Bultmann 1963: 246; Creed 1930: 53–54; Lang, TDNT 6:943; Manson 1949: 41. This view usually denies that the historical John saw himself as a precursor to Jesus the Messiah. John was only a prophet warning that the end was near.

3 It is important to recall that the term legend is not always used in form criticism with the negative connotation it often has in English (i.e., supernatural, made-up, false). Nonetheless, Bultmann's use of the term here is not appropriate.

2 Schürmann 1969: 218–19 sees both Mark and Q as contributing to Luke, as does Bultmann 1963: 254.

8 Bultmann 1963: 31–32 (where he calls the account an apophthegm or pronouncement story, which he believes grew into this full-blown account); Creed 1930: 65; Schneider 1977a: 106–7; Klostermann 1929: 62; Fitzmyer 1981: 527; Tannehill 1972; C. F. Evans 1990: 266–67 (who notes a series of Lucan expressions in the account); Goulder 1989: 299. For a summary of the recent discussion and a full bibliography on this passage, see Schreck 1989, while Corrington 1993 evaluates a redactional reading of this text with other types of readings.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 555 calls this account a pronouncement story, while Bultmann 1963: 155 is more specific, calling it an "I-saying," which is his category for a commission statement.

8 Bultmann goes on to note that the account is really a legend because of its supernatural flavor. He regards John 21:1–14 as a later variant of this tradition. Bultmann's legend classification reflects his worldview, which shuts out the possibility of miracle.

12 Bultmann 1963: 212, 240; Fitzmyer 1981: 572; Berger 1984: 314; Theissen 1983: 321. Fitzmyer notes that M. Dibelius's classification of this account as a tale is certainly wrong. Dibelius classifies many miracle stories as tale, reflecting perhaps other presuppositions.

13 Bultmann 1963: 66, in describing Mark 2:1–10. The pronouncement is in Luke 5:20, 23–24.

4 Bultmann 1963: 18. Berger 1984: 80–81 speaks of a "Chrie," which is his category for apophthegm.

7 Bultmann 1963: 18–19; Fitzmyer 1981: 595; Berger 1984: 80. Bultmann believes that even the first saying was added to this setting, which was created by the church, arguing that the situation in the saying is "indefinite." But all metaphors (which Mark 2:19a is) are allusions and indirect statements. The objection does not have force.

8 Bultmann 1963: 18–19, 103, where he argues that Luke's addition is clearly secondary because of its absence in the parallels. But can one rule out Luke's finding such material in his additional research? See Fitzmyer 1981: 595.

10 Bultmann 1963: 16–17, who argues that the passage is the work of the church to justify its "Sabbath customs" (or, rather, its lack of them). This view was rejected in the discussion of authenticity. Bovon 1989: 269 sees the church drawing on an authentic saying in the tradition. Berger 1984: 80, 309 calls the passage apophthegm, Chrie, and Sabbath conflict.

11 Schürmann 1969: 300–301, 306 speaks of a Sabbath conflict for both 6:1–5 and 6:6–11. In addition, a controversy saying is the focus of 6:6–11. It is hard to know whether a conflict pronouncement story or a miracle account is present, since both elements exist. The issue is whether the miracle or the saying is more central, which is a tough call. Bultmann 1963: 12 calls it a controversy account occasioned by a healing of Jesus. Bovon 1989: 273 rightly calls it a mixed form, combining a controversy with a miracle account.

39 This seems similar to a view that Bovon 1989: 318–19 calls the existential view, held by R. Bultmann, P. Ricoeur, and M. Buber. Practically speaking, it leads to a cosmopolitan philanthropy. This kind of activity might be an implication of this passage, but it is hardly the point.

50 BAGD 83–84; BAA 167; Godet 1875: 1.326; Creed 1930: 95; Marshall 1978: 264; Fitzmyer 1981: 640; Schürmann 1969: 355 n. 90; Bultmann, TDNT 2:533–34.

3 Bultmann 1963: 20–21 places the discussion in the section on apophthegms and controversy dialogues. He sees 7:48–50 as added later, so that the original key to the passage was 7:47. He also sees the account as a doublet for Mark 14:3–9. Fitzmyer 1981: 686–87 sees the parable inserted into the pronouncement story. The dubious assumption here is that an account cannot mix forms. The argument fails, since without the parable the Pharisee's concerns in 7:39 remain unanswered; Nolland 1989: 351–52. Nolland prefers to call the passage "legend" since it is an example account, but he notes that doing so does not prejudice the account's historicity. Berger 1984: 51–56, 256, 361 speaks of parable and dialogue side by side, and calls the account an apologetic defense of Jesus' attitude toward sinners.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 699–702, 706–7, 710–13 represents this approach; so also Bultmann 1963: 199–200 (on the Mark 4 parallel). Fitzmyer argues that the Lucan interpretation focuses more on the soils than on the fate of the seed. The point about vocabulary also applies to the Marcan interpretation, which is also seen as secondary.

47 For βίος as manner of life, see Bultmann, TDNT 2:863 n. 262. For συμπνίγω, see BAGD 779; BAA 1556; Mark 4:7; Matt. 13:22 = Mark 4:19; Luke 8:42. For τελεσφορέω, a NT hapax legomenon, see BAGD 810; BAA 1616; 4 Macc. 13:20.

3 Bovon 1989: 415 speaks of an antithetical word of wisdom. Bultmann 1963: 81–82, 98 calls the sayings "double-stranded" mĕšāllîm, like secular proverbs; also Fitzmyer 1981: 716. Berger 1984: 118 speaks of a warning word for 8:18. Wiefel 1988: 161 also speaks of a māšāl (parable), as does Jeremias 1963a: 41, but this is unlikely. Luke seems aware of the proverbial character by his reuse of the material.

7 Bultmann 1963: 215–16; so also Fitzmyer 1981: 727. Bovon 1989: 422 speaks of a "victory of the hero (German Helden) over the elements," a rescue miracle, as does Theissen 1983: 321. Bovon says it is like an exorcism, but is distinct.

2 Creed 1930: 120 and Luce 1933: 170–71 both call it a "strange story" and a "popular tale"; see also Bultmann 1963: 210–11. Plummer 1896: 228 lists nine explanations offered for the material.

7 Bultmann 1963: 210 classifies it as a miracle of healing. Bovon 1989: 432 and Theissen 1983: 321 call it an exorcism. Theissen also speaks of the liberation of an enslaved personality (pp. 89–90). Berger 1984: 311 puts it in his "epideixis/demonstratio" category (where he puts many miracles). He also speaks of the account as a "mandatio" that highlights Jesus' authority and power. Pesch 1971: 354 notes the form elements in Mark: encounter (5:1–2), demon's defensive reaction (5:6–7), exorcist's command (5:8), exit of demon (5:13), crowd amazement and spread of exorcist's fame (5:14a, 18–20).

9 Bultmann 1963: 214–15 (who argues that they were originally separate); Bovon 1989: 444–45 (who speaks of a "crescendo" in this pairing, especially since it includes two women); Fitzmyer 1981: 743; Theissen 1983: 321. Berger 1984: 314, 317 speaks of a "supplication account" by putting it in his "deesis/petitio" category. It also teaches Jesus' authority, as Berger's placement in the "mandatio" form shows.

7 Doubting the account's historicity, Bultmann 1963: 145, 331–32 sees the sayings of Mark 6:8–11 (= Luke 9:3–5) as a church product. He seems to assume incorrectly that a passage cannot have a mixture of narrative and saying material. Berger 1984: 333, 68 speaks of a commission speech and a summary account.

5 V. Taylor 1935: 147; Fitzmyer 1981: 757. Bultmann 1963: 301–2 does not discuss Luke 9, but the longer parallel of Mark 6:14–29. Berger 1984: 233 speaks of an "uncertain acclamation" present within the account.

4 Bultmann 1963: 257 calls the account a "legend," a supernatural account designed to bring honor to Jesus. This classification is not accurate because there is nothing particularly miraculous in the account nor does it have this category's narrative features. Bultmann's skepticism about historicity probably results in this erroneous classification. Since a disciple makes the pronouncement, the form is somewhat unique, but "acclamation" is a good description. What the disciple acclaims here, heaven will confirm with another acclamation at the transfiguration.

2 Dinkler 1971, published in the Bultmann Festschrift, defends much of the account's historicity; Dinkler's position is interesting in light of Bultmann's rejection of the account. Fitzmyer 1981: 778–79, however, sees a strong Marcan hand and reflection in Mark's presentation, while Dinkler defends only Peter's confession and the Satan saying.

2 So Bultmann 1963: 82–83. As evidence of the individuality of the sayings, Bovon 1989: 481 notes similar sayings about cross-bearing in Matt. 10:38 = Luke 14:27, about losing one's life in 17:33, and about denying Jesus in 12:9. Fitzmyer 1981: 782 is certain that the sayings were separate.

4 Bultmann believes that this pronouncement is secondary in Mark, a conclusion based on the false assumption that forms cannot be mixed. Wherever miracle and pronouncement occur together, Bultmann concludes that one element is secondary.

1 Bultmann 1963: 25–26, 64, 68 opts for a pronouncement story, but also notes the absence of any pronouncement. Jesus' response comes in his simply turning away. This makes a pronouncement account unlikely and explains why the Jesus Seminar makes no comment on the text in The Five Gospels (Funk and Hoover 1993: 316).

3 Bultmann 1963: 145 sees much of this material as church formulated and as regulations for the church. Beare 1970 rejects the mission and the discourse's historicity, as does the Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 317–23, esp. 320).

11 Berger 1984: 68, 167, sees both a speech and a mission. Bultmann 1963: 145 places it among legal sayings and church rules, arguing that it was a missionary tract for the church (see the discussion of sources and historicity for rejection of this view).

12 Bultmann 1963: 112 also rejects its historicity since it views Jesus' work as past and speaks of the possible exaltation of Capernaum to heaven. Neither of these reasons has merit. Mission failure certainly did occur in Jesus' ministry—why else did he meet with crucifixion? On the possibility of cities being exalted before God, one need think only of the imagery of the OT prophets, where Israel is exalted above its foes. Berger 1984: 200, 205, speaks of woes of warning. For the woe oracle form, see Amos 6:1–7; Mic. 2:1; Hab. 2:6–7; Zeph. 2:5. Witherington 1990: 166 defends their authenticity, along with Matthew's mention of Chorazin, which is not mentioned outside of these parallel passages.

13 Bultmann 1963: 153 rejects the historicity of "I-sayings" because of their connection to the larger unit. This saying is authentic on the basis of the criterion of dissimilarity.

4 Klostermann 1929: 118 and Egelkraut 1976: 85–90 favor a Lucan reworking of Mark. Schneider 1977a: 247 and Wiefel 1988: 207 see an independent source for the parable and Luke 10:25–28 using Mark. Bultmann 1963: 51; Luce 1933: 204 (citing Q); and Daube 1956: 247–50 see a version like that in Matthew. Zahn 1920: 427; Manson 1949: 259–61; and Jeremias 1963a: 202 see independent incidents or sources. Plummer 1896: 283 calls the possibility of one incident precarious, but not impossible. Fitzmyer 1985: 877–78 clearly ascribes the material to a special Lucan source, but sees only one incident, a distinction that seems hard to insist upon. Marshall 1978: 441 also leans toward two incidents, as do Hendriksen 1978: 591; Liefeld 1984: 942; and Blomberg 1990: 230–31, who speaks of "proem midrash" here. Ellis 1974: 159, though noting that two incidents are probable, regards the exchange as set in Jerusalem, which is possible, since the next account is in Bethany. Grundmann 1963: 221–22 speaks only of an independent source with the parable coming from L, while Ernst 1977: 344–46 leans this way, clearly noting that the parable is from special Lucan material. Nolland 1993a: 580 argues for an original link of neighbor and the parable, but that Luke is responsible for placing the great-commandment discussion here, drawing on Mark 12:28–34. Schürmann 1994: 136–40, 149–50 sees the parable emerging from L material and rooted in Jesus' intention, but 10:25–28 is probably rooted in Mark's account and does not testify to a separate event.

9 Bultmann 1963: 324 is similar. Berger 1984: 46, 239–40 argues that two parables conclude the passage, but it is hard to know if 11:11–13 is a parable or a wisdom saying that makes a simple comparison.

2 Bultmann 1963: 13–14 argues that Matthew and Luke have the story's original core (Luke 11:14–15, 17–18), to which various sayings have been added.

8 Bultmann 1963: 131–32 and esp. 113–14 speaks of a combination of legal (11:39, 41–42) and minatory (i.e., warning) sayings (11:43–44, 46–51). He sees Matthew taking Q material and adding it to the scene in Mark 12, along with other available material. Luke created his setting, and Bultmann doubts that the woes fit Jesus' teaching. Why Jesus would not have engaged in prophetic condemnation is not clear. Without it, it is hard to explain why the leadership ever sought to remove him. If he was just a pleasant messianic pretender or a mere sage, they could have waited him out. Berger 1984: 81 speaks of an apophthegm and a woe speech and sees special Lucan material.

3 Fitzmyer 1985: 954, 957, 958, 963; Bultmann 1963: 83, 131–32; Berger 1984: 81, 144.

11 Many distinguish the saying's earliest form about a Son of Man other than Jesus from the later linkage of the Son of Man to Jesus, which appears throughout the NT. The original advocate of this distinction was Bultmann

1951–55: 1.29. The Son-of-Man sayings elsewhere refer exclusively to Jesus, making it unlikely that there are any “other than Jesus” Son-of-Man sayings. For more on the Son of Man, see Bock 1991c and excursus 6 in vol. 1.

5 Bultmann 1963: 54–55. Berger 1984: 81, 207 speaks of an apophthegm and a warning. Fitzmyer 1985: 971 prefers to call the parable an example (on the genre of example story or exemplum, see excursus 8 in vol. 1 of this commentary).

8 Tob. 2:14; 4:7–11; 12:9; 14:8–11; Sir. 3:30; 29:12; 2 Enoch 50.5; Ps. Sol. 9.5; m. Pe‹a 1.1; t. Pe>a 4.17–21 (= Neusner 1977–86: 1.45, 72–75); SB 1:430; Grundmann 1963: 262–63; Talbert 1982: 142; Wiefel 1988: 241; Matt. 19:21 = Mark 10:21 = Luke 18:22; 12:21. On the custom of alms, see BAGD 249–50; BAA 504. Ἐλεημοσύνη refers literally to “acts of mercy”; Bultmann, TDNT 2:486; Dan. 4:27 [4:24 MT]. Interestingly, the refrain of t. Pe>a 4.18 is, “My ancestors stored up treasures of money, but I have stored up treasures.” The object of the last clause is not clear (“for heaven,” “of benefits,” “of souls,” or “for myself in the world to come”), but the point about the value of alms is clear.

5 This form of mission statement appears at Qumran; Marshall 1978: 546. 1QH has numerous claims by the Teacher of Righteousness about what God is doing through him. Jeremias 1971a: 293 and n. 6 defends the age of the key tradition in Mark 10:45, another example where multiple traditions are possible with Luke 22:27. As a controversial figure, such statements of purpose from Jesus were inevitable (see Grundmann 1963: 269 for a critique of Bultmann).

22 Fitzmyer 1985: 1002 rejects the spiritual interpretation of 12:57–59, calling it allegorizing. Such a description says more about his seeing the material as derived from Q and reading it accordingly than it does about his literary sensitivity. There is no reason to regard this as a displaced saying about brotherly reconciliation (so Bultmann 1963: 172), since the contextual force is clear. Klostermann 1929: 141 errs in calling the accuser Satan (correctly refuted by Marshall 1978: 551).

3 Bultmann 1963: 23, 54–55 is undecided whether the pronouncement is controversy or scholastic dialogue, but there is no controversy raised for Jesus, so a scholastic dialogue is present. The people are asking his religious opinion.

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1010–11 speaks of a miracle story, while Bultmann 1963: 12 speaks of a pronouncement. Elements of both are present, with the key being the pronouncement in 13:15 and the miracle itself being the dominating element. Berger 1984: 312 calls it epideixis, which is his term for a miracle. Such accounts are designed to show who Jesus is and to elicit a response of respect.

4 Berger 1984: 57–59, 81. Fitzmyer 1985: 1022 prefers to speak of a collection of minatory sayings, while Bultmann 1963: 93, 117 speaks of wisdom sayings in 13:23–24, 26–27. The passage is a warning and a wisdom background is not clear, except in 13:24. Bultmann also regards 13:26–27 as a church reflection that presents Jesus as judge of the world, but this saying is like OT prophetic utterances that warn about salvation and judgment. The parable portrays Jesus as the judge, with an identity between his message and the authority it carries. The crowd must respond to him.

However, it was this very emphasis on response that caused the leadership to do away with him. It is not a post-Easter development. Jesus' view of himself was dangerous to the leadership. Luke 22:69 makes the same point conceptually.

12 Bultmann 1963: 114 sees wisdom here. Leaney 1958: 210 cites Matt. 23:34; Luke 2:40, 52; 7:35; 11:31, 49 as parallels. See also 1 Enoch 42. Luke 11:49–51 uses the wisdom motif openly. For more reasons not to see wisdom here, see Bock 1987: 120. Marshall 1978: 573–74 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1034 opt for wisdom terminology, but without Jesus alluding to himself as wisdom, since Jesus sees himself as wisdom's messenger. Sir. 24:7–12 provides a plausible background. If wisdom is in the background, this is the best way to argue for it. Nolland 1993a: 739 questions the presence of wisdom here, as do I.

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1039 remarks that, even though Matt. 12:11 has a similar saying, the rest of the detail is too different to be attributed to Q. In fact, it is too difficult for any other shared tradition. Fitzmyer also correctly denies that Luke 6:9 is a doublet to this verse. Marshall 1978: 578 sees a Q connection as possible. Bultmann 1963: 12 and Lohse, TDNT 7:26, argue that the text was a variant tradition created from Mark 3:1–6, but Ernst 1977: 435 correctly notes that the distinct terminology and motives suggest too much distance for this connection; so also Meier 1994: 710.

3 Bultmann 1963: 12 opts for pronouncement; Berger 1984: 81 speaks of apophthegm. These are the same classification, since controversy accounts are a specific kind of pronouncement. On such classifications, see Bock 1991b.

9 Prov. 25:6–7 (NRSV) says, “Do not put yourself forward in the king’s presence / or stand in the place of the great; / for it is better to be told, ‘Come up here,’ / than to be put lower in the presence of a noble.” For Jewish parallels, see Sir. 3:17–20; 4:8; 12:11; 29:5; Lev. Rab. 1.5 on 1:1 (fifth century); ›Abot de Rabbi Nathan A.25 (= Goldin 1955: 110); Bultmann 1963: 104; Fitzmyer 1985: 1047; SB 1:916.

3 Fitzmyer 1985: 1061 speaks of “prophetic words” as well. Bultmann 1963: 328 speaks of a discourse on discipleship composed by Luke; but how one can argue that Luke is responsible for the discourse is not clear. Berger 1984: 51, 97 speaks of parables and a warning. The text is a combination of “I-sayings” (14:26–27) and parabolic comparisons (14:28–35). Blomberg 1990: 281 calls the comparisons “which one of you?” parables, showing Jesus’ desire to cause the audience to reflect: “If people must carefully calculate their chances of success in major human endeavors, how much more so must they take seriously the results of spiritual commitments.”

5 Bultmann 1963: 171, 334 sees the discourse composed by Luke. But it is not clear why it cannot go back to Jesus. If he pursued sinners and was criticized for it, surely he produced an explanation for his actions. Bultmann calls the two parables similitudes, his name for detailed comparisons where a common event is described (see excursus 8).

4 Bultmann 1963: 196 accepts the parable’s historicity. Other contrastive parables involving two figures or groups are Matt. 21:28–31; 25:1–13; Luke 7:41–42; 18:9–14.

35 Bultmann 1963: 175–76, 199–200; so also Grundmann 1963: 318–20, esp. 320, who also argues that Luke changes an original parabolic reference to the master to refer to Jesus. Luce 1933: 260 regards ὅτι (for) in 16:8b as difficult for any other view.

6 Fitzmyer sees polemical sayings in 16:14–15 (1985: 1112), a saying in 16:16–17 (p. 1115), and a legal saying in 16:18 (p. 1120). Bultmann sees a wisdom saying in 16:15b (1963: 73), an "I-saying" in 16:16 (p. 164), and a legal saying in 16:18 (p. 132). Berger agrees that 16:18 is a legal saying (1984: 199) and argues that the passage is a warning made up of pronouncements, since he has the remarks in the apophthegm category (pp. 81, 89, 186).

3 For unity are Marshall 1978: 633–34 and Grobel 1963–64. Bultmann 1963: 178 denies unity (although he says that Luke received a unified story), wrongly assuming that a parable can only have one point. Crossan 1973: 66–67 and B. Scott 1989: 142–46 argue that 16:19–26 go back to Jesus and 16:27–31 to the early church, citing conceptual ties to Luke 24. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 360–62) makes a similar break, printing 16:19–26 in gray type (arguing that its roots may go back to Jesus) and 16:27–31 in black type (arguing that these verses were added later and are inauthentic). For refutation, see Pilgrim 1981: 114–15 and Hock 1987: 454–55.

8 Bultmann 1963: 178 calls the account a similitude, which is where he puts parables and such. Berger 1984: 51 sees it as a parable. Ernst 1977: 472 rightly compares it to 15:11–32 and 16:1–8. Hauck, TDNT 5:752, calls it an illustrative story and compares it to 10:30–37; 12:16–21; and 18:9–14. For the structure, see B. Scott 1989: 146–48.

5 Fitzmyer 1985: 1137 and Bultmann 1963: 144 call 17:1–3a a legal saying, while Berger 1984: 65 calls it a "sentence." Luke 17:3b–4 is like a wisdom saying according to Ernst 1977: 479 and a warning according to Berger 1984: 119, 165. Fitzmyer 1985: 1142 calls 17:5–6 a wisdom saying, while Berger 1984: 81 calls it a pronouncement ("apophthegm"). All agree that 17:7–10 is a parable.

1 Bultmann 1963: 33 calls it a "biographical apophthegm" and sees the account as a variant of Mark 1:40–45 (on the Marcan connection, see the discussion of sources and historicity). Berger 1984: 314, 317 speaks of "deesis" or "petitio" because of the appeal for help. Tannehill 1986: 118–20 calls it a "quest story."

23 On περιποιέω (to gain), see BAGD 650; BAA 1310; Gen. 12:12; Exod. 1:16; elsewhere in the NT only at Acts 20:28; 1 Tim. 3:13. On ζῳογονέω (to preserve alive), see BAGD 341; BAA 690; Exod. 1:17; Judg. 8:19; 1 Sam. 2:6; elsewhere in the NT only at Acts 7:19; 1 Tim. 6:13; Bultmann, TDNT 2:873–74.

3 There is no need to regard the story as a creation based on 2 Kings 4:27, but so Bultmann 1963: 32, who also cites a rabbinic story from the later b. Ketub. 63a, where disciples try to dissuade Akiva from seeing his mother. This approach is rightly rejected by Fitzmyer 1985: 1192 and Marshall 1978: 681–82.

10 Bultmann 1963: 75, 81, 110–11, who on form-critical grounds distinguishes wisdom sayings in 18:24b, 25, 27 from a prophetic saying in 18:29–30 and regards eternal life, the kingdom, and salvation as loosely related concepts.

3 Bultmann 1963: 33–34 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1219 take 19:8 as a Lucan addition, breaking the flow of the story. Marshall 1978: 695 agrees with Bultmann that 19:10 may be a later comment, but Fitzmyer sees it as part of the account. Schweizer 1984: 290 regards 19:8 as a non-Lucan addition to the story, while Luke is responsible for 19:10. Those who see Luke adding 19:10 often suggest that it is his version of the famous ransom saying of Mark 10:45.

9 For form-critical discussions of the individual subunits, see Fitzmyer 1985: 1329, 1334, 1338, 1342, 1348, 1351, 1355, 1357; Bultmann 1963: 36, 122–23, 125, 119; Berger 1984: 81, 296–97, 304–5, 48, 142, 352.

1 Fitzmyer 1985: 1368, 1373 strongly objects to Bultmann's questioning (1963: 262) of this material.

21 Against Bultmann 1963: 267 n. 2, who argues that the original tradition did not know of Peter's denial; but so correctly Fitzmyer 1985: 1425 and esp. Marshall 1978: 821.

2 The authenticity of the healing, the kiss, and Jesus' short remark in Matt. 26:52 are frequently questioned (e.g., Bultmann 1963: 268–69 doubts the healing, but is uncertain about the kiss). But none of these elements need be doubted: the healing is bound up in how one sees Jesus' miracles in general; the kiss is a standard greeting of respect or acceptance (Gen. 33:4; 2 Sam. 20:9 [deceitfully]; Luke 7:45; 15:20; Rom. 16:16; R. Brown 1994: 255); and it is not unnatural for Jesus to make short comments.

8 Marshall 1978: 844 notes that elsewhere in his Gospel Luke does not add the title κύριος to Marcan material. Catchpole 1971: 168–69 argues against Lucan creation of this detail (pace Bultmann 1963: 168) and notes that στραφείς (turning) is common in Luke's special source (7:44; 9:55; 14:25; 23:28), although 7:9 and 10:23 may be Lucan or from a source shared with Matthew.

1 Bultmann 1963: 282 calls Pilate's declaration of Jesus' innocence an "apologetic" motif designed to acquit Rome. But the execution of an admittedly innocent person is no acquittal. Rome does not come out well here. The apologetic motif is lacking. The remark is historical. Pilate wished to placate the masses.

2 Even Bultmann 1963: 274 accepts the general tenor of the account, except for the women witnesses, which he suspects has an apologetic flavor. In a culture that did not regard women's testimony as significant, there is no motive to create such a detail—in fact, the temptation would be to suppress it! Bultmann also sees Matthew's guards as an apologetic addition, but guarding the tomb of a controversial figure is not unusual.

7 Rom. 11 sees a clear future for Israel and a future role in God's plan; Burns 1992. They will be grafted into the vine again one day. For another set of arguments against this Israel-church connection, see Witherington 1990: 128–29, who also notes that the Twelve were called to help gather a community.

15 The image here is not used in the same way as the vine image in Rom. 11, since there the national groupings are pictured as the branches, not as the entire vine. In addition, Romans indicates a hope of future engrafting for Israel (esp. Rom. 11:12, 15, 25–26). In Rom. 11:26, to "turn godlessness away from Jacob" is to graft in the natural branches again—a clear reference to Israel. Rom. 11 surveys the whole future, while Luke is looking at the short term. On Rom. 11, see Burns 1992.

2 Abraham is the root in 1 Enoch 93.5. The parable is not unlike Paul's vine image in Rom. 11. Though related to Israel as "natural branches," this promise is tied to God's commitment to Abraham and encompasses, but is not limited to, Israel (Luke 1:54–55). See Burns 1992 on Rom. 11.

1 So Fitzmyer 1981: 309, who notes that the title goes back to E. Burrows. Bovon 1989: 45–47 belongs here, though he sees the presence of legend (1:57–80; 2:1–40), a declaration scene (1:26–38), a meeting account (1:39–56), and two hymns (1:46–56, 67–79). Bovon also sees parallelism in form to Acts 10, though there is no hymnic material there. In addition, he accepts the description of the material as Midrash, provided Midrash is defined as actualizing existing revelation.

3 The term levirate comes from Latin levir (husband's brother); M. Burrows 1940. The practice was still used in the first century; Josephus, Antiquities 4.8.23 §§254–56.

7 Ἔγνων is a dramatic use of the aorist: "I have determined what I will do," which might be idiomatically rendered, "I've got it!" (Kistemaker 1980: 230–31; Burton 1900: §45; Zerwick 1963: §258). The asyndeton in the verse suggests that the idea came to him suddenly; Plummer 1896: 383.

9 Leaney 1958: 50–54. Schürmann 1969: 227–28, 241–42 says the source is Q; so also Busse 1978: 113–14 (though he sees Q's influence as more conceptual than verbal, which makes Luke very responsible for the account); Nolland 1989: 192.

18 Busse 1979: 110–14 argues that the idea of the leprosy "going out" of the man in 5:13 suggests an exorcism (he also notes Luke 4:32, 36; Acts 10:38). Bovon 1989: 240 is uncertain. However, the departure of the fever of Luke 4:39 is described in different but similar terms: ἀφῆκεν.

39 Luke 6:33 (twice) and 6:35 use the term ἀγαθοποιέω; Ernst 1977: 205; Schürmann 1969: 308; Busse 1979: 140 perceptively notes the conceptual tie to 9:11 and 4:18.

4 Schürmann 1969: 395–96; Carson 1984: 200; Liefeld 1984: 897–98. Also noting four options is Busse 1979: 142 n. 3: (1) Luke added the detail, (2) Luke is truer to Q than is Matthew, (3) Luke had another source, and (4) Luke received a pre-Lucan expansion of Q. Busse cannot decide between views 1 and 4. Wiefel 1988: 142 opts for view 4.

2 Theissen 1983: 177 speaks of natural compression for Matthew and Luke, which is the view of those who hold Marcan priority. Busse 1979: 254 n. 3 notes that Luke has 44 percent fewer words than Mark.

9 Elsewhere in the Synoptics at Matt. 9:18 = Mark 5:23; 6:5; 8:23, 25. The same action in different terms is found in Luke 5:13; 8:44, 54; 14:4; 22:51; Busse 1979: 295.

16 BDF §333.2; BDR §333.1b.6, §331.1. The frequency of such tense shifts in Hebrew poetry is demonstrated by Buth 1984, who argues, on the basis of this feature, that the hymn was originally in Hebrew.

7 Cadbury 1922a: 494 has a list of texts using ἐπιχειρέω; some are neutral, others pejorative. As always, context determines the proper force.

12 So Cadbury 1922a: 495–96. RSV and NASB: “the things (which have been) accomplished.” Similar is Neu Luther and Zürcher Bibel.

20 So Cadbury 1956–57: 131, who argues that the meaning “to investigate” is unattested in Greek; so also Ropes 1923–24: 70–71; Luce 1933: 82; Maddox 1982: 4–5; and RSV. Cadbury’s argument has roots in an earlier article (1922b), where he notes the six possibilities for the verb.

21 So most take it, including Fitzmyer 1981: 297; Creed 1930: 4–5; Ellis 1974: 66; Schweizer 1984: 12; Marshall 1978: 43; and Kittel, TDNT 1:215–16, who cites Polybius 3.32.2; Josephus, Against Apion 1.10 §53 and Life 65 §357. Cadbury 1922a: 501–2 challenges the first two examples directly. This view is present in NIV, NASB, Neu Luther, and Einheitsübersetzung. NKJV and KJV speak of having a “perfect understanding,” the most emphatic of all translations, which is really a separate view.

23 Cadbury 1922a: 504 takes ἀκριβῶς with γράψαι in order to solve the contextual problem of his view. So in his view, Luke writes carefully. But word order makes such a connection grammatically unlikely, as Creed 1930: 5 makes clear.

27 So Cadbury 1922a: 502–3; Marshall 1978: 42; and RSV. For options, see BAGD 77 §2; BAA 153 §2a.

1 Drury 1976: 49–51 and Tannehill 1974; earlier Cadbury 1958: 192–93. For a fuller list, see Farris 1985: 15.

24 Rejecting a medical term are Fitzmyer 1981: 550 and Cadbury 1926: 194–95, 203; but see also Hengel and Hengel 1959: 340–41. Cadbury shows that the terminology itself is not limited to physicians, but is quoted by laypeople, e.g., Aulus Cornelius Celsus and Alexander of Aphrodisias, the second of whom cites Galen almost verbatim (the source of both citations appears to be Archigenes). Thus, this language had come into popular use.

31 Here ὑμῖν is a good example of a dative of disadvantage: “against you.” Marshall 1978: 423 and Grundmann 1963: 210 note that this is true—unless the town repents. The declaration is not decisive, but it indicates where the town is headed. The danger of refusal now is that there will be refusal later. For more on “shaking dust,” see Cadbury 1933: 269–71.

12 So Leaney 1958: 230; Fitzmyer 1985: 1161–62; Mattill 1979: 201; Roberts 1948; Rüstow 1960; Cadbury 1950; Tertullian, Against Marcion 4.35.12. Beasley-Murray 1986: 102–3 takes this view, though he fails to evaluate this option when it is taken with a present force. Riesenfeld 1949 does not mention the evidence from Aquila noted in n. 13 below—a grave omission—in arguing that “in your midst” is not possible. Schlosser 1980: 1.202–4 argues that “in one’s power” is a possible first-century meaning, but he opts for “in the midst of.” His discussion is the latest careful examination of the evidence.

52 For another view, see Cadbury 1917. H. J. Holtzmann sees the pericope as contained in Luke’s sources (noted by Klostermann 1929: 205).

15 For a good example, see how Calvin handles oaths in his treatment (1972: 1.190–93) of Matt. 5:33–37. He concludes that all oaths that profane or abuse God’s name are unlawful, but that Jesus does not outlaw every oath here. To make this distinction, Calvin appeals to the teaching of the law where people are to swear in God’s name. Thus, analogous Scripture helps to reveal the limits of the figure.

24 So E. Scott 1911; J. Campbell 1936–37; Clark 1940. Ἐγγίζω means “arrives soon” in Mark 14:42.

33 BAGD 602; BAA 1217–18; 1 Cor. 9:7; 1 Macc. 3:28; Heidland, TDNT 5:591; Caragounis 1974.

1 For more detail about the Son of Man debate and an extended version of this excursus, see Bock 1991c. Key recent studies (with full bibliographies) include Colpe, TDNT 8:400–77; Casey 1979; Caragounis 1986; S. Kim 1985; Tö;dt 1979 (whose work Kim in particular critiques).

3 1 Enoch 46–48, 62–71 and 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 13 are too late to be related to this period. S. Kim 1985: 19 and n. 25 mentions that a “heavenly,” redemptive figure identified alternatively with Enoch, Abel, or Melchizedek may have existed in the ancient Jewish tradition. But he notes that these claims are disputable, since the clear examples are late. He also notes (pp. 20–22) that 4Q246†, formerly 4Q243 (= 4QpsDan A^{a} = 4QpsDan ar^{a}), may prove this limitation incorrect, but it is too early to know what this text means, since all of it has not been published, and it has many gaps. Fitzmyer 1981: 209–10 argues that 1 Enoch may be relevant as a transitional move to an apocalyptic individualized use, but he treats the point as too unclear to base much on it. Kim (p. 19 n. 25) notes that all undisputed examples from 1 Enoch and 2 Esdras are later than the Gospels. The Son of Man references in Judaism are 1 Enoch 46.3–7; 48.4–10; 62.3–9, 14; 63.11; 69.27–29; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 13; b. Sanh. 96b; 98a; Num. Rab. 13.14 on 7:12–13; Midr. ha-Gadol on Gen. 49:10; Aggadat Bereshit 4.3; 23.1 (see Strack and Stemberger 1991: 339); y. *Ta*ʿ*an.* 65b (2.1) (= Neusner et al. 1982–93: 18.183); b. Ḥag. 14a; Tanḥuma (Buber), Toledot 70b (6.20) (= Townsend 1989: 167; see also Caragounis 1986: 134–36).

25 See BAGD 856 §2 and BAA 1708 §2. With ἐπί, φθάνω means "to overtake." Appeals to the ability of ἐπί to mean "near" (as in John 21:1) are not good enough to refute the force of the verb-preposition combination. In the LXX, φθάνω normally means "to reach, arrive, happen to." When combined with ἐπί in the LXX, it means for something to reach someone; Dan. 4:24, 28 [Theodotion]. Caragounis's appeal (1989: 20–23) to the proleptic aorist here fails (even though he sees a fulfillment with resurrection); see also Nolland 1993a: 640.

1 On allegorical parables, see Derrett 1974; Blomberg 1982a: 6–8; Carlston 1981; and Klauck 1978. On the parable's interpretive history, see Snodgrass 1983: 3–11, who defends authenticity (pp. 2, 87, 103–4, 108, 112). Giblin 1985: 65–66 does not see allegory as a distinct genre of parables, but speaks of the parable's allegorical bent. See also excursus 8, where parable and allegory are seen as part of a literary continuum.

20 Seeberg 1914: 11–12. In an exhaustive study of the problem, Carmignac 1969: 122–28 notes that "necessary" and "for the future day" were the most popular ancient options.

25 Schürer 1973–87: 2.381–403; R. Meyer and H. Weiss, TDNT 9:11–48. For Luke and the Pharisees, see Carroll 1988.

23 Sloan 1977: 38–41. One could also suggest that the Isa. 58 connection was made to underline the very type of ministry that Jesus did exhibit on the Sabbath. His activity fulfilled expectation in line with the general ethical call of Isa. 58:1–13, esp. v. 13, where the Sabbath theme appears; see Carroll R. 1992.

1 Plummer 1896: 106; Manson 1949: 46 (who strongly defends this view); Dupont 1968: 97–115 (who argues for a middle course between literalism and parable); Carson 1984: 111; Nolland 1989: 177 (who defends the plausibility of Jesus' reporting this event to his disciples). On the other end of the spectrum apparently is Crossan (1991), who does not even discuss this event in his portrayal of Jesus. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 133–34 [Matt.], 278–80 [Luke]) places all the sayings of this unit in black type, thereby indicating rejection of a tie to Jesus. The consensus of the seminar is that the text is legendary, like Greco-Roman biography, and that the sayings were authored by Q following the LXX. The seminar calls it an "ordeal story," but this generic form category does not explain the explicit uniqueness of this confrontation account, a point that negates this argument. Manson 1949: 45–46 rightly challenges the description of the account as legendary (see the discussion of form below). LXX citations reflect only Luke's sensitivity to his Greek audience and are not evidence of the text's origin, since MT renderings would work (Nolland 1989: 177).

11 Carson 1984: 112. In Bovon's short excursus (1989: 196–97) on the term devil, he notes that Luke uses διάβολος and σατανᾶς seven times each in Luke–Acts. The reference to διάβολος in Luke 4:2 is possibly Luke's choice, though Matt. 4:1, 8 renders this judgment as less than certain. Matt. 4:3 uses ὁ πειράζων and Matt. 4:10 σατανᾶ, which Luke lacks. In 4:1–13, Luke speaks only of the διάβολος, avoiding Matthew's variation of terms and Mark's reference to Satan.

41 Gundry 1982: 138 notes that Matthew will mention exorcisms later. Carson 1984: 204 argues that Matthew omits the account to condense the presentation of Jesus' authority. The omission is still odd, because the passage fits Matthew's theme.

8 Carson 1984: 223–24, in critique of Pesch's view. Fitzmyer 1981: 590 is uncommitted, though he appears to lean toward equating the two names, calling two names "theoretically possible," while noting the debate of the early church. For examples of double names, see Acts 1:23; 12:25; 13:9; double Semitic names include Joseph Barnabas (Acts 4:36) and Joseph Caiaphas (Josephus, Antiquities 18.2.2 §35).

23 So correctly, Carson 1984: 279–80. No path is being made for Jesus as an authority nor is there a reference to excessive travel on the Sabbath to do kingdom preaching.

12 Carson 1984: 239 (undecided between this and view 1); A. Ehrman 1978; Arbeitman 1980. Fitzmyer 1981: 620 calls this view highly unlikely but gives no reason.

12 Fitzmyer 1981: 623 is skeptical of the new Moses emphasis in Luke, but underplays the Mosaic allusions in Acts. If the motif is present, it is clearer in Matthew than in Luke, though even in Matthew it is not certain. For the motif in Matthew, see Davies and Allison 1988: 423–24; against its presence in Matthew is Carson 1984: 129.

16 If Carson is right, then the possibility of a sermon compilation is increased, but there is no indicator in Matthew or Luke that a long period is in view. Neither can it be ruled out.

4 Schürmann 1969: 395–96; Carson 1984: 200; Liefeld 1984: 897–98. Also noting four options is Busse 1979: 142 n. 3: (1) Luke added the detail, (2) Luke is truer to Q than is Matthew, (3) Luke had another source, and (4) Luke received a pre-Lucan expansion of Q. Busse cannot decide between views 1 and 4. Wiefel 1988: 142 opts for view 4.

5 Carson 1984: 214 suggests that the discipleship emphasis is overdrawn, especially when it is treated as Matthew's sole concern. Van Der Loos 1965: 649 argues that calling the boat the "ship of the church" originates in the "ship-yard of the imagination." The miracle pictures spiritual truth, but it is not allegory, nor does it focus only on discipleship.

7 Machen prefers the latter, a choice that Carson fails to mention in critiquing the view. Thus, Machen sees two childless fathers at the end of Matthew's list: Eleazar and Jacob.

8 For Carson, Levi is an only son; but his sister, who bears the line, marries Jacob. So when Levi dies childless, Joseph, the nephew, becomes the heir physically through Jacob and Levi's sister.

9 Carson appears to have read Luke in the wrong generational direction here or else this is a typo reading Levi in place of Heli. Carson (or his editor) is not the first to get tangled in the complex intersection of these genealogies, nor is he likely to be the last!

1 Carson 1984: 125–26. Augustine's view that two distinct sermons were present was decisive in the early history of interpretation.

4 Matthew elsewhere (14:23; 15:29) uses ὄρος to refer to hills; Carson 1984: 129. Luke's πεδινός is not a prairie, but can be a plateau in the mountains: Jer. 21:13; Isa. 13:2; Godet 1875: 1.295; BAGD 638; BAA 1287. See the discussion of sources and historicity in Luke 6:17–19.

5 Carson's four objections (1984: 123–24; 1978: 139–49) are really two objections, each stated in two forms.

9 See McArthur 1960: 105–27; Carson 1984: 126–27; Jeremias 1963b: 1–12, 19–23; Hunter 1965: 107–11; Toussaint 1980: 86–94; Bauman 1985; and J. Martin 1986.

3 Carson cites texts where πάσχα can mean Passover week: Josephus, Antiquities 14.2.1 §21; 17.9.3 §213; Jewish War 2.1.3 §10; m. Pesaḥ. 9.5.

1 For more detail about the Son of Man debate and an extended version of this excursus, see Bock 1991c. Key recent studies (with full bibliographies) include Colpe, TDNT 8:400–77; Casey 1979; Caragounis 1986; S. Kim 1985; Tö;dt 1979 (whose work Kim in particular critiques).

37 Recent treatments taking this approach are Dunn 1980: 67–69; Casey 1979: 7–50; and Black 1976: 60–63, who argues that this text is unique, since it is the only place in the OT where Israel is "deified" (see Bock 1987: 335 n. 179 for refutation).

23 For defense of this linkage, along with a defense of 18:8's original unity with 18:7 and 18:2–5, see Catchpole 1977.

2 Catchpole 1984 argues against historicity on form-critical grounds. For a response, see Witherington 1990: 104–7 and Nolland 1993b: 922–23. Holding to historicity, Kinman 1993 argues for a contrast between this event and Greco-Roman entries of dignitaries. Kinman also argues that Luke tries to show Jesus as a "king like Solomon" who is not a political threat and thus seeks to blunt the charge that Christians are a political threat to Rome. As such, Luke declares the significance to the event by how he tells the whole story of Jesus.

4 J. Green 1988: 282 calls Luke the most primitive form of the tradition. Fitzmyer 1985: 1456–59 is agnostic on historicity, saying that it is impossible to prove. The most detailed English study, Catchpole 1971: 153–220, gives the nod to Luke. For a more skeptical appraisal, giving seven reasons not to accept these accounts as authentic, see E. Sanders 1985: 296–99. For a detailed response to most of his objections, see Bock 1994b. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 392–93) rejects Jesus' prediction (22:61) and the trial dialogue (22:67–69, 70) as inauthentic because 22:61 recalls 22:34 and the absence of disciples at the trial means that no witnesses were present. Jesus' anticipation of Peter's failure, however, reflects his knowledge of how pressure would cause Peter to wilt (the disciples' past record of inconsistency might also contribute to Jesus' expectation). The presence of people like Joseph of Arimathea at the trial makes an internal witness possible.

5 Carefully surveying the historical background to the trial scenes and crucifixion in a Jewish setting, O. Betz 1982 argues for the historical coherence and integrity of the Marcan account as well as for its chronological priority (against Catchpole and Green in n. 4 above). He suggests that the temple charge, which Luke lacks, raised the issue of Jesus' authority and, in the view of the Jews, made him a risk to begin a chain of events that ultimately would lead Rome to take the temple and Jerusalem (John 11:47–52). The messianic confession only highlighted the danger in their view. This could be called blasphemous in the sense that someone causing God's people to be handed over to the nations would be guilty of his name being blasphemed (11QTemple[a] 64.6–13). Betz's study raises one potential element that could have set up the decisive Jewish negative reaction to Jesus (for another, more direct cause, see the exegesis of 22:69). I am not certain, however, that it is as important to choose between the Lucan and Marcan accounts as other scholars seem prone to believe. Gospel writers could incorporate older source materials despite the age of their composition.

8 Marshall 1978: 844 notes that elsewhere in his Gospel Luke does not add the title κύριος to Marcan material. Catchpole 1971: 168–69 argues against Lucan creation of this detail (pace Bultmann 1963: 168) and notes that στραφείς (turning) is common in Luke's special source (7:44; 9:55; 14:25; 23:28), although 7:9 and 10:23 may be Lucan or from a source shared with Matthew.

16 Besides those already cited, other major works on Jesus' trial are Bammel 1970, Blinzler 1969, Sherwin-White 1963: 24–47, and Winter 1974. Catchpole, Blinzler, and Sherwin-White defend the historicity of much of the Lucan account. Fitzmyer 1985: 1466 also thinks a morning trial is most likely.

20 Catchpole 1971: 193–94 argues that this difference reflects a non-Marcan source.

11 For discussion of the name Lazarus, see Dunkerley 1958–59; Derrett 1970: 78–99; Cave 1968–69; B. Scott 1989: 149 n. 28; SB 2:223; Meier 1994: 825, 868 n. 158.

13 So Chafer 1951: 410; W. Kelly 1943: 103–6. Popularly known as Scofieldian dispensationalism, this view was made famous in the Scofield Reference Bible. I call this the tribulation-kingdom view because some see the sermon as applicable only in a future kingdom period, while others prefer to see its application beginning in and focusing on the tribulation period.

7 This point makes it unlikely that the judge was a Gentile, but so Plummer 1896: 411 and C. A. Evans 1990: 269. On the historical background, see B. Scott 1989: 184, citing Chajes 1892, who notes that most cases were heard by one judge (though he uses late texts).

30 Note that ἐκζητηθήσεται (shall be required) repeats the verb of 11:50. A key article discussing the options is Chapman 1911–12, with a summary in Manson 1949: 103–5.

46 The English translations by H. T. Andrews (in Charles 1913: 2.113) and Hadas 1951: 180–81 correctly look like the Golden Rule, while that by R. J. H. Shutt (in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 2.26) does not.

12 In the OT, see 1 Kings 4:25 [5:5 MT]; Ps. 80:8–19 [80:9–20 MT]; Isa. 5:1–7; 34:4; Jer. 5:17; 8:13; 24:1–8; Hos. 2:12 [2:14 MT]; 9:10; Joel 1:7; Mic. 4:4; 7:1; Hab. 3:17; Matt. 20:1–8; 21:28, 33–41 = Mark 12:1–9 = Luke 20:9–16. In Judaism, see Syriac Ahiqar 8.35 (Charles 1913: 2.775). The picture of caring for the vine makes the figure refer to God’s blessings. Manson 1949: 274 notes that in rabbinic literature the fig-tree image often alluded to the law, but that is not its referent in this parable.

41 Bertram, TDNT 8:619 n. 48, cites 1QH 7.6–7 (where God’s power as Most High and the Spirit are linked; see 1QH 6.33) and T. Levi 16.3 (where a man who brings renewal to the Law is said to work by “the power of the Most High”). Some think that T. Levi 16 has been reworked by a Christian editor to allude to Jesus; H. Kee in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 1.794 n. 16a. Grundmann, TDNT 2:300, 311 n. 91, notes the tie between power and the Spirit. Procksch, TDNT 1:101, speaks of a “supranatural origin.”

42 CD 7.18–19; 1QM 11.6; 4Q175 [= 4QTestim] 12; 4Q161 [= 4QpIsa^{a}]; T. Levi 18.3. T. Levi 4.3–4 is an interesting parallel, but it is debated whether a Christian interpolation is present; H. Kee in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 1.789 n. 4b. Fitzmyer 1981: 387 cites the texts. On the tribe of Judah as the locale of the messianic, regal hope, see T. Naph. 8.2; T. Sim. 7.1–2; Wiefel 1988: 65.

15 Δίκτυα is also plural, indicating that there is a crew on this boat. On the use of δίκτυον, see T. Dan 2.4; T. Abr. (A) 8.10 (= J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 1.886) (BAGD 198; BAA 399). Perhaps these negative figurative uses in Judaism help set up Jesus’ positive metaphors later? On fishing in Palestine, see Bishop 1951.

46 The English translations by H. T. Andrews (in Charles 1913: 2.113) and Hadas 1951: 180–81 correctly look like the Golden Rule, while that by R. J. H. Shutt (in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 2.26) does not.

13 This may also be the significance of the request in Luke 8:31 not to be sent into the abyss; Van Der Loos 1965: 387 n. 4. 1 Enoch 56.3; T. Moses 10.11–12; and T. Levi 18 reflect such an eschatological judgment (the T. Moses reference is disputed; see J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 1.932, 933 n. g).

19 The nature and age of the so-called Hebrew version of the Testament of Naphtali is disputed; see H. Kee in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 1.775–76.

11 Fitzmyer 1985: 973; Marshall 1978: 524; Klostermann 1929: 136; Wiefel 1988: 237. Parallels for this concept are common; see 1 Cor. 15:32; Eccles. 8:15; Isa. 22:13; Tob. 7:10. Two other Jewish texts are especially relevant: Sir. 11:18–19 (NRSV) reads: “One becomes rich through diligence and self-denial, / and the reward allotted to him is this: / when he says, ‘I have found rest, / and now I shall feast on my goods!’ he does not know how long it will be/ until he leaves them to others and dies.” 1 Enoch 97.8–10 reads: “Woe unto you who gain silver and gold by unjust means; / you will then say, ‘We have grown rich and accumulated goods, / we have acquired everything that we have desired. / So now let us do whatever we like; / for we have gathered silver, / we have filled our treasuries [with money] like water. / And many are the laborers in our houses.’ / Your lies flow like water. / For your wealth shall not endure / but it shall take off from you quickly / for you have acquired it all unjustly, / and you shall be given over to a great curse” (translation by E. Isaac in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 1.78). For Hellenistic parallels, see Euripides, Alcestis 788–89; Menander, Fragment 301.

8 R. J. H. Shutt’s translation of Aristeas (in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 2.20) says that each settler had 100 acres, based on 600,000 settlers on 60,000,000 acres or arourae. But this figure is too high, since one aroura is 0.275 hectare or about two-thirds of an acre. One hundred arourae is thus around 70 acres.

17 On the role of purity in Judaism as a stage on the way to holiness, see Neusner and Chilton 1991; *m. Soṭa*9.15. On the Pharisees' concern for purity, see Witherington 1990: 56–59, who speaks in particular of the ḥăbērîm, the overly strict Pharisees.

23 For the debate, see Ladd 1974a; Ladd 1974b: 57–69; Kümmel 1957 (a full presentation of the NT kingdom passages, dividing them into present and/or future aspects); Lundströ;m 1963; Chilton 1984; and Beasley-Murray 1986. For the term in Judaism, see Lattke 1984.

15 So Schrenk, TDNT 1:612, argues, while opting for Matthew's version as the more original form in Q. But Chilton 1979: 205–23 argues that Luke's saying is from Lucan Q, a version distinct from but parallel to Matthew's Q. Chilton also defends the originality of Luke's form of the saying. Given all the other anomalies in the text, it is more satisfactory to argue for distinct sources and settings.

5 For example, Chwolson's 1908 work (view six below) was first published in 1892, three decades before the start of form criticism, so that Fitzmyer's appeal to form-critical analysis is challenged. Some of the arguments in this debate are lexical and so are unrelated to any solid results emerging from form criticism. Apparently, Fitzmyer has Luke's additional cup in mind when he discusses form criticism. Some see Luke's mention of the additional cup as evidence of liturgical expansion by the later church.

24 So E. Scott 1911; J. Campbell 1936–37; Clark 1940. Ἐγγίζω means "arrives soon" in Mark 14:42.

5 Though not accepting this view, Schweizer 1984: 272 notes a rabbinic tradition that if two Sabbaths were perfectly observed the kingdom would come, citing Isa. 56:4–7; b. Šab. 118b; SB 1:600 §B. Against this view is the late tractate Derek ʾereṣ Rabbah 11.13 (= A. Cohen 1965: 2.565), which cites Rabbi Jose as saying, “Whoever calculates the end has no portion in the future world.” This fits the later rabbis’ tendency to discourage apocalyptic speculation.

1 The view is old. Those who hold it include Bultmann 1963: 300; Creed 1930: 44; Klostermann 1929: 45; Schürmann 1969: 139; Schneider 1977a: 76; Wiefel 1988: 82; and Fitzmyer 1981: 435–36. About the only one who raises doubts is Marshall 1978: 126. Despite the remarks about sources, Coleridge 1993: 187–213 is certainly correct that from a narrative viewpoint this pericope could not be dropped without substantial loss to the infancy narrative. Jesus’ remarks about himself are a fitting climax to the prologue. In Coleridge’s words (p. 189), this unit is “the most important” of the infancy narrative.

25 For a brief discussion of the Qumran texts and an evaluation of Fitzmyer’s 1973–74 article, see Bock 1987: 65, 298 n. 51 and Collins 1993 (who challenges Fitzmyer’s claim that Son of God lacks a messianic nuance).

3 Bayer 1986: 193–94. Appealing to possible oral tradition, Marshall 1978: 394 more cautiously notes that μέλλει reflects an Aramaic participle and thus perhaps the saying’s ancient form. Colpe, TDNT 8:444, speaks of a possible “unabbreviated special tradition,” though he also sees the church developing this tradition. Fitzmyer 1981: 812 sees Luke’s dependence only on Mark, though he has trouble explaining Luke’s abbreviated prediction. Bayer 1986: 197 makes a good case against the Lucan short form as the original form, arguing that Luke has abbreviated the tradition. Against a second source is Nolland 1993a: 512.

1 For more detail about the Son of Man debate and an extended version of this excursus, see Bock 1991c. Key recent studies (with full bibliographies) include Colpe, TDNT 8:400–77; Casey 1979; Caragounis 1986; S. Kim 1985; Tö;dt 1979 (whose work Kim in particular critiques).

2 Colpe, TDNT 8:432–33, argues that the reference is to "a man such as Jesus." But in 12:22–34, Jesus teaches that God cares for the birds. Jesus also argues, however, that God cares for people, who are "greater" than the birds. The remark is not generic.

8 Conzelmann 1960: 105 n. 3, 123 suggests that this speech is the "insider" explanation for Jesus' remarks. So also Zmijewski 1972: 417–19, although he acknowledges the possibility of a special Lucan source. Against a Lucan redaction are Kümmel 1957: 29; Colpe, TDNT 8:450–51; and Marshall 1978: 659, who notes that Luke does not create Son-of-Man sayings and that the text has a good claim to authenticity. In addition, the criterion of multiple attestation favors authenticity.

40 For refutation of France's attempt (1971: 227–39) to tie this remark to a.d. 70, see Marshall 1978: 776–77, who notes that the presence of cosmic signs, the force of Dan. 7:13, and the context all argue against such a view. Marshall also defends the saying's authenticity and rightly questions attempts to reject the saying because of the Synoptic mixture of OT text (Ps. 110 and Dan. 7) or by holding that other sayings such as Mark 8:38 or 14:62 are earlier. Colpe, TDNT 8:450, and Perrin 1967: 173–85 deny authenticity; Hooker 1967: 148–59 and Borsch 1967: 361–64 defend it.

13 Combrink 1973; Talbert 1982: 54–55; Tiede 1988: 103. I present Tiede's suggestion. See also the further discussion in 4:18.

5 Delling, TDNT 8:32–33, esp. n. 3, makes it clear that a censure of the predecessors is not in view. He cites the first-century B.C.. historian Diodorus Siculus 1.1.1–3 as a parallel. To this Conzelmann, TDNT 9:596, adds from the same work 1.2.7 and 1.4.4–5.

8 Against this view is Conzelmann 1960: 18–27. See the introduction in §II.A above.

1 Goulder 1989: 299, accepting both omissions as likely explanations, believes that Luke used Mark. For a different view on the kingdom omission based on an alleged Lucan reduction of a connection between the kingdom's coming and repentance, see Conzelmann 1960: 114.

15 So Fitzmyer 1981: 573 and Wiefel 1988: 116 rightly, against Conzelmann 1960: 43 and Schneider 1977a: 130, who see a reference to Judea, no doubt because of 4:44. Of course, if Judea is broadly understood in that verse, then Galilee is included in that earlier reference as well. See the exegesis of 4:44.

16 Fitzmyer 1981: 186–87 rightly notes that this verse destroys Conzelmann's claim (1960: 156–57) that the period of Jesus' ministry is "Satan free." Jesus is engaged in victorious battle against Satan here, as 11:21–22 also stresses.

16 On the figurative use of "bound" and "loosed," see Fitzmyer 1985: 1013; MM 142, 144. The length of the woman's condition is underlined by the use of the interjection ἰδού (behold). On Satan's activity, see Job 2:1–7; Acts 10:38; 1 Cor. 5:5; 2 Cor. 12:7; 1 Tim. 1:20; Plummer 1896: 343.

Fitzmyer notes that the verse argues against Conzelmann's view (1960: 27–28, 80) of a "Satan-free" period during Jesus' ministry.

12 Conzelmann 1960: 16 presents a threefold division: Israel, Jesus, the church. Fitzmyer 1981: 182–87 and 1985: 1115 defends a modified threefold division: the law and the prophets, Jesus, and the early church. But the Lucan passages cited know of only a law-and-prophets period (promise) and a kingdom-Jesus-church period (fulfillment).

8 Conzelmann 1960: 105 n. 3, 123 suggests that this speech is the "insider" explanation for Jesus' remarks. So also Zmijewski 1972: 417–19, although he acknowledges the possibility of a special Lucan source. Against a Lucan redaction are Kümmel 1957: 29; Colpe, TDNT 8:450–51; and Marshall 1978: 659, who notes that Luke does not create Son-of-Man sayings and that the text has a good claim to authenticity. In addition, the criterion of multiple attestation favors authenticity.

18 Fitzmyer follows Conzelmann 1960: 126; but correctly Marshall 1978: 762. Danker 1988: 329 notes that the issues of Jerusalem's destruction and the end-time were linked in most people's minds; one suggests the other. Jesus' answer goes beyond the temple. Zmijewski 1972: 93–95 suggests that the reference to the "coming days" in 21:6 suggests an eschatological setting, since ἡμέρα (day) alludes to the day of the Lord. It must be remembered that any judgment that consumed Jerusalem would be seen as catastrophic, so either event—Jerusalem's fall or the temple's removal—would suggest severe judgment. The disciples are asking, "When will that judgment come?"

36 Marshall 1978: 775 notes that, in Greek astrological texts, συνοχή signifies the dismay caused by unfavorable omens, while Manson 1949: 332 says that it denotes “bewildered despair.” Conzelmann, TDNT 7:440, says that the apocalyptic coloring is stronger in Luke.

6 Hayles 1973: 120; Fitzmyer 1981: 400. On Augustan census activity, see Braunert 1957; Corbishley 1936; Tacitus, Annals 1.11; Dio Cassius 53.30.2.

8 Bultmann 1963: 31–32 (where he calls the account an apophthegm or pronouncement story, which he believes grew into this full-blown account); Creed 1930: 65; Schneider 1977a: 106–7; Klostermann 1929: 62; Fitzmyer 1981: 527; Tannehill 1972; C. F. Evans 1990: 266–67 (who notes a series of Lucan expressions in the account); Goulder 1989: 299. For a summary of the recent discussion and a full bibliography on this passage, see Schreck 1989, while Corrington 1993 evaluates a redactional reading of this text with other types of readings.

23 M. Power 1912 mentions this approach, while Cortés and Gatti 1970 and Bover 1951 suppose that the missing saying was that Jesus told his parents he would remain in Jerusalem, but they had not understood him on that point.

18 So also Godet in the third French edition of his commentary, but not in the English translations of his earlier French editions (see Cortés and Gatti 1987: 255 n. 27). Lexical support for this sense comes from the LXX (Gen. 33:11; Judg. 13:15–16; 19:7; 2 Sam. 13:25, 27; 2 Kings 5:23 [variant reading]), the related verb παραβιάζομαι (to urge insistently; Luke 24:29; Acts 16:15), and Koine sources (MM 109–10 and Spicq 1995: 1.290–91).

4 The Gospel of Peter 9.35–10.42 (Schneemelcher 1991–92: 1.224–25) gives details about the resurrection, an expansion that demonstrates the differences between canonical and noncanonical accounts and indicates what happened to the tradition in the postapostolic period; cf. also Barn. 15.9. The glorified body is not a mere return to the former earthly existence (i.e., like the resurrection of Lazarus), but represents a transcendent form of real existence (1 Cor. 15:35–49, esp. 15:42–44). On the resurrection as event, see Stein 1977 and Craig 1980.

9 For a defense of the authenticity of Mark 2:18–20, and thus of its parallels, see V. Taylor 1966: 208–12 (who argues that the Marcan tradition has roots in an eyewitness and was told to reveal Jesus' mind about fasting); Cranfield 1959: 107–11; Marshall 1978: 223 (though he regards it as possible that Luke 5:36–39 may be a separate tradition). Bovon 1989: 256 also sees a distinct tradition, since Luke's saying has a parallel in the Gospel of Thomas 47, though in a different order (Luke: garment [5:36], then wine [5:37–39]; Thomas: the reverse). Teaching through word linkage was popular in Judaism. When done with the Scriptures, it was called gezerah shewah.

2 Cranfield 1959: 146. The distinct placement of these discourses in Matthew and Mark—i.e., gathered versus being scattered throughout Luke—shows that either multiple traditions about Jesus' kingdom teaching or an anthology of his teaching on the kingdom was available in the church. Matthew and Mark represent a summary of this teaching.

32 So Cranfield 1959: 176. Plummer 1896: 227 speaks of Kersa, a locale near the lake, but he rejects Origen's association of it with Gergesa. Arndt

1956: 239–40 and Bovon 1989: 434 accept Gergesa as original in Luke. Liefeld 1984: 914–15 is rightly cautious about a solution, as is Nolland 1989: 407. No clearly superior option exists between reading a regional reference or concluding that Gergesa is intended.

10 Cranfield 1959: 100–101; Lane 1974: 96–98. Of course, what is true of Mark is also true of the parallels in Matthew and Luke.

20 Cranfield 1963 has a variation of this view that sees concessive καί: "God will vindicate even though (καί) he suffers long with the wicked."

22 Cranfield 1963: 299 n. 1 and Linnemann 1966: 188–89 n. 16 object that the term cannot have this force and challenge the passages where it is said to have this meaning.

21 So most take it, including Fitzmyer 1981: 297; Creed 1930: 4–5; Ellis 1974: 66; Schweizer 1984: 12; Marshall 1978: 43; and Kittel, TDNT 1:215–16, who cites Polybius 3.32.2; Josephus, Against Apion 1.10 §53 and Life 65 §357. Cadbury 1922a: 501–2 challenges the first two examples directly. This view is present in NIV, NASB, Neu Luther, and Einheitsübersetzung. NKJV and KJV speak of having a "perfect understanding," the most emphatic of all translations, which is really a separate view.

23 Cadbury 1922a: 504 takes ἀκριβῶς with γράψαι in order to solve the contextual problem of his view. So in his view, Luke writes carefully. But word order makes such a connection grammatically unlikely, as Creed 1930: 5 makes clear.

35 Fitzmyer 1981: 300; Creed 1930: 5; Marshall 1978: 44. K. Schmidt, TDNT 1:506, cites the Lucan usage noted above. In the LXX, ἀσφάλεια normally refers to something that is safe or secure (2 Macc. 3:22), as it does in Acts 5:23. Its use in Luke with a verb of knowing points to a psychological goal. It refers to knowing the truth, but doing so securely.

8 1 Chron. 15:24; 2 Chron. 35:8; Neh. 11:12; Fitzmyer 1981: 322; Leaney 1958: 79; Creed 1930: 8. ABD 6:1057–61 records thirty-one individuals with the name Zechariah in the OT and Judaism, four of whom are also mentioned by Josephus (who knows of two more); Schalit 1968: 49.

22 On the structure of this verse and Luke's use of ἐγένετο, see Creed 1930: 9; Klostermann 1929: 6–7; Marshall 1978: 54; BDF §472.3.

35 In Luke's writings: Luke 1:30; 2:10; Acts 18:9; 27:24; elsewhere in the NT: Matt. 1:20; 28:5, 10; Mark 6:50; Rev. 1:17; in the OT: Gen. 15:1; 26:24; Josh. 8:1; Isa. 43:1, 5; 44:2; Jer. 46:27–28; Dan. 10:12. See Balz, TDNT 9:212 §D2c; Marshall 1978: 56; Plummer 1896: 12; Creed 1930: 10.

49 Chiasmus is a pattern that pairs the first and last ideas in a unit and the second and third ideas (e.g., a-b-b´-a´). When a chiasmus has more than four lines, the pairings continue until the ideas merge at the middle. The thought reverses at the middle back up the chain in the opposite direction. Creed 1930: 11 cites A. Loisy as holding this view.

57 M. Tamid 7.2; also 5.4–6.3; Creed 1930: 12; Fitzmyer 1981: 328. See the exegesis of 1:22 for details.

1 There are various ways to list the parallels. With only minor variations, I follow Schürmann's list (1969: 59 n. 132). For other arrangements and discussions, see Tiede 1988: 45–47; R. Brown 1977: 293–98; Schneider 1977a: 48; and Creed 1930: 13.

18 Sibylline Oracles 8.459–72. Klostermann 1929: 13 and Creed 1930: 17 note this ancient interpretation.

37 Creed 1930: 19; Schneider 1977a: 50; Schürmann 1969: 49–50; Fitzmyer 1981: 348–50; Wiefel 1988: 51–52; Ernst 1977: 72; R. Brown 1977: 309. Gewiess, in an appendix to Laurentin's German 1967 edition, interestingly takes a view opposite of Laurentin in the French original and omits Laurentin's own discussion of the question.

48 Creed 1930: 21; R. Brown 1977: 292; Klostermann 1929: 15; BDF §302.1; BDR §302.1.2. The force is that "nothing at all is impossible" for God.

5 Y. Soṭa 20c (5.4) (= Neusner et al. 1982–93: 27.153); Creed 1930: 21; SB 2:101. The idea of singing babies does represent a major expansion of this motif, not paralleled in the OT or NT. On βρέφος as fetus, see Oepke, TDNT 5:637; BAA 293–94; Luke 1:44; Sir. 19:11. In later Judaism, Tg. Ps. 68:27 calls on the fetus in the womb to praise God, while Odes Sol. 28.2 speaks of a child leaping in the womb; Bovon 1989: 85 n. 35.

8 But so argues Creed 1930: 22–23, who draws on the position of Harnack. Also in favor of this view are Danker 1988: 41; Klostermann 1929: 17–18; Bultmann 1963: 296–97; and Luce 1933: 91–92.

18 See the discussion of sources in this unit. Klostermann 1929: 19; Luce 1933: 92; Danker 1988: 43; and Creed 1930: 23. The term can be translated "humiliation" (James 1:10; Acts 8:33), as well as "humble state."

6 Fitzmyer 1981: 380; Klostermann 1929: 23; SB 2:107. Efforts to prove that the grandfather was the most frequent choice, as argue Creed 1930: 24 and Nolland 1989: 79, are not substantiated. Examples of naming after a relative are numerous: after the father: Tob. 1:1, 9; Josephus, Life 1 §5; Jewish War 5.13.2 §534; Antiquities 14.1.3 §10; after a grandfather: 1 Macc. 2:1–2; Jub. 11.15. C. F. Evans 1990: 179, positing Hellenistic assimilation, is entirely too skeptical about the details here.

14 Exod. 13:3; 15:6; Isa. 5:12; 26:11; 31:3; Ps. 28:5; 1 Chron. 28:19; Creed 1930: 25; Marshall 1978: 90. In the NT, Acts 7:50; Lohse, TDNT 9:431 §C3. Schürmann 1969: 83 n. 20 notes that only Luke uses the phrase "the hand of the Lord" in the NT (Acts 11:21; 13:11; in the LXX, Isa. 41:20; 66:14).

2 Major discussions can be found in Fitzmyer 1981: 392–93; R. Brown 1977: 411; Klostermann 1929: 31–32; Creed 1930: 30–32; Schürmann 1969: 103–4, 108–9, 118–19; Marshall 1978: 96–97; Plummer 1896: 46; Nolland 1989: 98–103; and Ernst 1977: 99.

3 Among the candidates for comparison are Cyrus, Romulus and Remus, Mithras, Osiris, Aion, Virgil, Semiramis, and Moses. For discussions see Creed 1930: 30–32; Klostermann 1929: 31–32; Bultmann 1963: 298; Gressmann 1914; and Machen 1930: 348–58 (who has a detailed critique). Virtually no one argues for any direct connection, though most speak of the account's legendary features, because of its supernatural elements.

4 Creed 1930: 37–38 mentions these associations and rejects them, as do Bultmann 1963: 299–300 and Schürmann 1969: 131 n. 244. The comparison was described by Aufhauser 1926 and defended by Garbe 1959: 47–49, but there are just too many differences between these accounts.

11 Most commentators note that Mary's association with purification argues against a view that sees her as an "intact virgin" after Jesus' birth; see 1:34; Creed 1930: 39; Plummer 1896: 63; R. Brown 1977: 436; Fitzmyer 1981: 421.

20 Procksch, TDNT 4:328 n. 3; Creed 1930: 41. Bovon 1989: 143 n. 35 adds Sophocles, Antigone 1268, 1314.

1 The view is old. Those who hold it include Bultmann 1963: 300; Creed 1930: 44; Klostermann 1929: 45; Schürmann 1969: 139; Schneider 1977a: 76; Wiefel 1988: 82; and Fitzmyer 1981: 435–36. About the only one who raises doubts is Marshall 1978: 126. Despite the remarks about sources, Coleridge 1993: 187–213 is certainly correct that from a narrative viewpoint this pericope could not be dropped without substantial loss to the infancy narrative. Jesus' remarks about himself are a fitting climax to the prologue. In Coleridge's words (p. 189), this unit is "the most important" of the infancy narrative.

6 Creed 1930: 44 and Nolland 1989: 129 have typical lists of examples: Cyrus (at ten) in Herodotus 1.114–15; Alexander the Great in Plutarch, Life of Alexander 5 (666–67); Apollonius in Philostratus, Life of Apollonius 1.7; Moses in Josephus, Antiquities 2.9.6 §230, and in Philo, Life of Moses §21; Samuel (at twelve) in Josephus, Antiquities 5.10.4 §348; Solomon (at twelve) in 1 Kings 2:12 LXX; and Josephus (of himself!) in Life 2 §§8–9. To this can be added the account of Augustus in Suetonius, Augustus 94, as Klostermann 1929: 45 notes. Luke's account of Jesus is restrained in comparison to most of these accounts.

2 For characteristic approaches to this issue, often appealing to Q, see Klostermann 1929: 50; Creed 1930: 46–48; Schneider 1977a: 82. Bovon 1989: 165–66 speaks of Q, Mark, and other material. Distinctive is Goulder 1989: 271–72, who argues for Luke's use of Matthew.

9 For discussion of Josephus's text, see Creed 1921–22; F. F. Bruce 1974: 34–35.

14 Creed 1930: 50; Nolland 1989: 141. Tiede 1988: 86 notes the emphasis this idea has in Acts (2:38; 3:19; 5:31; 8:22; 11:18; 17:30; 20:21; 26:20).

2 See, e.g., the treatments of Creed 1930: lvi–lxx; Klostermann 1929: 49; Fitzmyer 1981: 75–81. Detailed studies are Schulz 1972; Polag 1982; Kloppenborg 1988; and Kloppenborg 1987. A commentary on Q is Manson 1949. On the rationale for Q, see Stein 1987. These analyses differ in detail and approach, but all agree that an independent source or set of sources is involved.

6 Bultmann 1963: 246; Creed 1930: 53–54; Lang, TDNT 6:943; Manson 1949: 41. This view usually denies that the historical John saw himself as a precursor to Jesus the Messiah. John was only a prophet warning that the end was near.

31 Creed 1930: 63 cites Acts of Peter 32 and Lucian, Lover of Lies 13, while Fitzmyer 1981: 511 notes Josephus's description of Theudas in Antiquities 20.5.1 §§97–98.

8 Bultmann 1963: 31–32 (where he calls the account an apophthegm or pronouncement story, which he believes grew into this full-blown account); Creed 1930: 65; Schneider 1977a: 106–7; Klostermann 1929: 62; Fitzmyer

1981: 527; Tannehill 1972; C. F. Evans 1990: 266–67 (who notes a series of Lucan expressions in the account); Goulder 1989: 299. For a summary of the recent discussion and a full bibliography on this passage, see Schreck 1989, while Corrington 1993 evaluates a redactional reading of this text with other types of readings.

38 Euripides, Fragments 1086, 1071; Oepke, TDNT 3:205; Creed 1930: 68; Marshall 1978: 187; Cicero, Letters to His Friends 4.5.5; Gen. Rab. 23.4 on 4:23; SB 2:156; P. Oxy. vol. 1 #1 logion 6; Gospel of Thomas 31; Nolland 1979. On ἰατρός, see BAGD 369 §1; BAA 750.

26 Danker 1988: 112 (who calls it a demonic effect); Marshall 1978: 195; Creed 1930: 71; Nolland 1989: 211–12 (who speaks of the presence of "demonic force" as opposed to possession). On the idea of rebuke, see Luke 9:21, 42, 55 (other Lucan uses of ἐπιτιμάω are 4:41; 17:3; 18:15, 39; 19:39; 23:40).

27 Παραχρῆμα occurs sixteen times in Luke–Acts and elsewhere in the NT only twice at Matt. 21:19–20; Plummer 1896: 157; Creed 1930: 71. Ἐφίστημι appears eighteen times in Luke–Acts and not at all in Mark or Matthew; Schramm 1971: 88.

5 Creed 1930: 73 mentions J. Wellhausen as holding this view. Luce 1933: 127 also discusses this option.

50 BAGD 83–84; BAA 167; Godet 1875: 1.326; Creed 1930: 95; Marshall 1978: 264; Fitzmyer 1981: 640; Schürmann 1969: 355 n. 90; Bultmann, TDNT 2:533–34.

9 Marshall 1978: 285 notes that Luke 19:34; 22:61; and 24:3 are not exceptions to this observation, though he also notes that the final decision is still open; Creed 1930: 104. Hahn 1969: 81–82 argues that Luke, though introducing the title himself, reflects traditional usage.

11 BAGD 759; BAA 1516; Creed 1930: 104; Gen. 50:26; T. Reub. 7.2; MM 581. A plank is in view because the man arises directly upon Jesus' call.

22 Creed 1930: 108 adds that, if the remarks are Jesus', then the reference to hearing should contextually refer to Jesus' comment about John and not to the response to John's ministry, a connection that is very unlikely, given the reference to John's baptism in 7:29.

24 Creed 1930: 108. Against this idea is Schrenk, TDNT 1:635, who ties the phrase to God's will, so that the idea is that "they rejected God's will for themselves." Word order favors Creed, though there is not much difference in the options.

28 Leaney 1958: 145; Godet 1875: 1.354–55; Creed 1930: 108; Schürmann 1969: 423–24; Fitzmyer 1981: 680. Geldenhuys 1951: 231 n. 15 notes that the couplet has rhyme in Aramaic.

25 Among those who argue for breaking up the account are Creed 1930: 111–12; Luce 1933: 162–63 (who argues that Luke confused two points here); and Ernst 1977: 258–59.

8 Creed 1930: 112–13 cites καὶ ἐγένετο (it came to pass), καθεξῆς (afterward), διοδεύω (to travel through), εὐαγγελίζω (to preach the good news), and ἀσθένεια (weakness) as Lucan vocabulary.

17 Only Luke has this variation. Matthew uses ἐπί for the last three soils, while Mark has εἰς for the last two. Creed 1930: 114–15 notes a possible Semitism in ἐποίησεν καρπόν (yielded fruit) (see Luke 3:8).

37 Creed 1930: 116 notes that Luke uses both σατανᾶς and διάβολος. In fact, Luke uses each term seven times in Luke–Acts; Bovon 1989: 408 n. 32. It is hard to explain this difference as a conscious change because of stylistic preference; so correctly Marshall 1978: 325.

1 Those who see an anthology in Mark 4 will see less value in such a chronological note as this; so, e.g., Creed 1930: 119. At the least Mark indicates that the event took place in a setting that followed some type of parabolic kingdom teaching, a setting not unlikely, given that Jesus taught throughout the region.

2 Creed 1930: 120 and Luce 1933: 170–71 both call it a "strange story" and a "popular tale"; see also Bultmann 1963: 210–11. Plummer 1896: 228 lists nine explanations offered for the material.

27 Mark has ἔρχονται(they came), Luke ἔρχεται (he came). Creed 1930: 123 notes that this is the only historic present in Luke, a common construction in Mark.

33 Plummer 1896: 235; Marshall 1978: 344; Fitzmyer 1981: 746; Bovon 1989: 445–46 (who argues that Luke may be responsible for it); Creed 1930: 123; and Hendriksen 1978: 466 appear undecided. Arndt 1956: 246 and A. B. Bruce 1897: 525 are for inclusion. Schürmann 1969: 490 n. 137; Ellis 1974: 130; and Luce 1933: 173 omit it.

2 Creed 1930: 132–33 cites E. Meyer's complaint about the "rationalistic prejudice" of some critics in the 1920s.

27 Creed 1930: 145 argues that Matt. 10:10 is different from Luke, since it mentions food. This view ignores Matt. 10:11, which speaks of finding a worthy house and staying there.

54 Such efforts, beginning with Harnack, regard this verse as too harsh a literary transition. This view appeals to the church fathers, who often cite the phrase and reverse the position of the Son and Father. Creed 1930: 147–48 rightly rejects such attempts because they are without strong external textual support; see also Schweizer, TDNT 8:372 n. 276. Marshall 1978: 435 notes that Marcion and codex N reverse the expression in Luke, while Justin Martyr and codex N reverse it in Matthew; for more reversal passages in the fathers, see Grundmann 1963: 218 n. 16.

62 The RSV and NRSV read seventy; see also Schweizer 1984: 174; Danker 1988: 212 (who attributes the number seventy-two to Moses' addition of two elders when he appointed his seventy [Num. 11:26] and sees Gentile symbolism in the choice); Tiede 1988: 200–201; Ellis 1974: 155–56; C. F. Evans 1990: 444–45; Schürmann 1994: 54. The NIV reads seventy-two; also Manson 1949: 74; Liefeld 1984: 940; Hendriksen 1978: 570–71 ("leans" this way); Creed 1930: 144; Arndt 1956: 280; Ernst 1977: 331; Marshall 1978: 414–15 (who has a good summary of the issue); Fitzmyer 1985: 845–46; Wiefel 1988: 195; C. A. Evans 1990: 172; Nolland 1993a: 546. Those who are undecided include Luce 1933: 198–99; Plummer 1896: 272; and Schneider 1977a: 235 (who argues that a decision is less than certain).

2 Creed misses the point when he says that Jesus' goal is to say that anyone is your neighbor. The answer includes this and more. Klostermann 1929: 118–19 makes the same error in seeing the point as only that the compassionate Samaritan is closer to the kingdom than is the representative of Judaism.

19 BAGD 296–97 and BAA 601–2. Creed 1930: 157 notes objections to saying that the evangelists coined the term, citing a disputed papyrus reading of a fragmentary text (Preisigke #5224). Fitzmyer 1985: 905–6 lists three possible etymologies: ἐπί + οὐσία = “necessary”; ἐπί + οὖσα = “for today” (supplying ἡμέρα [day] to make a complete idea); ἐπί + present participle of εἶμι (to come) = “for the coming day” (with ἡμέρα again supplied to complete the thought). Determining the etymology is not crucial, since a word’s meaning is not determined by etymology.

5 Creed 1930: 159 speaks of Q here, as does Manson 1949: 83. The amount of Matthean-Lucan agreement makes this source connection likely, though whether it is Q or another shared tradition is debatable (Matthean prioritists see Matthew as the likely source). Grundmann 1963: 236–37 correctly notes that Matthew is closer to Luke than to Mark (see also Easton 1913, as discussed in n. 1 above). Fitzmyer 1985: 918 argues for Lucan additions in 11:16, but is uncertain about it in 11:14, 21–22. Additional source material cannot be ruled out. Tiede 1988: 216 notes that Matt. 12:23 and Mark 3:11 stress Christology, while Luke emphasizes controversy with the leadership; but Luke also has strong Christology in light of the parable in 11:21–23. Of the three accounts, Mark has less confrontation than the other two.

10 An older solution regards the reference to Jonah as a textual corruption that originally referred to John the Baptist, but there is no manuscript evidence for this understanding. Creed 1930: 163 seems attracted to this view. Fitzmyer 1985: 931–39 presents the various options on source and tradition history.

16 Θεραπεία refers to a body of servants only here in the NT; cf. Esth. 5:2b [= 15:16 NRSV]; BAGD 359 §2; BAA 729 §2; Creed 1930: 177.

1 Ellis 1974: 184; Danker 1988: 259; Tiede 1988: 247; Creed 1930: 180. In addition to the Josephean references in the list in the exegesis of 13:1, see also Life 17 §92.

5 Luke 5:15; 8:2; 11:14; 13:12; Matt. 8:17. Demonic influence may be a better description than demonic possession, because it is not behavior but a diseased condition that is the point; Luke 4:33, 38–39; 2 Cor. 12:7. Weakness is produced by the evil spirit; 1QapGen 20.17, 21–29; Stählin, TDNT 1:493; Marshall 1978: 557. Fitzmyer 1985: 1012 calls the genitival ἀσθενείας (weakness) an Aramaism; see Creed 1930: 183. Nolland 1993a: 724 suggests that the number eighteen may be conventional (2 x 9 = "a long time"); Judg. 3:13–14; 10:8; 20:25, 44; 2 Sam. 8:13. This is possible, but not certain.

10 Ἀνορθόω is limited to OT quotations in its other NT uses: Acts 15:16; Heb. 12:12; Creed 1930: 183; Klostermann 1929: 145. It was used commonly in medical situations; LSJ 147.

9 M. B. Qam. 5.6 is not parallel, since that passage deals with legal damages, not the Sabbath; so correctly Creed 1930: 189. B. Šab. 128b gives both rulings: one that allows and one that forbids help (also m. Šab. 18.2). This was a debated point among Jews, even in the fifth century.

7 Τὸ ἐπιβάλλον means "that which falls to me"; Tob. 3:17; 6:12; P. Oxy. vol. 4 #715 lines 13–15; Creed 1930: 198; Hauck, TDNT 1:529; MM 235; Fitzmyer 1985: 1087. As a noun, οὐσίας refers to property; Tob. 14:13; 3

Macc. 3:28; Josephus, Antiquities 7.5.5 §114. On διεῖλεν (he divided), see Schlier, TDNT 1:184.

13 The hapax legomenon ἀσώτως speaks of a debauched, profligate life (BAGD 119; BAA 239; Prov. 7:11; 28:7), and so Luke 15:30 speaks of the son's time with prostitutes. Conceptual parallels are found in Eph. 5:18; Titus 1:6; 1 Pet. 4:4; Creed 1930: 199; Foerster, TDNT 1:507, esp. n. 4.

4 On the debate in older commentaries, see Creed 1930: 202–3, who holds that 16:9–13 was added later. Blomberg 1990: 245–47 builds a case for unity.

17 Ernst 1977: 464; Klostermann 1929: 163; and Creed 1930: 204 argue that the variation is only for literary value; but ancient parables were based on daily life, so the point may not be an either/or proposition. Derrett 1970: 66, 69 also defends a much higher charge for oil.

28 Luke 16:10–11 makes clear that dishonesty is not the only point, but also faithfulness at every level of stewardship (see also 16:12). Creed 1930: 205 may unduly limit the application to wealth only, a point that is explicit only in 16:11.

21 Creed 1930: 207 adopts this meaning, but regards it as unlikely that Jesus said it. On the endurance of the law in Judaism, see Bar. 4:1; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 9.37; 2 Bar. 77.15.

23 The penalty was apparently never carried out in Jesus' time since Jews did not have the right to execute capital punishment under Roman rule; Creed 1930: 208. The idea of such punishment still remains, as Jub. 30.8–9 shows. The standard was to pursue holiness. Such an act of adultery rendered a woman defiled (Jub. 33.9; m. Sot\;a 2.6; 5.1). In fact, these Mishnah texts almost require divorce for the adulterous wife since she becomes unclean to the husband. Thus, adultery was seen as extremely serious in Judaism (on the Greco-Roman view of adultery tied to shame, see Nolland 1993a: 818).

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1136–37 argues that all of the material is from Q, but that 17:2 has been influenced by Mark 9:42. Marshall 1978: 640 agrees that Q and Mark overlap in 17:1–2 and also sees (pp. 642, 643–44) the rest of 17:3–6 as coming from Q, though he entertains the possibility that Q has various forms from which Matthew and Luke drew. Creed 1930: 215 sees Q and Mark 11:23 exercising influence in 17:5–6. Ernst 1977: 477–80 sees 17:1–3a as coming from either Q or a form of oral tradition that circulated in a variety of forms, 17:3b–4 as rooted in Jesus' teaching, and triple tradition (i.e., Mark and Q) influencing 17:5–6. Ellis 1974: 207 speaks of Mark and Q in 17:1–4 and regards Luke's special source as responsible for 17:5–10. Egelkraut 1976: 120–21 speaks of Q/Mark overlap in 17:1–2 and multiple tradition in 17:5–6. Grundmann 1963: 331 suggests that it is hard to know if Q or Luke's special material is responsible for the unit, except for 17:7–10, which is L. Grundmann sees its roots in material earlier than the versions of Matthew and Mark. All of this assumes that only one form of these sayings existed in the tradition and that it emerged from a single saying. If this was a theme repeated by Jesus, multiple renderings could well exist.

17 Against Creed 1930: 215, who argues that Luke's saying is like Matt. 21:21 and that Luke has turned the fig tree into a sycamine tree. This saying does come with some variety, but this is only a problem if we assume that the saying had only one original form. If the tradition has complex roots, then we may only be seeing a rich conceptual field for the imagery.

11 Creed 1930: 218–19; Sneed 1962; Dalman 1909: 145–47; Dodd 1961: 62–63 (who later switched to view 2). See Mattill 1979: 193 and Beasley-Murray 1986: 101 for details on the Gospel of Thomas, Origen, Chrysostom, Athanasius, Ambrose, Jerome, and Luther.

11 Another Lucan parable (11:8) with this construction and theme also uses διά γε (yet because) in the second portion of the statement; Creed 1930: 223.

7 Creed 1930: 229 says that the use of the optative in an indirect question and the use of πυνθάνομαι (to inquire) are Lucan (only three NT uses of πυνθάνομαι are non-Lucan: Luke 15:26; Acts 4:7; 10:18, 29; 21:33; 23:19, 20, 34; Matt. 2:4; John 4:52; 13:24); BAGD 729; BAA 1459.

21 Fitzmyer 1985: 1337 is against a source. Creed 1930: 255 and Leaney 1958: 260 say Luke inserted the phrase because he was detailing what was sketched in previous verses. Marshall 1978: 764–65 speaks of the great puzzlement that this addition has caused and mentions the possible influence of another source (also Schramm 1971: 174–75). Perhaps this one source had the two eschatological discourses that Luke reflects. But what caused the difference? Did Luke or his source supply a clarifying stylistic break? Either option is possible.

1 Those arguing for an additional source are Fitzmyer 1985: 1456–58 (but not in 22:54–62); Creed 1930: 276 (maybe); Marshall 1978: 839–40, 845, 848; Grundmann 1963: 416, 418–19; Ernst 1977: 612–13, 616, 618; Nolland 1993b: 1092–93, 1098–99, 1104–5; and J. Green 1988: 276. Soards

1987: 100–120 argues for a mixture of tradition, Marcan rewriting, and Lucan rewriting. The classic study on this issue is V. Taylor 1972. Dissent about an extra source outside of some oral material comes from R. Brown 1994: 581–83. Most of Luke's changes (e.g., 22:63–65) reflect his style and vocabulary. But all that this shows is Luke's hand on his sources, not whether additional information existed. Brown sees the "game" in 22:64 as evidence of the presence of oral tradition (see the exegesis). But why limit it here, given evidence of sources throughout this material?

14 This Matthean–Lucan agreement causes some commentators (e.g., Creed 1930: 277–78) so much trouble that they go to great lengths to explain away the agreement for fear it challenges Marcan priority.

10 The main argument for Creed's view is the mention of "other women with them" (24:10), which may refer to those who reported the women's story or to the larger group of women who followed Jesus as disciples (8:1–3).

23 Ἄφαντος is used in 2 Macc. 3:34 of angels and in Greco-Roman literature of disappearing gods: Euripides, Orestes 1496; Euripides, Helen 605–6; Virgil, Aeneid 9.656–58; Creed 1930: 297; Marshall 1978: 898; Danker 1988: 394; Klostermann 1929: 238; Grundmann 1963: 447. On departures of transcendent or transported figures, see Luke 1:38; 2:15; 9:33; Acts 10:7; 12:10; and esp. 8:39; Nolland 1993b: 1206.

1 Plummer 1896: 106; Manson 1949: 46 (who strongly defends this view); Dupont 1968: 97–115 (who argues for a middle course between literalism and parable); Carson 1984: 111; Nolland 1989: 177 (who defends the plausibility of Jesus' reporting this event to his disciples). On the other end of the spectrum apparently is Crossan (1991), who does not even discuss this event in his portrayal of Jesus. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 133–34 [Matt.], 278–80 [Luke]) places all the sayings of this unit in black type, thereby indicating rejection of a tie to Jesus. The consensus of the seminar is that the text is legendary, like Greco-Roman biography, and that the sayings were authored by Q following the LXX. The seminar calls it an "ordeal story," but this generic form category does not explain the explicit uniqueness of this confrontation account, a point that negates this argument. Manson 1949: 45–46 rightly challenges the description of the account as legendary (see the discussion of form below). LXX citations reflect only Luke's sensitivity to his Greek audience and are not evidence of the text's origin, since MT renderings would work (Nolland 1989: 177).

11 Schramm 1971: 37; Marshall 1978: 179. Ernst 1977: 168–69 sees Luke's hand in many but not all changes. Bovon 1989: 207–8 sees an additional source beyond Mark, either Q or special Lucan material, and despairs of being able to sort out what came from where, beyond the basic elements in 4:18–22 and 4:25–27 originating in the additional source. Crossan 1991 fails to discuss this text, a significant omission in a life-of-Jesus study. This omission may well suggest that Crossan regards none of it as going back to Jesus.

10 Nolland 1989: 204 notes that in the ancient world exorcism falls between magic (Paris Magic Papyrus, lines 3007–85) and medicine (Philostratus, Life of Apollonius 4.20; Josephus, Jewish War 7.6.3 §185). Jews and non-Jews believed in magic (Josephus, Antiquities 8.2.5 §§45–49; Lucian, Lover of Lies 16, 30–31). But these healings often included potions or other aids that Jesus does not use. The healer in Lucian's account, a Syrian from Palestine, charged a large fee for the service. Lucian also notes the exorcist's use of "Egyptian works" and "imprecations in the Egyptian language." Surveying recent work on the question, Crossan 1991: 304–10 compares magic, miracle, and medicine and equates miracle to magic. But this grossly underestimates Jesus. The range of Jesus' miracles suggests the presence of power far beyond anything magical. Jesus does not rely on potions or aids, but uses only his word. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 42) argues that because Jesus did not use magical formulas or incantations, the disciples did not preserve his actual words for the exorcism. But the logic of this argument for a lack of remembrance is not clear or compelling. The very dissimilarity of Jesus' style compared to other such events in the ancient world might make what he did say memorable.

18 Crossan 1971–72: 293 argues that Jesus' original parable was altered into an example story in the tradition and redaction, a theory that makes too much of a distinction between the actions that set up the story and the point made from it. For Crossan, the original parable by Jesus was only about seeing the possibility that a Samaritan could be good. According to Crossan, the lesson that others could enter the kingdom was the key parabolic insight. The point is correct, though overstated, but Crossan's tradition history is not on target.

1 Also Schulz 1972: 391–98; Crossan 1973: 72; Fitzmyer 1985: 1052. Jeremias 1963a: 63–64, 176 argues that the Gospel of Thomas may be more original than Matthew, except for its expansion of excuses. The Thomas parable is closer to Luke than to Matthew and so is often discussed with Luke's version, but it introduces a fourth figure who cannot come to the banquet. Thomas gives no setting, since the document is just a list of teachings. But the excuses in Thomas use more urban imagery; Luke's use of agrarian imagery fits Jesus' tendency to use agrarian illustrations. Horsley 1987: 180 sees Luke as the more original of the versions, noting that the economically prosperous are the excluded; so also the Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 352), though it regards the symposium-table setting as Lucan.

3 For unity are Marshall 1978: 633–34 and Grobel 1963–64. Bultmann 1963: 178 denies unity (although he says that Luke received a unified story), wrongly assuming that a parable can only have one point. Crossan 1973: 66–67 and B. Scott 1989: 142–46 argue that 16:19–26 go back to Jesus and 16:27–31 to the early church, citing conceptual ties to Luke 24. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 360–62) makes a similar break, printing 16:19–26 in gray type (arguing that its roots may go back to Jesus) and 16:27–31 in black type (arguing that these verses were added later and are inauthentic). For refutation, see Pilgrim 1981: 114–15 and Hock 1987: 454–55.

7 This pericope contains no allusion to infant baptism (Marshall 1978: 682; Schweizer 1984: 285; Tiede 1988: 309–10; and Fitzmyer 1985: 1193 correctly challenge Jeremias 1960: 54; Cullmann 1950: 76–78; and Grundmann 1963: 353), though by implication a child's spiritual responses should be encouraged and accepted. Jeremias notes the use of κωλύω in baptismal settings (Matt. 3:14; Acts 8:36; 10:47; 11:17), but in Luke 18, the point is blessing, not baptism (against the Jesus Seminar [Funk and Hoover 1993: 370], who import a baptismal sense here; see the discussion of sources and historicity above).

12 Godet 1875: 1.137; Plummer 1896: 65; Fitzmyer 1981: 426. In favor of this view is Cutler 1966. New Testament uses of the name include Luke 3:30; Acts 13:1; 15:14; 2 Pet. 1:1; Rev. 7:7. Simon is a variation of the name.

28 Dahl 1966 studies Luke's presentation of this figure and argues that Luke faithfully presents Abraham as the OT did.

13 The OT term is often translated "turn" or "return." One could easily paraphrase the idea as a change in one's point of view. Such a change manifests itself concretely in action according to Luke 3:10–14 and Acts 26:20. On the ethical thrust of such rites in Judaism, see Dahl 1955. Jesus made it clear that the church's concept and message of repentance are rooted in the OT (Luke 24:44–47).

6 Dalman 1909: 143–44 notes this suggestion by A. Meyer, who appeals to Aramaic נְטִיר (nēṭîr, observation) and בִּנְטִיר (binṭîr, secretly) in Tg. Job 4:12.

11 Creed 1930: 218–19; Sneed 1962; Dalman 1909: 145–47; Dodd 1961: 62–63 (who later switched to view 2). See Mattill 1979: 193 and Beasley-Murray 1986: 101 for details on the Gospel of Thomas, Origen, Chrysostom, Athanasius, Ambrose, Jerome, and Luther.

10 On mourners, see m. Meg. 4.3; Danby 1933: 206 nn. 9–10. M. Ketub. 4.4 argues that a minimum of two flutes and one wailing woman should be present; also Ṣemaḥot 12.5 (= Zlotnick 1966: 81). T. Judah 26.3 protests against too much extravagance in the funeral procession for Judah.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 53–57; F. F. Bruce 1988: 6–13 (of Acts); Bovon 1989: 23; Kümmel 1975: 151; Danker 1988: 17–18; Tiede 1980: 1–18, 70; Maddox 1982: 6–9; Esler 1987: 27–29; C. A. Evans 1990: 2; C. F. Evans 1990: 14; L. Johnson 1991: 2–3.

29 Ps. 110:1; Mark 16:5; Marshall 1978: 55; Klostermann 1929: 7. Danker 1988: 29 is wrong to call it the side of divine authority; this is the meaning only when one is at the right side of God, though the altar does represent approaching God.

50 See Dan. 7:16 and Job 1:6 for the idea of direct access to God or his angels; R. Brown 1977: 262; Danker 1988: 32.

2 Danker 1988: 34, more agnostic, says an attempt to trace the account back to Mary is “pure speculation,” but the attempt to argue Lucan invention is “sheer conjecture.” Tiede 1988: 47 notes that the argument that the tradition had contact with Mary cannot be proved or disproved.

49 Jer. 32:17 MT is close in force to the genitive expression here. So the genitive may reflect a Semitic original behind Luke and suggest that he is not responsible for the material in the section; Marshall 1978: 72; Danker 1988: 40; see additional note.

50 BAGD 205; BAA 413; Acts 2:18 from the Joel 2 citation; 1 Sam. 1:11 (Hannah). Mary’s remarks recall Hannah. The figure also is used of Israel in Isa. 65:13–15 (Danker 1988: 40).

12 R. Brown 1977: 333; Danker 1988: 41; BAGD 486; BAA 988 §1b; Luke 6:20–22.

8 But so argues Creed 1930: 22–23, who draws on the position of Harnack. Also in favor of this view are Danker 1988: 41; Klostermann 1929: 17–18; Bultmann 1963: 296–97; and Luce 1933: 91–92.

18 See the discussion of sources in this unit. Klostermann 1929: 19; Luce 1933: 92; Danker 1988: 43; and Creed 1930: 23. The term can be translated “humiliation” (James 1:10; Acts 8:33), as well as “humble state.”

23 Danker 1988: 43–44; Ellis 1974: 76; Klostermann 1929: 20; Godet 1875: 1.104–5; Plummer 1896: 33; Marshall 1978: 84. It must be remembered that Luke presented the passage as Mary’s words, so he must expect them to be read prophetically. Here is another failure of the view (1b) that argues for a reference to Jesus’ work in the past.

29 Danker 1988: 48–49; Plummer 1896: 42; Hauck, TDNT 5:491 n. 24, 493. The combination is found elsewhere in Wis. 9:3 and Eph. 4:24. God seeks righteousness and worship even among the heathen: Acts 13:10, 16; 24:25; 10:35, 43; Schrenk, TDNT 2:199. In the OT, Josh. 24:14 is similar in thrust; Nolland 1989: 88.

31 Danker 1988: 49; Leaney 1958: 24 (who suggests that this hymn originally was tied to Anna [2:38], but then the question is why move it and bring in John the Baptist). Levi is referred to as a priest-king, fulfilling the Maccabean model. Evil king-priests of the Most High appear in T. Moses 6.1.

43 This is the point of the connection to Luke 1:77; Godet 1875: 1.117. On the verse as a whole, see Danker 1988: 50–51. C. Schneider, TDNT 3:443, argues that the image is a figure for mourning. Those who sit in darkness are those who mourn the presence of death. Whether this particular picture is present is less likely given the OT background.

7 All but three NT uses are Lucan: Luke 21:34; 24:4; Acts 12:7; 23:11; 1 Thess. 5:3; 2 Tim. 4:2, 6; Marshall 1978: 109; Danker 1988: 56–57.

17 Note the similar description of Joseph of Arimathea in Luke 23:51, while Acts 4:36, 9:31, and 15:31 describe consolation or encouragement as a characteristic of the believer in day-to-day life, a different force than here. Danker 1988: 64 notes the contact with Luke 6.

18 Jer. 31:31–33 [as writing the law on the heart]; Joel 2:28–32 [3:1–5 MT]; 1QS 4.21–22; Danker 1988: 64; SB 2:126–27; R. Meyer, TDNT 6:816–20, 826–27. On the view of some in ancient Judaism that the Spirit's revelatory work ceased sometime before the Maccabean period, see 1 Macc. 9:27; 14:41.

30 R. Brown 1977: 461; Hendriksen 1978: 170; Danker 1988: 68. Jeremias in his later TDNT article, 6:541–42, revised his view.

31 Acts 13:45; 28:19, 22; Danker 1988: 69. In the OT, examples of the image of opposition are found in Isa. 65:2 and Hos. 4:4.

9 Danker 1988: 74; Plummer 1896: 74. BDF §305 discusses the distributive use of κατά that is present here.

15 Danker 1988: 75 notes the difference in wording, but still thinks a hint exists about the future; Fitzmyer 1981: 441. Luke 9:22 is an example of the different phrasing. Bovon 1989: 156 also sees no allusion to the resurrection.

19 Luke 4:43 [to preach the kingdom of God]; 9:22 [to suffer, die, and be raised]; 13:33 [he must go to Jerusalem]; 17:25 [to suffer]; 19:5 [to remain with Zacchaeus]; 22:37 [to be reckoned with criminals]; 24:7 [to suffer, die, and be raised]; 24:26 [to suffer and come into glory]; 24:44 [that Scripture about him be fulfilled]; Danker 1988: 77.

9 Ps. 58:4 [58:5 MT]; 140:3 [140:4 MT]; Matt. 3:7 [the parallel to this pericope]; Luce 1933: 110; Danker 1988: 86; SB 1:114–15; Foerster, TDNT 2:815–16. Acts 28:3 refers to a poisonous snake.

30 Descent into Hades 11. Other notations from ancient writers include Tacitus, Annals 2.42; and Pliny, Natural History 12.32 §§63–65. Emperors sometimes warned against abuses: Tiberius said, “The sheep are to be shorn, not fleeced”; Dio Cassius 57.10.5; Suetonius, Tiberius 32; Danker 1988: 88.

26 Danker 1988: 112 (who calls it a demonic effect); Marshall 1978: 195; Creed 1930: 71; Nolland 1989: 211–12 (who speaks of the presence of “demonic force” as opposed to possession). On the idea of rebuke, see Luke 9:21, 42, 55 (other Lucan uses of ἐπιτιμάω are 4:41; 17:3; 18:15, 39; 19:39; 23:40).

12 Danker 1988: 115 argues that the phrase equals the expression good news of the kingdom in 4:43. This is possible, given the Lucan form of the parable of the seed in 8:4–15. For Bovon 1989: 230–31, it is God’s saving message and covenant promise that are in view.

19 Danker 1988: 128–29 and Luce 1933: 136 overdraw the difference. Marshall 1978: 227 is more balanced.

32 Danker 1988: 131 alludes to the promises of Ezek. 34:20–24 and 37:24–28 as helpful background. Jesus is more than a prophet or teacher.

43 Among those who support this approach are Schürmann 1969: 302; Vogt 1959; Buchanan and Wolfe 1978; and apparently Danker 1988: 130. Marshall 1978: 230 is uncertain of the origin.

20 Danker 1988: 137 notes that Jesus' ultimate battle is with Satan (Col. 1:12–14).

40 Danker 1988: 145 still sees this background in Luke. Marshall 1978: 261 holds out the possibility of separate sayings.

52 Danker 1988: 150 cites Epictetus 2.14.12–13 to show how the Greeks viewed imitation of the gods: "It is of prime importance for those who would please and obey the deities to be as much like them as lies within their power. If fidelity is a divine characteristic, then they are to be faithful; if generous, they are to be generous; if beneficent, they are to be beneficent; if magnanimous, they are to be magnanimous. In brief, they are to do and say everything in emulation of God." Christianity also has this goal in the context of monotheism, but in addition offers enablement to make it happen (John 14–16).

59 Democritus, Fragments 60. Danker 1988: 153–54 also notes Diogenes Laertius 1.36; Menander, Fragment 710; Petronius, Satyricon 57; and Persius, Satires 4.23–24.

37 Danker gives this view as an option in 1988: 169, unlike the more definitive statement in the first edition of his commentary (1972: 98–99).

20 Luke 15:20; Acts 20:37. Paul calls it the "holy kiss": Rom. 16:16; 1 Cor. 16:20; Danker 1988: 171.

25 Others suggest that ἵνα indicates result. So Danker 1988: 177 argues that ἵνα expresses not purpose, but tragic realization; but see 9:45 and 11:50. Jeremias 1963a: 17 suggests that the parables' purpose is to fulfill the scriptural promise and thus he sees an ellipse. However, the Isaiah passage is key and is negative. Judgment is expressed here because of hardness of heart.

4 So also Danker 1988: 179 (with a little hesitancy); Ellis 1974: 127. Fitzmyer 1981: 725 rightly rejects this view, as do Schürmann 1969: 470 n. 197; Marshall 1978: 332; and Wiefel 1988: 162.

26 Arndt 1956: 243 argues that their consciences feared more distress from God's presence. Hendriksen 1978: 449 calls such fear sinful, because they showed no interest in the exorcised man. Danker 1988: 183 notes that a reference to possessions is unstated in Luke.

33 Arndt 1956: 240–41 speaks of many commands; Danker 1988: 182 of an ingressive imperfect ("he began to command" or "was about to command"), which is probably better; so also Fitzmyer 1981: 738; BDF §328, §329, §331. Bovon 1989: 435 n. 44 calls the choice very difficult, a judgment with which I concur.

17 The opposite of a testimony against someone is found in 5:14, where the leper is to testify to God's work; Danker 1988: 190.

4 Danker 1988: 205 cites the following exchange from Diogenes Laertius 1.36: when the philosopher Thales was asked if one could hide an evil deed from God, he answered, "No, not even the thought."

2 Danker 1988: 207–8; Fitzmyer 1981: 828. BAGD 57 and BAA 112 note that ἀναλήμψεως, a NT hapax legomenon, alludes to the ascension. The LXX uses it of Elijah's departure (2 Kings 2:9, 11; 1 Macc. 2:58; Sir. 48:9; 49:14). For more discussion, see the additional note on 9:51.

22 See Matthew's synonymous phrase child of the kingdom (Matt. 13:38). Child of peace focuses on what one has, while child of the kingdom describes where one resides. Danker 1960–61; Klassen 1980–81. SB 2:166 notes parallel Semitic phrases like child of power, child of knowledge, child of Haggadah, and child of the future world.

62 The RSV and NRSV read seventy; see also Schweizer 1984: 174; Danker 1988: 212 (who attributes the number seventy-two to Moses' addition of two elders when he appointed his seventy [Num. 11:26] and sees Gentile symbolism in the choice); Tiede 1988: 200–201; Ellis 1974: 155–56; C. F. Evans 1990: 444–45; Schürmann 1994: 54. The NIV reads seventy-two; also Manson 1949: 74; Liefeld 1984: 940; Hendriksen 1978: 570–71 ("leans" this way); Creed 1930: 144; Arndt 1956: 280; Ernst 1977: 331; Marshall 1978: 414–15 (who has a good summary of the issue); Fitzmyer 1985: 845–46; Wiefel 1988: 195; C. A. Evans 1990: 172; Nolland 1993a: 546. Those who are undecided include Luce 1933: 198–99; Plummer 1896: 272; and Schneider 1977a: 235 (who argues that a decision is less than certain).

21 Danker 1988: 229 suggests that Luke 12:16–21 and 21:1–4 elaborate on the petition. Since disciples recognize that God gives, they are generous with what they receive.

30 Battle imagery with evil angels in the OT includes Isa. 24:22–23; in Judaism, T. Sim. 6.6 and T. Zeb. 9.8. Plummer 1896: 303; Danker 1988: 233; and Schürmann 1994: 243 see an allusion to Isa. 49:25–26. The battle imagery is similar, but the application to spiritual forces does not fit Isaiah's language in 49:26a, which clearly pictures humans. At best, Isaiah shows the principle involved. Such a move with imagery, however, is not surprising; see Luke 1:67–79 and Bock 1993. The point in the language for Luke is how Jesus, as God's representative, is God's victorious warrior.

17 Πονηρός is used in 11:29 to describe the evil generation; Danker 1988: 237. The term's repeated use and the internal contrast make the meaning "generous" for ἁπλοῦς impossible; against Fitzmyer 1985: 940. The point is not the eye's "generosity" but its reception of good or evil.

6 Paul responds similarly when he allows the Corinthian church to appoint a believer to arbitrate a lawsuit (1 Cor. 6:4–6; Danker 1988: 247). In fact, he regards the church to have failed if the matter goes to an outside arbitrator. Note also that, in Acts 6:1–4, a church's social problem is solved internally.

11 Grundmann 1963: 263 notes the contrast of Jesus' position to the Stoics, who tried to live without possessions and who tried to have no need of other people, so they could be "like the gods"; Diogenes Laertius 6.104. Danker 1988: 253 notes that monastic withdrawal is not the answer either, since Jesus assumes compassionate engagement with people.

5 See Exod. 12:11 (of Israelites eating Passover); 1 Kings 18:46; 2 Kings 4:29; 9:1; Isa. 59:17; Eph. 6:14; 1 Pet. 1:13; Danker 1988: 253. Plummer 1896: 330 notes the emphatic position of ὑμῶν (your) to indicate a condition: "your loins are to be girded."

7 So Danker 1988: 256 argues, though he minimizes the fire as an image of judgment and emphasizes purification. This point can work only if the purification is seen as coming in judgment.

1 Ellis 1974: 184; Danker 1988: 259; Tiede 1988: 247; Creed 1930: 180. In addition to the Josephean references in the list in the exegesis of 13:1, see also Life 17 §92.

7 For example, Job's friends wrongly but naturally assumed that his initial travail was the consequence of some past sin: Job 4:7; 8:4, 20; 22:5; also Exod. 20:5; Prov. 10:24–25; John 9:1–3; Plummer 1896: 338; Danker 1988: 259; Manson 1949: 273.

7 Danker 1988: 261 notes that the woman might be unclean, in which case Jesus' action would be bold on two counts: one cultural, the other cultic. But the text is not clear on this point.

7 Διαγογγύζω (to grumble) appears in the NT only here and in 19:7. This idea is a significant one in the OT and is often negative in force: Num. 11:1; 14:27, 29 (using the simple γογγύζω); Danker 1988: 274. The word order, with Pharisees first, is unusual; so 5:30, but not 5:21; 6:7; 11:53.

2 Danker 1988: 275 cites F. Preisigke's edition of an ancient letter in which an impecunious son pleads with his mother to be received back into the family: "I am writing to tell you I am naked. I plead with you, forgive me. I know well enough what I have done to myself. I have learned my lesson."

19 Danker 1988: 276 notes a similar appeal to Caesar for clemency in Cicero, On Behalf of Quintus Ligarius 30.

21 Holding the emphatic position in the clause is the reference to the son being distant when spotted. Danker 1988: 277 sees a picture of Jer. 31:18–20 here. Tobit 11:5–6 has a similar observation from a distance.

36 Danker 1988: 285–86 notes that Jesus appears only to his disciples after his resurrection, a point that confirms this emphasis. Even in the Book of Acts, the resurrection is not preached as a bare fact, but as a fulfillment of Scripture, so that the call is always to believe God's promise.

18 Danker 1972: 179 notes that the disciples would have considered the reversal in the question humorous. The image is similar to the president of a company opening the door to the presidential office for the janitor and giving the janitor the presidential chair.

29 On ἀετός, see Lev. 11:13; Deut. 14:12; Job 39:27; Matt. 24:28; BAGD 19; BAA 36; Marshall 1978: 669. Ἀετός can refer to an eagle, but not here, since eagles do not seek out dead meat; Rev. 12:14; 4:7; 8:13; Arndt 1956: 376. Attempts to interpret ἀετός as eagle, recalling the Roman emblem that accompanied the invasion of Jerusalem, assume a post–a.d. 70 date for Luke, as well as suggest an image contextually distant from the metaphor here; but so Danker 1988: 294; Leaney 1958: 232; and Fitzmyer 1985: 1173 (with less certainty).

1 Luke 5:35 alludes to Jesus' death. The death of the Son of Man appears in three of the Lucan passion predictions (9:22; 9:44–45; 17:25; Danker 1988: 302). Three of Luke's passion predictions (9:22; 9:44–45; 18:31–34) have Marcan parallels and are grouped together because they are quite specific.

7 Luke 8:10, 16–17 promises this unveiling to the disciples; Danker 1988: 302. John 2:22 and 12:16 repeat the picture of the disciples' incomprehension, while Luke 2:50 says a similar thing about Jesus' parents.

21 Jeremias 1963a: 62 holds that Jesus' audience interrupted him; so also Plummer 1896: 442, who argues that the crowd thinks Jesus is spoiling the parable; so also Nolland 1993b: 916–17. Klostermann 1929: 189; Marshall 1978: 708; and Danker 1988: 309 hold that the interruption comes from attendants in the parable. If 19:26–27 maintains the parabolic perspective, and 19:27 looks as if it does, then those who react here come from within the parable and comment as a crowd to the king. Of course, since the king represents Jesus, there is no real difference in sense in the choice. If Jesus speaks, he simply gives the parable's lesson.

14 Danker 1988: 312 suggests an additional tie to Isa. 1:3 where, ironically, the ox knows its master but Israel does not. Such an allusion is probably too subtle.

21 Danker 1988: 314 notes a "prophecy" by Demetrius of Phalerum, who predicted the Macedonian victory with similar political sensitivity (Polybius 29.21).

25 Another failure to read the times is found in 12:54–56. Danker 1988: 315 cites 14:15–24 with the note "God had kept his appointment with the city, but Jerusalem's power structure did not show up at the banquet."

21 Danker 1988: 328 cites a similar remark by Aristotle, Nicomachean Ethics 4.1.19 (1120b): "One's generosity is to be evaluated in terms of one's resources."

18 Fitzmyer follows Conzelmann 1960: 126; but correctly Marshall 1978: 762. Danker 1988: 329 notes that the issues of Jerusalem's destruction and the end-time were linked in most people's minds; one suggests the other. Jesus' answer goes beyond the temple. Zmijewski 1972:

93–95 suggests that the reference to the “coming days” in 21:6 suggests an eschatological setting, since ἡμέρα (day) alludes to the day of the Lord. It must be remembered that any judgment that consumed Jerusalem would be seen as catastrophic, so either event—Jerusalem’s fall or the temple’s removal—would suggest severe judgment. The disciples are asking, “When will that judgment come?”

32 Danker 1988: 334 describes a coin of Vespasian and an inscription on the Arch of Titus where a Roman officer, with one foot on his helmet, stands guard by a palm tree under whose branches crouches a woman, the daughter of Zion, weeping over her defeat.

3 Danker 1988: 344 notes that this is the last key meal in Luke (others in 5:27–39; 7:36–50; 11:37–54; 14:1–24), but he overlooks the postresurrection meals in 24:30, 41–43.

15 Danker 1988: 345 and Jeremias 1966: 208–9 argue that in preparation for his coming suffering Jesus did not drink the wine. Schürmann 1952: 63–65, Plummer 1896: 495–96, and Marshall 1978: 798 argue that he did drink the wine.

12 This verse is unique to Luke and reflects an independent source, which Fitzmyer 1985: 1412 calls L. Conceptual parallels are found in Mark 10:45 and Matt. 23:8–10; Marshall 1978: 813–14; Danker 1988: 349–50.

18 But so Fitzmyer 1985: 1419, who speaks of “reconstituted Israel,” and Marshall 1978: 817, who suggests an allusion to the Lord’s Supper, along with many others (those who see a tie to Israel include Ellis 1974: 256 and Danker 1988: 350–51). Dupont 1964: 388 correctly argues against this view. This expectation is continued in the question of Acts 1:6–8 and the remarks of Peter in Acts 3:18–21. Even later Petrine expectation of a new heaven and earth in 2 Pet. 3:10–14, which looks to the ultimate end of history, does not remove this intervening stage when God deals with Israel in bringing it again into the blessing reserved for God's people.

9 Danker 1988: 364 notes the crowd's fickleness in Luke, citing 8:4–15; 9:41; 11:24–30; 12:13–15, 54–59.

7 Danker 1988: 355–56 cites Diogenes Laertius 3.19 and 9.115 for occasions where the accused is silent. See also Wis. 8:12; Ignatius, Ephesians 15.1 and Magnesians 8.2; and Josephus, Antiquities 15.7.5 §235 (R. Brown 1994: 772).

21 That the participants do not even know that they were sitting with Jesus speaks against seeing the messianic banquet here; but so argues Danker 1988: 394.

23 Ἄφαντος is used in 2 Macc. 3:34 of angels and in Greco-Roman literature of disappearing gods: Euripides, Orestes 1496; Euripides, Helen 605–6; Virgil, Aeneid 9.656–58; Creed 1930: 297; Marshall 1978: 898; Danker 1988: 394; Klostermann 1929: 238; Grundmann 1963: 447. On departures of transcendent or transported figures, see Luke 1:38; 2:15; 9:33; Acts 10:7; 12:10; and esp. 8:39; Nolland 1993b: 1206.

8 The shifts occur at Ps. 90:14; 128:5. Marshall 1978: 87 notes that Daube 1956: 201 speaks of mixed forms.

6 On this passage and various views on the authenticity issue, see also Roloff 1970: 55–62; Lohse, TDNT 7:21–24; Lohse 1960: 84–85; Daube 1972–73: 7–8; and France 1971: 46–47.

30 Daube notes Isa. 63:7–19; Sir. 47:12–22 (esp. 47:21–22); 48:1–12 (esp. 48:11); and Luke 1:67–79, where shifts of person occur at the end of lists, as well as the structure of 6:37–38, where the last line is longer than the three preceding lines. I already noted Ps. 127:1–2 LXX in the exegesis of 6:20.

17 Plummer cites Socrates' phrase as πάνυ ὀρθῶς; so also Godet 1875: 1.359 and Bovon 1989: 393 n. 53. However, no reference is given in any of these sources. A check of Thesaurus Linguae Graecae, an electronic database containing most of the extant ancient Greek literature, did not surface the phrase in Socrates. This classical comparison should not be made until the texts are revealed. However, the general rhetorical pattern does fit a type of Socratic interrogation; see Daube 1956: 152; Aristotle, Rhetoric 3.18.2.

18 Michaelis, TDNT 7:379–80, rejects a connection to the Feast of Tabernacles; but see Boobyer 1942: 76–79; Ellis 1974: 143; Daube 1956: 30–32 (though some of his citations involve material that is much later than this period).

26 Through tracing the saying's later tradition history, Harvey 1982b: 211 n. 8 argues that its original context is not certain, but the Matthean and Lucan settings are a natural starting point. There is good cultural precedent in the Essene and other communities for such hospitable reception for traveling religious messengers. Rabbis were forbidden to receive direct wages for their teaching, though such provision was allowed; m. ›Abot 1.13; 4.5; Daube 1956: 395–96.

4 Klostermann 1929: 118 and Egelkraut 1976: 85–90 favor a Lucan reworking of Mark. Schneider 1977a: 247 and Wiefel 1988: 207 see an independent source for the parable and Luke 10:25–28 using Mark. Bultmann 1963: 51; Luce 1933: 204 (citing Q); and Daube 1956: 247–50 see a version like that in Matthew. Zahn 1920: 427; Manson 1949: 259–61; and Jeremias 1963a: 202 see independent incidents or sources. Plummer 1896: 283 calls the possibility of one incident precarious, but not impossible. Fitzmyer 1985: 877–78 clearly ascribes the material to a special Lucan source, but sees only one incident, a distinction that seems hard to insist upon. Marshall 1978: 441 also leans toward two incidents, as do Hendriksen 1978: 591; Liefeld 1984: 942; and Blomberg 1990: 230–31, who speaks of "proem midrash" here. Ellis 1974: 159, though noting that two incidents are probable, regards the exchange as set in Jerusalem, which is possible, since the next account is in Bethany. Grundmann 1963: 221–22 speaks only of an independent source with the parable coming from L, while Ernst 1977: 344–46 leans this way, clearly noting that the parable is from special Lucan material. Nolland 1993a: 580 argues for an original link of neighbor and the parable, but that Luke is responsible for placing the great-commandment discussion here, drawing on Mark 12:28–34. Schürmann 1994: 136–40, 149–50 sees the parable emerging from L material and rooted in Jesus' intention, but 10:25–28 is probably rooted in Mark's account and does not testify to a separate event.

6 Daube 1956: 433 believes that the verse asks simply for a biblical exposition of how the scribe sees the issue; so also Derrett 1970: 224. Daube cites as support m. ʿ*Abod. Zar.* 2.5, where the question "how do you read (קרא)?" seeks a specific scriptural response (though in fact what is asked for in the mishnaic example is a defense of a certain vocalization of the text).

9 Though exceptions do exist; see Jeremias 1963a: 129 and Daube 1955: 334, though his explanation that the father gave property to the younger son but not to the older is not correct, given the end of this verse. On this custom, see Horowitz 1953: 402–21 and Pö;hlmann 1979.

1 Jesus' question is formed like a rabbinic paradox, where two things are opposed to one another and yet both are true; Daube 1956: 158–63.

6 On cutting off the ear, see Horst, TDNT 5:558, and Marshall 1978: 837. Daube 1960: 59–62 argues that such an act is an indirect insult to the master; cf. 2 Sam. 10:4–5.

15 In Martyrdom and Ascension of Isaiah 5.14, Isaiah quietly endures being sawed in two. Other ancients quietly accepting death are Socrates (Plato, Apology 39c) and Stoic philosophers (Epictetus 1.19.8); see Daube 1961: 61–65.

12 Fitzmyer 1981: 623 is skeptical of the new Moses emphasis in Luke, but underplays the Mosaic allusions in Acts. If the motif is present, it is clearer in Matthew than in Luke, though even in Matthew it is not certain. For the motif in Matthew, see Davies and Allison 1988: 423–24; against its presence in Matthew is Carson 1984: 129.

14 Hendriksen 1978: 334 argues for this locale; Marshall 1978: 241–42 calls it possible. Davies and Allison 1988: 422 mention Karn Hattin (Horns of Hattin) as another suggestion, but they prefer not to adopt a specific location, since for them the Matthean sermon is a collected representative sermon, as opposed to a sermon in a single place (see excursus 7 for details). Edersheim 1889: 1.524 argues against Karn Hattin.

4 Ps. 130:1 LXX [131:1 Engl.]; Josephus, Antiquities 16.4.6 §135; Marshall 1978: 529; Deissner, TDNT 4:630–31; Fitzmyer 1985: 980; BAGD 514; BAA 1041; P. Oxy. vol. 14 #1679 line 16 (where it is a term for “wrong”).

4 Such a classification is also used for other sections of Luke 1–2. On such motifs in the Greco-Roman biographical tradition, see H. De Jonge 1977–78; Nolland 1989: 127; C. F. Evans 1990: 222–27. See n. 6 for the ancient texts.

29 Josephus, Jewish War 6.5.3 §§293–96, notes the mysterious opening of the temple doors at midnight on a Passover (but he doesn’t give the year). T. Ben. 9.3 and T. Levi 10.3 refer to a rending of the temple curtain, but these references may be Christian interpolations; see M. De Jonge 1960: 222–26 (repr. pp. 233–37).

5 Delling, TDNT 8:32–33, esp. n. 3, makes it clear that a censure of the predecessors is not in view. He cites the first-century B.C.. historian Diodorus Siculus 1.1.1–3 as a parallel. To this Conzelmann, TDNT 9:596, adds from the same work 1.2.7 and 1.4.4–5.

19 Stylistically this is like some OT phrases, e.g., “advanced in days” (Gen. 18:11; 24:1; Josh. 13:1; 23:1; 1 Kings 1:1); BDF §197; N. Turner 1963: 220 (dative of respect using ἐν); Luke 1:18; 2:36; Delling, TDNT 2:947–50, and esp. n. 42.

23 Bock 1987: 61–62. On conceptual ties reaching back at least to the Palestinian church, see Delling, TDNT 5:836 n. 66. On the issue of possible

Jewish parallels, see Delling, TDNT 7:760 n. 6.

53 Laurentin 1957a: 176–88 (this discussion is only in the French edition). The view is first attested in Gregory of Nyssa in A.D.. 386; PG 46:1140D–41A; R. Brown 1977: 304; and Delling, TDNT 5:834–35, esp. n. 55, who prefers to speak of a "virgin conception" as the most accurate way to describe Luke's portrayal. Wiefel 1988: 53 refers to Ambrose, Expositio Evangelii Secundam Lucam 2 (Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latinorum 32:99), and Augustine, De Sancta Virginitate 4 (Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latinorum 41:327). For the full history of exegesis, see Graystone 1968: 3–36.

54 This view is why Delling makes the distinction described in the previous note.

6 Friedrich, TDNT 6:835 §D.III.2, notes that Elizabeth is filled with the Spirit and cries out like a prophet, actions parallel to Anna in Luke 2 and to Zechariah in his hymn; see also Delling, TDNT 6:130.

17 This last meaning must be clearly indicated by the context, as in Jer. 2:2 (A, B); Delling, TDNT 8:85.

48 The phraseology is Semitic in style, both in using the term ἡμέρα as meaning "time" (BDF §165; Delling, TDNT 2:950) and in using the genitive ἀναδείξεως (R. Brown 1977: 374). The use of ἀναδείξεως to describe his manifesting himself to Israel is the only NT use of the term (Sir. 43:6).

17 For such language to express the end of pregnancy, see Gen. 25:24; Luke 1:57; R. Brown 1977: 398. This is yet another Hebraism; Delling, TDNT 2:950 n. 42.

22 On Luke's love of triads, see Delling, TDNT 8:223–24, esp. n. 58; also Sparks 1936. Of sixty-four such groupings in the NT, seventeen are peculiar to Luke. The note in TDNT argues that the technique goes back to Jesus.

7 Josephus, Antiquities 7.11.6 §280; 8.8.1–2 §§214, 218; Fitzmyer 1981: 781; Delling, TDNT 8:220. However, no allusion to Hos. 6:2 is present in the reference to the third day, since this passage is never directly alluded to in the NT. The reference to ἡμέρα (day) is inclusive in each case, so that Friday, Saturday, and Sunday are in view in both "after three days" and "on the third day."

33 On degrees of judgment, see 12:47–48. "That day" is the day of judgment; Matt. 7:22; 2 Tim. 1:12, 18; 4:8; Zech. 12:3–4; Jer. 30:8; Isa. 10:20; Delling, TDNT 2:952. It looks to the fearful day-of-the-Lord judgment.

6 Ἐγκακέω almost has the force "do not give up faith." The term can mean "to become weary" (2 Thess. 3:13; Gal. 6:9) or the more eschatological "to lose heart" (2 Cor. 4:1, 16; Eph. 3:13); BAGD 215; BAA 434; Grundmann, TDNT 3:486. Symmachus uses the verb in Gen. 27:46; Num. 21:5; Prov. 3:11; Isa. 7:16 (Delling 1962: 6 n. 23).

17 Delling 1962: 16 n. 68 cites numerous LXX uses of ἐκδικέω: Ps. 149:7 (of the punishment of the wicked); 1 Macc. 3:15; 7:9, 24, 38; Exod. 12:12 and Num. 33:4 (of what God did to the Egyptians in the plagues); Mic. 5:14 [5:15 Engl.] (of judgment on the nations); Ezek. 16:41 and 23:10 (of what the nations did to Israel).

18 Delling 1962: 15 gives Qumranian usage and OT background (n. 63) for ἐκλεκτός: 1 Chron. 16:13; Isa. 42:1; 43:20; 65:9; Ps. 105:6, 43 [104:6, 43 LXX]; Sir. 47:22. He also covers NT usage (n. 64).

2 The idea of fulfilling Scripture occurs throughout Luke's writings, frequently with τελέω (BAGD 811 §1, esp. §2; BAA 1617 §2; Luke 2:39; 12:50; 18:31; 22:37; Acts 13:29) or δεῖ (Luke 9:22; 17:25); also Luke 13:22, 32; 24:44–49; Acts 2:23. Delling, TDNT 8:60 n. 16, says that this emphasis is part of special Lucan material.

4 Fitzmyer 1985: 1474 and Delling, TDNT 6:279, note that twenty-four uses of πλῆθος (company) are in Luke–Acts, with only one in Mark and none in Matthew. The combination ἅπαν (or πᾶν) τὸ πλῆθος (the whole company) is found in Luke 1:10; 8:37; 19:37; Acts 15:12; 25:24; Marshall 1978: 852. The idea of leading Jesus to Pilate shows the use of ἄγω for taking a criminal somewhere (Matt. 10:18; Josephus, Jewish War 6.5.3 §303; BAGD 14 §2; BAA 25 §2).

7 Ellis 1974: 122. Derrett 1970: 267–68, 275–78 is confident that she is a prostitute (many of the points he makes depend on this view).

5 Jeremias 1971a: 187 argues that the verb ἀναγινώσκω renders Semitic קרא (qr,) and means "to recite," so that Jesus is calling for a specific text. Derrett 1970: 224 n. 1 notes that this view goes back to J. B. Lightfoot.

6 Daube 1956: 433 believes that the verse asks simply for a biblical exposition of how the scribe sees the issue; so also Derrett 1970: 224. Daube cites as support m. ʿ*Abod. Zar.* 2.5, where the question "how do you read (קרא)?" seeks a specific scriptural response (though in fact what is asked for in the mishnaic example is a defense of a certain vocalization of the text).

11 There is debate about the age of these sections of the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs and, as a result, whether they reflect the Judaism of Jesus' period. Fitzmyer 1985: 879 questions their value, while Derrett 1970: 225 n. 5 holds that this uncertainty is insufficient to reject the presence of these ideas in this time. Nolland 1993a: 580–82 argues that the theme has Jewish roots, but that Jesus gives more focus to these two laws being the center of godliness. In Luke, the lawyer has such insight as well. Would the early church put such a reply in the lips of a Jewish lawyer? Nolland rightly rejects insistence on a Hellenistic background (against Schürmann 1994: 135, who speaks of piety toward God and righteousness toward others), but it must be noted that nowhere in Judaism do Deut. 6 and Lev. 19 appear explicitly side by side. See also the additional note.

13 Whether it is a midrash on Hos. 6:6, as Derrett suggests, rather than Deut. 6 and Lev. 19, is less clear. The passage speaks against a view like Sir. 12:1–4: one does good to a person one knows, and definitely not to sinners.

21 Derrett 1970: 220–21; b. Šab. 13b; 17b; m. ʿAbod. Zar. 2.3. Derrett overinterprets the imagery here when he makes allusions to the temple setting.

22 Derrett 1970: 217–18 gives details of the transaction that show how the innkeeper was bound to offer aid. The exchange of money is part of a deal noted in b. B. Bat. 174a.

10 Derrett 1977a and Jarvis 1965–66 argue that the subject of the parable is Jesus, who has counted the cost. However, the previous remarks make an exhortation to the multitudes about discipleship far more likely.

5 The second parable of this chapter also centers around a rich man (16:19). In Rome, the steward was called a dispensator, vilicus, or procurator, though the latter title usually was reserved for a more comprehensive role; Derrett 1970: 52–55.

14 Similarly high interest for items is found in ancient Egyptian documents; Derrett 1972b. The term τὰ γράμματα describes the promissory note; BAGD 165 §2a; BAA 330 §2b; Schrenk, TDNT 1:764–65; Fitzmyer 1985: 1100.

16 Twenty-five percent fits the ancient rate for grain; Derrett 1970: 66–68.

17 Ernst 1977: 464; Klostermann 1929: 163; and Creed 1930: 204 argue that the variation is only for literary value; but ancient parables were based on daily life, so the point may not be an either/or proposition. Derrett 1970: 66, 69 also defends a much higher charge for oil.

33 Ireland 1992: 36, 41 reports that this view goes back to D. Schulz in 1821 and was tied to ancient practice by J. J. Van Oosterzee in 1859. It has recently been defended through appeal to Jewish practice by Derrett 1970: 48–77. Fitzmyer 1964 adds an additional twist to this view: this interest was the steward's commission, making his action of canceling the interest only a clever pretense of personal sacrifice.

11 For discussion of the name Lazarus, see Dunkerley 1958–59; Derrett 1970: 78–99; Cave 1968–69; B. Scott 1989: 149 n. 28; SB 2:223; Meier

1994: 825, 868 n. 158.

1 On allegorical parables, see Derrett 1974; Blomberg 1982a: 6–8; Carlston 1981; and Klauck 1978. On the parable's interpretive history, see Snodgrass 1983: 3–11, who defends authenticity (pp. 2, 87, 103–4, 108, 112). Giblin 1985: 65–66 does not see allegory as a distinct genre of parables, but speaks of the parable's allegorical bent. See also excursus 8, where parable and allegory are seen as part of a literary continuum.

5 Hengel 1968 and Derrett 1970: 286–312 discuss the ancient customs that provide the historical background for this parable. Such tenants would work for a commission (m. Kil. 4–6 describes laws governing vineyards; Mur 24b–e [DJD 2:124–32] gives details of a tenant arrangement; Derrett 1970: 293–94). Derrett argues that if the vineyard could be shown to have been "abandoned" by the owner, it would revert to the tenants if they had worked the land for three years (m. B. Bat. 3.1; Jeremias 1963a: 74–75; Dodd 1961: 97). Such a cultural background gives context to the parable, though it is comprehensible without it (correctly Fitzmyer 1985: 1283).

15 Dessau 1892–1916: #918; Dessau 1921. Another relevant inscription on Quirinius is Dessau 1892–1916: #2683, which describes his career in Syria; Nolland 1989: 100.

12 Bultmann 1963: 212, 240; Fitzmyer 1981: 572; Berger 1984: 314; Theissen 1983: 321. Fitzmyer notes that M. Dibelius's classification of this account as a tale is certainly wrong. Dibelius classifies many miracle stories as tale, reflecting perhaps other presuppositions.

1 Dibelius 1934: 160–61, esp. 160 n. 1, says that the general nature of the remark shows that it comes from the evangelist, but how "general principles” can come from the evangelist is not clear. It is the unique attestation of this saying in Luke that appears to be the only reason for this conclusion, along with its possible use of OT imagery from Gen. 19:26. The Jesus Seminar sees these verses as going back to Luke, claiming that the saying assumes too much self-identity for disciples (Funk and Hoover 1993: 316 prints it in black type). But the distinctive behavior and identity are already indicated in the first two sayings, which the seminar accepts. On the rejection of other attempts to argue that the early church is responsible for the sayings, see Marshall 1978: 409, in particular his evaluation of Schulz 1972: 435 n. 239, who relies on Dibelius. Glombitza 1971 also makes a case for Lucan creation.

1 Dibelius 1934: 160–61, esp. 160 n. 1, says that the general nature of the remark shows that it comes from the evangelist, but how “general principles” can come from the evangelist is not clear. It is the unique attestation of this saying in Luke that appears to be the only reason for this conclusion, along with its possible use of OT imagery from Gen. 19:26. The Jesus Seminar sees these verses as going back to Luke, claiming that the saying assumes too much self-identity for disciples (Funk and Hoover 1993: 316 prints it in black type). But the distinctive behavior and identity are already indicated in the first two sayings, which the seminar accepts. On the rejection of other attempts to argue that the early church is responsible for the sayings, see Marshall 1978: 409, in particular his evaluation of Schulz 1972: 435 n. 239, who relies on Dibelius. Glombitza 1971 also makes a case for Lucan creation.

6 So hold most scholars. For discussion, see Schneider 1977a: 122–23; Marshall 1978: 199; Fitzmyer 1981: 561 (who speaks of L, where the postresurrection tradition was already moved back; Luke simply used L and joined it to Marcan material); Ernst 1977: 184–85 (who goes on to say that Luke is not merely embellishing Mark); Van Der Loos 1965: 670; Schramm 1971: 37–40 (who sees mostly Marcan material); Dietrich 1972: 25–38 (who explains why Mark alone cannot be the source).

15 Ellis 1974: 65. For details, see Dillon 1978: 270–71, esp. n. 114. The title of Dillon's volume, From Eye-Witnesses to Ministers of the Word, alludes to the unified view of this phrase.

31 Evaluation and rejection of views 4–7 can be found in Schneider 1977b. To determine the difference between views 4 and 7 is hard, except view 4 says the account is full, while view 7 might suggest it is exhaustive. Dillon 1981: 218–23 agrees with Schneider (view 3 above) and argues that view 5 is incorporated into it.

8 Dillon 1978: 21–22, who sees Lucan editorial work throughout the resurrection narrative, accepts an outside source here. Luce 1933: 358 says, "Very little in these verses (3–5) … suggests that Luke is using Mark." Marshall 1978: 885 argues that the Johannine parallel shows the traditional point of contact.

12 Dillon 1978: 38–40 argues that Son of Man is a title of concealment of the passion secret (i.e., the Son of Man is hidden in his present activity as he executes God's plan), but this is unlikely given the term's public reuse by Stephen in Acts 7:56. Osborne 1984: 110 n. 13 correctly critiques this view.

14 It looks as if Dillon is trying to protect a “disclosure” theme in this chapter, a view that has problems before this point in the narrative (see n. 12 above). Dillon argues for Lucan creation here, which is unlikely given the traditional themes already noted in the passion predictions and the additional materials that Luke apparently uses in his resurrection account. There is no doubt that the disciples’ understanding deepens through these events and Jesus’ visit with them, but faith seems to be present here in these women. It took some nerve to report what they had seen, given that women were not allowed to testify in this culture (Josephus, Antiquities 4.8.15 §219).

16 Dillon’s argument (1978: 56) for a composite list created from Mark 15:40; 16:1; and Luke 8:2–3 to yield a list of three members is negated by the reference “to the rest of the women.” For the syntactical issues, see the exegesis of 24:10.

4 Ernst 1977: 659 says that Luke’s knowledge of the location is imprecise. Dillon 1978: 87–88 sees Luke’s distance as an error.

6 Dillon’s effort (1978: 113) to argue that the men are stopped “under the pall of the passion-mystery” misses the point, despite his appeal to 22:25 and 24:25. They do not think there is any divine mystery in the events—only curious disappointment (24:19–24). Granted, they are in an emotional stew, but they stop in total shock that their companion does not know what has happened. This is not a Lucan motif, the vocabulary is too rare.

8 Dillon 1978: 122–28 correctly speaks of a miracle-passion pattern that shows Jesus is rejected like the prophets of old (Luke 11:47–51; 13:34–35; Acts 7:51–53). The travelers do not yet understand the significance of these connections (Osborne 1984: 121 n. 24). This detail also shows clearly how Jesus' death is seen as a part of a Jewish squabble. The account takes a decidedly Jewish perspective on the events (e.g., the silence about Pilate's and Rome's roles; Nolland 1993b: 1202).

16 Dillon 1978: 143 suggests that the motif is of Jesus leading the way for others, as Acts 3:15 and 7:35 seem to suggest, but this is not clear from Luke 24.

20 Dillon's effort (1978: 149–51) to find a connection with John 21:9–13 seems forced. The catch of fish outdoors in the Sea of Galilee does not equal a meal indoors near Jerusalem. Only the motif of a shared meal is the same (Behm, TDNT 1:477; Marshall 1978: 898). Another post-resurrection meal occurs in Luke 24:41–43 and Mark 16:14 (if it is original).

12 Dillon 1978: 192 argues that the reference to joy is Luke's, but why Luke should be responsible for such an insertion is not clear. On the syntax of ἀπό (from) with the force of ὑπό or παρά, see BDR §210.1.1; cf. Matt. 13:44; 14:26; Luke 21:26; 22:45; Acts 12:14; Plummer 1896: 560.

3 Dinkler 1971 defends only Peter's confession and the Satan saying (Mark 8:33 = Matt. 16:23) as authentic. Marshall 1978: 365 correctly accepts the whole unit.

2 Dinkler 1971, published in the Bultmann Festschrift, defends much of the account's historicity; Dinkler's position is interesting in light of Bultmann's rejection of the account. Fitzmyer 1981: 778–79, however, sees a strong Marcan hand and reflection in Mark's presentation, while Dinkler defends only Peter's confession and the Satan saying.

26 On the meaning of φθάνω, see above and Kümmel 1957: 107 n. 8; Ladd 1974b: 65–68; Dodd 1936–37; Marshall 1978: 476. On the verb in NT as "arrival," see Rom. 9:31; Phil. 3:16; and esp. 1 Thess. 2:16, which has a similar present-future tension with its reference to the wrath of God having arrived and residing until the end.

11 Creed 1930: 218–19; Sneed 1962; Dalman 1909: 145–47; Dodd 1961: 62–63 (who later switched to view 2). See Mattill 1979: 193 and Beasley-Murray 1986: 101 for details on the Gospel of Thomas, Origen, Chrysostom, Athanasius, Ambrose, Jerome, and Luther.

19 Dodd 1947: 49 argues that all the language is from the OT, as does Gaston 1970: 359, citing a catena of verses: Jer. 8:18; 9:1; 6:14, 6, 15, 8. Manson 1949: 319–20 cites Jer. 8:18–22, although the whole of Jer. 8:13–22, along with Jer. 6:6–21 and Isa. 29:1–4, might also be relevant. See also Plummer 1896: 451–52. Tiede 1980: 68–86 challenges Gaston's view that Luke has four stages here: salvation to part of Israel, fulfillment of threat, salvation to Gentiles, and the end. He sees a theodicy in Luke–Acts, where Luke explains how Jerusalem crumbled and yet Luke argues that God still will be faithful by restoring Israel. This is quite possible, though Tiede argues for a post–a.d. 70 date for the book, which is less likely.

5 Hengel 1968 and Derrett 1970: 286–312 discuss the ancient customs that provide the historical background for this parable. Such tenants would work for a commission (m. Kil. 4–6 describes laws governing vineyards; Mur 24b–e [DJD 2:124–32] gives details of a tenant arrangement; Derrett 1970: 293–94). Derrett argues that if the vineyard could be shown to have been "abandoned" by the owner, it would revert to the tenants if they had worked the land for three years (m. B. Bat. 3.1; Jeremias 1963a: 74–75; Dodd 1961: 97). Such a cultural background gives context to the parable, though it is comprehensible without it (correctly Fitzmyer 1985: 1283).

20 Theodoret, On the Incarnation of the Lord 24; see PG 75:1461CD. R. Brown 1977: 477 cites J. Dö;derlein as a modern exponent.

24 Michel, TDNT 8:94–105; M. Stern 1974: 330–34; Donahue 1971; Fitzmyer 1981: 469–70; Badian 1972. E. Sanders 1992: 146–69 notes that the tax system in Palestine was not more oppressive than in other regions. He estimates that taxes consumed somewhere between 20 percent and 30 percent of one's income. For a more skeptical view that sees toll collectors as a symbolic representation of Jesus' outreach to archetypal sinners, see Neale 1991: 110–15. I regard Neale's dichotomy between symbolic representation and history as false for reasons made clear below. In this approach Neale follows Horsley 1987, and both underestimate the connections between John and Jesus in terms of audience. See also 5:29–32.

14 Ps. 14:1; 53:1 [53:2 MT]; 92:6 [92:7 MT]; 94:8; Prov. 6:12; Luke 12:20; Rom. 2:20; 1 Cor. 15:36; 2 Cor. 11:16, 19; 12:6, 11; SB 1:280; 2:102 (discusses Jewish warnings about having an arrogant heart, with Deut. 8:11–14 being the key text); Schweizer 1984: 199; Plummer 1896: 310; Bertram, TDNT 9:230–31; Fitzmyer 1985: 947. On the OT background, see Donald 1963.

1 Drury 1976: 49–51 and Tannehill 1974; earlier Cadbury 1958: 192–93. For a fuller list, see Farris 1985: 15.

1 For solid overviews of this area, see McKnight 1991b and Stein 1987. McKnight is slightly more confident than I am of Marcan priority, though I still regard it likely that Mark was the first Gospel written. Still, his and Stein's overviews show why many think Mark's Gospel is first. For a comparative study of the two major options in the debate, see Bellinzoni, Tyson, and Walker 1985 and Dungan 1990. A study making significant points about Q and the complex interrelationship of the Gospel writers is Reicke 1986. For the case for Matthean priority, see Farmer 1964.

2 This issue is particularly acute if Matthew was the first Gospel, for Matthew's eschatological discourse not only has the Olivet remarks but also a series of graphic and theologically significant eschatological parables unique to his treatment. If Matthew is first and Luke knew him, why would Luke leave them out, since he loves parables, including eschatological parables (12:35–48; 18:1–8; 19:11–27)? Matthean prioritists have difficulty explaining this situation, which is a strong argument that Mark was written before Matthew. For how the various Synoptic theories approach this material, see the essays by C. M. Tuckett, F. Neirynck, and A. J. McNicol in Dungan 1990: 63–80, 108–24, 157–200.

11 For discussion of the name Lazarus, see Dunkerley 1958–59; Derrett 1970: 78–99; Cave 1968–69; B. Scott 1989: 149 n. 28; SB 2:223; Meier 1994: 825, 868 n. 158.

8 Jub. 9.15; 36.10; 1 Enoch 10.6; 54.6; 90.24–27; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 7:36–38; 13:4; Ps. Sol. 15.4–7; 2 Bar 48.39; T. Abr. (A) 14.11; 1QH 3.28–31; 6.18–19; 1QS 2.8, 15; 4.13; Dunn 1970a: 12 n. 11; Schulz 1972: 376 n. 347 (who rightly notes this is an apocalyptic image applied to Jesus, not something that describes his first coming).

9 For fire as purging, Dunn 1970a: 12 n. 12 mentions Isa. 1:25; Zech. 13:9; Mal. 3:2–3; 1QH 5.16.

1 For the major essays on this theme, see Tuckett 1983, especially the critique of Wrede by Dunn (pp. 116–31, originally Dunn 1970b), who also sees the historical roots of the secret residing in Jesus' ministry.

14 Jeremias 1971a: 63–68 notes no example of "my Father" in the literature. In fact, in Judaism such intimacy was avoided. Jeremias 1967b: 16–29 lists the potential Jewish parallels. Dunn 1975: 21–26 notes that Jeremias overstates the case in allowing no exceptions, but suggests that Jeremias's general portrait is correct. Plummer 1896: 296 remarks that God as the Father of Israel is an OT image; the concept of God as Father to individual people begins to appear only in intertestamental Judaism (see the texts in the previous note). Jesus' reference to "my Father" is highly unusual, though not unprecedented: 4Q372; 3 Macc. 6:3; Wis. 14:3; and Sir. 23:1 use "my Father" or "Father." In the NT, see Luke 2:49; 10:22 = Matt. 11:27; Luke 22:29; 24:49; Matt. 7:21; 10:32–33; 12:50; 15:13; 16:17; 18:10, 35; 20:23; 25:34; 26:29, 39, 53. The contrast is striking and significant.

15 This view has been qualified recently by Barr 1988; see Witherington 1990: 217–18 for an evaluation of Barr's critique. On relating to God as a child does to a parent, see Luke 18:15–17; Dunn 1975: 23. R. Brown 1994: 172–75 has a full discussion of ›abbā‹.

6 For detailed defense of authenticity, see Meier 1994: 408–9 (on 11:17–18), 409–10 (11:19), 414–17 (11:20), 417 (11:21–22). Meier prefers to separate 11:20 from 11:17–18 in the earlier tradition, as well as from 11:21–

22. He does think it likely that 11:20 was tied to 11:19. For agnosticism about this entire process of sorting out the relationship of 11:20 to 11:19, see Dunn 1988: 40–41 and n. 31. As noted above, I too am agnostic, if not outright skeptical, of sorting out clearly the question of the original unity of this tradition. However, I see no compelling reason to reject its unity, especially in light of the connection between 11:19 and 11:21–22 that I shall argue for below (see the exegesis of these verses).

37 Recent treatments taking this approach are Dunn 1980: 67–69; Casey 1979: 7–50; and Black 1976: 60–63, who argues that this text is unique, since it is the only place in the OT where Israel is "deified" (see Bock 1987: 335 n. 179 for refutation).

11 Van Unnik 1979: 40–42, esp. n. 23, cites Lucian's use of ἀνατάσσομαι in How to Write History 47–48. See also Van Unnik 1973. It should be said, however, that when used in a prologue and tied to a word like ἐπιχειρέω, ἀνατάσσομαι suggests written or at least well-organized reports. Also in favor of written predecessors is Du Plessis 1974: 262–63. Written sources are still the most likely referent here. My point is that we cannot be sure that Luke did not mean more than that, especially since multiple sources are mentioned.

13 Fitzmyer 1981: 293; Marshall 1978: 41; Schweizer 1984: 11; Du Plessis 1974: 263–64; Sterling 1992: 334; L. Johnson 1991: 27. NIV and NKJV: "things that/which have been fulfilled." Einheitsübersetzung speaks of events that occurred among us and were fulfilled, combining the first and third meanings.

14 Rengstorf, TDNT 8:543; also Michaelis, TDNT 5:348, 373. Luke will call these men “witnesses” later in Luke–Acts (Luke 24:44–48; Acts 1:8). Such eyewitnesses were important to ancient historians: Thucydides 1.22.2; Josephus, Against Apion 1.10 §55; and Lucian’s parody in How to Write History 4. See Du Plessis 1974: 265.

24 See Plummer 1896: 4 for a defense of παρακολουθέω with this meaning; BAGD 619 §3 cites other ancient texts; also BAA 64. Among them are the already noted texts by Josephus: Against Apion 1.10 §53 and 1.23 §218. See Du Plessis 1974: 267.

29 Josephus liked this term to describe his work; see Against Apion 1.10 §53; Jewish War 1.proem.6 §17; Du Plessis 1974: 268 n. 50.

1 Plummer 1896: 106; Manson 1949: 46 (who strongly defends this view); Dupont 1968: 97–115 (who argues for a middle course between literalism and parable); Carson 1984: 111; Nolland 1989: 177 (who defends the plausibility of Jesus’ reporting this event to his disciples). On the other end of the spectrum apparently is Crossan (1991), who does not even discuss this event in his portrayal of Jesus. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 133–34 [Matt.], 278–80 [Luke]) places all the sayings of this unit in black type, thereby indicating rejection of a tie to Jesus. The consensus of the seminar is that the text is legendary, like Greco-Roman biography, and that the sayings were authored by Q following the LXX. The seminar calls it an “ordeal story,” but this generic form category does not explain the explicit uniqueness of this confrontation account, a point that negates this argument. Manson 1949: 45–46 rightly challenges the description of the account as legendary (see the discussion of form below).

LXX citations reflect only Luke's sensitivity to his Greek audience and are not evidence of the text's origin, since MT renderings would work (Nolland 1989: 177).

37 Dupont 1968: 58–59. So also Schulz 1972: 180, citing for the use of this verb Acts 2:16 and 13:40, which themselves may reflect traditional expressions. Nolland 1989: 181 gives the most plausible explanation: Jesus refuses to match γέγραπται, which the devil used in 4:10. The form εἴρηται does not appear elsewhere in the NT, which suggests a traditional use more than a Lucan change.

2 For a good summary of the critical discussion, see Nolland 1989: 351–53, who relies on the approaches of Legault 1954, Lö;ning 1971, and Dupont 1980. Nolland also rightly rejects Brodie's midrashic reading (1983) of this text as an internalization of 2 Kings 4:1–37. The points of connection between 2 Kings 4 and Luke 7 are too general to be compelling. In addition, the function of oil in the two accounts is too different (2 Kings 4:3–7 versus Luke 7:37–38), and the bowing of the Shunammite in 2 Kings 4:37 is a natural expression of respect, not unlike Luke 5:8. Luke 7:37–38 is filled with emotion, a background that 2 Kings 4 lacks.

18 But so Fitzmyer 1985: 1419, who speaks of "reconstituted Israel," and Marshall 1978: 817, who suggests an allusion to the Lord's Supper, along with many others (those who see a tie to Israel include Ellis 1974: 256 and Danker 1988: 350–51). Dupont 1964: 388 correctly argues against this view. This expectation is continued in the question of Acts 1:6–8 and the remarks of Peter in Acts 3:18–21. Even later Petrine expectation of a new heaven and earth in 2 Pet. 3:10–14, which looks to the ultimate end of history, does not remove this intervening stage when God deals with Israel in bringing it again into the blessing reserved for God's people.

45 Dupont-Sommer 1973: 108; Michel and Betz 1960: 11–13, 15–17; Michel and Betz 1962–63. This usage also shows that a Hellenistic origin for the phrase is not required.

19 1QS 5.13; Josephus, Jewish War 2.8.2–13 §§119–61. Bringing Josephus's description into consideration assumes that the Qumran community is Essene, a stance defended by Dupont-Sommer 1961: 39–67. Despite recent objections raised because of the find of Miqsāt Maʿăsê Tôrâ (4QMMT) at Qumran, this is still the best option.

26 In 4QPrNab, a Jewish exorcist remits sins of the Babylonian King Nabonidus; Dupont-Sommer 1961: 322, esp. n. 3. The problem with this fragmentary Qumran parallel is that the method of expressing forgiveness to the king is not described in the text, but only summarized. Consequently, it can hardly carry the weight of the case for a prophetic understanding in Luke. See the exegesis of 5:24 and Bock 1991c: 117 and n. 26.

1 In this view, a tighter connection is seen between Matthew and Luke than between Luke and Mark, and proponents tend to speak of Q tradition. If Q is the source, this is the only exorcism in Q, a point that, by its uniqueness, argues for authenticity. Marshall 1978: 471–72 sees the account reflecting several controversies and that reconstructing the tradition history must be speculative. Fitzmyer 1985: 918 discusses only 11:19 as possibly reflecting an early church setting. Detailed evidence for Matthew's and Luke's being closer to each other than to Mark comes from Easton 1913.

5 Creed 1930: 159 speaks of Q here, as does Manson 1949: 83. The amount of Matthean-Lucan agreement makes this source connection likely, though whether it is Q or another shared tradition is debatable (Matthean prioritists see Matthew as the likely source). Grundmann 1963: 236–37 correctly notes that Matthew is closer to Luke than to Mark (see also Easton 1913, as discussed in n. 1 above). Fitzmyer 1985: 918 argues for Lucan additions in 11:16, but is uncertain about it in 11:14, 21–22. Additional source material cannot be ruled out. Tiede 1988: 216 notes that Matt. 12:23 and Mark 3:11 stress Christology, while Luke emphasizes controversy with the leadership; but Luke also has strong Christology in light of the parable in 11:21–23. Of the three accounts, Mark has less confrontation than the other two.

14 Hendriksen 1978: 334 argues for this locale; Marshall 1978: 241–42 calls it possible. Davies and Allison 1988: 422 mention Karn Hattin (Horns of Hattin) as another suggestion, but they prefer not to adopt a specific location, since for them the Matthean sermon is a collected representative sermon, as opposed to a sermon in a single place (see excursus 7 for details). Edersheim 1889: 1.524 argues against Karn Hattin.

1 If one counts lines, as Egelkraut 1976: 2 n. 1 does (using the twenty-fifth edition of Nestle-Aland), then the figure is closer to 44 percent. Since both verse length and line length vary, such counts are only approximations.

3 For the debate about its ending, see Egelkraut 1976: 3–11 and Resseguie 1975: 3 (a good survey of the history of interpretation).

4 The amount of material in these groups can be variously measured, depending on the division of the pericopes and one’s judgment about the presence of parallels. Egelkraut 1976: 27 bases the percentages in Luke's central section (for him 9:51–19:48) on the pericope delineation in two common synopses:

	Lucan Parallels to Matthew (i.e., Q)	Unique Lucan Material	Lucan Parallels to Mark
Aland 1985	26 of 75 pericopes (35%)	27 of 75 pericopes (36%)	22 of 75 pericopes (29%)
Huck and Lietzmann 1936	25 of 60 pericopes (42%)	24 of 60 pericopes (40%)	11 of 60 pericopes (18%)

Resseguie 1975: 4 calculates the same section this way: of 60 Lucan pericopes, 31 (52%) parallel Matthew/Q and 29 (48%) are uniquely Lucan. Resseguie argues that only one-tenth of the material in 9:51–18:14 has even a possible Marcan connection. Teaching material that is capable of being repeated might slightly alter the exact count. Nonetheless, the numbers of Huck-Lietzmann and Resseguie are closer to the real percentages, since Luke 9:51–18:14 lacks any significant Marcan parallels. In addition, most of the Q pericopes and unique Lucan material are long units. Conceptual overlap with Matthew and unique Lucan material abound (see the introduction in vol. 1, pp. 10–12). Goulder (1989: 455) notes that in 9:51–

13:21 one of every three words comes from Q or L, while in 13:22–18:14 (where Goulder ends the unit) one in six words comes from this material.

5 Twelve narratives (depending on how one counts) focus on individuals: 9:52–56; 9:57–62; 10:29–37; 10:38–42; 11:14–23; 11:27–28; 13:31–35; 18:15–17; 18:18–30; 19:1–10; 19:29–40; 19:41–44 (note the gap from 14:1 to 18:14). Egelkraut 1976: 28 has a slightly different list.

5 On Jewish "works of love" and for the key ancient texts, see Egelkraut 1976: 139 nn. 3, 5; SB 1:487–88; 4:578–92; Hengel 1981: 8–10 and n. 21. Quick burials are mentioned in Acts 5:5–6, 10; John 11:1, 14, 17. On Jewish burial customs, see the exegesis of Luke 7:12. The OT notes periods that might demand that burial not take place, e.g., the time of exile (Jer. 16:5–7; Ernst 1977: 321).

2 Egelkraut 1976: 142, esp. n. 3, mentions the options. Schweizer 1984: 174 argues that Luke likes to split accounts from Q and Mark into distinct events (e.g., the Olivet Discourse in 17:22–37 ≈ 21:6–36 and Jesus' condemnation of the religious leadership in 11:37–54 ≈ 20:45–47). Fitzmyer 1985: 843, citing 22:35, argues that Luke created the mission in the split. For detailed discussion of texts where Mark and Q overlap, see Laufen 1980.

6 Egelkraut 1976: 143 sees this as possible, especially for the unparalleled 10:17–20, as well as for 10:21–24.

15 Egelkraut 1976: 143, esp. n. 1; Miyoshi 1974: 59–61. For example, μετὰ ταῦτα occurs nine times in Luke–Acts, but not at all in Matthew and Mark (unless one counts the textually uncertain Mark 16:12). The use of ὁ κύριος (the Lord) in narrative introductions is Lucan; see the exegesis of Luke 2:11. The verb ἀναδείκνυμι (to appoint) appears only here and in Acts 1:24; Schlier, TDNT 2:30.

61 Egelkraut 1976: 145–48 emphatically and correctly shows that Israel is in view in this mission, since the woes of 10:13–15 are only to Israelite cities. At most, the inclusion of Samaria could be implied by 9:51–56, but it looks as if the failure of that effort led to a return to Galilee.

4 Klostermann 1929: 118 and Egelkraut 1976: 85–90 favor a Lucan reworking of Mark. Schneider 1977a: 247 and Wiefel 1988: 207 see an independent source for the parable and Luke 10:25–28 using Mark. Bultmann 1963: 51; Luce 1933: 204 (citing Q); and Daube 1956: 247–50 see a version like that in Matthew. Zahn 1920: 427; Manson 1949: 259–61; and Jeremias 1963a: 202 see independent incidents or sources. Plummer 1896: 283 calls the possibility of one incident precarious, but not impossible. Fitzmyer 1985: 877–78 clearly ascribes the material to a special Lucan source, but sees only one incident, a distinction that seems hard to insist upon. Marshall 1978: 441 also leans toward two incidents, as do Hendriksen 1978: 591; Liefeld 1984: 942; and Blomberg 1990: 230–31, who speaks of “proem midrash” here. Ellis 1974: 159, though noting that two incidents are probable, regards the exchange as set in Jerusalem, which is possible, since the next account is in Bethany. Grundmann 1963: 221–22 speaks only of an independent source with the parable coming from L, while Ernst 1977: 344–46 leans this way, clearly noting that the parable is from special Lucan material. Nolland 1993a: 580 argues for an original link of neighbor and the parable, but that Luke is responsible for placing the great-commandment discussion here, drawing on Mark 12:28–34.

Schürmann 1994: 136–40, 149–50 sees the parable emerging from L material and rooted in Jesus' intention, but 10:25–28 is probably rooted in Mark's account and does not testify to a separate event.

9 Five Greek terms are found in Deut. 6:5 LXX and its quotation in the Synoptics: καρδία (heart), ψυχή (soul), δύναμις (power), διάνοια (mind), and ἰσχύς (strength). Deut. 6:5 has καρδία–ψυχή–δύναμις; Matt. 22:37 has καρδία–ψυχή–διάνοια; Mark 12:30 has καρδία–ψυχή–διάνοια–ἰσχύς; and Luke 10:27 has καρδία–ψυχή–ἰσχύς–διάνοια. See Egelkraut 1976: 86, esp. n. 1. In addition, Luke uses both ἐκ (ek, from, with) and ἐν (en, with), while Deut. 6:5 and Mark 12:30 use only ἐκ and Matt. 22:37 only ἐν.

24 The term occurs in Luke at 7:13; 10:33; and 15:20. The exceptions to Egelkraut's claim, Matt. 18:27 and Luke 15:20, undercut his argument.

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 897–98 is skeptical about the Lucan setting, though he does regard it as likely that the prayer goes back to Jesus. See also Egelkraut 1976: 153, esp. n. 1.

10 Egelkraut 1976: 154 n. 5 notes that none of SB's examples are about prayer. Although 17:5 is similar, it is not a direct request for teaching but encouragement.

4 Egelkraut 1976: 91–92, esp. 91 n. 2, argues for six Marcan connections in Luke, but only three are clear. The phrase that you say in Luke 11:18 and Mark 3:30 and the use of ἐπί (against) in Luke 11:17 are a part of these connections, so that separate points about them are really the same point. It is doubtful that Luke 11:21–23 is just Mark 3:27 expanded, since Luke is not any closer to Mark than to Matt. 12:29–30.

2 Egelkraut 1976: 93 n. 1 argues that the question of 11:38 does not match the answer of 11:39 and thus Luke created the introduction (but see the exegesis of 11:38). Taking 11:39 as indicating the original setting, Marshall 1978: 492 argues that it is Matthew who shifted to a Mark 12 setting. He argues that Luke does not conflate sources, while Matthew has many topical rearrangements; so also Godet 1875: 2.87.

3 So Kistemaker 1980: 45 speaks of the same occasion. On Q, see Grundmann 1963: 281; Egelkraut 1976: 108; Marshall 1978: 559–60; Wiefel 1988: 257; Fitzmyer 1985: 1015. The same linkage of parables occurs in Matthew and, as noted above, the wording in the leaven parable is very similar. The Gospel of Thomas 96–97 links the leaven parable to a different parable, the jar full of meal, which has no canonical parallel. A parable of the mustard seed is found in the Gospel of Thomas 20; Hunzinger, TDNT 7:290 n. 32.

9 Paul's image of the olive tree in Rom. 11 is a variation on Jesus' picture. There the key point is not growth, but one's presence in the plant; Egelkraut 1976: 109; Jeremias 1963a: 147–49; Joseph and Asenath 15. On the verb κατασκηνόω (to live or nest), see BAGD 418 §2; BAA 851. Elsewhere in the NT at Matt. 13:32 = Mark 4:32; Acts 2:26.

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1136–37 argues that all of the material is from Q, but that 17:2 has been influenced by Mark 9:42. Marshall 1978: 640 agrees that Q and Mark overlap in 17:1–2 and also sees (pp. 642, 643–44) the rest of 17:3–6 as coming from Q, though he entertains the possibility that Q has various forms from which Matthew and Luke drew. Creed 1930: 215 sees Q and Mark 11:23 exercising influence in 17:5–6. Ernst 1977: 477–80 sees

17:1–3a as coming from either Q or a form of oral tradition that circulated in a variety of forms, 17:3b–4 as rooted in Jesus' teaching, and triple tradition (i.e., Mark and Q) influencing 17:5–6. Ellis 1974: 207 speaks of Mark and Q in 17:1–4 and regards Luke's special source as responsible for 17:5–10. Egelkraut 1976: 120–21 speaks of Q/Mark overlap in 17:1–2 and multiple tradition in 17:5–6. Grundmann 1963: 331 suggests that it is hard to know if Q or Luke's special material is responsible for the unit, except for 17:7–10, which is L. Grundmann sees its roots in material earlier than the versions of Matthew and Mark. All of this assumes that only one form of these sayings existed in the tradition and that it emerged from a single saying. If this was a theme repeated by Jesus, multiple renderings could well exist.

12 Carson 1984: 239 (undecided between this and view 1); A. Ehrman 1978; Arbeitman 1980. Fitzmyer 1981: 620 calls this view highly unlikely but gives no reason.

12 For a strongly reasoned defense of the shorter reading, refuting Schürmann, see B. Ehrman 1991. Ehrman underestimates, however, the significance of 1 Cor. 11:25–26 and underplays the substitution language in Acts 20:28—points that undermine his position. The 1 Corinthian parallel is telling because it raises the issue of where this detail came from if not from a tradition like that in Luke. It is unlikely that a scribe adding material would go outside the Gospels to do so, especially if the result produced harmonization problems.

16 Keck 1970–71. B. Ḥag. 15a, a talmudic reference of later origin, makes this connection. More recently, Allison 1992 argues vigorously for a connection to Gen. 1:2. The Messianic Vision fragment from Qumran (see photograph and R. H. Eisenman's translation in Biblical Archaeology Review 17.6 [Nov.–Dec. 1991]: 65) might contain an allusion to Messiah and Gen. 1:2. If so, the objection to the lateness of the other Jewish parallels is removed. The image would suggest a "new" beginning in God's work, though I disagree with Allison that the remark is only symbolic, as if one must choose between history and symbol.

24 Manson's suggestion (1949: 118) of an Aramaic mistranslation is unlikely, even though it is a common position (see Jeremias 1963a: 57 nn. 30–31). One can argue for a purposely emotive figure without having to resort to mistranslation. Marshall 1978: 543 lays out a full set of options: figurative, mistranslation, literal, and overliteral translation of the Aramaic. The last is Marshall's choice, following O. Betz 1964–66, who notes a parallel idiom at Qumran. In 1QS 2.16, the term means "to cut off from the midst of" and refers to those who were accursed eternally (so 1QS 1.10–11; 6.24–25; 7.1–2, 16; 8.21–23). The idiom refers to those who suffer eschatological judgment, not excommunication. See also Weiser 1971: 199–200 and Ellingworth 1980. Those rejected like this often have treated others poorly or have taken advantage of them (Ps. 37:12, 14, 16, 32). The idiomatic background denotes complete separation.

39 Luke 3:18 and 6:6 seem to ignore any clean distinction. In favor of the distinction are Godet 1875: 1.345 and Plummer 1896: 202; against it are Elliott 1969 and BDF §306.

15 Ellis 1974: 65. For details, see Dillon 1978: 270–71, esp. n. 114. The title of Dillon's volume, From Eye-Witnesses to Ministers of the Word, alludes to the unified view of this phrase.

21 So most take it, including Fitzmyer 1981: 297; Creed 1930: 4–5; Ellis 1974: 66; Schweizer 1984: 12; Marshall 1978: 43; and Kittel, TDNT 1:215–16, who cites Polybius 3.32.2; Josephus, Against Apion 1.10 §53 and Life 65 §357. Cadbury 1922a: 501–2 challenges the first two examples directly. This view is present in NIV, NASB, Neu Luther, and Einheitsübersetzung. NKJV and KJV speak of having a "perfect understanding," the most emphatic of all translations, which is really a separate view.

23 Danker 1988: 43–44; Ellis 1974: 76; Klostermann 1929: 20; Godet 1875: 1.104–5; Plummer 1896: 33; Marshall 1978: 84. It must be remembered that Luke presented the passage as Mary's words, so he must expect them to be read prophetically. Here is another failure of the view (1b) that argues for a reference to Jesus' work in the past.

16 Ellis's suggestion (1974: 81) that this region was Mary's former home also faces similar problems at this point. Where are the friends or relatives?

11 Ellis 1974: 85–86. Plummer 1896: 75 cites a source describing contemporary, not ancient, Bedouin.

16 Schürmann 1969: 228; Ellis 1974: 96; Marshall 1978: 181. For the wording of the Shemoneh Esreh, see Schürer 1973–87: 2.456–61.

18 Ellis 1974: 100. The Hebrew term is גָּעַר (gāʿar, to shout at, exorcise), the Aramaic גְּעַר (gĕʿar, to exorcise); Zech. 3:2; Ps. 68:30 [68:31 MT]; 106:9; Jub. 10.5–9; 1QapGen 20.28–29; 1QM 14.10; Kee 1967–68; Stauffer, TDNT 2:625–26; Jastrow 1903: 261; BDB 172.

19 Ellis 1974: 100; Plummer 1896: 134. Compare Tob. 8:1–3; Josephus, Antiquities 8.2.5 §§45–49 (where the reference is to the powers that Solomon—a regal figure—possessed over evil forces); Justin Martyr, Dialogue with Trypho 85. Nolland 1989: 210 notes eight different methods that Jesus used in his various healings in Luke, all of which involve his word or personal touch.

5 For this connection are Ellis 1974: 11 and Schürmann 1969: 313 (who mentions Exod. 24:1–2, 9, 12–13, 15–18, with the seventy elders worshiping from a distance as Moses goes up the mountain, as well as 19:3 and 34:2–5); against it are Marshall 1978: 236 and Fitzmyer 1981: 616. Bovon 1989: 279–80 calls it questionable, citing Philo, Life of Moses 1.40 §§220–26; 2.14–15 §§70–71; 2.28 §§141–42; 2.30 §153; 2.31 §§159–60; and Pseudo-Philo, Biblical Antiquities 11–12, 15, as lacking such a motif. Bovon prefers to see Jesus praying for the preparation and renewal of his people, as Moses had done and as Pseudo-Philo notes.

11 The closest possibility is the comparison with the priesthood in Hebrews, but here only Jesus is noted. Ellis 1974: 112 accepts the Mosaic imagery but not the Aaronic; Marshall 1978: 241 regards the Mosaic picture as possible; Nolland 1989: 275 argues persuasively against it. Nolland notes that the OT texts are a call to keep people away from the mountain (e.g., Exod. 19:12) and that the OT mountain setting is not related to teaching.

37 1QS 1.10; 2.4–9; 9.21–23; Ellis 1974: 114; Guelich 1982: 226. The leaning of the imprecatory Psalms in this direction is what makes their tone so difficult. Because Jesus' ethic is a heightening of old standards, they appear in antithesis in Matthew. It is right to call for God's justice, but it is also important to seek the best for fellow humans. God's justice is in place and will occur, as the eschatological remarks of the sermon make clear. But the disciple seeks the enemies' transformation and hopes that they may come to know God so that they can enter into God's grace and kindness, while escaping his wrath.

7 Ellis 1974: 122. Derrett 1970: 267–68, 275–78 is confident that she is a prostitute (many of the points he makes depend on this view).

4 So also Danker 1988: 179 (with a little hesitancy); Ellis 1974: 127. Fitzmyer 1981: 725 rightly rejects this view, as do Schürmann 1969: 470 n. 197; Marshall 1978: 332; and Wiefel 1988: 162.

33 Plummer 1896: 235; Marshall 1978: 344; Fitzmyer 1981: 746; Bovon 1989: 445–46 (who argues that Luke may be responsible for it); Creed 1930: 123; and Hendriksen 1978: 466 appear undecided. Arndt 1956: 246 and A. B. Bruce 1897: 525 are for inclusion. Schürmann 1969: 490 n. 137; Ellis 1974: 130; and Luce 1933: 173 omit it.

14 Fitzmyer 1981: 753–54; Ellis 1974: 137; m. Ber. 9.5 (a command with roots in Exod. 3:5); Schürmann 1969: 501 n. 20; Josephus, Jewish War 2.8.4 §§124–27 (about the Essenes). On the contrast with the practice of Greek cynics and philosophers, see Schürmann 1969: 502 n. 24 and Bovon 1989: 458 n. 20, who compares the disciples' absence of possessions with the Levites and their being provided for through the tithe (Num. 18:21).

18 Michaelis, TDNT 7:379–80, rejects a connection to the Feast of Tabernacles; but see Boobyer 1942: 76–79; Ellis 1974: 143; Daube 1956: 30–32 (though some of his citations involve material that is much later than this period).

21 Gen. 43:23; Judg. 6:23; 19:20; 1 Sam. 25:6; Isa. 52:7; Luke 2:14; 24:36; Acts 10:36; 16:36. Ellis 1974: 156 calls it a benediction more than a greeting.

47 Exod. 32:32; Ps. 69:28 [69:29 MT]; Isa. 4:3; Dan. 7:10; 12:1; Mal. 3:16–17; 1 Enoch 47.3; 104.1; 108.7; Jub. 5.13–14; 23.32; 30.19–23; 1QM 12.2; Phil. 4:3; Heb. 12:23; Rev. 3:5; 20:12, 15; 21:27; Ellis 1974: 157; Fitzmyer 1985: 863–64; SB 2:173–76; Schrenk, TDNT 1:619–20; Traub, TDNT 5:532 n. 295. Manson 1949: 258–59 lists the various "books" mentioned in the Bible and Judaism: (1) book of life, (2) book of human deeds, (3) book of the earthly destiny of people, and (4) book of the divine plan. Only the first two are in the Bible.

49 Ellis 1974: 158 notes that ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ (in this hour) refers not so much to chronology as to "this key eschatological time"; cf. Luke 12:56; 19:44; 21:24; 22:53; 23:43; John 4:23; 5:25; 2 Cor. 6:2; Heb. 3:7–4:10.

62 The RSV and NRSV read seventy; see also Schweizer 1984: 174; Danker 1988: 212 (who attributes the number seventy-two to Moses' addition of two elders when he appointed his seventy [Num. 11:26] and sees Gentile symbolism in the choice); Tiede 1988: 200–201; Ellis 1974: 155–56; C. F. Evans 1990: 444–45; Schürmann 1994: 54. The NIV reads seventy-two; also Manson 1949: 74; Liefeld 1984: 940; Hendriksen 1978: 570–71 ("leans" this way); Creed 1930: 144; Arndt 1956: 280; Ernst 1977: 331; Marshall 1978: 414–15 (who has a good summary of the issue); Fitzmyer 1985: 845–46; Wiefel 1988: 195; C. A. Evans 1990: 172; Nolland 1993a: 546. Those who are undecided include Luce 1933: 198–99; Plummer 1896: 272; and Schneider 1977a: 235 (who argues that a decision is less than certain).

4 Klostermann 1929: 118 and Egelkraut 1976: 85–90 favor a Lucan reworking of Mark. Schneider 1977a: 247 and Wiefel 1988: 207 see an independent source for the parable and Luke 10:25–28 using Mark. Bultmann 1963: 51; Luce 1933: 204 (citing Q); and Daube 1956: 247–50 see a version like that in Matthew. Zahn 1920: 427; Manson 1949: 259–61; and Jeremias 1963a: 202 see independent incidents or sources. Plummer 1896: 283 calls the possibility of one incident precarious, but not impossible. Fitzmyer 1985: 877–78 clearly ascribes the material to a special Lucan source, but sees only one incident, a distinction that seems hard to insist upon. Marshall 1978: 441 also leans toward two incidents, as do Hendriksen 1978: 591; Liefeld 1984: 942; and Blomberg 1990: 230–31, who speaks of “proem midrash” here. Ellis 1974: 159, though noting that two incidents are probable, regards the exchange as set in Jerusalem, which is possible, since the next account is in Bethany. Grundmann 1963: 221–22 speaks only of an independent source with the parable coming from L, while Ernst 1977: 344–46 leans this way, clearly noting that the parable is from special Lucan material. Nolland 1993a: 580 argues for an original link of neighbor and the parable, but that Luke is responsible for placing the great-commandment discussion here, drawing on Mark 12:28–34. Schürmann 1994: 136–40, 149–50 sees the parable emerging from L material and rooted in Jesus’ intention, but 10:25–28 is probably rooted in Mark’s account and does not testify to a separate event.

1 Ellis 1974: 163–64 attributes the original context to Luke, a view that is possible only if the Sermon on the Mount is a Matthean topical sermon (which, though possible, is not likely). In favor of one occasion or point of origin are Manson 1949: 265; Godet 1875: 2.47; Zahn 1920: 448–49 (favoring a view like Ellis's); Schneider 1977a: 256; and Wiefel 1988: 215. A good summary of recent discussion may be found in Meier 1994: 291–93, 353–57. Meier sees Luke as reflecting the original size and structure of the prayer, with Matthew expanding the petitions and Luke altering some wording. But unlike many, he sees two versions in circulation. The Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 325–27) sees Q as the source, with Matthew making additions and Luke introducing some changes in vocabulary. The seminar's view of these details parallels many critics.

12 Arndt 1956: 303 equates person and time. In contrast, Ellis 1974: 168 and Talbert 1982: 139 suggest that the Spirit is referred to, but this is too specific, since there is no clear contextual indication to him. He is only an implication of what Jesus brings.

1 Marshall 1978: 491–93 sees different recensions of Q. Manson 1949: 96 sees most of Matt. 23 coming from a special Matthean source. Ellis 1974: 170 and Schlatter 1960: 303–5 see a combination of Q and special Lucan material. But Wiefel 1988: 227 objects to this because of the material's similarity to Matt. 23.

3 Luce 1933: 233; Manson 1949: 117–18; and Schneider 1977a: 288 say that the basic source is Q, while 12:47–48 is L. Tiede 1988: 238–42 and Marshall 1978: 533 see all but 12:41, 47–48 as coming from Q. Ellis 1974: 180 is undecided. Godet 1875: 2.106, 110–11 sees Luke and Matthew using different portions of the same tradition. Grundmann 1963: 264; Fitzmyer 1985: 984–85; and Wiefel 1988: 242, 244 regard the unique material as coming from Luke's special source, while the parable is a mix of Q (12:39–

40, 42b–46) and L (12:35–38 for Grundmann and Fitzmyer; 12:36, 37a, 38 for Wiefel). These three treat 12:41–42a and 12:47–48 as Lucan additions. Grundmann defends the remark's authenticity as involving an original warning that included the Pharisees. A Matthean prioritist sees Matthew where others have Q, though the issue of Luke's placement of this pericope is more of a problem for the Two-Gospel hypothesis, than for a sayings source such as Q. Why did Luke change the location if he had Matthew? The possibility of other sources cannot be ruled out. The views on sources for this pericope are complex, but most see Luke bringing two sets of images together (12:35–38 and 12:42–46). For full discussions, see Weiser 1971: 161–225; Schneider 1975: 20–27; and D. Wenham 1984: 15–100. Wenham's work is part of a larger hypothesis on a pre-Synoptic form of Jesus' eschatological teaching, a view that traces substantial portions of this material back to Jesus, including 12:41, 44, 47–48, which others deny have such roots.

14 Marshall 1978: 539–40 lists the options. He holds to Matthean omission, as does Manson 1949: 117–18. Klostermann 1929: 139 and Ellis 1974: 181 regard it as Lucan. On the assumption that one tradition is present, the influence of additional source material for Luke cannot be ruled out since there is additional material elsewhere in the unit. For defense of its authenticity, see the discussion of sources and historicity above.

18 Ellis 1974: 183 notes that the image from Micah was applied to messianic times in Judaism: 1 Enoch 99.5; 100.1–2; Jub. 23.19; 2 Bar. 70.6; 1Q14 [= 1QpMic.] 20–21. M. Soṭa 9.9 applied the remark to the martyrdom of a rabbi, so the text was used as a common description of opposition. Division is also found in Luke 14:26; 17:34–35; Mark 10:29–30.

1 Ellis 1974: 184; Danker 1988: 259; Tiede 1988: 247; Creed 1930: 180. In addition to the Josephean references in the list in the exegesis of 13:1, see also Life 17 §92.

5 Ἔμιξεν (he mixed) comes from either μείγνυμι (BAGD 499) or μίγνυμι (BAA 1055), both meaning "to mix." The expression is an idiom for two events occurring together; so Ellis 1974: 185, who cites Exod. Rab. 19.5 on 12:43–44, SB 2:193, and Blinzler 1957–58: 28–29. The midrash refers to a mixture of circumcision blood and Paschal blood to indicate the need of a person who eats Passover to be circumcised. Philo, Special Laws 3.16 §91, discusses the inappropriateness of mixing the blood of murderers and sacrifices at the temple (Nolland 1993a: 717–18). Wiefel 1988: 252 n. 11 calls the expression "Palestinian."

14 Ellis 1974: 186 notes that the Qumranians in general were even stricter than the Pharisees; K. Schubert 1957: 127–28. CD 11.13–14 reads, "No one shall help an animal in its delivery on the Sabbath day. And if it falls into a pit or a ditch, one shall not raise it on the Sabbath." For details of Jewish practice, see the exegesis of the next verse.

2 Note Ellis 1974: 187. In its initial phase, the kingdom as manifested in the church is a community of people who all look to the same hope in Christ. Thus, the kingdom's presence primarily is manifested in believers who all serve and are accountable to the sovereign head, Jesus Christ (Eph. 1:19–22; Col. 1:12–14). The church universal is related to the kingdom, being its present expression, but the church is not all there is to the kingdom, since there is a kingdom to come. In addition, the church is not an institution seeking to seize power on earth or exercise coercive sovereignty, but is to serve and love humankind, reflecting the love of God, his standards of righteousness, and the message of his forgiveness and love in Jesus Christ (Rom. 12:9–13:7). These elements make up the mission of the church as light in the world (Matt. 5:14–16).

19 Ellis 1974: 189 notes that Qumran had a similar banquet expectation, but with a very different and exclusive audience, namely Messiah, the high priest, the priests, the chief of the tribes, and the congregation of Israel's righteous; 1Q28a [= 1QSa = Rule Annex] 2.11–22. Fitzmyer 1985: 1026 and Marshall 1978: 568 add other Jewish references: 1 Enoch 62.14; 2 Enoch 42.5; 2 Bar. 29.4; m. ›Abot 3.17; SB 4:1148, 1154–59.

14 For this reason Manson 1949: 127 rejects this view, which Ellis 1974: 191 accepts, citing Luke 11:51; 19:46; Acts 7:47. Marshall 1978: 576 notes that when a pronoun is attached to "house" in the sense of "temple," the pronoun refers to God, which is not the case here, since the desolate house is Israel.

14 On general resurrection and judgment of all, see Luke 10:12; 11:31–32; John 5:29; Acts 17:30–31; 23:6; 24:15; Rom. 2:5–11; 2 Cor. 5:10; 2 Tim. 4:1; Rev. 20:12; Ellis 1974: 194.

2 So Blomberg 1990: 237–39; Kistemaker 1980: 193–201; Plummer 1896: 359–60; Liefeld 1984: 979. Those accepting one parable but distinct sources are Luce 1933: 248; Grundmann 1963: 296 (L); Ernst 1977: 442 (L); Marshall 1978: 584; Tiede 1988: 266 (apparently). Ellis 1974: 194 is uncertain. Blomberg 1990: 233–36 has a good discussion of this parable.

1 Fitzmyer is right to reject other attempts to understand the unit as only a polemic against the Pharisees, though allusions to them are present. Neither is the passage an exposition of Jer. 31:10–20 (so Kossen 1956), a view also rejected by Ellis 1974: 196.

14 Marshall 1978: 600–601 has details and notes the views. Bultmann 1963: 171 and Linnemann 1966: 67–70 opt for Matthean originality, while Jeremias 1963a: 40 and Ellis 1974: 197 are convinced that Luke has the original form. Marshall is undecided, as is Nolland 1993a: 769. All of this assumes that only one tradition of the story originally existed, which may not be true, as Marshall notes. Bultmann 1963: 202 also notes a similar parable in the later Gen. Rab. 86.4 on 39:2, where one of twelve cows is lost; also SB 1:785.

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1136–37 argues that all of the material is from Q, but that 17:2 has been influenced by Mark 9:42. Marshall 1978: 640 agrees that Q and Mark overlap in 17:1–2 and also sees (pp. 642, 643–44) the rest of 17:3–6 as coming from Q, though he entertains the possibility that Q has various forms from which Matthew and Luke drew. Creed 1930: 215 sees Q and Mark 11:23 exercising influence in 17:5–6. Ernst 1977: 477–80 sees 17:1–3a as coming from either Q or a form of oral tradition that circulated in a variety of forms, 17:3b–4 as rooted in Jesus' teaching, and triple tradition (i.e., Mark and Q) influencing 17:5–6. Ellis 1974: 207 speaks of Mark and Q in 17:1–4 and regards Luke's special source as responsible for 17:5–10. Egelkraut 1976: 120–21 speaks of Q/Mark overlap in 17:1–2 and multiple tradition in 17:5–6. Grundmann 1963: 331 suggests that it is hard to know if Q or Luke's special material is responsible for the unit, except for 17:7–10, which is L. Grundmann sees its roots in material earlier than the versions of Matthew and Mark. All of this assumes that only one form of these sayings existed in the tradition and that it emerged from a single saying. If this was a theme repeated by Jesus, multiple renderings could well exist.

7 B. Ber. 28b matches the Pharisee's prayer, while b. Ber. 17a is more gracious in valuing the contribution that each person makes when attention is directed to God. In b. Suk. 45b a man states that if only one hundred are to be saved, he and his son will be among them; but if only two are saved, they will be he and his son; Ellis 1974: 214. In y. Ber. 7d (4.2) (= Neusner et al. 1982–93: 1.168) a rabbi give thanks that he is in the synagogue and not in the theater or circus.

3 This view goes back to D. F. Strauss (1972: 352–53 [orignally 1840]), as Plummer 1896: 437 notes. Ellis 1974: 221–22 holds out the possibility of two parables. Marshall 1978: 702 holds that this text supports his two-versions-of-Q theory.

10 The stone as a messianic image in Judaism draws esp. on Isa. 28:16 and Dan. 2:44–45; but see also Gen. 28:17–19; Zech. 4:8–10; 3:8–9; Tg. Ps. 118:24 (printed in Walton 1657: 3.274; see Ellis 1974: 233). For Tg. Isa. 28:16 and other Jewish parallels, see Jeremias, TDNT 4:272–73. Tg. Isa. 28:16(CALTGO) reads: "Behold I set in Zion a king, a mighty king, mighty and terrible, whom I will uphold and strengthen; the prophet says: 'And the righteous in whom is confidence shall not tremble when affliction comes.'"

25 Against Ellis 1974: 244, a "Christian prophet" is not likely in view (see Marshall 1978: 769). If it is, it is only in the broadest sense of forth-telling, as opposed to a special group of gifted saints.

27 Ellis 1974: 244 calls this a form of "pesher-ing" like that of Christian prophets, though he is clear that the texts go back to Jesus. If additional sources are in view (as noted below), this appeal to Christian prophets is not a necessary conclusion. The sources may reflect Jesus' own emphases, which were not one-dimensional, but complex. Later reflection on this speech may have seen more clearly the distinction between near and the end-time.

46 Ellis appeals to Qumran usage for support (1QpHab 2.7; 7.2) and equates it to the "last hour" in 1 John 2:18. Maddox 1982: 114 rightly asks if Qumran can deliver this extended force.

18 But so Fitzmyer 1985: 1419, who speaks of "reconstituted Israel," and Marshall 1978: 817, who suggests an allusion to the Lord's Supper, along with many others (those who see a tie to Israel include Ellis 1974: 256 and Danker 1988: 350–51). Dupont 1964: 388 correctly argues against this view. This expectation is continued in the question of Acts 1:6–8 and the remarks of Peter in Acts 3:18–21. Even later Petrine expectation of a new heaven and earth in 2 Pet. 3:10–14, which looks to the ultimate end of history, does not remove this intervening stage when God deals with Israel in bringing it again into the blessing reserved for God's people.

8 The phrase enter into temptation occurred earlier in 8:13; 11:4; Ellis 1974: 257. On the conceptual similarity to 1 Pet. 5:8, see Seesemann, TDNT 6:31–32. On the temptation as entry into serious eschatological battle with Satan, see R. Brown 1994: 159–61, who ties the remark to Luke 11:4. Jesus must prepare for his great face-off with Satan.

38 Emerton 1958: 232 holds to the angelic view in the original tradition, but notes that if it is not a reference to a divine figure, then it is unique among OT passages.

1 Eppstein 1964: 55–56 holds that some aspects of this trade were recent and controversial (but I disagree with his dating the temple cleansing to a.d. 30).

5 The temple area was large (over 100 yards by 150 yards), so if Jesus acted quickly, there may have been little time to react. In addition, he may have intended only a prophetic sign, not a comprehensive cleansing. A brief symbolic action may have sufficed to express his intent, as even E. Sanders 1985: 70 acknowledges. Witherington 1990: 109–10 notes six historical questions that influence this passage and argue for its plausibility. One of the most basic is, Why invent such an event? Nolland 1993b: 935–36 notes nine views on this issue and opts for a modest, symbolic action against long-standing temple practice (pace Eppstein 1964) that thwarted true worship and called for purification, if not temple replacement.

6 For a methodological assessment of this debate, see R. Miller 1991. Sanders is unaware of Eppstein's 1964 article (see n. 1). Some in Judaism saw the temple as corrupt; 1 Enoch 89.73–90.29; 4Q174 [= 4QFlor] 1.1–12. Meier 1994: 886 rightly calls the cleansing "prophetic action," but opts for a rejection of the temple rather than a cleansing. This ignores the connection to Isa. 56.

4 This comparative-religions approach was very popular in the early part of the century. Numerous parallels have been noted, though none of them are exact. For a list of such parallels see Ernst 1977: 76 and Marshall 1978: 72–75, both of whom note the parallels and argue that such outside accounts are not the basis of this account (so also esp. Nolland 1989: 47). This is the current consensus, whatever else is said about the material. Machen 1930, though now dated, is the strongest critique against the comparative-religions approach.

37 Creed 1930: 19; Schneider 1977a: 50; Schürmann 1969: 49–50; Fitzmyer 1981: 348–50; Wiefel 1988: 51–52; Ernst 1977: 72; R. Brown 1977: 309. Gewiess, in an appendix to Laurentin's German 1967 edition, interestingly takes a view opposite of Laurentin in the French original and omits Laurentin's own discussion of the question.

4 The most detailed recent survey of the issues is Farris 1985: 26–30. Other treatments include R. Brown 1977: 377–78; Fitzmyer 1981: 376–78; Marshall 1978: 86–87; Ernst 1977: 92–94; Wiefel 1988: 62–64; Nolland 1989: 82–85; and Schürmann 1969: 84–85, 88–89, 93–94.

2 Major discussions can be found in Fitzmyer 1981: 392–93; R. Brown 1977: 411; Klostermann 1929: 31–32; Creed 1930: 30–32; Schürmann 1969: 103–4, 108–9, 118–19; Marshall 1978: 96–97; Plummer 1896: 46; Nolland 1989: 98–103; and Ernst 1977: 99.

5 It is possible that Luke described the dialogue in 3:12–14 with his own words, but the call for concrete repentance fits the work of a prophet. Ernst 1977: 143 argues that the question-and-answer style and the theme of care for fellow humans are like Luke. However, more likely is that the material has a traditional base, since the style is not as Lucan as Ernst suggests. So correctly argues Schürmann 1969: 169 n. 53, who with Marshall 1978: 142 notes numerous peculiarities that Luke does not have elsewhere. The Semitisms in 3:7–9 suggest the age of the material; see the exegesis of 3:8–9 for details.

12 Ernst 1977: 142. On “doing,” see Luke 6:43–45; 13:6–9; James 1:19–25; 3:12–18; 1 Cor. 9:23; Col. 3:17.

1 Schürmann 1969: 171 n. 64 notes that most of the terms from 3:15–18 (which is §16 in Aland 1985) show up elsewhere in Luke predominately where he has parallels. Ernst 1977: 145 calls the introduction Lucan, but with less rationale.

5 Ernst 1977: 155 speaks of a theological, not a biographical, reason for the number. Schürmann 1969: 199 nn. 76, 79 sees only the Davidic reference as key and does not deny a historical value to the number. In the Greco-Roman world, men were called to public service at thirty; Dionysius Halicarnassus, Roman Antiquities 4.6; C. F. Evans 1990: 254.

11 Schramm 1971: 37; Marshall 1978: 179. Ernst 1977: 168–69 sees Luke’s hand in many but not all changes. Bovon 1989: 207–8 sees an additional source beyond Mark, either Q or special Lucan material, and despairs of being able to sort out what came from where, beyond the basic elements in 4:18–22 and 4:25–27 originating in the additional source. Crossan 1991 fails to discuss this text, a significant omission in a life-of-Jesus study. This omission may well suggest that Crossan regards none of it as going back to Jesus.

46 See the use of πορεύω in 4:42; 7:6, 11; 9:51, 52, 56, 57; 13:33; 17:11; 22:22, 39; 24:28; Fitzmyer 1981: 539; Ernst 1977: 174–75. “Jesus’ hour had not yet come”; Nolland 1989: 201.

33 Marshall 1978: 197; Ernst 1977: 182; Hendriksen 1978: 269–70. See the exegesis of 4:35a for fuller discussion. Other demonic confessions are Mark 1:24; 3:11; 5:7; Luke 4:34; 8:28; Acts 16:17; 19:15; Matt. 8:29; Friedrich, TDNT 3:708; Grundmann, TDNT 3:900 §B1.

6 So hold most scholars. For discussion, see Schneider 1977a: 122–23; Marshall 1978: 199; Fitzmyer 1981: 561 (who speaks of L, where the postresurrection tradition was already moved back; Luke simply used L and joined it to Marcan material); Ernst 1977: 184–85 (who goes on to say that Luke is not merely embellishing Mark); Van Der Loos 1965: 670; Schramm 1971: 37–40 (who sees mostly Marcan material); Dietrich 1972: 25–38 (who explains why Mark alone cannot be the source).

39 Luke 6:33 (twice) and 6:35 use the term ἀγαθοποιέω; Ernst 1977: 205; Schürmann 1969: 308; Busse 1979: 140 perceptively notes the conceptual tie to 9:11 and 4:18.

42 Accepted by Godet 1875: 1.284–85; rejected by Schürmann 1969: 302; Nolland 1989: 255; Ernst 1977: 202 (discussion but no clear choice). Rejecting the reading but attempting to explain its origin are Vogt 1959; Lohse, TDNT 7:23 n. 183; Marshall 1978: 230; Wiefel 1988: 122; Bovon 1989: 266–67 (following Metzger 1975: 139). See also Buchanan and Wolfe 1978; Isaac 1981; and Skeat 1988. The reading is noted in the fourth century by Jerome, Letter 52.8, who did not know what it meant.

18 Fitzmyer 1981: 624, Schürmann 1969: 322, and Bovon 1989: 286 are certain about the Gentile allusion (Luke 2:31–32; 3:6; 4:25–29). Ernst 1977: 212, Marshall 1978: 242, and Tiede 1988: 136 are more cautious.

35 Marshall 1978: 258, however, sees a shift of audience from outsiders to insiders in this verse; so also Ernst 1977: 224. But see T. Schmidt 1987: 141.

12 For a figurative force are Fitzmyer 1981: 671, 673–74; Hendriksen 1978: 395–96; Arndt 1956: 212; Marshall 1978: 294; Ernst 1977: 250; Schürmann 1969: 416 n. 53 (who mentions that such a reed, Phragmites communis, could grow to a height of sixteen feet).

29 So Stählin, TDNT 3:154; Wilckens, TDNT 7:516; Liefeld 1984: 901–2; Plummer 1896: 207; Jeremias 1963a: 162; Marshall 1978: 301; Ernst 1977: 353; Tiede 1988: 158; Bovon 1989: 180; Wiefel 1988: 151; and Linton 1975–76. Nolland 1989: 344 also notes the possibility of an allusion to a real game here, regardless of which view is taken, citing work by Légasse 1969: 299–301.

25 Among those who argue for breaking up the account are Creed 1930: 111–12; Luce 1933: 162–63 (who argues that Luke confused two points here); and Ernst 1977: 258–59.

39 So Ernst 1977: 269. Some see a Paulinist touch here. Plummer 1896: 220 suggests that the Lucan conclusion in 8:12 may go back to Paul; Arndt 1956: 230. Others suggest that Luke is using church terminology to make clear what Jesus means, a point that seems likely; Marshall 1978: 325; Fitzmyer 1981: 713.

9 Luke 4:14 (of guidance); 4:36 (over spirits); 5:17, 6:19, and 8:46 (for healing); 9:1 and 10:13 (over demons and miracles); 19:37 (praise for the miracles done by God through Jesus); Ernst 1977: 285; BAGD 207–8; BAA 417–19. Achtemeier 1978 has a good discussion of miracles as a major Lucan theme; he also shows that these miracles are not tied to ancient views of magic nor based on the OT.

6 Fitzmyer 1981: 455. Ernst 1977: 137, considering the various options, speaks of fall 27 to fall 29. Hoehner allows this as one of the two possible options.

3 Schürmann 1969: 200; Fitzmyer 1981: 496; Ernst 1977: 155; Lohse, TDNT 8:486 n. 49. Bovon 1989: 189 calls attempts at harmonization excessive rationalization like that in current fundamentalism. C. F. Evans 1990: 252 calls the task "impossible," which is excessively skeptical.

5 On Jewish "works of love" and for the key ancient texts, see Egelkraut 1976: 139 nn. 3, 5; SB 1:487–88; 4:578–92; Hengel 1981: 8–10 and n. 21. Quick burials are mentioned in Acts 5:5–6, 10; John 11:1, 14, 17. On Jewish burial customs, see the exegesis of Luke 7:12. The OT notes periods that might demand that burial not take place, e.g., the time of exile (Jer. 16:5–7; Ernst 1977: 321).

19 Grundmann 1963: 209; Ernst 1977: 332; also 1 Enoch 89.14, 18–20, 55; 90.6–17; Sir. 13:17 ("how can wolf and lamb agree? / just so with sinner and devout" [NJB]); 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 5:18.

62 The RSV and NRSV read seventy; see also Schweizer 1984: 174; Danker 1988: 212 (who attributes the number seventy-two to Moses' addition of two elders when he appointed his seventy [Num. 11:26] and sees Gentile symbolism in the choice); Tiede 1988: 200–201; Ellis 1974: 155–56; C. F. Evans 1990: 444–45; Schürmann 1994: 54. The NIV reads seventy-two; also Manson 1949: 74; Liefeld 1984: 940; Hendriksen 1978: 570–71 ("leans" this way); Creed 1930: 144; Arndt 1956: 280; Ernst 1977: 331; Marshall 1978: 414–15 (who has a good summary of the issue); Fitzmyer 1985: 845–46; Wiefel 1988: 195; C. A. Evans 1990: 172; Nolland

1993a: 546. Those who are undecided include Luce 1933: 198–99; Plummer 1896: 272; and Schneider 1977a: 235 (who argues that a decision is less than certain).

4 Klostermann 1929: 118 and Egelkraut 1976: 85–90 favor a Lucan reworking of Mark. Schneider 1977a: 247 and Wiefel 1988: 207 see an independent source for the parable and Luke 10:25–28 using Mark. Bultmann 1963: 51; Luce 1933: 204 (citing Q); and Daube 1956: 247–50 see a version like that in Matthew. Zahn 1920: 427; Manson 1949: 259–61; and Jeremias 1963a: 202 see independent incidents or sources. Plummer 1896: 283 calls the possibility of one incident precarious, but not impossible. Fitzmyer 1985: 877–78 clearly ascribes the material to a special Lucan source, but sees only one incident, a distinction that seems hard to insist upon. Marshall 1978: 441 also leans toward two incidents, as do Hendriksen 1978: 591; Liefeld 1984: 942; and Blomberg 1990: 230–31, who speaks of “proem midrash” here. Ellis 1974: 159, though noting that two incidents are probable, regards the exchange as set in Jerusalem, which is possible, since the next account is in Bethany. Grundmann 1963: 221–22 speaks only of an independent source with the parable coming from L, while Ernst 1977: 344–46 leans this way, clearly noting that the parable is from special Lucan material. Nolland 1993a: 580 argues for an original link of neighbor and the parable, but that Luke is responsible for placing the great-commandment discussion here, drawing on Mark 12:28–34. Schürmann 1994: 136–40, 149–50 sees the parable emerging from L material and rooted in Jesus’ intention, but 10:25–28 is probably rooted in Mark’s account and does not testify to a separate event.

3 Fitzmyer 1985: 891 sees no connection between the accounts, regarding such an association as stretching the point (so also Ernst 1977: 354). But literary sequence and theme make it seem likely; see esp. Talbert 1982: 125.

39 The prayer's broad setting makes a baptismal reference unlikely, contra Ernst 1977: 367. This is basic exhortation about the life of faith.

41 Manson 1949: 265–66 is uncertain about its originality in Luke. Streeter 1924: 277 thinks it original. Ernst 1977: 362 and Fitzmyer 1985: 904 believe it was added later as a baptism formula to be prayed over the individual being baptized. On the use of the prayer in the history of the church, see Manson 1955–56. Besides Marcion and Gregory of Nyssa, the text is found only in manuscripts 162 and 700 and in a shorter form in Maximus the Confessor.

7 In Luke 1:20 the impediment is said to be from God; in Mark 7:32 no cause is stated, but Mark 9:17 links demonic activity with the lack of speech. On Jewish thinking about the association of disease or disability and demons, see SB 4:501–35; Van Der Loos 1965: 351–53; Ernst 1977: 373.

10 Other unlikely options are "Master of the complaint," "Lord of dung," or "Baal, the Flame"; Fitzmyer 1985: 920; Godet 1875: 2.60; Marshall 1978: 473; and Ernst 1977: 374.

1 Most argue for Q: Fitzmyer 1985: 953 (12:1 from L), 956 (12:2–9 from Q), 962–63 (12:10 from Q or Mark; 12:11–12 from Q); Ernst 1977: 392 (for 12:2–9); and Schneider 1977a: 277. Grundmann 1963: 252 says it is "probably" Q. Marshall 1978: 510 speaks of Q material conflated with Marcan elements and also argues that Q has various recensions and that Luke's version is slightly different from that of Matthew. Nolland 1993a: 675–76 sees Q for 12:2–9 and a mixture of Q and Mark for 12:10–12.

7 Tiede 1988: 233; Ernst 1977: 398; Fitzmyer 1985: 970; Lev. 19:18. Manson 1949: 271 notes the similar OT perspective: Job 31:24–25; Ps. 49; Eccles. 2:1–11. Note also T. Judah 18–19; Sir. 11:18–19; 1 Enoch 97.8–10; Mark 7:22; Rom. 1:29; 2 Cor. 9:5; 1 Tim. 6:10; 2 Pet. 2:3, 14; B. Scott 1989: 131–32.

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1039 remarks that, even though Matt. 12:11 has a similar saying, the rest of the detail is too different to be attributed to Q. In fact, it is too difficult for any other shared tradition. Fitzmyer also correctly denies that Luke 6:9 is a doublet to this verse. Marshall 1978: 578 sees a Q connection as possible. Bultmann 1963: 12 and Lohse, TDNT 7:26, argue that the text was a variant tradition created from Mark 3:1–6, but Ernst 1977: 435 correctly notes that the distinct terminology and motives suggest too much distance for this connection; so also Meier 1994: 710.

2 So Blomberg 1990: 237–39; Kistemaker 1980: 193–201; Plummer 1896: 359–60; Liefeld 1984: 979. Those accepting one parable but distinct sources are Luce 1933: 248; Grundmann 1963: 296 (L); Ernst 1977: 442 (L); Marshall 1978: 584; Tiede 1988: 266 (apparently). Ellis 1974: 194 is uncertain. Blomberg 1990: 233–36 has a good discussion of this parable.

1 Marshall 1978: 591 sees the presence of other sources. Wiefel 1988: 277 mentions Q, but also suggests that the passage may be independent (he sees 14:28–33 coming from special Lucan material). Grundmann 1963: 301 says that it is uncertain whether the material is from Q or from a source in

Luke's special material. Ernst 1977: 447 is also uncertain. The double tradition in the Gospel of Thomas 55 (family and cross) and 101 (family) raises the possibility of the existence of multiple traditions in the church and, thus, whether they were said on multiple occasions. (The Gospel of Thomas 98 has a third picture of an assassin who practices by thrusting his sword into a wall.)

6 Ernst 1977: 448 is hesitant about this connection. Manson 1949: 131 shows the idiom by citing a late Jewish text, b. *Ta*ʿ*an.* 7b, where it is said of certain rabbis, "If they hated their beauty, they would be more learned." The opposite attitude where other things are loved more is found in Luke 14:20 and 18:20–24.

9 This style of rhetorical opening is frequent in Luke: 11:5, 11; 14:28, 31; 17:7; Ernst 1977: 453. The answer to the "which of you?" question is that all would, if they react with their heart, given the risk to the animal.

17 Ernst 1977: 464; Klostermann 1929: 163; and Creed 1930: 204 argue that the variation is only for literary value; but ancient parables were based on daily life, so the point may not be an either/or proposition. Derrett 1970: 66, 69 also defends a much higher charge for oil.

3 For Luke having Q's original order and not Matthew, see Manson 1949: 134; Fitzmyer 1985: 1114; Schneider 1977a: 337 (perhaps); Meier 1994: 157; and Marshall 1978: 627. Ernst 1977: 469 speaks of Q material, special Lucan material, and Lucan redaction. Wiefel 1988: 294 speaks of Q in 16:16–17 and of Mark in 16:18. Godet 1875: 2.173 prefers Luke's positioning of material to Matthew's. However, the warnings are so general that parallel traditions may exist, reflecting a variety of settings.

8 Bultmann 1963: 178 calls the account a similitude, which is where he puts parables and such. Berger 1984: 51 sees it as a parable. Ernst 1977: 472 rightly compares it to 15:11–32 and 16:1–8. Hauck, TDNT 5:752, calls it an illustrative story and compares it to 10:30–37; 12:16–21; and 18:9–14. For the structure, see B. Scott 1989: 146–48.

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1136–37 argues that all of the material is from Q, but that 17:2 has been influenced by Mark 9:42. Marshall 1978: 640 agrees that Q and Mark overlap in 17:1–2 and also sees (pp. 642, 643–44) the rest of 17:3–6 as coming from Q, though he entertains the possibility that Q has various forms from which Matthew and Luke drew. Creed 1930: 215 sees Q and Mark 11:23 exercising influence in 17:5–6. Ernst 1977: 477–80 sees 17:1–3a as coming from either Q or a form of oral tradition that circulated in a variety of forms, 17:3b–4 as rooted in Jesus' teaching, and triple tradition (i.e., Mark and Q) influencing 17:5–6. Ellis 1974: 207 speaks of Mark and Q in 17:1–4 and regards Luke's special source as responsible for 17:5–10. Egelkraut 1976: 120–21 speaks of Q/Mark overlap in 17:1–2 and multiple tradition in 17:5–6. Grundmann 1963: 331 suggests that it is hard to know if Q or Luke's special material is responsible for the unit, except for 17:7–10, which is L. Grundmann sees its roots in material earlier than the versions of Matthew and Mark. All of this assumes that only one form of these sayings existed in the tradition and that it emerged from a single saying. If this was a theme repeated by Jesus, multiple renderings could well exist.

5 Fitzmyer 1985: 1137 and Bultmann 1963: 144 call 17:1–3a a legal saying, while Berger 1984: 65 calls it a "sentence." Luke 17:3b–4 is like a wisdom saying according to Ernst 1977: 479 and a warning according to Berger 1984: 119, 165. Fitzmyer 1985: 1142 calls 17:5–6 a wisdom saying, while Berger 1984: 81 calls it a pronouncement (“apophthegm”). All agree that 17:7–10 is a parable.

8 In everyday Greek, παρατήρησις was used of the symptoms or signs of disease. To make such calculations, Judaism played off chronological imagery in Ps. 90:4 (seven thousand years); Jer. 25:11; 29:10 (seventy exile weeks); Dan. 9:2 (seventy year-weeks), although Ernst 1977: 486 notes that not all rabbinic Jews accepted such speculation (for which, see SB 4:977–1015 and n. 5 above).

13 Jeremias 1963a: 141 overstates the parallelism with Pauline usage, as do Fitzmyer 1985: 1185 and Arndt 1956: 380. Linnemann 1966: 62–63, 144–46 n. 11; Ernst 1977: 497–98; and Marshall 1978: 680–81 are clearer. Cf. Ps. 51:19 [51:21 MT]; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 12:7; 1Q28b [= 1QSb] 4.22.

2 Ernst 1977: 498 notes that other Lucan pericopes with ties to Mark 10–11 appear mostly outside of Luke 9:50–18:14. In this larger section, only Luke 16:18 has a potential parallel with Mark 10:11–12.

12 The expression is used only here in the NT. Matt. 19:24 = Mark 10:25 has ῥαφίς, which always refers to a sewing needle; BAGD 734; BAA 1470 (in the NT only in these parallels). For other exaggerations by Jesus, see Luke 6:41; 17:2; Ernst 1977: 504.

9 The Easter fast in some church circles has roots in this view; Ernst 1977: 581.

4 Soards 1987: 96 mentions 22:39a–b, 40b, 42 as the minimum (he excludes 22:43–44 on textual grounds). Ernst 1977: 607 and Goulder 1989:

741–42 make the best case for additional sources. C. A. Evans 1990: 329 rejects the originality of 22:43–44. For discussion of how the prayer's contents could be known when the disciples are some distance away and asleep, see R. Brown 1994: 174. The Jesus Seminar rejects the historicity of the material on the premise that no one heard the prayer (Funk and Hoover 1993: 391). Brown calls such an objection to historicity a "low level" approach and suggests that the disciples need not have been asleep at this point, although later he suggests that they did not need to hear the prayer because they knew how Jesus prayed. Either explanation is possible. Brown regards the prayer and the event as certain (p. 234), but is less confident of knowledge of the exact words (p. 225). I prefer the view that the event drove the meaning and form of the tradition.

1 Those arguing for an additional source are Fitzmyer 1985: 1456–58 (but not in 22:54–62); Creed 1930: 276 (maybe); Marshall 1978: 839–40, 845, 848; Grundmann 1963: 416, 418–19; Ernst 1977: 612–13, 616, 618; Nolland 1993b: 1092–93, 1098–99, 1104–5; and J. Green 1988: 276. Soards 1987: 100–120 argues for a mixture of tradition, Marcan rewriting, and Lucan rewriting. The classic study on this issue is V. Taylor 1972. Dissent about an extra source outside of some oral material comes from R. Brown 1994: 581–83. Most of Luke's changes (e.g., 22:63–65) reflect his style and vocabulary. But all that this shows is Luke's hand on his sources, not whether additional information existed. Brown sees the "game" in 22:64 as evidence of the presence of oral tradition (see the exegesis). But why limit it here, given evidence of sources throughout this material?

1 Luce 1933: 354 speaks of Mark plus L. Marshall 1978: 878 and V. Taylor 1972: 99–103 say that special Lucan material may appear in 23:55–56. Ernst 1977: 640–41 holds that it is 23:50c, 51a, 53b, 54b. Nolland 1993b: 1162–63 holds to 23:53c and perhaps 23:52–54. Grundmann 1963: 436 holds to 23:50, 51a, 53b, 54–56. Fitzmyer 1985: 1523 holds to 23:53c, 56a. Though it could be debated whether certain verses derive from another source, Luke seems to have had access to additional material, against R. Brown 1994: 1226.

4 Ernst 1977: 659 says that Luke's knowledge of the location is imprecise. Dillon 1978: 87–88 sees Luke's distance as an error.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 53–57; F. F. Bruce 1988: 6–13 (of Acts); Bovon 1989: 23; Kümmel 1975: 151; Danker 1988: 17–18; Tiede 1980: 1–18, 70; Maddox 1982: 6–9; Esler 1987: 27–29; C. A. Evans 1990: 2; C. F. Evans 1990: 14; L. Johnson 1991: 2–3.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 53–57; F. F. Bruce 1988: 6–13 (of Acts); Bovon 1989: 23; Kümmel 1975: 151; Danker 1988: 17–18; Tiede 1980: 1–18, 70; Maddox 1982: 6–9; Esler 1987: 27–29; C. A. Evans 1990: 2; C. F. Evans 1990: 14; L. Johnson 1991: 2–3.

1 Bovon 1989: 357–58 notes the OT similarities (returning the son to the parent, the widow, and recognition that God's messenger is present) and differences (Jesus' taking the initiative, instantaneous resuscitation, and the crowd's response). Bovon references the key study of this passage by Harbarth 1978. For the connections to 1 Kings, see Brodie 1986, though he overdraws the case for framing around this OT book. The differences between the OT and the event reveal that the event controls the details (see C. A. Evans 1990: 115 and Evans in Evans and Sanders 1993: 223–24).

24 Luke does not cite the text explicitly, but summarizes. This is not a softening of the reference, but his typical effort to shorten and summarize. For studies on the use and interpretation of Isa. 6:9–10 in Judaism and the early church, see Hesse 1955; Gnilka 1961; C. A. Evans 1989c.

11 Two key studies on the Elijah motif in Luke are Brodie 1987 and C. A. Evans 1987b. Evans argues that Elijah reflects the motif of God's election of his true people.

4 Marshall 1978: 405 notes that the Hebrew idiom may suggest a source behind Luke's remarks. Appealing to Ezek. 6:2; 13:17; 15:7; 20:46 [21:2 MT], C. A. Evans 1987a argues that the force is "to dispatch," a view possible for the term but awkward for this context. In a reworking of this article in Evans and Sanders 1993: 93–105, Evans makes less of the lexical argument and argues for an allusion to Ezek. 21:2–6 [21:7–11 MT], with the implication that with the journey comes not only destined suffering for Jesus but also judgment for Israel (he also adds Ezek. 25:2; 28:21; 29:2; and 38:2, while emphasizing the parallel in 20:46 [21:2 MT]; p. 100). If so, then Jesus' act is like that of the prophet and has a place in the divine drama of Israel's history. This view is possible, but not certain. For a denial of judgment here, see Giblin 1985: 31–32.

7 Josephus, Jewish War 2.12.3 §232; Jeremias 1969: 352–58; Jeremias, TDNT 7:88–94. On Jewish attitudes, see Sir. 50:25–26; T. Levi 7.2; Gen. Rab. 81.3 on 35:2; Jub. 30.5–6, 23; C. A. Evans 1990: 164. On the relationship between Jews and Samaritans, see Brindle 1984.

62 The RSV and NRSV read seventy; see also Schweizer 1984: 174; Danker 1988: 212 (who attributes the number seventy-two to Moses' addition of two elders when he appointed his seventy [Num. 11:26] and sees Gentile symbolism in the choice); Tiede 1988: 200–201; Ellis 1974: 155–56; C. F. Evans 1990: 444–45; Schürmann 1994: 54. The NIV reads seventy-two; also Manson 1949: 74; Liefeld 1984: 940; Hendriksen 1978: 570–71 ("leans" this way); Creed 1930: 144; Arndt 1956: 280; Ernst 1977: 331; Marshall 1978: 414–15 (who has a good summary of the issue); Fitzmyer 1985: 845–46; Wiefel 1988: 195; C. A. Evans 1990: 172; Nolland 1993a: 546. Those who are undecided include Luce 1933: 198–99; Plummer 1896: 272; and Schneider 1977a: 235 (who argues that a decision is less than certain).

16 Translation from Jeremias 1971a: 198. See also Shemoneh Esreh [Eighteen Benedictions] no. 3 (= Schürer 1973–87: 2.456, 460). However, Jesus' prayer is more like Jewish "short" prayers than this long Jewish liturgical prayer; C. A. Evans 1990: 182. As such, the prayer's form and function come as no surprise in a Jewish context.

8 In t. Menaḥ. 13.22 (= Neusner 1977–86: 5.162), the leadership's love of money and hatred of one another is why the temple came to be destroyed; also SB 1:937; 2:222; 4:336–39; Jeremias 1969: 49, 114. Luce 1933: 264 objects to this description, but fails to interact with the ancient sources. C. A. Evans 1990: 245 is right that a story about the afterlife would hardly be a meaningful rebuke to the Sadducees.

15 The image is neither strange nor derived; but so Fitzmyer 1985: 1144 (apparently) and C. A. Evans 1990: 256.

7 This point makes it unlikely that the judge was a Gentile, but so Plummer 1896: 411 and C. A. Evans 1990: 269. On the historical background, see B. Scott 1989: 184, citing Chajes 1892, who notes that most cases were heard by one judge (though he uses late texts).

28 Moessner 1989: 127, 131, 176, 211 details this view. J. A. Sanders 1974 and C. A. Evans 1990: 166–69 tie the portrait to the themes of election and the true people of God. C. F. Evans 1955 is responsible for raising the connection to Deuteronomy and argues for it throughout his commentary (1990: 34–37, 435).

33 Cf. “times of the age” in Tob. 14:4–5 and “season of visitation” in 1QS 4.18–19. C. A. Evans 1990: 313 notes that this hope is a decisive argument against J. T. Sanders’s claim (1987: 216–19) that Luke is anti-Semitic (he does see a future time when Israel will have a key role).

34 So Tiede 1980: 87–96 correctly shows that Luke teaches vengeance on Israel followed by vindication. Acts 3:19–21 suggests this most clearly, but so does Luke 13:35b by pointing to a day when Israel will respond to Messiah; see also C. A. Evans 1990: 313–14.

4 Soards 1987: 96 mentions 22:39a–b, 40b, 42 as the minimum (he excludes 22:43–44 on textual grounds). Ernst 1977: 607 and Goulder 1989: 741–42 make the best case for additional sources. C. A. Evans 1990: 329 rejects the originality of 22:43–44. For discussion of how the prayer’s contents could be known when the disciples are some distance away and asleep, see R. Brown 1994: 174. The Jesus Seminar rejects the historicity of the material on the premise that no one heard the prayer (Funk and Hoover 1993: 391). Brown calls such an objection to historicity a “low level” approach and suggests that the disciples need not have been asleep at this point, although later he suggests that they did not need to hear the prayer because they knew how Jesus prayed. Either explanation is possible. Brown regards the prayer and the event as certain (p. 234), but is less confident of knowledge of the exact words (p. 225). I prefer the view that the event drove the meaning and form of the tradition.

23 Parsons 1987: 193–94, 196 posits that Bethany is named in order to provide literary closure to the triumphal entry by being a triumphal departure. But this link could occur with either Bethany or the Mount of Olives. It is not clear that Acts 1:2 and 1:6–11 are distinct events (Parsons gives strong arguments for one event, though the chronology is a tension for this option). Nonetheless, the popular idea of Lucan literary telescoping is possible given the lack of explicit temporal markers in Luke 24:44, 50 and Luke's love of retelling major events (e.g., Saul's conversion and the offer of the gospel to Cornelius; C. A. Evans 1990: 360–62). Seeing the ascension as an event that is telescoped here allows one to see how the different Galilean appearances suggested by Matthew and John fit into the timing of events more easily. See also Osborne 1984: 137–38, 266–70.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 53–57; F. F. Bruce 1988: 6–13 (of Acts); Bovon 1989: 23; Kümmel 1975: 151; Danker 1988: 17–18; Tiede 1980: 1–18, 70; Maddox 1982: 6–9; Esler 1987: 27–29; C. A. Evans 1990: 2; C. F. Evans 1990: 14; L. Johnson 1991: 2–3.

1 Bovon 1989: 30 n. 1 notes that these comparisons with ancient prologues date back to the eighteenth century with G. Raphelius and J. J.

Wettstein. C. F. Evans 1990: 116–19 cites several of these “scientific prefaces.”

6 Bovon 1989: 66–67 (also n. 13) speaks of Isaiah and the development of Jewish speculation like Pseudo-Philo’s portrait of Isaac and Moses (Biblical Antiquities 8–9) and Philo’s view of Isaac (Cherubim 12–15 §§40–52), though Bovon notes that for Philo this detail was allegorical. One could add Pseudo-Philo’s portrait of Samson’s birth (Biblical Antiquities 42). None of these accounts are virgin births: they only supply details of the event not in the original accounts. Bovon also argues for Hellenistic influence. C. F. Evans 1990: 156–57 surveys divine paternity in the ancient world, but denies its value for this passage. He prefers to speak of a retrojection, which means he thinks later reflection has produced the tradition.

39 Fitzmyer 1981: 350. Bovon 1989: 76 speaks of a reference to the creative power of God. Isa. 32:15 LXX (A, א) mentions the Spirit’s “coming upon” someone. See also 1 Sam. 10:6; 16:13 (“leap upon”); and Ezek. 37:14; C. F. Evans 1990: 163.

44 Marshall 1978: 71 uses the German term Gottgehö;rig to describe his view. In the NT, the title appears in John 1:34; 20:31; Acts 9:20; 2 Cor. 1:19; Gal. 4:4; Heb. 4:14; 1 John 4:15; Rev. 2:18 (C. F. Evans 1990: 165).

1 Schürmann 1969: 64 notes that the sign of the leaping baby is explicit in the passage, while the fulfillment is implicitly presented in the sign. C. F. Evans 1990: 168 rightly calls this a “linchpin” passage.

3 R. Brown 1977: 346–55; Wiefel 1988: 57; Farris 1985: 86–98; Fitzmyer 1981: 359–62; Jones 1968; Bemile 1986: 36. Fitzmyer, agreeing with Winter and Schneider, notes that the hymn is parallel to the psalms in 1 Maccabees, the Qumran Thanksgiving hymns, and the Qumran War Scroll. The hymn also resembles the OT hymns of praise (Ps. 33, 47, 48, 113, 135, 136; one could add to the list 1 Sam. 2:1–10; Jon. 2:2–9 [2:3–10 MT]; Isa. 38:9–20; Tob. 8:15–17; and Sir. 51:1–12). Fitzmyer (p. 359) regards 1:48 as a Lucan insert. In fact, he seems favorable to R. Brown's position that the hymn emerged out of the Jewish-Christian community. Schneider 1977a: 56 sees a Hellenistic Jewish-Christian rewrite of Jewish material or a reworking by Luke himself; so also C. F. Evans 1990: 171–73.

6 Fitzmyer 1981: 380; Klostermann 1929: 23; SB 2:107. Efforts to prove that the grandfather was the most frequent choice, as argue Creed 1930: 24 and Nolland 1989: 79, are not substantiated. Examples of naming after a relative are numerous: after the father: Tob. 1:1, 9; Josephus, Life 1 §5; Jewish War 5.13.2 §534; Antiquities 14.1.3 §10; after a grandfather: 1 Macc. 2:1–2; Jub. 11.15. C. F. Evans 1990: 179, positing Hellenistic assimilation, is entirely too skeptical about the details here.

4 Such a classification is also used for other sections of Luke 1–2. On such motifs in the Greco-Roman biographical tradition, see H. De Jonge 1977–78; Nolland 1989: 127; C. F. Evans 1990: 222–27. See n. 6 for the ancient texts.

3 Reicke 1968: 228–34. On these distinctions, see Sherwin-White 1963: 1–23 (who cites a variety of relevant ancient texts); C. F. Evans 1990: 233; Tacitus, Annals 15.25.

11 Schürmann 1969: 164 n. 21. On "coming wrath" in Judaism, see Jub. 15.34; Ps. Sol. 15.4; 1 Enoch 84.4–6; C. F. Evans 1990: 239.

1 On the Jewish use of genealogies, see C. F. Evans 1990: 251–53. Such lists were available to some in the first century. Josephus, Life 1 §§3–6 and Against Apion 1.7 §§30–36 limits such lists to priestly families.

5 Ernst 1977: 155 speaks of a theological, not a biographical, reason for the number. Schürmann 1969: 199 nn. 76, 79 sees only the Davidic reference as key and does not deny a historical value to the number. In the Greco-Roman world, men were called to public service at thirty; Dionysius Halicarnassus, Roman Antiquities 4.6; C. F. Evans 1990: 254.

4 Schürmann 1969: 218; so also Schneider 1977a: 99; C. F. Evans 1990: 256 (who incorrectly calls this the majority view); and Manson 1949: 42–43 (but with no details other than the claim that Matthew's order makes "a fine dramatic climax" so it is hard to imagine Luke's altering it if it were the original).

14 Glickman 1983: 226–27. Nolland 1989: 179 says that the test is exploitation of Jesus' privilege of sonship, since the Son has access to the powers of the Father. "Son of God" here has a special force for Jesus' unique filial relationship to God, since Jesus can access such power. But C. F. Evans 1990: 258 ties υἱός to 3:22, so that it means "servant of God" or "king." Nolland's view is more likely. Satan is not testing regal authority, but something more significant.

15 Liefeld 1984: 864; Schulz 1972: 187 n. 98; Foerster, TDNT 5:486; Manson 1949: 44. The picture of the "high mountain" is almost regal imagery and recalls how rulers often lived high on a mountain over their subjects. Such "heavenly journeys" are not unusual: 2 Cor. 12:2–3. C. F.

Evans 1990: 258 cites as parallel Deut. 34:1–4, where Moses sees the promised land from a mountain.

29 C. F. Evans 1990: 260 says Luke sees the psalm as about the Son of God, but this is not necessary. It need refer only to the righteous for the point to apply.

4 Fitzmyer 1981: 524 has a bibliography on the synagogue. See also Safrai 1976c; C. F. Evans 1990: 264–65.

8 Bultmann 1963: 31–32 (where he calls the account an apophthegm or pronouncement story, which he believes grew into this full-blown account); Creed 1930: 65; Schneider 1977a: 106–7; Klostermann 1929: 62; Fitzmyer 1981: 527; Tannehill 1972; C. F. Evans 1990: 266–67 (who notes a series of Lucan expressions in the account); Goulder 1989: 299. For a summary of the recent discussion and a full bibliography on this passage, see Schreck 1989, while Corrington 1993 evaluates a redactional reading of this text with other types of readings.

22 For details, see Bock 1987: 319 n. 68; J. A. Sanders 1975: 80–81. The idea of anointing, the establishment of justice, and the picture of restoration are shared in Isa. 42:1, 3–4; 49:4, 7; 61:1–2. Tg. Isa. 61:1 clearly reads the text this way: “The spirit of prophecy from before Lord Elohim is upon me.” But it is wrong to read the OT passage as only about Isaiah, as C. F. Evans 1990: 269 does. Salvation in Isaiah is depicted in terms of God’s exodus pattern and is too comprehensive to refer only to Isaiah. Judaism was right to read the text ultimately in terms of the eschaton. This is another typologically fulfilled text like Luke 3:4–6; see the discussion of typology there.

12 Luke 4:36; 6:18; 8:29; 9:42; 11:24; Foerster, TDNT 2:16; Hauck, TDNT 3:428. On demons in Judaism, see Josephus, Jewish War 7.6.3 §185 (“spirits of wicked men who enter the living and kill them unless aid is forthcoming”); 1 Enoch 19.1; Jub. 10.5; T. Ben. 5.2; C. F. Evans 1990: 279. In the OT, δαιμονίου occurs in Ps. 90:6 [91:6 Engl.] and τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἀκάθαρτον in Zech. 13:2.

22 Bertram, TDNT 3:6, notes that the crowd’s reaction is a typical ending to a miracle story; Mark 1:27; Luke 5:9. C. F. Evans 1990: 281 notes that the reaction is like the comment of a chorus in similar accounts.

23 Josephus, Antiquities 13.5.9 §171; 13.10.6 §§293–98; 17.2.4–3.1 §§41–51; 18.1.2 §11; Jewish War 2.8.14 §§162–63; C. F. Evans 1990: 298–99.

5 Arndt 1956: 238 puts all of these events on the same day, while Marshall 1978: 335 suggests an allusion to Ps. 65:7 [65:8 MT] and the “tumult of the people,” though the verbal connection is vague. C. F. Evans 1990: 383 notes Ps. 65:5–8 [65:6–9 MT]; 46:2–6 [46:3–7 MT]; Isa. 17:12–13, which are less than evident. Matt. 8–9 is topically arranged.

3 Schürmann 1969: 200; Fitzmyer 1981: 496; Ernst 1977: 155; Lohse, TDNT 8:486 n. 49. Bovon 1989: 189 calls attempts at harmonization excessive rationalization like that in current fundamentalism. C. F. Evans 1990: 252 calls the task “impossible,” which is excessively skeptical.

7 Resseguie 1975 puts five of fourteen possible interpretations in this category. C. F. Evans 1990: 433 points out the lack of chronological notes, especially at the end of the section. Vague indications of time and place are provided only in the beginning of the section: 9:52, 56–57; 10:1, 21, 38;

11:14, 27; 13:10, 31; 14:1, 25. Schürmann 1994: 1 speaks of a metaphorical journey account in which Jesus goes his way to Jerusalem as an itinerant prophetic teacher who divides Israel. On Luke's use of journey and way terminology, see Schneider 1977a: 227.

9 Talbert 1982: 111–12 sees chiasmus in 9:51–19:44, but has to omit Luke 15 and place 14:1–6 out of its Lucan order! Goulder 1964: 196 argues for the following chiastic links:

10:25	eternal life
11:1	prayer
11:14	healing
11:37	pharisaic hypocrisy
12:1	money
12:35	repentance
13:10	rejection of Israel and invitation to outcasts
14:1	rejection of Israel and invitation to outcasts
15:1	repentance
16:1	money
16:14	pharisaic hypocrisy
17:11	healing
17:5	prayer
18:18	eternal life

The most plausible case for chiasmus is made by Farrell 1986. Blomberg also deals with and rejects theories that make the central section a Christian Deuteronomy; see C. F. Evans 1955. My main criticism of Blomberg's

article is that it regards the section's end as falling at 18:34, ignoring later literary clues that Jesus has not arrived in Jerusalem (19:28, 41). This may be the Achilles' heel against his theory that the section's parable source was laid out chiastically, especially if 19:11–27 is taken into consideration. Still, aspects of Blomberg's case and the general outline of a possible Lucan source may surface in my discussion; see also Nolland 1993a: 530–31.

62 The RSV and NRSV read seventy; see also Schweizer 1984: 174; Danker 1988: 212 (who attributes the number seventy-two to Moses' addition of two elders when he appointed his seventy [Num. 11:26] and sees Gentile symbolism in the choice); Tiede 1988: 200–201; Ellis 1974: 155–56; C. F. Evans 1990: 444–45; Schürmann 1994: 54. The NIV reads seventy-two; also Manson 1949: 74; Liefeld 1984: 940; Hendriksen 1978: 570–71 ("leans" this way); Creed 1930: 144; Arndt 1956: 280; Ernst 1977: 331; Marshall 1978: 414–15 (who has a good summary of the issue); Fitzmyer 1985: 845–46; Wiefel 1988: 195; C. A. Evans 1990: 172; Nolland 1993a: 546. Those who are undecided include Luce 1933: 198–99; Plummer 1896: 272; and Schneider 1977a: 235 (who argues that a decision is less than certain).

28 Moessner 1989: 127, 131, 176, 211 details this view. J. A. Sanders 1974 and C. A. Evans 1990: 166–69 tie the portrait to the themes of election and the true people of God. C. F. Evans 1955 is responsible for raising the connection to Deuteronomy and argues for it throughout his commentary (1990: 34–37, 435).

3 C. F. Evans 1990: 886 notes that an immediate postresurrection appearance in bodily form had no precedent in Hellenistic thought or Judaism—not even for Messiah.

9 Ψηλαφάω occurs elsewhere in the NT only at Acts 17:27; Heb. 12:18; 1 John 1:1 (BAGD 892; BAA 1779–80); cf. Gen. 27:12; Judg. 16:26; Ignatius, Smyrneans 3.2. Plummer 1896: 560 wonders if 1 John 1:1 knows of this event, given its use of this rare term. See also C. F. Evans 1970: 108–9.

30 Plummer 1896: 138; Schneider 1977a: 116; Fitzmyer 1981: 553. Against this argument is Farmer 1964: 128–30, who sees Mark combining both Matthew and Luke; but see Fitzmyer 1972.

1 For solid overviews of this area, see McKnight 1991b and Stein 1987. McKnight is slightly more confident than I am of Marcan priority, though I still regard it likely that Mark was the first Gospel written. Still, his and Stein's overviews show why many think Mark's Gospel is first. For a comparative study of the two major options in the debate, see Bellinzoni, Tyson, and Walker 1985 and Dungan 1990. A study making significant points about Q and the complex interrelationship of the Gospel writers is Reicke 1986. For the case for Matthean priority, see Farmer 1964.

3 This view is experiencing a resurgence, at least in America, which was fueled by Farmer's 1964 study. Numerous studies defending the view have come out since Farmer. This camp has caused some in Germany to speak of the Ur-Markus hypothesis again; that is, that the other Gospels worked with an early edition of Mark distinct from the version in our canon. It is hard to know where the discussion is headed.

9 Talbert 1982: 111–12 sees chiasmus in 9:51–19:44, but has to omit Luke 15 and place 14:1–6 out of its Lucan order! Goulder 1964: 196 argues for the following chiastic links:

10:25	eternal life
11:1	prayer
11:14	healing
11:37	pharisaic hypocrisy
12:1	money
12:35	repentance
13:10	rejection of Israel and invitation to outcasts
14:1	rejection of Israel and invitation to outcasts
15:1	repentance
16:1	money
16:14	pharisaic hypocrisy
17:11	healing
17:5	prayer
18:18	eternal life

The most plausible case for chiasmus is made by Farrell 1986. Blomberg also deals with and rejects theories that make the central section a Christian Deuteronomy; see C. F. Evans 1955. My main criticism of Blomberg's article is that it regards the section's end as falling at 18:34, ignoring later literary clues that Jesus has not arrived in Jerusalem (19:28, 41). This may be the Achilles' heel against his theory that the section's parable source was laid out chiastically, especially if 19:11–27 is taken into consideration. Still, aspects of Blomberg's case and the general outline of a possible Lucan source may surface in my discussion; see also Nolland 1993a: 530–31.

1 Drury 1976: 49–51 and Tannehill 1974; earlier Cadbury 1958: 192–93. For a fuller list, see Farris 1985: 15.

3 R. Brown 1977: 346–55; Wiefel 1988: 57; Farris 1985: 86–98; Fitzmyer 1981: 359–62; Jones 1968; Bemile 1986: 36. Fitzmyer, agreeing with Winter and Schneider, notes that the hymn is parallel to the psalms in 1 Maccabees, the Qumran Thanksgiving hymns, and the Qumran War Scroll. The hymn also resembles the OT hymns of praise (Ps. 33, 47, 48, 113, 135, 136; one could add to the list 1 Sam. 2:1–10; Jon. 2:2–9 [2:3–10 MT]; Isa. 38:9–20; Tob. 8:15–17; and Sir. 51:1–12). Fitzmyer (p. 359) regards 1:48 as a Lucan insert. In fact, he seems favorable to R. Brown's position that the hymn emerged out of the Jewish-Christian community. Schneider 1977a: 56 sees a Hellenistic Jewish-Christian rewrite of Jewish material or a reworking by Luke himself; so also C. F. Evans 1990: 171–73.

4 Farris 1985: 14 makes the latter two charges. Grigsby 1984 argues that the aorist tenses of the hymn are against its proposed Marian setting and give evidence that the hymn was inserted by Luke. The Magnificat, he believes, originally was a Semitic hymn that came to Luke in Greek through the Jewish-Christian church, but Grigsby's approach ignores the hymn's Semitic roots and setting, as well as making too much of the aorist tenses. See the exegesis of 1:51 and n. 22 below.

9 Three Old Latin manuscripts (a, b, and l*) attest to Elizabeth, as does the Latin version of Irenaeus, Against Heresies 4.7.1. Jerome refers to this view as contained in Origen's seventh homily on Luke. About A.D.. 400 Niceta of Remesiana (in the area of the former Yugoslavia) knows of this reading (De Psalmodiae Bono 76 or 9.11). Wiefel 1988: 56 and Fitzmyer

1981: 365–66 note the texts. Farris 1985: 108–13 has a detailed look at the issue, as does Bemile 1986: 5–19. Bemile correctly notes that the testimony of the fathers is for Mary (pp. 12 and 266–68 nn. 54–61), including Irenaeus, Against Heresies 3.10.2; Tertullian, On the Soul 26; and Athanasius, In Lucam (PG 3:26:1393).

10 Farris 1985: 67–85 surveys the parallel examples in the OT and Judaism; Berger 1984: 242–43; Fitzmyer 1981: 359; Schneider 1977a: 56–58. Bovon 1989: 82–83 notes that the Magnificat focuses on the victory of the righteous; it does not praise God as Creator, as do the Qumranic hymns, and has less harsh criticism of enemies than do the Psalms of Solomon. Bovon notes many verbal parallels to the Psalms of Solomon:

Motif	Magnificat	Psalms of Solomon
fearing God	1:50	2.33; 3.12; 4.23; 15.13
Israel or the nation as servant	1:54	12.6; 17.21
Abraham and his descendants	1:55	9.9; 18.3
the proud	1:51	2.1–31; 17.13, 23
contrast of rich and poor	1:53	5.11

reversal	1:52	11.4
refrain	1:50	13.12
power of God	1:51	17.3
arm of God	1:51	13.2
God’s seeing	1:48	18.2
God’s help	1:54	16.3, 5
God’s remembering	1:54	10.1, 4
God’s speaking	1:55	11.7

4 The most detailed recent survey of the issues is Farris 1985: 26–30. Other treatments include R. Brown 1977: 377–78; Fitzmyer 1981: 376–78; Marshall 1978: 86–87; Ernst 1977: 92–94; Wiefel 1988: 62–64; Nolland 1989: 82–85; and Schürmann 1969: 84–85, 88–89, 93–94.

6 R. Brown 1977: 377–78; Fitzmyer 1981: 377–78; Farris 1985: 27–28. The formative articulation of the view is Benoit 1956–57: 182–83. His work not only formulated the basic position, but is regarded as having challenged the unity of the hymn as well.

7 Among the hypotheses are the following:

	Added to	Adherents
1:76–79	Jewish or Jewish-Christian hymn	Winter 1956: 239 n. 41
1:76 or 1:76–77	early Christian hymn	Benoit 1956–57: 182–91
1:68–75	Christian hymn	Schürmann 1969: 88–90
1:76–77, 79b	Baptist hymn	Hahn 1969: 242–43, 365–66
1:76–77	Jewish-Christian hymn of the Anawim	R. Brown 1977: 377–78; Farris 1985: 27–28
1:70, 76–77	Jewish-Christian hymn probably from the Anawim	Fitzmyer 1981: 378

1 Farris 1985: 30 notes that A. Harnack admitted this stylistic feature in the Nunc Dimittis. There are some, however, who hold out for Lucan redaction, merely because of the Gentile emphasis.

24 Farris 1985: 148. God's direction runs through this entire scene, whether it be in Messiah's coming or in the timing of Simeon's meeting with Joseph and Mary.

26 See Plummer 1896: 69 for four grammatical options for the genitive; Farris 1985: 149. R. Brown 1977: 440 notes that the peculiarity of the syntax here is a reflection of Semitic style; BDF §259.3.

27 Farris 1985: 147 and Grundmann 1963: 90 argue that Simeon is the "first redeemed man," but Zechariah's hymn also reveals Jesus' role in salvation (1:69–78). What Simeon portrays is the one who can rest in Jesus.

39 On this theme of Luke, see Bock 1992a and Feinberg 1988. See the exegesis of 10:9, 18; 11:17–20; 17:20–21.

13 Jeremias 1980: 266 attributes this digression from Luke's common expression to the presence of a traditional source. Also, Mattill 1979: 197 notes that, since the Greek versions variously translate Exod. 34:9 with ἐν μέσῳ (Theodotion, Symmachus) and ἐντός (Aquila), the phrases can be synonymous (Field 1875: 1.144). Beasley-Murray 1986: 101–2 adds a similar example from Exod. 17:7 (Field 1875: 1.111). Note also Symmachus in Lam. 1:3 and Ps. 87:6 LXX [88:6 Engl.] (Field 1875: 747, 239). Meier 1994: 479 notes that this translation appears in the literal Aquila and the more idiomatic Symmachus, making the meaning of ἐντός clear. These ancient texts show that "in the midst" is a well-attested sense for the term.

10 Jeremias, TDNT 5:714, notes that a false prophet ran the risk of being killed (m. Sanh. 11.1). Friedrich, TDNT 6:834–35, points to Matt. 23:37. See also Fischel 1946.

11 On κοιλία as womb, see Behm, TDNT 3:787. The only NT uses of the term σκιρτάω are in 1:41, 44; 6:23. The context of joy for each of the uses is consistent with Lucan usage; Fitzer, TDNT 7:402.

30 Schweizer 1984: 176 notes that the force is spatial. Marshall 1978: 422 notes that in 11:20, which uses a different term, φθάνω, Luke clearly means "arrived." On the relationship between ἐγγίζω and φθάνω, see Fitzer, TDNT 9:89, esp. n. 10. Does 10:9 say the same thing as 11:20? It most likely does. Marshall does not think the spatial argument is as key as the argument of 11:20. For a full defense of the kingdom declared as arrived in this verse, see Bock 1992c. For the debate over the Aramaic behind the sayings and the difficulty of determining it, see Meier 1994: 432–34, 486–87. Luke's ἐφ' ὑμᾶς (upon you) is missing in the Matthean parallel and may represent his explanation of the sayings' force. The present effects of the kingdom are clearly in view (10:23–24; Nolland 1993a: 554). Schürmann 1994: 74 cites 7:28; 16:16; and 17:20–21 as conceptually parallel.

15 On the various expressions used to say that the kingdom is near or present, see K. Schmidt, TDNT 1:584. Fitzer, TDNT 9:89 n. 10, sees the expression here as synonymous to that of 10:9. Note especially how the preaching of the kingdom and the gospel are linked in 9:1–6, while the kingdom and Jesus' activity are associated in 11:20. Luke 7:18–23 (esp. 7:22); 7:28; 11:20; and 16:16 seem to place the initial phase of fulfillment in the present.

2 For many of the technical aspects of style and introduction it makes no sense to repeat the excellent introduction of Fitzmyer 1981: 1–283. In particular I defer to his treatment of the current state of Lucan studies (pp. 3–34), some aspects of his discussion of Luke's composition (pp. 63–106), and his treatment of Lucan style and language (pp. 107–27), as well as the details of the manuscript tradition behind Luke (pp. 128–33).

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 53–57; F. F. Bruce 1988: 6–13 (of Acts); Bovon 1989: 23; Kümmel 1975: 151; Danker 1988: 17–18; Tiede 1980: 1–18, 70; Maddox 1982: 6–9; Esler 1987: 27–29; C. A. Evans 1990: 2; C. F. Evans 1990: 14; L. Johnson 1991: 2–3.

3 See the introduction to §I.A above for more examples; also cf. Fitzmyer 1981: 290–91.

13 Fitzmyer 1981: 293; Marshall 1978: 41; Schweizer 1984: 11; Du Plessis 1974: 263–64; Sterling 1992: 334; L. Johnson 1991: 27. NIV and NKJV: "things that/which have been fulfilled." Einheitsübersetzung speaks of events that occurred among us and were fulfilled, combining the first and third meanings.

17 1 Cor. 11:2, 23; 15:3; Mark 7:13; Jude 3; Fitzmyer 1981: 296. On the verb's aorist form, cf. BDF §95.1.

21 So most take it, including Fitzmyer 1981: 297; Creed 1930: 4–5; Ellis 1974: 66; Schweizer 1984: 12; Marshall 1978: 43; and Kittel, TDNT 1:215–16, who cites Polybius 3.32.2; Josephus, Against Apion 1.10 §53 and Life 65 §357. Cadbury 1922a: 501–2 challenges the first two examples directly. This view is present in NIV, NASB, Neu Luther, and Einheitsübersetzung.

NKJV and KJV speak of having a “perfect understanding,” the most emphatic of all translations, which is really a separate view.

30 Fitzmyer 1981: 298 correctly notes that on the other view the parallel line starting with σοι would be very short. Almost all translations go this way.

35 Fitzmyer 1981: 300; Creed 1930: 5; Marshall 1978: 44. K. Schmidt, TDNT 1:506, cites the Lucan usage noted above. In the LXX, ἀσφάλεια normally refers to something that is safe or secure (2 Macc. 3:22), as it does in Acts 5:23. Its use in Luke with a verb of knowing points to a psychological goal. It refers to knowing the truth, but doing so securely.

36 For options, see also Fitzmyer 1981: 301. This is not a reference to a formal catechism, though κατηχέω can refer to a catechism, but rather it means simple instruction (Gal. 6:6; Rom. 2:18; 1 Cor. 14:19).

1 So Fitzmyer 1981: 309, who notes that the title goes back to E. Burrows. Bovon 1989: 45–47 belongs here, though he sees the presence of legend (1:57–80; 2:1–40), a declaration scene (1:26–38), a meeting account (1:39–56), and two hymns (1:46–56, 67–79). Bovon also sees parallelism in form to Acts 10, though there is no hymnic material there. In addition, he accepts the description of the material as Midrash, provided Midrash is defined as actualizing existing revelation.

2 Fitzmyer 1981: 308–9 correctly dislikes the use of the term Midrash for the material, since that genre technically does not actualize an event, but a sacred teaching that is recorded. When Luke wrote, the infancy tradition was not yet old enough or circulated widely enough to be seen in this light. Whether the description midrashic applies to Luke’s infancy account is more difficult to decide, since the tendencies of a literary form can be reflected without having the genre present. The strong links with OT passages may justify such a description, though not at the expense of the account's historical base.

8 1 Chron. 15:24; 2 Chron. 35:8; Neh. 11:12; Fitzmyer 1981: 322; Leaney 1958: 79; Creed 1930: 8. ABD 6:1057–61 records thirty-one individuals with the name Zechariah in the OT and Judaism, four of whom are also mentioned by Josephus (who knows of two more); Schalit 1968: 49.

18 Lev. 20:20–21; Jer. 22:30; 1 Sam. 1:5–6; 2 Sam. 6:23; Plummer 1896: 10; Fitzmyer 1981: 323; J. Schneider, TDNT 5:239. Contrast Gen. 1:28; Ps. 127, 128.

23 Exod. 30:1–9; Marshall 1978: 54; Michaelis, TDNT 4:264. For this narrow use of ναός as "Holy Place," see 1 Macc. 1:21–22; Fitzmyer 1981: 323; Schrenk, TDNT 3:232.

30 Luke 24:34; Acts 2:3; 7:2, 30, 35; 9:17; 13:31; 16:9; 26:16; Fitzmyer 1981: 324; Michaelis, TDNT 5:358. Acts 7:26 is an exception to this consistent usage.

41 1 Sam. 3:20; Acts 3:24. On the OT background, see R. Brown 1977: 273; Fitzmyer 1981: 326; Marshall 1978: 57.

51 1 Enoch 40.9 names four angels: Michael, Raphael, Gabriel (the angel of strength), and Phanuel (alternately called Uriel); 1 Enoch 20 names these four as well as Saraqael, Raguel, and Suruel (Gabriel is described as caring for the Garden of Eden and the cherubim). See Tob. 12:15; Fitzmyer 1981: 327–28; Bousset 1926: 325–31; SB 2:89–97.

57 M. Tamid 7.2; also 5.4–6.3; Creed 1930: 12; Fitzmyer 1981: 328. See the exegesis of 1:22 for details.

62 On κωφός signifying deafness and muteness, see 1:62 and Philo, Special Laws 4.38 §§197–98; Marshall 1978: 61; Fitzmyer 1981: 329.

64 Examples include Luke 5:1, 12, 17; 8:1, 22; 9:28, 51; see Fitzmyer 1981: 119. It is classical style; BDF §472.3.

65 Num. 8:22; 16:9; 18:4; 2 Chron. 31:2; also Heb. 8:6; 9:21; Plummer 1896: 18; Fitzmyer 1981: 329; Strathmann, TDNT 4:219–22, 227.

71 Ἀφελεῖν is the object of ἐπεῖδεν and functions as a purpose infinitive, while ἐν ἀνθρώποις is tied to ὄνειδος, as the positive note in 1:36 shows; Fitzmyer 1981: 329–30; Plummer 1896: 20. Acts 15:14 is a grammatically parallel verb-object-infinitive construction.

12 So Schneider 1977a: 49. Against a reference to Isaiah in Luke are R. Brown 1977: 300 and Fitzmyer 1981: 336. The NT sees the virgin state as honorable (Acts 21:9; 1 Cor. 7:25; Rev. 4:14); Bovon 1989: 72.

24 Laurentin 1967: 36; Ps. 48:1 [47:2 LXX]; 76:1 [75:2 LXX]; 86:10 [85:10 LXX]; 96:4 [95:4 LXX]; 135:5 [134:5 LXX]; 145:3 [144:3 LXX]; 147:5 [146:5 LXX]; Fitzmyer 1981: 325, 347. Laurentin may mean by "absolute" that μέγας has no prepositional modifiers, in which case his statement is correct. Μέγας has no modifying role as a dependent adjective.

25 For a brief discussion of the Qumran texts and an evaluation of Fitzmyer's 1973–74 article, see Bock 1987: 65, 298 n. 51 and Collins 1993 (who challenges Fitzmyer's claim that Son of God lacks a messianic nuance).

37 Creed 1930: 19; Schneider 1977a: 50; Schürmann 1969: 49–50; Fitzmyer 1981: 348–50; Wiefel 1988: 51–52; Ernst 1977: 72; R. Brown 1977: 309. Gewiess, in an appendix to Laurentin's German 1967 edition, interestingly takes a view opposite of Laurentin in the French original and omits Laurentin's own discussion of the question.

39 Fitzmyer 1981: 350. Bovon 1989: 76 speaks of a reference to the creative power of God. Isa. 32:15 LXX (A, ℵ) mentions the Spirit's "coming upon" someone. See also 1 Sam. 10:6; 16:13 ("leap upon"); and Ezek. 37:14; C. F. Evans 1990: 163.

43 Fitzmyer 1981: 352 mentions Luke 2:23 and Isa. 4:3; Schweizer 1984: 30 adds Isa. 35:8; 62:12; Exod. 13:12; and Lev. 23:2 to show the variety of objects called "holy"; Schürmann 1969: 54 notes that 1 John 2:20 and Rev. 3:7 apply the description to Jesus.

56 Not, "I wish it would be to me according to your word," but, "let it be according to your word"; BDF §384; BDR §384.3; Fitzmyer 1981: 352.

2 Fitzmyer 1981: 363; BAGD 283; BAA 574. But so argues Jeremias, TDNT 7:92 n. 29. Ἐπαρχεία is used in Acts 23:34 and 25:1.

4 Κ αὶ ἐγένετο (or ἐγένετο δέ) with a verb is a common Lucan expression: 1:5, 8, 23, 41, 59; 2:1, 6; 6:1; 8:22; Fitzmyer 1981: 363; Klostermann 1929: 16–17. On the grammar with ἀκούω, where the genitive indicates the speaker and the accusative the thing heard, see BDF §173 and BDR §173.1–2. Luke 11:31 and 15:25 are grammatically parallel to 1:41.

3 R. Brown 1977: 346–55; Wiefel 1988: 57; Farris 1985: 86–98; Fitzmyer 1981: 359–62; Jones 1968; Bemile 1986: 36. Fitzmyer, agreeing with Winter and Schneider, notes that the hymn is parallel to the psalms in 1

Maccabees, the Qumran Thanksgiving hymns, and the Qumran War Scroll. The hymn also resembles the OT hymns of praise (Ps. 33, 47, 48, 113, 135, 136; one could add to the list 1 Sam. 2:1–10; Jon. 2:2–9 [2:3–10 MT]; Isa. 38:9–20; Tob. 8:15–17; and Sir. 51:1–12). Fitzmyer (p. 359) regards 1:48 as a Lucan insert. In fact, he seems favorable to R. Brown's position that the hymn emerged out of the Jewish-Christian community. Schneider 1977a: 56 sees a Hellenistic Jewish-Christian rewrite of Jewish material or a reworking by Luke himself; so also C. F. Evans 1990: 171–73.

9 Three Old Latin manuscripts (a, b, and l*) attest to Elizabeth, as does the Latin version of Irenaeus, Against Heresies 4.7.1. Jerome refers to this view as contained in Origen's seventh homily on Luke. About A.D.. 400 Niceta of Remesiana (in the area of the former Yugoslavia) knows of this reading (De Psalmodiae Bono 76 or 9.11). Wiefel 1988: 56 and Fitzmyer 1981: 365–66 note the texts. Farris 1985: 108–13 has a detailed look at the issue, as does Bemile 1986: 5–19. Bemile correctly notes that the testimony of the fathers is for Mary (pp. 12 and 266–68 nn. 54–61), including Irenaeus, Against Heresies 3.10.2; Tertullian, On the Soul 26; and Athanasius, In Lucam (PG 3:26:1393).

10 Farris 1985: 67–85 surveys the parallel examples in the OT and Judaism; Berger 1984: 242–43; Fitzmyer 1981: 359; Schneider 1977a: 56–58. Bovon 1989: 82–83 notes that the Magnificat focuses on the victory of the righteous; it does not praise God as Creator, as do the Qumranic hymns, and has less harsh criticism of enemies than do the Psalms of Solomon. Bovon notes many verbal parallels to the Psalms of Solomon:

Motif	Magnificat	Psalms of Solomon

fearing God	1:50	2.33; 3.12; 4.23; 15.13
Israel or the nation as servant	1:54	12.6; 17.21
Abraham and his descendants	1:55	9.9; 18.3
the proud

	1:51	2.1–31; 17.13, 23
contrast of rich and poor	1:53	5.11
reversal	1:52	11.4
refrain	1:50	13.12
power of God	1:51	17.3
arm of God	1:51	13.2
God’s seeing	1:48	18.2
God’s help	1:54	16.3, 5
God’s remembering	1:54	10.1, 4
God’s speaking	1:55	11.7

27 Fitzmyer 1981: 368 sees a purpose infinitive here; BDF §391.4 argues for result; Marshall 1978: 85 and Michel, TDNT 4:676, opt for a causal reference.

6 Fitzmyer 1981: 380; Klostermann 1929: 23; SB 2:107. Efforts to prove that the grandfather was the most frequent choice, as argue Creed 1930: 24 and Nolland 1989: 79, are not substantiated. Examples of naming after a relative are numerous: after the father: Tob. 1:1, 9; Josephus, Life 1 §5; Jewish War 5.13.2 §534; Antiquities 14.1.3 §10; after a grandfather: 1 Macc. 2:1–2; Jub. 11.15. C. F. Evans 1990: 179, positing Hellenistic assimilation, is entirely too skeptical about the details here.

9 It occurs ten times in Luke (1:64; 4:39; 5:25; 8:44, 47, 55; 13:13; 18:43; 19:11; 22:60) and six times in Acts; in the NT outside of Luke–Acts, it is found only in Matt. 21:19–20; Fitzmyer 1981: 381.

4 The most detailed recent survey of the issues is Farris 1985: 26–30. Other treatments include R. Brown 1977: 377–78; Fitzmyer 1981: 376–78; Marshall 1978: 86–87; Ernst 1977: 92–94; Wiefel 1988: 62–64; Nolland 1989: 82–85; and Schürmann 1969: 84–85, 88–89, 93–94.

6 R. Brown 1977: 377–78; Fitzmyer 1981: 377–78; Farris 1985: 27–28. The formative articulation of the view is Benoit 1956–57: 182–83. His work not only formulated the basic position, but is regarded as having challenged the unity of the hymn as well.

7 Among the hypotheses are the following:

	Added to	Adherents
1:76–79	Jewish or Jewish-Christian hymn	Winter 1956: 239 n. 41
1:76 or 1:76–77	early Christian hymn	Benoit 1956–57: 182–

1:68–75	Christian hymn	Schürmann 1969: 88–90
1:76–77, 79b	Baptist hymn	Hahn 1969: 242–43, 365–66
1:76–77	Jewish-Christian hymn of the Anawim	R. Brown 1977: 377–78; Farris 1985: 27–28
1:70, 76–77	Jewish-Christian hymn probably from the Anawim	Fitzmyer 1981: 378

38 Prov. 12:10; Sir. 30:7; T. Naph. 4.5; T. Levi 4.4; 1QS 1.22; 2.1; Plummer 1896: 43; Marshall 1978: 94; Fitzmyer 1981: 386; Kö;ster, TDNT 7:556. The English equivalent term is heart.

42 CD 7.18–19; 1QM 11.6; 4Q175 [= 4QTestim] 12; 4Q161 [= 4QpIsa^{a}]; T. Levi 18.3. T. Levi 4.3–4 is an interesting parallel, but it is debated whether a Christian interpolation is present; H. Kee in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 1.789 n. 4b. Fitzmyer 1981: 387 cites the texts. On the tribe of Judah as the locale of the messianic, regal hope, see T. Naph. 8.2; T. Sim. 7.1–2; Wiefel 1988: 65.

44 Fitzmyer 1981: 388. A similar exhortation for the “straight walk” is found in T. Sim. 5.2, but in Luke, God supplies the way; Bovon 1989: 110 n. 89.

2 Major discussions can be found in Fitzmyer 1981: 392–93; R. Brown 1977: 411; Klostermann 1929: 31–32; Creed 1930: 30–32; Schürmann 1969: 103–4, 108–9, 118–19; Marshall 1978: 96–97; Plummer 1896: 46; Nolland 1989: 98–103; and Ernst 1977: 99.

5 R. Brown 1977: 411. Fitzmyer 1981: 393 argues for traditional elements in the material, specifically the names of the key characters, the birth in Bethlehem, the parents’ tie to Nazareth, and a tie between Galilee and the census. Generally, more of these details would be seen as historical than in view 1.

8 Fitzmyer 1981: 398 argues specifically against this view. He rejects the idea that 2:19 discloses a source. Arguing that there is no evidence for such a Marian memoir, he suggests that 2:19 means Mary kept these things to herself. He may be right that Mary is not the source, but other options exist for this account’s historical roots.

12 Acts 11:28; Michel, TDNT 5:157; P. Oxy. vol. 7 #1021 line 5; Fitzmyer 1981: 400. The remark may be rhetorical and partially hyperbolic (cf. Col. 1:6: “to the whole world”).

13 References to Quirinius are found in Tacitus, Annals 2.30; 3.22–23, 48; and Strabo 12.6.5 (C 569); Luce 1933: 95–96; Fitzmyer 1981: 402; R. Brown 1977: 395.

20 Exod. 13:2; Num. 3:12–13; Deut. 21:15–17; Schürmann 1969: 104 n. 43. Both Fitzmyer 1981: 406 and R. Brown 1977: 398 note that the term shows only that no one preceded Jesus.

21 Exod. 13:2; Num. 3:12; Schürmann 1969: 104 n. 43; Fitzmyer 1981: 407–8; Frey 1930; Michaelis, TDNT 6:876–77 and n. 36; Bovon 1989: 121 n. 38.

24 Fitzmyer 1981: 406; ANET 489. Schürmann 1969: 102 n. 30 notes that Plummer's option is a popular etymology.

5 R. Brown 1977: 420–24. Marshall 1978: 107–8 rejects this approach. Fitzmyer 1981: 395–96 sees OT influence but rejects a midrashic view. So correctly Jeremias, TDNT 6:490–99, also rejects such connections.

17 Fitzmyer 1981: 410 cites the formulas of praise or confession in Bar. 2:17–18; 1 Esdr. 9:8; 4 Macc. 1:12; Rom. 11:36; and Heb. 13:21. See also Schürmann 1969: 113. Nolland 1989: 108 mentions Ps. Sol. 18.10. The formula corresponds to the Semitic "Hosanna"; Lohse, TDNT 9:683, esp. n. 14.

19 1QH 4.32–33; 11.9; Shemoneh Esreh [Eighteen Benedictions] no. 17 (= Schürer 1973–87: 2.458); Marshall 1978: 112; Fitzmyer 1981: 411–12; Jeremias 1929a; Jeremias, TDNT 1:364; Schrenk, TDNT 2:745–50; Fitzmyer 1958; Nolland 1989: 109.

32 The KJV reflects a three-part division by reading nominative εὐδοκία; so Godet 1875: 1.132–33. Many recent translations reflect a two-part division by reading genitive εὐδοκίας; so Plummer 1896: 57–58; Fitzmyer 1981: 410–12; and R. Brown 1977: 403–5.

5 Fitzmyer 1981: 420 speaks of several stages in the construction of the account. He thinks it likely that Luke added the hymn, but he is unsure whether the hymn's origin is the same as the origin of the hymns of Luke 1.

See the earlier discussion of hymns in the sources and historicity sections of 1:46–56 and 1:67–80.

11 Most commentators note that Mary's association with purification argues against a view that sees her as an "intact virgin" after Jesus' birth; see 1:34; Creed 1930: 39; Plummer 1896: 63; R. Brown 1977: 436; Fitzmyer 1981: 421.

12 Godet 1875: 1.137; Plummer 1896: 65; Fitzmyer 1981: 426. In favor of this view is Cutler 1966. New Testament uses of the name include Luke 3:30; Acts 13:1; 15:14; 2 Pet. 1:1; Rev. 7:7. Simon is a variation of the name.

22 Technically Fitzmyer is correct. Luke gives no hint of Jesus' preexistence, so the idea of "God come in the flesh" is not explicitly present in Luke–Acts. But Luke's idea is close to this concept, especially later in Luke–Acts, when Jesus addresses God as his Father, is called Lord, and is treated much like God the Father.

37 Fitzmyer 1981: 421 regards such historical questions as beside the point of the narrative. Technically this is correct, since the Gospels do not try explicitly to solve such questions. Each writer tells his own story with his own emphases. But such historical questions do have value in helping us wrestle with the early days of Jesus' life. R. Brown 1977: 448–51 sees Luke creating much of this event.

1 The view is old. Those who hold it include Bultmann 1963: 300; Creed 1930: 44; Klostermann 1929: 45; Schürmann 1969: 139; Schneider 1977a: 76; Wiefel 1988: 82; and Fitzmyer 1981: 435–36. About the only one who raises doubts is Marshall 1978: 126. Despite the remarks about sources, Coleridge 1993: 187–213 is certainly correct that from a narrative viewpoint this pericope could not be dropped without substantial loss to the infancy narrative. Jesus' remarks about himself are a fitting climax to the prologue. In Coleridge's words (p. 189), this unit is "the most important" of the infancy narrative.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 436. Bovon 1989: 154 prefers to speak only of a biographical interest, calling the account an anecdote. He compares it to the Infancy Story of Thomas 2, an account of a five-year-old Jesus fashioning twelve sparrows from clay. Though this account is much more fanciful than the Lucan pericope, its ending (19), stressing Jesus' wisdom, is similar to but less restrained than Luke's emphasis on wisdom (Schmahl 1974; see the exegesis of 2:46). In this case, the Infancy Gospel of Thomas is influenced by Luke (R. Brown 1977: 481).

15 Danker 1988: 75 notes the difference in wording, but still thinks a hint exists about the future; Fitzmyer 1981: 441. Luke 9:22 is an example of the different phrasing. Bovon 1989: 156 also sees no allusion to the resurrection.

21 See BAGD 552 §II.7; BAA 1120 §II.7; BDF §162.8; Fitzmyer 1981: 443. Literally, the phrase translates as "in the things of my Father," with the things referred to being determined by the given context.

2 See, e.g., the treatments of Creed 1930: lvi–lxx; Klostermann 1929: 49; Fitzmyer 1981: 75–81. Detailed studies are Schulz 1972; Polag 1982; Kloppenborg 1988; and Kloppenborg 1987. A commentary on Q is Manson 1949. On the rationale for Q, see Stein 1987. These analyses differ in detail and approach, but all agree that an independent source or set of sources is involved.

8 Luke uses the singular form of ὄχλος twenty-five times and the plural sixteen times in his Gospel; in Acts, the singular occurs fifteen times and the plural seven times; Marshall 1978: 138; Fitzmyer 1981: 467. Schulz 1972: 366 n. 285 is confident the change is Luke's because of his usage of this term.

10 Fitzmyer 1981: 467; Büchsel, TDNT 1:672; Nolland 1989: 147. The image parallels the expression offspring of asps in the LXX: Isa. 11:8; 14:29; 30:6; 59:5.

15 Fitzmyer 1981: 468. Jeremias, TDNT 4:269–71, notes that in later Judaism the imagery describes the creation of the nation, as Tg. Isa. 51:1 shows. Bovon 1989: 172 does not consider the allusion likely, since he sees Luke alluding to the Gentiles here. Bovon also distinguishes between a stone (here) and a rock (the OT image). Bovon is right that Luke has an implication here about Gentiles, but that still need not deny the background of the OT, especially since the Greek wording is translated out of the original setting. The OT allusion is possible, though not certain. This remark is also against a view of "covenantal nomism"; see Allison 1987. Placement into blessing is not a matter of election through mere biology.

24 Michel, TDNT 8:94–105; M. Stern 1974: 330–34; Donahue 1971; Fitzmyer 1981: 469–70; Badian 1972. E. Sanders 1992: 146–69 notes that the tax system in Palestine was not more oppressive than in other regions. He estimates that taxes consumed somewhere between 20 percent and 30 percent of one's income. For a more skeptical view that sees toll collectors as a symbolic representation of Jesus' outreach to archetypal sinners, see Neale 1991: 110–15. I regard Neale's dichotomy between symbolic representation and history as false for reasons made clear below. In this approach Neale follows Horsley 1987, and both underestimate the connections between John and Jesus in terms of audience. See also 5:29–32.

26 Fitzmyer 1981: 470; LSJ 387; BAA 358. Some of these figures in Palestine would be Jews. A related term, δημόσιος, occurs four times in Acts (5:18; 16:37; 18:28; 20:20).

2 But Goulder 1989: 281–82 sees Luke drawing both on Matthew and to a lesser degree on Mark. Fitzmyer 1981: 479–80 lists five major differences between Mark and Luke: (1) Luke omits references to Jesus' coming from Galilee (Mark 1:9) or being baptized in the Jordan; (2) Luke does not name John (Mark 1:9); (3) Luke uniquely notes Jesus' prayer; (4) Luke has the heaven "open" versus being "rent" (Mark 1:10); and (5) only Luke notes that the Spirit descended "in bodily form" like a dove (with Matt. 3:16). Wiefel 1988: 94–95 notes that Luke uses the singular "heaven" instead of the Semitic plural "heavens."

2 Fitzmyer 1981: 497 rejects M. Johnson's verdict, noting that this alternative requires that Nathan son of David equal Nathan the prophet. Fitzmyer argues that there is no evidence of such an identification in pre-Christian Judaism or in the pre-Lucan Christian community. Zech. 12:12 is key here. Nolland 1989: 170, 172 agrees and argues that the line of Nathan is opened up by the curse on Jeconiah (Jer. 22:30), alternately called Jehoiachin (NIV) or Coniah (NRSV), which prompted Luke to ignore Jewish kings. Nolland does not emphasize a prophetic connection to Nathan. If this view is to be held, this is the way to argue for it.

7 On Fitzmyer's view, see the opening paragraph of the sources and historicity section. Bovon 1989: 202 also argues that the account depicts the victory of faith in the face of opposition. In his view only two texts parallel this account's point about refusing miracles as signs: Dan. 3 and Sipra 227 on Lev. 22:29–33 (= Neusner 1988b: 3.231). But only the latter is really parallel in showing that one does not reveal signs to someone who is unworthy. On Jesus' resisting temptation or persevering in trial, see Luke 22:28; John 6:15, 26–34; 7:1–4; on his refusal to do signs, see Luke 22:39–46; Heb. 2:17–18; 4:15; 5:2. For the history of this text's exegesis, see Kö;ppen 1961.

19 Fitzmyer 1981: 516 notes that ᾧ ἐὰν θέλω is a technical phrase in Aramaic legal documents. Satan claims that he has this right.

31 Creed 1930: 63 cites Acts of Peter 32 and Lucian, Lover of Lies 13, while Fitzmyer 1981: 511 notes Josephus's description of Theudas in Antiquities 20.5.1 §§97–98.

35 Fitzmyer 1981: 515 cites Prov. 9:1–5; Sir. 24:19–27; and Wis. 16:26. These texts reveal the general theme, but they have no teacher-disciple context, so this explanation is problematic. Bovon 1989: 198 also argues for a Matthean lengthening but gives no reason.

4 Fitzmyer 1981: 524 has a bibliography on the synagogue. See also Safrai 1976c; C. F. Evans 1990: 264–65.

8 Bultmann 1963: 31–32 (where he calls the account an apophthegm or pronouncement story, which he believes grew into this full-blown account);

Creed 1930: 65; Schneider 1977a: 106–7; Klostermann 1929: 62; Fitzmyer 1981: 527; Tannehill 1972; C. F. Evans 1990: 266–67 (who notes a series of Lucan expressions in the account); Goulder 1989: 299. For a summary of the recent discussion and a full bibliography on this passage, see Schreck 1989, while Corrington 1993 evaluates a redactional reading of this text with other types of readings.

41 On Zarephath, see Josephus, Antiquities 8.13.2 §320; Fitzmyer 1981: 538.

46 See the use of πορεύω in 4:42; 7:6, 11; 9:51, 52, 56, 57; 13:33; 17:11; 22:22, 39; 24:28; Fitzmyer 1981: 539; Ernst 1977: 174–75. “Jesus’ hour had not yet come”; Nolland 1989: 201.

3 Fitzmyer 1981: 542. Those who opt for Matthean priority see Mark following Luke here, because only Luke narrates the miracle that follows and so Mark simply took Luke’s introduction to that miracle. Actually Matt. 4:13 is closer to this introduction than is Matt. 7, but in sequence Matt. 4:13 belongs with Luke 4:14–15 and Mark 1:14a.

4 Aland 1985: §36. For the list of differences, see Fitzmyer 1981: 542; Schramm 1971: 85–88.

6 One can specify their form: 4:33–37 is an exorcism, 4:38–39 is a healing, and 4:40–41 is a summary miracle account; Fitzmyer 1981: 542, 548, 552. On the classification of miracles, see the first additional note on 4:33.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 555 calls this account a pronouncement story, while Bultmann 1963: 155 is more specific, calling it an “I-saying,” which is his category for a commission statement.

24 Rejecting a medical term are Fitzmyer 1981: 550 and Cadbury 1926: 194–95, 203; but see also Hengel and Hengel 1959: 340–41. Cadbury shows that the terminology itself is not limited to physicians, but is quoted by laypeople, e.g., Aulus Cornelius Celsus and Alexander of Aphrodisias, the second of whom cites Galen almost verbatim (the source of both citations appears to be Archigenes). Thus, this language had come into popular use.

30 Plummer 1896: 138; Schneider 1977a: 116; Fitzmyer 1981: 553. Against this argument is Farmer 1964: 128–30, who sees Mark combining both Matthew and Luke; but see Fitzmyer 1972.

1 Fitzmyer 1981: 561–62, who regards Peter's cry to the Lord and acknowledgment of sin in Luke 5:8 as problematic in a preresurrection setting. He regards it as a postresurrection event that was already a simple miracle story when Luke received it (in L).

3 Godet 1875: 1.255 (who is not shy about seeing distinct events elsewhere); Liefeld 1984: 876. As already noted, Fitzmyer and Schweizer tie the account to John 21.

6 So hold most scholars. For discussion, see Schneider 1977a: 122–23; Marshall 1978: 199; Fitzmyer 1981: 561 (who speaks of L, where the postresurrection tradition was already moved back; Luke simply used L and joined it to Marcan material); Ernst 1977: 184–85 (who goes on to say that Luke is not merely embellishing Mark); Van Der Loos 1965: 670; Schramm 1971: 37–40 (who sees mostly Marcan material); Dietrich 1972: 25–38 (who explains why Mark alone cannot be the source).

9 Fitzmyer's other three points are stylistic alterations: (1) Mark 1:40 has the leper fall at Jesus' feet, while Luke 5:12 has him falling on his face; (3) Luke omits any mention of sending the leper off, unlike Mark 1:43; and (4) Luke 5:15 notes the crowd's reaction and gathering, while Mark 1:45 stays focused on the leper's talking to others.

12 Bultmann 1963: 212, 240; Fitzmyer 1981: 572; Berger 1984: 314; Theissen 1983: 321. Fitzmyer notes that M. Dibelius's classification of this account as a tale is certainly wrong. Dibelius classifies many miracle stories as tale, reflecting perhaps other presuppositions.

15 So Fitzmyer 1981: 573 and Wiefel 1988: 116 rightly, against Conzelmann 1960: 43 and Schneider 1977a: 130, who see a reference to Judea, no doubt because of 4:44. Of course, if Judea is broadly understood in that verse, then Galilee is included in that earlier reference as well. See the exegesis of 4:44.

20 Hendriksen 1978: 291. Fitzmyer 1981: 575 notes a Qumran text on this topic: 11QTemple^{a} 48.17–49.4. At Qumran, lepers were also isolated to prevent additional defiling.

8 Carson 1984: 223–24, in critique of Pesch's view. Fitzmyer 1981: 590 is uncommitted, though he appears to lean toward equating the two names, calling two names "theoretically possible," while noting the debate of the early church. For examples of double names, see Acts 1:23; 12:25; 13:9; double Semitic names include Joseph Barnabas (Acts 4:36) and Joseph Caiaphas (Josephus, Antiquities 18.2.2 §35).

14 Strathmann, TDNT 4:235; Luce 1933: 134; Fitzmyer 1981: 591; Schürmann 1969: 289–90; Vö;lkel 1978; Jeremias 1931; E. Sanders 1985:

174–211.

3 Fitzmyer 1981: 595 attempts to explain these agreements; but their presence suggests the complexity of the source problem.

7 Bultmann 1963: 18–19; Fitzmyer 1981: 595; Berger 1984: 80. Bultmann believes that even the first saying was added to this setting, which was created by the church, arguing that the situation in the saying is "indefinite." But all metaphors (which Mark 2:19a is) are allusions and indirect statements. The objection does not have force.

8 Bultmann 1963: 18–19, 103, where he argues that Luke's addition is clearly secondary because of its absence in the parallels. But can one rule out Luke's finding such material in his additional research? See Fitzmyer 1981: 595.

27 Fitzmyer 1981: 609. Josephus, Antiquities 6.12.1 §§242–43, does not mention the bread in describing the account. SB 1:618–19 notes the rabbinic accounts; b. Menaḥ. 95b cites a remark by Rabbi Shim<on (ca. A.D.. 150).

28 Because of potential misunderstanding, Luke and Matthew omit the reference that Mark 2:26 makes to Abiathar son of Ahimelech, a difficult reference that may be an ambiguous literary reference, rather than a historical one. Most see Matthew and Luke removing an error here. So, for example, Fitzmyer 1981: 605 argues for the removal of an error, but it is only an ambiguity, if the reference is literary.

37 The phrase here may reflect an Aramaism; Fitzmyer 1981: 611. On εὑρίσκω, see BAGD 325 §1b; BAA 765 §I.1e.

44 For more recent discussion, see Käser 1968; Schürmann 1969: 304 n. 29; Marshall 1978: 233; Fitzmyer 1981: 610 (who ties it to the apocryphal gospel tradition); Wiefel 1988: 123 (who rejects a connection to Jesus); and Bovon 1989: 267.

5 For this connection are Ellis 1974: 11 and Schürmann 1969: 313 (who mentions Exod. 24:1–2, 9, 12–13, 15–18, with the seventy elders worshiping from a distance as Moses goes up the mountain, as well as 19:3 and 34:2–5); against it are Marshall 1978: 236 and Fitzmyer 1981: 616. Bovon 1989: 279–80 calls it questionable, citing Philo, Life of Moses 1.40 §§220–26; 2.14–15 §§70–71; 2.28 §§141–42; 2.30 §153; 2.31 §§159–60; and Pseudo-Philo, Biblical Antiquities 11–12, 15, as lacking such a motif. Bovon prefers to see Jesus praying for the preparation and renewal of his people, as Moses had done and as Pseudo-Philo notes.

12 Carson 1984: 239 (undecided between this and view 1); A. Ehrman 1978; Arbeitman 1980. Fitzmyer 1981: 620 calls this view highly unlikely but gives no reason.

12 Fitzmyer 1981: 623 is skeptical of the new Moses emphasis in Luke, but underplays the Mosaic allusions in Acts. If the motif is present, it is clearer in Matthew than in Luke, though even in Matthew it is not certain. For the motif in Matthew, see Davies and Allison 1988: 423–24; against its presence in Matthew is Carson 1984: 129.

18 Fitzmyer 1981: 624, Schürmann 1969: 322, and Bovon 1989: 286 are certain about the Gentile allusion (Luke 2:31–32; 3:6; 4:25–29). Ernst 1977: 212, Marshall 1978: 242, and Tiede 1988: 136 are more cautious.

26 Koch 1969: 7; Hauck, TDNT 4:368 (who suggests this distinction); Fitzmyer 1981: 632–33; Klostermann 1929: 78–79. Guelich 1982: 63–65, 109–11 discusses the options in detail and rejects the absolute distinction.

27 "Blessed is/are the one(s) who … because (ὅτι).… " Guelich 1982: 63 and Fitzmyer 1981: 632–33 discuss the form of beatitudes.

50 BAGD 83–84; BAA 167; Godet 1875: 1.326; Creed 1930: 95; Marshall 1978: 264; Fitzmyer 1981: 640; Schürmann 1969: 355 n. 90; Bultmann, TDNT 2:533–34.

65 Fitzmyer 1981: 644; BDR §466.3. On this construction, see also Matt. 10:32 and Luke 12:48. In other words, the subject of the start of the sentence (the participles) and that of the subsequent clause ("I [Jesus] will show you") are not the same.

2 Bovon 1989: 346 n. 5 notes that among many Protestant scholars this has been the major position for some time and that only recently have Catholic commentaries like those of Schürmann, Schneider, and Fitzmyer come to accept this approach.

3 Schulz 1972: 237–38 and nn. 410–11, on the basis of Lucan vocabulary in 7:3–6. Most of the cases of Lucan vocabulary depend on Acts, which must also be reckoned to have traditional material, so that some of Schulz's evidence is not as strong as it at first appears. Here also belongs Fitzmyer 1981: 649, who sees as Lucan vv. 1a, 3b–6d, 7a, part of 9, 10a.

3 Fitzmyer 1981: 656 notes that Luke 8:40–42, 49–56; Acts 9:36–43; and perhaps Acts 20:7–12 also are in this form. That it ends with a confession causes Berger 1984: 312 to classify it as epideixis, so the text's goal is the admiration of Jesus.

3 Fitzmyer's other three options are (1) the question is positive and is John's first hint that he knows who Jesus is (on this, see below); (2) the passage is a reproach by the early church to John's disciples for not responding to Jesus; and (3) the question is a real query, but is not messianic, a view just discussed above and rejected. The passage cannot be a reproach from the early church to John's disciples since the disciples who know only John are not pictured as rejecting Jesus in Luke–Acts, but as responding to him upon hearing about him and without knowing about the Spirit (Acts 19:1–7). If there is such a conflict in the background, Luke has kept it totally hidden.

6 For Q as the basic source, see Schürmann 1969: 413, 418; Marshall 1978: 287; Fitzmyer 1981: 662–63; Tiede 1988: 153; Wiefel 1988: 148; Bovon 1989: 369. Those who prefer Matthean priority argue that Luke used Matthew. Luke 7:20–21, 29–30 does not have a parallel in Matthew.

12 For a figurative force are Fitzmyer 1981: 671, 673–74; Hendriksen 1978: 395–96; Arndt 1956: 212; Marshall 1978: 294; Ernst 1977: 250; Schürmann 1969: 416 n. 53 (who mentions that such a reed, Phragmites communis, could grow to a height of sixteen feet).

19 On γεννητοῖς γυναικῶν, see Job 11:2c [not in MT]; 11:12 [≠ MT's sense]; 14:1; 15:14; 25:4; Büchsel, TDNT 1:672. Fitzmyer 1981: 675 gives Qumran parallels from 1QS 11.21; 1QH 13.14; 18.12–13, 16, 23–24. He also notes Gospel of Thomas 46.1. The parallel in Matt. 11:11 is the only other NT use of the phrase.

20 It is likely that μικρότερος is to be taken as a superlative. BDF (§60, §244) discusses the construction, but does not mention this verse. Fitzmyer

1981: 675 erroneously attributes this form of the remark to the early church; see the introduction to 7:18–35. The blessedness of the μικρότερος is frequent in the NT: Matt. 10:42; 18:10, 14; Mark 9:42; Luke 9:48; Nolland 1989: 337.

28 Leaney 1958: 145; Godet 1875: 1.354–55; Creed 1930: 108; Schürmann 1969: 423–24; Fitzmyer 1981: 680. Geldenhuys 1951: 231 n. 15 notes that the couplet has rhyme in Aramaic.

31 Fitzmyer 1981: 680 raises the possibility that ἄρτον (bread) is a generic reference to food, as in 2 Thess. 3:8, 12; Behm, TDNT 1:477 §2.

35 Fitzmyer 1981: 681 notes that the wording does not equal the LXX, so it is unlikely that Luke has such an allusion in mind.

3 Bultmann 1963: 20–21 places the discussion in the section on apophthegms and controversy dialogues. He sees 7:48–50 as added later, so that the original key to the passage was 7:47. He also sees the account as a doublet for Mark 14:3–9. Fitzmyer 1981: 686–87 sees the parable inserted into the pronouncement story. The dubious assumption here is that an account cannot mix forms. The argument fails, since without the parable the Pharisee's concerns in 7:39 remain unanswered; Nolland 1989: 351–52. Nolland prefers to call the passage "legend" since it is an example account, but he notes that doing so does not prejudice the account's historicity. Berger 1984: 51–56, 256, 361 speaks of parable and dialogue side by side, and calls the account an apologetic defense of Jesus' attitude toward sinners.

8 Jeremias 1963a: 126, 132 opts for either a prostitute or a woman in a dishonorable vocation, by which he means either an immoral or a dishonest vocation; Jeremias 1969: 303–12; Fitzmyer 1981: 689; Black 1967: 181–83. Marshall 1978: 308 notes correctly that the sins seem to be hers, so that her reputation is not because of association with someone else; so also Wiefel 1988: 154, who thinks she is a prostitute, as does Schürmann 1969: 431 n. 8.

21 Fitzmyer 1981: 691 rejects a suggestion of a mistranslation of Aramaic here, as argued by Jeremias 1960b.

3 Fitzmyer 1981: 696; SB 2:164; Wiefel 1988: 157–58. Grundmann 1963: 174 notes that women could not go into the synagogue or say the *Shema*ʿ. The late Tosepta text just cited gives the remark of a Jewish leader who rejoices that he is not a pagan, a woman, or unlearned. See also Leipoldt 1955: 69–114 and Witherington 1979.

7 The phrase κατὰ πόλιν καὶ κώμην (from city to village) has a distributive force and is grammatically linked to the reference to traveling; Fitzmyer 1981: 697; Arndt 1956: 223; Schürmann 1969: 445 n. 5.

13 BAGD 303; BAA 615; LSJ 669; Josephus, Jewish War 1.24.6 §487; Antiquities 18.6.6 §194; SB 2:164; Marshall 1978: 317; Fitzmyer 1981: 698; Hoehner 1972: 120, 303–5, 317 n. 4.

5 These verbal differences will be detailed in the exegesis. Fitzmyer 1981: 700 notes four striking cases where Luke and Matthew agree against Mark in Luke 8:4–8 (he also notes numerous changes that do not make much difference in meaning). The four Luke-Matthew agreements are an extra τοῦ in Luke 8:5a = Matt. 13:3, an extra αὐτόν in Luke 8:5b = Matt. 13:4, the omission of καὶ καρπὸν οὐκ ἔδωκεν in Luke 8:7 = Matt. 13:7, and ὁ ἔχων in Luke 8:8 = Matt. 13:9. See the exegesis for details and evaluation.

6 D. Wenham 1972. Schürmann 1969: 461 agrees only for 8:9–10. Fitzmyer 1981: 700–701 apparently rejects this suggestion but without clear support.

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 699–702, 706–7, 710–13 represents this approach; so also Bultmann 1963: 199–200 (on the Mark 4 parallel). Fitzmyer argues that the Lucan interpretation focuses more on the soils than on the fate of the seed. The point about vocabulary also applies to the Marcan interpretation, which is also seen as secondary.

27 For δέδοται as the elided verbal idea in the clause starting with τοῖς δὲ λοιποῖς, see Fitzmyer 1981: 708.

29 The Qumran scrolls also refer to the "secrets of God" (רזי אל, rzy ʾl): 1QpHab 7.8; 1QS 3.23; 1QM 3.9; 16.9, 14; 17.9, 17 (Fitzmyer 1981: 708). On μυστήριον in the NT, sometimes referring to "new" revelation and other times to "clarifying" revelation, see Bock 1994a: 80–85. In these parables, μυστήριον refers to "clarifying" revelation, which means that additional truth is connected to old promises, since Matt. 13:51–52 compares the mystery kingdom parables to old and new things.

31 Also for authenticity is Marshall 1978: 321. Fitzmyer 1981: 706–7 accepts the assertion as coming from Jesus but not its placement in this setting. For more on the relationship between the Isaiah Targum and the NT, especially Mark, see the additional note. For more on authenticity, see the discussion of sources and historicity in this unit.

35 Marshall 1978: 324 and Fitzmyer 1981: 713 take the pronoun in the phrase ἔστιν … αὕτη as a predicate, yielding, "The parable means this. …" Bovon 1989: 407 n. 21 prefers a reference back to 8:9 and translates, "This parable is. …” There is little difference in the options. Bovon also notes that this use of the verb recalls Jewish usage, where apocalyptic visions are interpreted. He cites Klauck 1978: 88 n. 273 for details.

36 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 9:29–33; Plummer 1896: 220. The imagery of 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 8:41–44 is close to this parable; Fitzmyer 1981: 712; Schürmann 1969: 463 n. 131. 1 Enoch 62.8 speaks of sowing saints.

39 So Ernst 1977: 269. Some see a Paulinist touch here. Plummer 1896: 220 suggests that the Lucan conclusion in 8:12 may go back to Paul; Arndt 1956: 230. Others suggest that Luke is using church terminology to make clear what Jesus means, a point that seems likely; Marshall 1978: 325; Fitzmyer 1981: 713.

3 Bovon 1989: 415 speaks of an antithetical word of wisdom. Bultmann 1963: 81–82, 98 calls the sayings “double-stranded” měšāllîm, like secular proverbs; also Fitzmyer 1981: 716. Berger 1984: 118 speaks of a warning word for 8:18. Wiefel 1988: 161 also speaks of a māšāl (parable), as does Jeremias 1963a: 41, but this is unlikely. Luke seems aware of the proverbial character by his reuse of the material.

4 So also Danker 1988: 179 (with a little hesitancy); Ellis 1974: 127. Fitzmyer 1981: 725 rightly rejects this view, as do Schürmann 1969: 470 n. 197; Marshall 1978: 332; and Wiefel 1988: 162.

1 This miracle cluster is paralleled in Mark 4:35–5:43; Marshall 1978: 332–33; Fitzmyer 1981: 726–27; Tiede 1988: 170; Wiefel 1988: 163 n. 1.

7 Bultmann 1963: 215–16; so also Fitzmyer 1981: 727. Bovon 1989: 422 speaks of a “victory of the hero (German Helden) over the elements,” a rescue miracle, as does Theissen 1983: 321. Bovon says it is like an exorcism, but is distinct.

9 I question Fitzmyer's view (1981: 543) of the role of miracles. He argues that miracles are not "apologetic proofs of Jesus' mission … or of his divinity"; rather they are "powerful manifestations and means whereby the dominion of God is established over human beings in place of the 'dominion of Belial,' freeing them from the evil to which they have been subjected." Miracles show a new phase of salvation history at work. This summary is correct in what it affirms, but needs qualification in what it denies. It is true that miracles are not explicit proofs of deity. Messengers of God did what Jesus did: Moses parted the sea, and Elijah and Elisha performed wonders, including raising the dead. But the bulk of Jesus' miracles and their variety imply his authority. The miracles do not explicitly make Jesus divine, but they do raise the question of his person, as Luke 8 shows. In addition, they defend his mission as grounded in God's power, as 11:14–25 argues. This is not an either/or issue; it is both/and.

12 Fitzmyer 1981: 729 discusses points of Lucan style in the verse: ἐν μιᾷ τῶν ἡμερῶν (on one of those days), ἐγένετο δέ (and it came to pass), and καὶ αὐτός (and he himself).

6 That Matthew may have accompanied Jesus lends credence to the added detail of the second demoniac. The extent of the agreement between Mark and Luke leads most to see Mark as the source for Luke; so Schürmann 1969: 487; Schramm 1971: 90; Marshall 1978: 335; Fitzmyer 1981: 733; Wiefel 1988: 165–66. Bovon 1989: 432 is so impressed with these agreements that he argues that this account stands against the two-

Gospel (or Griesbach) hypothesis. What could have caused Luke to go his own way against Matthew?

18 Fitzmyer 1981: 739 argues that Mark is more original, but this is difficult to establish, given both Matthew's and Luke's independent indications of distinct apocalyptic imagery ("abyss" and "tormented before the time").

23 Ὥρμησεν in Matt. 8:32 = Mark 5:13 = Luke 8:33 means to rush irrationally or with some emotion; Fitzmyer 1981: 739; Bertram, TDNT 5:470; BAGD 581; BAA 1178; elsewhere only at Acts 7:57; 19:29. On ἀποπνίγω (to drown), see BAGD 97; BAA 195; elsewhere only Luke 8:7 (of thorns and thistles that choke); a related verb, συμπνίγω, occurs in 8:14, 42.

33 Arndt 1956: 240–41 speaks of many commands; Danker 1988: 182 of an ingressive imperfect ("he began to command" or "was about to command"), which is probably better; so also Fitzmyer 1981: 738; BDF §328, §329, §331. Bovon 1989: 435 n. 44 calls the choice very difficult, a judgment with which I concur.

4 Fitzmyer 1981: 743 says that this work has to come from Luke's hand. This is not clear for every detail, though some expressions do reflect Lucan style; see ##3–5.

9 Bultmann 1963: 214–15 (who argues that they were originally separate); Bovon 1989: 444–45 (who speaks of a "crescendo" in this pairing, especially since it includes two women); Fitzmyer 1981: 743; Theissen 1983: 321. Berger 1984: 314, 317 speaks of a "supplication account” by putting it in his “deesis/petitio” category. It also teaches Jesus’ authority, as Berger’s placement in the “mandatio” form shows.

11 Num. 32:41; Judg. 10:3; Arndt 1956: 246. Fitzmyer 1981: 745 notes other uses of the name in the first century. Nolland 1989: 419 notes that if the name has Aramaic roots (יָעִיר, Jair), then it means “he [God] will awaken” (1 Chron. 20:5).

16 Against Van Der Loos 1965: 514, who argues that Jesus did not know. Fitzmyer 1981: 746 argues that the question sounds “stupid,” and it does at first glance, as Peter’s reaction shows. But, given the emphasis in these accounts on Jesus’ control over events, the question calls for reflection about why Jesus would ask it.

33 Plummer 1896: 235; Marshall 1978: 344; Fitzmyer 1981: 746; Bovon 1989: 445–46 (who argues that Luke may be responsible for it); Creed 1930: 123; and Hendriksen 1978: 466 appear undecided. Arndt 1956: 246 and A. B. Bruce 1897: 525 are for inclusion. Schürmann 1969: 490 n. 137; Ellis 1974: 130; and Luce 1933: 173 omit it.

4 Fitzmyer 1981: 753 is too cautious here. Marshall 1978: 350 is correct in calling it “one of the best-attested facts in the life of Jesus,” following Manson 1949: 73; also V. Taylor 1966: 302. This tradition contains one of the few sayings of Jesus alluded to by Paul (1 Cor. 9:14).

14 Fitzmyer 1981: 753–54; Ellis 1974: 137; m. Ber. 9.5 (a command with roots in Exod. 3:5); Schürmann 1969: 501 n. 20; Josephus, Jewish War 2.8.4 §§124–27 (about the Essenes). On the contrast with the practice of Greek cynics and philosophers, see Schürmann 1969: 502 n. 24 and Bovon

1989: 458 n. 20, who compares the disciples' absence of possessions with the Levites and their being provided for through the tithe (Num. 18:21).

3 Fitzmyer 1981: 757 notes six Lucan modifications of Mark: (1) the Lucan use of the title τετραάρχης (tetrarch) (as in 3:1) versus the title βασιλεύς (king); (2) a reference to τὰ γινόμενα πάντα (all that has happened) instead of just to miracles; (3) a unique reference to Herod's perplexity; (4) the use of threefold ὅτι for the reports of popular speculation about Jesus; (5) the "who is this?" question; and (6) the note about a desire to see Jesus. Most see no sources here outside of Mark; Schürmann 1969: 508; Bovon 1989: 461–62; Schramm 1971: 128.

5 V. Taylor 1935: 147; Fitzmyer 1981: 757. Bultmann 1963: 301–2 does not discuss Luke 9, but the longer parallel of Mark 6:14–29. Berger 1984: 233 speaks of an "uncertain acclamation" present within the account.

6 So Arndt 1956: 254 argues for two Bethsaidas; otherwise Fitzmyer 1981: 765–66; Godet 1875: 1.404–5 (who sees many places with this name along the lake, since the name is a generic description); Ptolemy, Geography 5.16.4. Cf. Josephus's use of "Gaulanite" in Antiquities 18.1.1 §4 and "Galilean" in 18.1.6 §23. A region is addressed, not just a populated locale, as the dilemma about food makes clear. Bethsaida may be nothing more than temporary "headquarters" for mission in the region. Arndt and Godet may be right about the Marcan reference being a distinct locale using a generic name. John 12:21 may confirm the distinction.

9 An argument for a Matthean conflation of preresurrection and postresurrection titles here is unnecessary, since sonship to God is an OT regal image: Ps. 2; against Fitzmyer 1981: 774, who argues that χριστός is preresurrection and ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ θεοῦ τοῦ ζῶντος (Son of the living God) is postresurrection.

2 Dinkler 1971, published in the Bultmann Festschrift, defends much of the account's historicity; Dinkler's position is interesting in light of Bultmann's rejection of the account. Fitzmyer 1981: 778–79, however, sees a strong Marcan hand and reflection in Mark's presentation, while Dinkler defends only Peter's confession and the Satan saying.

6 Luke 9:44; 17:25; 18:31–33 (where δεῖ is absent, but fulfillment is expressed); 24:7, 46–47. Other allusions to Jesus' death are in 11:29–32; 12:50; 13:31–35; 20:9–18; 22:19–20, 28; Fitzmyer 1981: 778.

7 Josephus, Antiquities 7.11.6 §280; 8.8.1–2 §§214, 218; Fitzmyer 1981: 781; Delling, TDNT 8:220. However, no allusion to Hos. 6:2 is present in the reference to the third day, since this passage is never directly alluded to in the NT. The reference to ἡμέρα (day) is inclusive in each case, so that Friday, Saturday, and Sunday are in view in both "after three days" and "on the third day."

2 So Bultmann 1963: 82–83. As evidence of the individuality of the sayings, Bovon 1989: 481 notes similar sayings about cross-bearing in Matt. 10:38 = Luke 14:27, about losing one's life in 17:33, and about denying Jesus in 12:9. Fitzmyer 1981: 782 is certain that the sayings were separate.

3 Luce 1933: 186 is wrong to say that the remark is more literal in Mark than in Luke, for the contexts are identical. Fitzmyer 1981: 788 notes the OT parallels to saving one's ψυχή: Gen. 19:17; 1 Sam. 19:11; and Jer. 31:6 LXX [48:6 MT]; Schürmann 1969: 543 n. 111. Jewish parallels are found in

b. Tamid 32a (“What shall a man do to live? They replied: Let him mortify himself. What should a man do to kill himself? They replied: Let him keep himself alive [i.e., indulge in luxuries]”) and b. Ber. 63b (“whoever abases himself for the words of the Torah will in the end be exalted”); SB 1:587–88. Bovon 1989: 482 speaks of the OT picture of the two ways (Deut. 30:15–18) and compares Luke’s emphasis to the structure of Luke 6:47–49. Note how the Jewish emphasis on the law is replaced with an emphasis on Christ in the NT.

1 On the options, see Luce 1933: 186 and Schneider 1977a: 215. Fitzmyer 1981: 791–92 sees Luke’s rewriting Mark, as do Schürmann 1969: 563–64; Wiefel 1988: 179; and Neirynck 1973. Plummer 1896: 250 notes signs of Lucan expression in the account. Schweizer 1984: 159 seems to suggest the presence of an additional source, noting the different dating, the journey idea, and the reference to “the” mountain. So also Schramm 1971: 136–39 argues for an additional source, as does Bovon 1989: 488–89, especially for 9:31–33. Bovon even mentions the possibility of oral tradition. Marshall 1978: 381 notes the Lucan peculiarities: Jesus at prayer, change in his facial appearance, exodus, sleep of the disciples, and fear at the cloud’s coming. Marshall, like Bovon, suggests that Luke reworked Mark in light of oral sources, since some changes are shared with Matthew (i.e., the facial appearance).

4 Fitzmyer gives four reasons why this view cannot work: (1) it cannot explain the presence of Moses and Elijah; (2) the verb ὁράω (to see; passive = to appear) is not limited to postresurrection events; (3) Jesus’ glory is never mentioned in a resurrection account; and (4) the form does not match resurrection appearances. See also Bock 1987: 324 n. 98; H. Müller 1960: 60; Stein 1976.

3 Bayer 1986: 193–94. Appealing to possible oral tradition, Marshall 1978: 394 more cautiously notes that μέλλει reflects an Aramaic participle and thus perhaps the saying's ancient form. Colpe, TDNT 8:444, speaks of a possible "unabbreviated special tradition," though he also sees the church developing this tradition. Fitzmyer 1981: 812 sees Luke's dependence only on Mark, though he has trouble explaining Luke's abbreviated prediction. Bayer 1986: 197 makes a good case against the Lucan short form as the original form, arguing that Luke has abbreviated the tradition. Against a second source is Nolland 1993a: 512.

6 For a similar intimate linkage of Jesus and God, see Luke 10:16; John 17:3, 18. To receive an emissary is to receive the person who sends the emissary; m. Ber. 5.5 ("a man's emissary is like the man himself"); Philem. 15–18; SB 1:590; Fitzmyer 1981: 817.

6 Hayles 1973: 120; Fitzmyer 1981: 400. On Augustan census activity, see Braunert 1957; Corbishley 1936; Tacitus, Annals 1.11; Dio Cassius 53.30.2.

1 Why Fitzmyer lists the Egyptian calendar as a candidate is unclear, since no clear ties to Egypt are present.

6 Fitzmyer 1981: 455. Ernst 1977: 137, considering the various options, speaks of fall 27 to fall 29. Hoehner allows this as one of the two possible options.

3 Schürmann 1969: 200; Fitzmyer 1981: 496; Ernst 1977: 155; Lohse, TDNT 8:486 n. 49. Bovon 1989: 189 calls attempts at harmonization excessive rationalization like that in current fundamentalism. C. F. Evans 1990: 252 calls the task “impossible,” which is excessively skeptical.

3 1 Enoch 46–48, 62–71 and 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 13 are too late to be related to this period. S. Kim 1985: 19 and n. 25 mentions that a “heavenly,” redemptive figure identified alternatively with Enoch, Abel, or Melchizedek may have existed in the ancient Jewish tradition. But he notes that these claims are disputable, since the clear examples are late. He also notes (pp. 20–22) that 4Q246†, formerly 4Q243 (= 4QpsDan A^a = 4QpsDan ar^a), may prove this limitation incorrect, but it is too early to know what this text means, since all of it has not been published, and it has many gaps. Fitzmyer 1981: 209–10 argues that 1 Enoch may be relevant as a transitional move to an apocalyptic individualized use, but he treats the point as too unclear to base much on it. Kim (p. 19 n. 25) notes that all undisputed examples from 1 Enoch and 2 Esdras are later than the Gospels. The Son of Man references in Judaism are 1 Enoch 46.3–7; 48.4–10; 62.3–9, 14; 63.11; 69.27–29; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 13; b. Sanh. 96b; 98a; Num. Rab. 13.14 on 7:12–13; Midr. ha-Gadol on Gen. 49:10; Aggadat Bereshit 4.3; 23.1 (see Strack and Stemberger 1991: 339); y. Taʿan. 65b (2.1) (= Neusner et al. 1982–93: 18.183); b. Ḥag. 14a; Tanḥuma (Buber), Toledot 70b (6.20) (= Townsend 1989: 167; see also Caragounis 1986: 134–36).

7 Fitzmyer 1981: 209–10 retreats slightly from his earlier position, which argued that such attestation is entirely missing from the extrabiblical texts. But he argues that the evidence from Tg. Neof. 1 on Gen. 4:14 and Cairo Targum B is too late to be relevant.

2 Fitzmyer does not mention specific passages. I suggest that Mark 7:24–30; 8:14–21; and perhaps 6:45–52 belong here.

8 Fitzmyer 1981: 825–26 mentions the tension between matter and form in the travel account, citing K. Schmidt's remark that "though Jesus is always traveling to Jerusalem, he never makes any real progress on this journey."

10 Fitzmyer 1981: 825 uses this division, but says it is one of "convenience, since the division at these points is otherwise insignificant and somewhat arbitrary." Plummer 1896: 261 also speaks of "convenience." Such markers do not really note a shift of themes, and so are less than adequate.

2 Danker 1988: 207–8; Fitzmyer 1981: 828. BAGD 57 and BAA 112 note that ἀναλήμψεως, a NT hapax legomenon, alludes to the ascension. The LXX uses it of Elijah's departure (2 Kings 2:9, 11; 1 Macc. 2:58; Sir. 48:9; 49:14). For more discussion, see the additional note on 9:51.

3 The Gospel of Thomas 86 also has a parallel, but with Gnostic overtones, since it speaks of laying one's head down and of rest; Fitzmyer 1981: 835.

7 Fitzmyer notes that there is no evidence for this third view, which goes back to Perles 1919–20; see also Black 1967: 207–8. SB 1:489 rejects the suggestion.

2 Egelkraut 1976: 142, esp. n. 3, mentions the options. Schweizer 1984: 174 argues that Luke likes to split accounts from Q and Mark into distinct events (e.g., the Olivet Discourse in 17:22–37 ≈ 21:6–36 and Jesus' condemnation of the religious leadership in 11:37–54 ≈ 20:45–47).

Fitzmyer 1985: 843, citing 22:35, argues that Luke created the mission in the split. For detailed discussion of texts where Mark and Q overlap, see Laufen 1980.

7 Fitzmyer 1985: 859 sees the material as a Lucan creation, but coming from an authentic saying reflected in a variant form in 10:18. Such a distinction is not necessary. Marshall 1978: 427–28 notes the options: a Lucan creation, the Q source, or a special Lucan source. He opts for Q and notes that the subunit's historicity is tied to how one views the mission's historicity as a whole.

8 Fitzmyer 1985: 865 sees Luke joining this material together in a new context, as does Marshall 1978: 431–32, who notes the various options and argues that both sayings go back to Jesus.

29 Perrin 1963: 64–66; Acts 21:33; Luke 12:33; 22:47; 24:15, 28. Luke 15:1 and 18:40 show that Luke often uses ἐγγίζω to mean "arrive." Fitzmyer 1985: 848–49 argues that when the verb is tied to a time reference it speaks of the approach of an event in the near future.

34 BAGD 883, BAA 1762, and esp. Fitzmyer 1985: 853 discusses the uncertainty about Chorazin's exact location: either two to three miles north of Capernaum at Khirbet Karazeh (R. W. Smith in ABD 1:912) or a site on Lake Gennesaret. Wiefel 1988: 198–99 prefers the location near Capernaum, as does Manson 1949: 77. Manson also notes that Bethsaida is on the east side of the Jordan near its entry into the Sea of Galilee, about five miles from Capernaum.

38 Satan's access to heaven is assumed in Job 1:6–12; 2:1–7. Fitzmyer 1985: 862 and Nolland 1993a: 563 are against the Isaianic allusion, but

Luke's language suggests that passage. As an allusion it does not identify Isaiah's referent, since Isaiah probably refers to an earthly king who arrogantly takes on the role of a god and is cast down by God. In later Jewish thinking, the king correctly becomes typological of what Satan also does. The phrase overlapping with Isa. 14:12 is ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ (from heaven). For Jewish handling of Isa. 14, see Miyoshi 1974: 100; see especially T. Sol. 20.16–17, which pictures demons falling like lightning to earth.

47 Exod. 32:32; Ps. 69:28 [69:29 MT]; Isa. 4:3; Dan. 7:10; 12:1; Mal. 3:16–17; 1 Enoch 47.3; 104.1; 108.7; Jub. 5.13–14; 23.32; 30.19–23; 1QM 12.2; Phil. 4:3; Heb. 12:23; Rev. 3:5; 20:12, 15; 21:27; Ellis 1974: 157; Fitzmyer 1985: 863–64; SB 2:173–76; Schrenk, TDNT 1:619–20; Traub, TDNT 5:532 n. 295. Manson 1949: 258–59 lists the various "books" mentioned in the Bible and Judaism: (1) book of life, (2) book of human deeds, (3) book of the earthly destiny of people, and (4) book of the divine plan. Only the first two are in the Bible.

62 The RSV and NRSV read seventy; see also Schweizer 1984: 174; Danker 1988: 212 (who attributes the number seventy-two to Moses' addition of two elders when he appointed his seventy [Num. 11:26] and sees Gentile symbolism in the choice); Tiede 1988: 200–201; Ellis 1974: 155–56; C. F. Evans 1990: 444–45; Schürmann 1994: 54. The NIV reads seventy-two; also Manson 1949: 74; Liefeld 1984: 940; Hendriksen 1978: 570–71 ("leans" this way); Creed 1930: 144; Arndt 1956: 280; Ernst 1977: 331; Marshall 1978: 414–15 (who has a good summary of the issue); Fitzmyer 1985: 845–46; Wiefel 1988: 195; C. A. Evans 1990: 172; Nolland

1993a: 546. Those who are undecided include Luce 1933: 198–99; Plummer 1896: 272; and Schneider 1977a: 235 (who argues that a decision is less than certain).

4 Klostermann 1929: 118 and Egelkraut 1976: 85–90 favor a Lucan reworking of Mark. Schneider 1977a: 247 and Wiefel 1988: 207 see an independent source for the parable and Luke 10:25–28 using Mark. Bultmann 1963: 51; Luce 1933: 204 (citing Q); and Daube 1956: 247–50 see a version like that in Matthew. Zahn 1920: 427; Manson 1949: 259–61; and Jeremias 1963a: 202 see independent incidents or sources. Plummer 1896: 283 calls the possibility of one incident precarious, but not impossible. Fitzmyer 1985: 877–78 clearly ascribes the material to a special Lucan source, but sees only one incident, a distinction that seems hard to insist upon. Marshall 1978: 441 also leans toward two incidents, as do Hendriksen 1978: 591; Liefeld 1984: 942; and Blomberg 1990: 230–31, who speaks of “proem midrash” here. Ellis 1974: 159, though noting that two incidents are probable, regards the exchange as set in Jerusalem, which is possible, since the next account is in Bethany. Grundmann 1963: 221–22 speaks only of an independent source with the parable coming from L, while Ernst 1977: 344–46 leans this way, clearly noting that the parable is from special Lucan material. Nolland 1993a: 580 argues for an original link of neighbor and the parable, but that Luke is responsible for placing the great-commandment discussion here, drawing on Mark 12:28–34. Schürmann 1994: 136–40, 149–50 sees the parable emerging from L material and rooted in Jesus’ intention, but 10:25–28 is probably rooted in Mark’s account and does not testify to a separate event.

25 Fitzmyer 1985: 888 sees a possible allusion to Mic. 6:8. The expression recalls God's action in Luke 1:72.

3 Fitzmyer 1985: 891 sees no connection between the accounts, regarding such an association as stretching the point (so also Ernst 1977: 354). But literary sequence and theme make it seem likely; see esp. Talbert 1982: 125.

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 897–98 is skeptical about the Lucan setting, though he does regard it as likely that the prayer goes back to Jesus. See also Egelkraut 1976: 153, esp. n. 1.

11 Fitzmyer 1985: 902 mentions the Qumran community prayers, such as the Hôdāyôt or Thanksgiving Psalms. On comparison with the Shemoneh Esreh, see Beasley-Murray 1986: 148–57; K. Kuhn 1950: 30–33, 40–46.

18 Jeremias 1971a: 199–201 cites Jerome's Commentary on Matthew on Matt. 6:11 and Marcion. On ancient interpretation, see Fitzmyer 1985: 900, 904–5.

19 BAGD 296–97 and BAA 601–2. Creed 1930: 157 notes objections to saying that the evangelists coined the term, citing a disputed papyrus reading of a fragmentary text (Preisigke #5224). Fitzmyer 1985: 905–6 lists three possible etymologies: ἐπί + οὐσία = "necessary"; ἐπί + οὖσα = "for today" (supplying ἡμέρα [day] to make a complete idea); ἐπί + present participle of εἶμι (to come) = "for the coming day" (with ἡμέρα again supplied to complete the thought). Determining the etymology is not crucial, since a word's meaning is not determined by etymology.

22 Fitzmyer 1985: 906 notes similar usage at Qumran and suggests that Luke refers to sins to prevent confusion for his Greek audience. The use of ἁμαρτίας looks like the LXX, esp. Ps. 24:18 [25:18 Eng.]; also Gen. 50:17; Exod. 32:32; Num. 14:19; Plummer 1896: 297.

26 James 1:14–15 looks at the issue from the perspective of our response to such temptation and with the awareness that we are responsible for our own sin. Fitzmyer 1985: 906 notes OT parallels to the thought: Exod. 16:4; 20:20; Deut. 8:2, 16; 13:3 [13:4 MT]; 33:8; Judg. 2:22.

29 On this style of introduction to a parable, compare Luke 11:11; 12:25; 14:28; 15:4; 17:7. In the OT, see Isa. 42:23; 50:10; Hag. 2:3; Fitzmyer 1985: 911.

32 Λέγω ὑμῖν (I say to you) elsewhere introduces applications in Luke: 14:24; 15:7, 10; 16:9; 18:8, 14; 19:26; Fitzmyer 1985: 912.

36 A water snake is probably referred to by ὄφις, since this snake was used as bait for fishing; see Grundmann 1963: 235; Fitzmyer 1985: 915; Foerster, TDNT 5:566–68.

41 Manson 1949: 265–66 is uncertain about its originality in Luke. Streeter 1924: 277 thinks it original. Ernst 1977: 362 and Fitzmyer 1985: 904 believe it was added later as a baptism formula to be prayed over the individual being baptized. On the use of the prayer in the history of the church, see Manson 1955–56. Besides Marcion and Gregory of Nyssa, the text is found only in manuscripts 162 and 700 and in a shorter form in Maximus the Confessor.

1 In this view, a tighter connection is seen between Matthew and Luke than between Luke and Mark, and proponents tend to speak of Q tradition. If Q is the source, this is the only exorcism in Q, a point that, by its uniqueness, argues for authenticity. Marshall 1978: 471–72 sees the account reflecting several controversies and that reconstructing the tradition history must be speculative. Fitzmyer 1985: 918 discusses only 11:19 as possibly reflecting an early church setting. Detailed evidence for Matthew's and Luke's being closer to each other than to Mark comes from Easton 1913.

5 Creed 1930: 159 speaks of Q here, as does Manson 1949: 83. The amount of Matthean-Lucan agreement makes this source connection likely, though whether it is Q or another shared tradition is debatable (Matthean prioritists see Matthew as the likely source). Grundmann 1963: 236–37 correctly notes that Matthew is closer to Luke than to Mark (see also Easton 1913, as discussed in n. 1 above). Fitzmyer 1985: 918 argues for Lucan additions in 11:16, but is uncertain about it in 11:14, 21–22. Additional source material cannot be ruled out. Tiede 1988: 216 notes that Matt. 12:23 and Mark 3:11 stress Christology, while Luke emphasizes controversy with the leadership; but Luke also has strong Christology in light of the parable in 11:21–23. Of the three accounts, Mark has less confrontation than the other two.

10 Other unlikely options are "Master of the complaint," "Lord of dung," or "Baal, the Flame"; Fitzmyer 1985: 920; Godet 1875: 2.60; Marshall 1978: 473; and Ernst 1977: 374.

11 Fitzmyer 1985: 921 notes other names used for Satan in Judaism: Belial (2 Cor. 6:15; 1QS 1.18, 24), Mast\;emah (1QS 3.23; 1QM 13.4; Jub. 10.8), and Asmodeus (Tob. 3:8, 17).

16 Fitzmyer 1981: 186–87 rightly notes that this verse destroys Conzelmann's claim (1960: 156–57) that the period of Jesus' ministry is “Satan free.” Jesus is engaged in victorious battle against Satan here, as 11:21–22 also stresses.

7 Gen. 49:25; Prov. 23:24–25; Fitzmyer 1985: 928; Grundmann 1963: 222 (who notes the contrast to Gospel of Thomas 79); Hauck, TDNT 4:369; SB 2:187–88; m. ›Abot 2.8; 2 Bar. 54.10; and later targumim on Gen. 49:25 (i.e., Ps.-J., Neof. 1, and Frg. Tg.). Manson 1949: 88 notes that Pesikta Rabbati 37.2 (= Braude 1968: 2.689) says this of Messiah’s mother (cited as §149a by Manson according to an older numbering scheme; see SB 1:161).

9 Grundmann 1963: 242 argues that Jonah was seen as a sign in Judaism because of his miraculous deliverance from the whale; see SB 1:642–49. But these Jewish references are late, as Fitzmyer 1985: 935–36 notes, adding that Josephus’s account of Jonah (Antiquities 9.10.2 §§208–14) makes nothing of the fish episode.

10 An older solution regards the reference to Jonah as a textual corruption that originally referred to John the Baptist, but there is no manuscript evidence for this understanding. Creed 1930: 163 seems attracted to this view. Fitzmyer 1985: 931–39 presents the various options on source and tradition history.

15 At Qumran, the Spirit of truth is the light that illumines human hearts; 1QS 4.2; Grundmann 1963: 243. The OT image is found in Job 29:3; Ps. 112:4; Isa. 42:6–7; 45:7; 59:9–10; Mic. 7:8; Fitzmyer 1985: 940. The body is a metonymy of container for contents and refers to the person.

17 Πονηρός is used in 11:29 to describe the evil generation; Danker 1988: 237. The term’s repeated use and the internal contrast make the meaning “generous” for ἁπλοῦς impossible; against Fitzmyer 1985: 940. The point is not the eye’s “generosity” but its reception of good or evil.

5 In this list, “remark” means a conceptual parallel not laid out as a woe. Fitzmyer notes the order in terms of Lucan verses as follows: 43, 46, 52, 42, [39], 44, 47. Manson has a similar listing (with a dash representing unparalleled material): 46, 52, 42, -, 44, 47–48, -. Interestingly, these two lists do not agree, suggesting that it is hard to know where the matches lie! Apparently Fitzmyer sees a parallel in 11:43 that Manson rejects.

9 It is unclear whether the introductory phrase means “as he was speaking” or “after he had spoken.” Lucan use of ἐν τῷ with the aorist infinitive favors “after” (2:27; 3:21; Fitzmyer 1985: 946). Regardless, this event and the previous discourse on responding to God are closely linked by Luke.

14 Ps. 14:1; 53:1 [53:2 MT]; 92:6 [92:7 MT]; 94:8; Prov. 6:12; Luke 12:20; Rom. 2:20; 1 Cor. 15:36; 2 Cor. 11:16, 19; 12:6, 11; SB 1:280; 2:102 (discusses Jewish warnings about having an arrogant heart, with Deut. 8:11–14 being the key text); Schweizer 1984: 199; Plummer 1896: 310; Bertram, TDNT 9:230–31; Fitzmyer 1985: 947. On the OT background, see Donald 1963.

17 Manson 1949: 269 favors the suggestion. Grundmann 1963: 248 n. 8 argues the possibility for the original saying, but notes that it cannot be Luke’s meaning. Fitzmyer 1985: 947 rejects the option.

18 Three main OT texts deal with the tithe (E. Sanders 1990: 43–45). (1) According to Deut. 14:22–27, ten percent of farm produce, oil, and wine was to be tithed, except in the seventh year (Lev. 25:2–7). It was to be spent and enjoyed in Jerusalem or another appropriate locale. Every third year, this tithe was given to the Levites and the needy (Deut. 14:28–29). Whether "third year" meant only the third of the seven-year cycle or years three and six was debated, but the latter view was more popular. (2) Lev. 27:30–33 required that ten percent of crops and animals be tithed to the priesthood (Josephus, Antiquities 4.4.4 §§69–75). (3) Num. 18:21–32 declared that food be set aside for the Levites and their families. Other OT passages that give the background of tithes are Deut. 12:6–9; 26:12–15; Num. 18:12; Neh. 10:37–38 [10:38–39 MT]; 12:44; 13:5, 12; 2 Chron. 31:5–12; Fitzmyer 1985: 948.

1 Most argue for Q: Fitzmyer 1985: 953 (12:1 from L), 956 (12:2–9 from Q), 962–63 (12:10 from Q or Mark; 12:11–12 from Q); Ernst 1977: 392 (for 12:2–9); and Schneider 1977a: 277. Grundmann 1963: 252 says it is "probably" Q. Marshall 1978: 510 speaks of Q material conflated with Marcan elements and also argues that Q has various recensions and that Luke's version is slightly different from that of Matthew. Nolland 1993a: 675–76 sees Q for 12:2–9 and a mixture of Q and Mark for 12:10–12.

3 Fitzmyer 1985: 954, 957, 958, 963; Bultmann 1963: 83, 131–32; Berger 1984: 81, 144.

6 Fitzmyer 1985: 959 correctly notes that the contrast is to humans, not to Satan, evil, or the Son of Man.

7 Earlier Jewish texts on the theme include Jdt. 16:17; 1 Enoch 10.13; 18.11–16; 27.1–3; 90.26; Jub. 9.15; 2 Esdr. [= 4 Ezra] 7:36; Fitzmyer 1985: 959–60. Apparently a debate in Judaism discussed whether hell involved eternal torment or limited suffering with extinction, a view called “annihilationism” today. The Tosepta text noted argues that there are three groups of people: one destined for eternal life, another destined for shame and everlasting contempt, and a third group that visits Gehenna but is healed as through a refiner’s fire, citing Zech. 13:9 and 1 Sam. 2:6. As the portion of t. Sanh. 3 quoted above shows, some Jews believed that Gehenna burns the body and the soul perishes after twelve months of judgment.

8 On the coin, see BAGD 117; BAA 235; Matt. 10:29 (the only other NT use). Wiefel 1988: 233 puts its worth at five pfennigs, one of the smallest German coins. A denarius was a day’s wage, so this is very little money. The most basic worker would earn this in roughly a half hour. The term for sparrow (στρουθίον) may also indicate simply a “little bird”; Plummer 1896: 319–20; Ps. 11:1 [10:1 LXX]; 84:3 [83:4 LXX]; MM 594; Bauernfeind, TDNT 7:730, 732 n. 19; Fitzmyer 1985: 960.

10 Only the verbal forms differ: Matthew has ἠριθμημέναι εἰσίν and Luke ἠρίθμηνται (both meaning “are numbered”). 1 Sam. 14:45; 2 Sam. 14:11; 1 Kings 1:52; and Dan. 3:27 use the idiom for the total protection indicated by not one hair being lost; Plummer 1896: 320; Fitzmyer 1985: 960; Luke 21:18; Acts 27:34. Luke’s idiom is a variation on the OT idiom and means “God knows exactly where you stand.”

12 Fitzmyer 1985: 960 notes that elsewhere Luke does not avoid the expression before God in 1:19; 12:6; 16:15.

16 Fitzmyer 1985: 966. 1 Cor. 2:7 has a different verb (λαλέω, to speak), while John 14:26 and 1 John 2:27 use διδάσκω (to teach). Marshall 1978: 520–21 defends the authenticity of the concept, citing Beasley-Murray 1970: 473–74.

2 Manson 1949: 270 (who argues that the connection to 12:1–12 is literary and that 12:13–21 is a self-contained unit inserted between two Q passages) and Schweizer 1984: 207. There is little evidence that Matthew knew of the parable and omitted it, despite what Marshall 1978: 522 suggests, citing Matt. 6:19–20, 25. Fitzmyer 1985: 968 correctly notes that Luke alone gives evidence of this account.

5 Bultmann 1963: 54–55. Berger 1984: 81, 207 speaks of an apophthegm and a warning. Fitzmyer 1985: 971 prefers to call the parable an example (on the genre of example story or exemplum, see excursus 8 in vol. 1 of this commentary).

7 Tiede 1988: 233; Ernst 1977: 398; Fitzmyer 1985: 970; Lev. 19:18. Manson 1949: 271 notes the similar OT perspective: Job 31:24–25; Ps. 49; Eccles. 2:1–11. Note also T. Judah 18–19; Sir. 11:18–19; 1 Enoch 97.8–10; Mark 7:22; Rom. 1:29; 2 Cor. 9:5; 1 Tim. 6:10; 2 Pet. 2:3, 14; B. Scott 1989: 131–32.

8 This stands in contrast to Prov. 11:26; Jer. 17:11; 1 Enoch 97.8–10. Sir. 11:18–19 is especially close to Jesus' picture, except that wealth comes through self-denial and diligence (lit., "from afflicting himself"), not simply fortune as in Luke. The LXX renders the key phrase "by his wariness and pinching," referring to frugality; Schweizer 1984: 207. Note also Ps. 49:16–20 [49:17–21 MT]; Plummer 1896: 323; Fitzmyer 1985: 972 (noting 1 Enoch 97.8–10, which rebukes unrighteous wealth); Nickelsburg 1978–79: 334–37. See n. 11 below for the Sirach and 1 Enoch texts.

11 Fitzmyer 1985: 973; Marshall 1978: 524; Klostermann 1929: 136; Wiefel 1988: 237. Parallels for this concept are common; see 1 Cor. 15:32;

Eccles. 8:15; Isa. 22:13; Tob. 7:10. Two other Jewish texts are especially relevant: Sir. 11:18–19 (NRSV) reads: “One becomes rich through diligence and self-denial, / and the reward allotted to him is this: / when he says, ‘I have found rest, / and now I shall feast on my goods!’ he does not know how long it will be/ until he leaves them to others and dies.” 1 Enoch 97.8–10 reads: “Woe unto you who gain silver and gold by unjust means; / you will then say, ‘We have grown rich and accumulated goods, / we have acquired everything that we have desired. / So now let us do whatever we like; / for we have gathered silver, / we have filled our treasuries [with money] like water. / And many are the laborers in our houses.’ / Your lies flow like water. / For your wealth shall not endure / but it shall take off from you quickly / for you have acquired it all unjustly, / and you shall be given over to a great curse” (translation by E. Isaac in J. Charlesworth 1983–85: 1.78). For Hellenistic parallels, see Euripides, Alcestis 788–89; Menander, Fragment 301.

2 Marshall 1978: 527 notes that no clear reason for the difference can be given. But Fitzmyer 1985: 978 observes that Luke often uses the verb κατανοέω: Luke 6:41; 12:24, 27; 20:23; Acts 7:31–32; 11:6; 27:39.

4 Ps. 130:1 LXX [131:1 Engl.]; Josephus, Antiquities 16.4.6 §135; Marshall 1978: 529; Deissner, TDNT 4:630–31; Fitzmyer 1985: 980; BAGD 514; BAA 1041; P. Oxy. vol. 14 #1679 line 16 (where it is a term for “wrong”).

10 Manson 1949: 114 regards the material as coming from distinct sources, as does Grundmann 1963: 262, though they differ as to which sources and give no reasons. Marshall 1978: 531 argues for the same source, but the distinct wording is a difficulty for that view. Fitzmyer 1985: 981 argues that 12:33a is Lucan and cites 11:41 for support, but that verse is figurative for one's life and is not similar enough to argue that Luke created this saying. In addition, Fitzmyer argues that Luke abridged Matthew's saying, but this cannot explain entirely the distinct terminology. Wiefel 1988: 241 sees Q and special L material here that Luke combined to answer the point made in 12:21.

3 Luce 1933: 233; Manson 1949: 117–18; and Schneider 1977a: 288 say that the basic source is Q, while 12:47–48 is L. Tiede 1988: 238–42 and Marshall 1978: 533 see all but 12:41, 47–48 as coming from Q. Ellis 1974: 180 is undecided. Godet 1875: 2.106, 110–11 sees Luke and Matthew using different portions of the same tradition. Grundmann 1963: 264; Fitzmyer 1985: 984–85; and Wiefel 1988: 242, 244 regard the unique material as coming from Luke's special source, while the parable is a mix of Q (12:39–40, 42b–46) and L (12:35–38 for Grundmann and Fitzmyer; 12:36, 37a, 38 for Wiefel). These three treat 12:41–42a and 12:47–48 as Lucan additions. Grundmann defends the remark's authenticity as involving an original warning that included the Pharisees. A Matthean prioritist sees Matthew where others have Q, though the issue of Luke's placement of this pericope is more of a problem for the Two-Gospel hypothesis, than for a sayings source such as Q. Why did Luke change the location if he had Matthew? The possibility of other sources cannot be ruled out. The views on sources for this pericope are complex, but most see Luke bringing two sets of images together (12:35–38 and 12:42–46). For full discussions, see Weiser 1971: 161–225; Schneider 1975: 20–27; and D. Wenham 1984: 15–100.

Wenham's work is part of a larger hypothesis on a pre-Synoptic form of Jesus' eschatological teaching, a view that traces substantial portions of this material back to Jesus, including 12:41, 44, 47–48, which others deny have such roots.

4 Fitzmyer 1985: 987 speaks of elements going back to Jesus that focus on God's final vindicating judgment. This approach may be too broad in ignoring the Son of Man–Jesus linkage, about whose secondary character Fitzmyer is uncertain. Nolland 1993a: 700 accepts all the material as authentic except 12:42, 46c, 47–48. Though some Lucan summary touches exist (e.g., 12:41–42a), all of the material, including Peter's question, coheres with Jesus' teaching. For a defense of the traditional roots of 12:41, see D. Wenham 1984: 57–62.

9 For options, see BAGD 868 §4; BAA 1730; Fitzmyer 1895: 988; and Plummer 1896: 331. Josephus uses both approaches: three watches in Jewish War 5.12.2 §510 and four in Antiquities 18.9.6 §356.

26 For the various degrees of breaking Sabbath, see m. Šab. 7.1; b. B. Bat. 60b; Manson 1949: 119; Schweizer 1984: 214; Talbert 1982: 144; Fitzmyer 1985: 992; SB 2:192.

1 Fitzmyer 1985: 994, 999, 1001 holds that 12:49–50 is from L; 12:51, 53 is from Q; while 12:52 is a Lucan modification of Q material. In addition, 12:54–56 also comes from L and 12:57 is transitional, with 12:58–59 being from Q.

11 Fitzmyer 1985: 995–96 notes that awareness of rejection by a religious leader is not unparalleled and cites 1QH 2.11–14, 32–33 as examples. Jesus was capable of anticipating his vindication in death; so correctly Bayer 1986: 77–85.

16 The verbal complex ἔσονται … διαμεμερισμένοι (it shall be … divided) recalls the noun of 12:51; Fitzmyer 1985: 997; Marshall 1978: 548; N. Turner 1963: 89. This periphrastic construction is a future perfect that focuses on a state of division.

22 Fitzmyer 1985: 1002 rejects the spiritual interpretation of 12:57–59, calling it allegorizing. Such a description says more about his seeing the material as derived from Q and reading it accordingly than it does about his literary sensitivity. There is no reason to regard this as a displaced saying about brotherly reconciliation (so Bultmann 1963: 172), since the contextual force is clear. Klostermann 1929: 141 errs in calling the accuser Satan (correctly refuted by Marshall 1978: 551).

24 Ἐργασία is largely a Lucan term in the NT: Acts 16:16, 19; 19:24, 25; Eph. 4:19; Fitzmyer 1985: 1002. Δίδωμι (to give) with ἐργασία is a Latinism; BDF §5.3b.

25 LSJ 915 notes a basic definition of “to pull down” for κατασύρω, a NT hapax legomenon (the simple σύρω occurs in John 21:8; Acts 8:3; 14:19; 17:6; Rev. 12:4); Fitzmyer 1985: 1003; BAGD 419; BAA 852–53.

6 Comparative παρά may be a Semitism; Jeremias 1963a: 141; Luke 13:4; 18:14; BDF §236.3; BAGD 611 §III.3; BAA 1236 §III.3. The term πάντας must mean all other Galileans; Marshall 1978: 553; Fitzmyer 1985: 1007.

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1010–11 speaks of a miracle story, while Bultmann 1963: 12 speaks of a pronouncement. Elements of both are present, with the key being the pronouncement in 13:15 and the miracle itself being the dominating element. Berger 1984: 312 calls it epideixis, which is his term for a miracle. Such accounts are designed to show who Jesus is and to elicit a response of respect.

3 Note the periphrastic imperfect (as in 4:31). The term for Sabbath is plural, as in 4:16. In both cases a single Sabbath is meant. For Sabbath synagogue customs, see the exegesis of 4:16; for the meaning of the Greek term, see the exegesis of 4:31 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1012.

5 Luke 5:15; 8:2; 11:14; 13:12; Matt. 8:17. Demonic influence may be a better description than demonic possession, because it is not behavior but a diseased condition that is the point; Luke 4:33, 38–39; 2 Cor. 12:7. Weakness is produced by the evil spirit; 1QapGen 20.17, 21–29; Stählin, TDNT 1:493; Marshall 1978: 557. Fitzmyer 1985: 1012 calls the genitival ἀσθενείας (weakness) an Aramaism; see Creed 1930: 183. Nolland 1993a: 724 suggests that the number eighteen may be conventional (2 x 9 = "a long time"); Judg. 3:13–14; 10:8; 20:25, 44; 2 Sam. 8:13. This is possible, but not certain.

11 Luke uses παραχρῆμα in 1:64; 4:39; 5:25; 8:44, 47, 55; 18:43; 19:11; 22:60. Fitzmyer 1985: 1013 remarks, "The instantaneous cure on the Sabbath stands in contrast to the eighteen years of infirmity."

16 On the figurative use of "bound" and "loosed," see Fitzmyer 1985: 1013; MM 142, 144. The length of the woman's condition is underlined by the use of the interjection ἰδού (behold). On Satan's activity, see Job 2:1–7; Acts 10:38; 1 Cor. 5:5; 2 Cor. 12:7; 1 Tim. 1:20; Plummer 1896: 343.

Fitzmyer notes that the verse argues against Conzelmann's view (1960: 27–28, 80) of a "Satan-free" period during Jesus' ministry.

3 So Kistemaker 1980: 45 speaks of the same occasion. On Q, see Grundmann 1963: 281; Egelkraut 1976: 108; Marshall 1978: 559–60; Wiefel 1988: 257; Fitzmyer 1985: 1015. The same linkage of parables occurs in Matthew and, as noted above, the wording in the leaven parable is very similar. The Gospel of Thomas 96–97 links the leaven parable to a different parable, the jar full of meal, which has no canonical parallel. A parable of the mustard seed is found in the Gospel of Thomas 20; Hunzinger, TDNT 7:290 n. 32.

2 Marshall 1978: 563 also leans toward independence for the door imagery, though he sees elements of connection with the tradition in the rest of the passage and sees Luke bringing some elements of this material together. Fitzmyer 1985: 1021–22 sees a Lucan hand in most of the material and sees only 13:24–29 as Q material, though he acknowledges that the case is not certain. Nolland 1993a: 732 attributes 13:22–23 to Luke and the rest mainly to traditional roots, most shared with Matthew. Most argue that the theme of presence or entry of blessing brought the texts together (Meier 1994: 310) and that Luke rearranged 13:28–29 by placing what was at the end at the start of the saying. Meier 1994: 311 lists the Lucan order of Matthean elements as 9, 10, 4, 5, 6, 7, 2, 3, 5, with four Lucan redactional stichs. It is more credible, however, to see a fresh tradition, given all the restructuring required of the alternative.

4 Berger 1984: 57–59, 81. Fitzmyer 1985: 1022 prefers to speak of a collection of minatory sayings, while Bultmann 1963: 93, 117 speaks of wisdom sayings in 13:23–24, 26–27. The passage is a warning and a wisdom background is not clear, except in 13:24. Bultmann also regards 13:26–27 as a church reflection that presents Jesus as judge of the world, but this saying is like OT prophetic utterances that warn about salvation and judgment. The parable portrays Jesus as the judge, with an identity between his message and the authority it carries. The crowd must respond to him. However, it was this very emphasis on response that caused the leadership to do away with him. It is not a post-Easter development. Jesus' view of himself was dangerous to the leadership. Luke 22:69 makes the same point conceptually.

16 The combination of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob occurs frequently in the OT: Deut. 1:8; 6:10; 9:5, 27; 1 Kings 18:36; 2 Kings 13:23; Acts 3:13; 7:32; Matt. 8:11; Fitzmyer 1985: 1026. Luke, on the other hand, likes to mention all the prophets; Luke 1:70; 24:44.

19 Ellis 1974: 189 notes that Qumran had a similar banquet expectation, but with a very different and exclusive audience, namely Messiah, the high priest, the priests, the chief of the tribes, and the congregation of Israel's righteous; 1Q28a [= 1QSa = Rule Annex] 2.11–22. Fitzmyer 1985: 1026 and Marshall 1978: 568 add other Jewish references: 1 Enoch 62.14; 2 Enoch 42.5; 2 Bar. 29.4; m. ›Abot 3.17; SB 4:1148, 1154–59.

21 Fitzmyer 1985: 1020 translates: "Some of those who are now last will be first, and some of those first will be last"; see also p. 1027. The line literally reads, "And behold are last ones, they shall be first, and are first ones, they shall be last."

1 If this report is true, Herod has moved from anxious curiosity (9:7–9) to full-fledged fear about Jesus. The event as it relates to Herod is seen as historical; Fitzmyer 1985: 1028.

12 Bultmann 1963: 114 sees wisdom here. Leaney 1958: 210 cites Matt. 23:34; Luke 2:40, 52; 7:35; 11:31, 49 as parallels. See also 1 Enoch 42. Luke 11:49–51 uses the wisdom motif openly. For more reasons not to see wisdom here, see Bock 1987: 120. Marshall 1978: 573–74 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1034 opt for wisdom terminology, but without Jesus alluding to himself as wisdom, since Jesus sees himself as wisdom's messenger. Sir. 24:7–12 provides a plausible background. If wisdom is in the background, this is the best way to argue for it. Nolland 1993a: 739 questions the presence of wisdom here, as do I.

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1039 remarks that, even though Matt. 12:11 has a similar saying, the rest of the detail is too different to be attributed to Q. In fact, it is too difficult for any other shared tradition. Fitzmyer also correctly denies that Luke 6:9 is a doublet to this verse. Marshall 1978: 578 sees a Q connection as possible. Bultmann 1963: 12 and Lohse, TDNT 7:26, argue that the text was a variant tradition created from Mark 3:1–6, but Ernst 1977: 435 correctly notes that the distinct terminology and motives suggest too much distance for this connection; so also Meier 1994: 710.

5 Fitzmyer 1985: 1046 suggests that γάμος is broad enough to describe any feast, not just a wedding; cf. Esth. 2:18; 9:22. It can simply be a celebration. The difference in sense is not significant, since a representative picture is present.

9 Prov. 25:6–7 (NRSV) says, “Do not put yourself forward in the king’s presence / or stand in the place of the great; / for it is better to be told, ‘Come up here,’ / than to be put lower in the presence of a noble.” For Jewish parallels, see Sir. 3:17–20; 4:8; 12:11; 29:5; Lev. Rab. 1.5 on 1:1 (fifth century); ›Abot de Rabbi Nathan A.25 (= Goldin 1955: 110); Bultmann 1963: 104; Fitzmyer 1985: 1047; SB 1:916.

1 Also Schulz 1972: 391–98; Crossan 1973: 72; Fitzmyer 1985: 1052. Jeremias 1963a: 63–64, 176 argues that the Gospel of Thomas may be more original than Matthew, except for its expansion of excuses. The Thomas parable is closer to Luke than to Matthew and so is often discussed with Luke’s version, but it introduces a fourth figure who cannot come to the banquet. Thomas gives no setting, since the document is just a list of teachings. But the excuses in Thomas use more urban imagery; Luke’s use of agrarian imagery fits Jesus’ tendency to use agrarian illustrations. Horsley 1987: 180 sees Luke as the more original of the versions, noting that the economically prosperous are the excluded; so also the Jesus Seminar (Funk and Hoover 1993: 352), though it regards the symposium-table setting as Lucan.

5 See C. Kim 1975 for an ancient invitation. Fitzmyer 1985: 1055 correctly notes that Jeremias’s appeal to this as a custom of Jerusalem has only a fifth-century text as support, but Esther and Philo suggest that the custom is possibly older. Nolland 1993a: 755 adds Terence, Self-Tormentor 169–70, and Apuleius, Metamorphoses (Golden Ass) 3.12, which may suggest that more than Jewish custom is in view here.

14 Many commentators note that Augustine's interpretation (Contra Gaudentium Donatistarum Episcopum Libri II 1.25 §28 [Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latinorum 53.226–27]), which sought to compel pagans to enter the faith, badly misreads the imagery. Fitzmyer 1985: 1057 notes that this interpretation made Augustine the spiritual father of the Inquisition.

3 Fitzmyer 1985: 1061 speaks of "prophetic words" as well. Bultmann 1963: 328 speaks of a discourse on discipleship composed by Luke; but how one can argue that Luke is responsible for the discourse is not clear. Berger 1984: 51, 97 speaks of parables and a warning. The text is a combination of "I-sayings" (14:26–27) and parabolic comparisons (14:28–35). Blomberg 1990: 281 calls the comparisons "which one of you?" parables, showing Jesus' desire to cause the audience to reflect: "If people must carefully calculate their chances of success in major human endeavors, how much more so must they take seriously the results of spiritual commitments."

27 Gressmann 1911 notes the nature of the customs. Perles's attempt (1919–20) to suggest an Aramaic element תבל (tbl) behind the tradition that should be translated "seasoning" instead of "soil" fails on lexical grounds. The תבל/γῆ interchange is found in Isa. 14:21; 26:9, 18; 1 Chron. 16:30; cf. 11QtgJob 24.8; 29.3 with Job 34:13; 37:12. Correctly Fitzmyer 1985: 1069–70 and Black 1967: 166–67.

1 Fitzmyer is right to reject other attempts to understand the unit as only a polemic against the Pharisees, though allusions to them are present.

Neither is the passage an exposition of Jer. 31:10–20 (so Kossen 1956), a view also rejected by Ellis 1974: 196.

2 So Fitzmyer 1985: 1073 argues that 15:4–6 is from Q and that originally the two parables were not told together. He sees Matthew's setting as more original. But why Jesus could not tell back-to-back parables that make the same point is not clear. Nor is it clear that 15:4–6 is from Q. Tiede 1988: 273 sees independent oral tradition here.

3 For the presence of these verses in Q are Schneider 1977a: 324–25 and Wiefel 1988: 282. Fitzmyer 1985: 1073 sees 15:4–6 in Q and 15:8–9 in L. Other parallels are found in the Gospel of Thomas 107 and the Gnostic Gospel of Truth 31.35–32.9.

12 Some see a problem in the shepherd's leaving behind the ninety-nine, but this is probably a detail omitted in the abbreviated telling of the story. Ἔρημος is an open field, a heath, where the animals grazed; Manson 1949: 283; 1 Sam. 17:28. On the use of the numbers ninety-nine and one, see SB 1:784–85; m. Pe‹a 4.1–2; Fitzmyer 1985: 1076.

16 The image of the sheep on the shoulder is common in the ancient world; Fitzmyer 1985: 1077; G. Wright 1939; V. Muller 1944.

18 Συγκαλέω is frequently used by Luke: Luke 9:1; 23:13; Acts 5:21; 10:24; 28:17; Fitzmyer 1985: 1077.

19 The future tense may have eschatological overtones or it may be a customary future alluding to God's habitual response. The wording may have Aramaic roots and betray a pre-Lucan form; Fitzmyer 1985: 1077–78; Black 1967: 184; Jeremias 1980: 247.

23 Kistemaker 1980: 212 assumes this background and argues that the equivalent today would be losing a diamond from a wedding ring. If the woman has a dowry, it is not a significant amount. Against this understanding, which must remain only an implication of the text, are Klostermann 1929: 157 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1051.

1 Manson 1949: 284 calls it “The Two Sons,” but the father is too crucial to the picture to be left out. Jeremias 1963a: 128 calls it “The Parable of the Father’s Love,” a title that Fitzmyer 1985: 1084 likes. Jesus likes to use the two-son imagery (Matt. 21:28–31).

7 Τὸ ἐπιβάλλον means “that which falls to me”; Tob. 3:17; 6:12; P. Oxy. vol. 4 #715 lines 13–15; Creed 1930: 198; Hauck, TDNT 1:529; MM 235; Fitzmyer 1985: 1087. As a noun, οὐσίας refers to property; Tob. 14:13; 3 Macc. 3:28; Josephus, Antiquities 7.5.5 §114. On διεῖλεν (he divided), see Schlier, TDNT 1:184.

12 The phrase οὐ πολλὰς ἡμέρας (not many days) is a figure of speech called litotes, an understatement that affirms something by using the negative. This figure is frequent in Luke: Luke 21:9; Acts 1:5; 12:18; 14:28; 15:2; plus twelve more times; Fitzmyer 1985: 1087.

20 Jeremias 1963a: 130 calls the phrase an Aramaism and cites Tg. 2 Sam. 3:21 (cf. Acts 5:17; 9:6, 18). Fitzmyer 1985: 1089 calls it a Septuagintalism and cites Gen. 22:3, 19; 24:10; 43:8; Tob. 8:10 [8:9 NRSV]. All that this really shows is that the idiom is cross-cultural.

29 Fitzmyer 1985: 1091 notes this idiom in wider Greek usage as well.

9 Fitzmyer 1985: 1100 says that the question serves to advance the story, but it does more than that because of the question’s psychological value.

Marshall 1978: 618 notes that the typical procedure was for the debtor to write a promissory note that the steward would keep until the debt was paid; cf. Philem. 18.

12 Fitzmyer 1985: 1101 argues that no debt cancellation occurred, only a rewriting of the old debt that removed the steward's commission—something he had the right to do.

14 Similarly high interest for items is found in ancient Egyptian documents; Derrett 1972b. The term τὰ γράμματα describes the promissory note; BAGD 165 §2a; BAA 330 §2b; Schrenk, TDNT 1:764–65; Fitzmyer 1985: 1100.

15 Measures in the ancient world varied somewhat, so an exact figure is uncertain; see Plummer 1896: 383 and Marshall 1978: 619. BAGD 445 places the measure of a cor at 393 liters or 10–12 bushels. Fitzmyer 1985: 1101 points out that Josephus defines κόρος variously: Antiquities 15.9.2 §314 says that it equals 10 medimnoi, while Antiquities 3.15.3 §321 says four-sevenths of a medimnos—a significant difference (a medimnos was an Attic measure that equaled about 1.5 bushels, a figure that seems very high and is thus questioned). Fitzmyer figures the amount on Josephus's smaller standard, which produces a debt of slightly more than 100 bushels, but he notes that the variation makes certainty difficult.

19 The preposition ἐκ here means "by means of"; Fitzmyer 1985: 1109; Rüger 1973.

30 Fitzmyer 1985: 1110 correctly notes that "true" (ἀληθινός) wealth has the force "what is really good"; BAGD 37 §3; BAA 72 §3b.

33 Ireland 1992: 36, 41 reports that this view goes back to D. Schulz in 1821 and was tied to ancient practice by J. J. Van Oosterzee in 1859. It has recently been defended through appeal to Jewish practice by Derrett 1970: 48–77. Fitzmyer 1964 adds an additional twist to this view: this interest was the steward's commission, making his action of canceling the interest only a clever pretense of personal sacrifice.

38 Jeremias 1963a: 182 and Fitzmyer 1985: 1096–99, 1105 regard 16:9–13 as later additions and 16:8 as originally describing Jesus. Fitzmyer includes 16:8b in the applicational expansions and ties it to 16:9, which is problematic given the introductory "and I say to you" in 16:9. I agree that 16:8b is an application of the parable, but it must be seen as the original end to Jesus' remarks, given the break in 16:9a.

40 Fitzmyer 1985: 1096 places Manson 1949: 292 here, though Manson really regards 16:9 as a separate application and so belongs to the 16:8b view. Luke 18:6 is regarded as a parallel example for the use of κύριος.

3 For Luke having Q's original order and not Matthew, see Manson 1949: 134; Fitzmyer 1985: 1114; Schneider 1977a: 337 (perhaps); Meier 1994: 157; and Marshall 1978: 627. Ernst 1977: 469 speaks of Q material, special Lucan material, and Lucan redaction. Wiefel 1988: 294 speaks of Q in 16:16–17 and of Mark in 16:18. Godet 1875: 2.173 prefers Luke's positioning of material to Matthew's. However, the warnings are so general that parallel traditions may exist, reflecting a variety of settings.

6 Fitzmyer sees polemical sayings in 16:14–15 (1985: 1112), a saying in 16:16–17 (p. 1115), and a legal saying in 16:18 (p. 1120). Bultmann sees a wisdom saying in 16:15b (1963: 73), an "I-saying" in 16:16 (p. 164), and a legal saying in 16:18 (p. 132). Berger agrees that 16:18 is a legal saying (1984: 199) and argues that the passage is a warning made up of pronouncements, since he has the remarks in the apophthegm category (pp. 81, 89, 186).

12 Conzelmann 1960: 16 presents a threefold division: Israel, Jesus, the church. Fitzmyer 1981: 182–87 and 1985: 1115 defends a modified threefold division: the law and the prophets, Jesus, and the early church. But the Lucan passages cited know of only a law-and-prophets period (promise) and a kingdom-Jesus-church period (fulfillment).

19 Fitzmyer 1985: 1118 is against a decorative reference because such usage is found only in later rabbinic materials, not early Jewish documents. He also rejects the suggestion of Schwarz 1975 that κεραία refers to the Hebrew letter waw (ו). Regardless, the emphasis is on the whole of the law down to its smallest point. The law as a synthetic whole is in view here.

12 This view sees the name as introduced into the story later, but it is hard to substantiate such interpolations. SB 2:223 traces the name's usage and popularity. Fitzmyer 1985: 1131 notes that the name exists on numerous ossuaries, so it is clearly very common.

30 Fitzmyer 1985: 1134 notes Greek parallels of the dead returning to speak to those on earth: Lucian, Demonax 43; Plato, Republic 614d (10.13).

2 Fitzmyer 1985: 1136–37 argues that all of the material is from Q, but that 17:2 has been influenced by Mark 9:42. Marshall 1978: 640 agrees that Q and Mark overlap in 17:1–2 and also sees (pp. 642, 643–44) the rest of 17:3–6 as coming from Q, though he entertains the possibility that Q has various forms from which Matthew and Luke drew. Creed 1930: 215 sees Q and Mark 11:23 exercising influence in 17:5–6. Ernst 1977: 477–80 sees 17:1–3a as coming from either Q or a form of oral tradition that circulated in a variety of forms, 17:3b–4 as rooted in Jesus' teaching, and triple tradition (i.e., Mark and Q) influencing 17:5–6. Ellis 1974: 207 speaks of Mark and Q in 17:1–4 and regards Luke's special source as responsible for 17:5–10. Egelkraut 1976: 120–21 speaks of Q/Mark overlap in 17:1–2 and multiple tradition in 17:5–6. Grundmann 1963: 331 suggests that it is hard to know if Q or Luke's special material is responsible for the unit, except for 17:7–10, which is L. Grundmann sees its roots in material earlier than the versions of Matthew and Mark. All of this assumes that only one form of these sayings existed in the tradition and that it emerged from a single saying. If this was a theme repeated by Jesus, multiple renderings could well exist.

5 Fitzmyer 1985: 1137 and Bultmann 1963: 144 call 17:1–3a a legal saying, while Berger 1984: 65 calls it a "sentence." Luke 17:3b–4 is like a wisdom saying according to Ernst 1977: 479 and a warning according to Berger 1984: 119, 165. Fitzmyer 1985: 1142 calls 17:5–6 a wisdom saying, while Berger 1984: 81 calls it a pronouncement ("apophthegm"). All agree that 17:7–10 is a parable.

11 The command to forgive appears in the future tense and is somewhat more emphatic than using an imperative; Fitzmyer 1985: 1141.

13 Προστίθημι (to add) is also Lucan, appearing thirteen times in Luke–Acts and only three times in the other Gospels; Schneider 1977a: 347; Isa. 26:15. As Fitzmyer 1985: 1143 notes, the apostles would already have had some faith, so the idea is to add faith (against BAGD 719 §2; BAA 1440 §2).

14 Grundmann 1963: 333 and Luce 1933: 273, 292 are clear on the sycomore/sycamore distinction. Plummer 1896: 400–401 is uncertain about the difference and argues that the hyperbole is more natural for a sycomore tree. Manson 1949: 141 sees an original sycamore tree, appealing to an Aramaic mistranslation and to the use of the term in the LXX as a rendering of Hebrew שִׁקְמָה (šiqmâ) for the sycamore, not to mention rabbinic discussions like m. B. Bat. 2.11. Schneider 1977a: 347 agrees with Manson and cites SB 2:234 for rabbinic images. Nonetheless, many use sycamore when they mean sycomore (Fitzmyer 1985: 1143–44 is uncertain).

15 The image is neither strange nor derived; but so Fitzmyer 1985: 1144 (apparently) and C. A. Evans 1990: 256.

22 Wellhausen 1904: 550 notes that the Syriac version omitted the term. Fitzmyer 1985: 1147 notes the etymological suggestion of Kilgallen 1982 that the term means “those to whom something is not owed.” Usage is against this sense, though Blomberg 1990: 262 takes it as possible.

2 So Wiefel 1988: 305 and Bruners 1977. Bruners also argues that the account is Lucan. Fitzmyer 1985: 1150–51 and H. Betz 1981 question the connection. At most, it is a form parallel. Betz’s main thesis (1971) that the account is a polemic against healing miracles is incorrect; see Marshall 1978: 649. Meier 1994: 750–51 shows how an appeal to Lucan creation from 2 Kings cannot explain four differences in the account: (1) no mention of Elijah, (2) no mention of Jesus as prophet, (3) no delay in the miracle’s occurrence, and (4) the different kind of miracle in the account (punitive versus healing).

12 So Leaney 1958: 230; Fitzmyer 1985: 1161–62; Mattill 1979: 201; Roberts 1948; Rüstow 1960; Cadbury 1950; Tertullian, Against Marcion 4.35.12. Beasley-Murray 1986: 102–3 takes this view, though he fails to evaluate this option when it is taken with a present force. Riesenfeld 1949 does not mention the evidence from Aquila noted in n. 13 below—a grave omission—in arguing that “in your midst” is not possible. Schlosser 1980: 1.202–4 argues that “in one’s power” is a possible first-century meaning, but he opts for “in the midst of.” His discussion is the latest careful examination of the evidence.

9 Fitzmyer 1985: 1168–69 defends the ordinal μίαν as meaning “one,” not “first” (against Plummer 1896: 407) or “very much” (against Torrey 1933: 312; Manson 1949: 142) or “just one” (against Rigaux 1970: 410).

10 Fitzmyer 1985: 1169 notes how Jewish historian Josephus reacted to eschatological claims; Jewish War 6.5.4 §§310–15 (also Tacitus, Histories 5.13).

13 While Acts 14:22 uses δεῖ to say that the disciples’ suffering is also inevitable (Fitzmyer 1985: 1170), it does not speak of Jesus’ suffering. For the view that the disciples’ suffering in Luke–Acts mirrors Jesus’, see Moessner 1990.

26 Fitzmyer 1985: 1172 doubts that the idea of an eschatological Passover existed this early in Judaism.

29 On ἀετός, see Lev. 11:13; Deut. 14:12; Job 39:27; Matt. 24:28; BAGD 19; BAA 36; Marshall 1978: 669. Ἀετός can refer to an eagle, but not here, since eagles do not seek out dead meat; Rev. 12:14; 4:7; 8:13; Arndt 1956: 376. Attempts to interpret ἀετός as eagle, recalling the Roman emblem that accompanied the invasion of Jerusalem, assume a post–a.d. 70 date for Luke, as well as suggest an image contextually distant from the metaphor here; but so Danker 1988: 294; Leaney 1958: 232; and Fitzmyer 1985: 1173 (with less certainty).

